The President's next-door neighbor wrote, "First and foremost she is intensely family oriented and her voice takes on a different tone when she says "my sons Gary and Clifton" or "my Aunt Alma" or "my Cousin Eugene" for she, like all true Southerners, claims kin with the remotest of connections, even third cousins twice removed. A myriad of kinfolk came often and stayed long and her juggling of family visitors, her sons' friends and official college guests in Sweet Briar House was a marvel to witness... No picture of Anne Pannell would be complete without mentioning her insatiable fascination with the printed word and her ability to read with startling rapidity and almost total recall...Her travelling schedule would have killed most people but never have I been over sympathetic when a person murmured solicitously 'My dear, you go too hard.' Having been her companion on many journeys, I knew that along with going to the theatre, buying pretty clothes and presents for other people, taking a trip anywhere at anytime was her favorite recreation."

Last the foregoing paeans to her virtues sound like an apotheosis, we might add that she had difficulty in laughing at herself, that she did not suffer fools gladly and she had a complete lack of appreciation of music of any kind. Although she faithfully attended all college concerts and student or faculty recitals she promptly went to sleep the minute the lights dimmed and after a hard day might even emit a gentle snore or two. She was also the world's worst driver.

Clifton Pannell wrote, "Sweet Briar's physical setting is a treasured asset and mother has long taken a special interest and delight in this. As almost every guest who has stayed at Sweet Briar House will attest, her special joy is to take a long ride around the campus, to the dairy and stables, to Monument Hill and beyond — all the time extolling the advantages of Sweet Briar... Her own examples as a student, teacher and scholar was probably my most important object lesson. After I reached college I began to understand her message as she lived it. Books, ideas and education are the most important things in life and these are the tools for success and happiness in our present age...On the personal side my mother can be tough, shrewd and an unpleasant opponent as her associates might admit. Such qualities are, in part, born of necessity for no successful administrator can be a nice guy all the time. Underneath, however, she is thoughtful, generous and kind..."

On June 12, 1971, in the Sweet Briar Memorial Chapel, filled to capacity with her family and friends, Anne Gary Pannell married The Right Reverend George Taylor, Bishop of Easton, Maryland, and transferred her talents and energies into becoming a proper bishop's wife. Now, she also had more time to spend with her sons and grandchildren. How proud she was that Gary had become a successful lawyer as is his wife, Winnie. Great was her pleasure that Clifton is a full professor and had the good judgment to marry a talented Sweet Briar graduate, Laura de Buys '64.

When Bishop and Mrs. Taylor retired to Goodwin House in Alexandria, she continued to explore new fields of interest, to enjoy old and new friends, exhibiting once again her abilities and talents.

The death on February 18th of Anne Pannell Taylor brought the inevitable feeling of grief but also the feeling of thanksgiving for her life of such fulfillment.

College written in 1956 by Martha Lou Lemmon Stohlman '34. The foreword for this contains, in part, these words by President Pannell.

"In my judgment, what makes Sweet Briar different from other colleges is the particular way in which a happy balance or blend is achieved here with respect to values and objectives. We believe in a spirit of free inquiry, nurtured in a climate of opinion that includes the best of our intellectual, cultural and ethical traditions. We do have the freedom and time to enable each student to experience the challenge of the good teacher in the best academic environment. As this history makes plain it has not been easy to secure the needed material factors for this environment — the salaries, the buildings, and the books — but the three essential ingredients — idealism, loyalty and freedom — Sweet Briar has had and will continue to have, if I read aright the sentiments of her family of students, teachers and alumnae."

This tells us much about herself as well as how she felt about the College which was her life for twenty-one years. We rejoice that her prophecy was correct and the Sweet Briar of today is a fitting memorial to this "Woman for All Seasons."

LEMONADE

by Susan Sudduth
Dodson '66

How many times each of us has felt regret at not having done or said something — then finding that it is too late! I am in that situation now. The thoughts which are finally being expressed have been in my mind for months. Instead of sinking in remorse for not having said them to my friend, Anne Pannell Taylor, I am now writing this as a memorial to her and a tribute to my own mother, Dorothea Sudduth.

"Lemonade" — not a very scholarly-sounding title, but perhaps its earthiness will stick in your mind and then help you to remember its powerful message. "When life gives you lemons, what do you make?" Lemonade! Do you? Almost fourteen years after graduation from Sweet Briar I realized that during my years there, I had learned how to make LEMONADE.

Let's go back and set the stage at senior year, 1966. Ring ceremony in front of the Senior Stairs — my engagement ring was on the string. I could see life spread out before me. It would begin with marriage to my "childhood sweetheart," continue with my working while he went to medical school, internship and residency, then we would have one or two children, and settle down in a happy, comfortable lifestyle. That did not seem unreasonable.

Marriage, work, medical school, internship, residency, a precious daughter, and an orthopedic practice did follow as envisioned. One night Frank awakened with an excruciating headache. Despite a frantic drive to the hospital, he lost consciousness before we arrived. A healthy 33-year old surgeon, father, son and husband was dead.

At that point I felt that life not only had given me a rotten lemon but had even squashed it and rubbed it in my face. In the next months I realized that, yes, it was one of life's bitterest lemons, that, no, it wasn't rotten, and that, yes, I personally had the choice of letting it rot or of making something useful and refreshing from it.

How do you make lemonade?

- * You want to make lemonade.
- * You recognize the fact that resources are available to help you.
- * You open the book which contains these resources.
- * You assemble the ingredients.
- * You begin.

1. You want to make lemonade.

After a tragic event, it is difficult to want to do anything. As days, weeks, months passed, I realized that embedded in the years of term papers, lectures, exams and lab projects that Sweet Briar had carefully nurtured something deep inside of me which my parents had tenderly planted. A feeling of self-worth, of "self-ability," of "YES, I AM AN IMPORTANT PERSON IN THIS LIFE AND I HAVE SPECIAL ABILITIES THAT CAN HELP ME SUCCEED!" I eventually wanted to make lemonade.

2. You recognize the fact that resources are available to help in this project.

What is in a recipe book? An outline of how someone who wanted to accomplish a specific goal has proceeded step-by-step to do it and has succeeded. Four years ago I opened a "recipe book" which I didn't even realize that I had. Some of the most meaningful pages had been filled in during my Sweet Briar years.

Before entering as a freshman, I knew that Mrs. Pannell had become widowed at a young age and was left with two very small boys. She and my father had taught together even before then and renewed acquaintances as I joined the class of 1966. Within two years, my father died; my own mother had become a widow.

After her husband's death, Mrs. Pannell wrote her own recipe for lemonade. She would not allow her extraordinary mind and energy to be destroyed because of her life's tragedy. You know well the facts of what she accomplished after that time, becoming one of the most respected women in her field, amassing honors and praise throughout the United States and other countries as well. I was fortunate in being able to work closely with her during my senior year, thus having an opportunity to know even better the actual person who also happened to be the president of the school. It was evident then that she had a recipe for successfully combining motherhood and career. I thank her for passing to me a source of strength and courage that neither of us knew would ever be needed. I wish that I could tell her so.

I am thankful for being able to tell my own mother the importance of the pages which she filled in this "recipe book." The death of my father suddenly terminated an excellent, almost ideal marriage. From that first day of widowhood over twenty years ago, Mother has shown me how the closing of one chapter in life does not mean that the book is finished. Importantly, a chapter closed is closed, not to be reopened for revision. This chapter can still be read; happy memories can be enjoyed; mistakes can be used as learning experiences. The past is to be remembered — but cannot be changed. New chapters are waiting to be written. Also, I now know how difficult it was for her to bring me to Sweet Briar to begin my sophomore year, just two months after Daddy's death. What love that took! She did, and now I am trying to apply the same type of love to my own daughter. It is tempting to hold tight to her and to try to keep her near and safe right beside me. I am trying.

3. You open the book which contains these resources.

Once you have decided to make lemonade and realize that resources are available, you still have another choice to make — whether or not to look at the resources available, to call on them, and then to use them as a basis for actions. Open the recipe book; look at similar experiences that others have had; see how they reacted to them; be willing to choose what you consider positive reactions; discard the others. Look at several “recipes,” but don’t be afraid to take the best of these to formulate your own.

4. You assemble the ingredients.

Getting ingredients together for this lemonade will not be as easy as going to the grocery and choosing them off the shelf. It could take a while, but gradually you realize that one-by-one they are coming together. You are actually incorporating the vital ingredients into your own life! I often think of this in terms of the research papers which we were assigned at Sweet Briar. What valuable experiences! Hundreds of thoughts, usually one per index card, were amassed, formulated, combined, discarded, until gradually the paper started taking shape; the theme, or goal, was being realized! Nothing could happen before the ingredients were assembled.

5. You begin.

This is perhaps the most difficult step of all. Even though all of the timing and ingredients are “right,” it is not easy. Self-pity, anger, denial, guilt, fear all creep in to keep us from actually beginning. It is at this point you reach deep inside, muster everything that you have available and BEGIN. Remember what it felt like when it was time to start studying for Comps? You have everything — brains, notes, books, experiences, old exams — at your disposal. It was that first evening when you actually sat down and started the studying that was significant. Then, and only then, did you actually begin to pull everything together to accomplish that goal. I remember the very moment that this happened to me. Several months after Frank died, I was visiting friends on the Texas Gulf coast and took an early morning walk on the beach. A jellyfish, just at the edge of the surf, was being wafted back and forth by each little wave that came in. I realized then that that jellyfish did not have resources available to allow it to return to its normal life in the water. Instead, it would end up on the sand — dead. I was truly at the edge of the surf at that moment. One difference, though; God had given me the resources and abilities to return to a happy, productive life, to get back into the “ocean” of my existence, to be a responsible parent to my daughter and to my mother, to be a friend. One thing had changed, though; at that time He also gave me the responsibility to influence others with similar experiences and to help them just as I had been helped — to begin making lemonade!

After reading of Mrs. Pannell’s death, I could wait no longer to share these thoughts with my Sweet Briar family. Few lives escape tragedy completely. Grief and heartaches appear in many different forms — deaths, divorce, disappointment, to name a few. Each has its own particular pain, for these truly are the lemons of life. Please, I beg of you, remember that no matter how bitter they may first seem, God has given each of us a special combination of abilities and experiences which not only allow us to endure the pain but also to turn it into meaningful experiences as we open new chapters in the books of our lives. Neither Sweet Briar nor the wonderful people whom I have mentioned taught me how to become a widow, how to be an only parent, how to establish a successful business. They all taught me how to MAKE LEMONADE — how to face the good and the bad of life and then to succeed. “When life gives you lemons — make lemonade!!”

Post script: I do want to share what has happened in the last four years. My daughter is now eight years old, a bright, active, delightful child with great interest in school, piano, soccer, and pierced-earrings. She has faced her father’s death with sadness but with reality and resiliency. (We can all learn much from children). In 1980 I met another person close to my age who had been through circumstances very similar to mine. She and I joined forces to form a local chapter of a national widowed-persons’ organization, called THEOS. This became such a success, not only in persons helped in the Little Rock area, but in other chapters formed throughout the state, that we decided to use the same talents and begin new careers. Her background in sales and marketing and mine in the computer field led us to establish our own Computer Systems of Little Rock. Our company specializes in selling complete systems for small-to-medium businesses of many types, then providing training, service, and support after the sale. Daily we are thankful for the success that has resulted. (We were even awarded a trip to Japan!) Our business is dedicated to the purpose of continuing the task which we were both given, not only to succeed financially, but, more importantly, to be an example to others whose lives have been shattered, just as Mrs. Pannell, Mother, and many others have been to us. In fact, we have even given the business a nickname — it is our LEMONADE STAND! ■

Remembering: G. Noble Gilpin

“a gift for teaching”

Thank you for the delightful article about G. Noble Gilpin enjoyed as a loving tribute to a person so many cherished and respected. Many of us have our own favorite “army story” about the “little Corporal.” Jane Belcher has brought many of these wonderful tales to life once more.

Some were aware that Noble Gilpin rejected the notion of a eulogy on his behalf. He did not once mention anything about a “letter to the editor,” however. Gil and what he stood for at Sweet Briar College means too much to too many of his former students to let his passing not be a time to remember these things.

For those students whose lives he touched, Gil was the epitome of what a liberal arts education can and should offer. He was able to take the rawest of materials and mold fine voices from them; often voices that would later sing in opera houses and concert halls across the country and abroad, or voices that would teach others the art. Many of these talents came to Sweet Briar not knowing they had any musical potential. Gil recognized it and, with dedication to the art and a great gift for teaching technique, brought voices into being.

Gil demanded the dedication of the student. Anyone who didn't care enough to pursue her potential with diligence needed not continue. There were always others eager for a lesson slot. Gil's schedule was a full one of voice students, musicology courses and choir.

The Sweet Briar Choir was a wonderful illustration of the dedication among Gil's students. Seventy-plus strong in the days when no course credit was given for choir and meeting after dinner twice a week, the choir members were each expected to sing half of the Sundays of each semester for the 11:00 a.m. chapel service. If for some reason one could not sing her appointed “odd or even” Sunday, she definitely lined up a replacement and made up that Sunday, or at the end of the term she could count on being replaced for good. Many can recall early Sunday morning trips back to Sweet Briar to sing their Sundays. Other memories include bus trips for choir performances in National Cathedral or to join with men's choirs at schools like Lehigh; and the many reciprocal visits by men's choirs.

None of us who had these experiences can let Gil go without remembering in our hearts what his presence at Sweet Briar College meant to us.

(Mrs. Loren Oliver)

“a thorough-going musician”

May I add just a few notes to the excellent article about Gil written by Jane Belcher?

Having taught with Gil for some twenty-eight years I feel I have an insider's look par excellence.

He liked to start every voice lesson the minute the first bell rang and never ran overtime thinking the next professor should not be deprived of his full fifty minutes. In fact time was of the essence in his entire life.

One summer he spent twelve weeks at Aspen, Colorado. His primary teacher was Singher and Gil sang Don Basilio in the public performance of The Marriage of Figaro.

As a college student he was a piano major even though he had never had a lesson until he was eighteen! He earned his way through college by playing accompaniments for "Prof," Professor Wells, and his many students. With "Prof" he learned a vocal technique which never failed him. He accompanied many singers who later made a name for themselves in New York, such as the female lead in Brigadoon. Also, another student made it to the final Metropolitan Opera Auditions, Charlotte Reinke.

He was a thorough-going musician but a rare one in that he had a keen sense and understanding of people, almost a sixth sense. Gil was at the beck and call of any who needed him in any way, both students and his peers.

Although a very small man he was absolutely fearless in standing up for what he believed to be right; therefore he had the ultimate respect of the community.

Lucile Umbreit
Music Professor Emeritus

"music moved his emotion"

Upon learning of the death of G. Noble Gilpin, Professor of Music at Sweet Briar, I have been thinking of his boundless generosity towards his students.

Mr. Gilpin's irrepressible enthusiasm made him a great teacher. Who else would have spent hours taping accompaniments to students' recital and audition pieces to help them practice?

I picture him as he conducted the choir leaping back and forth between podium and piano or organ console. In opera class, after explaining the intricacies of plot and form, he was quite willing to show how the music moved his emotions and share them with us.

During voice lessons, even the year mine were scheduled at nine o'clock on Monday morning, he could demonstrate that special tonal quality a phrase needed. Then he would play on one of his remarkable records the haunting voice of a singer from the golden past.

Whether it was that soprano with the unpronounceable name or a new student with "a little shake in her voice," as he would say, Mr. Gilpin made our lessons, classes, and rehearsals part of the larger world of music.

Wherever we took it, he made music part of our lives.

Mme. Cecile Johnson

Mme. Cecile Juliette Guilmineau Johnson, associate professor of French, emeritus, at Sweet Briar College, died January 12, 1984, in Lanham, MD, from complications following a fall last summer.

Before her retirement in 1960, Mme. Johnson had taught at Sweet Briar over 30 years. From 1960 to 1963, she was associate professor of French at Skidmore College, and for some years thereafter, she taught at the University of Maryland and made her home in Hyattsville, MD, where she still maintained her residence at the time of her death.

Mme. Johnson held degrees from the University of Paris and from John Hopkins University, where she collaborated on the publication of critical editions of Esther by Duriez, Candide by Voltaire, and Le Comte d'Essex by La Calprenede.

During sabbatical leaves she continued her studies of Jean-Jacque Rousseau at libraries in Paris and London.

A native of France, she sometimes took small groups of college students traveling through Europe during the summer months.

Many Sweet Briar alumnae who were students during her time here associate their study of French with this vivacious, petite red-head, who never quite lost her French accent. Others will remember her participation in many faculty shows, dressed in Gay Nineties costume, perched on a tandem bicycle along with English professor Dr. Carl Connor, singing "Bicycle Built for Two." Fortunate faculty and staff members of the time will recall with pleasure her elaborate Christmas parties, a tradition she carried on after she had bought her home in Maryland.

A small garden she tended between what was then Boxwood Inn and Patteson House, where she had a spacious apartment, reflected her love of beauty.

While few now at Sweet Briar were here twenty-four years ago to know her, the memory of Mme. Johnson remains vivid to the many alumnae whom she taught.

Lacrosse Equipment Sought

Sportswomen — where is your old lacrosse equipment? The National Museum of American History is assembling a collection relative to the History of American Women in Sports, 1830-1980. All sports on all levels are of interest. Specifically, they are interested in acquiring, by donation, material (balls, sticks, uniforms, protective equipment and clothing, awards, trophies, letters, etc.) relating to lacrosse at Sweet Briar College. Similar artifacts from other sports will be considered. If you have anything you are willing to donate, don't send it, but write to Ellen Roney Hughes, Division of Community Life, Room 4101, National Museum of American History, Smithsonian Institution, Washington, D. C. 20560, with as full a description as possible. Your help will be greatly appreciated.

1916

Rachel Forbush Wood writes from Washington, DC, "Each year continues to have unexpected bonuses. This year had two. Just before my 89th birthday I flew with two contemporaries to Vienna, where we embarked on a cruise down the Danube, visiting Czechoslovakia, Hungary, Yugoslavia, Romania and Bulgaria before flying home from Istanbul. The second joyous event was the arrival of my first grandchild. I'll tell her about Sweet Briar as soon as possible." Rachel flew to her son's home in Burlington, VT, to spend Christmas with Monica Elizabeth and still commutes from D.C. to her place in Weston, VT, for the summer.

Edna Rigg Brown lives in the Methodist Home in Pittsburgh, where many and varied activities go on almost every day and many organizations provide interesting programs. She contrasts her life with her grandmothers' later years which she feels were quite monotonous. Edna thinks back on her Sweet Briar days with pleasure, remembering the wonderful teachers, especially Miss Morenus, who made difficult math so clear.

Grace Minor is also enjoying good health and many activities in a retirement complex in Lee's Summit, MO. She feels her move there from her home in Independence was a sensible one.

1920

Edna Sloan Sewell wrote from her home in Columbus, OH, where she had just returned from a visit to her daughter in Syracuse, NY. Her son-in-law is a professor at the University there, and her three granddaughters are recent graduates, one as valedictorian. They have now scattered from Boston to Colorado. Edna hears from Maddie Watson Banks at Christmas and reports that she is living in a retirement home in New Hampshire.

1924

Fund Agent

Jean Grant Taylor (Mrs. W. Randolph), 585 Arlington Blvd., Ann Arbor, MI 48104

Phyllis Millinger Camp, Leechburg, PA, says that she is just thankful she's still around. She's still active in the Episcopal Church Women's Guild and does some craft work. Daughter Amy spends weekends with her parents. Phyllis and George still spend the summer at their home on the Allegheny River, but the transfer gets harder each year.

Esther Jack Arnold went on a Caribbean Cruise to the West Indies on the Nordic Prince (Royal Caribbean Line) and took her daughter Susan, but in July she fell and broke her hip. She is finally home from the hospital after months of complications, cheered no doubt by a third grandchild, the son of her son Dr. Jack Arnold of Baltimore. Esther lives in Delaware, OH.

Parke, husband of Elizabeth Guy Tranter, had a pacemaker installed in December '82 and has the hospital check it by phone once a month. Since his arthritis keeps him from driving, Betty is afraid she will miss Reunion. Their son is recovering well from Hodgkin's disease, and their 8- and 7-year-old granddaughters are great fun. Writing in April last year from Pittsburgh, Betty said their Sweet Briar bulbs were spectacular.

Augusta Gee Loggins, Alexandria, VA, had wonderful Sweet Briar narcissi last Christmas, and when she wrote last spring, she said her daughter's whole place was burgeoning and her granddaughter had an attractive herb garden. Her great-grandchildren (7 and 5½) are flourishing, and she was looking forward to the arrival of a third one in July. Her oldest granddaughter was to receive a master's in fine arts in the spring. Augusta is learning to wear her hearing aid and has no peripheral vision but sees well "straight ahead" and still sews, knits, and reads a great deal.

Elizabeth Brewster Tempel has very precious memories of her first two years at Sweet Briar, though she graduated from the U. of Chicago because she lived with her father near the campus. She and her husband now live in Carlsbad, CA, in a Lutheran retirement home, Carlsbad by the Sea, with a beautiful view of the Pacific, which is just 300 feet away. She is in touch with Blanche Quincy Stubbs, who lives in Deland, FL. While Elizabeth liked the issue of the Alumnae Magazine on computers, Frances Nash Burgher enjoyed the issues which dealt with the early years of Sweet Briar. Besides the many professors brought to mind, she thought with pleasure about the five SBC presidents she had known. Frances lives in Dallas.

Susan Simrall Logan also reads the Alumnae Magazine with great interest and finds it hard to believe that it has been 60 years since she got her degree. Susan lives comfortably in a nursing home high on a Kentucky hill in Covington, not far from Rip Van Winkle Morledge '28. She also keeps in close touch by phone with Billy Hickenlooper Heizer '38 and Edith Durrell Marshall '21.

Eleanor Sikes Peters has been honored recently by having a new recital hall in a renovated School of Music building at Bradley U. in Peoria, IL, named for her. She also gave one of the first performances from its stage. When she wrote, she was awaiting the arrival of the third great-grandchild. Russ is about to retire, leaving the firm in the hands of his son and grandson.

After a long silence, Elsie Wood von Maur let us know about an honor she received earlier: the Silver Baton Award presented by the Bell System in recognition of her 47 years of service to the Tri-City Symphony Orchestra. She is now honorary chairman of the Board of Directors of the Symphony Association and actively involved in raising money for restoration of a movie theatre as a better place for orchestra, theatre and ballet performances. Her three children all live in Davenport, IA, and she has ten grandchildren and one great-granddaughter. Four granddaughters have been married within five years — all in beautiful ceremonies, in one of which a musical composition by Elsie's father was sung by Margharet Roberti.

Elizabeth Sparrow Crothers spends summers in her apartment in Cincinnati and winters in her condominium in Vero Beach, FL, where she belongs to the country club, plays bingo every Tuesday night, and plays some bridge. She has a daughter and a step-daughter in Cincinnati and a daughter in Phoenix, AZ.

Bernice Hulburd Wain, also in Florida, writes that her activities are limited to working for St. Margaret's Guild at church, bridge, and caring for house and husband.

Genevieve Elstun Moodey and her minister husband appreciate the advantages of retirement in a college town, Muncie, IN, home of Ball State. They play a little golf, travel, and enjoy a large family, recently increased by the arrival of the first great-grandchild.

Jane Shotts Chamberlain is a widow living happily alone in her own home in Joliet, IL. Her two children live on the West Coast — one in California, where Jane spent Christmas, and one in Seattle, WA. She has five grandchildren, one married. Her youngest granddaughter goes to Smith.

Freddi Bernhard spends the summers in Northeast Harbor, ME, and loves it. In the winter she busies herself at the College Women's Club, Berkeley (CA) Branch of AAUW. She was enthusiastic about a new retirement home, condominiums with life care, being built in Marin, CA, and hoped other SB alumnae would join her in buying in. She, Deedie Kirken-dall Barricks '25, and Hellen Mowrey Fell get together about every other month for lunch. Hellen says that her only activity is church work at St. James Episcopal, where she is director of the Altar Guild. She is at home a good deal, driving only around San Francisco because of two arthritic hips and a "crazy" back.

President Mary Rich Robertson sounds the call for the 60th Reunion. She quotes Shiney Bodine Mountcastle, "How we wish we could be with you. Imagine — 60th! We must be tougher than we think!" Mary writes other news. Susan Fitchett has to care for her two elderly sisters, each in a different town, but hopes to join the class in May. Clara King Maxwell has four grandchildren (the last of her three granddaughters was married last May) and two great-grandsons. After 54 years in her old home, Clara is looking for something on one floor where she and her antiques can be comfortable. Jackie Franke Charles is recuperating from a broken hip sustained last July. Janet Schureman Wilson has a new grandson, who joins two granddaughters. Her daughter and son-in-law live in St. Thomas, VI, and do charters in their yacht. Katherine Slaughter Thornton is not very well, and husband John writes from Culpeper, VA, that they are living a quiet life these days. Carol Flynn Eley is still busy in the Fort Lauderdale gift shop. El Harned Arp divides her days between Naples and visits to her family. Dur fund agent, Jean Grant Taylor, is ever faithful; her Randolph has problems with arthritis. Mary was expecting to see Mary Sturgis '25 and Emilie Halseil Marston '27 in January. They and Katherine Slaughter Thornton were in the Robertsons' wedding in October 1937. Mary Robertson's Bob was hospitalized recently with a heart condition but is doing well now. Their son Robbie also lives in Baltimore, and they see him often.

July 11, 1983, brought the sad death of one of our beloved classmates, Sarah Harrison Merrill, affectionately called "Chubby" during her four years at Sweet Briar. She had a long battle with cancer and fought valiantly to the end. Between bouts with the disease she managed to achieve good living, even some traveling with family and friends. She was the most courageous person I've ever known and set us all a wonderful example. She leaves her devoted Art, a distinguished Atlanta physician, and three splendid sons, one of whom has followed in their father's footsteps as a physician.

I saw Hazel Stamps Collins several times last summer when she was in Atlanta and also during the Christmas holidays. She, Lib Douglass Foote, and I get together periodically for lunch and go to antiques shows, museum exhibits, and such-like. Hazel adores her Naples, FL, home and heads back to it about Oct. 15. She travels to Texas for Christmas with daughter Cecil Collins Scanlon '63 and family, spends a couple of weeks in Atlanta, then goes back to Naples. We rarely ever see her again before June 15 when the heat drives her north. Lib Douglass Foote and I spend a lot of time together. We enjoy the same things and live about two blocks apart. We even have a New Year's Eve party together — for left-over people and left-over food (from Christmas)! It started out as sort of a consolation gathering because we didn't have anything to do on New Year's Eve and felt sorry for ourselves. Now it has become a great party, and everybody has a grand time and concocts a real gourmet item to contribute to the buffet. We have two rules: the first one is that if an invited guest receives a more interesting invitation, it must be accepted; and Rule #2 is that everybody has to go home at 10 o'clock! A short note on Marion Malm Fowler's returned Fund "flap" says that they are happily enjoying life, but that Mac's bad heart slows them down a bit. Some sad and tragic news came from Courtenay Cochran Ticer — last August her son had a motorcycle accident in Denver, CO, where he lived, and was killed instantly. Our deepest love and sympathy go out to her.

A Christmas card with a sweet note came from Sally Ainsworth Glass, who moved from Atlanta a few years ago to Fayetteville, AR, to keep house for her bachelor brother. Did you know we have an artist, poet, and author in our ranks? Nancy Wilson Mann wrote that she is at last retired and painting and writing. As Nancy Tucker Wilson she is a poet, and as Nancy Wilson Mann she published a book, Tylers and Gardeners on the Village Green. It is about East Hampton, Long Island, and Williamsburg, VA, where two families of her forebears led parallel lives in the early years of the American Colonies. The reviews were very complimentary, and I am looking forward to reading it. We are proud of you, Nancy! Her children and grandchildren live either near her in Virginia Beach or in Great Falls or Alexandria. Elizabeth West Etheredge wrote that she had moved into Westminster-Canterbury at Virginia Beach and loves it. She reports that there are several other Sweet Briarites of our class living there: Sarah Bright Gracey Haskell, Julia Wilkins Yates, and Grisselle Thomson '22. She'd heard from Nancy Worthington '31 that she lives in Westminster-Canterbury in Lynchburg.

Anna Gilbert Davy's life sounds so vital and enjoyable. She and her husband Hugh live in San Francisco and spend a great part of their time traveling. They have a vacation home in Pebble Beach which they have swapped successfully a number of times. Last summer they drove to Vancouver Island to visit friends, then were joined by their daughter, and with two friends rafted on Oregon's Rogue River for "three delightful days." (How I'd love to have their stamina!) In September she and Hugh "splurged and took the Orient Express from Istanbul to Paris, spent ten days in England before returning to San Francisco." Fantastic! Next year is their Golden Wedding Anniversary.

Marcia Patterson sounds so happy with her move to Ohio and being near her young relatives and sharing in the big moments of their young lives. The older I get the more I realize how wonderful it is to be around the young — except when their stereotypes are turned up! Emma Knowlton Lytle writes that last summer she was engaged in watercolor painting but sculpture now. She is delighted to have a granddaughter, Eleanor Schnabel, at Sweet Briar. Last year was quiet for Marjorie (Pat) Ward Cross except for short trips and three weeks in Greece, where she missed by one day coming home on the plane with the Sweet Briar group. She is still happily a guide at Wintertur. Eleanor Nolte Armstrong wrote from Segrin, TX, that she had a wonderful visit with Oorothy Richey Archer, Hallie Orr Burton and Virginia Nalle

Page over lunch. Hallie and Virginia drove over from Austin, and they had a joyful reunion.

Frank and Sue Burnett Davis took the most interesting trip last summer. Our former Dean, Catherine Sims, and her husband Rolf went with the Davises first to England, where they spent a week "barging" on the Thames. Then they flew to Zurich and thence to Stuttgart, where they boarded a river boat and "boated" on the Neckar River to Heidelberg. Squibby (Virginia Squibb Flynn), won a prize for her bulb selling prowess and was awarded a trip to Holland in the spring of '84.

Barbara Munter Purdue's youngest daughter, Beverly, was married last September in Washington to a young lawyer, Michael Hannon. They are both practicing law in D.C. The third Purdue child, my goddaughter Hazel, is living in Erie, PA, with her husband and family. They are dedicated sailors and spent their summer vacation in their sailboat on the St. Lawrence. As I write this, Barbara and Bob are en route to Hawaii, where they go every January (can you hear my sigh of envy?). They will see Marge Gubelman Hastert '31 and Mildred Larimer both of whom live in Honolulu, but the news they bring back will be too late to put in this letter.

Several months ago at a Colonial Oames meeting I met Virginia Hall Lindley's charming daughter Van Livingston, recently moved to Atlanta from Greensboro, NC. Being a dyed-in-wool tar heel, I asked what her maiden name was, and when she said "Lindley," I looked at her closer and saw a distinct resemblance to Virginia, but Van is taller and not as brunette. "My gosh," I said, "your mother was May Queen of my class at Sweet Briar!" I hope Virginia will be coming to Atlanta some now. Van promised to let me know when so I can get all the Atlanta classmates together to sing "Sweet Briar, Sweet Briar, flower fair"!

I had the nicest letter from Jobie (Elizabeth Job Jopp) and I wish all of you from whom I have not heard would follow her example. She said neither she or her SBC roomie Ruth Kerr Fortune could make it to Reunion Fifty, so in May '83 they had their own private reunion on a cruise through the Panama Canal. Ruth flew from Las Cruces, NM, and they boarded the ship at San Juan, Puerto Rico. It was a wonderful cruise and they enjoyed every minute of it and being together again. They parted in San Francisco; Ruth returned to New Mexico and Jobie to her "old Kentucky home." Our capable and conscientious fund agent, Eleanor Wright Conway, and Ted spent several months in their Durham, NC, home to do research at Duke and UNC. They went to West Point in May '83 for Ted's fiftieth reunion. In August El, Ted Clary Treadwell, Ruth Remon

McRae, and Helen Pratt Secrest enjoyed a "mini-reunion" over lunch in Arlington, VA. I'll bet they were all talking at once! The Conways had a grand family get-together Thanksgiving at the Gladwyn, PA, home of their daughter, Laura Conway Nason '61 with her husband Jack and their two sons. They were joined there by their daughter Ruth Conway Willons and her husband Walter and two daughters from Houston.

The Life and Travels of John Bartram by Edmund and Dot Smith Berkeley was published in Jan. '83 by the Florida State Press; then last summer they spent three weeks in Switzerland. Dot says she has given out of descriptive adjectives for that country! A note on the "flap" from Alice Dabney Parker gave wonderful news of highly successful treatment for her husband John in April '83 at Johns Hopkins. Since then he has been able to travel a bit, and they had a good visit with their daughter Fleming near New York. Fleming is deeply involved in her work on the clergy staff of Grace Church in Manhattan. Their other daughter Betsy has recovered from a severe knee injury and has had her best season ever on the tennis courts.

Helen Pratt Secrest lost her husband Jim and her brother Philip within a few months of each other in '82 and that is why she was not at our Fiftieth. This sad news came after I had mailed in my last year's newsletter, so I couldn't let you know, but Helen and I exchanged letters a couple of times. She is living in Washington but visits her daughter in New Mexico and is adjusting.

Amalie Frank Kohn reports no big trips this past year but does manage to visit family members on holidays or special occasions. To her amazement she finds herself "busily embroidered" in her neighborhood civic club's efforts to prevent big developers from encroaching on her residential area. It seems to happen everywhere, and bless her heart for protesting and getting involved!

Henrietta Bryan Alphin is able to leave home a bit now that her sister and her husband have retired in Charlottesville and share in the care of their 102-year-old mother, who is now in a nursing home. Henrietta had a trip to San Francisco with daughter Bryan Alphin Bente '69 and her 18-month-old son when the Bentes were transferred by Hewlett Packard. She also visits her son, his wife Jenny Lindsley Alphin '72, and their two children in Annapolis and spent Christmas with Katherine, her eldest, in Atlanta. Henrietta's sister is also known to some Sweet Briar alumnae; she is Hilah Bryan Thomas, who was an assistant in the Biology Dept. at SBC at the end of the thirties.

Few of us can match the record of Dorothy Harper Bridgers who has two granddaughters at SBC, Mary Margaret Cranz 'B4 and Menhall Bridgers 'B6. Dorothy lives in a house on the Sound at Morehead City, NC, and has three daughters and two sons, all of whom are married.

Last March Kathleen (La) Donohue McCormack visited friends in Palm Springs and, en route to Idaho to see one of her sons, stopped in San Francisco for lunch and a short visit at the airport with Dodie Burrill Walker. In June, La went to England for two weeks with an Episcopal Church group, visiting many cathedrals and meeting the Archbishop of Canterbury at Lambeth Palace. But best of all, according to her, was having all four of her sons, their wives, and eight granddaughters spend July 4th weekend with her at her Elkhart Lake cottage. This February she was planning to be on a cruise through the Panama Canal.

Last spring Nancy Parsons Jones and Vincent had a trip through the Baltic Sea. They sailed from Fort Lauderdale and proceeded to Southampton, where they were joined by their daughter Sue Jones Cansler '63 and her husband.

Lillian Cabell Gay and Jim are leaving Memphis now that he has retired from the faculty of the U. of Tenn. Medical School. They will move to Lakewood, PA, to be near Jim's family. A meeting at VPI which they attended coincided with the inauguration of the new president of SBC, so the Gays took in that ceremony too. Lillian wrote that although she saw only two people she knew at SB, they met many interesting people, that the day was beautiful, and that it was a happy occasion.

Polly Rich Ewing wrote from Aurora, CO, that her third grandchild, Nathan James Wallace, was born in July and that she and her husband took care of his two siblings (5 and 3) at that time — a happy but tiring endeavor. In September she and John took a three-week tour of Ireland and the British Isles. She adds, "We are looking forward to the 50th and hope to be in good health, great good spirits, and find lots of others in the same condition." I add my hopes to hers and expect to see a very large turn-out of '36-ers for our Golden Anniversary Reunion.

Dorothea McClure Mountain and Bill spend six months of the year at their condominium in Pompano Beach, FL, and summer in Kittanning, PA. But she writes, "In the past ten years we have been to Africa, Australia, and Europe. Now we are ready to settle down with golf and bridge. Bill is a Life Master at the latter."

In March 1983 Dr. James W. Todd, husband of Marjorie Wing Todd, died of a heart attack at their home in Eustis, FL. Fortunately for Wing, her four children live nearby and keep her busy. She has two little grandsons and two step-grandchildren.

Margaret Huxley Dick has taken a grandchild to Europe the past two summers, which was fun but exhausting. Her big trip, though, was to the Himalayas for a month the fall of '82 and then on around the world for another month visiting friends and relatives. One of her daughters has just moved to Richmond, so she'll be visiting there too.

Annette Harley Chappell is enjoying retirement in Silver Spring, MD. She has recently been to Mississippi to see her new granddaughter, second daughter of son Joe and his wife Beverly, and plans a trip to Mexico this summer on a tour to sing with her church choir.

Lucile Cox Jones and her husband, both retired from college teaching positions, last year practiced the Italian they have learned in retirement with a week-long visit to a friend in Italy. They also "had a further trip to Germany, with not such proficient German, but adequate."

I talked to our wonderful Fund Agent, Katie Niles Parker, who has just returned home from knee replacement surgery and is getting along nicely. Katie talked to Frances (Chickie) Gregory, who is spending the winter in Cambridge, MA, researching and writing a second book on early merchants and businesses in the Boston area. Chickie and Frank Parker's (Katie's husband) lines of research for a second book he is writing (this one about Parkers in the same area) intersected, and they are now comparing notes. Chickie wrote that on her last visit to Richmond she screened some of her home movies of our commencement. It would be most interesting if she would show them at our 50th Reunion. If others of you have pictures — movie or still — please bring them to SB in May 1986. Surely we'd be charmed as well as amused.

I was pleased to hear from Helen Roberta Finley Meigs, the first news in a long time. She and husband Walter live in Los Angeles and have two grown children and three granddaughters. Helen is president of her own real estate company and Walter writes accounting textbooks. They are so busy with their work that they have no time for traveling and little to spend at their Santa Barbara beach home.

Ruth Gilliam Viar's husband had serious surgery last summer but is recovering slowly. Some time at Myrtle Beach helped him, as well as Ruth. They had to postpone their return trip to Ireland but hope to go this summer. They are expecting their seventh grandchild this summer; the oldest is 22. Ruth volunteers in the genealogical section of the Jones Library in Lynchburg.

Alice Andrews Fackert and Bill went to England and the Channel Islands last May. Last fall she and a friend played duets for their Elkhart, IN, music club program, after some long and hard practice. She wrote, "I thought of college and Miriam Weaver as I sorted out my collection of piano duets and am glad that she made me work so hard!"

Emily Bowen Muller and George, who moved to Washington State several years ago, expect to enjoy their retirement there this year. They plan to travel for fun instead of business and hope to attend our 50th Reunion.

Lucille Scott Knoke and Elliott celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary this past November at home in Asheville, NC. All 16 members of their immediate family were there — four children and their spouses, seven grandchildren, and her sister from California. One Air Force grandson came from Germany for the occasion.

Frances Baker Lamb and Wilson took their third tour to the British Isles last summer. They stayed in private homes in Scotland and were delighted that Josephine Happ Willingham '38 was in their party. Fran's son Ted Owen visited Dail and Nancy Braswell Holderness at their home in Tarboro, NC, in August and reports that Nancy is still the same dynamo that she was at SB.

Martha Ake Brouse says that she and Bob have taken to following the sun — spending about six months in Delray Beach, FL, and the summer in Akron.

I was disappointed not to see Mary Kate Crow Sinclair when I was in Houston last February as she was out of town. One of her grandsons is in the Navy studying nuclear energy. Two of her children live in California, and a third lives in Houston, where he works at the Medical Center. Mary Kate is involved with Meals-on-Wheels and Colonial Dames activities, and her husband is a champion angler who fishes every day.

Lillian Steele Cook of Rome, NY, had three grandchildren graduate from high school in '83. Her oldest grandson graduates from college in '84, and his brother is a college freshman. Lil's daughter has two small children and lives in Marblehead, MA, as does her second son.

Elizabeth (Pinky) Pinkerton Scott is a member of the board of trustees at Stuart Hall and is pleased with the school's new lease on life with a new president. In December she was hostess to Maria Gray Valentine Curtis, Jackie Moore Hoofnagle, and Logan Phinzy Johns when they spent the day at Bundoran Farm, her home near Charlottesville. Logan wrote that Jackie plans a trip to Egypt in March with her son Bill and his family and to Spain in April with friends. Logan and Maria Gray and husbands are due to leave in May on a trip to California, Vancouver, and back to Richmond by way of the Canadian Rockies.

Esther (Tillie) O'Brian Robinson now lives "totally alone" in a tiny one-floor house in Hamburg, NY, with an "antique mongrel dog." Since her last two sisters and brother-in-law died in 1981, the younger generation call her the family matriarch. She enjoys meeting with Barbara Lewis Howard '29, Trudy Lewis Magavern '31, and Nan Russell Carter '34 and says, "Sweet Briar bonds are forever."

Corinne Fentress Gray wrote from Dixmont, ME, that Jackie Moore Hoofnagle visited her last summer and that on the Gray farm they have a fluctuating population of about 50 horses. They train and breed horses and teach riders. Her daughter Lendon '71 is on the "long list" for the Dressage Olympic Team. Corinne was about to leave on a month-long bus trip from Maine to Oregon, Colorado, Texas, Alabama, and Virginia, with stops at SB and Richmond to see SB friends.

Myra (Kin) Carr Baldwin spent Thanksgiving with her son Bob, his wife, and 3-year-old Robert, III, in Winston-Salem, NC. Her daughter Stuart Baldwin Osmond '64, who lives in England with her husband and two children, usually comes to Norfolk for a week in the summer, but Kin hopes to go to England in May and take Stuart to Vienna and Salzburg.

As for me, a trip with my sister to Texas to visit relatives and art museums started last February off nicely. The first week of April we celebrated the long-awaited opening of our new N.C. Museum of Art building. On April 8 my second grandson, Charles Lee Smith, IV, was born. But on July 4 my dear sister-in-law died of a stroke, and two weeks later my 11-month-old grandson, John Ward Purrington, Jr., died of a sudden and acute viral infection — a heart-breaking blow. In September I went with my sister and brother-in-law to the annual meeting of the English-Speaking Union in San Diego, CA, and then on to Melbourne, Australia, for the triennial international meeting of the E.S.U. Afterward we spent a few days in Sydney and Canberra and then went to New Zealand, Tahiti, and Fiji for two weeks. My daughter Lindsay Smith Newsom '67 and I will attend the Antiques Forum in Williamsburg, and then in April I plan to go to England with a group of North Carolinians. We'll commemorate the 400th anniversary of the embarkation on April 27, 1584, of the first group of English settlers for what is now North Carolina.

Last February Margaret Robertson Densmore and Lorraine (Tory) Himes

Beddoes stopped by Raleigh en route to Washington from Florida and had lunch with me. It was a treat to see them after such a long time, and we had a good visit. They spent that night in Richmond and saw several of our Richmond classmates. They flew from Washington to France, Sicily, and Italy. In Milan they visited Margaret's daughter, who was teaching there on a Fulbright program. But the most exciting news I have saved for last. Margaret was married on Jan. 1, 1984, to Alfred G. Whitney (Harvard '29), a long time friend who also lives in Princeton, MA. They expected to go South in February. Congratulations!

Barbara Smith Whitlock (Mrs. James P.), 214 Exeter Way, Hillside, NJ 07205

It's time for our annual 1940's news exposé. You are so fantastic about reporting and sending news clippings that it makes this job much easier. Since yours truly has only one more year as your class secretary, it is time for you to think ahead for replacement nominees. Our new class officers will be elected at our 1985 45th Reunion prior to the summer publication of our Alumnae Magazine next year. In the fall you will receive from Connie Currie Fleming, our class president, a letter and questionnaire, the latter to be mailed to me for our reunion scrapbook.

Adelaide Boze Glascock reports that she and Margaret Dowell Kearney took the SBC trip to Australia and New Zealand in January, with a visit to the Great Barrier Reef in Australia, and stopped for R. and R. in Hawaii on the way home. Polly still finds real estate interesting and challenging. Jim and Polly's niece Suzanne Branch was a junior at SBC this year and spent her junior year in France just like her Aunt Polly.

Janet Runkle Wells and her Bob drove west with son Rob to spend time with Bob's family, after which they flew to Michigan to welcome their first grandchild, courtesy of daughter Gretchen. Columbus and Bob are delighted to be relocated in Granville, OH, where their children grew up, and it's nice to be close to son Ian, manager of a Granville bank.

Hortense Powell Cooper writes that she touches base with Mildred Moon Montague when they happen to attend Colonial Dames' meetings at the same time in Nashville. Hortense keeps busy with organizations and committees, her particular interest being the board that manages The Hermitage, former home of Andrew Jackson in Nashville, and Belmont, home of Adelia Hayes Achler. The latter housed Ward-Belmont School during its existence. Hortense's eldest son practices law in Nashville, while his brother Jim, Hortense's second son, is the youngest U.S. Representative in the House in Washington. John, son number three, attends the Owens School of Business at Vanderbilt U. Moon, always a good news source for us, spent two days with Bill at the Augusta National golf tournament, also meeting with Jane Bush Long and Mariana Bush King for socializing. Mariana's husband Bobby owns several Po-Folks restaurants in North Carolina and Florida. Jane and her Gene entertained Eleanor Bosworth Badal and Dan en route to their Florida condo. Mildred Mitchell Gillis and Watts were at Sea Island while Moon and Bill stayed at the Cloisters for the Senior Invitational Golf Tourney, so they had a fun get-together. Mickey and Watts are glad to have their son moving to Ormond Beach, after living in Idaho, so the family is close by. In November Moon enjoyed a theater trip with her Little Theater Associates, of which she served as founding president, and while in NYC saw Polly Boze Glascock and Jim for dinner at the Yale Club. Then Moon went on to Philadelphia, where she attended a board meeting of Big Brothers/Big Sisters, the latest growing agency for service to children to our country. Another Little Theater jaunt took Moon to London, accompanied by her elder son as escort. Then Beth Thomas Mason wrote from Seattle, WA, that it was a treat to see her and three members of the Montague family there to watch UVa play basketball in the "Final Four." Beth tutors children with language disability.

Ann Adamson Taylor remains a staunch Reaganite and active committee member of the Baltimore Republican Commission. Ann had a delightful visit with Emory Gill Williams and Canky in Irvington, VA, after Thanksgiving last year. Ann's daughter Sally travels extensively to Europe and Hong Kong for research and promotional purposes regarding her maps, articles, and books, but Ann meets her at various locations, plus Sally comes to Baltimore for R. and R. with Mom. Emory and Canky love going to their Maine cottage each summer, and Emory is rapturous over life in the Virginia countryside. They went to Vienna last year for a surgical meeting and then motored through Germany and Bavaria. Both attended the inauguration of our new S.B. president, Dr. Enah Elinor Fry, and Emory says Dr. Fry is super. I would concur in that, as last September I was privileged to be a guest at the Piedmont Driving Club here in Atlanta for a cocktail buffet in honor of Dr. Fry. The event was hosted by the S.B.

Board of Directors and Overseers in conjunction with our local alumnae club — a gala affair with all adjectives used to describe our new president being in the superlative category. Present were many other S.B. luminaries, including Ann Morrison Reams '42, director of the Alumnae Association, and Fontaine Belford, our poised and charming new Dean.

I thought you would all be interested in learning how the Nida Tomlin Watts Memorial Fund has benefited students, as well as the entire S.B. community. Those who have lectured or held workshops as a result of the Fund's sponsorship are as follows: in 1977, Kenneth McCormick, former editor-in-chief, Doubleday & Co.; 1978, Victor Perea, U. of Cal.-Santa Cruz writer and linguist; 1979, Mary Lee Settle, award-winning writer and teacher; 1980, Nancy Hale Bowers, writer; 1981, Isaac Singer, writer and Nobel Prize winner; 1982, Peter Taylor, writer; and 1983, Mary Cable, writer, who also taught a course in creative writing during the SBC January term. As class fund agent both in 1976 and 1977, I remember how generous many of you were in making contributions to Nida's Fund and dare say that they are still welcome. Incidentally, our classmate Mary Lee Settle (Mrs. William Tazewell), author of the five novels called the Beulah Quintet, as well as Blood Tie, winner of the National Book Award, and others, has an interesting front-page article, "Recapturing the Past in Fiction," in the N.Y. Times Book Review for Feb. 12, 1984.

Jaqueline Sexton Daley's message from California relates that the prime suspect in their daughter-in-law's abduction and murder has now confessed, but her body has not been discovered yet. The mystery of the perpetrator has been solved at least and Jackie hopes the matter can finally be laid to rest. Jackie and John's talented daughter Barbara sang the lead as the mother in Amahl at Christmas time in San Jose.

Coralie Kahn Ferro's news is that last year was a tough one since Coralie's mother, "our Clara," died Christmas night, 1982. Mike and Coralie were in Spain in October and also jetted to Hawaii for a week in the fall. Daughter Nan and son Michael spent last Christmas in San Francisco, all trying not to wash away from the daily downpours. Coralie plays golf when she can take time away from her busy schedule.

Ramona Spurlock Fite writes that she and Cal "muddle along" in Opry Town but had an exciting trip to the Orient, where they were thrilled by being on the Great Wall and experiencing the sights of Hong Kong, Singapore, Bangkok's klongs and Manila's jeepneys. Mona wishes we would all visit Nashville, at intervals of course!

Connie Cleary Clark and her Al continue to spend May through October in the Adirondacks, taking in June last year a beautiful trip through the Canadian Rockies and returning to Montreal by train. They celebrated Christmas in Colorado and were looking forward to their Australian jaunt this spring. Connie's motto is "Travel while you can."

An unexpected news card return from Tom W. Lewis, Jr., brought the sad news of the death of his wife Margaret Robinson Lewis. Margaret died last September after a prolonged illness in Pine Bluff. We extend our collective sympathies to Tom and their family.

Charlotte Knox Lane remains at the helm, as chief pilot, for the Washington-Greene County Tourist Promotion Agency, as a representative of Western Pennsylvania. Her Perry is active in real estate, and with two of their children residing out of state, they are glad to have their son next door. They have seven grandchildren and are still hoping for more. Charlotte had the opportunity to do a sales mission last year in the United Kingdom which included Birmingham, Cambridge, Manchester, and London. Representatives from those areas were reciprocally entertained in this country last fall by Charlotte and her agency.

"Tempus fugit," says Reba Smith Gromel and finds it hard, as most of us do, to believe we've been gone from SBC 44 years. Reba occupies her spare time with bridge, church work, golf, and travel with George, who has recovered well from a bypass operation a year and half ago. Florida living is recommended by them both, as well as by Connie Currie Fleming, since she and Dick have taken up summer residence on the East Coast in Stuart. Connie, I think (my files have an innovative self-scrambling system), sent a clipping from The New York Times detailing the marriage of Pamela Forster to Henry H. Livingston, III, son of Maria Burroughs Livingston. Phooey is presently allied with the Development Office of the Brearley School.

A Fund flap from Blanche Fleming Gray reads that she is well again after her stroke and subsequent surgery. Midge credits physical therapy with aiding in her return to normalcy. Her elder son, Sandy, stayed in Charlottesville after his graduation and marriage which gave Midge her first chance to be "Mother of the Groom." Midge enjoys her sojourns in Manhattan visiting son Walter and his Lisa.

Helen Taylor, our outstanding class medico, remains at the Norfolk Health Dept. Family Planning Clinic and together with her P.A. sees about 40 patients a day. Helen says they have a good time doing it.

Jane Bush Long loves reading our class notes and says that all four married sons keep right on providing grandchildren. The Longs' elder granddaughter is a freshman at Hollins and their son Will graduates from Emory Dental School in May.

Ruth Mealand Schwartz, although now retired, is busier than ever. Ruth doesn't find this surprising as her club activities are numerous, plus her son is in an international consulting firm with his Dad, which makes for many nice family global trips. So far, Ruth has two fine grandsons.

Mary Petty Johnson Bedell sent clippings from The Washington Post and a Maryland newspaper describing son Woody's great and good win in the Hawaiian Triathletic Marathon. This was Woody's ninth try for first place and his persistence finally prevailed over 1000 triathletes from 28 countries. Congrats to Woody and his patient Joyce, as well as Mom. Mary Petty has an SBC candidate for the year 2000 in the person of her first granddaughter, whose dad is Mary Petty's son #3. She also enclosed an article from the Richmond Times Dispatch informing us of the death of Jane Goolrick Murrell after an extended sickness. We shall all miss Goolrick and share in the grief of her loved ones.

Blair Bunting Both and Rich had a grand three weeks in France in October, visiting out of the way villages, all inspired by reading a book entitled Hidden France. One week in Paris was also a joy to the Boths. Blair receives lots of psychic income through her work with Philadelphia area soup kitchens and making herself available to those who need a listening ear. In November she joined other Briarites at the Episcopal Renewal Conference in Asheville. Blair and Rich are delighted that their daughter has returned Stateside. Elizabeth Ivins Haskins, Barbara Smith Whitlock, and Connie Currie Fleming joined Blair for a delightful lunch in NYC prior to attending a Monet exhibit. Ivy writes that she has her first SBC granddaughter candidate, born in Denver last year. Ivy and granddaddy Bill visited the little one and her parents at Thanksgiving where Ivy reports they were "en-snowed"! Ivy stays involved in worthwhile projects and opines that her athletic prowess rivals that of our freshman 6th hockey team.

Our talented Georgia Herbert Hart and George have been blessed with their eighth grandchild, as of this printing. Georgia continues actively in civic involvement plus her enthusiastic occupation with her poetry and its publication.

Eleanor Snow Lea and Tat stopped with Connie Currie Fleming and Dick en route from Vermont to visit their daughter in North Carolina. Connie and Polly Boze Glascock met by accident in Bloomingdale's! Connie wrote of a lovely S.B. luncheon held in Princeton last year at the home of Helen Cornwall Jones. In October the Flemings reveled in a trip to Italy, Switzerland, and the Greek Islands, occasioned by a scheduled Swiss meeting of Dick and a few Princeton classmates to make plans for their 50th Reunion. Connie, also, wishes us to circle May, 1985, and put MUST DO beside it!

Helen Schmid Hardy adores our class notes and the Alumnae Magazine articles. She and Bill were happily surprised last fall when Clara Call Frasier and her Bill were in the desert and called to come by for coffee and confabulation. The Frasier's live in Rancho Santa Fe and both are busy with the Frasier Health Food Enterprises. The Hardys relish their trips to San Francisco where four of their five offspring now reside, an extra enticement being their only grandchild. Hug can hardly bear to leave the desert as she's truly smitten, but they still go to Michigan for the summer months.

In St. Louis, Jane Westphalen Gray has more time for traveling and remodeling their home now that she has retired as president of the St. Louis Women's Club. The Grays were expecting their first grandchild in February.

Katherine Hill Apperson writes that her Sweet Briar bulbs are the talk of her condominium in Charlotte, NC. She was planning to go to Natchez and New Orleans on a Junior League Sustainer Tour of 15 gardens and "everything else historic and fun." She can boast of three beautiful grandchildren.

Jane Hopkins Hanes has her main residence in Winston-Salem but keeps a "pad" in Wilmington where her daughter and grandchild live. Jane's outside interests include Salem College and Old Salem. These, with Jane's work with the blind, take up most of her spare hours. Jane is sorry she isn't in contact with more S.B. gals.

I am sure all received an informative letter from our co-fund agents Nickie Gockley McLellan and Barbara Smith Whitlock in November encouraging us to keep up our financial support and show our gratitude to SBC. Nickie's trips to her son in Wyoming and a fall visit to the Greenbrier, as well as the Homestead, were last year's travel highlights. Nickie golfs, gardens, and serves on the Cathedral Altar Guild. Barbara mentioned how much she enjoyed the NYC lunch with the "girls" at the Harvard Club. Barb's children and grands often come to see her and Jim during the winter, and in summer too at Mantoloking.

Your class secretary has thankfully retired from the professional practice of nursing, leaving all in the hands of younger R.N.'s. Last spring I spent three happy weeks as house guest of Margaret Katterjohn McCollom and Katherine Hodge Soaper interspersed with overnight side trips to friends and relatives in Illinois and Indiana. It's always nice to return to our origins, but when I win the Reader's Digest sweepstakes, I plan to hold you all to those gracious invitations of hospitality. Margaret and Kay stopped with me en route to Florida fun and sun with friends and friendly relations on the Gulf Coast. While they were here, Jane Rice McPherson '44 joined us for dinner one evening. Kay's Soaper Acres require a great deal of overseeing; she is an active elder in the Henderson Presbyterian Church, does book reviews, and enjoys her family, especially her little grandson. Margaret sews, baby-sits, entertains constantly, plays bridge, and serves on innumerable committees. She is an avid stamp collector of canceled commemorative stamps, plus original sheets.

Aside from the nuclear freeze, the Central American imbroglio, Lebanon, or similar crises, Irene Vongehr Vincent considers that life is good to her and John. A wonderful trip to China was among their major events last year, and although Irene wrote in great detail in their Christmas letter, we unfortunately do not have space here for her marvelous description of the journey. Two July events brought much happiness to the Vongehrs as they celebrated their son John's wedding and the same month a plump Baby Dumpling future SBC prospect came their way, a present from their third daughter. Irene is now busily writing a book on their recent China trip with emphasis on comparison of the current status of the country's cities with that of their condition prior to 1949. John is co-editing when he can take the time from his own work.

Estelle Sinclair is in demand as a writer, speaker, and teacher in her field of cut glass and has taken up photography in order to illustrate her articles better. Tell has added reviewing museum art to her talents and is happy to be living close to Helen Cornwell Jones.

Hazel Sterrett Allen and spouse William have two sons and two daughters with six fine grands between them. The Senior Allens not only enjoyed a Danube cruise last winter, stopping in five countries, but also went on a barge trip to Holland last May, which Helen said was quite a contrast. They are glad to be in the North Carolina mountains during the summer months.

A letter sent to the Alumnae Office from Gwen Olcott Writer '30 shed light on news and whereabouts of one of our "address unknown" classmates, Marjorie Peggs Perry. Marjorie recently retired as Girl Scout field secretary for Rockland County, NY, an area in which she has been active for many years. Marge's other interests have included professional acting on Broadway, summer stock in which she played with such notables as Constance Bennett, Debbie Reynolds, and Eva Gabor, and starring in a production in Cambridge written especially for her. She and her husband Bob, a producer and director, have five grandchildren.

Our editorial staff et al sincerely hope that Joy Carter Forse hasn't wasted too much of 1983 looking for her 1940 jigger, as printed in our 1983 class notes. The item referred to a snapshot sent to me by Joy from which I reported, "Joy still has her 1940 'figger'" (as in figure). The magazine passes through so many hands it's a credit to the staff that there aren't more errors. To Sarah Mayo Sohn: The remark concerning you and Dr. Sohn was written by me to read that you were now well settled in Athens, where Dr. Sohn had accepted the U. of Georgia chair in Law. Unfortunately the settled was omitted so that it may have read as though you had both recovered from some dreadful disease. There was no news from Joy nor Sarah this year.

Mary Jane Burnett Hill is estatic over her first grandbaby (now 2), courtesy of son Tim and his pediatrician spouse. M.J. and Perry flew to Connecticut for Perry's 50th class reunion at Wesleyan U. in June '83 and spent the remainder of the summer exploring Idaho and the British Columbian coast north of Vancouver. Now they are excitedly planning for a three-week U. of Cal.-Berkeley exchange course at Oxford U. in July-August, preceded by a week's canal boat trip. Timothy and family will join them for the last part of the trip. M.J. swims a half mile daily which she tops off with tennis! Both of the Hills find their church commitments very rewarding and appreciate the glories of the desert more each year.

Martha Smith McGowan, retired from her library position after 20 years, is now finding time for aerobic dancing and a computer class. She and Chuck are looking forward to Chuck's retirement in order to do some serious traveling.

Ann Sims retains her library position in Ft. Smith, as yet, and further contributes to community enrichment by delivering library lectures. Although Ann had a total hip replacement last year, she had no complications and is strictly mobile. She lunches with Ruth Beach Robinson and both maintain their college friendship with Sarah Mayo Sohn by phone and letter.

Marjorie Stock Clemens and husband, with children on both East and West Coasts and in Michigan, spend a good deal of time traveling to visit them. During the summer months the Clemenses are usually at their place in the Upper Peninsula; the rest of the time they play "catch up."

Further communication from Eleanor Bosworth Badal says that she and Oan had a great trip to Italy and were present at a business meeting in Spain last summer. Eleanor found her college Spanish courses mildly helpful but is seriously considering some further Spanish training. Their daughter Heather was married in September to a member of the staff of the Attorney General's Ohio office. Ellie was happy to have Margaret Dowell Kearney present as these two gals prize their S.B. friendship.

See you in May 1985. THINK REUNION!

Secretary

Ellen Boyd Duval Miller (Mrs. William R.), Rte. 2, Box 169M, Beaverdam, VA 23015

Fund Agent

Jean Blanton Murphy (Mrs. James E.), 5013 Columbia Rd., Annandale, VA 22003

By the time you read this our 40th Reunion will have come and gone! I therefore feel that much of what I write this January day will be stale news for most of you, who, I hope, will have caught up with one another on campus.

Her Christmas card brought an interesting account by Jinnie Noyes Pillsbury of a trip to Nicaragua, where she and daughter Jeannette conducted a learning clinic for deacons and postulants of the Iglesia Episcopal de Nicaragua. Jinnie had been in the country in 1978 and was impressed with the improvement in social conditions since that time.

Classmates will be saddened to hear of the death last May of "Pete" Newland, husband of Susanne Landis Newland. Another distressing piece of news is that Mary White Hollander died of cancer in October, 1982. This word came from Norma Bradley Arnold, who also wrote more cheerfully of a winter SB reunion in Florida at Marty Falk Vallery's, which included Frances Longino Schroder and Hughes. Marty wonders if there are not more classmates in the area (Deerfield Beach) and would love to hear from them. The Arnolds had also stopped in Charleston to see Susan Somervell Griswold and John and found them looking "wonderful."

Sounding comfortably settled in Florida are Helen Crump Cutler and John, who are near Jacksonville.

It is always interesting to hear from Murrell Rickards Chadney, and I especially enjoy news of her mother, Frances Murrell Rickards, the oldest living graduate (1910) of SBC. Ricky was expecting this intrepid lady of 96 to fly up from Virginia to N.Y.C. for Christmas. I am sorry to report that Eleanor Goodspeed Abbott and Larry have had a miserable year as far as health goes, Goodie suffering with a severe back problem and Larry having a serious operation. When she wrote, Goodie was uncertain about Reunion but was hoping to be better able to navigate by May.

One of the nicest things for me this year was a visit from Sidney Holmes Bales, whom Peggy Gordon Seiler brought out one afternoon. It had been a long time, but Sidney and I kept saying, "You are just the same!" I reported on her boys last time; since then her husband has retired from newscasting but sounded very busy with his writing.

Notes on Christmas cards consisted less of family news and more of hopes to get to Reunion. Those working on it especially (and I hope they all make it) are Marian Shanley Jacobs and Bill (she is our Scrapbook Chairman), Marge Eggers Perry ("but SBC is a long way from Seattle"), Sally Skinner Behnke, Betty Williams Gookin and Richard, Helen Gravatt Watt (our Reunion Chairman) and Marge Willetts Maiden, who writes, "Our 40th Reunion is going to be the best ever — record attendance, record giving, and record fun!" I suspect that she will have been proven right. Pat Whitaker Waters hopes that her fifth grandchild will have safely arrived so that she can make it to SBC. Her husband is retiring this year, and they hope for more travel. Alice Lancaster Buck and Pete expect to be on campus after a busy year with a new house, their same government jobs, and the anticipation of grandchildren numbers 7 and 8.

Millie Littleford Camm says that her son Scott is running her grandfather's farm on the other side of High Peak from SBC and that she will hope to get down there in May. Millie is still working as a medical technologist in the emergency room of a hospital in Kentucky. Libby Pierce Oliver reports that she has two precious grandchildren but is also kept busy by 14-year-old Jack L. Oliver, III. Kay Mensing Teitgen is working as an orthotic technician, primarily with children, in her husband's office and loves it. Her children are in San Francisco, Indianapolis, and Boston.

Gene Patton Odell writes that Lauren MacMannis Huyet '79 gave her her first granddaughter, Kate, in November 1983. Gene adds, "I find being a social worker with seniors very rewarding, since I know just how they feel!"

Nancy Scott Shashy, Montgomery, AL, says that she has spent the last 35 years rearing five boys and one girl and still has three students. This year she has ventured into business by opening an Oriental rug shop and a seasonal wrapping service.

Paulette Long Taggart is still busy with the Winchester Drama Workshop; of her daughters, one is married and has a 2-year-old, while two are working on Master's degrees, one in architecture, one in counseling. Barbara Furbush Ross calls herself a happy year-round Vermonter and is busy with the quilting group at church and the Dorset Players, and she will be secretary of the Village Public Library. Her husband is making a good recovery from a serious stroke, and her children live in Indiana and Colorado.

We still love our house in the woods. My mother has been an invalid for the past year and a half and is here with us with a companion. Daughter Dabney is at Bryn Mawr working on another master's degree (social work this time, which she loves), and son Read is still in Los Angeles, busy with music, poetry, and carpentry. Just this week we had a nice visit from Helen Gravatt Watt and Bill. Their son John was married recently, and daughter Phyllis expects to be married in June.

It has been fun hearing from so many of you. Keep the news coming to the next secretary, who will be elected at Reunion.

Secretary

Phyllis Thorpe Miller (Mrs. John E., Jr.), 2101 North Spruce, Little Rock, AR 72207

Fund Agents

Martha Mansfield Clement (Mrs.), Box G, Sweet Briar, VA 24595

Meon Bower Harrison (Mrs. Archibald), Rt. 1, Box 55, Orange, VA 22960

Jane Johnson Kent (Mrs. Warner W., Jr.), 90 Old Farm Rd., Pleasantville, NY 10570

Let me begin by saying that all of us owe our deepest gratitude to Martha Davis Barnes, our secretary emeritus. She has done a wonderful job for us. I'll bet she misses all your postcards though. They are certainly the highlight of this job.

Ann Orr Savage is a grandmother this year — for the first time. Ann writes that she loves working with the Philharmonic Series and one day a week at the Pierpont Morgan Library in NYC. She's taken a few coffee breaks though — such as New Year's in Vermont and Sanibel in March.

Vi Whitehead Morse stays involved with SBC. She helped decorate Sweet Briar House for the Christmas holidays and a tea that President Fry was giving for everyone at Sweet Briar. Vi's husband Walter is retired now, and their four daughters are out of the nest. One lives in Connecticut, two are in Charlottesville, and one is working for the government.

Closey Faulkner Dickey writes from New Hampshire. What with six children to keep up with plus garden club, the Hopkins Center, the United Way, and volunteering at a hospital, all her systems are still on go. She and Whit do get away, though — to the Bahamas, summer weekends on their own boat. Octet, two weeks cruising the coast of Maine, and a trip to Hawaii.

Jeanne Morrell Garlington is the new president of the Historic Savannah Foundation this year. She is also on the vestry of her church and teaching a four-year study program called E.F.M.

After a summer on Cape Cod, Jane Luke had a wonderful trip on the Royal Viking Star to China and other points east. Since Tommy Porter Mullen's two children are gone now, she has "one foot in the road." Last summer she and Ted took a trip to Wyoming with tents and sleeping bags and all that outdoor stuff. Then she went on a safari to Kenya in February with one of her daughters, and a trip to Hawaii in the spring. But Sally Davis Spencer has topped all of us with a cruising expedition to Antarctica the end of January.

Martha Davis Barnes is enjoying her seventh year as a career girl in real estate. In February, the whole family was taking a learn-to-sail vacation in St. Croix. Polly Rollins Sowell is into real estate also, in Austin, TX. She says that politics is "now a hobby." Polly was special assistant to Governor Clements until he was defeated in 1982.

Marguerite Rucker Ellett and Helen Pender Withers are sharing a new grandson, a second grandchild — and the babysitting, too. Marguerite stays involved in church work in her spare time. Helen writes that husband Burks has retired and they are building a new home on the Rappahanock River.

Caroline Haskell Simpson is busy with her volunteer work — library and social service boards. She is also heading an antique show for a restoration society. Caroline has four children; two are living in Chicago, and the other two in Washington and Pennsylvania. She writes that she and husband Bruce "garden, dig (as in archaeology), and travel for fun."

Caroline Rankin Mapother was inspired by our reunion in May and had a mini reunion with Teeta Saunders Davis, Peggy Sheffield Martin, and Connie Hancock Gelman in Chicago in October. To quote Caroline, "we dined, giggled, talked, walked, and visited the Vatican Collection at the Art Institute." And I know you sweet young things only drank "beer, ale, or light wine." Peggy wrote of a new grandson, Thomas Everett Martin, IV, born in Hong Kong on Jan. 3, 1984.

Ileana Garcia Carr is back in Mayaguez, Puerto Rico, after two years in Virginia and South Carolina while her husband specialized in internal medicine and psychiatry. She, herself, trained as a physician's assistant and helps him in his private practice on life extension, rejuvenation and weight reduction. They have a son who is a lawyer and a married daughter. Ileana lost a son three and a half years ago in an auto accident.

Julia Ann Blakely Butler lost her husband Bob a year ago to lung cancer. His death was the reason our class president missed Reunion. She received a rundown on that occasion in January from Nancy Vaughn Kelly, who, with Dan, rescued the snow-bound Julia from Washington National Airport. Nancy had spent most of December and part of January visiting children, step-children, and parents in N.Y.C.; Fairfield, CT; York, PA; Baltimore; and Washington before returning to the West Coast.

Vickie Brock Badrow saw Janie Miller Wright and husband Howard on a visit to California last June. It was "one of the highlights — a day spent on the Wrights' boat and dinner in their beautiful home right on the water." Ned retired in February from Whaly Children's Center, but Vicki continued teaching. In her spare time she is into "basket weaving and chinese cooking."

Ynes Jova Cline is a director with Mary Kay Cosmetics. She had lunch with Jenny Bell Bechtel Whyte and Ces Youmans Collins this fall and wrote, "We decided we hadn't changed a bit. We were as pretty, slim, and attractive as we had been in the 1940's." Okay girls, I'll buy that. Patty Traugott Rouse also connected with Jenny Bell and Ces. She went to one of Jenny Bell's "shows." Jenny Bell Bechtel Whyte is a very successful couture designer, using antique fabrics of museum quality for her clothes.

Maddin Lupton McCallie is fine now. She suffered a broken knee which meant "twenty days in hospital, many weeks in wheelchair and on a walker and then a cane." It also meant seven pins in the knee. Son Freddy is at UVa and undergoing chemotherapy every six weeks at Chapel Hill. Maddin saw Wayne Stokes Goodall and toured Wayne's antique filled farmhouse in Pittsboro during a Chapel Hill stay. Maddin has two other sons in medicine, and another son is a lawyer.

Liz Graves Perkinson writes that she has two children in school and a daughter who is a paralegal. Liz had a visit with Martha Sue Skinner Logan and her husband last September. Martha Sue's husband is starting a development in the North Carolina mountains.

Meon Bower Harrison says her year has been a "lulu." Her husband sold the radio station after twenty-two and half years and they are at last moving into the "Little House in the Woods." Now that all the crises are over, she's hoping to travel. Nan Steptoe McKinley has two daughters working for the government and a son in college. Husband Stan is Eastern Regional Commissioner of Immigration. She says she does a lot of "volunteer work and bargello," but she didn't say if the volunteering brought on the bargello or the bargello drove her to the volunteering.

Kax Berthier McKelway and John were excited about going to Maui, Hawaii, in February for son John, Jr.'s wedding. Her other son Hank is an archaeologist here in Arkansas. One daughter lives in Washington, DC, and another is a sophomore in SBC.

Martha Frye Nye and Bill have moved to a new home in Hickory, NC. Last summer they had a wonderful trip to Greece, Egypt, Israel and Rome. Rosemary Gugert Kennedy is the author of a book called Back to Rock. It is a music appreciation book designed for children in grades 3 and up, and it received rave reviews in the newspaper in New Orleans.

Evie Sharp Vidal is working for J.G. Durand International, a French crystal company, in New Jersey. Evie wrote that she was elected to the three-man Commercial Township Committee as of January and is also active in historical restoration projects, the AAUW and the Republican Party. Her daughter is at Sweet Briar, and her son at Mercer U. in Georgia. Jane Taylor Ix writes that she still can't figure out why she's so busy with fewer children at home. Jane has two of her six children at home. Judy Perkins Llewellyn is another member of the grandmother brigade.

On the home front...Nancy Moses Eubanks and I keep in very close touch. Lunch with each other at least once a week is a must — a vital necessity for both of us. Nancy has a married daughter living here, a married son who is a theology student in Dallas, and another son with Merrill Lynch. She and Bill also have three grandsons, so she stays busy. As for myself, I audit some courses at the Little Rock branch of our University — in English Lit, but natch — and work at the Legislature as a proof-reader when it is in session. Our three children have left the nest, and John and I are enjoying life in the "golden years" (?). DR is it life on the golden stairs? Oh well, whatever — John and I are enjoying it.

Secretary

Nancy Messick Ray (Mrs. Christopher J.), 16 Carriage Way, Berwyn, PA 19312

Fund Agent

Margaret Moore Ripley (Mrs.), 18 Old Mendham Rd., Morristown, NJ 07960

There must be many grandmothers in our class by now but certainly none can surpass the enthusiasm of Jo Bierhaus Barrow over daughter Elizabeth's son Nils Edward Carson, born April 15, 1983. In addition to being such a doting grandmother, Jo is a psychiatric social work supervisor in Indianapolis. Donna Reese Godwin writes that she has six children and two grandchildren, and she is currently secretary of her church council, a volunteer supervisor for "Stewpot" and a hospital volunteer. Another class grandmother is Sallie Anderson Broyles, who only stops bragging about Lauren Watson Maxwell long enough to do volunteer work for the Atlanta Botanical Garden and travel with husband Norris. She reports a three week trip to Greece, the Islands, Venice, and Switzerland. When last heard from, she and Norris were planning a skiing trip to Vail in February.

In her note Sallie also mentioned a visit by Sally Fishburn Fulton who "looks marvelous." Mary Bailey Izard mentions seeing Nell Orand Lynch briefly in Dallas and reports that she "looks wonderful." Jane Mattas Christian saw Sue Judd Silcox and writes, "She looks great — I'd have known her anywhere." When I was in Atlanta in August, Benita Phinzy Johnson had Sallie, Mary, and me over for lunch and a swim in her beautiful new pool. We all looked terrific.

From the "Fund flaps" we learn that Nancy Morrow Lovell has been working the past four years in the marketing department of Olympic Stain Corporate Headquarters as a staff coordinator. Barbara Baker Bird is supervisor of social services for Welcome House and branches in five states. This is the special needs adoption agency Pearl Buck founded. Barbara will be traveling several times a year to Asia.

Nancy Laemmel Hartmann spent last July touring with her family in England, Scotland, and Wales. Daughter Katrina was a freshman this year at Auburn, where she hopes to major in engineering. Son David is a junior in high school. Nancy herself was expecting an M.A. in Christian Education from Scarritt College in Nashville, TN, this May.

Jan Caldwell Marchant promises to return for our 50th Reunion. In the meantime, she is busy with (what else?) horse show work. She is a technical delegate, steward and dressage judge for American and Hawaii Horse Show Associations. Also, this year she is president of the Hawaiian Humane Society. From Greensboro, NC, comes word that Mattie Pannill Mebane has been elected to serve her second term as President of the Children's Home Society of North Carolina.

Both Bette Harcourt Drake and her husband are looking forward to retirement in 1985. They have one grandson, age 8. Dilder daughter, Deborah, is a computer programmer consultant; younger daughter, Karen, is teaching phys ed in East Windsor, CT, H.S. and working on her master's at Central Ct. State U.

Katharine Shaw Minton's husband David retired last year. They will be grandparents by the time this is in print, thanks to son Bob. Daughter Leslie '80 is a discount broker at Citibank in N.Y.C. Kate went to India and Nepal in October and November. Donna Robinson Cart and husband Walter also took a trip to the Orient last fall. Then in March they took their four children and spouses sailing for a week on their sailboat in the Virgin Islands.

Mary Gesler Hanson, who has been an owner of Paramount Travel for five years, is selling out to her partners in June, as soon as Juliette finishes high school, in order to join her husband in Minneapolis. He has been made associate director of the Hubert Humphrey Institute of Public Affairs at the U. of Minnesota. Juliette will attend St. Olaf's Col. near Minneapolis; her aim is to be a veterinarian. Their older son, Brooks, has a fellowship at UCLA in geology and expects his doctorate in two years. The middle child, Mark, is at Emory Medical School, where he has been awarded a fellowship to get his M.D.-Ph.D.

Patricia Layne Winks has a new address, but she is still in San Francisco. She was pleased with SBC's new President and Dean, whom she met when they visited the West Coast in January.

In a long telephone chat Mary John Ford Gilchrist topped my boast of having a daughter at SBC by telling me that she has a son there. Vic works in Lynchburg and lives in Glass Dorm with his wife Kathy, who is the SB Outdoor Program Coordinator. Mary John's daughter Mary Gray is a nurse at NIH. She mentioned seeing Amie Willard Block and Polly Plumb Debutts. I hope to see more of our Washington area classmates in the future as we are moving back to Northern Virginia.

In September '83 Anne Garst Strickland and Tom moved to Lahore, Pakistan, where Tom is director of the International Center for Medical Research and Training. In May-June of '84, their three sons are due to graduate: George from Davidson College; Paul from Einstein High school in Montgomery Co., MD; and Kelly from Woodberry Forest Preparatory School.

Byrd Stone, P.D. Box 89, Sweet Briar, VA 24595

Fund Agent

Alice Guggenheimer Mackay (Mrs. Roger D.), 159 Mill St., Westwood, MA 02090

Hi there, you funny olde 49-year-olds who either don't DO anything or, if you do, don't want your classmates to know about it. Just remember, one of you is going to be 1956's secretary in just two more years, and I'm not going to write you, even if I get married. On second thought, if I get married, I'll write each one of you...in calligraphy, yet! Do you know what it's like to let the deadline pass...and pass...and pass, and how difficult it is to avoid Carolyn Bates, Class Notes Editor, when both of us work right on campus? Let me tell you, it is not Funsville. Just because I forgot to send out postcards to remind you is NO excuse. For those of you who did communicate, I give you a hearty "thanks," and you'll get two invitations when I get married.

Betsy Meade Hastings wrote a nice long letter, but ruined it by noting that she never did get a postcard in January asking for news. She figures that her mail was messed up since they had recently returned from Egypt. I'll just let her go on thinking that. The "Camel Express" is so bad! Betsy and Don and their boys (Don III, age 12, and Chris, age 10) lived in Alexandria, Egypt, for two years while Don was establishing and running a 2,000 acre vegetable farm in the desert. That sounded like an exercise in futility, but it seems he was reclaiming desert land by drip-irrigating with water which came from the Nile via the Nasser Canal. Betsy notes that they plowed their first ground in September and a record breaking (for a developing country) six months later, exported their first tomatoes and melons. They also raised (among other things) broccoli, which was sold at Harrod's in London for "a pound a pound." The whole project is a joint venture between Americans and Egyptians, with the equipment and expertise coming from the Americans and the land from the Egyptians. Although back in the U.S., Don is still supervising the project and taking many trips between the two countries. The Hastings got in lots of travel while living in Egypt, including a safari to Kenya and a pilgrimage to the Holy Land. Betsy recommends that all of us "hock the house and go to the Holy Land with your priest." I think I'll just let that one alone.

Meredith Smythe Grider has been doing the college circuit with her youngest daughter. She says she's been everywhere but Virginia, but just can't seem to interest her gal in SBC. I wonder if she's thought of cutting off the inheritance, or bribery or something similar. Daughter Gaines is a junior at Tulane and is spending her spring '84 semester in Washington, DC, in an honors program at American University. Lisa is in her second year at Pine Manor and is looking for an art school for next year. Alice Guggenheimer Mackay writes that they have an AFS exchange student for the year. The girl is from outside Zurich, Switzerland, and she and the Mackay's daughter Sue are both seniors in high school. I won't even mention that Alice's daughter is looking at a nearby college, the name of which begins with an "R."

Kay Smith Schauer has focused her abundant energy on the anti-nuclear peace movement. She is the coordinator of their local chapter of WAND — Women's Action for Nuclear Disarmament, and the treasurer of the Palo Alto Peace Center, a coalition of about 25 peace groups. With Kay at the helm, it certainly makes one happy that she is on our side. She is also the local coordinator of the "Ribbon Project," a nationwide effort to create a 2000 yard long ribbon to encircle the Pentagon in August of 1985. I bet her hall closet looks worse than mine. Bob and Kay's son Steve is in his senior year at Willamette U. majoring in econ and math. Younger son Mike is a freshman at UC San Diego and hopes to become an engineer. Nancy Howe Entenmann was here in the fall as a member of the Alumnae Board, and we managed to chat between her multitude of meetings. The Entenmanns have a new son-in-law as of November. He graduates this June from Toledo's Medical College and he and Becky will be in Portsmouth, VA. Son Dirk will graduate from Boston College Law School this year. Nancy and Dick celebrated their 25th wedding anniversary...at some point. I've misplaced the paper that had that bit of news on it and I'm afraid to guess in case I make the above children illegitimate! Also at SBC in the fall when Nancy was here was Miltzie Djerf DeRidder, who was taking part in an Alumnae Panel. Miltzie is supervisor of Education at Woodbridge State School for the Severely/Profoundly Mentally Retarded in New Jersey. She is the author of a book on New Career Opportunities in the Human Services, put out by Arco Publications, a division of Prentice-Hall. I underlined the above because I think it's a title and I'm scared of Miss Ramage.

Janet Monroe Schumann writes that she is working for the Washington Healthcare Management Corporation as associate director of development, responsible for development at Washington Hospital Center, a 922-bed acute care hospital in D.C. Her son Peter started at the U. of Md. in January, and daughter Polly graduated from Syracuse U. last May with a degree in Fine Arts. Polly is living with Janet in Silver Spring, MD, and is job hunting. Kay Newman Yonge has returned to Texas after being in California for 10 years teaching English at USC. She has three boys, the oldest working in California, the middle one working for an engineering firm in Austin after graduating from W and L, and the youngest completing his first year at the U. of Texas. They do have names, but I couldn't quite make out all of Kay's writing and I thought I'd better leave well enough alone. Jane Black Clark and David married off two of their daughters (Alden and Janie '79) within a year, and when I saw them last fall were expecting grandchildren from each — one in January '84 and one in March. Both girls (or women, as we say at SBC), live in Arlington, VA. Ashby, the Clark's youngest is at SBC and is rooming with Frances Shannonhouse Clardy's daughter Frances. David and Jane saw Jeanne Applequist Bascom in Aspen a year ago. They hadn't seen each other in 30 years. How can that be true? We're not old enough not to have seen someone for 30 years! Jane and David celebrated their 30th wedding anniversary this past year. That sounds worse than not seeing someone for 30 years. When I talked briefly with David at Parent's Council last fall, I decided that he was without a doubt the most attractive man I've ever known, excluding possibly Paul Newman, whom I don't know but would like to. I really miss seeing Joan Broman Wright and Jim each fall and spring. Their daughter Elise graduated in the Class of '83, and since son Jimmy just wouldn't transfer to SBC from Davidson, the Wrights just don't have an excuse to come back here often. I thought all the chores I collected for Jim to do each visit were reason enough, but I just can't seem to interest them. Elise is happily working in Miami and Jimmy will be co-captain of Davidson's soccer team next year.

Since you all refuse to answer the postcards that I don't send, I pray a lot, and lo and behold — a phone call from Ann Greer Adams. Her daughter Monnie was coming through with one of these crash tours of colleges...eat a meal, see the whole campus and have the admissions counselors snow you, all in two hours or less. I managed to catch Monnie on the run, and it was so much fun to see yet another '56 daughter. Monnie is so attractive and I certainly hope she liked us. I'd love to think that I would see Ann as an SBC parent over the next four years. The next news was a little more difficult to get, but one has to be resourceful in this position of secretary, especially when one forgets the postcards. I heard from a gal in my bridge club that Louisa Hunt Coker was going to be at Wintergreen, a ski resort in the next county. Inspired by my threat that I would trump all her aces for the rest of my life, my friend made Louisa "communicate" as they sat enjoying a roaring fire and the libation that goes with it when one goes skiing. Louisa "jotted" that her boys have grown up and left the nest, flown the coop or whatever. Bill is with the South Carolina National Bank in Spartanburg, and John graduated from Va. Tech and will be working in sales in the lumber division of something I can't read. It must be Louisa's libation; it certainly couldn't be my eyes! Jim is in his first year at UVa and loves it. Louisa notes that he has been on a couple of "rolls" to SBC. I'm sure she's not referring to hamburger buns. She also noted that she saw Ginny Echols Orgain in Charlottesville last fall and Helen Turner Murphy at a Garden Club meeting in Norfolk. Louisa ends with, "No one comes through Franklin — do wish they would." One might wonder why I became hysterical when I read this. Only last week my niece and I were blindly following my sister and brother-in-law on the way back from Virginia Beach, and somehow (we'll never know how) we ended up in Franklin, in what I'm sure is one of its "loveliest" sections. I told Whitney that I was sure Louisa's house was the one with the purple and red and blue plastic flowers all across the front. I guess she couldn't wait for spring. Sweet Briar bulbs would have been so much more attractive! Unfortunately we didn't stop (my brother-in-law was most embarrassed as he prides himself on his sense of direction), but we will never forget Franklin!

I can't believe that my niece will be a senior this fall. She has really enjoyed SBC and it has been great having her here. She is a math-econ major, a QV, on the judicial board, Briar Patch editor, on the SB News staff and an Ass (as of Ain'ts and). As I write this, she has just survived the Junior Banquet and gotten her ring. We were reading through 56's "Class Prophecy" this past weekend in preparation for her banquet, and it was great reading. Try it! I spent the better part of last summer (and will do more of the same this summer) learning to use a microcomputer and thinking up ways to integrate it into the education curriculum. Thanks to a PEW grant, I got paid to do this (money is a great motivator), and I enjoyed it more than I can say. I am fascinated by the computer and the opportunities it offers and can hardly wait to spend another summer concentrating on its potential in the classroom. We have an Apple in the Kindergarten, and the children are constantly using it. They show the college students how it works, and I will have to admit that on occasion I have had to ask a five year old how to get into a particular learning game! Nancy Howe Entenmann says to start thinking now about reunion, and please, remember the Alumnae Fund. (Check "Faculty Salaries" if you can't think of anything else!)

Nina Wilkerson Bugg (Mrs. William A.), 471 W. Wesley Rd., N.W., Atlanta, GA 30305

I'm beginning these notes on a dreary, almost snowy day in January. Therefore, I feel it would be most comforting to start our column with messages from our classmates who are writing from warmer climates.

Sue Speed Ford Hall has been heard from after many years. Following graduation from UNC, Sue Speed went to Hawaii for a short summer trip and is still a resident of Hawaii! She was married in Saipan, honeymooned in Micronesia, and she and Jim are now living in Honolulu with their young daughter Sabrina.

In Madera, CA, Shirley Hayman Sudduth has just resigned as administrative assistant of the Madera Chamber of Commerce and is now the executive director of the Madera County Cancer Society. Shirley's two oldest children are married and her youngest son is in college in California

Dinny Muldaur Dozier, Pacific Palisades, CA, has been elected president of the Academy of TV Arts and Sciences, an organization best known for handing out the Emmy Awards, but which also sponsors seminars, speeches, a magazine, internships, and archives.

Starr Bullis Phillips, in Newport

Beach, CA, is ever busy with her popular book, I Never Pay Retail, which is now in its third edition. Starr's oldest child, Meg, is a junior at Georgetown U. majoring in Japanese. Rick graduates from high school in June, and "baby" Kell will begin high school in September.

Also writing from the West Coast is Natalie Yates Todd who lives in Spokane, WA. Natalie is finishing her accounting degree and has just retired from the Juvenile Court Advisory Committee after serving six years. She and her husband raise cattle. Both children will be graduating from college soon. Natalie is a young granmere and adores it!

Lee Cullum continues as editor of D Magazine, the city magazine of Dallas, TX. What a fascinating job this must be! Lee's son is a junior at St. Marks in Dallas. Lee traveled last summer to Israel and Egypt.

Maydelle Foster Fason and Sam had a three-week visit to Italy. Maydelle is time-sharing the Women's Employment Advocate position at the Austin, TX, Women's Center.

Marilyn Jackson Parins received the Ph.D. in English from the U. of Mich. in 1982 and spent a sabbatical year in England in 1982-83.

Liz Few Penfield is chairman of the English Dept. at the U. of New Orleans. Her summers are spent in Carbondale, CO, near Aspen.

Norma Patteson Mills and Olan have had little time to spend in Chattanooga this year. They have been traveling on some of the most fascinating of all the SBC trips. They have cruised the Red Sea and toured Egypt and Jordan. Then, with their three boys, they went on a safari through Kenya.

Alice Jones Torbett writes from Knoxville that her son is studying at NYU and has won many awards as a young playwright. Alice visited her long ago roommate, Kadri Niider, in NYC. Alice is a contributing editor for one of the Knoxville magazines.

Home to Rhett Ball Thagard is Montgomery, AL. She and Tommy were in Lexington, VA, for parents' weekend at W&L, where young Tom is a freshman. Rhett then flew on to Princeton, NJ, where her daughter is a junior. Rhett was able to see Ellie Crosby Erdman while in New Jersey. Ellie has a small decorating shop in Princeton.

Heidi Wood Huddlestone hopes to see some SBC girls at this year's Princeton reunion which she and Joe are planning on attending. Heidi and Joe moved this year, but her card is still postmarked "Bowling Green, KY." Heidi has recently formed an association, "Nurse Development," which provides continuing education for nurses. Ann Weingart Teig and her family visited with Heidi while they were in the USA last summer.

"B" Shwab Stephen has issued an invitation for anyone passing through St. Louis, MO, to stop long enough to play paddle tennis with her! Betsy Belisle Moreland reports that her husband Jack has his own brokerage firm in Kansas City, KS. Betsy's daughter is at TCU in Ft. Worth, and son Mark is a high school junior.

Jane Tatman Walker is ever busy with many facets of the Indianapolis Children's Museum, where she has been involved for many years.

What fun to hear from Winkie Wim-bish Chalfont after such a long time! The Chalfonts spent part of last summer renovating an ancient family cottage in Maine. Winkie has been a graduate assistant at Ohio State and has just received her M.B.A.

I think we'll skip down to Florida and then work our way up the East Coast. Dorothy Carlson Westby is flying charters to the Bahamas and is also doing corporate flying for a Ft. Lauderdale firm. Dotty raffed the Colorado River and scuba dived in the Bahamas last year. It's obvious that Dotty feels Florida life is great.

I received a news-filled letter from Nina Wilkerson Bugg. Yes, it does seem that at one time or another everybody must go through Atlanta. While at Davidson's orientation with one of her sons, Nina ran into Ann Smith Bretscher, whose daughter is also enrolled there. Nina is teaching a Bible Class and Ann is working toward her doctorate in Education at the U. of Ga. Barbara Bowen Moore is taking classes at Ga. State and planned a December visit to Egypt with her husband.

Linda Sims Grady is teaching at the Westminster School in Atlanta, as is Ann Crowell Lemmon. Linda's daughter graduated from Furman and her son is at the U. of Ga. A long distance congratulations to Linda and Robert who will celebrate their 25th Anniversary in June. The late Tila Farrell Grady's son Henry will graduate in June from Georgia.

Nancy Corson Gibbes agrees that the "empty nest syndrome" has hit Columbia, SC. Her youngest was off to Davidson this year, and Ellen, 20, will be at the London School of Economics for her junior year.

Mollie McDonald Brasfield is running her own advertising agency in Charlotte, NC. In her own words, the work is "very creative and never dull." Mollie's three children are away at school, and the boys did Outward Bound last summer.

Becky Towill McNair, Charlotte, NC, felt that her return to SBC for last fall's Parents' Weekend whetted her appetite for our reunion. I agree with Becky's observation that the campus grows more beautiful with each visit. One easily forgets that such a rare loveliness exists in our busy world. Becky, Tucky McFall Ziebold, Joyce Cooper Toomey, Susan Hendricks Clayman, and I were in attendance for Parents' Weekend '83. Becky's daughter is a member of the class of '86.

Charlyne Grimes Coleman is working for her husband as a paralegal.

Jim's offices are in Hendersonville, NC.

Judy Cowen Jones' note from Waynesboro, VA, is a great profile for the Class of 1960. "Kids' college and high school activities plus our normally hectic lifestyle coupled with my new business have left me rather busy to say the least." Judy's business, Blue Ridge Tennis Enterprises, organizes and coordinates various tennis groups and activities. Debbie is a senior at SBC, Allison is at UVa, and Greg is in high school in Charlottesville.

Elizabeth Meade Howard is teaching at UVa and writing articles for McCall's and other magazines. I had to laugh as Elizabeth described her children (14 and 17) as "sit-com" teenagers.

Jane Ellis Covington's daughter Elizabeth is a junior at Princeton, Janie is at UVa, and Jimmy is at St. Christopher's in Richmond, VA. Patti Powell Pusey is the manager of the Disability & Life Department for King Insurance in Richmond. Anne Galling Honey now has two daughters at Duke. Anne continues to travel often. She spends most of the summer at Virginia Beach and is in Boca Grande, FL, for some of the winter months.

Mary Laird Silvia writes enthusiastically of her holistic medical practice in northern Virginia. She is also busily pursuing her Ph.D. Carolyn Gough Harding is teaching English in Alexandria, VA. Her son Nicholas is interested in high school drama, and 6th grader James spends his time with sports.

Robin Ould Sabin is quite active with the Northern Virginia Pony Club and still loves to fox hunt. Daughter Brooke is at Madeira, and the most fascinating news of all — the Sabins spent three weeks in Kenya and viewed the zebra and wildebeast migration from a hot air balloon!

Barbara Beam Denison is taking art history at Montgomery College near her home just outside of D.C. Beam reports that her framing business is doing quite well. The Denisons had a wonderful trip to France to meet Tracy who was in Paris with the U. of Del. program. Heather is at Denison in Ohio, and Dolly Denison is a junior in high school. Barbara Murphy Hale's SBC daughter, Lenetta Archard, is at St. Andrews this year. (The Hales were planning to visit her at Easter.) Son Lee is at Sewanee, John is traveling in South America, and Charlton is a high school senior in Annapolis, MD.

Valerie Hnot Wolte joined the Avon Company many years ago and has risen steadily through various management positions. The culmination of her career came when she was appointed general manager of Avon's Rye, NY, facility. In addition to her business accomplishments, Val is a pilot. She and Ron live in Saddle River, NJ.

Nancy Beekman Carringer enjoyed a summer trip to California and continues her job as a counselor at South Brunswick H.S. in New Jersey. The Carringer's big news was the September wedding of their oldest son. Another son, Doug, is waiting to hit the big time with his rock band, and Tracy is a junior at the U. of Del.

Janet Holmes Rothard has obviously found her niche in the real estate world. She made her company's Million Dollar Club after just four years in the field. Janet's son Tom graduates from the U. of Richmond and is now working for Westinghouse. Her younger son is a sophomore at Pennsylvania's Mansfield State.

Ginger Newman Blanchard reports that all is well in Madison, NJ. Ginger has two children in college and another soon to be graduated from high school. Ginger loves her job as a Doncaster representative. Ginger and Bob have been to Finland and Russia and were getting ready for a Christmas visit to California and Lake Tahoe.

Lura Coleman Wampler began her note with a common lament. "One thing they didn't teach us at SBC was how to slow down the passage of time." Lura breeds horses at the Wampler farm in Wayne, PA, and is the Horticulture Chairman for Zone V of the Garden Club of America.

Charity Paul is working toward her M.S.W. at NYU. Charity will soon stop her high school teaching to devote more time to her graduate degree which will help her toward qualifying as a Jungian analyst. Katie Groat Van Someren '61 who has moved back to the States and is living in Concord, MA, was to visit Charity over the holidays.

Lucy Martin Gianino penned a quickie while flying back to N.Y.C. from Miami where she is filming a movie, Next of Kin. I've decided that in my next life I want to come back as Lucy! Lucy's husband is stage managing Tap Dance Kid, which, as you may know, opened to rave reviews. Lucy continues to be very active in the parent support group at her children's school.

Gail Hayman Wilson writes that two young children and Clairor are keeping her young in Binghamton, NY. Volunteer work has Gail involved with politics, church and the symphony. While vacationing on Kiawah Island, John and Gail had a "marvelous" visit with Horry and Dottie Barnwell Kerrison.

Kathryn Mendelson McDonald is still in Hong Kong and feeling very much in the center of an historic decision about its future — to be determined this year by China and Great Britain. Daughter Courtney is a sophomore at Phillips Exeter Academy, and Eavan, the youngest, goes off to boarding school in September. Kathryn is busy with Ikebana activities and a Chinese art history course.

From Toronto, Canada, Patricia Russell Binnie has written that she "...spent what may very well be five of the finest days of my life at the Celebration of Sweet Briar Week." Patricia saw Gwen Speel Kaplan and Betty Forsyth Harris while on campus for the inauguration of President Fry.

Life is busy but fun for us in Richmond, VA. Chris will have graduated from SBC when you read this. Kerry is a freshman at Mary Baldwin and Robbie will enter kindergarten in September. As always, thank you, thank you, for all the wonderful notes. I wish we could print every single word you wrote, but space will just not permit it. I have loved reading all the news and am so sorry that I can't share every little tidbit with you. You will just have to come to reunion to gather more information — hope to see you in '85!

Not one word — nary a murmur — about the long-anticipated horrors of 1984! Can it be that we are by nature a sanguine group? Or have we all been too preoccupied with those pre-reunion diet and exercise programs — a major theme of this year's post cards — to imagine any greater terror? Perhaps, like Sharon Van Cleve, we have our own reasons for thinking that Orwell was wrong. Feb. 4 of this dreaded year was the date set for Sharon's wedding. Sharon was to receive her master's degree in public policy and administration from Loyola Marymount U., Los Angeles, in May.

The year 1984 has already proved a great one for Kitty Griffith, who returned home to Atlanta on Feb. 1 as vice-president of corporate communications for First Atlanta Bank. Another Atlanta banker is Nina Sledge Burke's husband Frank, the new president of Bank South. Nina is the newly-elected Georgia director for the Robert E. Lee Memorial Assn., which owns and maintains Stratford Hall Plantation, Lee's birthplace in Westmoreland County, VA. Eleanor, 16, is a sophomore at Chatham Hall, and Richard, 13, plays football and tennis. The Burkes vacationed in Hawaii in October, and Nina spent a week in New York at the one hundredth anniversary of the Madison Square Garden Horse Show.

Notorious 1984 is just another election year for Anne Stanley, who is having a wonderful but chilly time being Midwest campaign director for the Reagan-Bush re-election drive. For Mary FitzHugh Miller, our class's chief financial wizard, the new year brought membership on the board of the Washington-based Calvert Group of Funds (money market and equity mutual funds). Mary and Sam, general counsel of Paine, Webber, still live in New York, where Mary is now director of corporate planning for Home Box Office. Anne and Mary were just two of the people whose news rescued them from my long-time-no-hear file. Doubtless they were galvanized into action by the mere thought of reunion — or perhaps by my promise to distribute scurrilous stories about all those folks I hadn't heard from.

Another such is Ann Harwood Scully, who, despite "vicious rumors to the contrary," is "alive and well and living in Falls Church, VA." Ann's husband Tucker is still with the State Dept. doing international negotiations on whales and Antarctica, where he's been three times. For the past three years Ann has managed a condominium sales office. She is now serving a stint as PTA president, as well as watching Elinor, 16, in innumerable tennis matches and Malcolm, 12, in soccer and basketball games. In Atlanta, Gail Sims Furniss hadn't written in so long that it took a letter to contain all her news. Both Gail and her husband Pete, president of a commercial and industrial refrigeration and air-conditioning equipment firm, have an avid interest in growing orchids (their greenhouse boasts about 500) and raising Golden Retrievers; Moses, their 18-month-old Golden male, recently won four first places. The Furnisses' son Michael, 18, is a freshman at U.Va.; daughter Melissa, 16, enjoyed a two-week study trip to London and Paris last year. Gail and Pete recently took part in the Chet Atkins Country Gentlemen Golf Tournament, where they met some of the greats of country music; they flew to New Orleans for a black-tie fund raiser at Antoine's, then back home the same night, their attire causing something of a stir in the Atlanta airport; last June the whole family had a marvelous trip to Hawaii. Gail also volunteers as a tutor with the PAL program at the Atlanta Speech School.

Another Gail, Gail Rothrock Trozzo, who continues preservation planning work for Prince George's County, won the 1983 Chapter Service Award of the National Capital Area Chapter of the American Planning Association for volunteer work as chairman of the Historic Preservation Committee of the chapter.

Four years ago Margie Fleigh returned to her hometown of Hagerstown, MD, after 10 years in California. Margie's activities include weaving, watercolors, painting, substitute teaching, coed volleyball, and jazz. Jeannie Walker Campbell, husband John, and daughters Laura, 7, and Sarah, 3, live in Ridgewood, NJ, where Jeannie has had numerous commissions to paint children's portraits; she also paints and exhibits "more modern things." Last year Jeannie was in the Lever House Show in NYC. She has also helped raise funds for the local YMCA-YWCA expansion program. Another artist is Laurie de Buys Pannell, who, though still painting, has added lithographs and etching to her bag of tricks. Some of Laurie's work was exhibited at SB during last fall's inaugural festivities. Laurie and Cliff have just built a new home in Athens, GA.

Johanna Nicol Shields, an associate professor of history at the U. of Alabama in Huntsville, sends the exciting news that her book-length manuscript on the political character of American maverick congressmen (1836-1860) won the 1982 Ralph Gabriel Prize of $1000 awarded by the American Studies Assn. and Greenwood Press. Since the book now has only a working title, Johanna can't tell us what to look for; but I trust she'll keep us informed. Johanna's husband Nicholas, a research scientist with Essex Corporation, does human factors research, primarily with the space program. Elder daughter Anna, 17, is a scholarship student at Washington U. in St. Louis; Katherine, 14, is at Randolph School. Also in Huntsville, Caroline Tate Noojin writes proudly of a fine husband and two teenaged sons, Frank, III, 16, and Tate, 13, "both of whom tower over their mother." Caroline is active with Junior League (she has been president and served on the area council); she also does English flower arrangements, works as a caterer and teacher, and is a representative for C.R. Jolly Designer Couture.

Josephine England Redd and Uhlend live in Florence, AL, with sons Edmund, 16, Mitchell, 15, and Uhlend, IV, 13. Josephine engages in flower arranging and interior decorating and participates in numerous civic and church activities. Now that her baby is in school, Nan Brooke Williams, in Anniston, AL, has returned to the classroom to teach French conversation to grades one-six and grammar and translation to grade seven in the private school where two of her four children are enrolled. Nan also plays the organ and directs three choirs in the neighborhood Presbyterian church.

Even the thought of 1984 cannot mar the good humor of Alice Fales Stewart, who writes from Cambridge, MA, of her healthy, happy family and her challenging job as a teacher of history in Chestnut Hill, MA. Nothing new, says Alice, except more white hairs, "an important signal to children and students of the respect due to one of the middle years." In case you wondered, Alice loves it. Another busy mother and teacher is Susan Jahn Mancini in Columbus, OH. Susan's son Nicholas, an eighth grader at Columbus Academy, is interested in electric guitar, computers, and creative writing. Fifth grader MaraBell is her school's student council president. For the past four years Susan has taught Italian and French at De Sales H.S.

Last summer she and a colleague took a group of students, including Susan's children, to Italy. When the official tour ended, Susan's husband, vice-chairman of the Dept. of Romance Languages at Ohio State, joined the family for an extended vacation. After Christmas Susan accompanied her husband to New York for MLA.

Genie Johnson Sigler is still teaching math — algebra, trig, calculus, and computers — at the Catholic girls' school in Little Rock where daughter Beth is a freshman. Rosamond Sample Brown has abandoned teaching in El Dorado, AR, for the other side of the desk: she is now attending the American Graduate School of International Management in Glendale, AZ. This summer she is going on a program to study European business in Germany, France, and Belgium, while her sons (15 and 13), who are normally with her in Phoenix, spend the summer in Arkansas with relatives. Gail Anderson Barnett has taught high school math in Danville, VA, for six years, although she is now working toward a master's degree in reading. On the basis of graduate school admission tests, Gail was invited to join Mensa, the international organization whose members have exceptionally high IQ's. Gail's son John, 9, is an enthusiastic student in the local public school's program for gifted children and an ardent Redskins fan who traveled to Pasadena and Tampa for the last two Super Bowls. Gail plays tennis, jogs, loves classical and rock music, follows the stock market, and reads voraciously. She also plays and teaches duplicate bridge; her most exciting win was a third place out of 200 pairs in a mid-Atlantic regional tournament, a feat which earned her 17 gold points toward being a "life master." This year Gail and John moved into a new house, built by her father in the Williamsburg style.

Tuck Mattern Harvey has become a full-time member of the math faculty at Midwestern State U. in Wichita Falls, TX, where she's been a part-timer for a number of years. In return for her new status, Tuck has agreed to begin work toward the Ph.D. Now that she has passed a test for the instrument rating on her pilot's license, Tuck whips around the wild blue yonder quite frequently. We're planning for her to whip down and see me on my next visit to Texas. Tappy Lynn, an assistant professor of art history at Columbia, is finding it interesting to do "the junior grade would-be academic bit" at such an advanced age. At home in Connecticut, Tappy enjoys life on the Branford shore and attends to her huskie, who works hard at being "a good child stand-in." An old hand at the academic life, Carrie Peyton Walker has completed her twelfth year at Stanford, where she directs the Stanford Learning Assistance Center. Susan Wienefeld Dillon, Bert, and son Geoffrey are enjoying Bert's sabbatical year at Oxford. The Dillons spent last summer in Cortona, Italy.

Helen Dunn was not surprised by the arrival of 1984. At Americana magazine she is always living in the future, hard at work on the next season. Last summer Helen escaped the fast-paced Manhattan publishing world when she and Elizabeth Matheson visited the coast of Normandy and felt that they had stepped into an impressionist painting. On their way home, they stopped in Edam to see Sarah Stroher Menick and her children. Also in Manhattan, Fran Hanahan (?) is still selling co-ops, condos, and townhouses for Sotheby's Real Estate and, I strongly suspect, now refusing to sign her post cards on principle. Fran has been joined by a new mystery writer: someone — I haven't a clue who — is taking courses toward a degree in emergency health services at the U. of Md. and working in the emergency departments of St. Mary's Hospital in Leonardtown and Physicians' Memorial Hospital in La Plata. She and her daughter Elizabeth, 13, take riding lessons together. Prizes at reunion for the first correct identification.

For Ginny de Buys, a new year seems to bring either a new home or a new job. This year it's a job. Ginny is happily settled in Princeton, where she is launching her own business, Computer Ease. Ginny will be writing software manuals and business reports, providing services to small businesses, and installing computer systems in offices. Ginny also plans a vacation on the West Coast sometime in '84. The change in Lynda Dverly Levengood's life arrived on Aug. 20, 1983, in the person of Richard Laurence Levengood. And speaking of changes, Lynda says the kind you do with diapers was one they'd nearly forgotten. The Levengoods live in Lancaster, PA. Sheila Carroll Cooperider has a new job as chairman of Region VI of the Alumnae Assn., a job which carries with it membership on the Alumnae Executive Board. Congratulations to Sheila, and thanks for all her hard work! Back home in O'Fallon, IL, Sheila is busy with church vestry and the search for a new rector. Daughter Kathryn is a thriving high school freshman, and Lea Ann, a suddenly grown-up seventh grader.

Marsh Metcalf Seymour loves husband Jack's new diplomatic post in Brussels. Jack is political counselor at the U.S. Mission to the European Communities, and Marsh is teaching junior high art in an Anglo-American school in Waterloo. She has begun to make contacts with some local museums and to find time for her own art work. Randle, 13, attends the multi-lingual EEC School, and Peter, 16, is a junior at Kent School in Connecticut. One new face on the transatlantic scene belongs to V.M. Del Greco Galgano. Though she has not quite joined the jet set, V.M. has certainly broken into the ranks of international hostesses. During their wonderful 1982 summer in England, V.M., Michael, and their three children invited everyone they met to visit them in Huntington, WV. During the summer of '83, they all did. When the fall arrived and Michael returned to his job as chairman of the history dept. at Marshall U. and V.M. resumed being math coordinator at Marshall U. Comm. Col., life seemed tame indeed. But now there's the summer of '84 to look forward to. So look out, Jackie O! Here comes V.M.!

Surely the most inveterate travelers among us are Pemmie Mercur Cleveland and John, the owners, appropriately enough, of a travel agency in Bethlehem, PA. Last year Pemmie, John, Kaycee, a first grader at Moravian Academy, and Carrie, a nursery schooler, went to Nassau in January and made several trips to Vermont to visit John's parents. In May Pemmie and John cruised from Greece to Italy, France, and Yugoslavia. This year they were planning a February trip to Half Moon Bay in Jamaica and an Easter trip to Italy. At home in Bethlehem, Pemmie is active with Junior League, Children's Theater Board, and the Heart Assn. Dottie Norris Schipper's flourishing Greenville, SC, photography business involved her in extensive travel in '83: two weeks in London and Paris, two trips to California, one to Washington state, and a fascinating jaunt around her own state — "hunkering down in Deliverance territory, sipping tea in Charleston parlors, stealing a boat in McClellanville" — as she collaborated with Clyde Smith on a book on South Carolina. In spite of her exciting job, Dottie reports the family is still intact.

Lynne Smith Crow, in Short Hills, NJ, laments the difficulties of juggling a full-time job as an agent for Guardian Life Insurance Co. with the demands of David, 13, Sandy, 12, and Margaret, 10. Lynne appears to be succeeding; last year she made the Leader's Club, which took her to San Diego and San Francisco, where she visited with Carrie Peyton Walker. Carrie spent a week with the Crows at Christmas. Despite her busy accounting practice in Severna Park, MD, and another career teaching accounting at the local junior college, M.C. Elmore Harrell has found time to serve as president of the Junior League of Annapolis for '83-'84. M.C. enjoyed seeing Kathleen Stevenson Turner at the Junior League Annual Conference in Dallas. When they can find the time, M.C., Martin, now general manager of Eastport International, David, 13, and Susan, 10, enjoy using their sailboat.

In Pinehurst, NC, Susan Deasy Maguire works with John in a design and construction company and tries to keep up with Kim, 17, Brian, 14, and Trevor, 10. Lee Huston Powell says her full-time job as a systems programmer with the First Security Bank in Lexington, KY, and her three children (Huston, 15, now attending Woodberry Forest, a son, 11, and a daughter, 9, at school in Lexington) leave her little time for anything else. Lee had a wonderful visit with Margaret Street Wilson in Charleston last August.

In Atlanta Harriet Houston Shaffer stays busy looking after Caroline, a freshman at Westminster, and Emi, a first grader there. The Shaffers spend much of their time traveling to Boston to see Charles, a junior at St. Paul's. In Bethesda, MD, Dona Van Arsdale Jones is the full-time mother of Emily, 6, and Timothy, 2. For the past year Dona has been involved in numerous volunteer activities at Emily's school. Dona and Carleton went to Grand Cayman last March, and during the summer Dona gave an entranced Emily her first look at Williamsburg. From the Big Apple Hedi Haug White writes of a fulfilling family life; her son Tim, 10, is "at a wonderful age" and they are enjoying him thoroughly.

In Grand Island, NY, Melody McCormick Cooke, still a reporter for the Niagara Gazette, has begun to empty the nest; daughter April, 18, is a freshman at U.Va. (Now who would have guessed, back in '64, that any of us would be sending a daughter to Virginia?) Kirsten, 16, is a fine pianist. Last summer Melody visited with Linda Lee McAndrew, who has managed to pull herself together, between play groups, to do some dancing. In the spring of '83 she did a guest performance with Bill Evans, and last July she performed and served as a visiting faculty member at his Summer Dance Institute in Meadville, PA. But it's a tricky business, says Linda; motherhood and dance are both full-time jobs.

During the past year Penny Writer Theis, our class president, has had her hands full getting ready for our twentieth reunion. She and Scottie Newell Lennon, her old roomie, got the ball rolling at Alumnae Council last fall. Scottie, who "looks fantastic," lives in Southampton, NY, with husband Rich, an ophthalmologist, and their children, Laura, 14, Richard, 12, and Allison, 6; Scottie is active with the Cystic Fibrosis Foundation. Penny also hears from Dagi Stoll Murphy, who lives in Oakland, NJ, with husband John and two children. When Penny is not up to her ears in reunion jobs, she and Stu are at home in Mentor, OH, trying to keep up with Jeff, a high school junior investigating colleges; Tim, a freshman hockey player; and Ginger, 10, a tennis player and gymnast.

And now a word from our sponsor — our class sponsor, that is. After seeing last year's notes, Professor James A. Rawley sent me his news. Having chaired the U. of Nebraska's History Dept. for 10 years, Mr. Rawley is again a free man, teaching and working on a sequel to The Atlantic Slave Trade, which he published in 1981. Mrs. Rawley operates a custom picture-framing business, is a life trustee of the Nebraska Art Assn., president of the Lincoln City Ballet, and the first woman to chair the country club tennis committee. The little Rawley boys are not so little anymore. John, unmarried, lives in Vermont, where, as president of Vermont Homesteads, he builds and designs houses. Buddy, now known as James, is married and practices law in Albuquerque. By the time you read this, the Rawleys will have become grandparents. Oh, yes. Mr. Rawley could hardly believe that we had turned 40. If he will make this observation upon seeing any of us, I'm sure he will find himself even more beloved than he was 20 years ago.

Here in College Park I am still scribbling away and Wally is busy doing what economists do — never altogether clear to someone who can't balance her check book. At a conference in Paris this June, he will present a paper on economic incentives for protection of the environment to representatives of the environmental ministries of the world's major industrialized countries. When that's over, we hope to run off to Scotland for a week or so — my first visit since St. Andrews. Last June Wally did a noble job of giving away the bride, his elder daughter Cathy. This June son Chris graduates from Stanford, where Nora has just completed her sophomore year. Wally and I ended 1983 on a glorious note by attending the American League playoffs and the World Series and cheering our beloved Baltimore Orioles to a World Championship. For those of you who can't understand getting that excited over baseball, I can only say I'm sorry for you.

By the time you read this, our revels will have ended, the reunion will be history, and I shall have turned over the class quill to my successor. Be good to her and write your news regularly. And if you have no news, make it up. You'll save her the trouble.

Those of us who returned to SBC for our 15th reunion had a wonderful time. We laughed and talked and shared memories and life experiences; and we missed you who were unable to come. The scrapbook compiled by Frances Kirven Morse was fantastic. Many thanks, Frances, and thanks also to everyone who answered her plea for news and pictures. You're looking great!

Barbara Baur Dunlap writes that she and Charlie and their five children have moved into a larger house in Paradise Valley, AZ. They had a great time visiting Kristin Kuhns Gerrity in Martha's Vineyard this summer.

Susan Brush Croft's husband Laurie has accepted a position as manager of United Virginia Brokerage in Richmond. They are excited about moving and are looking for a house which will accommodate their ever-growing family.

In Miami Laura Campbell Walker has a new home (as of September '83) and a new job at her children's school. She spends hours at Little League baseball games. Recently she saw Sandy Blynn Stanier and her daughter.

Kathy Cooley Maher moved to Mobile, AL, when Philip became president of the Southeast Bank of Mobile. She says her three children and her volunteer activities are keeping her very busy.

Mickie Donaldson de Figard wrote just prior to leaving on her second trip to Mexico with the Flying Doctors. She reports that she is becoming "desensitized to fear of flying in small planes."

Libby Harvey Hodgkins and Joe were written up in the May issue of Chemical and Engineering News. Joe owns and directs Alpha Chemical and Biomedical Laboratories in Petaluma, CA. AC & BL is an analytical laboratory specifically designed to meet the needs of a small city. Set up for organic analysis, the lab attracts local industrial and agricultural clients, including vintners. Since they can do emergency toxicology, city agencies, such as police and fire departments, also use their clinical facilities.

Carter Hunter Hopkins and Ed announce the sale arrival of Anne Courtney Hopkins on Feb. 21, 1984. Older brother Hunter is 5½.

Sarah Paradise Ingber obtained the CPA certificate and marriage certificate in close succession — in the middle of tax season! Now, she and Peter are looking forward to a more leisurely life together — renovating their new home and playing tennis.

Suzanne Little Jones writes that all is well and that she's still playing tennis in Albuquerque.

Bonnie Pitman-Gelles, associate director of programs and chairman of the Division of Education Services for the Seattle Art Museum, has become the first recipient of the Museum Educator's Award for Excellence, a national award from the American Association of Museums. Her book, Museums, Magic and Children, has been reviewed very favorably in Museum News.

Cathy Porter has a new job as tax legislative aide to Sen. John H. Chafee (Rep.-R.I.). Her husband James T. Fuller, III, is also a tax attorney.

Emmy Savage Borthwick and Mark have moved to Falls Church, VA, where she is setting up an art studio in her home. They hope to get to Mexico this year.

Amy Thompson McCandless, Peter, and their two boys are "still" living in Mt. Pleasant, SC, and teaching at the College of Charleston. A study Amy did with a colleague on female lawyers in South Carolina was published in November by the National Association of Women Lawyers. She is currently working on a history of higher education for women in the South.

Suzanne Torgan Weston and Stephen are living in beautiful Alaska. Their daughter was married this past year. They do a lot of sightseeing and woodworking. Suzanne puts in many long hours on her current consulting job. The only thing they miss, she says, is the opportunity to ride motorcycles year round.

Ellen Wakefield Ditenritter and Phil love New England and being close to hiking, skiing, and beach opportunities. Her three boys, the oldest of whom is 15, Bible Study Fellowship, school volunteering, and tennis keep her flying.

As for us, we do "the same old things." With four sons, a daughter-in-law, and a teenage daughter, I have trouble just keeping up with birthdays. In my "spare" time I have started work towards an interdisciplinary master's degree in music and religion. Jim and I continue our participation in two choral groups, and I have as many solo engagements as I can handle. Busy, busy — just as we all are!

I wish for the scrapbook from which to glean news. Please send the latest bits and pieces, when you have a moment!

As I write these notes, it is January of 1984, and the class of 1972 is all over the country and all over the world. Since 1981, Ellen Moore Miller has been living in Hong Kong, where her husband Rodney has been manager of operating services for Asia with Sea Land Service. Ellen has worked as the assistant to the librarian at the International School for the past two years. They have three children, Elizabeth (9), Virginia (7), and David (5), and will move to Manila this year where Rodney will be country manager of the Philippines.

Stephanie Harmon Simonard writes that she is now a senior manager with Peat, Marwick, Mitchell, and Co., an international tax consultation firm in Paris, France; also as president of the Association of Americans Resident Overseas, she has had the privilege of meeting Nancy Reagan, French Prime Minister Pierre Mauroy, Princess Grace (before her accidental death), and various high-level government officials in connection with tax treaty negotiations. Stephanie and Baudoin have two daughters, Sophie (8) and Vanessa (6). Jeannette Pillsbury continues as assistant principal in a middle school in Suffolk, VA, but returned to Nicaragua last summer where she had been a missionary in 1978 to teach English and math to the indigenous clergy in the Episcopal Church there. She reports that many good changes have taken place under the Sandinist government.

Back in the states, Cleveland Hall writes that she is working on a log house on Whidbey Island in Washington, where she has two jobs: fiscal manager of a family planning clinic and bookkeeper for a local food cooperative. Cleveland loves salmon fishing and in '82 won a trip to Hawaii for second prize in a salmon derby! Also on the West Coast Patricia Brown writes that she is teaching at the U. of Cal. at Berkeley and that she and her husband, James Snider, had their first child, Amelia Ruth, on Nov. 18, '82. Margaret Crow says she has survived the divestiture from AT&T and has gone with Pacific Bell designing and maintaining computer programs for service representatives, so will probably remain in San Francisco, where she has just bought a house.

Texas is a big state and needs to be with all the class members and their families that live there! Nathalie Ryan Hoyt gave birth to Caroline last year. Bobo says she is grateful her fourth child is a girl! Her son Mont P. is 7 years old and very curious. Kathleen (5) is her mother's wardrobe critic, and Michael (2½) keeps her on her toes with such pranks as tossing the garage door opener out of the car and onto the freeway. Cutler Bellows Crockard is in Houston, too. She reports that she and her husband Doug got away from the children, Bradford (6) and Callie (4), for a lovely Caribbean cruise one week before the invasion of Grenada! Margaret Lyle Jones' husband teaches at the Texas Medical Center in Houston. She writes that their third son was born in April of '83, and in June they moved into a new home. Julia Grace is the third daughter of Elizabeth Clegg Woodard and was born Feb. 23, '83. She joins Mary (4) and Catherine (2½). Liz will be president of the Houston SBC Club in 1984. Lauren Mobley Harrell recently moved to San Antonio, TX, where her husband Pete is a senior research engineer with Southwest Research Institute. They have two children, Bret (7) and Brandon (5). Lauren directs a children's study fellowship. Rhonda Griffith Durham stays busy with her children, Trevor (10), Caitlin (5), and Jonathon (1), yet still finds time to be a trustee for Trinity School of Midland, TX, working with the youth program, and to train volunteers for the Hospice program in their community. Her husband Lynn is now a partner in his law firm. From Fort Worth, TX, Eliza Walbridge writes that on May 21, '83, she and Ray Roberts were married. She has a new job doing computer graphics and is going to school part-time for a degree in computer science. Ellen also runs 10K races and trained for a Marathon in February just to keep in shape!

Congratulations to Charlotte Lykes Jorgensen who was married Dec. 17, '83. Charlotte is a physician's assistant in Boulder, CO. Victoria White moved to Denver, CO, six years ago after completing her M.A. in physical therapy at Stanford U. Vickey and her partner opened a private practice specializing in sports medicine and orthopedic physical therapy.

From the city made famous by The Day After, Sharon Uhler writes that she is the university archivist and assistant professor of history at the U. of Mo., Kansas City. Last year she taught a course on King Arthur as well as medieval Scottish history. Sharon was appointed as one of a six member committee representing all college and university archivists across the country for the Society of American Archivists.

Trish Neale Van Clief and husband D.G. have moved back to Lexington, KY, after living two years in California. D.G. has been asked to direct horse racing's first "Superbowl," called the Breeder's Cup, to be run on Nov. 10, '84 at Hollywood Park. NBC will televise the event. Trish has two children, Danny (7) and Helen (5½). Louise Martin Creason is in Louisville, KY, and reports Scott Creason, Jr., born the day before our 10th reunion, keeps her busy, and that she sees Ann Troutman Harpole all the time. Ann is a librarian at an elementary school. She has two children, Andy (6) and Louise (3).

In Chattanooga, TN, Libby Wann Duff and Frank are enjoying their son, born Oct. '82. Libby, as the political reporter for the Chattanooga Times, was looking forward to the upcoming presidential elections and traveling with the candidates. She had a visit from Louise Martin Creason last summer, sees Emily Garth '73 regularly, and is in touch with Kathy Walsh Drake and Marcia Wittenbrook. Very best wishes to Deborah Dunklin Tipton, who was married on May 28, '83, to Bob Tipton in Memphis, TN. Deborah is doing free-lance interior design work and takes courses at Memphis State U. in interior design. Further down the Mississippi, Patricia Reardon writes from New Orleans, LA, that she is still working at Tulane U. Hospital and Clinic as the assistant administrator in charge of a 200-member physician group practice and the diagnostic services in the hospital. Patty has adopted a little 8½-year-old Korean girl named Gloria.

We are all well and happy in Birmingham, AL. Susan Waller Nading and Alex rented a 40' sailboat last fall and sailed around the Virgin Islands with two other couples and Susan as crew and Dr. Nading as captain! Susan stays busy with her children, Murray (6), Alex, III (4), and Will (2).

Margaret Hayes Brunstad and Jim are expecting their second child in May. Their daughter Betsy is two. Marion Walker continues as attorney for Ridgely Petroleum and in her corporate practice with some civil rights work in rural counties of Alabama. She is also working with a paper entitled Convention South, a publication for planners who promote meetings and conventions in the South. I, myself, have had an eventful year. Several of my Sweet Briar friends came to my wedding last May which made the occasion even more special. Bill and I then took a wonderful trip to Bermuda. I have also attained two precious step daughters, Ashley (10) and Meredith (6). In late June, I headed for the California apparel market and explored the West Coast, as well as picking up new fashion resources for the shop. Elise Webb Neeland has returned to her hometown of Montgomery, AL, where David is enjoying his new radiology practice. They have two daughters and are busy building their first home. In Mobile, Elizabeth Smith Dingwall married an Englishman, Peter Dingwall, on Nov. 11, '82. Peter is a linear accelerator engineer, and Betsy is a radiologist. They are working at the Cancer Center at the Mobile Infirmary. Not far away in Atlanta, GA, Alice Johnson is finishing a fellowship in clinical gastroenterology at Emory U. and is engaged to Dr. David Abba Krendel. She writes that she occasionally sees Gwin Schroder Kellum and Eleanor Harlestone. Sally Haas is in Atlanta, too, working for Hewlett Packard. She was hired as the only female technical computer salesperson in their Southern area, and according to a magazine article devoted to Sally, she became their number one salesperson in the South her second year. Sally now has been promoted to applications district sales manager.

Dorothy Courington practices corporate law in Savannah, GA, and writes that she and her husband gave birth to a son, Carl Eugene McGinley, II, on July 15, '83. Just up the coast Deborah Wilson Hollings and husband Michael have been hitting the campaign trail for Michael's father Ernest's Presidential campaign! Michael graduated from U.S.C. Law School last June and wants to specialize in lobbying and/or communications. Deborah visited with Sade Dabbs Fryer and Bill and their two children in Atlanta on the way to a recent U.VA reunion.

In North Carolina Martha Neill Boney and Bill have moved from Wilmington's historic district to the suburbs to spread out with their two children, Andrew (2) and Kristen (5). Bill is enjoying his law practice, and Marty has spent her spare time working with the Junior League to publish a book on Wilmington. Jane Powell Gray writes from Raleigh, NC, that she was thrilled to get news of Lynn Waterman's marriage. Jane also reports that her son Matthew is now two and that they recently bought a "condo" at Emerald Isle beach.

There is lots of news from Florida. Linda Odum is managing some property she inherited and has become a pine tree farmer. She spent last year organizing the area, cutting, thinning, and reforesting. She has also taken in a partner to begin a small scale cattle operation. To relax, Linda and her friend sailed a 37' sailboat to the Bahamas and back. Louise Broome Barnett writes from W. Palm Beach, FL, that she and her husband Danny have a one-year-old daughter, Sarah Louise, and expected their second child in February. Jody and Danny live in a community with eighteen friends, where all participate in child care, cooking, and household chores. Abby Flynn lives in St. Petersburg, FL, teaching math at a post secondary vocational school. Mary Pat Varn Moore, husband Paul, and son Warren (3½) are in the process of moving from Tampa back to their hometown of Tallahassee, where Paul had the opportunity to join a successful insurance agency. Mary Pat had just been accepted at Stetson Law School but will re-apply to Fla. State because of the move and hopes to begin school in September. From Ft. Myers, FL, Beverly Horne Dommerich sends news that she is with Barnett Bank and manages loan operations. Her husband John works at the State Attorney's Office where he is responsible for the Career Criminal Program. John and Bev flew to Athens last summer and cruised the Mediterranean!

Naturally, many of our classmates hail from Virginia. Ella Ivey Marks writes from Lynchburg that she and David had their third son, William Mundy, last July. Ella is still decorating, the Columns Interiors, and loves the work. Her husband's real estate firm merged to form Marks-Overackee, Inc., and they are planning a 30- to 40-unit condominium development. Ellen Apperson Brown and Kirk are at V.E.S. in Lynchburg where he teaches German and coaches soccer, while Ellen chases after Kate (3) and David (1). Ellen continues to sing at church and occasionally at SBC and has been president of the Lynchburg SBC Alumnae Club this year. Charla Leonard Reynolds writes that two boys make life full of activity in Culpepper. Her latest family addition, William Leonard, was born last March. Charla continues to work part-time in speech pathology. Best wishes to Jane Twohy Tirrell and Thomas who married Sept. 24, '83. Jane is vice-president and branch manager for First Virginia Bank-Central in Charlottesville. Virginia Stevens Purcell and Riker have settled into their new house in Roanoke with their two daughters Anne (1) and Brookie (4). Congratulations to Barbara Tessin Jones who became a partner in her law firm in Richmond this past October. Susan Snodgrass Wynne and Dubby plan to renovate a home in Virginia Beach. Susan says she's busy carpooling her three sons, John (8), Lee (5), and Brad (2). Carter Frackelton, of course, keeps me up to date on the Fredericksburg gang. Janet Nelson Gibson is doing well with her dress shop, especially since the renovation of downtown F'burg. Her husband Jo-Jo works with the Department of the Army in D.C. Ginnie B. Payne Sasser and Flip are doing fine with darling Nancy, now one year old, and Carter writes that this school year has been very busy for her, teaching 7th grade math and pre-algebra. She is also gifted coordinator for grades 5-8 and works two nights a week teaching adults in the G.E.D. math program! Carter visited Sue Shields White and Bruce in Arlington TX, where Sue is a law student at SMU. Sue and Bruce took Carter to the site of the TV show Dallas, so we all received wonderful Christmas cards picturing Carter at "Southfork." Sue and Bruce have a son, Brandon (1½). From Marshall, VA, Jennifer Castle Gerrish writes that she worked in a law firm until right before she and husband Dave adopted their son Christopher last September. In her spare time, Jenny plays in area tennis tournaments and is on the Board of the Christian Women's Club of Warrenton. Dave is a stockbroker and financial planner, who flies jets on weekends. Penny Thomas Zimmermann completed an intense six month course in computer programming last July. Her SBC English degree and computer knowledge helped her attain a job at a defense consulting firm in Arlington, VA, which she enjoys very much.

Kitty Adams wrote to me last February just as I'd put down my pencil, so this may not be up to date, but last January she had just completed her 1983 Environmental Forecast, a 40-page document she sent to corporate subscribers across the country. Kitty survives happily in our nation's capital as a government relations consultant. Cecilia Albert, still in the Air Force, has been transferred to the Baltimore-D.C. area from California and says she is trying to get used to cold weather again. Tina Hall Baugher has settled in Baltimore with her daughter Carey (4) and new son William, born last October. She got her real estate license last summer and enjoys seeing Caroline Mauch Grumbine and Kakki Jones Morrison. Jennifer Linsley Alphin writes that her son Tommy (3) now has a little sister, Suzanne Jeannette, born May 23, '83. These two keep her busy along with tutoring math, giving piano lessons, and being vice-president of the Women's Club. Jennifer lives in Severna Park, MD, and says that Bonnie Moe Stook and family moved in down the street last August.

From York, PA, Nancy Hagar Bruetsch writes that three children, Kim (8), Kelley (6), and Matthew (2), as well as being chairman of the Jr. League's Public Affairs Committee and president of the Friends of the Strand Performing Arts Center, keep her life from being dull. Debbie Kurtz Christenson is living in Green Farms, CT, with husband Brian and three boys, Will (6), Matt (2½), and Peter (11 mos.). Debbie and Brian are restoring an old home. Leslie Ludington Orendorf says Richard Francis joined the crew on Feb. 1, '83. Leslie is in New Haven, CT, and has two other children, Melenie (8) and Billy (5). Up North, Kathy Upchurch Takevian writes that Tak continues to work in Boston at Harvard's Cancer Hospital while she commutes to the U. of Mass. medical school and an affiliated hospital where she has a private practice in rheumatology and teaching responsibilities. Her biggest news, however, is that their first child was due in March of '84. In the Boston area too, Dale Shelly is a technical writer, writing and editing manuals to explain how to use computer operating systems for her husband James Graham's Software Co. It's not all work though; her card came from under a palm tree in the Bahamas. Dale occasionally sees Penny Walsh, who got her M.B.A. from Boston Col. and now works in the consumer marketing section of Baybanks, Inc., and Mercedes Gravatt Grandin, who has two children, ages 2 and 5. Eileen Gebrian, also in the Boston area, married Tim Barberich last fall and is expecting her first child. From Marblehead, MA, Frances Stith Nilsson writes that she is working full time again at Babson Col. Her husband, Ed, opened his own architecture office, and they have started to build a solar home.

New York, NY, is home for Georgie Vairo, who is a professor of law at Fordham U. and maintains a private practice on the side doing everything from wills to major federal civil litigation. In nearby New Jersey, Susan Desmet Bostic writes that she and Gordon are the proud parents of Rosalie Ann, born on Sept. 23, '83. Gordon continues to work as a systems programmer for N.J. Natural Gas Co., while Susan is on a two-year leave from teaching to take care of Rosalie. Cynthia Heye Hopkins is a product manager for Howmedia, Inc., the orthopaedics division of Pfizer. Her husband is an attorney, and they have just purchased a home in Montclair, NJ. Newspaper reporting continues to be exhilarating and exhausting for Holly Smith. Her husband Neil is now U.S. editor for a financial magazine, Euromoney Magazine, based in London. Holly left her journalism responsibilities in New Jersey to join Neil in London for two weeks last summer.

The highlight of the trip was horseback riding in Hyde Park on a sweet-natured horse who was slightly more than eighteen hands! Emily McNally Brown reports from Upsilon, MI, that her two boys are growing daily. Her oldest, Peter, now wears Emily's docksiders! Husband Jim is a supervisor at Automated Data Processing while she works on her graduate degree in administration and directs adult education in a nearby school. Martha Holland writes from Detroit that she, Briggett Keith, and Charlene Sturbitts gathered to attend Jean Chaloux's wedding on July 2, '83. Jean married Marcello Miani of Milan, Italy. In September, Martha and her husband Chris Iribe went to visit Jean in Milan, Italy, then on to Paris where they attended the opening of a show on Art Deco honoring Chris' grandfather.

Finally, from Reston, VA, a late entry from Anne Garrett Barfield. Anne says her third child, Morgan, is out of diapers and her older children, Evan and Alison, are in school, so she is working full time as manager of a 500-unit public housing project! In her spare time, she teaches swimming to babies and scuba diving to all ages. Daphne Drennon Gallin announces the birth of her first child, Claire Denby, Sept. 8, '83, and send news that Mary Crispin moved to Buenos Aires, Argentina, this summer from Paris, France, where she had lived since 1972. Dolores Connor announces her marriage to Dave Margeson on Jan. 28, '84!

Thanks to all of you who answered my plea for news. I hope these notes will bring us all just a little closer together, no matter how far spread we become.

Secretary

Sarah Molt Lawrence (Mrs. Robert F.), 7103 Georgia St., Chevy Chase, MD 20815

Fund Agent

Lochrane Coleman Smith (Mrs. Mell Gage), 2625 Highland Ave., #611, Birmingham, AL 35205

It is always so much fun to hear from everybody when this time of year rolls around. Without further ado I'll indulge you in highlights from the lives of '76-ers far and wide. Ookie Hayes has hit new levels of success in her ornithological acclaim. She is coauthor of the Smithsonian Field Guide to North American Birds. The book is sold out everywhere, but I am still waiting for my autographed, free copy. Megan Morgan has become an actress of New York fame; she moved to the Big Apple in autumn of '83 and at this writing has starred in her third play and has gotten "good press" on each. While we dearly miss her in D.C., she is obviously on to bigger and better things. To comfort us for the loss of Megan to the area, however, we usher back Peggy Weimer, who accepted a job with the Federal Reserve System as of the first of this year. She was in Elliott Graham's wedding in October, as was Mary Aiken Wright and Jo Ella Schneider '77. Peggy reports that Elliott married Jerry Shoening and is living near Annapolis. Holly Weaver is working with her father in Savannah, GA, doing investment analysis and portfolio management. She received her M.S.A. from Georgetown U. and passed the CPA last year. She trained for and ran in the Boston Marathon this past spring. Chris Carr Dykstra just finished her Ph.D. and has been accepted for post doctoral work at M.I.T. Peggy Humphrey Corley has moved from western Arkansas to Little Rock, where her husband will resume his equine practice at a new clinic they are building. She hopes to teach riding as well when it is completed.

Caroline Bickel McLoughlin has been teaching math at Partledge School in Locust Valley on Long Island but will be moving to New Jersey (Bernardsville area) over the summer because her husband's company is relocating. She's in touch with Meg Shields Duke and Ookie Hayes.

Suella Epple Behrns continues as music director for the church, Christian Fellowship of Columbia in Missouri, and reports that she is very happy in that capacity as well as in ministering on the UMC Campus and at various prisons across Missouri. Barbara Nyholm Ashley is employed with John Nuveen and Co., a municipal bond and investment company as a sales and marketing manager for their investment. Remaining time is spent working on their house. She gets to see Mary Woodford when in Philadelphia.

Christie Mills Allen was married last October to Dave Allen. Megan Morgan, Becky Burt, and Norris Judd Ferguson were the SBC attendants. They went to the Caymen Islands in the British West Indies for their honeymoon. She and Dave are happily residing in College Park, MD. Christie is looking for independent opportunities in art therapy now that she has aced graduate school. Mary Weston Strielz married Rick Strielz last September in Madison, WI. In December she saw Melanie Coyne Cody, who reportedly has a darling baby girl. Melanie wrote in March that she went to Hawaii in April 1983 and had just returned from a week of skiing in Snowmass, CO, and a trip to Tucson to visit friends. She was planning to attend Becky Wilson's wedding in Richmond in May and afterwards visit Missy Briscoe McNatt in Annapolis.

Dr. Terese DeGrandt has finished pediatrics residency and started her radiology residency in Atlanta. She loves Atlanta but insists she is still a Redskins patriot, even now.

Shelton Caldwell Lindau is currently living near Boone, NC, with husband Bill and son Ivan. She is working in a nursing home as an RN and enjoying it very much. Debbie Mutch Adelson is moving to Clearwater, FL, where she will continue her work with Honeywell Corp. The move means a new position with Honeywell as an editor in the Space and Strategic Division. Her husband is in law school at Florida State U. She is very proud that she has an analytical study coming out in Current Musicology soon.

Wendy Bursnall Weston has bought a house and enjoys her work with a medium-sized law firm in Denver. Her 18-month-old daughter Aubrey continues to be a pleasure to her as she job shares and plays mother simultaneously. She was back at Sweet Briar in May for a mini-reunion with Jane Mooney '77, Dorothy Lear '78, Cannie Cryslar '78, and Pat Reese '75.

Karina Schless is still working and was recently promoted at Wyeth Labs. She is riding her quarterhorse Drambuie, but taking a winter break from her show series. She won second place however in the area year-end awards (Phoenixville). She also reports that she keeps in touch with Clarissa Nielson '77, Donna Daniels Rubin married Byron Rubin and has a 5-year-old daughter named Lisa and a recent entry (December '83) Eric. She just received her M.B.A. in international business from the U. of Dallas.

Nancy Romm Stone had her second daughter December 29, 1983. Her name is Virginia Willoughby Stone. She and Lecky are adjusting to being parents of two! Catherine Callett graduated from American U. Law School last May and is now practicing in Ft. Lauderdale, FL. Mary Woodford continues her work in strategic planning and acquisitions with FMC Corporation. She spent her winter vacation skiing in Switzerland with Gail Zarwell Winkler.

Melanie Holland Rice had her second child in February, and daughter Carrington was 3 in April. Her husband George is vice president, commercial division, United Virginia Bank. Elizabeth Jenks Coggin moved to Baltimore in February — has taken a new job with a Baltimore bank. Mary Lewis graduated this year from U. of Louisville Medical School and begins her residency in internal medicine this July.

Marilyn (Marty) McClelland graduated in May from UNC with a Ph.D. in business administration and has accepted a faculty position with the U. of Houston's College of Business starting in the fall.

Debra Rae Karnes, who received a law degree from the U. of Creighton in Nebraska, has been hired as the executive director of the Rappahannock Council on Domestic Violence.

Marsha Taylor DeLain has been selected one of the Outstanding Young Women of America by the program designed to honor young women who have distinguished themselves in their homes, their professions and their communities. In 1982 Marsha completed the doctorate in educational psychology at the U. of Ill. and in the same year married Larry E. DeLain in a ceremony for which Mr. Allan Huzsti was the organist and Keedie Grones was a guest. In January 1983 Marsha moved with her husband to Clark Air Base, the Republic of the Philippines, where she serves as a Clark family support specialist and stays active in singing groups. In February she was in the States to be matron of honor in sister Sandra's ('74) wedding.

Kay Ellisor Hopkins had her second daughter last May — Elizabeth Lindsay. With her two girls, she still manages to find time for her church committee work. Kay was a bridesmaid in Beth Bates' wedding last September to Claude Polk Locke, III. Cissy Humphrey and Tennessee Nielson Indorf also attended. Tennessee is expecting baby #1 even as we read — summer of '84? Ainslie Jones Uhl is working on a short term assignment with CBS news but also pursuing marketing opportunities in cosmetics and fragrances. She and husband Robert moved to New York City in August, 1983. Ebbet Little Stevens '77 and Tricia Waters '77 visited her last fall. Hilda Dent has opened a very successful sewing and tailoring shop in Montgomery, AL (as I predicted last year, if you will recall). She and Randall have bought a turn-of-the-century home which they spent much of their time overhauling. Hilda plans to put her shop on one story as well as Randall's office — with living space above! In addition to Randall's anti-racism work with Southern Poverty Law Center, he was instrumental in reopening Montgomery's last neighborhood theatre, which has turned into a very successful operation. Robin Rodger Heller and husband Bill continue to work on the Tudor home they bought two years ago. Last fall she planted over 100 SBC bulbs! She has joined the Junior League of Detroit and thoroughly enjoys her volunteer work. She also continues as manager of North American Truck Sales Forecasting for General Motors. Ann Kiley Crenshaw married Clark Crenshaw in February and at this writing was expecting her first child any day. She has kept busy with her law practice, Junior League and various other volunteer activities.

Susan Wallon is still a corporate paralegal in NYC and reports that she is doing very well. She had a super vacation last spring with Nelly Osinga '77. She took an 8-day rail trip down the Colorado River and through the Grand Canyon. Bobbie Hauck Gribble and husband Russ now have two sons, Rusty and Bradley. She is now working for AT&T in Reston, VA, and is happy to be back in the Washington area. DeDe Ryan has visited with a lot of SBC'ers in the past year including Meg Shields Duke (who reportedly makes a wonderful mother), Sally Old

Kitchin, Liz Farmer Jarvis, and Holly Weaver.

Trish Talbot was married to Wrightly T. Read last September. Melanie Holland Rice was a bridesmaid. She has just completed her first year with Hyatt Hotels Corporation and enjoys the work very much. Robin Im-schweiler is stable manager at Hamilton Farm in Massachusetts. She is both training horses and teaching riding. She is eventing her horse Sonnenshein, intermediate this year. Aerobics, yoga, and church fill out the remainder of the day.

Ann Lee Webster has been living in Hilton Head for the last five years married to Tom Webster, a broker with Merrill Lynch. She is selling real estate full time on the island and thoroughly enjoys it. She sees Carol Fiske Platt who lives three hours away in Jacksonville, as well as Debbie Denechaud Stump. Debbie has one baby with #2 on the way.

Tricia Cassidy Higgins announces the birth of her second child — Timothy Martin, a bumptious boy of 9 lbs., 3 ozs. at birth. Timmy senior is with the Intelligence Division of the N.Y. Police Department. Trish returned to work with the county executive this past April after a vacation in Palm Beach.

Susan Ray Karlson reports that she is still working, but still goes to Jamaica a few months a year for husband Henry's job. Young Henry is learning to snorkel! Cissy Humphrey is in Dallas with a new law firm, Stutzman and Bromberg. She's still president of the SBC club in Dallas and at their annual Sweet Briar Day bash she saw Beth Bates Locke, Tennessee Nielson Indorf, Donna Daniels Rubin, Ellen Sellers McDowell '77, Janet Baldwin '79, and Lisa Wray Longino '78.

Kelsey Canady Bennett has moved back to Southern Virginia and enjoys life at the shore. She is still with AT&T and husband Tony is with Union Camp. Maureen O'Hearn Slowinski is still with Hogan and Hartson as a paralegal where she just completed work on the MGM Grand Hotel fire case. In her spare time she and husband Hill are breaking in their baby golden retriever. DeDe Alexandre writes that all is well at Mademoiselle Magazine where she is doing color and fabric forecasting as well as designing hand knit sweaters. Her quarterhorse mare had a beautiful chestnut colt last June. His name is Forever Tucker's Pride — great-grandson of the 1943 Kentucky Derby Winner!

Gladys Van Horn is currently employed by the First National Bank as a market research analyst in New Orleans. She is also doing Junior League volunteer work as a patient representative in a local hospital. Demetra Georgis Bowles is completing her Ph.D. in English Literature at U. of California, Berkeley. She is also working on a collection of short stories and in her spare time hunts duck and pheasant, horseback rides, and is an avid fly fisherman. Last July Cynde Seiler Eister had a baby boy, Ronald Noel, Jr. She is thoroughly enjoying full time motherhood.

Gail Zarwell Winkler and her husband John are living in Dayton, OH. Gail is taking a sabbatical as housewife for the time, enjoying home projects and tilling the garden. Laurie Lenkel received her second B.S. degree in pharmacy in January. State board licensing exams are the next step.

Teesie Costello Howell reports that she is still with Investors Home Mortgage and recently enjoyed having Debbie Jones, a member of the Class of 1984, do her winter term under Teesie's aegis. Teesie and Husband Chris went to Europe a year ago October to celebrate their 5th anniversary.

Ann Brown Davidson has returned to teaching after four years off growing a family. She is teaching kindergarten and enjoying it immensely. Her oldest daughter is in first grade, middle daughter in nursery school at Sweet Briar (!) and the youngest now 3 years old. Liz Farmer Jarvis started a new job at the year's start as museum curator of the paintings and fine decorative arts collection of the Historical Society of Pennsylvania in Philadelphia. Liz reports that Jill Wentorf Wright has begun a horse equipment business called "Snaffles" with two other partners. Liz's architect husband designed a house for Jill and her husband in Albany New York. Nothing like a good Sweet Briar connection, eh?

Norris Judd Ferguson is in her second year as curator of the San Antonio McNay Art Museum and has seen Sweet Briar friends both in line of work and at play. She and Lynn Kahler Berg worked together on the International Exhibitions Foundation's touring of Fourain's paintings last spring.

Sally Old Kitchin reports that their daughter Maria is now 2 years old and she and Jim are really enjoying her. She also writes that as of January, Lisa Nelson Robertson has a second newborn — a girl named Elizabeth Churchill Robertson. Libba Gorin is enjoying her sixth year of teaching 3rd grade at the Louisville Collegiate School — where she is also the J.V. hockey coach and coach of the 7th and 8th grade girls' basketball team. She ran into Cindy Kendree Thieringer '77 and her husband J.T. on a rafting trip in West Virginia.

Lynne Miller Bernard graduated from Catholic Law School in '82, married Eric Bernard, and moved to New Hampshire where they are both practicing. At this writing they were digging out from under one and one-half feet of snow. I hope by print time New Hampshire will be heading into the slow sledding season.

Debbie Vatterott took a skiing vacation in Denver and Vail where she saw Meg Shields Duke. Debbie continues to love her career as a commercial banking officer in downtown St. Louis. She writes that she keeps in touch with Mary Dubuque Desloge '75 and Gray Thomas Avery '75. Laurie Fitzgerald Nowland has temporarily "retired" from teaching English and coaching this year, as her second child was born in March. She has stayed busy by playing Philadelphia interclub paddle tennis and continued to play interclub tennis through the spring. Laurie enjoys getting together with Gina Jackson Speare and her daughter Megan. Tennessee Nielson Indorf and her husband David are still lawyering in Dallas. She visited Lola Brock Meakin '77 and her husband in London in February. Her big news is that a baby was on the way, due in June. Keep us posted Tennessee!

Mary Beth Hamlin has moved to Chicago and continues her career in real estate. She took her annual trip to Naples, FL, in March and at this writing intended to get back for some spring skiing in Vail. She keeps promising to visit us in Washington during one of her globetrotting sprints. Lochrane Coleman Smith and her husband Mell just bought a house and sold their condominium. She continues as the alumni director for Cumberland Law School in Birmingham. She travels a good bit with her work and stays with SBC friends frequently — including DeDe Ryan, Carrington Brown Wise, Margaret Milnor Mallory, Ellen Sellers McDowell '77, and Anne Baldwin Mann '78.

Becky Burt is still living in Houston and is working for a subsidiary of American General Life Insurance Company as a management analyst. She is writing computer programs and documentation on financial systems. She has been looking to buy a house in the historic Houston heights area where she can do some hands-on renovation. Becky works did like hammers and nails! Candi Casey is trade analyst for the Italian Trade Commission in Los Angeles. She saw Cissy Humphrey while on business in Dallas and has traveled twice to South Africa — to Zimbabwe and Transkei. She had a fabulous couple of trips! She also reports that she sees Carol Clement Paria '75 and her husband Frank quite often.

Susan Verbridge Paulson is now living in the Denver suburbs (Arvada) where her husband Larry is a Methodist minister. She has assumed the role of mother with their new baby Christina Cecilia. Connie Radford Butt, Bob and 2-year-old daughter Austin traveled east to visit Terry Starke Tosh '75 in Richmond and Sarah Dowdy '75 this past year. She does sewing and appliquéing for local establishments in Louisville as well as volunteer work for a local hospital.

Margaret Milnor Mallory is working as an investment banker at the National Bank of Commerce in Memphis, TN, and doing volunteer work for the girls club of Memphis. She is helping underprivileged so that they too can hold good jobs and go places. Linda Jean Smith continues to enjoy living and working in the Philadelphia area. She is head librarian for the firm Stradley, Ronon, Stevens and Young and enjoys her work very much. She has served as President of the Greater Philadelphia Law Library Association and has been appointed to a three-year term to the Federal Advisory Council for Pennsylvania libraries.

Mary Elizabeth Walch (Mimi) is getting a master's degree from Harvard U. in children's television. She hopes to work in NYC when she gets out of school in June '84. In the mean time she is working as an associate producer of a kid's show at WBZ in Boston, MA.

Elisabeth B. Ward is a credit analyst for Chemical Bank in New York City.

Phyllis C. Watt is a newspaper reporter in Waynesboro, VA. She is planning to marry Paul Jordan in June '84 and will probably move to Richmond, VA. She won the Virginia Press Association Award for a feature story.

Jeanne S. Weaver lives in Arlington, TX, and works as a director of sales for Northeast Steel Wire Co.

Carol Williamson Dizard is in international bond sales to Switzerland for investment bankers, L.F. Rothschild in NYC. Also she is producing a new play by Mighel Pineru, 1974 Drama Critics Circle Award Winner for best American play, Short Coyes. Husband John is a free lance journalist and is writing a book.

Swee Lan Wong is product manager at Boots, Co. in Kuala Lumpur, Malaysia.

Brandy Wood is a psychiatric social worker in Louisville, KY.

Wendy Woodward moved again but this time to the Washington, DC area. She was hired by her client Continental Telephone. She is living out in the country in Reston, VA, which she likes better than Georgetown.

As for myself, I am still in Miami. I saw Toni, Heidi, Shannon and Amy at Claire's wedding. Remember that next year is our class 5th Year Reunion; thus, keep in touch so we will be able to let everybody know about the Reunion plans.

FOR G. NOBLE GILPIN: IN MEMORIAM

*"How lovely is Thy dwelling place, O Lord of Hosts!"**

When Laura Buckham wrote me last December that G. Noble Gilpin had died I thought at once what a mighty man he was, musically and otherwise, and after a while this poem came together....I shall always remember the Ides of March not so much for Ceasar's death as for Gilpin's birth. He is loved so well by so many.

Wakening in a small room, the walls high and blue, one high window through which the morning enters,
I turn to the table beside me painted a thick white. There instead of a clock is a tumbler of water, clear and cold, that was not there last night. Someone quietly entered, and now I see the white door slightly ajar and around three sides the light on fire. So it was I saw it all and turned away to where snow fell into snow and the wind spoke in the syllable of wind, and I could be anyone:
a man whose life lay open before him, a book with no ending, a widow bearing white carnations at dusk, a cinder floating down to earth and blinking slowly out, too small to mean a thing, too tired to sigh. Now I see the stars are ready for me and the light falls upon my shoulders evenly, so little light that even the night birds cannot see me robed in black flame.

I am alone, rising through clouds and the lights of distant cities until the earth turns its darker side away, and I am ready to meet my guardians or speak again the first words born in time. If life comes back, then I am ready for the dawn that calls a child from sleep, rubbing his eyes on a white window and knowing none of it can last the day.

Do You Own Stocks?

And, would you like to:

- Increase income?
- Avoid capital gains taxes?
- Reduce federal estate taxes?
- Arrange a future gift to Sweet Briar the benefits of which would last in perpetuity?

If you own long term, appreciated securities, you should consider participating in Sweet Briar's Pooled Income Fund or other form of life income arrangement. A substantial income tax deduction at the time you begin participation, based upon the fair market value of the securities, reduces your initial outlay, giving you additional funds in the form of tax savings to invest elsewhere. The effect is, in many cases, to increase your total income and the rate of return of the Fund. Capital gains taxes are eliminated, and the value of the securities are excluded from your estate for federal estate tax purposes.

Remembrances of Anne Gary Pannell Taylor

To have had the opportunity to work with Anne Gary Pannell (I will use this name, as she did not become Mrs. Taylor until she left Sweet Briar) was one of the most interesting, exciting, rewarding and fun experiences I have had the privilege to enjoy.

Two things which stand out in my mind as her prime concerns about the College were faculty salaries and alumnae involvement in the affairs of the College. My association goes back to 1956 when I became president of the Alumnae Association. It was at that time that the Alumnae president, at the suggestion and urging of Mrs. Pannell, was invited to become a member of the Board of Overseers as a member ex officio (without vote). However, from the beginning, the Alumnae's thinking was sought and respected.

Faculty salaries were Mrs. Pannell's first consideration. She was a very compassionate and concerned person about her faculty. In all budget considerations, the question of improving faculty salaries was her first requirement. This is not to say that other aspects of the College suffered. Mrs. Pannell was an excellent business woman. Working with Mr. Peter Daniel, the treasurer, she made sure that the College has always had a balanced budget, an enviable position.

Her ability as an excellent business woman was demonstrated in all aspects of her responsibilities. I had the privilege of making calls on foundations and corporations with her. It was always a great learning experience. After the call, we would each write our impressions independently and our chances for success. This is one area in which our batting average was not very good. One call I remember where we were very warmly received. We felt that the man had been waiting for someone from Sweet Briar. Nothing happened. Another call we felt our chances were not very good, but it brought favorable results. Mrs. Pannell's presentation was always well organized, to the point, documented with facts and figures. Her charming and gracious personality was an added asset.

In Mrs. Pannell's association with the Overseers and Directors, she was always careful not to inject her point of view when business was brought up which did not concern the administration of the College. She conscientiously avoided becoming involved in areas which were the Overseers' and Directors' responsibilities.

She was conscientious in her approach to everything she did. For several years, Mrs. Pannell would spend a few days between semesters with my husband and me at the Hillsboro Club in Florida. This should have been an R and R vacation for her, but she always felt she had to justify the few days away from College by making calls on foundations or individuals.

One of Mrs. Pannell's most difficult periods was the 60's when many students all over the country were trying to tell the presidents and trustees how to run their institutions. It was very upsetting to her when the students would run editorials in the Sweet Briar News criticizing the President and the Board in uncomplimentary and rude language. Mrs. Pannell's reaction was one of bewilderment and hurt. As she said, "My philosophy is basically that the administrators are here to administer, the faculty to teach, and the students to learn." That is not to say that she did not encourage faculty and student involvement in the affairs of the College, but she could not understand the students' attempt to dictate and to accuse the Overseers of living in an ivory tower.

Mrs. Pannell was not only efficient and capable, but also a very charming and gracious hostess. She always entertained the Overseers Friday evening at Sweet Briar House before the Board meeting. This was a time for relaxation and fun after a day of committee meetings. We always looked forward to these evenings.

Mrs. Pannell's term as president was one of great growth for the College, and I was privileged to be a part of this experience as an Overseer and Director. I feel fortunate to have so many interesting, enjoyable and happy memories of a very remarkable woman, Anne Gary Pannell Taylor.

Gladys Wester Horton '30

(Mrs. Horton has been an active alumna. Her many contributions include serving as president of the Alumnae Association, originating the Boxwood Circle and acting as its chairman for many years, working in leadership positions in Development campaigns, and serving on the Board of Overseers, 1961-65, and Board of Directors, 1965-73.)

I have put off too long sending this little check in memory of Anne Pannell. It recalled my five years at Sweet Briar and how much Anne's friendship meant to me. Thinking my recollections might be interesting to someone else, I send them along with my check.

Anne Pannell and I arrived at Sweet Briar at almost the same time in the summer of 1950 — she, as President, and I, as Alumnae Secretary. We were next door neighbors, and our children, good friends. We took over for one another when one of us was "on the road," and we made many trips together, visiting alumnae clubs and attending meetings.

Clifton Pannell and Ruthie Schmidt attended the Amherst School and boarded the bus each day at the old Sweet Briar Post Office. Reuben, the SB house man, and Virginia ("Ginya" as the boys called her), the cook, were the children's best friends.

The Pannells and Schmidts shared many happy times with the Gilchrist family who lived in the Sweet Briar farm house. We went sleigh riding in the winter and hay riding in the summer, with many impromptu family gatherings all year long.

Although always very busy, Anne had time to be a friend. She was genuinely interested in everyone and everyone's family, and was the first to come to one's aid when a problem arose.

Her library at Sweet Briar House always fascinated me. It was where she spent all her "at home" time, with a cup of tea and an ever-changing mountain of library books. Her interests and knowledge covered every conceivable subject. The Episcopal Church was very much a part of Anne, and she assumed it was the same for everyone else.

Looking back on these special years of my life makes me realize how much I cherish them and how privileged I am to have been a friend of Anne Gary Pannell.

What's Going On in the Old Refectory?

by Peter V. Daniel
Vice President and Treasurer of the College

In January, 1982, a planning committee made up of members of the faculty, staff, and student body convened with the architects, Marcellus Wright Cox & Smith of Richmond, Virginia, to work out the details for the conversion of the Refectory into an exciting and imaginative facility for the Studio Art and History of Art Departments, as well as an art library and the long awaited art gallery. There has been a great need for an art gallery with good security, excellent lighting, and a humidity/temperature controlled environment for displaying the College's fine collection and other works of art from traveling exhibitions.

The committee and architects labored long and hard to accomplish their assigned task. After considerable study, programming the requirements, and several meetings, it became apparent that the square footage of the Refectory would not accommodate the total program. Following discussion of many alternatives which included new construction in the Refectory area, at the suggestion of the Studio Art Department, it was agreed to leave studio art in the Babcock Fine Arts Center with the other performing arts. This permitted the accommodation of the rest of the program, the inclusion of some needed faculty offices for other academic disciplines, and an archaeology laboratory to take care of the increasing interest in this field. With this understanding, the planning and drawings proceeded in an active and steady manner.

The preliminary drawings were completed and presented to the Board of Overseers, and on September 25, 1982, the architects were authorized to proceed with the working drawings, specifications, and receipt of bid stages. With concern for the escalation of prices in the construction industry, we endeavored to speed the project along. On April 21, 1983, bids were received, and J. E. Jamerson and Sons, Inc., general contractor from Appomattox, Virginia, was awarded the building contract. The total budget for this project was set at $1,568,000. Demolition of the interior and the subsequent renovations commenced on May 12, 1983. This major building alteration has progressed well and will be put into operation and ready for occupancy with the beginning of the 1984-85 academic year. The creativity of design and the excellent workmanship exceeded expectations. It is indeed an exciting augmentation to the campus and to the educational mission of Sweet Briar College. The Refectory building, which was originally designed by Cram, Goodhue and Ferguson, is the campus architectural "gem" and its place for continuing in this capacity is absolutely secure. The meticulous care with which the architects designed the interior of the building is ingeniously accomplished. The Refectory is surely the "Grand Dame" of Sweet Briar's physical plant and the openness of the former dining hall is preserved and enhanced by an interesting joining together and blend of the old and the new. The transformation of this space into an aesthetically pleasing art gallery with all the newest lighting and environmental controls has indeed been done.

Much credit for the success of this project of course goes to the architects, Marcellus Wright Cox & Smith, and the general contractor, J. E. Jamerson & Sons, Inc., but, as chairman of the Refectory Conversion Planning Committee, I want to pay tribute to the many people who have been interested and involved in this project, but especially to the

The Friends of Art at Sweet Briar are sponsoring a project to raise funds for the conversion of the Refectory into the new arts center. Original panels from the interior of the main dining room have been fashioned into desk-top pencil holders. Chris Svoboda '84 created the design of the Refectory which has been cast in bronze and mounted onto each piece. These pencil holders are not for sale; however, they will be given away for each new gift to the Refectory of $100 or more received after September 1st. committee members who contributed so much of their knowledge and time. From the Department of Art History: Aileen H. Laing, Diane D. Moran, Christopher Witcombe, Sandra Horwege; from the Library: John G. Jaffe; from the Department of Anthropology and Sociology: Claudia Chang; from the Student Body: Louise C. Newton and Eleanor J. Wells; and others: Harold B. Whiteman, Jr. and David Noyes, Virginia Museum of Fine Arts and Consultant.

The success of this project would not be possible without the wonderful support of the alumnae, parents, foundations, and many other friends of Sweet Briar College. In addition, the Friends of Art, a group formed to promote the arts at Sweet Briar, has provided needed interest and support. Although we have not reached our goal of $1,868,000 which includes a $300,000 endowment fund for maintaining the Refectory, we are making good progress. We have been aided in our fund raising efforts by two generous challenge grants — a Kresge Foundation grant of $200,000, which we successfully met by a June, 1983, deadline; and a $250,000 grant from the Jessie Ball duPont Religious, Charitable, and Educational Fund which is contingent upon the College's securing $250,000 in matching gifts and pledges by June, 1985. A number of major gifts have been received from individuals toward the funding of this project and the naming of areas within the Refectory. In spite of this extremely generous support from so many, the building is as yet unnamed and there is the opportunity for a major gift to do this. □

The Sweet Briar Art Collection

by Christopher L. C. Ewart Witcombe
Assistant Professor of Art History

To anyone researching the history of Sweet Briar using written sources (as opposed to oral sources), the college literally springs to life during the first years of the presidency of Meta Glass (1925-1946). This impression is brought about mostly because so much more information about the life of the college suddenly becomes available through the pages of the Sweet Briar News that appeared for the first time in December of 1927. In that year, too, appeared the first Alumnae News (now Alumnae Magazine). It is perhaps not merely coincidental that these illuminating publications should have appeared near the outset of an illuminating presidency.

The college had grown rapidly since 1906. That growth continued under Meta Glass but now was directed more especially towards matters and needs academic. These included increasing the number of faculty members, making significant changes in admissions requirements, introducing important alterations and additions to the curriculum, and the construction of a new library with more books. To a certain extent, these changes were evidently the result of efforts to keep Sweet Briar apace with developments taking place in college education at the time and what soon proved to be a successful attempt to establish Sweet Briar as an institution of high academic standing. Meta Glass saw that only with secure educational foundations could Sweet Briar begin to expand academically beyond the limits of the campus. As president it was her spoken intention "to lead the college out into the world." In one sense, this meant bringing the existence of Sweet Briar to the attention of the civilized world. To this end, Meta Glass certainly did her part and no doubt spread the college's name far and wide as she travelled throughout the United States and to Europe as national president of the American Association of University Women. Students also carried abroad the name and accomplishments of the college. In 1930 the first junior year abroad was established and in 1932 three girls set off for the first time to spend a year at St. Andrews University in Scotland.

In another sense, leading the college out into the world also meant making Sweet Briar more aware of the world around it, especially the contemporary world. One of the ways to accomplish this was to bring the world to Sweet Briar whenever possible in the form of distinguished and internationally known visitors. Readers of The Story of Sweet Briar College by Martha Lou Lemmon Stohlman '34 will know that such visitors as Martha Graham, Mrs. Patrick Campbell, Myra Hess, Norman Thomas, and Gertrude Stein made the trip to Sweet Briar. To this list should be added Bertrand Russell, Julian Huxley, Carl Sandberg, Ted Shawn and his dancers, the French painter Fernand Leger, Vladamir Nabakov, Hanya Holm, and Margaret Mead, all of whom came to the campus while Meta Glass was president. The Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Arthur Fiedler performed at Sweet Briar on several occasions, as did the National Symphony Orchestra. The Von Trapp family, recently escaped from Austria, sang in the chapel in 1941, and again in 1943, decades before Hollywood decided to film The Sound of Music.

The belief that notable visitors and performers should be brought to the campus for the education and cultural benefit of the students extended also to include original works of art.

When Meta Glass arrived at Sweet Briar in 1925, art was being taught by Virginia McLaws. Art classes were conducted in Room 31 of Academic (now Benedict), but there was no art major and art as a subject held a rather uncertain place within the curriculum. Miss McLaws, who joined the faculty in 1908 and held the position of Director of Art until her retirement in 1938, had studied at the Charcoal Club in Baltimore and at the New York School of Fine Arts before going to Paris where she was a pupil of painter Henri Caro-Delvaile (1876-1926), a member of the Societe National des Beaux-Arts and specialist in elegant painted interiors.

This rather formal Beaux-Arts background can still be detected, beneath a later and somewhat more impressionist development, in the two paintings by Miss McLaws now in the art collection. One, called Street Scene, is a very pleasant sunny image of a house and trees given by the artist just before she left Sweet Briar in 1938, and the other a portrait of a boy given by former Sweet Briar president Mary K. Benedict in 1952.

In 1925 Sweet Briar had no art collection to speak of. In Sweet Briar House, of course, could be seen the Fletcher-Williams family portraits that came as part of the bequest in 1901, but the college owned no other works of art. This is not to say, however, that there was no other art to be seen on campus before the 1930s. By 1927, and perhaps earlier, it was clearly felt necessary and desirable to expose students to original works of art. This was achieved by bringing art exhibits to Sweet Briar several times a year. Initially, it seems, these exhibitions were often composed of the work of a local artist. On a regular basis, usually once in the spring and again in the autumn, the students could view the work of Elizabeth Hunt Barrett, an artist who lived nearby and had achieved some recognition through her water colours in shows in Washington, Baltimore, and New York. Her work was usually exhibited in 31 Academic. Sometimes aspiring artists within the Sweet Briar community, such as Mrs. Dorothy Scott (wife of Ewing Scott of the Chemistry Department) and William B. Dew, Jr. (son of W.B. Dew, the Treasurer of Sweet Briar), would show their work, and, of course, paintings by members of the faculty could also be seen in exhibition. Besides Miss McLaws, Carl Y. Connor, the head of the English Department, was well known for his water colours.

Of greater importance were the large loan exhibitions composed of the works of various artists that were rented entire and sent to the college through such organizations as the American Federation of Arts in Washington, D.C., and the College Art Association in New York. In January of 1928, for example, an exhibition of seventeen oil paintings obtained from the Guild of Boston Artists and rented out by the A.F.A. was shown in 31 and 32 Academic. In January of the next year, another large show of paintings arranged and sent to Sweet Briar by artist Henry Lee McFee could be seen in the corridors of the second and third floors of Fletcher. The following November oil paintings by members of the faculty of the Grand Central School of Art in New York City were exhibited in Academic. In 1930 the A.F.A. sent sixty contemporary etchings, and the C.A.A. sent an exhibition of contemporary American art. These exhibitions were evidently met with great enthusiasm on campus and no doubt helped give rise to the idea of Sweet Briar's acquiring its own collection of works of art.

Several other factors, or rather a series of events, contributed to the creation of the Sweet Briar Art Collection. In dynamic combination they produced a quite remarkable situation in a small struggling college in the 1930s. Many colleges and universities these days boast collections of works of art. In most cases, however, these collections came about through gifts that simply accumulated over the years. Sweet Briar, in contrast, very boldly decided to build its own art collection from scratch. That the College was still operating in the red in 1935 and there were no readily available means to purchase works of art attests to the importance placed on art at this time and to the courage of those who made the decision to go ahead. The reasoning behind the decision most likely involved what was seen as a need that when satisfied would benefit the students and, at the same time, add to Sweet Briar's cultural prestige. It was evidently felt then, as now, that although one might thoroughly enjoy and learn a great deal from a temporary exhibition, to be fully appreciated a work of art must be viewed over an extended period of time. Prolonged exposure helps develop a familiarity with the work, its many parts are better comprehended and more fully appreciated, and the artist's style and artistic intentions more clearly understood. A sustaining force behind the idea of forming an art collection must have been the president of the college, Meta Glass. She brought with her to Sweet Briar a sophisticated worldliness and a refined sense of culture to which a love of the fine arts was fundamental. Her concerns for the college were voiced in part of a short speech given at Convocation in 1935:

"Anyone who has lived here knows that I care immensely about the spread of artistic education and I care especially about the opportunity for it at Sweet Briar."

Of less immediate significance in the series of events that took place after Meta Glass became president and led to the foundation of the art collection was the appointment in 1927 of Florence Robinson to teach Latin and Greek. Miss Robinson, whose home was Berkeley, California, had received her Bachelor's and Master's degrees from the University of California, and her Ph.D. in Classical Languages from Columbia. (It may or may not be significant that President Glass had also received her Ph.D. in Classical Languages from Columbia.) The next event chronologically was the construction of the Mary Helen Cochran Library, a gift of Fergus Reid in memory of his mother. Completed in 1929, the library brought to the college a grant of $25,000 from the Carnegie Corporation for the purchase of books. The significance of this for the art collection is that the successful expenditure of this grant seems to have satisfied the Carnegie Corporation to the extent that in 1932 a second grant was made to Sweet Briar to be used this time to develop the study of the arts. That a grant for this purpose should have been applied for, and the fact that it was made, can perhaps be explained in part by the fact that President Glass had been made a member of the committee on college architecture and teaching of the fine arts at the annual meeting of the Association of American Colleges in Cincinnati in January of 1932. One cannot help but wonder if it was not to assist in the administration of this grant (or perhaps even to help secure it in the first place) that in the same year Miss Robinson suddenly and unexpectedly shifted from the Classics Department to the Art Department.

With the aid of the Carnegie grant, Miss Robinson set about building up the Art Department's collection of slides, pictures (black and white photographs of works of art) and prints. This expanding and strengthening of the Art Department also took the form of hiring an additional faculty person. The new member of the art department, hired in 1933, was Lois Wilcox, whose presence, I am inclined to believe, was decisive in the foundation of the art collection. Miss Wilcox, originally from North Carolina but more recently from New York, had been hired to teach introductory courses in the History and Appreciation of Art, and Studio (Miss McLaws generally taught Advanced Painting, and Miss Robinson taught ancient art history). Miss Wilcox was a graduate of the School of the Museum of Fine Arts in Boston and had also studied at the Art Students League in New York and then at L'Ecole Montparnasse in Paris. She went from there to specialize in techniques of mural painting at the Scuola Ornamentali in Rome and to study in particular fresco painting with Galamberti in that same city. This special background evidently equipped her well for the task of working for a period as assistant to the great Mexican mural painter Orozco (possibly assisting in the decorations begun by Orozco in 1932 in the Baker Library at Dartmouth College). Miss Wilcox's own style of painting was much influenced by Orozco's. Her presence on campus appears to have stimulated a new interest in contemporary art. Over the next few years most of the exhibitions brought to Sweet Briar featured modern art, and on more than one occasion Miss Wilcox gave special lectures or talks in conjunction with an exhibit.

Given Miss Wilcox's great enthusiasm for contemporary art and her evident belief that students should be exposed to it directly, I would not be surprised to learn that it was perhaps she who first suggested that Sweet Briar begin to acquire its own collection of modern art. As to how the college might buy works of art, it appears that it was Miss Robinson who came up with the idea of forming an organization called the Friends of Art whose purpose was "to foster art at Sweet Briar with the special intent of building up a fund for the purchase of original works of art to form a permanent collection at Sweet Briar College." The new organization came into existence in the fall of 1935 and was officially announced to the college by Miss Robinson at Convocation on Thursday, October 31. Unlike now, the executive committee of the Friends of Art was made up entirely of members of the Sweet Briar community. Meta Glass was honorary president; Miss Robinson, president; Bernice Lill (the Registrar of the college), secretary; Miss McLaws, treasurer; Carl Y. Connor, chairman of the membership committee. The membership committee was in turn composed of Miss Wilcox, Miss Boudreaux (Modern Languages), and Miss Lomer (Librarian) for the faculty; Miss Marjorie Smith Dunn '36 for the staff; Phoebe Pierson Davenport '38 for the senior class, Margaret Harris Robitaille '37 for the junior class, Susan Gibson Davenport '38 for the sophomore class, and Narcissa Dillard Kelley '39 for the freshmen class. Regular annual membership cost one dollar, contributing membership five dollars, sustaining membership ten dollars and life membership fifty dollars. Any person who contributed one hundred dollars or more became thereby a benefactor. At the end of the first year the Friends of Art could boast one hundred and twenty-two members. The following year the number rose to one hundred and sixty-seven.

Among the activities of the Friends of Art were the sponsoring of special exhibitions of art not held under the auspices of the Art Department. The first exhibit of this kind was opened in November of 1935 and comprised twenty-four paintings by, significantly, a woman artist, Hilda Belcher, and was shown in the library. In March of the following year a group of twenty paintings by Elizabeth Paxton Oliver (mother of Jean Oliver Sartor '39) was loaned by Mrs. Oliver through the Friends of Art. The Friends of Art also sponsored visiting lecturers of which the first was renowned art historian Meyer Shapiro who spoke on "The Nature of Abstract Art." Following his lecture Mr. Shapiro was guest of honour at a party given to its members by the Friends of Art in Grammer Common Room. The Friends of Art also sponsored its first gallery talk, given by Miss Wilcox, at an exhibition in February 1936 of twelve American paintings from the permanent collection of the then more-or-less fledgling Museum of Modern Art in New York, most of which were recent gifts of Mrs. John D. Rockefeller, Jr.

It was at the reception for this exhibition that the Friends of Art displayed the first work of art to be acquired by the Sweet Briar Art Collection, a colour drawing by French modernist artist Marie Laurencin, the gift of Gernda von Briesen Neuhauser. A second gift arrived the following May from Suzanne Gay Linville '32 who presented to the college through the Friends of Art, of which she was a member, a landscape painting by her grandfather Edward Gay (1837-1928). Another landscape, Red Clay Country of Virginia, was given to the college in the fall of 1936 by artist Henry Lee McFee, a painter of some renown and a friend of Sweet Briar.

In just four years the teaching and appreciation of art had been transformed at Sweet Briar. At the beginning of 1932 the Art Department existed with one faculty member and the college art collection was non-existent. A little over a year later the Art Department had tripled in size with the addition of two more faculty members, and its facilities greatly enhanced. In 1935 the Friends of Art came into existence and by the end of 1936 three very welcome gifts made the Sweet Briar Art Collection a reality.

And this was not all that was happening! The year 1936 also saw the formation of the Studio Club by student members of the Friends of Art and the initiation of the Picture Rental system whereby, from a collection maintained by the Art Department, students, faculty, and staff could rent for a fee of a few dollars a year three different colour reproductions of works of art (or, if preferred, the same picture for the three rental periods). Also available were some prints in black and white and other prints and illustrations in series that could be rented for a dollar and a half for a set of three. The system proved to be immensely popular and the rental collection grew through the generous support of such people as Judge Francis H. Dunne of San Francisco, father of Alison Dunne Harrison '35 and William E. Greene, father of Lucille Greene Michel '38. With interest in art running so high it was perhaps inevitable that Sweet Briar would decide to offer an Art Department major at the beginning of the 1937-38 academic year. Mary Brown-Serman Walker '38 was the first Art major to be graduated from Sweet Briar.

of-the-week") initiated in December, 1939 with a portrait painted by the sixteenth-century Flemish artist Ambrosius Benson (1529-1550) lent by the Knoedler Gallery in New York and put on display in the library. The following year several important exhibitions were brought to campus. From February 1 to 14 an exhibit of twelve French Impressionist paintings, part of the Durand Ruel Collection including works by Degas, Monet, Berthe Morisot, Pissarro, Renoir, and Sisley could be seen in Reid Parlor. On the opening day of the exhibition the Friends of Art gave a tea from four to six o'clock in Reid to which everyone was invited. From March 1 to 15 a loan exhibition from the Rehn

An exhibition of paintings in Reid parlor in the 1930s.

Galleries in New York featured original works by contemporary American artists. The show included three paintings by Henry Lee McFee, plus the one given to Sweet Briar by McFee the year before. It was evidently the idea of the College that a purchase might be made from this exhibition. On March 11, while the exhibit was still up, Meta Glass wrote a letter to Miss Robinson expressing her opinions on the pictures and apologizing for not being "terribly enthusiastic about choosing anything within our reach." There is almost a note of disappointment in her letter for she was clearly quite eager, as, one imagines, was everyone else involved, to buy something, even suggesting to Miss Robinson, who was now head of the Art Department, where the money might come from. Her last paragraph reads:

"If we were more enthusiastic about a purchase we might take the $100 from the appropriation for the Art Department, but certainly I would not be willing to do this every year...I have a feeling we might get an exhibit out of which we could find a canvas about which we could be more enthusiastic."

In April another exhibition opened in Reid parlors of twelve paintings, including three by William Glackens, loaned this time from Kraushaar Galleries in New York.

Miss Robinson explained that the paintings were brought to Sweet Briar "with the view in mind of having the Friends of Art purchase one for the college," and in a remarkably democratic approach to selection it is asked in the Sweet Briar News that "students and faculty...state their preference to Miss Robinson." Nothing was purchased, however. The following November, Kraushaar Galleries sent another, larger exhibition composed of oil paintings (to be seen in Reid), and drawings and water colours (to be seen in the original main hallway of the library), by such artists as Matisse, Vlaminck, Prendergast, and Glackens. An informal gallery talk was given by Miss Wilcox on November 19, and in the newspaper everyone was urged "to study and vote for their choice for a possible purchase by the Friends of Art. A ballot box is provided."

The moment had arrived! Amid great excitement, an oil on canvas painting entitled Daisies and Anemonies by William Glackens was purchased by the Friends of Art "with its own funds and presented to the college..." The acquisition was announced to the art world through Art Digest (March, 1938, p. 17, "A Glackens for Sweet Briar") and Parnassus (March, 1938, p. 19), and the painting hung in Gray Parlor. The eagerness of the college to buy the work is attested to by the fact that at the time the Friends of Art had not yet collected enough funds to cover the cost. A month after the painting had been acquired by Sweet Briar, twenty-five dollars that Judge Francis Dunne had contributed to the Friends of Art was put toward the purchase and, according to a report in the Sweet Briar News, "the remainder of the bill will be paid next fall unless there are some contributions before then."

The situation of relying entirely upon membership dues and contributions as a source for funds, however, was fortunately soon alleviated somewhat. The year 1937, when the Glackens was purchased, was also an especially important one financially for Sweet Briar for it marked the emergence of the College from debt, and, to quote Martha Lou Lemmon Stohlman, "The treasurer's report made a most satisfying change from red to black." Meta Glass, for it must have been she, immediately put these new circumstances to the advantage of the growing art collection and in the fall of 1938 caused the Board of Overseers to make available for the purchase of original works of art the sum of four hundred and fifty dollars annually.

The intention of the Friends of Art at this time was to buy one or possibly two works of art each year, and it was agreed at the outset that the emphasis would be placed on living American artists. Purchases would be made from special exhibitions composed of works selected at the gallery or galleries in New York by a member of the Art Department. The exhibition from which the Glackens was bought was negotiated by Miss Robinson. In 1938 Miss Wilcox travelled to New York to make a selection at the William Macbeth Gallery and arranged for sixteen paintings, by such artists as Thomas Eakins, George Bellows, Jon Corbino, Winslow Homer, Childe Hassam, Arthur B. Davies, and George Inness, to be sent to Sweet Briar. Scheduled to coincide with Founders' Day, the exhibition, which was hung in Reid, ran from October 23 to November 4. Miss Wilcox gave a gallery talk under the sponsorship of the Friends of Art. From this exhibit was bought Jon Corbino's Rockport Fishermen to which the Friends of Art, barely recovered financially from the Glackens purchase, were able to contribute only thirty dollars, the remaining sum coming from the new Original Paintings Fund administered through the head of the Art Department. The new acquisition was announced at Convocation on December 8, 1938, by Carl Connor (that year president of the Friends of Art) and Edward Linforth, a new member of the Art Department who had come to Sweet Briar from the School of Fine Arts of Yale University to replace the retiring Miss McLaws. In December of the following year a third purchase was made, Paul Cadmus' Two Heads, from an exhibition of paintings selected by Miss Robinson at Midtown Galleries in New York. The decision to buy the painting was made by the new Accessions Committee made up of members of the Art Department and the Friends of Art. The purchase was made entirely with College funds.

After the retirement of Miss McLaws friends and a good many alumnae decided to buy a picture in her honour and a plan was inaugurated by the Friends of Art. In 1940 Miss Robinson arranged for an exhibition of eleven water colours by one artist, Charles Burchfield, through the Frank K. M. Rehn Gallery in New York. The exhibit ran from November 11 to 23 and the Sweet Briar News urged all to consider a "possible choice of one for purchase in honour of Miss Virginia McLaws..." No agreement was reached on a purchase, however, and around Christmas, 1940, Mr. Linforth and another new member of the Art Department, Jovan De Rocco (who replaced Miss Wilcox who resigned towards the end of her sabbatical leave for the year 1939-40), travelled to New York to look at more Burchfields in the Rehn Gallery. Finally, in February of 1941, Burchfield's Brooding Earth was purchased by the Friends of Art in honour of Miss McLaws. Within weeks the college also bought Peter Hurd's The Alamo Tree that was part of an exhibition the previous month of twelve paintings by Hurd from the William Macbeth Gallery. Up to 1943 this painting could generally be seen in Reid Parlor but was then moved to Randolph Parlor.

All during this period, it should be remembered, the Art Department and the Friends of Art continued to bring other exhibitions to campus. In February of 1938 an exhibition of French painters in Reid included works by Mary Cassatt, Gauguin, Monet, Berthe Morisot, Pissarro and Renoir, about which more could be learnt by attending an informal open forum discussion held by the Friends of Art. In April the following year could be seen examples of the work of George Grosz, Paul Klee, Kandinsky, Beckmann, and Chagall, and, six months later, paintings by Delacroix, Courbet, Derain, Glackens, and John Sloan, to mention only a few. From March 1 to 15, 1940, the Art Department sponsored an exhibit of modern French paintings for which Lilienfeld Galleries in New York lent works by Renoir, Chagall, Dufy, Derain, Utrillo, Vlaminck, Signac, Picasso, and Redon. In October twelve paintings by George Grosz could be seen in Reid. Fifty prints by Kathe Kollwitz, a selection from a larger group circulated by the American Association of University Women, were exhibited in the original main hallway of the library in February, 1941. The following April, paintings by John Carroll and Edward Hopper were on view in Reid. In October, 1942, the Museum of Modern Art loaned ten paintings by Picasso. To anyone familiar with these artists and their reputations today, these exhibitions are staggering. I find it quite remarkable and to the outstanding credit of the college that such works were brought to campus at this time.

During this period the College continued to receive gifts. In 1937 Judge Francis Dunne presented through the Friends of Art two etchings and a drypoint print. In March, 1940, an etching entitled New York Harbor was given to Sweet Briar by the artist, Fiske Boyd (husband of Clare Shenehon Boyd, Academy). Towards the end of the same year, Judge Dunne sent another etching. The next year Judge Dunne, who had been a very generous friend and benefactor of Sweet Briar and keenly interested in the art collection and the development of the Friends of Art (of which he was the first "honorary member"), died in San Francisco where he had been Judge of the Superior Court. He had deeply appreciated the cultural advantages offered in the education of his daughter and tried to show this in a tangible way through his friendship and generosity. After his death a close friend, Dr. Sadie D. Patek of San Francisco, sent a contribution to Sweet Briar in his memory, asking that it be used for the purchase of a picture for the art collection. With this contribution was purchased Herbert Gute's water colour Lighthouse, Maine. The painting had been selected from fifteen water colours by Gute, who taught at Yale University's School of Fine Arts, that were on exhibit during "Friends of Art Week" which included an informal talk on Gute's work by John Canaday of the University of Virginia. The President of the Friends of Art at this time was Mr. De Rocco who, in January of 1942, arranged for the French painter Fernand Leger to visit Sweet Briar. While on campus Leger gave two lectures (in French with Mr. De Rocco translating) at which he also showed films, his own Le Ballet Mécanique and René Clair's Entr'acte that illustrated the characteristics of Dadaism. At the time Leger was engaged in painting his latest work The Divers and from an exhibition in Grammer Commons Room of thirty gouache studies for it, presented one to Sweet Briar through the Friends of Art.

The entry of the United States into the war in 1942 had its effects on Sweet Briar. For the art collection and the activities of the Art Department and the Friends of Art it meant mostly that fewer funds would be available. The annual appropriations of four hundred and fifty dollars that had fed the Original Paintings Fund since 1938 was terminated in 1942. Less money, it seems, and the war-time situation hindered the bringing of large exhibitions down from New York. The exhibiting of works of art at Sweet Briar did not cease, however. In April of 1943 the Art Department revived the "picture-of-the-week" idea that had been tried once in 1936. A display area was prepared in the lower corridor of Academic opposite the front door with a backdrop of neutral coloured Monk's cloth and illuminated by flood lights with the idea of having a picture continuously on exhibit. Usually paintings from the collection were exhibited but occasionally a picture was requested from a well-known gallery with the idea of buying it. In February of 1944 a water colour by John Marin that Miss Robinson had had sent from An American Place in New York (then under the directorship of Alfred Stieglitz) was exhibited. This was, in fact, the college's second attempt to buy a John Marin. Around Christmas 1941 Miss Robinson and Mr. De Rocco had travelled to An American Place and selected a painting for possible purchase. Mr. Linforth, however, who had not seen the painting, objected. Moreover, the Original Paintings Fund was short the required amount. The second also failed. It was not until 1949, on the third try, that the college was successful and bought one of two Marins that had been sent by An American Place to be shown separately as the picture-of-the-week in April that year. Lyonel Feininger's In the Channel was also purchased through a picture-of-the-week exhibition. In December of 1944 Miss Robinson, who incidentally had met Feininger in 1937 at Mills College in California, wrote to the Buchholz Gallery in New York, pointing out that Sweet Briar was "considering the purchase" of a Feininger, and asking to have sent "one for our 'Picture of the Week' exhibition and two or three others..." Five were sent and after some haggling with Mr. Feininger himself through the gallery over the price, In the Channel was bought in February 1945.

After the war the United States was a different place and so was Sweet Briar. The atmosphere of pre-war Sweet Briar was gone, or rather had been subtly transformed by a loss of cultural innocence and the new demands of responsible maturity. In April of 1945 Mr. Linforth resigned from the Art Department and was replaced by Dr. Robert Smith. The following year Franz Bernheimer was also hired. In November of 1945 Meta Glass officially announced her resignation and the search for a new president began in earnest.

With Meta Glass passed what could almost be described as a golden age in the history of the College and the art collection. The constant support and encouragement that she had given to the development of the art collection and the Friends of Art was sorely missed. in South N.J. in 1948, the already mentioned John Marin water colour in 1949, and a couple of lithographs by Matisse and Jean Lurcat in 1958, the College more or less allowed the art collection to languish for the next twenty years or so. Interest was not renewed until 1967 when two colour intaglio prints were purchased and an oil painting entitled Return to the Fold by the nineteenth-century Dutch artist Anton Mauve. By this time the Art Department had also changed. Miss Robinson had retired in 1953 and Eleanor Barton had taken her place. In 1958 Loren Oliver became the new instructor in art responsible specifically for studio, and in 1960 Ruth Firm was hired to teach art history.

Fortunately, during this time Sweet Briar continued to receive gifts of works of art. H. A. Granbery's Upper Pasture Lot was given in 1945 by Mr. J. H. Granbery through the Virginia Military Institute, and in May of the same year Mr. and Mrs. Charles Prendergast of Westport, Connecticut, gave the college a water colour entitled Salem Harbor, Maine painted in 1922 by Charles' brother Maurice Prendergast. Some of you may remember that Mr. and Mrs. Charles Prendergast were the war time guardians of Antoinette ("Tony") Le Bris '45 (Mrs. P.J. Maynard of Washington, D.C.). In 1949 a painting by William H. Singer, Jr. entitled Evening Shadows was given to the college by the artist's widow, a cousin of Joseph A. Gilchrist, Jr. (who for a long time was the manager of the Sweet Briar Farm) and of his sister, Elsetta Gilchrist Barnes '27, who was instrumental in obtaining the gift for Sweet Briar. Mrs. Barnes, who functioned as the landscape architect for the college, was also responsible for the second gift from Mrs. Singer of another of her husband's paintings, An Opalescent Morning, in 1955. Two drawings, one by Giovanni Antonio Boltraffio (1467-1516), the other by Agostino Carracci (1557-1602), came into the collection in 1952, the gift of the Alumnae Club of Pittsburgh in memory of Margaret Malone McClements '26, and another more modern ink drawing by Elie Nadelman was given in 1953 by Mme. Helena Rubenstein. In 1956 Mr. and Mrs. Thomas F. Torrey gave the college five mid-nineteenth-century American landscape paintings and, in 1959, Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Marcus of Dallas, Texas, sent a more modern landscape painting by the Italian Bepi Romagnoni. In 1961 Mr. and Mrs. Marcus sent two more gifts of gouache paintings by Bruno Capacci. Mrs. Bernice Lill, who had been the Registrar of Sweet Briar from 1928 to 1947 and then the first Director of Admissions, and who had also been active in the Friends of Art, in 1962 gave a seventeenth-century Italian landscape drawing. In that same year, from the estate of Dr. Sadie D. Patek, in memory of Judge Francis Dunne, came a painting attributed to Rosa Bonheur and a landscape by Jules Dupré. Three nineteenth-century portraits now in Sweet Briar House were received from Clarence B. Rogers in 1967 in memory of his wife, Mary Clark Rogers '13, and in 1970 Miss Ruth Woodhull Smith of Long Island, New York, gave a large collection of Japanese coloured woodblock prints. In 1971 Hugh Pillsbury (father of Jeannette '72 and Hannah '74) gave a colour etching. In 1972 a landscape painting, possibly by the Dutch seventeenth-century Italianate painter Jan Both, came from the estate of Cornelia Wailes Wailes '26. Through contributions made to the Virginia McLaws Fund, an etching by Picasso was acquired in 1973.

The year 1973 also saw an attempt to revive the Friends of Art. The first Friends of Art, founded in 1935, had ceased to exist by the end of the 1950s. But with the renewed interest in art in the late sixties and early seventies, it was suggested by Loren Oliver that the organization be started again. As before, the new Friends of Art, which met for the first time in 1975 under the presidency of Jocelyn Palmer Connors '62, set about building up a fund to be used for the purchase of original works of art. Since 1977 purchases by the Friends of Art have added to the collection paintings by Jules Olitski and Edward Corbett and prints by the School of Mantegna, Rembrandt, Gabor Peterdi, and Mark Tobey.

In 1978 the Friends of Art also bought a piece of sculpture, Isabel McIlvain's Sleeping Female Nude. This was the second piece of sculpture the college had acquired. To this sculpture collection was added Lin Emery's Serendipity, a bronze kinetic sculpture commissioned by Mrs. Harold B. Whiteman Jr. in 1981 in memory of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Maclin P. Davis, and given to Sweet Briar the same year.

Since 1975 with the revival of the Friends of Art a wonderful situation has existed for the art collection. Renewed interest has generated tremendous support among the alumnae, emeriti, parents, students, faculty, staff, and friends of the college that seems to be bringing about a renaissance of art at Sweet Briar. Gifts of works of art have been pouring into the collection. In 1976 Cordelia Penn Cannon '34 made another gift of a conte drawing by Lester Johnson; Helen Murchison Lane, '46, gave a lithograph by Thomas Hart Benton; and Victor Henningsen, Sr., gave two paintings, Richard Miller's Sunny Morning and Carl Wuermer's First Snow. A painting by Jillian Denby arrived in 1977 from Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Cone (parents of Anne '61) and in 1979 Dr. Carol Rice, who had succeeded Dr. Mary Harley as College Physician in 1935 and had retired in 1964, gave a number of Oriental items including several Japanese coloured woodblock prints. The Class of 1979 gave three prints by Jacques Hnizdovsky to the collection, to which Hnizdovsky himself added a gift of one of his own posters in 1980 and earlier this year (1984) further gave one of his own woodcuts. In 1980 Mr. and Mrs. Jack D. Campbell, parents of Amy Campbell '80, gave two lithographs by Rudy Pozzatti. Edna Lee Gilchrist '26 gave six etchings. Several items also came from the estate of Lydia M. Newland, and two gifts from Mrs. Bernice Lill. In 1981, Mr. Henningsen sent two more gifts of lithographs by Richard Stone Reeves, and in 1982 both Mrs. Harold B. Whiteman, Jr., and Chloe Fort Lenderman '62 of Nashville, Tennessee, gave a coloured etching by David Bigelow. Six lithographs of horses were presented as a gift of the Riding Program Faculty and Staff 1982-83, while the Student Riding Council gave a stipple engraving by George Stubbs of a horse named "Sweetbrier."

Last year the collection continued to grow with the addition of an English eighteenth-century portrait, a late eighteenth-century colour etching, and a nineteenth-century engraving given by Betsy Gilmer Tremain '42 of Charlottesville, two further gifts of Mrs. Chloe Fort Lenderman, and a silkscreen print presented by the artist Ann Jacombs Pakradooni of the Class of 1943. Just before Christmas arrived two paintings, one by Albert Bierstadt, the gift of Mr. and Mrs. Michael B. Wray (Mary Denny Scott '61) of Houston, Texas, and the other by A. C. Goodwin, the gift of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph R. Pellegrino of North Andover, Massachusetts, the parents of Carla, class of '84. Thus the collection grows.

Those gathered on the platform at Convocation on October 31, 1935, to introduce the Friends of Art and explain how this new organization hoped to start an art collection at Sweet Briar, could they be here today, would recognize a dream come true. Sweet Briar now has a large and growing art collection supported especially by the Friends of Art and through the generosity of many contributors. That first painting by William Glackens that the Friends of Art struggled to buy for the college in 1937 cost then six hundred and fifty dollars. It is now worth over twenty thousand and is part of a collection valued in excess of half a million dollars. Sweet Briar has much of which to be proud.

Another dream spoken at Convocation in 1935 has come true only this year. After explaining that it was the intended purpose of the Friends of Art to buy original works of art, Miss Robinson added that "some... have the foresight to see some time in the future a lovely gallery on the campus where these pictures will be available to all who wish to see them." She probably did not suspect for a moment that the Old Refectory would, almost fifty years later, become that gallery. But neither did she, nor those on the platform with her, doubt that one day there would be a gallery at Sweet Briar, and an art collection to put in it. □

The Friends of Art

by Jessica Bemis Ward '63

If a collection of art is not one of the things you remember as an outstanding feature of Sweet Briar, prepare yourself for a nice surprise when you visit the renovated Refectory Gallery.

Probably most alumnae do not recall a Sweet Briar Collection at all. Certainly members of the Board of the newly resurrected Friends of Art did not when Ninie Laing from the History of Art Department took them on a walking tour of the Collection several years ago. As they trailed from building to building around the campus on a treasure hunt through various administrative offices, cubicles, corridors and parlors to see works by Feininger, Hurd, Burchfield, Durer, Rembrandt, Glackens, Prendergast, Picasso and more, they grew more and more exhilarated.

Eureka! Where had this trove come from and where had it been?

Jessica Bemis Ward '63 (Mrs. Peter O. Ward, Jr., of Lynchburg) majored in History of Art at Sweet Briar. As a volunteer for the College, she has served as a Bulb Chairman, on the Planned Giving Committee, and as the second Chairman of the revived Friends of Art, in which position she was instrumental in organizing and carrying out the very successful "Collectors' Symposium". Her favorite non-Sweet Briar volunteer job was being a docent at the National Gallery in Washington. She is also the long-distance manager of a family business in Arkansas.

Friends of Art I: 1935-1957

After it was established in 1935, the Friends of Art was a vigorous organization which provided students of its time with a sophisticated stream of lectures and exhibits. More importantly for Sweet Briar today it began to assemble a solid base of distinguished art for the College.

Dr. Florence Robinson was the first president of the Friends when it was organized in 1935. Looking at the concurrent histories of the Friends and Miss Robinson at Sweet Briar, one can only conclude that she was a crucial force in the activities which supplied such a strong beginning for the Sweet Briar Collection. The existence of the first generation of Friends of Art spans almost exactly the years that Miss Robinson was active in the Department of Art at Sweet Briar. Indeed after she retired from the Department in 1953, infrequent accounts of the organization in the Sweet Briar News suggest little activity generated by the group and in 1957 it dissolved. The most exciting events and purchases appear to have been made during the first years when Miss Robinson was directly involved as an officer of the Friends, though credit for the forward-looking shape the Collection took is surely shared with others in her department. Some of the early choices of art and lecturers seem surprising in a department headed by someone whose doctorate was in the classics.

Miss Robinson had come to the Department of Art by a curious route through the Department of Classical Languages. She had taught Greek and Latin at Sweet Briar until a grant from the Carnegie Corporation came to the college in 1932 to strengthen programs in the fine arts. At that time Miss Meta Glass had plucked Miss Robinson from her position teaching ancient languages to oversee the development of the Department of Art.

Miss Robinson's writing reveals the clear-thinking, organized, principled and educated person she undoubtedly was. In an article in 1936 about art at Sweet Briar she lists one of the values of studio art as being that "the student with no powers of concentration is given a picture of her own flabbiness in her art laboratory work. If she must class herself as a 'spineless invertebrate,' from the results, she begins to see, through her efforts, that the study of art is a disciplined, orderly procedure as well as an experience of beauty."

One can only speculate how much Miss Robinson's views and influence were tempered by others who joined her in establishing the Friends. The original Board was undoubtedly leavened and balanced by the presence of such members as Dr. Carl Connor who, though he was a scholarly member of the English Department, is remembered as having an erudite sense of humor and a range of dilettantish enthusiasms. Another member of the first Board, also a member of the Department of Art, was Lois Wilcox whose expertise and interest lay in contemporary art. Indeed, she had worked as assistant to the Mexican muralist Orozco, and it can be assumed from the contemporary direction the early Collection took that she had a good degree of influence. The alliance of members of the charter Board was happy for the College, however well the personalities meshed.

The first year, there were at least three exhibitions imported into Sweet Briar. One of these was an exhibit of paintings from the John D. Rockefeller, Jr., Collection at the Museum of Modern Art which was accompanied by a lecture, "The Nature of Abstract Art," by Dr. Meyer Shapiro. A reception featuring a George Washington's Birthday theme followed Dr. Shapiro's talk and is amusing to imagine. On that occasion the first acquisition for the Sweet Briar Collection came in the form of a colour drawing by the French Modernist Marie Laurencin. It was the gift of Gerdna von Briesen Neuhauser of New York City.

gram was started. The first solo exhibit was a Sixteenth Century Flemish portrait lent for the purpose by a New York gallery. Apparently Miss Robinson maintained a strong influence on the Friends organization as indicated in an article in April 1937 in the Sweet Briar News which assured the reader that an exhibition of paintings (including works by William Glackens) had been "personally chosen by Miss Robinson."

Miss Robinson took another term as Friends' president for the next school year in the fall of 1937, and what a dazzling year that was for the arts at Sweet Briar! In February of 1938 there was an exhibit of paintings including ones by Cassatt, Gauguin, Monet, Morisot, Pissarro and Renoir. Glorious understatement prevails in the account in the Sweet Briar News on February 23, 1938: "Students of art will welcome the opportunity afforded by this exhibition to study the color methods of some of the Impressionists first hand."

It was also in that school year that $650 was raised to buy one of the most prized paintings in the Sweet Briar Collection, William Glackens' Daisies and Anemones. The cost of the Glackens was a goal less sure than one might think, since the first Friends' membership did not extend much beyond those students and faculty present on campus, and since the annual membership fee in the Friends was one dollar and $50 bought a Life Membership! Happily, the father of Alison Dunne Harrison in the class of 1935 befriended the arts at Sweet Briar. He donated $25 toward the Glackens and appears to have underwritten the purchase. We have the Glackens ready to be hung in the new gallery to prove that the combined efforts of the Friends and Judge Dunne were a success. If ever there is created a category of Best Friends of Art at Sweet Briar, surely it should be done in honor of Judge Dunne who appears repeatedly in the records as a contributor and supporter of Sweet Briar Friends' causes.

Articles in the Sweet Briar News

suggest a slackening of the number of events sponsored by the Friends after Miss Robinson's tenure. That is not to say that the Friends of Art did not continue to enhance the cultural life at Sweet Briar well into the fifties; it continued to sponsor lectures by and movies about artists, to provide a rental collection of reproductions available for dormitory rooms and to help with some of the College's purchases of art.

A noteworthy year was 1941 when Dr. Jovan De Rocco was president of the Friends. At that time Fernand Leger brought an exhibit of his works to campus. A significant piece in the Sweet Briar Collection is a gouache study by Leger, all the more valued because it was presented to the College by the artist.

In the fall of 1941, the Friends celebrated "Friends of Art Week." In addition to an exhibit of watercolours by Herbert Gute of Yale, John Canaday gave an informal lecture. Later Mr. Canaday was art critic for the New York Times and his Mainstreams of Modern Art was used as a text at Sweet Briar.

Important acquisitions, exhibitions and lectures spangled the twenty-year life of Friends I. For whatever reason, though, the group fell dormant for the twenty years after 1957.

Friends of Art II: 1977-

Anyone witness to the founding of the Friends of Art in 1935 must have had a sense of déjà vu when it was re-established in 1977. The stated aims of developing the Sweet Briar Collection and sponsoring activities related to art were almost identical. In addition the creators of Friends I and Friends II shared the dream of a campus gallery where a Sweet Briar Collection could be assembled and cared for.

In 1976 a group which included President and Mrs. Harold Whiteman, Cordelia Penn Cannon '34, Ninie Laing '57 and Loren Oliver of the Department of Art gathered with the intention of resurrecting the Friends of Art. They wished to reinforce the strength of the arts at Sweet Briar and to make accessible the art which the College already possessed. Harold Whiteman was well aware that the mini-gallery on the walls of the President's offices was rarely visited by students. Deedie Whiteman was eager to make sure that works, such as the prized Glackens which hung in the parlor at Sweet Briar House, were more generally available to view.

That group wisely tapped, as first chairman of the new Friends, Jocelyn Palmer Connors '62 who possessed the charm and perseverance to set the organization solidly on its feet. She remembers trekking around the Sweet Briar campus to consider possible places for a gallery. Coincidental to the search for a location for the hoped-for gallery was the College's conclusion that facilities in the old Refectory were not adequate to handle feeding the whole student body and that it was economically unwise to continue to run two dining halls. The happy solution to both problems was the imaginative reuse of the beloved Refectory as a gallery for the Sweet Briar Collection.

The new Friends of the seventies began to make important purchases the year after they were organized. Members of the Department of Art drew up a wish-list based on needs in the teaching collection. In 1979 the Friends of Art, using membership funds it had raised, purchased a Gabor Peterdi drypoint and the Rembrandt etching, Return of the Prodigal Son.

To celebrate the renewed emphasis on the arts at Sweet Briar, the Friends staged a Symposium on Collecting in the spring of 1980. The Sue Reid Slaughter Fund provided an appearance by the dazzling Rosamund Bernier who spoke on Catherine the Great as a Collector. She gave a special bonus informal talk at which she told of life in Paris where as co-editor of L'Oeil she was friends with Picasso, Matisse, Braque, Leger, Ernst and many others. Apart from this celebrated import, an outstanding feature of the event was the extent to which the speakers were part of the Sweet Briar family. Carolyn Rusch von Endt '71 came from her job in conservation at the Smithsonian to speak about the care of works in a private collection. Alumna Estelle Sinclair '40 who has written extensively about cut glass, inspired her audience into a new appreciation of Grandmother's cut glass. A delightful part of the program was Joseph H. Davenport, Jr. (husband of Hedy Edwards '45), from Chattanooga, who has since become a member of the Sweet Briar Boards of Directors and Overseers and who has been the prime mover in the drive to collect funds for the conversion of the Refectory. He gave an engaging first-hand account of collecting for the Chattanooga Museum. One of the major attractions for the three-day event was Clement Conger, also a member of Sweet Briar's Board of Overseers, who is curator for the White House and for the Diplomatic Reception Rooms at the State Department, where, in both cases, he has done a magical job of collecting masterpieces of American furniture. Another alumna, Barbara Babcock Millhouse '56, President of Reynolda House in Winston Salem, N.C., and author of American Wilderness, a History of the Hudson River School, gave a very personal account of collecting from a private and from a professional point of view.

It was rewarding to find when putting together the Symposium that such an impressive row of speakers could be lined up largely from in-house talent. It was a time for the surfacing of those in the Sweet Briar family who have excelled in careers in art. As the Friends had hoped, the Symposium served well as a rallying point for those interested in renewed focus on the arts at Sweet Briar.

Invigorated by the Symposium and then by news of the College's decision to provide a gallery, the Friends of Art has continued to have a lively part in the enrichment of the College. Realizing that dealing at long distance was an unwise way to shop for art, the Board of the Friends voted to sponsor a trip to New York for two members of the Department of Art in the summer of 1981. The trip resulted in an exhibition based on a loan of twenty-one works on paper from four New York galleries. Entitled "Mantegna to Rauschenberg: Six Centuries of Prints," the exhibit contained a drypoint by Mary Cassatt, two etchings by Jacques Callot and a Durer woodcut. Reminiscent of the practice of the Friends in the thirties, the Board was asked to choose a work from the loaned exhibition for purchase. The selection was an engraving from the School of Mantegna titled Procession of Senators, from the "Triumphs of Caesar" series, having been recommended by the Department of Art as important to its teaching collection.

Another purchase was made in 1981 when an exhibit of graphics by Mark Tobey came to campus.

In the spring of 1982, the Friends of Art sponsored a Christie's Discovery Day at Sweet Briar. The New York Fine Art Auctioneers came to campus with a team of experts prepared to evaluate furniture, paintings, silver, Oriental art and all manner of other decorative objects (described as "anything that sits on a coffee table"). Although familiar to those in cities, the Appraisal Day at Sweet Briar was the first in this part of Virginia. Seeing what others had brought was a chief source of fun at a gala evening when a cocktail buffet eased the waiting time until one's own treasures could be considered. There were surprises both good and bad as the Christie's team reviewed objects large and small, cumbersome and compact, recognizable and unrecognizable. Formerly precious objects were demoted to dishwasher fodder and others were pronounced genuine treasures. Regardless of the upward or downward mobility of one's possessions that day, treasure owners and former treasure owners had a grand time.

Lynn Kahler Berg '76 is a long time member of the Friends' Board and is its current chairman. She and those on her Special Events Committee are planning to make Sweet Briar's gallery opening an occasion to remember. After all, it is an event toward which those in the arts at Sweet Briar have been working since 1935 when Miss Robinson first cited a need for a gallery. The Friends urge you to come see the Refectory in its becoming new role and to see the Sweet Briar Collection which has been the College's best kept secret. In the meantime, if anyone hears of a roving exhibit including a few paintings by Impressionists such as, say, Cassatt, Gauguin, Monet, Morisot, Pissarro and Renoir, please ring the Department of Art. □

The Class of 1984!

An election year, an Olympic year, the year of George Orwell's novel, the year of your graduation, a year that is now a part of you forever.

You will celebrate it with reunions and fond memories. Some of you will be married in 1984, others will start careers, and still others will gather more information in graduate school.

However you live it, this year marks the end of the greatest growth period in your lives and thrusts you into the mainstream of a new way of life: new friends, new experiences, new family and new responsibilities. It is now your own "new world" that you will be forming and you will have an easier time than many your age because you have Sweet Briar as a major part of your background. You will have a strength and a confidence in yourself that can guide you in any direction you choose. You need only call on it for an inner strength to embrace the world you will meet, now that it is your turn to shape the future.

I have some ideas to share with you in areas that are of concern to me and I'll concentrate on the media, specifically television. I feel that the little set in your living room will become a greater part of your lives than you ever dreamed or imagined, and that you may have to help guide its development into a creative, constructive and educational force rather than the monster that it might become if allowed to reproduce itself.

But first, let me tell you a little about me and the Sweet Briar College that I have known, and known particularly well since I graduated. That splendid year was 1960, a few years ago. In fact, next year will be my 25th reunion. It's extraordinary to me that I am now one of the little old ladies that I used to watch return to campus year after year. It never occurred to me that I could possibly live that long, let alone have the strength to return. My mother also graduated from Sweet Briar. She died at the end of my junior year, and did not see her daughter graduate but, between the two of us, I think we must be the longest line of Yankees to have graced the campus. My grandfather's boxwood bushes still encircle the president's house (or I would like to think they do; I don't really know the life-span of a boxwood).

Sweet Briar never leaves you. Your classmates and teachers will haunt you for the rest of your life. You will be required to have a guest room, or at least a comfortable couch, on hand forever, I suspect, because they will be dropping in no matter where you are in the world! My work has taken me to the New York stage, small towns all over America, obscure islands of the Indian Ocean, not to mention the Atlantic, Pacific and Mediterranean, the bush of Kenya, the major cities of the world in Europe, Asia, Africa, Central America. There was always Sweet Briar, and always welcome and warm and helpful; a phone call, a lunch, advice, shopping hints, always a schoolmate or retired professor to make me feel at home, no matter where I was in the world!

Even in business, when on the board of the Screen Actors Guild, I found myself at a negotiating table looking straight into the eyes of my sophomore roommate who, as a lawyer, was representing the other side. And there was the day in Kenya in the bush that I ran into an old Sweet Briar friend on safari. We quietly sang the Sweet Briar song (the old song, mind you, the "Sweet Briar, Sweet Briar, Flower Fair" song). Yes, you would have been very embarrassed, but we thought it was terrific! One afternoon in Nairobi, when I was filming the series Born Free, the husband of a classmate from Lynchburg, VA, introduced himself. He and his son had been on safari and had had enough of the dust and insects and were returning home. I suggested they visit the coast city of Mombasa, but they couldn't wait to return to Lynchburg and Sweet Briar!

I know how they felt because I have always returned, just to touch base with my roots and sit under a tree and gain strength, strength for what can be a fairly rough world from time to time. My excuses were varied...I had to see the new chapel, science building, riding facility or direct in the new theatre...but those were just excuses to walk quietly down to the lake or stroll in the Dell. Today I'm returning with my husband, Robert, who has been led into the Sweet Briar circle with some wonder, but he will now know me the better for having been here.

My world of college was far more cloistered than yours has been. I entered the mainstream from a very comfortable and protected place. The mainstream, at that time, started after school. Your Sweet Briar, with its work programs and in the modernization of its study program, has eased you into the mainstream before graduation. How necessary this is in today's fast and competitive world!

What is that vast world out there? How does it view women? How do women view themselves?

I have researched some facts for you simply for your information... not to incite you to revolt or to upset you, or for you to study, but facts that should simply become a part of you to be processed as you wish.

1. The average American woman will be in the work force for 28 years; the average man, 35 years.
2. Women on the average earn 59-62 cents an hour for every dollar earned by men.
  - a) In the Screen Actors Guild, less than .01 percent of the membership makes over $100,000. Men take home 81.8 percent of that and actresses 18.2 percent.
  - b) In commercials (there are far fewer roles for women than for men; they are outnumbered by more than two to one, but the disparities are greater in the more lucrative categories) 93 percent of off-camera speaking principals are men and 71 percent of off-camera singing principals; 70 percent of the non-speaking roles are played by women. Moreover, when the number of roles in a commercial increases, the employment of women does not.
3. Women age 18 to 34: Seventy-five percent wish to combine homemaking and career. Twenty-nine percent actually live their chosen pattern in life, and 91 percent of all American women have worked at least part time. For women, increased education makes possible jobs as teachers and nurses, but does not increase the proportions in management positions.

4. Including the women who have no income of their own, 75 percent of all women have individual incomes of less than $6,000 a year, and only 14 percent make more than $10,000.
5. Only 37 percent feel confident of their ability to buy a home.
6. Eighty-five percent of adult women have been married. Two-thirds are currently married and two-thirds think a woman can lead a happy and full life without marriage. Women your age agree by a two-thirds majority that a working mother can establish rapport with her children.
7. Women agree that they should be more politically active and should be encouraged to seek elective and appointive posts at all levels

I entered the mainstream from a very comfortable and protected place. The mainstream, at that time, started after school. Your Sweet Briar, with its work programs and in the modernization of its study program, has eased you into the mainstream before graduation.

of government; however only 52 percent of you in the 18-24-year-old group are registered to vote!

Today's young adult women are very unlike their grandmothers. The trend is apparent toward a lifestyle in which women will play a larger role in the ranks of the employed and a more equal role in the responsibilities within the family. The move is toward a lifestyle in which women will share with men the provision of financial and emotional support of children and their physical care and a lifestyle in which who supports the family or pays alimony or obtains child custody if the family breaks up will depend upon who is best able to do so. The trend is also towards a lifestyle that provides more options for the woman who never marries.

Before such lifestyles are possible, however, women will need to overcome some handicaps. Their in-and-out-and-back-in pattern in the labor force serves to hold their wages and salaries down. They are not making major inroads into administration, management or the skilled trades. However, today's young women have prepared themselves with far more education than their grandmothers had, and this will be one route to better jobs and pay.

Women are changing. The things they do, the things they want, the way they feel about themselves are changing.

Now the media. How does it reflect women? Magazines and newspapers reflect better than TV ads. Only five percent of today's women feel they can find themselves in the media.

The United Nations Provisional Agenda for Mass Communication Media was handed a mandate from women world-wide: "A major obstacle in improving the status of women lies in public attitudes and values regarding women's roles in society. At the present time the media tend to reinforce traditional attitudes, often portraying an image of women that is degrading and humiliating, and fail to reflect the changing role of the sexes. Those in control of the media should seek to raise public consciousness with respect to these changing roles, and the serious concern that both women and men have about important issues that attack their families, communities and society at large. They should be urged to project a more accurate image of women (as well as men) and to take into account the diversity of women's roles and their actual and potential contribution to society.

This is the way it is today in advertising's cliché-country:

- a) The breathless woman waiting for big daddy to give a nod to her new brand of coffee or margarine.
- b) The woman who lives in a cocoon of germ-free, high-gloss splendor that all her friends and neighbors notice and admire.
- c) The woman whose wash is white or whose drain is less clogged.

d) If you see a woman in travel advertising, she's probably an airline hostess, a rent-a-car clerk, or posing in a bikini. If you do see a woman passenger, she's likely to be a bedazzled bride clinging to her husband or a befuddled mommy clinging to her kids and her husband. Nobody would guess that women travel on business!

If advertising taught you all you know about our culture you certainly wouldn't guess that many American women have jobs. Once in a while, a working woman is portrayed. There is a mini-trend, though, toward depicting the woman who is happily fulfilled in traditional areas, as wife and mother, and who, in addition, holds a job she likes.

And now television.

Women are under-represented in the world of television. The percentage of women portrayed in leading roles is less than their overall 32% representation on television.

A larger percentage of women are portrayed in the 20-39 year old age group than are men. Younger women are also portrayed as "sexier."

In problem solving, men are portrayed as being resolvers of problems. Women are portrayed in traditional female occupations (secretary, nurse) having low occupational authority. Women are supervisees, men are supervisors.

Women generally do not use force, but are victims of force. Males are forceful.

We all know how women are portrayed in film and television, and heaven only knows that after 40 there aren't any women — that is until they are grandmothers. I wonder where they all disappear to? I hope a lovely place such as Sweet Briar — until they are brought out again into the mainstream!

Now some facts on television's effects on our everyday lives and in particular on our children:

Does it stimulate viewers to violence or aggressive acts? George Gerbner, dean of the Annenberg School of Communications at the University of Pennsylvania finds that violence on TV cultivates exaggerated assumptions about the threat of danger in the real world. The exaggerated sense of risk and insecurity may lead to increasing demands for protection, and to increasing pressure for the use of force by established authority. Instead of threatening the social order, TV may have become our chief instrument of social control. He goes on to explain TV is different from all the other media.

From cradle to grave, it penetrates nearly every home in the land. Unlike newspapers and magazines, TV does not require literacy. Unlike the movies, it runs continuously. Unlike radio, it can show as well as tell. Unlike the theatre or movies, it does not require leaving your home. With virtually unlimited access, TV both precedes literacy, and increasingly, preempts it.

messages and images, and the assumptions embedded in them. TV offers a universal curriculum that everyone can learn.

Imagine its effect on children! By the time the average American child reaches public school, he has already spent several years in an electronic nursery school. At the age of 10 the average youngster spends more time in front of the TV screen than in the classroom. Nearly half of 12-year-olds watch an average of six or more hours of TV per day.

Television is changing as we delve into cable, satellite, and all the new electronics. We are entering an exciting and possibly frightening era of satellite control and transmission. A significant change could come in the '90s when, on home screens both large and small, we may receive both text and video material. Some systems could be interactive and we could become, if we so choose, our own editors, selecting from an index text and video stories, calling them up at will in response to our personal information needs. The information services to which we subscribe could automate the process for us. We could receive all video, or all text, or a combination of the two.

The impact of this on our journalism, on our society, on our businesses and on ourselves will be dramatic, but no more dramatic than watching a television screen reveal a man on the moon and then to step outside and look up at that moon and realize that something monumental in the history of man is occurring, to see schools integrated, to see women walk through doors opened for the first time, to see people care for the environment, to fish in streams once foul with pollution.

Enough of all these thoughts and facts and problems and crises! This is a day for celebration, the celebration of being a young woman in the mainstream. It is deliriously exciting to be a young woman and a not-so-young woman. All the choices are yours to make: mother, wife, business woman, confidante, teacher — all or none of those things. But, just one reminder — an anecdote that I recall as extremely pertinent:

There was a time three business people showed up at Heaven's gate at the very same moment. "So happy to see you," St. Peter told the first businessman. "Would you mind just taking this simple entry test?"

"Certainly," the man smiled, pleased to comply.

"Fine," said St. Peter. "Spell God."

To the next businessman, St. Peter offered the same greeting, and administered the same test.

Finally, to the third business person, a woman, St. Peter again asked if she would mind taking the entry exam.

"Tests, tests, tests," she said. "I had to work three times as hard as a man on earth, and now I have to take a test to get into heaven?"

"Oh, it's very simple," St. Peter said. "Spell Czechoslovakia."

Thank-you! and have a very good time out there! □

Alumnae Luncheon Honors Retiring Faculty and Staff

On the occasion of their retirements, tributes and gifts were given to Dr. Marshall and Mrs. Blackwell at the Alumnae Reunion luncheon May 26, 1984.

Other retirees, Mrs. Marie-Thérèse Sommerville and Mrs. Christine Caldwell Faulconer, were unable to be present at the luncheon.

Mary Hughes Vaughan Blackwell

Mrs. Blackwell, who is a registered nurse, received her training at the Elizabeth Buxton Hospital School of Nursing and later studied nursing education at the University of Virginia. In 1976 the Alumnae Association made her an honorary alumna, one of only four people so honored. Among her varied responsibilities as Assistant to the Director of the Alumnae Association, has been serving as Assistant Editor of this publication.

Christine Caldwell Faulconer

Mrs. Faulconer has been secretary-bookkeeper-office manager in the Buildings and Grounds office since 1943, handling a multitude of emergencies, requests, and complaints with efficiency, calmness, and unflinching politeness and good humor. She is a graduate of Appomattox High School and attended Virginia Commercial College. Mrs. Faulconer's connection with Sweet Briar began in 1936 when her father became head of Security at the College and the family lived on the campus. Her sister, Mrs. Betsy Caldwell Selvage, also continued the Sweet Briar connection by working part time for some years in the Buildings and Grounds Department.

Mary Hughes Blackwell by Alice Cary Farmer Brown '59

Sweet Briar College will never be the same after June the first, for on that day our beloved Mary Hughes Blackwell will retire.

She has been loved by all who have been fortunate to know her:

1. The Administration — she has served with three presidents: Anne Pannell for 19 years, Harold Whiteman for 12 years, and just now with our beautiful Nenah Fry for her first year as our new president.
2. The Faculty — scores of them during her 32 years here.
3. The Students — three of whom were her daughters.
4. And, perhaps most of all, by us — the Alumnae.

Mary Hughes came to Sweet Briar in 1952 as the Assistant in Alumnae and Development Affairs. In 1958, the additional responsibility of coordinating national sales of Sweet Briar bulbs became her challenge, one she has continued to meet with enthusiasm, patience, and success! In 1961, she was appointed Assistant to the Director of the Alumnae Association.

She is an Honorary member of the Class of 1928 — and she most certainly is an active member of the Class of 1959! How much all Alumnae have appreciated her warmth, her sincere desire to help any of us at any time to solve any size problem, her compassion, her humility, and her beautiful spirit.

She is more than the gorgeous, strong, red tulip that is named for her — the tulip blooms in the spring, but Mary Hughes Blackwell blooms in all seasons.

Robert C. Marshall

Marie Thérèse Sommerville

Mr. Marshall holds B.A. and M.A. degrees from Rice University, the Ph.D. degree from Yale, and a diploma from the University of Siena in Italy. He has studied and done research under grants from the American Council on Language Study (ACLS), the Fulbright Act, and the Danforth Foundation. He has edited several textbooks dealing with French literature, including plays by Jean Paul Sarte and surrealist dramatists of the twenties, as well as publishing numerous articles and critical reviews.

Mrs. Sommerville has been professor of French at Sweet Briar since 1965, having come from a position as chief of the French branch of the Defense Language Institute, Washington, DC. Mrs. Sommerville holds the Licence en Droit from the University of Paris Law School, Diplome from Paris Institute of Political Science, Licence en Lettres from the Paris (Sorbonne), and Pedagogic Certificate from the Academy of Paris. Her teaching and writing specialty was twentieth-century French theatre, though she also taught the French language in conversation, phonetics, and composition courses. Mrs. Sommerville, a native of France, has returned to Paris to live.

Dr. Robert C. Marshall

by Victoria Bates Roy '74

Dr. Marshall came to Sweet Briar in 1972, just in time to send some of you — and me — off to France for a fabulous junior year abroad. In 1980, the French Government bestowed upon him the title "Chevalier dans l'Ordre des Palmes Academiques" for his contributions to the spreading of the French language and culture and for his encouragement of cordial relations between France and the United States. We need consider only a few of his accomplishments as Director of the Junior Year in France program and as teacher of French at Sweet Briar to appreciate how deserving of this honor he is.

As Director of the Junior Year in France, Dr. Marshall made the junior year abroad experience a possibility for a broader spectrum of students by traveling to universities around the country to bring the program to their attention and by encouraging students who were not French majors to participate in the program.

To help Junior Year in France participants finance their studies abroad, Dr. Marshall established two new scholarships, the 25th Anniversary and the R. John Matthew Scholarship Funds, and brought the already existing Arthur S. Bates Memorial Fund under the aegis of the Junior Year in France Office.

But directors of Junior Year Abroad programs not only have to find ways to bring students on board; they also need to ensure that their program changes with the times to remain a viable option for today's students. Dr. Marshall saw the Paris office through two successful moves and oversaw the smooth transition from ocean to air transportation to and from France.

As a member of the Sweet Briar faculty, Dr. Marshall was instrumental in bringing about innovations within the French Department. In particular, he influenced changes in the Senior Seminar. As a student of his in the seminar, I remember that he was especially skillful at giving assignments which helped to tie together what we had learned in the previous three years.

With all his duties, Dr. Marshall still found time to serve as president of the Virginia chapter of the American Association of Teachers of French and as president of the Lynchburg chapter of the Alliance Francaise, creating closer ties between Sweet Briar and the local community. □

REVISED BY-LAWS

During the past few years, the By-Laws of the Alumnae Association have been amended several times. Available printed copies are difficult to read because of the many corrections, so it seemed advisable to print the total revised edition which reflects the proposed changes. Many of the changes are in wording, in numbering or in other mechanics. Those which have not been voted on by the alumnae are listed below, and will be acted on at the Annual Meeting of the Alumnae Association held during fall council in October.

Article IV — Officers

Sec. 2 — Officers

.d. Secretary — add “and the annual meeting of the Alumnae Association”

Article V — Executive Board

Sec. 3 — Duties — delete last sentence of secretary’s duties

Article VIII — Committees

Sec. 1 — Standing Committees — reword a. and b.

Sec. 3 — Members of Committees — reword

Art. IX — Alumnae Office Personnel

Sec. 2 — duties expanded

Article X — Nominations and Elections

Sec. 2 — Nominations — delete b. and restructure d.

Article XI — Alumnae Members of the Board of Overseers

Sec. 3 — Procedure for Nomination — reword b. and c.

Sec. 4 — Elections — delete

Article XIII — Finance

Sec. 1 — Committee — delete
Sec. 3 — Alumnae Fund

b. replace by Article IV — Officers, Sec. 2 e.

b. The President of the Association shall have served a term on the Executive Board. The other officers shall be members of the Association.

Section 2. Duties

a. The duties of the President shall be to call and preside at all meetings of the Association and the Executive Board; to appoint the chairmen of such special committees as the Executive Board deems necessary to carry on the work of the Association; and to perform such other duties as pertain to her office. She is a member ex officio of the Board of Overseers of the College. She shall remain as an advisory member of the Executive Board, without a vote, for one year following her term of office. ## Sweet Briar Given Rare Copy of the Declaration of Independence

Sweet Briar College has been given a rare copy of the Declaration of Independence by Mrs. Rosemary Frey Rogers of Gallatin, Tenn., Class of 1934, in memory of her father, Clarence N. Frey, and uncle, Walter J. Frey, both of Cincinnati. Her gift was made on the occasion of her fiftieth class reunion last spring at Sweet Briar.

According to Mrs. Rogers, this is the ninth copy of the Declaration of Independence, one of 200 copies dated July 4, 1823, and engraved on vellum. These copies were authorized in 1820 by John Quincy Adams, then Secretary of State, who had William J. Stone engrave an exact copy of the original Declaration. This copper plate today is exhibited in the National Archives near the original copy.

The 200 1823 copies were distributed as follows: two each to each of the surviving Signers, to President James Monroe and Vice President Daniel D. Tompkins, and to former President James Madison and the Marquis de Lafayette. Twenty went to the two houses of Congress and the remainder were given to governors of states and various officials.

Of the eight other known copies of this earliest reproduction, the Houghton Library at Harvard University owns one, which they consider one of their "proudest possessions," and the State of New Hampshire owns another. The copy given to Sweet Briar was examined, tested, and authenticated by Mr. George Martin Cunha, director emeritus of the New England Document Conservation Center in Andover, Mass.

Mrs. Rogers said that "the experts believe that approximately 25 copies of the 1823 Declaration of Independence will eventually surface. As of this time, to the best of my knowledge, my copy is only the ninth copy known to exist."

Mrs. Rogers found her copy a few years ago rolled up in the bottom of an old family trunk. She does not know how it came to be in her family. Though friends suggested she sell the document, she elected to give it to Sweet Briar.

Mrs. Rogers is a businesswoman who started her career as head of the College Department of the American Book Company, Cincinnati Division. She went on to become advertising manager and director of design for Globe Wernicke of Sheller-Globe Corp., and later was advertising manager for Cosco Business Furniture, Inc. in Gallatin.

She is currently vice president of the State Association for Preservation of Tennessee Antiquities, which operates 12 historic sites throughout Tennessee. Recently the Tennessee Historical Commission awarded her a certificate of merit for her work with the famous federal mansion Cragfont, which is operated by the APTA.

Don't forget that Lois Ballenger is hoping for alumnae's reminiscences about President Meta Glass. Please send them to her at Westminster-Canterbury 501 VES Road, Apt. B-110 Lynchburg, VA 24503

Help Decorate Sweet Briar House

Can you help with decorations and furnishings for Sweet Briar House? Items donated are tax deductible and will be recognized as a gift in kind to Sweet Briar College. The following list itemizes some things that are needed, but if you have other items that might be used, please let us know.

1. Room-size oriental carpets for the two west parlors and for the President's study.
2. Flower vases and urns for use on the mantles and tables.
3. A pair of large English hunt prints or bird prints for the dining room over the sideboard.
4. Framed traditional prints for use elsewhere in the house.

Sweet Briar Scholarship Named for Bertha Pfister Wailes

The Sweet Briar Alumnae Club of Amherst and Nelson Counties, which annually awards a scholarship to a local student who attends the College, recently renamed its scholarship The Bertha Pfister Wailes Scholarship in honor of this outstanding alumna. The Club raises funds for the scholarship by selling Sweet Briar flower bulbs and through other projects.

Mrs. Wailes, who was born in Zurich, Switzerland, lived for a time in Wisconsin before she moved with her parents to a farm near Amherst in 1912. She graduated from Sweet Briar in 1917, with a major in chemistry and history, and later worked for four years on the research staff of the State Institution of Eastern Pennsylvania.

Her marriage to Ben Wailes brought her back to Amherst County in 1921 and two years later she returned to Sweet Briar to teach German. In 1924 she instituted the College's first sociology course and received her master's degree in sociology from the University of Virginia in 1928.

Mrs. Wailes retired from Sweet Briar in 1960, but continued to teach until 1966. She was visiting lecturer at Randolph-Macon Woman's College, 1966-67, and then returned to Sweet Briar once more as a visiting lecturer in sociology, 1968-69. She holds the distinction of being the only person who has known all seven of Sweet Briar's presidents.

Mrs. Wailes' service to Amherst County and the State has also been extensive and distinguished. She is a former member of the Board of Directors of the Metropolitan Lynchburg Chapter of the American Red Cross; a former member of the Board of Visitors of the University of Virginia and chairman of its committee on Mary Washington College; a former member of the Board of Directors of the Educational Foundation of Virginia Polytechnic Institute; and a former member of the Virginia Commission on the Status of Women.

Mrs. Wailes now lives at the Westminster-Canterbury Retirement Complex in Lynchburg.

Winter Term in Vienna

A Winter Term course abroad entitled "The Art and Culture of Vienna" is being offered this January by Diane Moran, Assoc. Prof. of Art History. Emphasis will be placed on the visual arts and architecture, but music and history will be included. Lectures, tours, concerts and balls are on the agenda. Interested alumnae should contact Prof. Moran for further information.

Who's Who Among Students

Certificates of membership for 1983-84 inductees into Who's Who Among Students in American Universities and Colleges have been awarded to twenty Sweet Briar students.

They are Wendy Catharine Birtcher, Elisabeth Spotswood Burwell, Susan Lynne Dickinson, Cheryl Lee Gorman, Rosemarie Hermann, Lee Hubbard, Anne Charleen Hutchinson, Cathy Christian Kenton, Virginia Dorsey Lynch, Victoria Ann McCullough, Kathleen Marie Papadimitriou, Kimberly Claire Parker, Elizabeth Dee Rodgers, Heidi Louise Stukey, Sandra Helene Velli and Courtney Barron Warrick, all of the class of 1984, and Karla Alane Kennedy, Mallihai Lawrence, Elinor Hope Warner and Lavonia Fore Wright of the class of 1985.

Criteria for selection include above average achievement in both academic pursuits and campus/community involvement. A minimum grade point average of 2.7 is required. Nominations are solicited from Junior and Senior students, faculty members and administrators. Nominations are reviewed by a committee composed of representatives from the student body, faculty and administration.

Fall Council Meetings: A Personal Report

Pat Brown Boyer, '49, reported her impressions of Fall 1983 Alumnae Council Meetings to her about-to-be reuniting classmates. Perhaps her thoughts will encourage some of our readers to consider returning to campus for these meetings in 1984.

This has been a wonderful week of meetings and programs, of seeing friends among the alumnae and faculty, of getting to know some of the current faculty and students. My fond wish for you all is that you can mark your calendars now for Reunion and enjoy the same experience.

Impressions and updates have been numerous for me, and I'd like to share a few of them. First of all, the widespread reaction, on all levels, to our new president and to our new dean is extremely positive. Each of them is very approachable, a good listener, and a receptive one. But the exciting thing is to be there when they speak. At Founders' Day, President Nenah Fry gave an excellent welcoming speech in which she paid tribute to the Williams family and then passed on to the remarkable first seven trustees who carried out the wishes of Indiana Fletcher Williams in establishing the "Sweet Briar Institute" in 1901. They bore names we are largely familiar with: Randolph, Carson, Gray, Harding, McBryde, Grammer and Watts. Then Dr. Fry mentioned Sweet Briar's remarkable first president, Mary K. Benedict, who undertook so many tasks, both academic and administrative, simply because she had to...there was no one else to do them. Dr. Benedict was followed by devoted faculty, successive presidents, staff, students and alumnae, right down to the present day. They cannot all be called "founders," Dr. Fry said, but they can certainly be considered "establishers" because of what they did and are now doing for the College.

panel on Monday and told the alumnae of some of her hopes and plans for the College. Listening to her, I had my first introduction to the intellectual depth and scope of her outlook. She reported that languages have been strong this year. A Language House dorm has been organized where interested students are housed with native-born speakers of French, German, Spanish and Italian. This fall, a second Sweet Briar Junior Year Abroad began in Seville. Our Junior Year in France Program is the oldest and is rated the best by members of the Sorbonne.

At Founders' Day, we saw many, many seniors wearing wide satin ribbons sewn down the front of their academic robes and carried around in back, across the shoulders, into lovely flat rosettes. Various color combinations represented the different countries and programs in which they had participated as juniors. And, of course, the warm red robe of St. Andrews stood out, too.

Dean Belford spoke of undergirding the classic liberal arts curriculum, in the sense of languages, history, literature and the arts. This year has seen an increase of 140% enrollment in courses in classics and philosophy. Of science, she said "We have a superb science faculty and are working hard to interest more students to avail themselves of it." Later, on the same panel, we heard a stimulating talk by Dr. Susan Piepho, Associate Professor of Chemistry, who told us that a decided strength of the College is its relatively small science classes, its labs taught by professors, not graduate students, and its excellent supply of the latest instruments, which the students may work with far sooner and far more frequently than in many larger or less fortunate schools.

Dean Belford also spoke of Sweet Briar's growing number of black students and international students. (I saw both of these groups perform in the delightful program put on by all the college clubs, Friday night, in honor of President Fry's inauguration. This was "Fryday Night Live at SBC" and lots of fun.) The Dean also mentioned the many academic courses shared with numerous neighboring colleges in the various consortia. In conclusion, she stressed the efforts by Sweet Briar to "convince our women that Sweet Briar is the real world. Students must be taken seriously by us and by themselves...This is a place where people are loved, nurtured and respected, and where very serious things are expected of them." This, she said, is Accountability.

I could go on and on to list the physical changes on campus and the program changes at the college. You simply must come back yourselves to sample and savor. The post office, now on the ground floor of Manson where we used to go to chapel, is enormous, brightly-lit, and efficient. On the bulletin board, I read notices asking me if I'd like to study in Russia, Greece or New York during the January Winter Term, or informing me that I could learn "Word Processing" in one short individual lesson on a college Apple II computer which would screen out my spelling mistakes and make revisions easier. This instruction was offered by the Academic Resource Center in the Library. Frankly, I would like to do it all, and then afterwards, maybe, just maybe, I might consider strolling over to Dean Barlow's Student Development Center where I would sign up for some co-ed white water rafting and hang gliding, organized by SWEBOP, the Sweet Briar Outdoor Program.

May I remind you, the unrestricted gifts we give to the Annual Alumnae Fund are always designated for faculty salaries. We knew bright-eyed, "thinking faculty" when we studied here, and we can help to keep that very same, necessary ingredient at Sweet Briar. I stopped short twice this week when the faculty member I happened to be talking with began to ask searching questions and make precise comments on the subject at hand. To learn how to think and never to stop thinking is surely the keystone of a good education. □

Academy and Specials

Most who wrote claimed few activities, but many then went on to describe a variety of interests and activities.

Nannie Clairborne Hudson, who had just passed her 91st birthday, wrote from Clifford, VA, that she was well except for her sight, which she hoped would be improved by a cataract operation in May. Her latest project is putting together, with the help of her daughter-in-law, the story of her life, which she thinks will be interesting for her grandchildren. She still enjoys bridge and working in her flowers.

Edwina Hensel Smith, Baltimore, is also a gardener with a small vegetable garden and an interest in the garden club. She loves to cook and enjoys entertaining guests. She feels lucky to be alive and says she has a great many blessings, among which she counts a wonderful twin sister and many nieces and nephews on both sides of the family.

Alice Hogg Seneff has moved into a one-room apartment in a senior citizen building in Pittsburgh, where she is very comfortable. She had just celebrated her 85th birthday, is in good health, stays busy, and still drives her car. She plays cards five nights a week, and friends and family take her out often. Life is still happy for her.

Sarah Cansler Carroll, Charlotte, NC, is retired and claims no activities. She was born August 27, 1894.

Elizabeth H. Mills, now in a retirement home in Hightstown, NJ, is legally blind and thus her activities are limited.

Katherine Withers Hamilton says she leads an uneventful life, living alone in Gloucester County, VA, with her Irish Wolfhounds, three Pekes, and a retarded cat named Tom Fool. But she also says she is busy putting in lilacs and roses to enjoy in her old age, being already 88, and she was planning a trip to Bermuda this summer and her fourth visit to the Balkans next spring!

Mary Erwin Townsend writes from Richmond that, as she is 92, her activities are somewhat limited, but she attends church and her circle meetings. She has two daughters, three grandchildren and one great-granddaughter. She looks forward to the Alumnae Magazine.

Martha Steele McNaghten, 92 in July, says that arthritis is her only ailment. While it is somewhat restricting, she still is able to summer in Kansas and then drive both ways to spend the winter in Scottsdale, AZ.

Elaine Wieck Thimmesch, also an arthritis sufferer, is retired and lives in New Orleans. She has three sons, 17 grandchildren and 22 "greats." She has fond memories of Sweet Briar, especially of going with roommates Arlene Bethel Metcalf and Grace Talmadge Davis to the Sweet Briar orchard to fill their wastebaskets with delicious apples.

Ruth Gibson Venning, Greensboro, NC, a widow for 13 years, has two children. Her daughter and son-in-law live in Charleston, SC, and are the parents of two sons, a banker in Atlanta and a mill executive in La Grange, GA. Each has three children. Ruth's son is a doctor in Boise, ID, and a graduate of Duke U.; his wife is from Idaho. Ruth was at Sweet Briar when Miss Benedict was president.

Jessie Darden Christian and her husband, who live in Lynchburg, are both 91, and they have two children, five grandchildren, and six great-grandchildren. Jessie is interested in reading and politics, strongly supporting Reagan, who, along with Nancy, has written her personal letters.

Jessie sent a recipe for a happy home and an amusing poem with which we can identify, "My Get Up and Go Has Got Up and Went."

Mary-Martha Armstrong McClary lives in a small house near her old home in Windsor, VT. She had had a visit from Carolyn Martindale Blouin '30, with whom she enjoyed renewing an old friendship. Mary-Martha remembers when the mud was so deep in Amherst that she got arrested for riding her horse on the sidewalk. When she visited Sweet Briar a couple of years ago, she was impressed by all the buildings and found it a lovely spot.

Helen Link Weidely, Mt. Airy, NC, is the oldest working member of her hospital auxiliary, through which she serves once a week. At Christmas she spent three weeks in Connecticut visiting her daughter and her family and during that time made a weekend trip to their ski chalet in Vermont. Helen has five grandsons (she's just back from Cincinnati where she attended the wedding of one of them) and one granddaughter, whom she expects to visit in Alaska in August. They plan a week of sight-seeing and another of relaxing in the granddaughter's apartment in McGrath — between Anchorage and Fairbanks.

Jane Claiborne Calkins lives alone in her home in Clifford, VA. At 87 she still drives her car and belongs to four clubs in the community. She also enjoys playing bridge and making bed quilts. Her son, his wife, and two daughters live in Hamilton, OH, but visit Jane often.

Marion L. Peele's nephew wrote that she is now 95 years old and confined permanently to a private nursing home. Her mind is quite clear, but her body is frail. She has pleasant memories of Sweet Briar.

Cordelia Collins Goodman has looked in vain for news of Academy students she knew in 1916-17, but she hopes her sending news will inspire some of her contemporaries to get in touch. After Sweet Briar, she went to Smith, where she was in the Class of 1921. She and her husband, who died in 1980, had lived in their Duluth, MN, home for 47 years, although for 16 years they had spent the six winter months in Tucson, AZ, where she lives now. Since her husband's death, travel has been her main activity — to Italy; to Acapulco, Mexico; to Greece; to Coronado, CA; to her class reunion at Smith; and to her old home in Duluth. At home she stays busy compiling genealogy — of her father's family last year and now of her mother's. Her first great-grandchild was born in June, 1983.

1913

Nell Tandy Winfree writes from Hopkinsville, KY, that she lives in a lovely personal care home and is visited by her family — three daughters, 11 grandchildren, and 15 great-grandchildren. At "the ripe old age of 92," she is still able to get around with a walker.

I haven't heard from many of you, but I guess we octogenarians just don't write!

A letter came from Genie Steele Hardy inviting any of us who were in the Columbus, MS, area to visit her. She has a large house and would like to fill it up.

Also, through the Fund, I received a letter from Elsie Palmer Parkhurst saying that she has four children, 16 grandchildren, and 13 great-grandchildren. (I can go along with that except for the "greats." So far we have only three greats.) Elsie's husband died in May of 1983 after 64 years of marriage.

Last year Ruth McIlravy Logan wrote that she was coming to Florida from California. However, somehow we did not connect.

I am still enjoying life here on the Intercoastal Waterway and hope some of you will hunt me up. We are just off Route #1. Do keep in touch.

Nellie McCaa Cole writes in a happy manner. She loves living in Shreveport, LA, near her son, enjoys her work with the Altar Guild, calls on shut-ins, and plays bridge with the remnant of her friends who have maintained their mental faculties.

Gertrude Anderson of Findlay, OH, tells about majoring in U.S.A. travels this past year. An AAA tour took her to Toledo, the Carolinas, Savannah and the Middleton Gardens, Charleston and Fort Sumter, ending in Salem, which is a restored Moravian village near Winston-Salem.

Ophelia Short Seward of Petersburg, VA, even though severely handicapped, writes courageously about her life and her pride in her grandchildren. One who graduated from the U. of N.C. in the College of Pharmacy continued her studies in England, where she met her husband, and delighted Ophelia by returning with him to this country. Another granddaughter is at St. Mary's College in North Carolina, and a grandson, who graduated from UVa, is a doctor in the field of radiology. Ophelia says she is coming to our next reunion, even if it's in a wheelchair.

Francese Evans Ives, who lives in Montclair, NJ, after a spell of illness last winter, bounced back to a full schedule of activities. She has many speaking engagements, mostly about her sold-out edition of A Time to Laugh. Add to that her participation in the annual College Club Book Sale which nets over $25,000, her rewarding visitations and transporting among her more handicapped peers, and finally a devotion to a family of which she is proud and warrants her feeling that she is "blessed." Her son is in the U.S. Embassy in Saudi Arabia as attaché in the Treasury Department. One granddaughter has recently been awarded membership in Phi Beta Kappa at Cal. U., and another, who has been studying art in India, is working for her M.A. at Pratt Institute in Brooklyn, NY.

Edith (Betty) Morris Coleman has a unique profession as a ham radio operator. Her call number is W4 EHN from St. Cloud, FL. Her brother says she's "lively as a cricket" — a comeback from many X-rays, Cat scans, and a mastectomy. She says she is eager to read news of her classmates of '17 and '18. She plays bridge, belongs to the OAR, is a Pink Lady, and belongs to ham operators clubs.

Marion North Lewin, who lives in Fairhaven, MA, says she's joined the elderly cane-carriers, but she still pursues education and attends classes in Shakespeare, not for credit as "I am not about to be the oldest candidate for an M.A. in the U.S.A."

Edith Durrell Marshall has had six difficult months with health problems, mostly due she says to stress, but she feels good again and enjoys her new way of living in the Marjorie P. Lee Retirement Home in Cincinnati. She misses her own apartment but says if she could accommodate herself to dormitory life, she can do it at the end of her life too. Edith has been church historian for 40 years and has done some historical lecturing. Her daughter Ann reflects the same lively interest in antiquities. Edith is proud that Ann has been asked to help with the task of re-doing Sweet Briar House. Edith has been our finest communicator for all the years since 1921, and we are grateful to her.

Catherine Hanitch enjoys her nursing home life at Chapel View in Hopkins, MN, especially Educational T.V. and dancing and skating programs on other channels. She says she is a member of the Osteo Arthritis Club, but she accepts the handicaps which accompany advancing years with grace.

Gertrude Pauly Crawford of Grosse Point Woods in Michigan says she's "very well," has enjoyed summering in Wisconsin and wintering in Florida, and is now back home enjoying her great-grandson.

Lette (Elizabeth) Shoop Dixon says the winter was cold this year in Suffolk, VA, not like the balmy temperature during the wondrous springs at SBC and adds, "Such happy days. I think of them often." She speaks enthusiastically about the pleasure she has in her child, grandchildren and great-grandchildren who live nearby. She adds, "I play bridge often and do a lot of walking."

Lette (Mary) McLemore Matthews of Norfolk, VA, remarks that when she looks around, she has reason to be thankful. In spite of bouts with arthritis, she works in her garden, enjoys bridge and mah-jong, helps prepare Saturday night church suppers, and works in the gift shop, which last year netted over $8,000 for missions. She misses the other Lette — a lasting Sweet Briar friendship — but talks frequently with her on the telephone.

Ruth Geer Boice writes from Sylvania, OH, that she is "still hanging on at a very leisurely pace" and enjoying her retirement home "in a rural setting with pond and swans to entertain me and remind me of Sweet Briar." Her niece, Nancie Howe Entenmann '56, who is on the S.B. Alumnae Council now, keeps her up to date on College activities.

No Florida for us this year. After 16 years of warmth it was missed. Lloyd hasn't been well, but we dare to hope for at least a month in our Maine camp this summer. Our older son, who is a professor at Norwich U., is being recommended for tenure. The younger son is a most happy teacher and dormitory head at the George School in Newtown, PA. Our daughter, mother of four teen-agers, is executive secretary of the Needham Business Association. Since she is only 20 miles away from our home in Abington, MA, we see her frequently.

I'm TV-ing the Academy awards. How do I concentrate? I can, because you rugged ones don't write. How can I get my column out when you who are "in the pink" remain silent? Please mend your ways. We lost Elizabeth Hodges Gregory, Martha Cooper Judy and Mary Aleshire Klein in 1983 and Helen Tremann Spahr in 1984. It's sad our numbers are dwindling so fast.

Kay Agard Flewelling wrote on her Christmas card that she and Betty MacQueen Payne see each other quite often. They live near one another right in the area where the Rose Parade had its formation. Kay traveled to the South of France in May 1983 and enjoyed a barge cruise on the Canal du Midi. She also had a rough ride on the Orient Express from London to Venice. Another jaunt took Kay on a cruise from Vancouver to Ketchikan, Victoria, and back to San Francisco on the New Amsterdam.

Mary Sturgis has moved from Lee St. in Onancock, VA, to The Hermitage in the same town. Virginia Burke Miller has moved from Grand Rapids, MI, to Englewood, CO. May they have happiness in their new homes.

Mollie Meriwether Benson was "lost" for years. Welcome back. She now lives in Clearview City, KS.

Louise Walt Arnold and family are all O.K. Louise finds it cheering and interesting that husband George has to walk with a cane, but can dance up a storm. Mary Sailer Gardiner and husband Joe have moved from their home in Wyncote PA, where they lived for 56 years, to Rydal Park just three miles away. This is a retirement community. Mary has a corner apartment with a bedroom, living room and kitchen. The grounds are beautiful. Mary can walk to the bank and super market. Unfortunately, her husband Joe is ill, so he is in the Medical Center. Their children don't live too far away. The daughter is in York, PA, and their son is in Harrisburg. There are 11 grandchildren and seven great-grands, ages 1 to 4. This lively bunch often visits the Gardiners. A friend of mine from Berkeley, Fran Macdonald, lives at the same place and has met Mary. Two fine lassies should be in for good times together.

Tallulah Holloway Harris writes from Marlin, TX, that she is very thankful to be still active at 82.

I'm looking forward to my 60th reunion at Sweet Briar. Hope to see some of you. I also look forward to meeting Carolyn Martindale Blouin '30 who will be on campus for her 55th. We have "met" through letters. Carolyn and her husband live in a 200-year-old house in South Berwick, ME, which they have enjoyed renovating. I am sure it must be similar to the one my late sister lived in in Pennsylvania.

There were 11 of us at the annual Sweet Briar Day luncheon on Dec. 29th at a French restaurant in San Francisco.

Our Bay area alumnae club met again for a cocktail party at the Metropolitan Club in San Francisco on January 11, 1984, to honor Sweet Briar's new President and Dean, Nenah Elinor Fry and Fontaine Maury Belford. This was a delightful affair arranged by Penn Willets Mullin '66. We all felt Sweet Briar was fortunate in having these capable and attractive ladies at the helm. Mary Sturr Cornelius '62 was good enough to drive Freddie Bernhard '24 and me.

Now for my news. They wouldn't allow me all the space to write about my active year, so I'll try to give you some of the highlights. I always have the usual rounds of duties and pleasures. St. Paul's Towers is no retirement home but a swingin' place for those who are well.

In August, I went to the Northwest to visit my oldest granddaughter, Lana, and her husband Duane in Oak Harbor on Whidbey Island and Arthur's niece, Claire Barricks, and triend in Nordland, on Marrowstone Island. I also saw former Yakima, WA, friends in Sequim, whom I hadn't seen in 30 years, a fun reunion. In September I went to Wilkes-Barre, PA, for the rededication of the Kirdendall room in St. Stephen's Episcopal Church, which an arsonist had destroyed. This room was in memory of my father, established by my mother, and kept up by my late sister and me, and now by my niece, her husband and me. I stayed with my niece and her husband and always enjoy their great hospitality.

My son Fred lives in a Veterans' home, because of health problems. He came for Thanksgiving which we enjoyed at my youngest granddaughter's home. Robbie and John have two children, Andrea and Johnny. There were 12 of us for a beautiful and delicious dinner. I was so proud of that young couple. We had a day in its real meaning.

Because of the love of family, Fred and I went to Kennewick, WA, for Christmas, a poor time to travel, with -5° weather (-25° counting the chill factor), but we did keep warm. Our hosts were my oldest son, Buck, and his wife Barbara. We also were with their two daughters and families.

April finds me in a fashion show (size 14) at the Towers. The clothes were lovely, but too expensive for my budget. My local family are away, so I'll have guests for dinner at The Towers following church. I hope this finds all of you "in the pink."

Among the highlights of this past year was being able to attend the fall Council Meetings, where Jimmy was able to join me for the installation ceremonies for our new president, Dr. Nenah Fry. The students put on a terrific performance in her honor Friday evening! The Founder's Day address by Robert Shaw was printed in the spring Alumnae Magazine. It was comforting to hear him say that "each of us is a founder." We had a lovely visit with Amelia Hollis Scott and her charming daughter Susan last spring when the congregation of St. John's Episcopal Church gave my brother George Martin Bean a tremendous retirement dinner party in the new dining hall of Lynchburg College. The previous week we were in Cambridge, MA, with friends attending a reception at the home of the president of M.I.T. given by the Faculty Wives Club for former presidents of the Technology Dames (a fancy title for students' wives). I received a special present for coming the greatest distance!

Early last summer we spent only a week in Maine, because trips to Canada and Cleveland took precedence. We managed to squeeze in lunch with Lib Lankford Miles and John. We had a nice telephone chat with Carolyn Martindale Blouin '30, who reports Maury is as busy as ever and loves every moment of his very creative job. Lib sent me a Chicago newspaper account of the death of John Hutchins (husband of Belle Brockenbrough Hutchins) last summer. We all send love and deepest sympathy to Belle and her three sons. She is moving into a stunning apartment in Wilmette, IL. Lib was the first to send me our reunion questionnaire. As to former employment she writes, "reporter, Norfolk, Va, Pilot and business manager and assistant to the principal, The Tatnall School, Wilmington, DE." Among current memberships she mentions Farnsworth Museum, Princess Anne Historical Society, Va. Maritime Museum, Owl's Head Transportation Museum, St. John Baptist Episcopal Church, and hospital volunteer. Their children are John B. Miles III, Col. Burnley L. Miles, OSAF, and Mrs. Ronald McClure Roadcap. She considers her greatest achievement is "staying alive this long." She feels Sweet Briar affected her life by giving her a definite feeling of confidence in dealing with her life. She expected to return with John for Reunion.

Isabelle North Goodwin expresses the feelings of many of our classmates when she wishes she were twins. "Then I could be at Sweet Briar for our 55th and also in Florida for Tom Goodwin III's graduation from college. He plans to go to graduate school for his M.B.A. I had so much fun at our 50th — wish it didn't come at the same time.... My 10 grandchildren keep me busy — three in college and one in nursery school." Her current memberships are Junior League of Augusta, Board of Directors of Mary Warren home for aged, Richmond County Museum, and Historic Augusta. Her interests are garden club, needlework, bridge, and church. Her children are Tom, Jr., Dr. North, Charles, and Ray. She considers her greatest achievement being a happy wife, mother and grandmother.

Sally Callison Jamison helps write this annual account with tidbits of news from numerous classmates. Lib Lankford Miles wrote that they were just home from the wedding of a granddaughter in Virginia and stopped on the way for a visit with Mary Moss Sutiliff '30 and Bob, who were gearing up to sell their home and go to a Navy retirement complex near Bethesda. The Mileses had dinner with Hodgson's (Virginia Hodgson Sutiliff) daughter Shirley Sutiliff Cooper '55 and family in Alexandria.

Eleanor Duvall Spruill reports, "I have been working extra hard to hang a show at a town nearby and to get another ready for the first of next month at a smaller gallery not far away. After I get that up, if I am still living, we are planning a trip on a mail boat up the coast of Norway.... It will mean that I'm out of reach at the time of reunion. I've always thought, though, that it is well to stop when you're ahead, and I did have such a great time at our 50th!" The Alumnae Office sent me an article (I'll put it in our scrapbook) which contained the following: "Noted South Carolina water colorist Eleanor Duvall Spruill has been named honorary chairman of the 1984 Kalmia Arts Ball in recognition of her outstanding and prolific contributions in the field of water color in South Carolina."

Adelaide Henderson Cabaniss wrote that she won't be at Reunion as she is scheduled to attend a family celebration at the South Carolina U. Law School, Columbia. It is an historically significant event dating back to 1770. Also Bill is recovering from a serious operation and will not be able to travel for some time. She hopes we remember our class fund, and she will continue as our fund agent. Helen Schaumleffel Ferree wrote that she couldn't make it this reunion. "I'm sure it will be a great time for all, and I send my best wishes to all." Jane Wilkinson Banyard was also sorry to miss our 55th. Her grandson was being married May 27, and she wrote, "I must attend." Sue Tucker Yates wrote that she hoped to come to our 55th. "I missed our 50th as I was out of the country at that time."

Mary-Paulding Murdoch Martin, Baltimore, recalls that she wrote a booklet in verse called Promises to Keep for the Emma Willard School on the occasion of her 55th reunion there.

Katherine Smith Boothe is a semi-retired real estate broker. She enjoyed the Sweet Briar Christmas luncheon at Adelaide Boze Glascock's ('40) in Short Hills. "Very interesting group.... Raves about the new president!" Katherine's eldest granddaughter (graduate of Duke) is working for her M.B.A. at Boston U.; eldest grandson Garland III graduated from Bucknell in May; his brother Douglas was a sophomore in engineering at Princeton.

Now that she has retired from Old Dominion U. Library, Rosa Heath Bridges, Virginia Beach, is also able to enjoy Alumnae Club meetings and is impressed by the alumnae of her College — young and old. She had a two-week tour to Yugoslavia, Greece, and Turkey in the spring.

Anne Gachnauer is still running her antique shop in Upperville, VA. She was expecting to visit Nora Lee Antrim at her camp on Squam Lake the latter part of June.

We have just returned from a visit to Sanibel Island, FL. Our son Bennett and his wife Cynthia had given us the 10-day stay at a small condo near theirs when we were with them in Shaker Heights for Christmas. Susan is 18 and expects to go to Middlebury next year. Carolyn is 13. They had such a good time, shelling, boating, playing tennis, and swimming. It was a delight to be with all generations! We had supper and a nostalgic evening with Janet Bruce Bailey and Lin. We have been together for numerous reunions and they couldn't come to our 55th because their eldest granddaughter was graduating at the same time. Jan wrote on a Christmas card, "We'll miss St. Thomas but have found a delightful village for our winters.... We like Lake House very much. We have a villa and have a beautiful view of the lake and complete privacy. We go to the main house for our dinners. We plan to keep our Chad Ford place as long as possible and plan to go back summers.... We enjoy spring in Pennsylvania.... We are now great-grandparents!"

Louise Dailey Sturhahn also lives in Sarasota. We had a very rewarding telephone conversation. She sent a lovely snapshot with her questionnaire and wrote, "Ed has been less than well for several years and so we live a very quiet, routine life. He is better at this time than he has been previously, but we prefer to play it safe and not upset his apple cart." Her interests are reading, needlepoint, gardening, family and friends, but not in that order. Her children are Joan and Edward, Jr., and she has five grandchildren and five great-grandchildren.

Anne Mason Brent Winn says she is doing as little as possible, but still running to stay in place. She and a friend went to Disney World this past winter and then to Indiantown, Pompano, and Gulf Stream to see horses. A year ago she broke her leg in three places and was in the hospital a month, but now a year later she is fox hunting again! In May her daughter Mason and family from New Zealand were due to arrive in California where Anne expected to meet them and drive back to Kentucky. She has always wanted to make the drive across the country, so she fulfills a desire of long standing. On her last trip to New Zealand she stopped in Honolulu and spent a day with Lib Rountree Kellerman '26. "She is still straight-backed, deep-voiced, and glamorous, and as a freshman I was so impressed and awed. She does not seem so deeply involved with politics, raises orchids, and has a running battle with bulbul birds, who eat the orchid buds.... Last December I went to Russia on an SBC trip for two weeks. I won a free trip by talking more people into going than any one else. Winnie West Morriss '28 and my cousin May Speed Sexton '26 were among them. It was great!"

Sally Callison Jamison writes in her Reunion questionnaire, "In the past I have been president of Pickwick Club, Monday Club, church groups, symphony group, etc." She has current membership in Tippecanoe County Historical Association and Tippecanoe County Art Museum and interests in Monday Club, Pickwick, Purdue President's Council, Lafayette Symphony, and Civic Theatre. Her children are Jane Jamison Nesser '59 and John Callison Jamison, dean of the Business School, William and Mary College, Williamsburg, VA. Sally's daughter and grandson Jamison Tatman visited the Jamisons in Naples in March and drove them home again in April. Jane turned to SBC for her 25th Reunion. When I talked on the phone with Sally, she said Jo Tatman Mason and her husband Mark were taking a trip to Switzerland in early May, taking their three children and spouses with them, so they couldn't be at our reunion. Sally says Lou Lutz is a VIP in the Chicago Art Institute.

When we reached Sanibel Island I telephoned Virginia Chaffee Gwynn in Naples. She did not know the Jamisons were there all winter. We hope to get together next March! We came home by way of Pompano Beach and telephoned Dorothy Bortz Ballantine from the Hillsboro Club. She said Belle Brockenbrough Hutchins had a condo near here at Del Ray Beach, but she did not come down this past winter. We spent two nights en route home. Nora Lee Antrim had us for a delicious lunch. We were right across the street from the Commonwealth Club at Jimmy's sister's apartment. The Sweet Briar Alumnae were giving a tremendous cocktail party for our new president. We were told we should walk across the street and attend (and we did, the first time we ever crashed a party, and we enjoyed every minute of it!). We saw Nora Lee Antrim, Maria Bemiss Hoar, Margaret Moncure Johnson, Patty Moncure Orewy '39, and many other alumnae, most of whom we had not seen for almost half a century. We did live in Richmond for six months during 1937. We saw Lisa Guigon Shinberger at Grace and Holy Trinity on Easter. She also was sad about not getting to our reunion as there are several conflicts in her very busy life.

Ruth Meredith Ferguson Smythe and her husband Fred vacationed in Spain this past winter. They have seven grandchildren in Louisville, two of whom made their debuts this year. They plan to spend the summer at their home at Torch Lake, MI.

The last week in April Jimmy's sister Elise Eppes Cutchin invited us to go on a Colonial Dames jaunt to three historic homes on Virginia's Northern Neck (the land between the Rappahannock and Potomac Rivers). Elmwood and Mt. Airy were very interesting, but we fell in love with Sabine Hall, where Toole Rotter Wellford '31 and her husband Carter greeted us as we got off the bus and made us feel especially welcome. We decided to go back to Virginia for an Eppes family reunion May 4. The State Archeologist was scheduled to show slides and tell about the "diggings" at Westbury, Shirley and Eppes Island on the north side of the James River, as well as Appomattox Manor, which now belongs to the National Park Service, on the southern side. They have found very exciting Indian artifacts as well as foundations of very early homes. We returned home by way of Sweet Briar in the hope of seeing Gert Prior as well as the Alumnae Office staff to make final arrangements for our 55th. We had the wedding of a niece in Boston and the graduation of our eldest granddaughter from Middlebury College, Vermont, and are sorry we couldn't be triplets!

Another questionnaire has arrived — from Adaline Hoffman Allen, Clearwater, FL. She has a B.S. degree and was formerly a home economics teacher. She belongs to the Clearwater Woman's Club. Adaline considers her son her greatest achievement. She was not able to come back for Reunion. She writes that the best Sweet Briar experience was a roommate from Kansas City with whom she still keeps in touch.

Thank you for your gifts to the College and for your warm-hearted responses to my plea for news. We were all more closely bonded by our reunion. As we go forward toward our next, let us keep in touch. Why not write a note to a classmate listed in this column? I welcome your suggestions and any photos or specials for our 55th Reunion.

Anderson, Mary Rose Taylor, Kansas, lives in an adult care home and looks forward to the four times a year visits from her son and his family.

Baber, Jean van Horne, Pennsylvania, attended her Dwight School Reunion in May. When we were very small, Gerry Mallory Lees, Margery Gubelman Hastert and I first met there — 4th grade. We have had a lot of education together.

Barloon, Blanche Davies, Ohio, traveled with her husband last year to Germany, Austria, and Hungary, after a stop in Rotterdam, Holland. Later, they made a second trip abroad to France.

Bean, Gail Shepard, Iowa, writes that her husband is recovering from by-pass surgery. A daughter was on NOVA in January. Gail, retired from her job for the Archeological Institute of America, is now museum chairman for the Colonial Dames of Iowa. A book of her poems will be published shortly.

Bromfield, Mary Kate Patton, Connecticut, has a full family schedule. Last summer she accompanied her Susan on an automobile trip from San Francisco up the Oregon coast to collect the grands at camp. One granddaughter will be going this fall to St. Paul's. Two are in college, Miami and Hamilton. Son Bill and his family live outside Miami with two children.

Brooke, Anne H., Virginia, has had a recent extended hospital stay.

Elliott, Jeannette Shambaugh, Arizona, was spokesperson for her 50th Reunion at Cambridge in 1983. One person told her, "In my profession, radiology of the head, we are standing on the shoulders of Dr. Shambaugh's dissection of the ear ca. 1910." The cat scan has made her father's work of great interest today.

Jeannette has recently become reacquainted with her lab bullfrog partner Abigail Shepard Bean and finds her poetry rare, intriguing, often moving.

Emling, Marjorie Morse, Arkansas, past secretary of our class, is another great traveler. She and Ralph were in Rome and Florence, Italy, in October. In January 1984 it was the Yucatan Peninsula, Cozumel and Merida. When she is at home, their daughter's family, League of Women Voters, operas, symphonies, and church take up all the time there is.

Gaines, Mary Garver Campbell Clark, Florida, three times a widow, is surrounded by friends in her beautiful garden spot. She enjoys golf, bridge, theatre, travel, and especially her motorboat. Her one son, Graham Campbell, is now the senior attorney for the Supreme Court of California. All six stepchildren and 13 grandchildren are a great enjoyment to her.

Gray, Elizabeth, Virginia, attended part of our reunion and returned to attend the reunion of the Class of '34. This July she will travel to Hungary, Austria, and Germany.

Hastert, Margery Gubelman, Hawaii, had a long trip to Alaska last summer plus visiting friends and relatives in our Northwest. One was Barbara Munter Purdue '32. Barbara and Margery had lunch with Mildred Larimer '32 later when the Purdues were in Honolulu. This October Margery will be in Australia visiting a daughter. At home, it's hospital work, golf, and batiks.

Hines, Lucy Oliver, South Carolina, who had one semester at Sweet Briar, attended her 50th at the U. of South Carolina. She and her husband, daughter, two sons, and two granddaughters enjoy their Lake Murray home.

Imbrie, Margaret and Mary, New Jersey, spent two weeks in February with Jean Baber at Hilton Head Island, SC.

Latham, Ella Jesse, Virginia, received a yellow ribbon for her needlepoint, exhibited at the Atrium Show of the Garden Club of America. It is a composite of endangered wildflowers in silk thread on silk gauze. Early in 1984 in Bath, England, she took a flower arranging course offered by Sheila Marqueen, English author.

Loveland, Doris Crane, Maryland, has been around the world twice in the Sagafjord. She sees Miki Murdoch Martin, Mary and Margaret Imbrie, and Frances and Helen Bond.

Laukhuff, Jessie Coburn, Virginia, our class fund agent, assists at the Sweet Briar Museum. In Amherst she is secretary of the Village Garden Club and treasurer of the Amherst Woman's club. She is the only woman on the vestry of her church.

Martin, Miki Murdoch, Maryland, is writing an opus in verse for her 55th at Emma Willard this year. She is tending her garden, husband, and two Sheltie dogs in Baltimore and writing by-laws for the Colonial Dames in Maryland.

Newberry, Frances Neville, Nebraska, and her husband will celebrate their fiftieth anniversary July 3. They are taking their daughters and their families on a Caribbean cruise on the N. C. L. Southward. Several other family members will join them. A granddaughter, Kathy Edwards, was married Dec. 30, 1983.

Norris, Susalee Belser, Mississippi, lives in Pass Christian and has two daughters, Eleanor of Charleston, SC, who has three daughters, and Susalee, who flies with Delta Airlines and studies business administration.

Person, Jane Martin, Minnesota, and her husband became grandparents of twin girls on Feb. 20, 1984, and are delighted that they, as well as their other grandchildren, live nearby. They are hoping for a visit from Helen Martin in the fall.

Porzelius, Mary Elizabeth Clemons, Tennessee, traveled to the British Isles in the fall of '83. A grandson is studying architecture at VPI and a granddaughter is in pre-med at William and Mary.

Redman, Lillian Allison, Pennsylvania, and her husband go to the Lynchburg area to visit his sister and of course go out to the College, but at reunion time they were in California.

Schwaab, Leila Van Leer, Maryland, and Don attended his 50th at Princeton after our Reunion.

September and October found them in Switzerland, Northern Italy, and Austria. At home, for Leila it is Meals on Wheels, aerobics, and courses at Essex Community College.

Sieman, Mary-Nelson Neville, Nebraska, had almost 50 years of marriage. Her husband, who died April 1, was born in Germany, educated in Nebraska, and was an avid golfer. Mary-Nelson has one daughter and five grandchildren.

Slater, Katharine Gochbauer, Virginia, has a granddaughter entering her junior year at St. Margaret's School, and Kitty hopes she will be a candidate for Sweet Briar. Another granddaughter is 10, and her grandsons are 3 and 4 months. Kitty's illustrated book, The Hunt Country of America, revised and updated, is scheduled for release in its fourth edition this fall.

Stubbs, Sue Graves, Louisiana, was busy in 1983 with the graduation from Princeton of Texas granddaughter India Cutler, a Mediterranean cruise in September, and a nine-day visit to London and Rome. Sue and her architect husband King will return to London this year for two weeks. One son is an architect in New York City; another, Dr. King Stubbs, Jr., is an ear, nose, throat specialist in Vero Beach, FL.

Taylor, Margaret Wayland, Virginia, and her husband Robert celebrated their 47th by going to Spain in October '83 with Dr. and Mrs. Del Greco, he formerly on the Sweet Briar faculty, and Dr. Dorothy Dillon, who also taught at Sweet Briar. Margaret's mother, active and lucid, celebrated her 99th on November 18, 1983.

Tunis, Emily Denton, California, and her husband live in Calistoga. Their son, in the State Department, has been in Nepal for two years and will be sent to New Guinea this summer. Their daughter has three lovely teenagers.

Tufts, Charlotte Tamblin, California, writes, "My husband Nate and I celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of our meeting on a blind date in New York City, March 1934. I work one day a week for Doris Harris Auto-graphs, have decelerated golf and heightened work in garden. Two grandchildren are in Pennsylvania and two in Oregon. Nate is in his 18th year as handicap chairman at Lakeside Golf Club. The club's 60th anniversary is May 11, 1984, a gala dinner, the honored guests to be the 17 members who have belonged 40 years or more. Nate is happy to be one of this group which includes Bob Hope, Gene Autry, Buddy Rogers, Forrest Tucker and Horace Heidt.

Vaughan, Redmond Mildred, Alabama, widowed 12 years ago, lives in Birmingham. One of her two sons is a lawyer in Atlanta. A daughter is a consultant accountant in Cambridge, MA. Mildred has played bridge every Wednesday for fifty years with Mary Alice Durham Ellis. Volunteer work at church and hospital add up to a full week. A daughter of sister Sarah Redmond Wood '39 has married Colonel Getgood, whose sister is married to a Sweet Briar professor.

Woodward, Virginia Vesey, Virginia, would like to thank all who contributed to our scrapbook, especially Jane Taylor Lacy, who loaned us ten pages from her freshman album.

Wright, Betty Workman, Tennessee, is now a very happy first-time grandmother to a boy born before Christmas to her son and his wife.

Zoppa, Frances Powell, Virginia, is still re-living our reunion, marveling at how young and active we are.

Janet Bogue Trimble went on the S.B. Adriatic Cruise on the Argonaut and met Virginia Rutty Young '36 and her husband Howard.

Margaret Bradley Forsyth says she does little serious riding now, since "my horse, dog, and I are all old and fat!" She hears from Izzy Dimstead Haynes, who, last December when she wrote, was in London with her husband on a theatre trip. Margaret said Dottie Price Roberts' husband had been desperately ill but was better.

Beda Carlson Calhoun wrote that it was great fun having Peggy Cruikshank Dyer wintering there on Siesta Key. She has also seen Nancy Nalle Genung and Lib Morton Hodges '36 several times.

Griselda Deringer Plater lives in Atlantic Highlands in the woods with a beautiful view. Her three married children live near her and there are six grandchildren. She does lots of tennis, garden club, and travel.

When Natalie Hopkins Griggs wrote last fall, she was looking forward to her tenth grandchild, child of Eleanor '66.

Sara Kirkpatrick Fearing wrote that husband Jack put their boat, Slewfoot Sal, up for sale when they got home from a winter in the Bahamas, but by January this year, he was tired of fighting ice and snow at "Dim View," took the boat off the market, and vowed never to spend another winter in the Frozen North. They spent most of February in Kenya and Egypt.

Polly Lambeth Blackwell had a grand time at Sweet Briar representing Wake Forest at the inauguration of President Fry, with whom she was very favorably impressed. Polly and Winfield are still going about their business as usual, with retirement seeming far down the road.

Marion Leggett Whyte wrote last December that she had just run into Wes Ward Francis, who lives nearby, and caught up on Sweet Briar news. Marion thinks that maybe they don't see each other more often because Wes plays tennis, and she golfs. After Christmas in New York with her family, Marion was off to the Rose Bowl.

Nancy Nalle Genung and her new husband were at Sweet Briar for Founder's Day and the inauguration of President Fry. He was thoroughly impressed with Sweet Briar and pleased that one of his Princeton classmates from Lynchburg was representing that university in the academic procession.

Virginia Rush Stitzer lives in New Jersey but spends three months of the year at Tequesta, FL. She plays golf and bridge with other Briarites and won the low net in her handicap group in the Women's Seniors North and South Invitational Golf at Pinehurst.

Margaret Sandidge Miller was married on June 4 to R. Adm. George H. Miller, USN (Ret.) and will live in Annapolis.

The son of Marie Walker Gregory was married in May '83 in St. John's Church in Richmond — made famous by Patrick Henry — and Agnes Crawford Bates and Lillian Lambert Pennington joined Marie for the occasion. When she wrote last fall, Marie was off to Winterthur and the Brandywine Valley. She is treasurer of the NSCDA.

Hooray for Betty Doucett Neill for receiving the S.B. Alumnae Award for 1983! We're all proud.

Doris Albrey Bardusch in Morristown, NJ, director of admissions at St. Barnabas Medical Center, is living on a tiny lake, swimming a half mile daily, and chasing dogs. She is also on the executive committee of the National Association of Hospital Admitting Managers.

Margaret Anderton Dortch, in Nashville, has built a smaller house next to her daughter and children.

Helen Gwinn Wallace and husband traveled the South looking for a retirement home — then settled in Punta Gorda, FL, after visiting Lucy Parton Miller there. Lucy also mentioned a visit from Helen Watson Hill and George, who overlapped the Wallaces in Punta Gorda and stopped by to see Betty Doucett Neill on the way north. The Millers have traveled widely in the U.S. while Laymon lectured on noise control, as well as visiting Ireland, England, and the Yucatan Peninsula. They also had their annual vacation in Georgian Bay, Ontario, with children and grandchildren.

Emmie Lou Phillips Loymeyer is busy with family living nearby in Philadelphia but does hospital work and needlepoint.

Barbara Holman Whitcomb, after visiting her 98-year-old mother in Florida, is off to Europe again.

Virginia Smith moved from Michigan to Riverside, CA, working as a health aide assistant and going to San Bernardino College to get a registered nurse degree.

Lou Lembeck Reydel, having wintered in Florida, is returning to Chatham, MA, for her daughter's wedding.

Judy Davidson Walker reports on her husband's third book — mostly about American history. Judy is doing Colonial Dames and garden club.

Anne Borough O'Connor and husband are wintering in Florida and summering at Equinox Golf Club in Vermont, where both are avid golfers.

Martha Jean Brooks Miller, though busy with real estate and golf, is off to the Masters' with other golf buds.

Edge Cardamone O'Donnell and Ted moved to Bonita Springs, FL, where they beach, bike, and party. They do go north in the summer to visit her mother and their well scattered children. Ted has had a good year with no hospital visits so far.

Very exciting: Helen Ann Littleton Hauslein recently married Logan White, widower of Lillian Breedlove White and brother of Mary White Miller — all old-time friends. Jane Clark Hartrich is joining them in Europe; then she's off to Seattle for a new grandchild.

Elizabeth Colley Shelton travels 14 miles to her job in Atlanta and loves seeing her grandchildren there.

Margaret Craighill Price and Karl went to Spain in October and just returned from downhill skiing in Colorado. Impressive!

Wilma Cavett Bird retired from teaching last May and works in an elegant gift shop in Oklahoma City. Eleanor Damgard Firth is feeling fine now. Both daughters work in real estate with Swede, but they all go to Hot Springs each fall for golf and fun.

Charlie Davenport Tuttle summers in Chatham, MA, and winters in West Palm Beach. They're excited over their granddaughter's christening — as she comes here from Paris. Shirley Devine Clemens is thrilled over another "grand."

Adela Diaz Eads in Kent is serving her 8th year in the Connecticut General Assembly, second term as a senator. She is on two boards for handicapped, on the hospital board in Sharon, and chairman of the Board of Education in Kent.

Joan Devore Roth and John wrote of leisurely driving through the English and Welsh countryside, enjoying the castles.

A voice out of the past: Julie Fisher Firman, living in New York City, has taught school, gotten a Master's in counseling, and trained in Transactional Analysis and Gestalt Therapy. She now has a private practice and does mother-daughter workshops with her daughter. She and Win have bought a retirement home in Skidaway, GA, which is where Mary Scully Diney and Jim have moved for golf and warmth.

Lillian Fowlkes Taylor and Tyler are always traveling with Tyler's various golf groups. They are joining Marie Gaffney Barry and Ted and John and me in Woodstock, VT, for fall splendor. The Barrys just returned from Southern Pines, before which Ted skied in the French Alps.

Decca Gilmer Frackelton was surrounded by children and grandchildren for Christmas. They'd had a surprise visit from Butch Gurney Betz and John.

Helen Hamilton and new husband William Bixby are enjoying a "whole new life" and new children and grandchildren. Helen is Zone XI chairman of the Garden Club of America and sees Briarites on her trips.

Emory Hill Rex and Dan have moved to a smaller house in Palestine, TX. They and their family skied in Colorado, Emory doing cross-country.

Ruth Hemphill De Buys had a huge Christmas with much family around. She still gardens and does church work.

Nelle Hudgens Levvis and Walter are traveling extensively in Europe, loving the little towns.

Doris Hunter Swiech and husband are active in social activities in Lake Toxaway, NC, and also many civic duties.

Louisa Kirk Edwards has "crossed" three times recently — taking in Wembleton, the Orient, Australia, and Hawaii.

Anita Loving Lewis and Bill are enjoying semi-rural life at Lake Meade, PA, she gardening and he doing Civil War research. Anita was Region III chairman of the S.B. Alumnae Association but because of family illness had to resign temporarily.

Piney Martin Patterson writes from Virginia Beach that the "golden years" aren't all that golden: "crumbling fillings, changing vision —" She is busy with altar guild and garden club.

The class sends sympathy to Joan Meacham Gay on the recent loss of her husband. Joan intends to keep the "choose and cut" Christmas tree farm going with a little hired help.

Joan Myers Cole is recovering from a foot operation and looking forward to golf school.

Pat Potter Duncan visited here in New Canaan, where we made merry, so she's coming back for more.

Shirley Shaw Daniel is active in tennis and garden clubs.

Pat Sorensen Ackard wrote of an S.B. reunion in Naples, FL, with Helen Ann Littleton White and others.

Betsy Tower Bennett is very involved with her husband's banking conventions, and Barbara Thompson Parker and Gardiner spend time visiting daughters in N.Y. City.

Mimi Worthington Foster and husband are tripping from Greece to the Caribbean.

This ends with a huge honor for Margaret Stuart Wilson Dickey, who received a community service award from Arkansas' Governor's Office of Volunteerism for her service to her community.

When I unpacked my trunk at home after our June '45 graduation I found no yearbook. At various times I have tried through the Alumnae Office to get a book. No luck. In the confusion and excitement one of you may have found to your surprise that you possessed two copies of the Briar Patch. Please jog your memories, for your writer would be extremely happy, if, after all these years she could have one.

Lile Tucker Bell and Tom, a gynecologist, moved from their Staunton, VA, home of 25 years to a smaller house just before Christmas. Their four children live in Virginia. Daughter Eleanor and William Washburn and two boys, 10 and 7, are in Lynchburg. Daughter Ginger and lawyer husband Wilson Trice and their two girls are in Richmond as are daughter Ann and Robert Turnbull and their two sons. Son Tom, Jr., with a law firm in Staunton is married to Clair Carter, who is admissions director at Mary Baldwin. Lile and Tom have had wonderful trips abroad, and Dale Bogert Baldwin was on the one to Austria and Germany. They plan to go to Italy and Sicily in September. Harriet (Lovah) Wilcox Gearhart and David had a brief visit with them in early April. David Gearhart, rector of Church of the Good Shepherd in Ruxton, MD, for 19 years, retired the end of February. They bought a lot in Centreville, MD, on the Eastern Shore, and Lovah may again work as a travel agent. Two daughters share an apartment in NYC. Sarah is managing editor of E. P. Dutton publisher and Mary '78 manages Mimi Garrard Dance Co. Rosalie, a registered nurse, works at Johns Hopkins in Baltimore and son Tyler is still in Alaska.

Jodie Morgan Hartman and Jim saw Lyn Dillard Grones, Perk Traugott Brown and Barbara Bourke Stovall and David when attending a wedding at Virginia Beach. Barbara's son-in-law, Bill Boland, finished T.C. Williams Law School in December. He and Judy are in Richmond where he joined the law firm of McGuire, Woods and Battle. Daughter Sherry married last August and is also in Richmond. Son Dave is in Annandale and Michi is in Charlottesville.

Alice Gearhart Stinson and Bill will move to Southern Pines area of North Carolina this summer. They visited Isabel Zulich Rhoads '47 and Wayne in D.wigsburg, PA. They had also stayed with Diddy Gaylord Thompson and Arthur in Staten Island. The Thompsons spend more time on Long Island since his retirement. They enjoyed seeing Caroline Rudolph Sellers '46 and Fanny Ulmer Conley '47 when attending the men's 40th reunion at W&L in '83. Their first granddaughter's arrival last fall keeps them going to Boston. Alice (Steve) Nicolson McIlvaine and her husband "house-swapped" with a French doctor and took his house in Brittany last June and July. Later they had an apartment in Paris and later still visited friends in some of France's most attractive areas. Both children were with them, bicycling about and working in international youth camps.

Anne (Dickie) Dickson Jordan had two grandchildren in two weeks. Son Chick and Elaine had a boy April 30, '83. They live in Cincinnati and Elaine — a 1st-year law student at the university there — had met Nancy Dowd Burton's ('46) daughter, also in first year of law school. The Jordans' daughter Mittie '73 and her husband had a girl May 11th. Anne Mary (Chickie) Chidester Heywood's youngest, Robert, graduated from Colgate U. in May '83. She and Bill took a two week AJL trip through southern England. They saw Ellen Gilliam Perry and Marvin at their Charlottesville home in October. Chickie was re-elected last November to her village council. She is financial vice-president of Toledo YWCA.

Betty Healy Cutler's first grandchild, a boy, was born Oct. '83 to their youngest son Nelson and his wife. Betty and Gordon spent Sept. '83 golfing in Portugal and Spain and barge cruising the Charante River in France. Mary Kathryn Frye Hemphill visited actress daughter Ellen in France in Oct. '83. Ellen, a member of the Roy Hart Theater, performs, sings, teaches and tours. Ruth Frye Deaton '56 and Martha Frye Nye '48 are also in Hickory, NC.

Jane Leah Gould has been a volunteer at Sibley Hospital for 16 years and has served on the coordinating council of the volunteer service for four years. She and George, grandparents of five at the end of '83, divide their time 70-30 between Bethesda and Berkeley Springs, WV, where they built eight years ago.

Harriet Hazen Schmoeller and Clyde spent the fall of '83 traveling, visiting and appreciating the beauty of the U.S. They saw Ann Richey Oliver in Lampasas, TX, and met her son, his wife and granddaughter. Ann's husband died in March '83. The Schmoellers stopped off briefly with Audrey Betts in Greensboro, NC, and saw Jinny Whitaker Shelton and H.B. in Durham and Julie Mills Jacobsen and Larry in Washington. One of Jinny's daughters graduates from Bushnell in '84.

Jean Moores McCulloch raises beef cattle and hay on a farm near Springfield, OH. She does carriage driving on the side. One son, Bill, a forester, is married and lives in Missoula, MT. The other, Rudy, is an accomplished musician and assistant manager of a restaurant in Durham.

Hedy Edwards Davenport and Joe were pictured with their 12 grandchildren in an attractive color photo in the Chattanooga news-Free Press Sept. 9, 1983.

Anne Macfarlane Clark's son married in Sept. '83. Daughter Carolyn has a farmhouse in Pennsylvania.

Anne and Charles, Tampa residents, had two trips to Europe. One of Sally Leffen Macfarlane's twin sons made her grandmother of a little girl. Helen Davis Wohlers, a Brevard, NC, resident stays active in AAUW. She and Herb traveled to Texas and New Mexico in Feb. '83; San Francisco and Carmel in June; and an elderhostel at Amherst Col. in August. In Feb. '84 they were going on their own to Ouito, Ecuador, and the Galapagos Islands.

Marty Holton Glesser and Don travel frequently since his retirement three years ago. They go from Birmingham, MI, to see a son in Indian River, MI. Their second son, an Eastern Airlines pilot, and his wife draw them to Pensacola, FL. Hawaii is next on their list. Leila Barnes Cheatham and Jake have a summer place in Highlands, NC, and are taking a 10-day trip to England this May. Son Henry and Mary Ann have a 5-year-old girl and a 14-month-old son. Son Gilliam and Margaret have a 4-year-old daughter and 16-month-old boy. Daughter Leila and John have a 2½-year-old, Leila. The Cheatham's project for the last three years has been reclaiming gardens and grounds long neglected.

Cappy Price Bass's son Bruce is practicing medicine in Mobile, AL — urological surgery. Married, he has a 3-year-old son and a 3-months-old namesake for Cappy. Daughter Barbara will soon receive her Ph.D. at Johns Hopkins in toxicology. Daughter Caroline, lawyer husband, and 6-year-old son and 4-year-old daughter live in St. Davids, PA. Daughter Kelly has her Ph.D. in humanistic psychology and lives in Maui. Bruce had double bypass heart surgery in Oct. '83 and is fine. They spent the winter in Florida and will have a two-week cruise from Venice to Nice.

My #1 and #4 children live in Greensboro. John, 34, married last July, has completed comprehensives and orals toward a Ph.D. in child development and family life. My #2 Jetton, 30, lives near Cullowhee in western North Carolina. Telle, 28, is in Winston-Salem where she finished a 2-year physician's assistant program last August. Nancy, 26, and her husband of two years are in town.

Susan Buchanan Coupland's younger son, his wife and two children are in Durham, NC. Son Randy and his wife are still in Malaysia. Tutti Hall Peckham and Bob enjoyed SBC's elderhostel last summer.

Remember that our 40th reunion is in '85 and it will be great fun. Make plans to come — May 24-26. See you then!

Patricia Brown Boyer (Mrs. Jean P.), RFD #1, Box 39, Pomfret Center, CT 06259

These notes are being written just weeks before our big reunion. If I'm allowed a few extra inches and an extra week or two, I'll add a brief report of that gala occasion.

Nancy Jones Worcester writes that she will not be able to get to reunion because she'll be in the midst of a big move from the house they've been in for 18 years. John retired from Comerica Bank March 1; the family will move to a cottage at Walloon Lake in northern Michigan and a condominium in Sarasota, FL. Daughter Kathy and her husband Mike live in Grosse Pointe with their two children Allison, 5, and Mike, 3. John Jr. is with Mutual of New York in Denver, and Peter, graduated from Williams last year, is with Chemical Bank in NYC.

Fritzie Duncombe Millard reports that Brooke, her youngest, is enjoying U. of Denver. Carter and Susan are both in Los Angeles: Carter an executive at First Inter. St. Bank and Susan composing and writing creatively (she sold a song to Abba) and attending acting school for camera performance at CBS. Stepson Grant has a house in Provincetown and is getting married in June.

June Eager Finney boasts of a second grandson, born to her eldest son Dan and wife Carol. June and Bill had a marvelous trip to Israel with 26 members of their church. "It made the Bible come alive for us, both historically and spiritually." They went on to Yugoslavia where Bill performed neurosurgical operations which he wants to bring to this country.

Ann Eustis Weimer writes that her husband is a philatelist and this has been the focus of the year's travels to Indianapolis and Secaucus, NJ. ("It's hard to beat excitement like that," says Flip!) Her job has expanded to full-time as the church school has expanded. The children thrive and their families expand.

From Preston Hodges Hill comes word of a very snowy and cold winter in Colorado, making for fabulous skiing. Phil and Katie Cox Reynolds and Bill Waxter (Judy couldn't make it) joined the Hills for a week in Aspen last February. Pres took business trips with Gene to L.A. and Phoenix and then to Las Vegas to visit Gene III and wife Joan. Ginny finished her master's in geology at Colorado School of Mines and is working in Denver. Margaret is nearly through her M.B.A. at U. of Denver. Pres will be back studying environmental science at

Marilyn Hopkins Bamborough says she has an empty nest! Her husband is in business for himself as a consultant, so they were able to be in Florida for the month of February at Burnt Store Marina near Punta Gorda and are looking forward to a trip to Austria and Switzerland in July.

Ruthie Garrett Preucel can always fill a post card! She will not be able to get to reunion, as she will be in London for the Chelsea Flower Show, staying with Ann Higgins Crompton. Ann and Fuzz sailed from the Cape to the Mediterranean and Canary Islands in ten days last summer. Fuzz is on sabbatical from Harvard, on loan to the Natural History Museum; Ann is taking the fine arts course at Christies. Ruthie will go to Berlin and Prague before arriving in London in our 35th reunion weekend. She and her partner have just finished installing the Fine Arts Program for Bell Atlantic headquarters, including commissioning sculptors for the Bell Atlantic logo in bronze.

Sally Ayres Shroyer is still teaching at American U., but Computer Science instead of Math. Son Andy is studying for the CPA exam, while Lou is with the John Hopkins Applied Physics Lab as a computer analyst and spends leisure time with his three-year-old son. Husband Lou is retired, playing tennis and watching the soaps!

Caroline Casey McGehee spent two weeks in Vienna, Budapest, Amsterdam and London in April, the first half with Coleman and the second with daughter Margaret, a travel agent. It was spring everywhere except Holland, where the bulbs were not quite out. She found some wonderful miniature books and met some interesting collectors in Budapest and Amsterdam.

Marie Musgrove McCrone describes in fascinating detail two car treks, one across the U.S.A., culminating in a week's Bible School near Portland, OR, and another through New Zealand and Australia. (Limited space prevents my telling you all about it...ask Marie!) Marie has been writing music and words for several special occasions, songs and an anthem based on words from the Fifth Psalm, "Give Ear to My Words," plus playing piano at retirement and nursing homes and teaching a Bible Class.

"A banner year for the Bannards!" exclaims Ann Henderson Bannard. "We headed back East for Dave B. and Mary Ashley's wedding; she is French-born, from Paris (Illinois!). Our travels this year will be farther east, to England and points beyond, visiting favorite friends. I am finishing last details for my sculpture show in May and recently completed sculptures for seven five-foot niches in a Tucson church. Our community concern this year has been in the area of alternatives to violence."

old house she and John rebuilt. She is editor of The Daily Press and The Times-Herald, and John remains in N.Y.C. for the work week. One nine-segment television series for which he composed the music, recorded, did the mix, and laid on the musical sound track will begin this fall on public television stations across the country. Entitled Heritage: Civilization and the Jews, it will be hosted by Abba Eban.

Alice Dulaney Sheridan sent the sad news of the death of her son-in-law in an automobile accident last December. Her happy news was the birth of a grandson, Derek Cobb Sheridan. Alice is in real estate sales in Neptune Beach, FL.

Another who will be missed at reunion is Katie Cox Reynolds. She will be in Spain touring with the Connecticut String Orchestra in which Phil plays second violin (Katie, I barely resisted the temptation to say "second fiddle"! ). The Reynolds agree with Pres Hill that they had a great time in Aspen...years of skiing on New England ice made them relatively expert on the nice packed powder of the Rockies. Katie is still director of Community Relations at Hartford Steam Boiler Inspection and Insurance Co. Phil has changed jobs after 29 years at the Travelers and is now an exec. v.p. at Phoenix Mutual Life Insurance Co.

Ellen Ramsay Clark cannot make reunion; youngest daughter Allison will graduate from high school this spring and plans to attend UVA next fall. Ellen has taken up golf, after struggling with tennis for 25 years, while also working three days a week. Ken III lives in Winston-Salem and will be married in September to Carson Joyner from Raleigh, NC.

Kitty Hart Belew, working hard on reunion plans, enjoyed a visit with Pat Brown Boyer and Jean in Richmond last winter. They had a mini-reunion with Libby Trueheart Harris, Marie Musgrove McCrone and Caroline Casey McGehee. Libby had been honored by the Richmond Alumnae Club for her work for SBC. Kitty is happy in her semi-retirement, teaching as a substitute rather than full-time, and taking a basic computer course ("I'm a mighty old dog to be trying to learn new tricks"). Kitty's youngest, Kathy, graduated from St. Catherine's, so maybe there'll be another empty nest next year.

Vidmer Meggesen Downing and George have also had a marvelous trip to New Zealand and Australia. Son Stanley has expanded his interior design business, with Vidmer helping with buying and personnel, and helped his brother Frank restore a "picture postcard Victorian inn in Chesterton, NY, with a good Swiss chef." Frank lives in Columbia, MD, and Louise is in Mobile along with Vidmer's two grandchildren, Margaret Vidmer, 8, and Ray, 5.

Maggie Towers Talman and Carter

Van Deventer Slattery took a trip north to visit daughters Margaret, who works at Lehman Bros. in NYC, and Nell, who works in the Development Office at Princeton and lives there with her husband, Dan Haughton.

Mary Fran Brown Ballard writes that Dr. Roselise Holmes Wilkinson is busy at the Institute for the Achievement of Human Potential and hosted a daughter's wedding last May; Ann-Barrett Holmes Bryan and Bob went on the Sweet Briar photo safari to Kenya; and Sally Strickland Johnson has to have more surgery on her damaged ankle (ask her to tell how it happened, says Mary Fran). Sally lives in the old home town, Cincinnati; her children are in Boston and Dallas.

Mary Louis Stevens Webb sends thanks to everyone for their letters, love and prayers during her surgery, radiation therapy and chemo-therapy. The prognosis is good and Stevie will be coming to reunion! Daughter Mary has completed law school at the U. of S. Carolina, passed the S.C. Bar and is clerk for the Circuit Judge of the Third District in S.C. Rutledge, Jr., is attending college in Charleston and last year was manager of the Video Store in Summerville, SC. Rutledge, Sr., is still working in real estate and insurance.

Patsy Davin Robinson says her grandson Benjamin is gorgeous and fun. Sandy took early retirement Jan. 1 and it's been great; the theory of "for better or for worse, but not for lunch" hasn't been true!

Alice Trout Hagan is our Flower Show Queen, having won not only the blue in her class, but also the Tricolor for the entire show in Charlottesville last spring! Ann Lane Hereford, in her official capacity, welcomed everyone to C'ville, and Libby Trueheart Harris was also on hand to applaud Alice's achievement. Ellen Hagan '81 will be married in December to Whitney Brown (such a nice new name!) of Memphis; Hugo and Anne and son are still in Charleston, so they see Stevie now and then; Lisa '79 and husband are still in Washington; and Kitty has just one more year at UVA.

Polly Plummer Mackie is busy as vice-chairman of the Women's Committee of the University Museum and has joined Ruthie Garrett Preucel on the board of the New School of Music. Son Alex, who has been teaching at the Chapin School, is about to take a year off for graduate school; daughter Allison is finishing up at the Neighborhood Playhouse in NYC and will soon be out pounding doors of agents and casting directors.

Larry Lawrence Bowers is up to her ears in work and travel, but hopes to get to reunion. She'll be moving southwest to be head of Trinity School in Midland, TX, a position she's very happy about. Her Susan is the only one still at home, though not often, as she is a junior at De Paul in Chicago. Walter and I seem to live from suitcases, between trips from here to there for business, pleasure, babies, etc. In October, son Walter married a lovely French girl with a lovely five-year-old daughter...both are bilingual, but we're all testing our rusty French! Katie and family live near us in New Jersey; Becky and husband Ron, a lieutenant in the Florida State Park Service, had a baby brother for their Jessica on the night they moved to a new park, De Leon Springs (the one Ponce thought was the fountain of youth!) near Deland. Youngest, Harold, is living at home and working nearby...no empty nest here!

Fund Agent

Edith Norman Wombwell (Mrs. George Burkley), 2105 Starmont Rd., Louisville, KY 40207

I am the new class secretary and would love to hear from one and all about the happenings in your lives. Our deadline is May 1st for the fall issue, so please let me know your news before that. Thought you might want to know that 17 of us and assorted husbands attended our 30th reunion a year ago. It was a soggy but wonderful weekend enjoyed by all. If anyone has pictures from the reunion, please send them to me for our scrapbook. We were so happy to see Sue Allison Bercaw and Woodson. Sue had not been back to SBC since she left, and they had such fun that they plan to return from now on.

Harriette Hodges Andrews is an instructor for new computer users and writes manuals to fit the programs the company sells. Her daughter Frances graduated from Duke in 1982 and works for Morgan Stanley in N.Y.C., and her son Charlie is a 1983 Princeton graduate and works for IBM.

Donna Anderson Mullens is teaching Bible at the Christian Day School Jr. High. Her job, along with taking correspondence courses, traveling with David and dating on her 3-year-old grandson, fills her time.

Mary Stagg Hamblett is busy helping a career guidance counselor at the high school. Her daughter Marian joined her son John at Trinity College.

Sara Ironmonger Greer has loved renewing her contact with SBC through her daughter Sara, who graduated in May 1984.

Ann Lackey writes that she is still employed as a secretary in the Tulsa schools and loves it. She saw Midge Chace Powell while Midge was visiting Jackl Grubbs Crews, who is very successful in real estate.

Eleanor Johnson Ashby is in her

6th year as executive director of Leadership Jacksonville and was busy preparing for her daughter Stuart's wedding.

Nan Locke Rosa has done some exciting travel since she became a full time travel agent. Most of it has been without Frank but they hope to manage Europe together this year. Their daughter Mary-Nelms will be a senior at Auburn and, like her mom, is majoring in psychology.

M.A. Mellen Root is actively involved with the Greenville Humane Society and serves on their board. Her son Randy graduated from W&L last June and is working for a geophysical exploration firm in Houston. M.A. says he had the good judgment to find himself an S.B. graduate for a bride; he will marry Leslie Wright '83 in October. Her other two children are in Atlanta.

Ginger Timmons Ludwick and her family had a fun trip visiting friends after our reunion. They are now gearing up for drop-in guests attending the Olympics.

Cynthia Moorhead McNair and Norm came by last summer while visiting their son David and his wife, who are living not far from us. Cinnie helps in Norm's computer business and also has time to do some modeling. We hope to see them often now that they have a reason for coming to New Jersey.

Another recent drop-in was Sallie Gayle Beck, who stopped by on her way back from a jewelry show in Rhode Island. She is a manufacturer's representative for several jewelry manufacturers and travels extensively. Her daughter Gayle will be moving to Houston in September after getting her Ph.D. in clinical psychology. Her son Rob still travels the plains of the midwest selling children's apparel. Sallie had a wonderful week in Cancun, Mexico last February.

Thanks to Edie Norman Wombwell we have news of Carol Exnicios Tucker who is living in Tampa. Carol writes that her oldest son, Michael, graduated from Yale two years ago and now works in New Haven. Her second son, Marshall, graduates this year from the U. of Vermont and her daughter Elinor is a freshman at Boca Raton. She has many volunteer interests, the main one being the Tampa Symphony. She went to Edinburgh and St. Andrews for a nostalgic visit last year and said nothing had changed.

Kim Green Stone wrote Edie that they are really into horses, especially Arabians. She may give an offspring of her Arabian stallion to SBC in '88. This would have to be the most unusual gift. Edie said she had received some very original ideas for gift-giving in '88 and there is plenty of time to enter the contest. Please support her efforts and help outdo ourselves for our 35th.

Edie's oldest son, David, graduated from Duke in three years and is a banker like his Dad but at a rival bank. Her second son, Van, is taking a year off from college and is traveling around the world on money he earned in Alaska. Her third son, Andy, is a junior in high school. Edie is deeply involved with the Youth Suicide Prevention Center, heading their fund raising — what else! She also tutors math in a middle school and works as a patient representative at a hospital. Last September they went to Alaska and loved it.

Caroline Moody Roberts, in Sewickley, PA, is still volunteering and serving on many diverse boards. Her daughter Caroline works for an advertising agency and her husband, for Paine Weber, and they spent a lot of last fall in the Orient. Son Drake is an account executive with Prudential Bank.

Kirk Tucker Clarkson writes from Norfolk that Jack is a judge now and loves it. She thought our 30th was fun.

Patti Tighe Walden is still teaching kindergarten — after 25 years of teaching she still enjoys it. Son Ben will be a high school senior, and Emily, a junior in '84-85. They are looking at colleges.

Jane Collins Sjoberg sends the sad news that Lennart died in March from cancer. Both children have returned to live at home again. Karen graduated early from UC-Irvine and is working nearby, and Robert left UC-Santa Barbara to help run the family machine shop.

We extend our sympathy to Joan Brophy Tyree on the death of her mother last December. We were also saddened to learn of Mr. Gilpin's death. He was our class advisor and a good friend to us all. We saw Connie Werly Wakelee at Mrs. Brophy's funeral and she was preparing for a back operation the latter part of January. She is feeling fine now and so happy it is all behind her.

Time seems to fly by for us. We were able to go to San Francisco in March for a family vacation which we all loved and will be going to Cancun, Mexico, in April for business meetings. Our son David will be a senior at UVA and is actively involved in the NROTC program. He will be commissioned a 2nd Lt. in the Marines upon graduation. Janice graduated from high school and will be working in a hospital for a while to see whether she really wants to be a nurse.

Please keep me posted on the events in your life.

Secretary

Marjorie Whitson Aude (Mrs. Fritz), Rt. 3, Box 199, Geneva, NY 14456

Fund Agent

W.), 975 Lafayette Rd., Bryn Mawr, PA 19010

My plan was to write these notes day by day as the cards came in, to save a last minute scramble. So the cards are in that order, but the last minute scramble is upon me.

Among the several hundred new file cards received this year from the Alumnae Office, I found a few new addresses. Jane Dunn Godstrand moved from Delaware to East Craftsbury, VT; Thelma Houk McGrory went from Oak Ridge, TN, to Gaithersburg, MD; Susan Ragland Lewis from Belhesda, MD, to Washington, DC; and Barbara Tetzlaff from San Francisco to Albany, CA. There may be others I've missed.

Chips Chao Pai's election to the Board of Dverseers has already been noted in the Alumnae Magazine or a newsletter some place, but we can still give three cheers! Her sons chose opposite direction for college (not much help there!) — Ben to Duke and Mike to Cornell this fall. Chips was also a panelist at the installation of Dr. Fry as SBC's new president, stayed with Nancy Godwin Baldwin and Tom, and enjoyed seeing several members of the class of '58, including Dotsie Woods McLeod, Elaine Schuster, Ethel Ogden Burwell and others. It makes Chips (and me) wish we could have joint reunions with touching classes.

Six or eight fund flaps came in early with news. Betty Hunt Adams' daughter Millie is a student at Northwestern U. in Evanston, IL, and was spending her junior year in France in the SBC program. Her son Dillard is in the School of Architecture at Auburn, and at home in Nashville, TN, are her son Hunt, 15, and daughter Christine, 13. Anne Wilson Rowe had a dozen white SBC amaryllis growing in the attic in Fredericksburg, VA, hoping they'd be ready for two daughters' weddings in January, not double, but a week apart! Sallie was to marry on the 14th and Jeanette '79 was to marry a man from Australia the 21st and go there to live! We hope Anne got a chance to recuperate from all that.

Ruth Ellen Green Cathoun hasn't been back for a reunion, but enjoys seeing friends from SBC days. Lynn Crosby Gammill '58 came to Natchez to lecture on her Crosby Arboretum, and Norma Davis Owen '56 was there for an Antiques Forum held every November.

Virginia Marks Pagel directs a school dropout prevention program in three economically disadvantaged neighborhoods in Dayton, OH, following completion of her doctorate in educational administration and policymaking in '82. Her oldest daughter graduated from Oberlin, also in '82, and Margaret is there now. She has two sons living at home; the youngest was to finish high school in June.

being the year of the merger of her family. Bob spent many nights and weekends working on his bank's merger, and now that their oldest is 16, they've tried to merge three drivers with two cars. The two younger girls are in Middle School at St. Catherine's and have caught up to their sister in size.

Dot Duncan Hodges' fund flap mentions her struggles with an IBM which prints "That does not compute" and her preference for Philosophy 101, which taught ideas and beauty. Their art gallery has moved to a new location in Charlotte, NC, and she herself has also moved, all of three blocks, also in Charlotte. She may never open some of the moving cartons! Her daughter was finishing Johns Hopkins School of Advanced International Studies, and her son was back at Williams after a 2½-year break.

Diane Duffield Wood's oldest daughter is now in San Jose, CA, area for her husband's new job. One child is in Cincinnati and their son a sophomore at Hillsdale Col. in Michigan. Daffy's in Oak Brook, IL.

Lee Wittich Morrow, Dodgeville, WI, goes around Wisconsin for the Cancer Society, doing training sessions to prepare Reach to Recovery volunteers for making hospital visits. In February she was honored by the Jaycettes with their R.O.S.E. award. Char Heuer de Serio and Fran have traveled extensively since his retirement a year ago, notably through the Panama Canal in October. Their home is in Bryn Mawr, PA. Bill graduated from New England Col. and was job hunting; Bob was finishing his master's in education at St. Michael's U. in Winooski, VT. Carolyn Scott Arnold and Mark live in Bronxville, NY, and also travel a lot. Her daughter Susan loves her job as a buyer for Garfinkel's in Washington, DC.

Lee Haskell Vest is busy at the travel agency in New Canaan, CT, and George is in a whirlwind with the new tax laws. Graham teaches English with the Peace Corps in Morocco, and the whole family hopes to "join Bing and Bob on the Road to Morocco next Christmas!" Sallie is at Franklin & Marshall Col, PA, hoping for a long Christmas vacation.

Teensie Wilson Woodruff feels her hours of bridge in Grammar Commons didn't prepare her for algebra, statistics, auditing and single parenthood after forty. After five years of part-time study, she finished at a community college in '83 with a technical degree in accounting and now works for a CPA firm in Virginia Beach. Her first tax season was educational but exhausting. Her oldest, Betsy, was graduated from Old Dominion U. two years ago and works as a paralegal with a large Beach law firm. The younger, Catherine, was a senior at Radford U. and trying to get into nursing school this fall. Teensie had seen Joy Peebles Massie, (Goochland, VA.) lately and thought she seemed to enjoy being a farm wife.

Dee Robin is using that name and doesn't want her mail addressed with former husbands' names. She is professor of Greek and Latin at U.N.M. in Albuquerque, with her research being in the area of Italian humanism and revival of the Classics in the Renaissance. One of her children, Robin Benning, is studying in the School of Architecture, U.N.M., and Anne Benning is a grad student at U. Minnesota in the Psychology Department and a teacher of handicapped pre-schoolers in Minneapolis. Dee is married to Richard Holder, a professor of organic chemistry at U.N.M. Dee planned to be in St. Louis during June at the Vatican Film Archive at St. Louis U.

June Heard Wadsworth does hospital patient representative work in Alexandria, VA, and helps Frank with his new company, besides hobbies like sailing, tennis and bridge. Their #1 son was married in September two years ago and was deciding between Harvard and Stanford for an M.B.A. this fall. Their #2 son was to graduate from UVA Engineering in May, and #3 son will be a junior also at UVA Engineering.

Frances May Burton wrote something I agree with, so I'll quote her, "...People care about the unfortunate things that have happened to classmates. Too often class notes are a litany of 'great achievements,' which make any of us who are struggling along feel reluctant to write or, worse yet, feel we haven't measured up." Fran is doing fine and is no longer doing medical social work, but she and her husband are building a craftshop, starting from scratch, in a resort area of Wisconsin, hoping to develop it into a "retirement project." She agrees it seems strange to think about retiring! They live in Lawrence, KS, and have a married daughter and a son who will be a senior at Trinity U.

Emily Stenhouse Downs has bought a "dear little house" in Arlington, VA, "with courts and pool and golf course I sneak onto to run and walk my corgi in early a.m." She was planning to launch into her dissertation for her Ph.D., spending library time several days a week in June, and take most of July and August for writing and research. Her son John is in 5th form or junior year at St. James School in Maryland. Emily says he is a lovely fast athlete and gets along well.

Jody Raines Brinkley writes from Richmond, VA, about her oldest son's wedding in New Orleans and seeing Marylew Cooper Redd and Lee there. Jody also says Suzy Nebbett Stephens' daughter Nell was to be married in June. From Rocky Mount, NC, Alice Barnes Knight wrote that both her sons were to graduate from college in May, Guy from N.C. Wesleyan Col. in Rocky Mount and Jeff from UNC Chapel Hill. Guy was doing résumés and job interviews, and Jeff was "in love big time and hopes to marry in June." Alice will be "one happy mother when they're both employed." She enjoys her work and is taking math courses — quite a challenge, she says.

Lynn Ulric McGarvey and Dave have been in Tampa, FL, for three years, but IBM has moved him for three years to Belgium, where she'll join him in August after sending the two oldest, Meghan and Sean, off to their first year of college. Bryce will enter an English-speaking school in Brussels. Lynn has worked with the Tampa Symphony Guild, Extension Master Gardener program, and school mothers club, and taken some paralegal courses which she loves. Lynn missed connections with SBC classmates in Connecticut — hopes for better luck next time around.

Dr. Jeanne Fenrick Bedell has a full-time job at VCU and manages to give papers in places like Atlantic Beach, FL. Son John graduated from Yale in May, and Becky is well on the way to completing her Ph.D. She already teaches American Art at Yale.

Cynthia Wilson Ottaway, Grosse Pointe Farms, MI, stays busy keeping track of her children. She is pleased to announce the birth of her granddaughter, Nicole Scott, but regrets that she and her family live so far away — Helena, MT. Elizabeth is in Indianapolis, and son Otto, 2nd Lt. in the Marines, is at Fort Knox for armored training.

Babs Falge Openshaw's house in Rockville, MD, was being spring cleaned and painted; they were planning a now-or-never trip to England; #1 son and wife were budgeting to finance a home in Annapolis; #2 son was leaving his wife in California while on a seven month navy tour of duty in Spain; #3 son was graduating from USNA this spring; a "June week" gala was scheduled at their beach house; their daughter was completing her senior year at School of Architecture at UVA — so things were hectic!

Jane Fitzgerald Treherne-Thomas and Jeremy were also hoping for a trip to England this summer, along with their usual summer in Nantucket. She's been a director of the Pittsburgh Symphony for two years and also on the board of the Pittsburgh Civic Garden Center, celebrating its 50th anniversary in 1985.

Nancy Godwin Baldwin was understandably excited about a planned trip this summer to see her youngest niece, Sophie Crysler Hart SBC '81 and her husband in Canton, China, where he is with the consulate, and also to Hong Kong. She was also looking forward to Chips' visit as a new Board member, and had been taking a creative writing course, which was fun, whether or not it "improved" her any! It seems a lot of us are learning things, either for the fun of it or out of necessity or a little ol both.

Bari Baker Hart and her daughter Heather have had an apartment in Dallas for two years. Heather was to graduate this spring from the Hockaday School in Dallas, and Emory and Vanderbilt seemed to be tops on her college list. Bari used the two years to finish her master's and gain certification as an educational diagnostician which she will use in the school system in Athens, TX, where their home is. Husband Bill still travels a lot. Lindsay was to graduate from the U. Texas, and Baker will be a junior this fall in Austin. Heather took a cruise to Jamaica during spring vacation, but Bari had classes!

Margie Scott Johnson, Raleigh, NC, says son Earl was married last June and daughter Margie was to be married this June to a man from Montgomery, AL. They were to be stationed with the Marine Corps for a year in San Diego, and Margie wonders if we have any classmates out there. (Check the Alumnae Directory and towns nearby for starters. Either the Alumnae Office or I can give you a specific address in most cases. I find about seven or eight of us listed for California, plus others from '56 and '58.)

Ninie Laing writes from SBC that they are moving into their new art history headquarters in the renovated Refectory, which will show off the SBC collection, which is more extensive than many people realize. In the spring of '85 she will go on sabbatical, when she plans to complete work on several articles on medieval art. Ninie also hopes to open her house near Warrenton as a bed and breakfast place. East coast travelers, take note!

From Pacific Palisades, CA, comes word from Lainy Newton Peters that their big trip of the year will include a seven-day cruise from New York to Bermuda, then fishing and antiques in Maine, and finally son Mark's Princeton graduation in June. Lainy still gives tours for 8- and 9-year-olds at the Los Angeles County Museum of Art. She says they are so adorable, and she loves all their funny remarks about the art.

Also from California, in Poway, (Margie Johnson, take note!) Dagmar Halmagyi Yon says they had a lovely winter while the rest of us suffered, but the fire season there would be terrible because of the lack of rain. Son Joe is married, living in San Diego, and planning to return to grad school in agriculture. Son Steven was graduating from U.C.-Berkeley in geology and hoping to continue in lunar and stellar geology. Laura was a sophomore at San Diego State U. and living at home, majoring in athletic training and still enjoying lots of ballet.

Marguerite McDaniel Wood lives in Montgomery, AL, and had just started teaching flower arranging, part time. She had returned from a workshop in London, with side trips to Oxford, to Stratford on Avon where she saw Henry V, and extra days in London for museums and seeing Cats and Run for your Wife. In March she and George went to Virginia, where she got homesick for SBC. They visited the pretty homes on the James River and Williamsburg, which she hadn't seen "since Helen Smith and Ruth Ellen Green and I went...just a short while ago!"

Jane Campbell Butler lives in Kittanning, PA, and teaches reading for grades 7, 8, and 9, and English for sophomore and senior college prep classes in Dayton, PA. She is also secretary of her local teachers' association and has become a very political person, writing to legislators and trying to enlighten the local school board as to why they need "extras" like art, music, guidance, phys. ed. etc. Tom, 26, has an associate degree in business from New Kensington Business School and is job-hunting, like so many of our kids. Steve, 24, is teaching in St. Luke's Episcopal School in Manhattan (Greenwich Village) and living in Brooklyn. He also runs a fencing program there and planned to take some kids camping in West Virginia this summer for three weeks. Ann, 22, is in her last year at Chatham (formerly P.C.W. in Pittsburgh.) She is a voice major who transferred from SBC after a year, then dropped out a year, then changed her major, so will need an extra semester to prepare her senior recital. Jane says Ann regrets leaving SBC.

Helen Smith Davenport's sons Bobby, Jr., and Elliott were working there in Chattanooga for their dad when she wrote, but Bobby, Jr., was planning to move to Jacksonville, FL, soon, and Elliott, to Memphis, to take over Bobby, Sr.'s, new restaurant "Central Park." Daughter Eleanor was at Middlebury spending her junior year in France, where Helen and family spent Christmas with her. Adelaide, 15, is in 9th grade. Helen says that Susan Elder Martin, who also lives in Chattanooga, TN, became a grandmother in April.

Jackie Ambler Cusick, Bethesda, MD, is happily studying painting, doing volunteer work, school activities (Carter, 16, is a high school junior), tennis, and skiing. They had plans to go to Puerto Rico in April and then on to the Kentucky Derby (with Peggy Jones Steuart '50 and her husband and other friends.) Their oldest is selling real estate in Washington, DC, and their middle son works for ITT in New York.

In Lake Charles, LA, Elaine Kimball Carleton claimed to be organizing "several thousand school children into buses to insure an audience" for son George's performance as the Tin Woodsman. "Nothing dotting about me!" she says, but it doesn't really sound that unusual. Her complaint is that "Life is so daily," but lots of us wrote the same thing in different words. Last year they had a trip to England where they admired the gardens, and this summer they were planning to enjoy their own petunias and gerania.

Bebe Macey Graham writes they moved to the small town of Fort Payne, AL, three years ago and love it. She and Bob are among many who've celebrated a 25th anniversary. Their Kay is a senior at Vanderbilt, and Gil is a sophomore at Auburn Engineering.

Mary Landon Smith Brugh (Pee Wee) writes from Clifford, VA, about her and Lynn's kids: Carter is in Richmond working at Investors Savings and Loan; Spencer teaches third grade at the Williams School in Norfolk; Lynn III is "obviously totally content at UVA...since we seldom hear from him." Mason is a junior at VES in Lynchburg, and Mary Stuart, a grown-up 9th grader at Seven Hills in Lynchburg, which entails a lot of driving, but they hope is worth the effort. Mary Landon substitute teaches at the local high school — "anything beats cleaning and ironing the endless mound of 100% cotton clothes!" One could just refuse to buy anything that needs ironing, or make the prospective wearer do such chores!

Baba Conway (Mary Elizabeth) Gwin's card got forwarded from Oxford, MS, to Washington DC, where she is on leave of absence from teaching French and advising the study abroad program at U. Mississippi to write her dissertation on putting study abroad information onto computers for easy accessing. She was there temporarily when she wrote, but thought she might decide to stay when summer came, and hoped some old SBC friends would look her up in the phone book.

Carolyn Swift Fleming is in Omaha, NE, but has kids all over. Alice was to graduate from Wellesley in June and had been house president of Tower Court East, Will was a sophomore at Carleton Col., and Ed had been accepted at Yale. Carolyn's job as Hospice Care Specialist at (what looks like) U.N.A. Omaha is great.

Last summer I finished sewing Nancy's wedding dress in time and felt very pleased, but the hours entailed did not make it any bargain. We now expect to become grandparents just 10 days before another daughter's wedding. Lucy will graduate from Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute in Troy, NY, in May with a degree in computer science and a job at IBM in Endicott, NY, and will marry another IBM-er in August. Their salaries can support us in our old age, if need be! Lois is in a pre-engineering program at U. Rochester, NY, loves it, and plans to specialize in optics. Laurie, 25, continues her job in agriculture research, and Carl and Mark, 15 and 13, are still at home. Fritz and I were in NYC last June on school board business, but managed to see a revival of Showboat and Neil Simon's Brighton Beach Memoirs, a real treat for me. I am on at least six church committees, ranging from local to Presbytery and Synod, still preach sometimes (with pay!), and the farm bookkeeping gets more involved every year.

Thanks so much for the many kind words of thanks on your cards, and be sure to send at least some little (or big!) amount to SBC when the fund appeal comes in the mail.

Janna Staley Fitzgerald (Mrs. Robert E., Jr.), 2018 Sharon Rd., Charlotte, NC 28207

Catherine Caldwell Cabaniss (Mrs. William J., Jr.), 3812 Forest Glen Dr., Birmingham, AL 35213

Judith Atkins Wall (Mrs. E. Craig, Jr.), P.O. Box 830, Conway, SC 29526

Marilyn Dreesman Chuang and family are still in Hawaii. They had a Christmas trip to Hong Kong where they visited family and friends, including Katie Mendelson McDonald '60.

Betty Yaeger Powell is in Burlington, NC, where she is on the Board of Visitors of the University at North Carolina and on the North Carolina Executive Mansion Fine Arts Committee.

Mary Denny Scott Wray and her husband went to England and Scotland during the summer to sing in concerts with a choir from Houston. The entire family went on the SBC alumnae trip to Kenya in 1983 and loved it.

Suzanne Seaman Berry spent seven weeks in East Asia earlier this year. Her husband Fritz was a visiting professor in Singapore, Manila and Taiwan.

Paige Wilkerson Pruitt teaches Latin in the local high school in Toccoa, GA, and is an elder in the First Presbyterian Church.

Judy Greer Schulz was active in promoting the idea of an Alumnae College at SBC and the first one was to be tried this summer. She wrote encouraging all alumnae to participate in future sessions.

Julie Johnson Chapin lives in Hinsdale, IL, and has returned to hospital nursing after an absence of 15 years.

Barbara Horton Carr is the owner of a speech language pathology service in Durham. She is also a consultant on Medicare-Blue Cross-Blue Shield and on the board of directors of the North Carolina Speech, Hearing, Language Association.

Ruth Jones Bassett has three daughters in college, a ninth grader who served as a page for the 1984 session of the Virginia General Assembly, and a 3-year-old son.

Nancy Bloomer has lived in New York for the past two years. She is a full-time student at the General Theological Seminary, studying for an M.Div. degree, and will eventually be ordained a priest in the Episcopal Church. Her sister Susan Bloomer Rice '69 lives in Hawaii.

Babs Childrey Fowler has children in law school, college and high school. Earlier in the year Mary Cosby Rinehart visited her in Danville. Mary and her husband have sailed down the intercoastal waterway to the Florida Keys and over to the Bahamas, then on to Cape Cod, the coast of Maine, and, in the fall, to Chesapeake Bay.

Martha Holland Bartsch is still teaching at Pace U. and doing freelance art work. One of her sons spent last year in Greece as part of the College Year in Athens program, and her other son is at Vermont Academy.

Bobbie Cohen Neuman teaches math at National Cathedral School and lives in Chevy Chase, MD. Her oldest son spent junior year in Israel.

Also in Chevy Chase, Sally Mathiasen Prince is president of a small retail chain; she is opening her seventh boutique, The Lemon Twist Shop, at the Homestead in September. Her daughter just finished Yale, and her son is beginning there this fall. A younger son is in the eighth grade at Landon School.

Lynne Nalley Coates teaches in high school and is writing her first novel. She wrote that she's been searching for Annie Cone Birgel for 10 years.

Celia Williams Dunn traveled to Korea, Hong Kong, China and Japan in April for a combined business/pleasure trip.

Sara Finnegan Lycett has spent the past year traveling, both business and pleasure. In addition to traveling around this country, she also went to Tokyo, Hong Kong, Singapore and Sydney, and reports that medical books still sell very well in Southeast Asia. She also went on the SBC alumnae trip to East Europe.

Susie Prichard Pace helps her husband in his "rental business" and investments. Their two oldest children are at the U. of Richmond, and they have two daughters still at home.

Mary Hunter Kennedy Daly spent two months in Zurich studying at the Jung Institute. Her daughter spent the year with a family in the French Alps.

Fran Brackenridge Neumann is in the midst of a career change after 23 years. She is still involved with dog sports with her Rottweilers.

Rue Wallace Judd is continuing with her publishing business, Starwood, which produces photographic products, posters, cards, engagement and wall calendars, primarily of the Washington, DC, area. She was president of the Texas State Society and Patti Birge Tyson is now V.P. of the Society and will become president in 1985. Rue also wrote that Willia Fales Eckerberg and her husband Lennart are back in Washington after his stint as Swedish ambassador to Germany.

Maria Garnett Hood's daughter is a senior at SBC, and she has two sons at William and Mary. Maria and her husband Bob are still with Northampton Schools in the winter and operate Camp Greenbrier in the summer. At camp they're thrilled to have the sons of several SBC alums.

Mary Gellerson Adams lives in Bangor, ME, where she writes an editorial column for the Bangor Daily News, Maine's largest daily newspaper. She served four years on the Maine State Board of Education and from 1978-1982 was very active politically. Mary was presented with Maine's first Rockefeller Award for political courage by the state Republican Party.

Cindy Lowry Stein and family had a nice visit with Beverly Ambler Bradshaw and her children in Washington. Cindy works in various programs in a hospital and also helps with a meal program for the elderly.

Louise Cobb Boggs is adding an office to her house since her law practice has outgrown the "spare bedroom" office. During the past year she visited with both Nancy Coppedge Lynn and Celia Williams Dunn, via phone, while traveling between Florida and Richmond.

Ann Sinwell Gabor has a son at Michigan State U., and her daughter is a senior now and co-captain of the field hockey team. Ann works with computers and loves it.

Lucy Giles Richey lives in Darien, CT. Her daughter is a junior at Colgate, and son Tommy is still at home.

Bee Newman Thayer and family are in Madison, NJ. Daughter Emily is at Middlebury College and son Bill is looking into colleges. Chris is in the 8th grade and in the same class as my nephew Russell Johnson (third of four sons of Carol Warboys Johnson '62).

Bonnie Frazer lives in Amherst, MA, where she is working toward a B.S. in Soil Science at the U. of Mass. During summers she is a student trainee with the soil conservation service in New Hartford.

Linda McArthur Hollis was stage manager for a production of Moliere's Tartuffe. In May she and Rob celebrated their 20th wedding anniversary with a trip to Paris. Janna Staley Fitzgerald and I had a wonderful visit with Linda on the way to NYC for some theatre, etc. in the spring of '83 and hope to do this again soon.

Cozy Owings Grant is in Lutherville, MO, and does volunteer work at a senior center and in a hospital gift shop.

Marjorie Hill Bradford has visited back and forth with Faith Bullis Sebring and her children twice over the past two years after not seeing each other for twenty years! Marjorie's son Mike is a freshman at Emory. Faith's daughter Heather is a freshman at Villanova.

Suzanne Taylor Gouyer is chairman of the mathematics department at Amherst County High School.

Willoughby Applegate Ansell arranged a party in NYC last year; it was held at the apartment of Molly Haskell Sarris. Among those attending were Babs Childrey Fowler, Jeanne Bounds Hamilton and Suzanne Rutlin Roth. Willoughby's daughter Susan is a student at the College of New Rochelle. One of the first people Susan met at the college was Barbie Lewis Weed '59 who works in the admissions office.

Jan and I enjoy working on this column and are encouraged each spring when an increased number of people respond to our postcard.

Secretary and Fund Agent

Whitney Jester Ranstrom (Mrs. Lee William), 55 Rockledge Dr., Stamford, CT 06902

Thanks to each and every one of you who took the time to write and let me know what has happened in your life over the past year. I have really enjoyed reading your postcards and notes that you sent with your contributions.

Grace Powers Banks writes that she and Bill have definitely put roots down in Alexandria, VA, near Mt. Vernon with their three daughters Elizabeth (13), Nancy (11) and Kathryn (6). Her daughter Michele has given her a granddaughter — Grace Ashley. Grace is teaching piano and voice and directing a children's choir. Bill is finishing a book for Moody Press (a Greek lexicon) when he's not writing fugues. She loves being a grandmother and feels younger than she did at 30.

Blair Both moved back "home" to North Carolina in fall, 1983, after her 3½-year fascinating sojourn in Vancouver, BC. Her work for an architectural research and planning firm made her appreciate her SBC art history courses anew. This fall Blair plans to enter the one-year Lay Studies program at Trinity Episcopal School for Ministry in Pittsburgh.

Abby Mason Browne was elected to the Boston School Committee's District 8 seat in last fall's general election. Abby has been active in civic and community affairs for the past 15 years. Most recently she has been administrative assistant for a special needs school in Concord, former aide to a City Councilor and an overseer of Children's Hospital. She and Al have two children.

The Outstanding School Librarian

Award for 1984 was presented to Alice Virginia Dodd by the Jefferson County School Librarian Association. The mayor of Louisville, Harvey Sloan, made the surprise presentation. Alice Virginia is the librarian at Myers Middle School and likes what she does. The 6, 7, and 8th graders challenge her daily and create a very lively atmosphere. -

Scribbie Scribner Euston didn't know that 40 was magic. Since no one ever comes to Miami, she hasn't any news — just everyday routine (chaos) of three boys. The eldest has a driver's license, so she will be grey quite soon.

At 40 Johanne Vinson Finney has made a lot of new starts. She closed her real estate company and moved to Brandemill, "The Best Planned Community in America," located eight miles west of Richmond, VA. She is experiencing "being single" for the first time in her adult life.

Since 1981, Jean McIntosh has been working at New Orleans' major newspaper, The Times-Picayune, as art director of their Sunday magazine. She sees Dana Reinschmidt Thomson often. Dana is still at Tulane U. as a research assistant in the Biology Department. Jean met Janet West Cabell in New York in October for fun and to attend a series of illustrators' seminars.

As the final concert in a recital series at Centre Hill Mansion, Petersburg, Pryor Hale of Charlottesville presented a program of some of the Appalachian ballads which were collected by her great-uncle, the late Prof. Arthur Kyle Davis, Jr., of UVA. Pryor is a member of the faculty of Piedmont Community College.

Anne Butler Hamilton received the Julia B. Collier award and first place for Juvenile Fiction at the 1982 USL Deep South Writers Conference for her book titled Little Chase & Big Fat Aunt May. Her second volume of these stories won second prize for Juvenile Fiction at the 1983 Conference. Anne has a new book out and continues writing. Chase (8) proudly wears a T-shirt which says in large letters "MY MOM IS 40," so there's been no question of hiding that fact.

The most important event of Juliet Young Hancock's 40th year was the birth of Pamela on Oct. 20. She is a most enjoyable addition to their spread-out family. Tracy (16) is well into her college search and Craig (11) is excitedly gearing up for junior high next year. The varied activities of these ages is a challenge to keep up with — never a dull moment. Juliet also continues with her Junior League and PTA commitments "for diversion."

Bunny Sutton Healy adopted Eben Sutton Healy in February, 1983, when he was 3 days old. He is now 15 months and delightful.

Another writer, Sally McCrady Hubbard, is one of thirteen Houston poets who contributed to The Leaf Raker, A Collection of Poems published in October.

Peggy Johnson has a 9-year-old son and is the media specialist at the Middle School in Elberton, GA.

Dabney Williams McCoy and a friend have started a business this year doing computer mailing and word processing for small businesses, volunteer and civic groups. It's really an adjustment being back in the work force after 15 years, with the additional demands of children 16, 12, and 6. Her husband also started his own business this year, so it's been frantic; but they love it. Somehow Dabney has also managed to stay very active with Junior League work.

Sweet Briar and Alumnae activities are consuming at least one week per month for Mary K. Lee McDonald. The McDonald's are all well, happy and too involved. Mary K. has done a workshop for the Urban League of Richmond and is working on the opening events for Lynda Robb's (first lady of Virginia) project — Virginia Women's Cultural History and Exhibit — to open at the Virginia Museum in November. The entire family is going to Philmont — the Boy Scout High Adventure spot — in New Mexico in July and then touring New Mexico and Colorado.

Panama, Central America, is the home of Brookie Patterson Mahlstedt while Paul is stationed there in the Navy. They chose to live in Panama City rather than Base Housing in hopes the children would learn Spanish, but life there is too segregated and Brookie spends too much time driving Doug (12) and Andrew (8) to activities at the canal area. Consequently they are moving into Base Housing this summer. Lucky Brookie is enjoying a live-in maid, gardener and a weekly seamstress — a luxury that military salaries do not permit in the U.S. Brookie hopes to do a lot of traveling and plans to see Alice Perry Parks in Guatemala. And if you happen to be passing through...

Having attained the big 4-0, Dryden Childs Murck is finding life picking up speed. Just as she had gotten heavily involved in community theatre and commercial modeling, Sandy took a new job in Grand Rapids, MI. They all hope to be ensconced there by fall, where Sandy is very happy as director of sales and marketing for Rowe International. The Murcks miss Cleveland but feel the move will be a wonderful adventure.

Laura Haskell Phinizy has just finished a year as president of the Junior League and is going sustaining. She loved seeing other SBC girls at various meetings. Now she will be keeping up with a 16-year-old high school senior and another high schooler — Louise and Laura. Marion is still in grammar school. All three play tennis. A good friend of Marion's — Emory Calhoun — is daughter of Aline Rex Calhoun. Laura and Marion are looking forward to a visit from the Calhouns this summer.

Mibs Sebring Raney is teaching part-time at a local college. And as unbelievable as it seems, this summer they will be looking at colleges with Mibs who will be heading into her senior year.

Lynn Morgan Reynolds writes that life is busy for the Reynolds family. Brad has been assistant Attorney General for Civil Rights during this administration — a difficult and controversial job. Lynn has been busy dealing with children, their activities and a host of volunteer jobs at church, school and hospice. Young Brad will enter Vanderbilt this fall while Melissa (15), Kristina (13) and Wendy (12) are attending Holton-Arms. Melissa is into competitive horse showing, so they are on the road a lot. Last year she was Children's Hunter champion in Maryland.

Saralyn McAlee Smith finds being 40 isn't bad at all — not when she became a mother twice over for the first time. Robert Hampton, born Sept. 8, 1983, and Laura Elizabeth, born Jan. 20, 1983, and adopted March 10 keep her very busy. Laura, petite, and Robbie, a young giant, are often mistaken for twins. Saralyn is truly enjoying her new role as full-time housewife and mother and wouldn't trade it for anything. The Smiths plan an extensive car trip this summer to see the grandparents in Georgia and New Jersey.

Janie Hamill Somner is "transitioning" from parenting three very active children — Sandford (15), Jane (14) and Graydon (9) — to graduate school to obtain a Master of Divinity degree at Eden Theological Seminary. In addition to classes she spent the past year doing clinical pastoral work at the State Mental Hospital. Sandy is still with Ralston-Purina as director of administration. In between they travel quite a bit — New Zealand, Canadian backpacking, a summer in England, lots of skiing and a contemporary house in the works in the British Virgin Islands. And Janie still finds time for distance swimming and beekeeping.

Elvira McMillan Tate wrote with the tragic news of the death of her husband Al who was struck and killed by lightning on Aug. 9, 1983, while they were in Florida on a family vacation. We extend our deepest sympathy to Elvira and her four children.

Charlie and Merrily Austin Teasley have three daughters: Christi (19), Angy (17) and Bettie (13). Christi is completing her freshman year at Rhode Island School of Design. Charlie is a real estate appraiser, and Merrily is general manager of the Monteagle Assembly, the only surviving Chautauqua in the South. They are also owners and innkeepers of Edgeworth Inn (built in 1896 and on the National Register) within the Assembly grounds. In addition, they are actively involved in certified rehabilitation of the inn and are now enjoying sharing it with guests. Several other SBC girls visit the Assembly and have cottages there. Bonnie Hulse Young and Frank with their children, Cobbie and Frank, have been up from Birmingham to visit.

Toni Thomas has been in the midst of treatment for cancer. I am pleased to report that she seems to be doing very well, is feeling pretty good and optimistic, and celebrated her 40th with a lot of enthusiasm. A nice side effect is a very curly head of hair. Toni, divorced for 6 years, is enjoying Julie (16) and Thomas (13) more as teenagers than as toddlers. She is wondering if anyone else has experienced the same feelings about teenagers. She often sees Barney Walker Lutsk, Nicky Batterson Hall and Caroline Richardson Cutler.

For Sallie Mullins Thompson, 1983 was a great year with IBM. She is an advisory finance industry specialist working with banks and S and L's in Harris County in the Houston area where she has been for nine years. And Sallie really, really likes what she is doing. Kathryn (9), in 3rd grade, is a joy and pleasure to have. She takes ballet and does Brownies — a typical feminine girl.

Katy Weinrich van Geel recently finished work on an M.B.A. from the University of Rochester and will start work at a public accounting firm in the fall. Katy feels that if she ever passes the CPA exam, she will be "the oldest person in history to do so..." Tyll and children Alix (12) and Tap (10) are sources of great joy.

Marielyce Barclay Watner wrote that Dryden (10) in the 4th grade and Cregg (8) in the 2nd grade are actively involved in sports and school activities. She enjoys volunteer work in the schools and community. Michael and Marielyce have recently purchased a home in Bermuda where they spend as much time as possible.

Mal Leslie Welch and Bobby have bought an 1865 three-story Victorian in Riverside, CT, that needs TLC from top to bottom. Once it's renovated, the children, Robbie (14) and Leslie (11) will move to the top floor with their music and sports equipment. The parents will wallow in privacy on the second floor. Bobby has just begun his own division at Ogilvy & Mather. Mal is writing for profit and non-profit. And they have just celebrated their 20th wedding anniversary.

Lee and I have just returned from a week's vacation in Newport Beach and San Diego. The sun and warmth was a welcome relief from the long cold winter here in Connecticut. Stacy (15) will arrive for the summer in another month, a visit we both look forward to each year. She must first finish her singing and acrobatic role in Barnum, before she can come, though. This year we will spend a week in Myrtle Beach, SC, at the Jester family reunion.

That's all the news of 1984 for the class of 1965. I look forward to seeing many of you at our 20th reunion next May. Let's try to get the largest turnout ever.

1969

Phyllis Girard enjoyed seeing members of the Class of '69 at Reunion. It was her first trip back to SBC since graduation, and she had "a fantastic time."

For Jane Ilingworth Pierce this has been a happy, busy year. She has taken a position as organist-choir director at a small Episcopal Church nearby. James liked second grade, and Sarah seemed happy in nursery school.

Pamela Tipton Newton and Carl were expecting a baby in July, presumably now arrived. Their business has been relocated in a new shop, spacious and pleasant, in a shopping center, which affords excellent parking.

Secretary
Hibernia (Mac) Cuthbert Langley (Mrs. William John), 403 Patjens Lane, Mount Pleasant, SC 29464

Fund Agents
Susan (Scottie) O'Toole, 103 Lynbrook Circle, Dewitt, NY 13214
Susan Dern Plank (Mrs. David P.), 302 Rue Lemans, Clarksville, TN 37042

Receiving all your news first hand has made up for my present task, putting it all together. It's going to be tough to follow in Weezie's footsteps as class secretary, but here goes.

Abby Allen Rennekamp is living on a farm in Kentucky and raising dogs, horses and two little girls, ages 6 months and 2 years. With all that going on, Abby reports that her life always seems to be in a turmoil.

Rita Anselmo is living in Maryland and working with the USOA and selling real estate part-time. In spite of two jobs she found time to travel to Rome and Paris during the past year and to marry John Whittler on April 7. They had just returned from Mexico when she wrote her postcard. Now she is learning to be a step-mother, too.

Alison Baker is enjoying her freedom from the world of advertising agencies as she works as an artist (weaver) and producer for local Atlanta photographer Gary Gruby.

Charlotte Battle Robbins and Todd are glad to be back in Memphis where Todd is in practice. They bought an old house that was already restored and had an addition to the family on February 29. As Charlotte says, she'll "be eternally young!"

Cindy Bekins writes from Omaha that she keeps busy selling real estate and working with the Junior League. She was recently chosen by the Chamber of Commerce to participate in a course called "Leadership Omaha." She took a trip to Captiva and Sanibel Islands in Florida late this past winter. Cindy was a wonderful photographer at our 10th reunion, and all her pictures are in our class yearbook. We can look and laugh at ourselves at our 15th.

Helen Bertles Pearce, living now in South Africa, has had great success with her career as an artist. Specializing in watercolors, she exhibited 25 of her works at the Belle Haven Club in Greenwich, CT. Several of her paintings have fared well in juried competitions in Bermuda.

Anne Billings McDougall and husband Ed spent several days last fall with Ann Major Gibb and Ernie when the Gibbs were in Miami for a meeting. Anne's 2-year-old Maggie, church activities, the Junior League and a counseling course keep her hopping at the moment. Anne reports that Miami is not as bad as they say!

With the excuse of needing help writing our class notes, I have had several conversations with Weezie Blakeslee Gilpin. She, Bob and Alexa, 7, Blake, 5, and Christopher, 2, are enjoying dorm life at Milton Academy. In spite of that enjoyment though, they were looking forward to the completion of their house on Martha's Vineyard in June. An unfinished exam and paper due in a matter of hours for her M.Ed. course work at Lesley College in Boston cut our conversation short.

Pascale Boulard Dutilleul lives just outside Paris in Cergy. Last summer Robin Harmon O'Neil and family stayed at her house. A few weeks later Pascale visited with Jane Potts Sutherland and Bud on their Parisian tour. Pascale looks after her three daughters and does volunteer work. She was awaiting the birth of her fourth child in the spring.

Lee Brennan Kidd's third little boy, Christopher Walker, arrived in February. To end Kevin's commute from Atlanta to New Orleans, the Kidds moved to New Orleans at the end of March.

Also moving is Dorsie Buck Harrison. Her husband Charlie began an oncology fellowship in Miami in June, and though they hated to leave their families, they were looking forward to life in a climate different from Fort Washington, MD.

Mary Buxton writes from Los Gatos, CA, that she is happy in her career as a psychotherapist. She has spent lots of time with Jane Potts Sutherland, Jennifer Wherry Elrod and Diane Dale Reiling, all of whom live in the San Francisco area.

Another West Coaster is Peggy Cheesewright Garner, who is involved with the Seattle, WA, Junior League. She is still on contract with a local hospital to lead a baby-sitting course and to coordinate the hiring and training of all their instructors. She and John spent Christmas in Tahoe and a week in Phoenix for tennis lessons.

Anita Clarendon Ledsinger and Chuck are settling into their new home in Dallas after having moved last August from Memphis. Chuck is vice president of finance and administration for Embassy Suites, a subsidiary of Holiday Inns. Anita also works for Embassy Suites in their communications department as well as on her creative writing. Oughter Leila, 2½, is the third part of her work load.

Rene Conover Reed spends most of her time answering her two-year-old's never ending "What's that?" question. We can all sympathize!

In Portland, OR, Mary Dantford is practicing law and has traveled a lot on her current case, most recently to New York City, where she saw Mimi '71 and Alice Fahs. Michael is still running in marathons, and during his spring vacation from teaching they traveled to the Yucatan Peninsula for a week.

Sue Dern Plank and Dave, a company commander with the 20th Engineer Battalion at Fort Campbell, KY, moved to nearby Clarksville, TN, from Fort Belvoir, VA, last June. Sue spent the summer working as a curator for the Canajoharie (NY) Library and Art Gallery. In late August she visited in Colorado, detouring on the way home to see the Tetons and Yellowstone National Park. Now Sue is job hunting, working on her house, and acting as an admissions representative for Sweet Briar. She sends requests to everyone for contributions to the Alumnae Fund.

Lillian Dugger Gough is now divorced and living happily on Sandy Hook Bay in New Jersey where she sails a Hobe Cat in good weather. She is presently managing a software engineering group with Bell Laboratories, testing minicomputers and smart terminals and doing some applied artificial research on the side.

Molly Dunn Martin is in Montgomery, AL, where William has a busy law practice dealing mostly in commercial real estate development. Daughter Cameron is a first-grader, and Molly raises dalmations and attends dog shows all over the Southeast. She visited with Peggy Cartwright Brandetsas in Blowing Rock, NC, and recently heard from Ruth Rowan Brown, who has a new daughter named Emily.

Chris Eng Leventhal and Peter now have a son, Nicholas Lee, in addition to four-year-old Amy. Chris is still free-lance copyediting and proofreading and serves on the board of Amy's nursery school and exercises and dances six times a week. Peter runs their health food store in old Greenwich while he studies for his M.S. in clinical nutrition and teaches martial arts.

Valerie Fannon Phillips announces the birth of a daughter, Blair Andrews Phillips, on June 4, 1984.

Janey Fassinger is selling veterinary products in western Pennsylvania and parts of West Virginia. Her Arabian breeding program is going well, having produced the 1983 Pennsylvania Arabian Association's Junior Champion Colt. She plans to export her first horse soon.

Alison Fifer Stonecipher had a baby in September, John Sharman, who joins 3½-year-old brother Will. She is active in the Junior League, is on the board of Flexible Career Associates, and just took her California real estate license exam. When she can, she exercises and cooks "decent" meals. She and husband Daniel went to Italy in March to ski.

Moving from St. Louis, MO, to New York City is Lyn Fisher Cortright. Now divorced, she is a financial planning consultant and securities broker with Drexel Burnham Lambert. Since graduation she has done a lot of traveling, has earned an M.B.A. and is working on a Certified Financial Planner certificate. For a break from academia and work Lyn raises and trains golden retrievers, four of which have become champions, and is perfecting her dressage.

Lisa Fowler Winslow combines her career as a law librarian with looking after two-year-old Russell and doing lots of volunteer work. She took two weeks off in the fall to travel to Italy with her mother and sister while husband Bill babysat.

With four children to look after, Emily Garth Brown reports that she now "can only write in simple sentences." She says her house is in a mess, but in spite of that life is great.

Janie Genster is still lecturing part-time at UVa Law School, commuting there from Washington, DC. Emily will be 3 in October, and Darcy, 1 in June. With the arrival of their second daughter, Janie and John feel they've made the transition from having a child to having a family.

Susan Hancock Duke and Roy and sons Ryan, 9, and Scot, 5, moved this summer to Greensboro, NC, so Roy can be closer to his accounts. Last September Susan and Roy went to New Orleans where they had a great time with Linda Lipscomb, Cary Davis King and Celia Martin.

Another traveler is Robin Harmon O'Neil who spent two months in Europe last year with husband John and their three children. Living in Columbia, SC, Robin works as an interior designer and is busy fox-hunting. John has been reappointed chairman of the Department of Art at USC for three more years, and in April he and Robin went to New Orleans on museum business.

Chris Hegarty Savage works three days a week in medical technology at University Suburban Health Center Pathology Lab and husband Pat is an assistant vice-president with Central National Bank in Cleveland. They have enjoyed 2½-year-old son Clay so much that he'll be a big brother in December.

Wendy Hoilman Mitchell continues her job with the Virginia Department of Agriculture working on gypsy moth control in the Richmond area among other programs. Joe is working on a book on reptiles and amphibians of Virginia with the help of a grant from the Virginia Game Commission. He is still at the University of Richmond. Son Joshua is 5, and he and Wendy help Joe with his book. One of their "pleasures" was hatching 150 baby turtles last fall.

Kris Howell, living in Greensboro, is teaching in the Department of Business and Economics at High Point College. She also teaches German. She spent a week in Aspen during the spring, and she still has her horse.

Pam Ivens Renner's biggest news is the birth of her son, Michael Barton, last November. Michael practices law for the Marriott Corporation. They have bought a house in Stafford, PA, five minutes from Michael's office and hope to redecorate it soon. Pam plans to go back to school part-time next spring.

After a 14-month honeymoon Susan Kirby Peacock and David Moynahan are back in Tallahassee. Their traveling time was spent catching freighters in the South Pacific, walking around the islands of Java and Bali, volunteering in a Kenya bush hospital and hitchhiking through Europe on the way home. Though Susan is working part-time as a pharmacist and Dave, an MD, half-time at a new HMO, they are planning their next trip, sailing across the Gulf Stream to the Bahamas. Susan occasionally sees Sue Rockwell Patten and Char Reed-Miller.

Janie Knutson James is loving every minute of motherhood as she looks after Patrick, 26 months, and Elizabeth, born last November. She, Michael, the children, and Waco the dog are happily settled in Farmington, CT, where Janie works with a women's club in addition to enjoying her family.

Diane Leslie was recently promoted to the position of vice-president at Manufacturers Hanover and will be moving to London at the end of May to work in their offices there. She took a Caribbean cruise at the end of April, visiting St. Lucia, Martinique and Guadeloupe.

Linda Lipscomb is working with the World's Fair in corporate ticket programs, a job she loves and one that allows her to do some traveling. She went to San Francisco for Thanksgiving where she saw Jane Potts Sutherland, Mary Buxton, Diane Dale Reiling, and Jennifer Wherry Elrod. She often sees Gypsy Bear Van Antwerp and Tom in Mobile. She has fully recovered from her back surgery which kept her from coming to our reunion.

Jane Lucas's interior design consulting firm has had a successful first year. She has been doing mostly commercial design jobs but has done a few residential ones. She was elected treasurer of the New England Chapter of the American Society of Interior Designers and is teaching part-time at two local colleges.

Jane McCutcheon McFadden was expecting baby #3 in May. In spite of her condition she and Barclay took their six-year-old son skiing in Vail in January. Her shop keeps her busy, and she had plans to spend the summer in Maine and South Carolina.

Alice McInnis Hughes lives in Edmond, OK. Her Kenneth, 4, played soccer this spring; Sarah Beth, 15 months, is toddling and exploring. The Hughes family had a Japanese teacher living with them for six months, but she has now returned home to teach kindergarten.

Marion McKee Humphreys says life couldn't be better for her. Her husband and their two boys, 4½ years and 20 months, keep her hopping. They were all looking forward to a month at the shore during the summer.

An October trip to Miami meant that Ann Major Gibb was able to spend lots of time with Anne Billings McDougall. Ann is very involved with church work, Virginians Opposing Drunk Driving, her medical auxiliary, and with Emily, 5, and David, 2½.

Lisa Marshall Chalmers writes from Atlanta that Marshall, 3, will be a big brother in November. She had a wild visit with Emily Garth Brown and her four children and was planning trips to Pawley's Island and Amelia Island for the summer. Husband David is keeping busy in Atlanta's real estate world.

Lois Means got her real estate license in March in Charleston, SC, and anticipates a busy future with the expected housing boom.

Other San Francisco visitors this year were Betsie Meric Gambel and Greg who enjoyed seeing the local Sweet Briar contingent. Betsie was looking forward to Lee Brennan Kidd's move to New Orleans. Probably her biggest accomplishment of the year was chaperoning the Sacred Heart 8th grade trip to Washington, DC, and Williamsburg, VA, in January. She was in charge of 65 girls, and in spite of being fogged in in Pittsburgh she lived to tell the tale!

Sally Moran Lemmer is glad to be back in Virginia. Joe is a physician at the Lewis-Gale Clinic in Roanoke, and Sally is staying busy landscaping their new house and running alter Eric.

After three years of recruiting, hiring and traveling, Scottie D'Toole is looking forward to a new job at GE.

She will be responsible for manpower and salary planning and other duties related to the software engineering group. She was planning a Scandinavian summer trip, picking up a Saab while in Sweden.

Betsy Perry, in New York City, changed jobs in February from publishing textbooks to publishing trade books. She loves the new job but was planning a two-month maternity leave in May when she and Neale were expecting their first child.

Giving group and private golf lessons keeps Jean Platt Spencer busy, as do Jessica, 3, and Katie, 16 months. She also works part-time in the pro shop and at her family's inn. While bartending four nights a week, David is getting things together for a garden shop that they hope to open this fall. In March they spent two days skiing in Vermont and in April took a five day trip to Florida.

Jane Potts Sutherland and Bud have enjoyed all their Sweet Briar visitors as well as the San Francisco-dwelling Sweet Briar alumni. They all got together for Thanksgiving dinner while Linda Lipscomb was visiting from New Orleans. Also visiting them have been Betsie Meric Gambel and Greg from New Orleans, Cary Davis King and Henry who were on their way to the Orient, and Lisa Wickham Farnum and Chuck. Jane and Bud have taken time off from entertaining to sail and ski and had a weekend trip to Yosemite National Park planned with Mary Buxton when she wrote.

Traveling, from Denver to Gulfport, MS, as a marketing analyst for an insurance company has kept Kathy Pretzfelder Steele on the go. Husband Dave holds down the fort with Tracy, 4, and Kelly, 1, while Kathy is on the road. When she has a chance, Kathy visits with Jean Platt Spencer and hears from Debbie Pollock Meyer in Oregon.

In Greenville, SC, Carol Ann Provenance Gullivan and Mills are outnumbered by their children Anne Genevieve, 8, Henry, 3, and Harriet, 1. Carol Anne is working on The Showhouse '84 steering committee for the Junior League, does church work, and helps out in her children's schools. Mills's law firm is renovating a building for their new offices which has kept him busy. Johnny and I enjoy our visits with them when they come to nearby Kiawah Island.

After living in Tallahassee for ten years Char Reed-Miller was looking forward to a move to New York City as head of a medical consulting business. Her two partners are an ophthalmologist and a financial wizard. She hopes to have several papers published in ophthalmology literature soon and was to speak at a laser symposium in Paris in May.

We have reason to think that the fertile crescent has moved from the Middle East to Atlanta. Nan Robertson Clarke's fourth child was scheduled to join Boo, 5, Toby, 3, and Charlie, 2, in May. Having outgrown their house, the Clarke tribe made a move to larger accommodations in August. Nan is writing for the Junior League, and Hal stays busy with his law firm. Johnny and I missed our annual trip with them to Sea Island this year because of the expected Langley and Clarke additions.

Life in Farmington, NM, has been so pleasant for Sue Rockwell Patten and Malcolm that he has begun his own engineering business there. They have two children, Chris, 5, and Mollie, 3.

Cathy Rasmussen Rentzel and Chris welcomed the arrival of their third daughter, Christin Leigh, last September. They moved back into their remodeled home in time for Christmas. Cathy stays in touch with Sweet Briar through work as area representative.

Sharon Sanders Williams has been busy helping Dennis in his engineering consulting business and taking care of 18-month-old Keith. She and Dennis had a wonderful spring vacation in France and Germany and visited in Munich with Chris Sherwood Warner.

Jeanne Schaefer Bingham was looking forward to the birth of her first child in June. She said that, though a baby after ten years of marriage would bring lots of changes, they're excited.

Candy Sheffield Neilson and Keith were expecting their second child in June who will join Sarah, 2½. Candy serves as an officer of the United Methodist Women and is singing with the Sweet Adelines. In November they will compete with 25 of the top choruses in the world in Las Vegas.

Tina Sheris Wood and John love life in Roanoke. Lissa is finishing kindergarten and hoped to be on the swim team this past summer. Adam at 2½ is quite busy. Tina has become very involved with the medical auxiliary, and the whole family visited Disney World in February.

Renee Sterling celebrated Christmas in Italy with family and friends. While abroad she spent a week in Switzerland with Anya Starosolska '74.

Jan Storey Honik and Eric welcomed David Storey Honik into this world on March 30. They managed to squeeze in trips to Italy and Paris before his arrival.

In anticipation of the arrival of their first child at the end of December, Mary Beverly Taylor Haque has had a grand time redecorating her house. She and Initiaz are both teaching at Clemson U., he in mechanical engineering and she in landscape design. Being pregnant has slowed her consulting activities but not her teaching, and she plans to be back in the classroom six weeks after the baby's arrival. The garden tour of Europe they hosted last summer was great.

Betsy Thayer Clough's baby Christy was born May 21, 1983. She is continuing her marketing research consulting on a reduced schedule, and she and David are finding parenthood to be the biggest thrill of their lives.

Kathy Waters Marshall is settled in Charlottesville now where Lawson is executive editor of The Daily Progress. Jessie, 7, Laura, 4, and John, 1, keep her busy.

Lisa Wickham Farnum moved to Minneapolis in May with family and company, Caterpillar, for an indefinite tour of duty.

Living in Dedham, MA, Lucinda Young Larson is a financial manager at Digital Equipment Corporation. In September she met Sweet Briar's new president. She is currently finishing her term as treasurer of the Junior League of Boston.

In New Orleans, Deborah Ziegler Hopkins works part-time for the Hopkins Company. She has become very involved with volunteer work in the city and with the alumnae executive board. She loves her fall and spring visits to Sweet Briar that the latter commitment allows. Debi had a wonderful visit with Betsy Perry in New York recently and reports that Terry Christovich Gay and Charlie just moved into a new home. Looking after her 2-year-old son fills up any left over time Debi may have.

And I, Mac Cuthbert Langley, find that writing these notes is slow going since I have to stop with every other paragraph to change or feed 5-week-old Hibernia McIlwaine Langley. She joined brother Will, 5, on March 19. Johnny's pediatric practice is booming thanks to prolific types like the Class of 1973. And I keep busy with church work, Will's Suzuki piano lessons, part-time work in Johnny's office and the Junior League.

I had a wonderful time at our 10th reunion as did everyone who came, and to those who couldn't come, start making plans now for our 15th. It's well worth the trip. Even the spouses had a great time, or at least mine sure did!

Meg Shields Duke has been enjoying Denver as a mother, a frequent skier, and part-time worker — at both a downtown law firm and at the Reagan/Bush reelection headquarters. She has seen Ann Stryker Busch and President Nenah Fry. Cheryl Lux and her husband John continue to love ranch life in Montana. She has been active in state and federal activities on wilderness and wildlife issues and attributes her ability to enter the political arena to her combined SBC and Washington background. She keeps in touch with Sally Berriman who is selling pharmaceuticals in Philadelphia for Stewart Co. Rikki (Frederica) Catanzaro Nicholl is engaged to Francis Golden. She has been schooling her hunter and plans to enter him in the A-rated shows this spring and summer. She also plans to spend some time in Europe this summer.

Kit Newman is still living in Houston and was married to Care Deterin in April. Martha French '75 was in the wedding. The engagement story was great — one day in Paris while touring after her stint at the Cordon Bleu Cooking School. Chardon Harrigan Jenks had her first baby this past winter. Her husband John is now working as assistant professor at Albany Medical College. Alix Callie Wilson has been living in a farm house in Timonium, MD, for two years. Daughter Jennifer will be 3 years old in July '84. Cathy Slatinshek has moved to Falls Church, VA, and has left the Labor Department to return to work at the CIA. Treacy Markey Shaw continues working as press media coordinator of the Public Affairs Division of Rich's Department Store in Atlanta. She has met many celebrities in line of duty and loves the job. Her husband Mark continues his corporate lending activities as an assistant vice president of Citicorp. He is also about to wind up weekend classes at Emory U. to earn an M.B.A., whereupon he and Treacy will fly to London to conclude the program and enjoy a traveling blitz.

I, Sally Mott Lawrence, when not writing your class notes, continue working as a political appointee at the Federal Communications Commission here in Washington. I have also joined the Junior League which I find to be a very stimulating and satisfying volunteer activity. My husband Bob graduated with honors from Georgetown Law last May and, when he is not typing your class notes, is working with the firm of Kutak Rock & Huie in D.C. We had a super couple of vacations this year — one in Jamaica and one spring skiing in Colorado. I so enjoy hearing from all of you and writing these notes. Keep it up! Please, all, give serious thought to attending our big tenth in '86 — it won't be the same without each and every one of you.

Secretary Ellen Sellers McDowell (Mrs. Rex W.), 3862 Duchess Trail, Dallas, TX 75229
Fund Agent Lu Litton, P.O. Box 74, 110 Berkshire, Greensboro, NC 27402

Thank you for all the interesting news. It seems that everyone is busy with new babies. My new "baby" is my cooking school that opened last September. I have never worked so much, but I am really enjoying it. Lisa Wray Longino '78 is in Dallas and working with me at the school. Also, Becky Frost Good recently taught a Basic Italian Cooking course that was a great success. It has been a treat working with SBC friends. And keeping busy with work, family, and other activities seems to be the prevailing routine of most of our classmates. Now for the news from everyone.

The good news from Louise Aiken Calhoun is her marriage to Keith Calhoun, a lawyer in Atlanta, GA. Cathy Goodhart Henson was her matron-on-honor. Louise is with Harcourt Brace Jovanovich, Inc., publishing company.

Ramona Atkins is a pharmacist at Lynchburg General Hospital. In Richmond, Jane Behringer is working toward her Master's in Information Systems at VCU. She was married to Steven in Feb. '84. She wrote she has been busy with the wedding, school, new house, and summer house in Ohio.

Barb Bernick Martin and Wayne traveled to Palm Springs, Dallas, and Denver in the month of February. Besides working as an accountant for the State of Virginia, she finds time after work to do aerobics and work on her house and yard. Barb has also just completed refinishing a desk. She sees Cindy Kendree Thieringer often and reports Cindy's new baby is a darling girl.

Vera Blake Thiers is still in Germany after 6½ years. Gerd is working as a research resident for the University School of Dermatology. Vera is still with Horizon Tours and now runs the U.S. Military Travel Dept. as the manager of operations. She still loves to play tour guide when she gets to go to Rome and Switzerland, her favorite places. She has a sofa waiting for anyone who comes to Frankfurt.

Sally Bonham Mohle and Pete have been fixing a new house in Fairfax, VA. She says they have plenty of room for any classmates who are passing through the D.C. area. While making a routine business call she was surprised to talk with Angela Scully who was working in Congressman Frank Wolf's campaign in Northern Virginia.

Sarah Bruce Kelly lives in Richmond with husband Frank and 3-year-old Frankie. Frank is marketing director for Sarah's father's advertising firm. Last summer they renovated an old townhouse in the city and said it was quite a job. They are involved in their spare time with the Richmond Republican Committee. She recently attended a cocktail party in honor of SBC's new president.

When we read this, Laurie Burrell might have taken a leave of absence from her job as a sales rep. for Western Union Gov't Communications to have a last fling at "irresponsible youth." She planned to move to Colorado to work at a ski resort. Last summer she was the maid of honor in Betsy Moore Rice's ('76) wedding.

In Stamford, CT, David and Cain Thomas Linzee have seen Elvira Cash Pecora and Chip who have been living in New Jersey. Long Island Sound provides recreation when they are not working. Cain is a medical editor for Cliggott Publishing in Greenwich on a journal called Consultant. David is writing his fourth novel and also works as a manuscript reviewer for Book-of-the-Month-Club. They planned a trip to Virginia last spring and hoped to stop by SBC. Elvira and Chip were married last September and honeymooned in Paris for two weeks. They moved to the Boston area in May where Chip will be a marketing rep. with Atex. She hoped to continue her teaching (2½ to 5 yr. olds) there.

All is well in D.C. with Barb Clark McLaughlin whose daughter Sarah Prince keeps her laughing. She often sees Carrington Brown Wise '76 and her two children. Also in D.C. is Lyndi Cote. She is enjoying teaching 2nd grade and jazzercise, and volunteering at Georgetown University Hospital where she works with critically ill infants. She spent part of last summer in Portugal. Lyndi still plays bridge and often sees Peggy Weimer '76. She also saw Debbie Gahagan Hill '76, husband, and baby boy last fall, as well as Ellen Sullivan.

Farnell Cowan went to England for two weeks last April and saw Queen Elizabeth at Westminster Abbey. She is in international personal banking at the Bank of Boston and likes dealing with the international customers. Sarah Croft will be in London this fall attending school. She has been in Hawaii for several months enjoying the sea and the salt air.

In New York, Ann Crossingham Cannon has almost obtained her private pilot's license. Her husband Bill still has Auld Golf Clubs and loves it. Their children Leslie Ann and Will model for the family company, Spencer's.

Debby Epperson Sizer expected her third child in May. Her other two boys are Brian, 7 and Steven, 3. She was preparing for an FCC hearing in the summer for Harmony Broadcasting Corporation to construct an FM radio station in South Carolina. Debby is president of the company.

Working hard in the M.B.A./J.D. program at UVA is Denise Etheridge. She worked during the summer at Milbank Tweed Hadley & McCloy, a Wall St. law firm. Denise will graduate in May '85. Good work. Susan Faist graduated with an M.S. in chemical engineering from MIT and worked with Mobil Oil until January '84. She then joined a small private petroleum trading and shipping company, Center Point Consortium, as director of technical services. Her market research and technical studies support the company's world wide trading activities. She lives in a lake-front house in Litchfield County, CT.

In May '83, Debbie Falcigno Sibiga finished her M.Eds. in Special Education and Early Childhood at UNH. She changed jobs last October to be closer to home. She is now the elementary special education coordinator for the Exeter, NH, School System. She reports the job is fun, exciting, and a new challenge.

Quaintance Fomon has been an account executive for E.F. Hutton in La Jolla, CA, for five years. She said she was still dating Brad T. Shaw. She reported news of Carol Gamber's wedding to Mark Kenyon in Nov. '82 (Quaintance introduced them). Carol is a sugar trader in NYC for a French commodity firm. Kim Goldwasser married Eric Goldberg in May '83 and Bettie Lee married Robert Moore last year and was expecting a baby this summer. Thanks, Quaintance, for news of them.

Becky Frost Good and Steve have a darling baby girl, Beverly, born Aug. 14, '83. Becky is a vice president at Merrill Lynch Private Capital, a private banking subsidiary. Steve enjoys his tax practice at the Dallas law firm of Hughes & Hill. Besides traveling with her job, volunteering with the Jr. League, keeping up with Beverly and Steve, Becky manages to find time to play tennis with me and teach some adult classes at my cooking school. The McDowells and the Goods plan to visit the World's Fair in New Orleans this fall.

Columbus Shape Up is the name of Cathy Goodhart Henson's exercise business in Columbus, GA, that opened in September '83. Besides that, Cathy had a second daughter in March '83. Do you have enough to do Cathy? Elaine Griffin Bracewell is certainly busy with an 18-month-old son, another baby due in the summer, an upcoming move into a new house, and a new law firm started by her husband. She reports that her life is "out of control."

In England, Christine Weerasingha Hand has a son, Sebastian Hagar, who is crawling everywhere. Christine has left her job to be a full time "Mum" as the English say. They were planning to move to the country soon.

As an intelligence research specialist for the Secret Service, Renee Hanson Crowder juggles a fascinating and challenging career with the rewarding challenge of mothering a 2½-year-old son. The Crowders planned to move to a new house Memorial Day weekend.

Robin Holman Mills is busy in Paducah, KY, with motherhood and a new home with four acres. Alan sells computers and computer equipment. Michele Kass Schuldiner is in institutional sales for Lehman Brothers Kuhn Loeb in NYC covering Canadian clients. Her husband Richard is a vice president and senior options principal of First Boston Corp.

In Richmond, Cynthia Kendree

Thieringer had a bundle of joy, Kendree Marie, born on Mar. 9, 1984, weighing 8 lbs. 10 oz. She is continuing her career as commercial sales manager for This End Up Furniture Co. She attended Jane Behringer's wedding in February and reported that Jane looked great. She sees Barb Bernick Martin and Sally Kennedy McGroarty often. Sally has a part-time job as an exercise instructor, is a Sunday School teacher, is president of the SBC Club of Richmond and has the "full-time job" of running after 15-month-old Desmond. She is expecting a new addition to the family around Labor Day.

Patricia Hansbury Wahl will be administrative vice president of the Montclair-Newark Jr. League next year.

Betsy Kilborn and her fiancé Bill went to Australia for three weeks in May '83. She reports that they "fell in love with Sydney, Alice Springs in the Outback, the Great Barrier Reef, and every koala and wombat" that they saw. They hope to go back for their honeymoon after their Oct. 6th wedding. Betsy is still with Pan Am and while working the Dec. 29th London flight had Angela Scully and her new husband on board. This is news! A few people have run into Angela but I haven't yet received a first hand account from her. Hope your honeymoon was great, Angela.

Glenn King Springer is wrapping up a project, "Our Town," that she chaired for the Jr. League. Columbus was one of 12 cities in the U.S. to undertake it. They developed a history of Columbus to be taught in the 8th grade of the public and private schools. She is very proud of the work that her committee has done. Also, she is working on The Boys Club Ball, the Heritage Ball, the Southern Open golf tournament, and the Midland Horse Trials. Her red-headed Lillian is a doll (I know that first hand) and John is line and working hard. Somehow she has had time to start riding and to play in a tennis league. She sends a note to everybody to send money to her as chairman of the Golden Stairs and Junior Bench donations.

Charles Alexander (b. 3-27-83) and Courtney (now 3½) keep Debbie Koss McCarthy on her toes, as do her job as part-time music teacher at Durham Academy, Jr. League obligations, and church work. David is a project engineer at the Shearson Harris nuclear site. Debbie was the matron of honor in Ellen Watson's wedding in Montgomery, AL, in the spring. Ellen was her roommate freshman year at SBC. Ellen married Dan Kent and will live in Houston.

Phooi-Ching Lai was leaving for San Francisco for a weekend conference with the United Methodist students at UCLA when she wrote. She also planned to spend her seven-day spring break in the S.F. area. After sitting for comprehensives in April, she planned to go to Singapore from May to October to gather data for her dissertation. She expects to graduate in May '85 and to get married. Her fiancé is a surgeon-in-training in Singapore. Right now neither can give up his or her pursuits to be in the other's country. We admire all your hard work, Phooi-Ching.

Louise Lambert Hunter and Barry became parents of Graham Lambert Hunter on Jan. 16th. Louise has "retired" for a while to be home with Graham. Becky Mayer Gutierrez was expecting her first child last spring when she wrote. She lives on a ranch in New Mexico that is 150 miles away from the nearest hospital.

Last year Helen Milner Gordon and John had a new son whom they named Spencer. Their first son, John C., is almost 3. Elaine Milosis Fay expected her first baby last April. She had taken a leave of absence from the N.J. Historical Society where she is Director of Education.

Gay Owens Gates was married to Robert Lee Gates, Jr., in Aug. '83. They honeymooned in Montego Bay, Jamaica. Lisa Carangelo '80 attended Gay's wedding. Bob is Operations Manager at Appalachian Sash & Door, Inc. and Gay is a sales rep. at Treasure Masters.

All is well in Nashville reports Mary Palmer Blackmon. Her daughter Katherine Taylor Blackmon was born in January '83. She is back at Cumberland Museum part time as Assistant Development Officer. Her husband Buddy has his own music publishing company called Night of Joy Music.

Joy Ann Petro is a Senior Marketing Exec. with the SBS in Los Angeles, CA. Frances Redmond is working for Stonechurch Farms, running the office, and doing a lot of "legwork" during yearling sales for her English general manager. She loves her job and has a house on the farm. She has started to ride more and has charge of the farm's lead pony. She sees other SBC-ers Drasi von Wiesenthal '78 and Alice Cohn '74 in Lexington.

Merrill Lynch gave Molly Reeb Clark the new title senior financial advisor, and she's still trying to figure out if it is a promotion. Sounds great to us, Molly. Her daughter Nancy turned 3 in January and keeps everybody running. She sees Kathy McDonald on Kathy's business trips to Norfolk from Dallas. Kathy is an asst. V.P. with Republic Bank and a provisional in Jr. League.

Jean Romanske Jones was married in September '83. She is a letter carrier in Massachusetts. Fran Scott Tesch and Carl moved to Nashville in October and she is a manager in corporate communications for Northern Telecom, a leading worldwide manufacturer of telecommunications and integrated office systems. Her responsibilities include writing executive speeches, editing and placing feature articles, and coordinating other corporate communications projects. She travels some and hopes to see some fellow SBC'ers along the way. Carl is working for a graphics design firm and pursues his music career on the side. He played at the Grand Ole Opry earlier this year and Fran had a great time backstage. She planned to see Cain Thomas Linzee and Elvira Cash Pecora in June when she was in New York for a seminar.

Carolyn Williams Seeling and Stephen are in Columbia, SC, enjoying "life and each other." She is an international sales manager at a micro-computer manufacturing firm and travels some. She and Stephen were planning a spring vacation to England when she wrote. Also in Columbia are Maggie Sexton Johnson and Tom. Their son Daniel Hale was born three months premature Feb. '83, weighing 2 lbs. 11 oz. After a six-week stay in the hospital, Daniel came home and has been active ever since. Maggie had been in nursing school and intended to go back last December to graduate in May '84. When time permits, she enjoys cross stitching and was working on an SBC emblem for her sister Terry '81. She often sees Janet Sheppard Kelleher '75. She also reported that Lynn Webb had moved back to Chappaqua, NY, and works for IBM. Gregg Smythe is practicing law in Columbia with the largest law firm in the state. She reports that she doesn't have time for much else. We certainly understand that feeling.

Sarah Steel Levine and Jon are busy with baby Cynthia and remodeling their new home. Jon is a bond trader with Goldman Sachs, while Sarah is working as a full-time mom.

Ellyn Tetlow Pannone expected her first child last December. She and Gary were renovating her parents' house and hoped to move in by Christmas '83. I hope you made it.

Ellen was a legal assistant in one of the largest law firms in Providence, and Gary is an associate in a growing law firm there.

In New Jersey, Ellen Wahl writes that she made the difficult decision to leave her job as corporate lending officer with the Irving Trust Company Bank in New York to join the family business as assistant controller. She hoped to spend her free time in the Hamptons this summer and Europe this fall. She keeps busy trying to see her SBC and grad school friends in NYC as well as ride her thoroughbred, Willy.

Down on the farm in Charlottesville, Linda Uihlein expected six Polled Hereford calves this year. Her mare was due in April with a second foal. Linda was excited about moving into a large house with a large enough basement to work on her art. She has a Jack Russell terrier and a Bouvier des Flandres puppy. She says she loves having the puppy.

Judy Widener Baker's horse breeding business is doing well — with the first "youngster" going to the race track this year. The Bakers moved in August to their newly acquired farm in New Jersey.

Jo Catharine Winstead is a professional photographer in NYC. Send me some pictures for our scrapbook, Jo Stella Wright Martin and Tom win the award for venturing farthest from home. Last year they moved from Atlanta to Hong Kong (when Stella was five months pregnant). The baby, Thomas Everett Martin, IV, was born Jan. 3, '84. They expect to be in H.K. for four years, so make your vacation plans soon.

That's all the news I received in time for this letter. If you know of news of any other classmates, send it in with your news for the next letter. Thanks for sending the wedding and baby pictures, too. The reunion scrapbook will be great if you keep them coming.

1981

Julia Bryan Brooke graduated from the UVA School of Law in May and will be working for a law firm, Smith & Hulsey, in Jacksonville, FL. She attended her last SBC Board meeting this spring and wanted to thank her classmates for giving her the opportunity to represent them on the Board.

Laurie McDonald Coe received the degree of Juris Doctor from Pace U. on June 9, 1984.

Karen Gagnon is working as an analytical chemist at Matheson Gas Products in Gloucester, MA. She recently went on a wine buying tour of California's Napa Valley. Kathy Gagnon is working at DuPont in Boston and taking management courses part time at night. She lives in Wellesley.

Susan Graham, who (along with Harriet Bielitsky and Anne Sargeant) was recently in Stephanie Rinaldi's wedding to Steve Charlip, is planning her own marriage to Robert Campbell in December. A graduate of Denison, he is now an account executive with Dean Witter Reynolds. Susan is an account relationship coordinator in real estate with Fidelity Bank.

In Atlanta, Whitley Riggs Greene is working hard as a real estate agent but finds time to swim, run, and study interior design.

Harriet Harrison Leavell and

Whitney bought a house last fall but have had little time to work on it. He's with Merrill Lynch, and Harriet has started law school at night and clerks for a law firm.

Caroline Hawk became a Sparrow when she married Callen Sparrow (Hampton-Sydney '80) on March 10, 1984, in Birmingham, AL. She writes "We Sparrows are 'nesting' in Montgomery, AL, where Callen is an assistant attorney general for the state of Alabama, and I am the coordinator for a statewide political campaign."

Jane Losse Momberger and Joel were planning to spend the summer in Los Angeles, where Joel would be clerking with a law firm. Their son John is 1½ years old, and baby #2 is due October 1. Jane still works part time in a doctor's office.

Linda Earlene Lynch is a patient's service representative at Tidewater Memorial Hospital in Tappahannock, VA.

Sarah H. Martin is now associated with Ruder Finn & Rotman, Inc., the world's largest independent public relations firm, as an assistant account executive and director of advertising.

Susan Parr's Amherst Elementary School kindergarteners (with help from one of the mothers) made her a quilt decorated with some of their drawings and presented it at a surprise shower given in connection with her wedding to Steve Bailey on April 14. Tracy Drake and Diane Towler Eubank were bridesmaids. After a honeymoon in Jamaica, the Baileys are living in Amherst.

Susan-Margaret Pflugfelder Lamb has her own business in N.Y.C., Fast Track Helpers, managing the personal lives of business executives. She also still has her flower business.

Mary Hedley Sipe and Joseph Collins Smith, II, were married May 26 and live in Richmond, VA.

In The Sweet Briar Tradition

Bequests have played an important role in the life of this College which was founded by Indiana Fletcher Williams as a fitting memorial to her daughter, Daisy. A bequest represents the promise that those interests and causes which have given meaning to our personal lives will be perpetuated.

It is, therefore, a special pleasure to announce the Lucas-Pate Lectureship in Public Service, established through the estate of Martha Lucas Pate, fourth President of Sweet Briar College. In addition, Mrs. Pate, who died on May 16, 1983, included in her will support for the Mary and Eugene Lyman Lectureship in Philosophy of Religion and support for the Junior Year in France, both programs which were established during her tenure as President of the College.

Martha Lucas was above all a woman dedicated to public service on a national and international scale for the betterment of human lives. The Lucas-Pate Lectureship which is established in memory of her father and her husband is designed to allow Sweet Briar to "invite to the campus (informally, not as a 'lectureship' with costly publications) outstanding public servants in one or more of these fields (state, national and international), in order that students might be further inspired toward related graduate studies and careers." This Fund will provide valuable encouragement for students to consider their place in an arena which is increasingly open to women. It is thus both touching and appropriate that Martha Lucas Pate who gave so much to Sweet Briar during her four years at the College, from 1946-1950, would choose to memorialize her father and her husband with a lectureship that will further those causes that she and they held most dear.

Sweet Briar continues to benefit from the support of those alumnae, parents, and friends who include the College in their wills. Their influence is twofold, perpetuating cherished ideals and serving as a source of inspiration for the lives of others.

Networking

by Ann Morrison Reams '42
Director
Alumnae Association

Since the first class graduated in 1910, Sweet Briar women have had the confidence and ability to pursue whatever vocation they chose. Graduates in the early years became good teachers, doctors and architects, as well as civic leaders, wives and mothers. Sweet Briar faculty members and administrators always gave moral support and encouragement in whichever field was chosen.

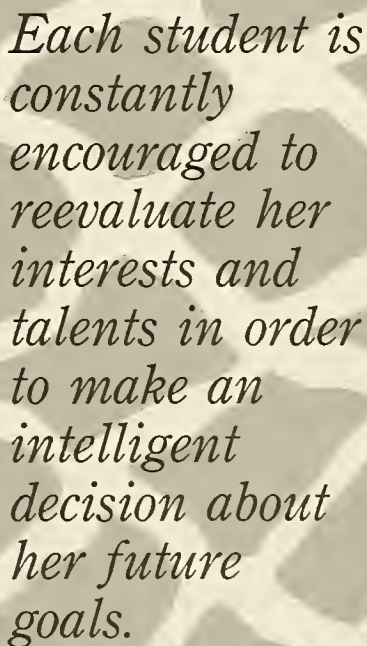

The College didn't become actively involved in providing practical counseling and information on vocational guidance until the late '40's, at which time the program came under the Personnel Office. An article in the February, 1950 Alumnae Magazine states, "The Personnel Office serves both the students and the alumnae in many ways. The new assistant, Miss Shirley Rosensteel is always ready to talk with them and advise them in any way possible vocationally and personally. Files are kept which reveal various vocations in which students have demonstrated an interest, as well as speakers in these fields who can be brought to campus. Another file provides information about various careers and vocations for women and the office follows this up by acting as a Placement Bureau for both students and alumnae.

Miss Rosensteel urges alumnae and their husbands to write to her about any specific job openings they might know about, as well as any specific or general community needs that Sweet Briar girls might satisfy...."

In the '50s the responsibilities for vocational guidance fell to the assistant dean: Jean Louise Williams from 1952-1957; Doris Thomas from 1957-1959; and to Julia Sadler de Coligny '34 from 1959-1961. From those early days, the foundation of a good program was laid. The office was located on the ground floor of Grammer where a committee of students worked with the part-time director to provide reference books, questionnaires and other materials about jobs. Aptitude tests were given and evaluated. Career Day was held each year and from one such event the Kellogg Library Educational Laboratory was begun. Even then, informal word-of-mouth networking was in evidence.

Soon the Assistant Dean could no longer handle the Vocational Guidance Office, so a part-time director was engaged, Carolyn Collier Bates. At first she was available three days a week, and later for four days. In 1967 the office moved to the ground floor of Academic and the next year to 02 Fletcher. For some ten to twelve years, it remained a one-man office with the occasional help of the faculty secretary and a student assistant. The program expanded with the emphasis primarily on developing a good library of information. Students were encouraged to write résumés and were taught proper procedures. Prospective employers visited the campus and had interviews with interested students. Sweet Briar students were considered good candidates as many employers preferred to train entry level employees to their own systems. Many students were successful in being hired following these interviews. Files were kept on employers who visited the campus and types of jobs most often available. Alumnae were invited back to talk with students about their jobs or professions and panels were held. For students who were interested in learning about career and employment opportunities, a great deal of help was available as the College tried to meet the needs of the students.

One club, Washington, D.C., under the chairmanship of Frances Robb '48, offered assistance and encouragement to students in their search for job possibilities. As student chairman, Cathy Rasmussen Rentzel '73 worked with this project, using a questionnaire to find alumnae who were interested and willing to help students. This was our first club networking program.

In the early '70s the country was in a mild recession. Fewer recruiters visited college campuses looking for talented young students, but at the same time, the number of students interested in finding jobs increased. A professional consultant was brought yearly to teach techniques of job searching and it was determined that the title Career Planning would fit the functions of the office better than Vocational Guidance.

During this time, with the vocal support of James Olmsted, a member of the Board of Overseers from Washington, the College decided to expand the Career Planning Office. In 1974, Karen Hartnett '70 was hired as Director of Financial Aid and Career Counseling, and Elizabeth Andrews Watts '74 joined the staff as assistant in the Career Counseling Office the next year. A Carnegie intern and a secretary served in both offices. In 1976, Carter Hunter Hopkins '68 became director in this dual capacity, and when Elizabeth resigned in 1977, Margaret (Mitty) Jordan Harvey '74 was hired. Beginning with the 1977-78 session, Career Planning was again separated from Financial Aid, and in 1979 Ruth Castelli joined the staff as assistant director. Carter and Ruth each brought a degree in counseling as well as past experience to these positions, which they still hold. Immediately the office became a visible force on campus. Each student is encouraged to visit the office her freshman year and to return often during her four year tenure. She is constantly encouraged to reevaluate her interests and talents in order to make an intelligent decision about her future goals. Many programs are available to help her as well as personal counseling.

Alumnae who have been successful in their chosen careers are invited to campus to talk individually with interested students, panels of several alumnae are held, and a Career Fair is an annual event. In addition, the office sponsors programs dealing with many problems and situations relative to the work place.

With the renovation of the lower level of the Chapel in 1982, the Career Planning Office moved into its new, bright and cheerful quarters, along with the Office of Student Affairs, the Chaplain's Office and certain student organizations offices. The new location placed it in the middle of the student living area, and made it much more accessible to students.

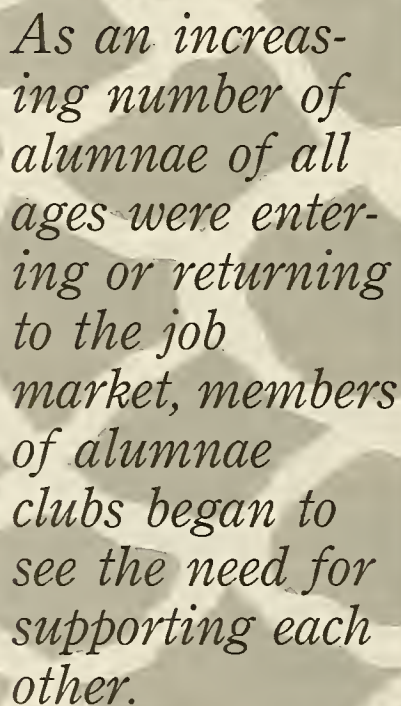

This active and vital program is also available to alumnae. The Director, Carter Hopkins, very quickly recognized the value of alumnae working with students and urged that a networking program be undertaken. This began in 1978-79 as a Career Connection project designed to strengthen the program by encouraging alumnae to share their experience and advice on a one-to-one basis with students seeking employment or internships.

Meantime, the Alumnae Office had seen the need to record alumnae occupations on the computer in such a way that the information could be retrieved in usable form. All mailings and questionnaires sent to alumnae included a place where such information could be recorded. The purpose at that time was to be able to identify alumnae of similar concerns so that mailings geared toward a specific topic could be addressed to a select, interested group. The College was in a tri-college consortium sharing a DEC system 20 computer which had the capacity to develop such a program. When the computer was bought by Sweet Briar and moved to campus in 1981, an occupational code system more appropriate for women was instituted. This recorded information was readily available to the Career Planning Office which made good use of it. Currently, that office is requesting past employment as well as current occupations for alumnae in an effort to trace successful career patterns, thinking that this will be of real help to students.

Meantime, as an increasing number of alumnae of all ages were entering or returning to the job market, members of alumnae clubs began to see the need for supporting each other. This was especially true in large cities where groups of young alumnae began to congregate.

It has been customary for the Alumnae Office to provide every club with a list of alumnae in its area each fall. The New York Club was the first to ask that the list include occupation information, and requested that the College work with them in creating a Networking Directory. This was a long, drawn-out process beginning with a questionnaire, then determining the format for the directory, proofing, rearranging, printing, collating, and finally getting a copy in the mail to each alumna in the New York area. The New York Club knew exactly what it wanted, and all were pleased that it was delivered to them as they requested. This never could have been done without the devotion and persistence of the New York Club officers and the dedicated cooperation of the Development Office.

As an increasing number of alumnae of all ages were entering or returning to the job market, members of alumnae clubs began to see the need for supporting each other.

This was the first and the great masterpiece from which all subsequent directories have been formulated. However, as other requests came in it became apparent that we could not afford such a directory for every club, and that a different format would have to be worked out. The Computer Center director, Leif Aagaard, wrote a new program which would produce future directories more easily and cheaply. Chicago Club members tried the first one, which was run off on regular 8½ by 11 paper and stapled together. The process cut the per issue cost to less than half that of the New York directory and makes updating feasible. The Chicago Club sent a copy to all alumnae in the area to be used for other information purposes as well as for occupations.

Next came the Washington Directory, but that group had yet a different approach. It was perceived that the Directory would be used as a tool in a larger overall project. The club is in the process of developing a program of in depth discussions with alumnae who need help, as well as making use of the directory as an information source. A committee is being formed of six or eight alumnae who will be trained to help alumnae in three different categories:

1. young alumnae looking for their first jobs
2. alumnae who are in the working force but would like to make a career change
3. mature alumnae who have never worked, or who have "stopped out" of the job market and want to return.

It is expected that the club volunteers can provide various kinds of assistance to students as well as to alumnae. In addition to discussing career options, they might host students for a limited internship which provides valuable opportunities for a work environment. They will respond to inquiries in whatever way is appropriate and convenient, with a letter or phone call, invitation for a personal appointment, or a referral to other contacts. Also, a program might be worked out so that students and alumnae could have the opportunity of such an interchange of ideas and conversation in conjunction with Sweet Briar Day. However, this entire program is still in formative stages.

The Board of the Alumnae Association also recognized the importance of such a program several years ago when it created a new Board position to be known as Chairman of Career Planning. Mary Ann Mellen Root '53 was the first chairman, and served from 1980-82. Ellen Harrison Saunders '75 took over in 1982 and is still serving in that capacity. The main responsibility of the position has been to serve as a liaison between the Career Planning Office and the Board, providing each with information about the other. However, with the increase in interest among clubs, she and Director of Clubs, Patty Sykes Treadwell '58, are working even more closely to produce the kind of program which will serve the needs and the interests of club members. They are in the process of working out some guidelines for other clubs which are interested in creating a career planning program.

It is important that all alumnae understand what "networking" means. The purpose is to offer assistance, information and encouragement to alumnae interested in pursuing a career and should never be interpreted as an employment service. The focus of the directory is information not placement. The Career Planning Office on campus does an excellent job of providing support and training in developing interviewing and résumé writing skills as well as making available a variety of information materials and counseling services. Alumnae clubs, on the other hand, with the support and backing of the Alumnae Office, offer an opportunity for alumnae and students to talk with alumnae who have knowledge and experience about specific jobs. The diversity and depth of professional experience which the alumnae themselves possess offer invaluable resources for those seeking information and guidance.

This newest cooperative effort between clubs, individual alumnae and students, the Career Planning Office and the Alumnae Office is gaining momentum. The program is perceived as one which answers the needs of a large segment of alumnae. It must be a flexible program which will continue to grow and develop as other conditions change so that it will always serve its constituency in a positive and useful way. □

Art History Majors: What are they doing now?

by Betsy Byrne
Utterback '79

Sweet Briar's first departmental graduate symposium was held on October 29 by the Art History Department with the financial support of Career Planning and the Lectures Committee. Recent alumnae enrolled in a graduate program or recently graduated were invited to participate in this unique program which Aileen Laing, professor in Art History, created and Christopher L.C. Ewart Witcombe, assistant professor in Art History, organized. The symposium, which promises to be the first of many, was a valuable experience for everyone involved.

The afternoon began with lunch in Prothro Commons for the five speakers, Ms. Laing, Mr. Witcombe, and Constance Bowen, director of the Sweet Briar Galleries. It was a new experience for most of us to eat in the beautifully refurbished "Meta Glass" dining room. During lunch, we were able to discuss our present positions and opportunities in art history.

The symposium was conducted in the Refectory which now houses the Sweet Briar art collection, Fine Arts Library and the Art History department. After the presentation of papers, we were privileged to be guided through the new gallery by Ms. Bowen. How I envy the current Sweet Briar students! The Refectory is overwhelming!

The first three speakers, Elena Quevedo '83, Lisa Hall '75 and Karol Lawson '81 were introduced by Mr. Witcombe. Folders containing an abstract of each speaker's paper and a vita of her academic and professional accomplishments were available for members of the audience.

Elena Quevedo, a graduate student at New York University/Institute of Fine Arts, presented her paper entitled "The Lateral Chambers in Pre-Romanesque Spanish Churches and Their Liturgical Function." A number of churches dating from the Visigothic to the Mozarabic periods were compared and discussed, illustrating the importance of the lateral rooms as integral parts of an offertory ceremony different from that of other Western European countries. An investigation into the liturgy and its application in the Mass led to her conclusions on the usage of the curious lateral chambers. Elena is currently working as a research assistant in the Frick Art Reference Library in New York and as a lecturer in Spanish at the Metropolitan Museum of Art. Elena also took advantage of Sweet Briar's valuable January term opportunity and interned at the Virginia Museum of Art in 1981.

Lisa Hall, who received her M.A., summa cum laude in Art History from Southern Methodist University in 1980, fascinated listeners with her paper on "The French Romanesque Apse in the Kimbell Art Museum: A Modern Forgery." Lisa's master's thesis was on this once (it has now been removed) most conspicuous artwork at the Kimbell. While researching this supposedly twelfth century apse from the chapel of Saint Andre de Bagalance near Avignon, Lisa had questioned its authenticity; however, she was not able to obtain access to museum records and letters which led Deputy Director William B. Jordan to investigate the apse.

Lisa explained how Dr. Richard Fargo Brown, founding director of the Kimbell Art Museum in Fort Worth, relied on the opinions of specialists who convinced him that the apsidal mural was indeed authentic. However, two years ago, Mr. Jordan headed an investigation which uncovered iconographic, stylistic and technical inconsistencies in the apse which was actually painted by the twentieth century restorer Marcel Simon of Avignon! For more information on this forgery and the conservation report see Leon Harris' "After the Sting: How the Kimbell Museum acquired a fake and what it is doing with it." Connoisseur 214 (June 1984): 43-51. Lisa is now the slide curator and a lecturer at Florida State University in Tallahassee.

American landscape painting before 1820, before Thomas Cole, founding father of American landscape painting? Karol Lawson '81 successfully defended her convictions that the American landscape was considered and recorded by eighteenth century artists in her paper, "John Smibert's (1688-1751) Visionary Landscapes." Karol concentrated on Smibert's noted Bermuda Group: Dean George Berkeley and His Entourage (1729/39?) at Yale University Art Gallery (and illustrated in your History of American Art by Daniel Mendelowitz, p. 113, for those of you who took American Art with Miss Firm). Evidence that the landscape behind the portrait group was not merely a backdrop but actually an integral part of the content was presented convincingly. Karol also cited sixteenth century maps, eighteenth century magazines and portraits with landscape "backdrops" by John Singleton Copley, Ralph Earl, Charles Willson Peale which further defended her thesis. She hopes to develop it into her Ph.D. dissertation at the University of Virginia where she received her M.A. last May. Karol graduated magna cum laude with honors in Art History and Anthropology from Sweet Briar.

Lisa Hall, Karol Lawson and Elena Quevedo

Ms. Diane Moran introduced the last two speakers, Tricia Waters '77 and myself, Betsy Utterback '79. Tricia's paper differed from the rest in that she discussed one very significant "objet d'art" in today's museums — the computer! Tricia familiarized us with the development of museum computerization and illustrated the overwhelming task and the time-consuming aspect of computerizing the Inventory of Works of Art at the National Gallery. For instance, "it takes an incredible amount of time, in the form of rationale and deliberation, first to assess the museum's needs and resources, then to decide which system to initiate, and finally...how to actually organize your data, creating a program beneficial to your collection, and keying the information in so that it can be retrieved one day."

Tricia received her M.A. in Art

History from George Washington University in 1983. Currently, she is an Art Inventory Technician in the Department of Prints and Drawings at The National Gallery of Art.

And I, Betsy Utterback, discussed the symbolism of the peacock in the late nineteenth century art. The prevalence of this motif has motivated me to explore its iconographic significance, specifically its curious association with women. Substantial literary and art historical evidence suggests that the artists of the 1890s retained the traditional symbolism of the peacock as the embodiment of evil masked by outer beauty, and paralleled this quality to the mysterious and alluring femme-fatale. Women's quest for social and economic equality led to widespread misogyny and the fear of women. This may have prompted writers and artists to associate the New Woman with the peacock.

At this time, I am completing my requirements for graduation at Indiana University. I plan to receive my M.A. in Art History from the University of Wisconsin this fall.

The symposium concluded with eloquent closing remarks by Ms. Laing, who expressed her gratitude to the speakers, students, faculty and administrative personnel who made the day possible. She expressed her sincere hope that a "Second Art History Graduate Symposium" will be planned in the near future. Anyone interested in participating is urged to contact Ms. Laing, Ms. Moran or Mr. Witcombe. You will be welcomed with opened arms. We, the guest speakers of this symposium, would like to thank all those involved. I believe that participation in this type of program is a valuable opportunity for speakers, faculty, and especially students, who often wonder about how they wish to pursue their professional goals using their most valuable asset, a liberal arts education.

It is, for me, a distinct pleasure and privilege to welcome you to our Founders' Day festivities, the 75th year that such ceremonies have been commemorated, and the 100th Anniversary Year of Daisy Williams' death.

Like our predecessors in 1909, we pause this morning from the routine and habitual to gather together here, amid pomp and some pageantry, to celebrate our past and elevate our traditions. As in most events having ritual significance, we are reminded of the continuity of our present actions with like ones in the past. We are mindful, too, of the opportunity to renew our own ideals and resolve while we reflect upon those women and men whose dedication and sense of purpose carried Sweet Briar College forth into a troubled and turbulent world.

Many of us here are familiar with the virtual litany of sorrow and tribulation which is intertwined with the founding of the College: the death of a sixteen-year-old girl; the death of that girl's mother; the contested will and the troubles it caused; the obstacles which confronted Sweet Briar's first Directors as they tried to transform a plantation into a college; the challenges which greeted the first president as she chose the first faculty and recruited the College's first students. Familiar too are our founders' names: Daisy, Indiana Fletcher Williams, Bishop Randolph, the Reverend Mr. Carson, the Reverend Dr. Grammer, the Reverend Mr. Gray, Mr. Manson, President Benedict.

Well-known to you are the particular events and persons of crucial significance in setting Sweet Briar College upon its firm foundation. Lesser known, or even unknown to

by Nengah E. Fry,
President

you, are the events in the wider world of that time: national and international "current events," so to speak, carried by the newspapers of that day. And so, I think it will be instructive to choose a few key dates in the College's founding and then scan the N.Y. Times to see what was happening.

On Monday, October 29, 1900, the date of Indiana Fletcher Williams' death, The Times concerned itself with politics because, like today, campaign fever was in the air and a president of the U.S. needed to be elected. In the presidential race were William McKinley for the Republicans and William Jennings Bryan for the Democrats. The Times reported that an elderly woman had come up to Mr. Bryan on the day before, when she was on her way to church. I quote her conversation with him verbatim:

"God bless you, Mr. Bryan, I want to shake hands with you." As they shook hands, a self-satisfied smile broke over her features and she said, "You are going to be elected this time, Sir, and may all the saints in heaven bless you. I wish, Sir, that I could vote for you, but the only thing I can do is to pray for your success and talk to the men."

Her prayers and talk did not avail.

Even though the "woman's vote" was not the issue it is today — since women had not yet won the right to vote — this fact did not deter a sister institution of ours from staging a student rally on October 29. The front page of The Times reported that the Vassar Republicans in Poughkeepsie, N.Y., held a rally which was larger than the one the Democratic students had held for Mr. Bryan. Amid such slogans as "A Full Dinner Pail," Vassar students impersonated leading Republicans. The climax of the meeting was the appearance of "Gov. Roosevelt" attired in Rough Rider costume. "He" said he was not there to lead a charge up San Juan Hill or to make a crusade on noise in the college after 10 P.M. He concluded by saying that he, the Governor of the state of New York, the prospective Vice President of the U.S., and the admirer of Vassar College, merely wished the students to remember one thing — to vote for the right men — William McKinley and Theodore Roosevelt!!

On January 14, 1901, the first Directors of Sweet Briar came together for the first time. Politics did not dominate the news and the N.Y. Times turned its attention toward social and ethical problems. The paper expressed dismay over the growing number of divorces and came up with this ingenious solution which I quote verbatim: "The root of much of the trouble really lies in the recklessness in marrying. A good deal may be done toward remedying the evils of divorce by working from that end."

Also on this day, the paper was concerned with matters of public health. It reported that 563,885 Americans across the land were suffering from the "Grip" (i.e., the "flu"). The greatest number of its victims reportedly were in factories, schools, and colleges.

Finally, on the day the Directors first met, Felix Adler spoke in the Carnegie Music Hall in N.Y. City to the Society for Ethical Culture. His subject was, "The Degradation of Great Cities." Adler reportedly asked, "What is a bad city?" And he answered, "New York." After the sensation died down, he continued, "In N.Y., Philadelphia, Chicago, the devils are on top. We have put the burglar in charge of the bank." He spoke out against political "bosses" and against the two-party system. He concluded,

"What we need in this city is a brain. We have a nervous system, but not a brain."

The last day I have chosen is September 27, 1906, when the College opened and classes were held for the first time. On this date, The Times reported on the opening exercises of Columbia University, then beginning its 153rd academic year. These ceremonies received greater attention than usual because of the appearance at the University of the first Kaiser Wilhelm Professor of German History and Institutions. The man who held this Chair was originally from the University of Bonn. He drew parallels between the United States and Germany, countries which he called the "two great nations of the earth." He drew attention to what we might term the "Manifest Destiny" of both countries and told of ways in which Germany and the United States could "supplement" each other.

Also on the day of our first classes, in 1906, The Times reported on the opening exercises at N.Y.U. The Chancellor of the University, Dr. MacCracken, said he was cheered by public opinion in favor of the small college. He went on to talk briefly about the college curriculum. He intoned, "Prescribed (course) work should include a good measure of logic and psychology, of language and mathematics. The undergraduate who does not want logic or mathematics is usually the man who needs them the most."

For my last excerpt from The Times, I turn from august academic men to a story about a man arrested for using an ostrich as a horse. I quote verbatim: "W.W. Ford was arrested for trying to drive an ostrich through Central Park." He was arrested by the police because he created such a stir and excitement that they feared that damage might be done. The Times informs us that a magistrate discharged Ford on his "promise that he would not attempt to drive his bird in Central Park again." You equestrians in the audience will be relieved to learn that the paper claims that Ford was arrested not because his ostrich was exceeding the speed limit set for automobiles but because the ostrich had "frightened a horse." And so, N.Y. City was trying to do right by its horses, at least.

Though my selection of articles from The Times may seem eclectic, they do illustrate the point at which

A BOTTLE OF THIS SHOULD BE IN EVERY HOME.

I began: namely, the continuity of the present with the past. Presidential campaigns, serious student hijinks, divorce rates, flu epidemics, the problems of our large cities, exercises that open colleges and universities — all these are subjects that are with us today. It is still a world where "the devils" sometimes seem to be "on top" and where bizarre happenings regularly occur in Central Park.

It is also a world in which students and teachers, trustees, alumnae, administrators, and staff come together out of their concern for this communal, educational enterprise which is worthy of the best efforts of each of us. Sweet Briar College was fortunate in the past to find the human resources to will itself into being and to establish a firm foundation for future growth and educational innovation. We need to be aware that we can still share in that vision of the future which those whom we call "our founders" had. In a sense, we too are "founders," even today, for what the College will become. We must find a similar dedication and the same sense of purpose as our founders so that we, too, may carry Sweet Briar College forth into our own troubled and turbulent world. □

More Than Once in a Lifetime

A Founders' Day Address

by

Joanne H. Patton, CAVS, Class of 1952

Sweet Briar College

October 10, 1984

The joy in my heart at this moment is boundless! It is an extraordinary privilege for me to share our Founders' Day with your special company, in this very special place. Thank you for taking me on faith. Although I can guarantee that my remarks will not be profound, I promise to try to make a few worthwhile points, while we are together, and possibly to make a difference.

I am grateful to President Fry for her gracious introduction, especially so because it was the first in quite a while which did not announce me as "the oldest living" of whatever group I was addressing or representing. That is what comes with longevity, if one retains a commitment over a long period of time, such as mine to the Army, to my husband, I hope to Sweet Briar, and to the world of volunteerism which has become my career. As I once told a volunteer conference in Germany, the only difference between my presence there and that of an old alumna returning to her alma mater and "telling them what," was that I had never left! That made accepting my advice a little easier for my volunteer audience, because I was still part of them, still earning my right to a voice and a vote, still moving along with them, albeit at a slightly slower pace.

But Sweet Briar I did leave in 1952, and so today I return as that proverbial alumna, expected to reminisce or to attempt remaking my college audience in a past image. The former is inescapable, but the latter, I hope, is not. Rather, I come today offering you an invitation to my world of 1984, and moving forward. It is a world I think you will do well to consider for yourselves. But first, the reminiscence:

At Sweet Briar I was what then was called a "lounge lizard"! In my college days, that meant a person who was content to spend hours in the common rooms, at the piano, playing bridge, visiting friends, creating schemes, and sometimes creating homework. I never spent an overnight in the Cabin. I swam in the lake only once in four years, and on Founders' Day, although I happily sang "Climbing Daisy's Mountain," trudging up the hill, my eyes were on the feet in front of me, I am afraid, hoping to see them level off so that I could look forward to coming down again. I truly loved Sweet Briar, in my fashion...but I rarely looked at it. Certainly I did not see all that it had to offer me, even then.

But if my eyes practiced narrow vision, in 1951 or 2, at least my ears were open. It is interesting, I think, that this many years later I measure the moments in which my future was shaped here by single phrases, snatches of conversation, simple words of wisdom which somehow the job that nobody wants.”*

kept a place in my just-sub-conscious, to be recalled long after they had been applied without intention. Let me share a few of them:

It was Bertha Wailes, or it was Belle Boone Beard. (How shocking that I cannot tell you which...but I remember the white hair and the occasion, as we were preparing to graduate and were having a come-all-ye in the lounge.) She said, this wise lady who could have been either one, “Always volunteer for the job that nobody wants....”and that is all I remember!

Of course, my mind was on other matters at the time. Stereotypically, I was to be married right after my graduation, to an Army man I had met the summer before and who courageously had courted me in full view of my entire class that year, with all of them cheering him on. (Among those cheering from the wings was Dean Mary Pearl, who had taken note of my suitor when he telephoned me after midnight once, getting through by declaring it an emergency. The thoughtful operator, afraid that it really was, alerted Dean Pearl, who was put on the line. The properly-chastised young man survived to win both our hearts, however, when he had the presence of mind and diplomacy to send the Dean a dozen roses the next day!)

Many of my classmates came to our wedding, and cheered us into the new world of Army life. I certainly wouldn't have recognized it then, but in my early post-graduate period, that half-remembered challenge to volunteer already was prodding me. It urged me out of a shell of reserve which threatened to keep this new bride shy of an unfamiliar new Army post, and later of an overwhelming city that became my waiting place when my new husband went to war for the first of what would be time after time. It allowed me to step softly in and to find a place in a new milieu, feeling comfortable there because nobody else wanted that place, but somebody was needed to fill it. From the simple “scrub up” roles in which I began, I learned what volunteering felt and looked like from the bottom, and I made mental notes of what could be improved, never dreaming that before long I would be in position to change things, because another job that nobody ever admitted to wanting was “leader.” That was a role with a purpose, and one I could not bring myself to decline when it was offered (or more often imposed), because by then I knew that I had a mission that called for accomplishment.

Last night, when I was privileged to be a guest at Sweet Briar House, I recalled having been there long ago. Some of us had been studying there for comprehensives, at the gracious invitation of our President, Anne Gary Pannell, when one of my classmates suddenly looked up and said, “Stop everything and think: we will never again be as smart as we are at this very moment!” We all paused and seriously contemplated our crania, bursting with knowledge. We were impressed and proud of ourselves, as we prepared to let it all begin to flow away the next morning. If we had possessed better sense, along with our brainpower, we might have offered a little prayer that experience would bring wisdom in to replace the loss, in the years to follow.

I confess I had some regrets and envy, when a move every year for the first thirteen in my marriage (and a total of twenty-seven over thirty years of Army life) persuaded me that the tasks at hand should take priority over the graduate degree I thought I needed in order to keep step, especially with Sweet Briar. But somehow those tasks began to seem more and more worth doing, and eventually grew their own rewards. The fact of an unexpected retarded son and the learning experience he brought led to the opportunity to encourage others, to seek shared solutions to common problems, and eventually to the courage to pioneer new programs in needed places, and to refine and replicate them in others, along the way.

I wish I could remember more of Dr. Lawrence Nelson's glorious phrases, but a scrap that often comes to my mind is one that helped me later to open myself to more views than my own. That scrap of words was “on the other hand.” In Shakespeare class, after we had followed Dr. Nelson down a perfectly-crafted narrative trail toward a firm point of view, and were preparing to settle ourselves in that camp, along would come that fateful qualifier, “on the other hand,” and he would lead us back by an alternative path to a point where, as he intended, we had to make up our own minds...and tell why.

Much later, in 1980, my unpredictable Army life was coming to a predictable conclusion. Our 30 years of shared and separate assignments, five children, oceans crossed and recrossed, languages learned, forgotten, relearned...programs initiated, passed on, and picked up in other forms...leadership assumed and grown into and relinquished...all were now moving to my past, as retirement loomed. Or so I believed. I was pleased to look back on initiatives in which I could take pride: There was, for instance, the first women's program series at an Army base to deal with women's liberation and N.O.W. (It was a series, by the way, which also introduced Anne Pannell to military wives and Sallie Shallenberger Brown, Army born and Sweet Briar educated, to the role of interpreting civilian-military relations.) Among the “firsts” I could claim was my appointment as the first community service volunteer executive in the headquarters of the Department of the Army, and another as the first national consultant representing Services to the Armed Forces at the National Headquarters of the American Red Cross. There was the opportunity to direct a first seminar on the Army wife, which was followed by others, developed by other hands, dealing with the concerns of Army families. I like to think that the small first pebble began the waves which resulted in this past year’s having been declared officially “The Year of the Army Family,” by the military’s leadership. And, I will always consider it a privilege to have been part of the Sweet Briar Class of ’52, some of whose members were the first to challenge our college with the recognition that the time had come to open its doors to all qualified women.

Many “firsts” came to me simply because my dates of birth and marriage put me in the right place before it became fashionable to be there. But no matter that a recent lecturer I’d listened to had said, “Women should plan their lives to age 144, so that they are always in forward motion, keeping their momentum,” Joanne Patton was beginning to close her doors. Providentially, just in time, came an opportunity I hadn’t met before: an invitation to attend a workshop on volunteer management at a well-known university. Like that brainy moment at Sweet Briar House that wasn’t supposed to come again, this,

I thought, was a “once in a lifetime chance,” before it was too late, for me to find out what the word “management” had to do with the word “volunteer.” I thought I knew, but Dr. Nelson would have said, “On the other hand.”

And so I found, of course, another opening door, not the end of a road but an extension of the one I was on, with a new and upward turn. I discovered that there was a whole professional field out there which I had been part of without knowing it, and that what I had done in my life before was important, not just to me and to those in my single-track world, but in the generic world of volunteer administration, to others who shared a life commitment, and to some just coming aboard. I learned that behind my back stereotypes had been tumbling down. No longer was “volunteer” a synonym for “amateur.” The “housewife volunteer” was now the “working person” volunteer, and “she” was a “he” and a “they” of all ages, stages, economic, ethnic, and geographical groups. Together, in our country, they numbered more than 50% of Americans who gave volunteer service somewhere, with some part of their lives. I learned that volunteerism had thrown off Lady Bountiful’s mantle and had rolled up its sleeves, but had put on its reading glasses, the better to read financial reports, legislative records, fine print and bottom lines. I discovered that “meaning well” was no longer enough to guarantee the successful volunteer program. Nineteen competencies and nearly one-hundred performance criteria had been identified as standards for the position of volunteer administrator, a position increasingly so valued that it had become, in most cases, a full-time, salaried position in sponsoring agencies or organizations, and often was filled by a person who had matured in responsibility as a volunteer. No longer was the private non-profit organization the only home of volunteer programs. They had begun to appear in the public sector under sponsorship of municipalities, state governments, and even in profit-making corporations, eager to improve their public image or to make a valid community contribution.

Most important, a volunteer education was no longer excluded from the formal academic world. Caring and enlightened institutions, like Sweet Briar College, had seen the importance of introducing volunteer management studies into curricular plans. Whether through degree-completion programs or continuing education offerings, they found they could assist current or future executives in the business, scientific, or social services fields to create and effectively administer volunteer-using programs, thus stretching their capabilities as entrepreneurs and “enablers,” insuring fuller and more appropriate community contributions and management of dwindling resources. Colleges and universities found a legitimate mission in training persons of my generation who had never collected a paycheck, or whose unemployment was involuntary, along with young persons whose first real paid employment was still ahead of them, to understand the worth of volunteer service to a résumé and a new career. The Association for Volunteer Administration, the largest professional organization in the field, today offers a nationally recognized certification program based on solid performance, but it encourages academic institutions, trainers and advisors to become part of the process which leads to performance excellence.

And so today, after all those years of apprentice time, it is my special privilege to serve as national coordinator for that AVA Certification Program, and to invite my college and Sweet Briar family to join this network. It is our mission to identify, motivate, educate, mentor, and finally certify excellence in the management of that most precious national resource — our volunteers.

Not long ago, I was speaking with a young colleague about future executive opportunities in our field. She was in the midst of an enthusiastic projection, when she stopped and smiled and said, "But of course you probably don't have such ambitions." I sat back, stunned, and replied, "I don't?" Suddenly, I realized that the possibility had not occurred to me, for somewhere along the way I had stopped looking backward and stopped thinking retirement in my predictable future.

No, I haven't mapped out my life to age 144, but neither have I targeted a termination. By now I know very well that "Once in a lifetime" is a myth. Opportunity taps time and again, often faintly, but we can train ourselves to hear it. My would-have-been father-in-law is sometimes quoted as having said, "There are no practice games in life." I am sorry, General Patton, but a serious game like volunteerism takes plenty of practice, if one is to practice excellence. It insures that when those moments in time pop up, that habit of excellence will be there, ready to serve us. It will make it easier for us to say, "yes" instead of "no" to the jobs which nobody is wise enough to want. It allows us to take risks intelligently, to plan ahead, to keep our links with people strong and our communication lines open, both ways.

Not long before I came to the end of my student life at Sweet Briar, I was approached by a Psych major who asked me to take part in a lab experiment she was preparing. "All you have to do," she said, "is take a test along with a partner I will give you, for a comparative evaluation. Because Psych majors were always soliciting this kind of guinea pig help, of course I said I would, and didn't even bother to ask what it was all about, until some years later. "Oh yes," she answered me, "that was one in which we paired people with like I.Q.s, to analyze what made one an achiever and the other one not." She stopped there. My friend had the good grace not to recall it, but I remembered who my partner had been. She was a Tau Phi and a member of Phi Beta Kappa!

This wonderful college of ours has been waiting for us to discover its "wholeness," for a long time. Our smaller view of it may have served our narrow needs in the past, but it is high time we recognize its potential for enriching our lives as long and as well as we choose. Indiana Williams promised us a Sweet Briar education that would "best fit us to be useful members of society." She did not put a time limit on our usefulness, or on her promise!

When you get to the top of Daisy's Mountain today, do me a favor and look up and out, and beyond. Think about "practicing excellence," ahead of time. And before you come down, please thank Indiana for me, first for retaining for herself the honor of being the "oldest living spirit at Sweet Briar today," but most of all for giving Joanne Patton more than one chance to climb a mountain and earn the view at the top, in my "lifetimes." □

Joanne Holbrook Patton is a consultant in volunteer administration living in South Hamilton, Massachusetts. Certified by the Association for Volunteer Administration and the University of Colorado, she is a lecturer, author and trainer in both military and civilian areas of volunteerism, and currently serves as the Vice Chair for Professional Development, AVA, and Chair of its national Certification Program. Initiating her volunteer activities as a Gray Lady in 1958, Mrs. Patton continued volunteer service as an Army wife until her husband's retirement, prior to that serving as the first National Consultant for Services to the Armed Forces, American Red Cross, and the first Army Community Service Volunteer Consultant at Department of the Army. She has received both the Outstanding Civilian Service Medal and the Distinguished Civilian Service Decoration, awarded by the Secretary of the Army.

In civilian life, in addition to her consultant services business, Mrs. Patton currently holds the following volunteer positions: President of Community Service of Hamilton and Wenham, Inc., Continuing Education Chair for the Norwich University Board of Fellows, and member of the Board of Trustees, Walnut Hill School for the Performing Arts.

Pioneer Gerontologist Dies

Pioneer gerontologist Belle Boone Beard, 86, professor emeritus of sociology at Sweet Briar College, died October 12 at Virginia Baptist Hospital. A long-time Sweet Briar resident, she had lived at Westminster-Canterbury in Lynchburg since 1980.

Born in Boones Mill, Virginia, in 1898, Dr. Beard was the daughter of James William and Mary Kleindienst Beard. She received an A.B. degree from Lynchburg College and both M.A. and Ph.D. degrees from Bryn Mawr College.

Dr. Beard came to Sweet Briar to head the sociology department in 1932 and was active as a teacher and researcher until her retirement in 1963. In 1939-40, she took leave from Sweet Briar to help the Virginia Department of Public Welfare organize the social security system. For 13 years, Dr. Beard was chairman of the State Merit System Council, and her work in this capacity earned her a place on the Richmond Times-Dispatch Honor Roll "for advancement of personnel standards in Virginia government."

Dr. Beard was the Virginia delegate to two White House Conferences on the Aging, the first in 1961 and the second in 1971. In 1979, she was a special witness before the Select Committee on the Aging of the U.S. House of Representatives. She was also a charter member of the Gerontological Society and presented papers at five meetings of the International Congress of Gerontology.

Dr. Beard became a member of the Lynchburg College Board of Trustees in 1934 and later was made a life member. In 1982, she gave more than $200,000 to the college to establish the Belle Boone Beard Gerontology Center to provide education, research, and training in gerontology.

Dr. Beard, specializing in the study of centenarians, had interviewed more than 400 100-year-olds and had files on 10,000 more. The University of Georgia, where she conducted centenarian research in the mid-1960s, purchased her extensive archives which now form the Belle Boone Beard Centenarian Collection.

Over the years research and teaching took her to universities and institutions in this country and abroad, including Vanderbilt University, New Mexico Highlands University in Las Vegas, the May K. Houck Foundation in Sarasota, Fla., Washington University in St. Louis, the University of Georgia in Athens, Seoul National University in Korea, and, as a Fulbright Lecturer, to Korea, Taiwan, and the Philippines.

Dr. Beard was the author of a book on juvenile probation and more than 50 scientific articles and had presented papers at international congresses on gerontology in Italy, Austria, and San Francisco, and the USSR.

"Dr. Beard was a remarkable woman by all accounts," said President Nenah E. Fry of Sweet Briar. "For 31 years at Sweet Briar she made her mark as an able chairman of the Sociology Department, as an influential teacher, and as a pioneering scholar in the field of gerontology. Her own scholarly activity following retirement is testimony that an individual can continue to make important contributions long after retirement."

She is survived by a brother who lives in Boones Mill and a sister in Grosse Pointe, Mich. A memorial service was held on October 26 at Snidow Chapel of Lynchburg College.

Friends Recall Laura Buckham

Laura T. Buckham, 81, professor of French emeritus, died on July 18 at Westminster-Canterbury in Lynchburg where she had lived since 1980. A funeral service was held there on July 22 and a memorial service took place in the Sweet Briar Chapel on Tuesday, October 9.

Dr. Buckham was born in Burlington, VT, and graduated Phi Beta Kappa from the University of Vermont where her father served as president for a number of years. She received her M.A. degree in 1930 and Ph.D. in 1939, both from Radcliffe College. She also studied at the University of Grenoble, where she earned the Certificat d'Etudes Francaises, spent a year at the Sorbonne and studied at Middlebury and McGill French Summer Schools.

Dr. Buckham taught at Northfield Seminary and at Milwaukee-Downer College before coming to Sweet Briar in 1936 where she taught until her retirement in 1968.

In 1946, Dr. Buckham was one of the first post-war group of American teachers who were invited to France under the auspices of the Cultural Relations Bureau of the French government. In 1966 she was decorated by the French government with the insignia of Chevalier de l'Ordre des Palmes Academiques in recognition of services she rendered to French-American relations. The following year Sweet Briar honored her with an Award for Excellence in Teaching. In 1974 she received the Distinguished Alumni Award from the University of Vermont.

Dr. Buckham served on the Advisory Committee of Sweet Briar's Junior Year in France from its inception in 1948 as well as on many committees at the College. She was a member of the American Association of Teachers of French, American Association of Teachers of Spanish, Sigma Delta Pi (Spanish honorary society), Modern Language Association and Alliance Francaise in Lynchburg.

Dr. Buckham and the late Mary Ann Lee were co-editors of Mortar Board Menus, a collection of favorite recipes from many Sweet Briar residents, published in 1955 and 1972.

From Ruth Clarkson Costello '51:

Laura T. Buckham was my major professor, my advisor, my friend.

She nurtured us in our formative years, encouraging and strengthening our hearts and minds with her wisdom, her dedication, her love.

She took a personal interest in my writing for over 35 years, and it is with fondest respect that I dedicate this final poem to her.

Adieu Maitress

She never wanted the red of fire, the black river at midnight, the tree full of singing cicadas, or the fragrance of roses. She never loved the smoky mountain peaks, bright ravines, the stern pride of the leopard, and no white dove ever had the beauty she craved. She never wanted these things, but their crystallization — a miracle ten thousand times more rare than all of them!

She saw my life spin with dreams and illusions, did not insist that I be fastened to the world.

She knew the caged bird longs for the old forest, that the fish in the pond misses the old depths.

Now she is gone, and it is impossible to distinguish dragon from snake on the stones.

I hear the sound of the door pivoting; and with it the rustling of a skirt. That is the miracle.

In gratitude, I will open an umbrella of dark pines to shelter her sleep.

I will cover her lightly, lightly with yellow earth. I will slowly, slowly let the ashes fly.

Laura T. Buckham

During Alumnae Council, a memorial service was held for Miss Buckham at which Mary Morris Gamble Booth '50 sang and the following tributes were delivered.

From Patty Lynas Ford '51

Martha von Briesen wrote to tell me the sad news of Laura's death and enclosed a copy of the obituary.

She was a special part of our lives. I was one of the lucky ones assigned to her Freshman year as an advisee. She was very instrumental in helping me through my college years and I'll always be grateful for her friendship and concern. She was our first daughter's Godmother and many times throughout the years we saw each other, either at Sweet Briar or in California. You can imagine our surprise when a small box, posted August 10 and addressed in Laura's hand, arrived, full of slides she had taken of us all since 1957. She had collected them all, put them in a box with our name on it, but was never able to send it herself. Bless her heart.

It was at her suggestion several years ago that I wrote to President Whiteman to tell him how much I treasure what Sweet Briar did for me. I cited several particularly influential people and was surprised at the response, especially from Martha Lucas Pate. I'm so grateful to Laura for encouraging me to put my thoughts on paper.

She was a person of great integrity, kindness, generosity both personal and intellectual, and dedication to what is right and fine. I feel very fortunate that our paths crossed.

By Maxine Garner

It is first as a master teacher that Laura Buckham is known among us. As such she was recognized by an Award for Excellence in Teaching in which the Alumnae Association took part in 1968. She loved French literature and with superior skills opened its treasures to generations willing to equip themselves to taste its fulfillments.

She is remembered as intelligent participant, often as leader, in the work of the campus community and the neighborhoods beyond our gates. When Laura put her foot down, saying that she would run the Lectures and Concerts no longer, I learned in the hardest way why it had been so difficult to persuade anybody to try to take over the job. She had not only in professional perfection handled the correspondence, publicity and logistics for each event; she had plied each artist and speaker on arrival with food and drink at her own bountiful table on Woodland Road. It is not surprising that, soon after she gave up this demanding pace, the decision was made that Lectures and Concerts were too much for any one chairman less than a Laura Buckham, so two committees emerged where there had been one before!

At the same level of energy and dedication, in recent times, she worked with Winter Forums. Ann Reams asked for reports from her suggestion, at a previous meeting, that members think. She found that only Laura had taken the instruction seriously. Laura did not deny it. "All the others have offices or classes," she explained. "I'm the only one with time to think."

An election year reminds us of Laura's interest in and service to the League of Women Voters.

It is as "the angel of Woodland Road" (a title recalled by Elizabeth Sprague) that Laura is best known to the Sweet Briar of her working years. Dorothy Jester remembers that Laura unfailingly presented gift certificates for meals to all returning from the hospital, to be served on the day and at the hour of the patient's choice. And such meals they were!

Laura entertained each new faculty and staff member with family in his or her first few days on these acres. Before the end of August, she had oriented and reassured all comers. It was an opportunity for the new ones to ask all those things they most wanted to know of someone who knew the answers and knew them certainly. She was one of a splendid company who built community with wisdom and kindness and imagination. All of those who benefitted will cherish each one of them always.

As the academic year progressed, she included students and staff in a delightful mix. By Thanksgiving each French major had enjoyed a private lesson in the preparation of traditional confections from the Old World, in good time to produce her own in December.

As soon as they retired, Laura and Hilda Hite promptly enrolled in one of Richard Rowland's poetry courses. Laura arranged tea parties for this group of the newest generation with characteristic zeal. An evaluation that Mr. Rowland has preserved listed Laura and Hilda among the glories of a favorite course.

It may be that growing up in the home of a university president taught Laura the need for her particular brand of hospitality and nurture in academic places. She was to scholarship born. From her mother's childhood in a missionary home in Africa, Laura could sing Zulu lullabies. At Radcliffe, her recital of the basic clicks of the Zulu language entertained her examining committee for her highest degree. Admiration for her kinsman, theologian John Buckham, underlay her lifelong commitment to the insights of the social gospel as it flowered in this country early in this century.

In her research, Martha von Briesen found that the speaker for the dedication of the Stoughton Fletcher Library in Ludlow, Vermont, in 1904 was Matthew Buckham, President of the University of Vermont. It is Sweet Briar's special blessing that the Fletcher and Buckham legacies intertwined for us in Laura.

Sometimes it is said in tribute that is, at best, dubious that one person or another “attended to his own business” or “attended to her own business.” It was never ever, I think, said of Laura Buckham. She lived too deliberately and too carefully by standards too lofty and fixed; she cared too personally and constantly about all the others of us to leave us ignored or unguided. She advised us, in matters weighty and small. She once rallied support for her friend, a chaplain whose appointment was about to end. On what seemed a crucial Sunday for her cause, she filled the Chapel. When asked if he attended Sunday services very often, one honest recruit had to declare, “Only when commanded to do so by Laura Buckham!”

Lysbeth Muncy observes: “Laura was a lovely, loving person who not only knew other people’s need but did something about it.”

Her self-effacing modesty must not go unnoted. Men and women who knew her well at Westminster-Canterbury, people whom she had regularly and generously helped, learned for the first time when they read her obituary that she had spoken in cultural programs for the radio in Paris, that she won the highest scholarly honors, that she had edited college cook books, that she had been decorated by the Government of France.

Those who lived near speak of the characteristic realism and calm and grace with which she lived those last weeks. Her years were blessed with a wide range of options. She always knew what she was doing, and there is every reason to conclude that she came to the end without regrets.

We have all lost a great deal in her death. But she also gave us much that we will never lose.

By Patricia Johnson Brockman ’57

Laura Buckham was my teacher and my friend for thirty years. When I was graduated from Sweet Briar College with an A.B. degree in French, Laura gave me a plate which she had had Peter Williams make for me. She had designed Anne de Bretagne and Louis XII playing chess. On the border she had expressed in medieval French this command, “Do what you would like to have done before dying.” Therein she made the challenge to me and she gave me the promise.

Life is a journey, ultimately a spiritual journey. Laura gave her students the best gift a teacher can give his or her students. She built a behavior within her students according to the individual student’s need. Behavior is a manifestation of self-esteem, that internal perception of what we really feel about ourselves. Self-esteem is controlled, at least in increments, by the external feelings and behavior of others, especially “significant” others. Laura was a “significant other” to many of her students. Her students were always welcome in her serene home on Woodland Road. We had wonderful times playing with her beloved beagles, eating souffles with student/faculty interchanges. I shall always remember the fear in my heart as I approached my turn for senior seminar presentations; yet, the confidence and feelings of relaxation from Laura aided me. Each turn on the journey, in college and later in my life, I would rush to her with something which I thought I had discovered or something with which I needed help. She would meet me at “the garden gate.” She had been there all along waiting for me with her marvelous listening ear. Her other students have shared these experiences with me also.

I love her story of her doctorate oral examination...five men examining one little lady returned from Paris, from astonishing experiences. She was nervous! One gentleman said, “Gentlemen, are you aware that Miss Buckham is one of the rare Americans who speaks the Zulu-clicks?” And her response was to sing “Yankee Doodle” and to count to ten in the Zulu-clicks. As she said, “This broke the ice.”

Laura’s perception of people and events always nourished me. One Christmas I had dinner at Westminster with her and Dr. Gilpin. They were totally entertaining with their memories of things past at Sweet Briar College. I thought to myself how beautifully integrated their personalities were and how happy they appeared. As she was walking with me to the elevator, Laura said to me, “Thank you for sharing with me who you are and what you are and who you are becoming and what you are becoming.” For me, our little visit was encouragement. Again it was another challenge and another promise.

Laura’s favorite author was Antoine de Saint Exupery. Saint Exupery wrote in his novel, Terre des Hommes/Wind, Sand and Stars, “...aimer ce n’est point nous regarder l’un l’autre mais regarder ensemble dans la meme direction.” “Love does not consist in gazing at each other but in looking outward together in the same direction.”

Like her favorite author, Saint Exupery, and his double, Le Petit Prince, Laura has left the earth, her mission achieved. Tonight and most nights when I walk my dog and I look into the sky to see the stars shining. I shall remember what Laura means to me. As The Little Prince says,

“In one of the stars I shall be living. In one of them I shall be laughing. And so it will be as if all the stars were laughing, when you look at the sky at night....You — only you — will have stars that can laugh!”

And he laughed again.

“And when your sorrow is comforted (time soothes all sorrows); you will be content that you have known me. You will always be my friend. You will want to laugh with me....”

AND I will remember Laura! She is my star! □

Junior Year Abroad... at Sweet Briar

by Caroline Stacey

As I write this, I sit in a downtown Memphis Public Library. A few months ago, Memphis meant nothing to me except heat, jazz, Elvis Presley and the Mississippi River. I suspected that along with the river must go snakes, alligators and bat-size mosquitoes. After all, this is America and everything in America is twice as large, isn't it? Now such absurd preconceptions have been thoroughly dispelled, along with the notion that all Americans are brash, uneducated, opinionated and either terribly wealthy or horribly impoverished.

I find it hard to believe that I have been here only a year; so much has happened and most of it unexpectedly. I have been fortunate to see some of America's most renowned places including Chicago, New York, Philadelphia, Fort Lauderdale and, of course, Washington, D.C.

Coming, as I do, from an older culture where the cities are correspondingly ancient, I am impressed by the orderliness and, in Washington, the cleanliness of it all. Instead of the jumble of streets and the rambling London suburbs, the roads are all numbered in sequence. Heavens! City planning made intelligible!

I soon realized, though, that America isn't just these big cities. More typically, it is represented by smaller communities, often a considerable distance apart. These tremendous open spaces are something I know I shall miss when I return to Britain, that island where every square inch must have been trodden hundreds of times (and what a road system America has)!

Since my first day in America, I have found the people wonderfully unstuffy and the Sweet Briar students friendly and open. In Britain, the educational system is such that those who end up in the top universities are an elite and cannot but know this for a fact. This has several results, by no means all bad, but one of the most disturbing must surely be the pseudo anti-intellectual streak which runs through the student body (I speak only of Arts students; scientists are a different breed). There is a deep cynicism too, although I could not say with precision where it comes from. The net product is a reasonably sophisticated but finally closed sort of outlook. To put it crudely, it runs along the lines of "we are, of course, the elite and will compete among ourselves while we're here, but really, darling, why bother?"

In actuality, the competition is frantic, but most of the British students I know would rather die than admit that they care very deeply about their subject for its own sake, that is, quite apart from its being the least painful form of intellectual exercise consistent with their remaining a university student. So much for that malaise.

By contrast, I was absolutely taken aback and then delighted at the willing naïveté and enthusiasm of the students I have met at Sweet Briar. The fact that a much higher percentage of Americans go to college has something to do with it, I'm sure. I suspect, however, that a more intangible reason has to do with early specialization leading to a narrow, tunnelled approach to "learning" in my country. Expertise and considerable familiarity with one set of academic terminology can lead to a haughty reluctance to show an interest in an area where one is a virtual beginner.

When I first arrived at Sweet Briar, I was pretty skeptical about the idea of compulsory requirements and multi-disciplinary studies. I suppose I was not totally sympathetic to the aims of a liberal arts program. It took me a while to realize that the aim of most British universities, turning out mini-specialists, is not better, per se, just different.

Similarly, the small size of Sweet Briar makes for an immediate feeling of "belonging" but, I once thought, little else. I have come to see the excellent staff-student relationships as one of the College's greatest strengths, indeed, perhaps, one of the greatest strengths any college can have. I'm sure that this is not an American phenomenon, any more than intellectual indifference among students is peculiarly British. Any small college in Britain would probably have equally good staff-student relationships (stuffiness and pomposity permitting). However, it has certainly been one of the most endearing features of my year at Sweet Briar.

I cannot let this opportunity pass to speak of that part of my Sweet Briar experience which will be the most enduring. This year turned out to be a God-given and very special time of spiritual rebirth in a Christian community of much love and support. I arrived an almost complete pagan, and now I can truly say that the high spot of my year at Sweet Briar was my confirmation.

Despite the richness of my time in America, I would not presume to say that I now know the American way of life. A year as a visiting student is, I think, probably just long enough to enable one to realize how much one does not understand about a country. □

Caroline Stacey, author of these reflections on her year as St. Andrew's exchange scholar at Sweet Briar, is now back in Scotland working toward the M.A. Honours in music. She expects to continue with graduate study and has hopes of returning to the United States for either a further degree in music or to attend a seminary.

Caroline, whose home is on a farm in Chelmsford, Essex, England, is an accomplished keyboard performer who played piano, organ and harpsichord at Sweet Briar. She was a member of the Concert Choir, accompanied singers in concert and presented both a student recital on the harpsichord and a program of Scott Joplin ragtimes with Jennifer Cooper '85. Caroline participated in many activities of the Christian community on campus, reading in chapel services, helping with projects of the Church and Chapel Committee and being a member of the Intervarsity group. She also wrote for the Sweet Briar News.

This past summer Caroline was a volunteer for Catholic Charities, working with six- to twelve-year-olds in a music program at an inner city neighborhood center in Syracuse, NY.

Sweet Briar Honors Alumnae

Two Sweet Briar alumnae, Jane Roseberry Ewald Tolleson of Charlottesville and Grosse Pointe, Mich., and Nancy Dowd Burton of Cincinnati, shared honors at the College's Founders' Day celebration when each was presented with the Sweet Briar College Alumnae Award in recognition of outstanding volunteer service to the College. Presentation of the award was made by Mary Kay McDonald of Richmond, president of the Alumnae Association.

Mrs. Tolleson has been a member of the Sweet Briar Board of Overseers since 1975 and a director since 1980. She and her late husband, John A. Ewald, Jr., established Sweet Briar's highly successful Ewald Scholars Program which annually brings internationally known scholars to the campus. In 1981, Mr. and Mrs. John A. Ewald, Sr., permanently endowed this program, which honors their son, who died in 1979.

Mrs. Tolleson has served Sweet Briar as class secretary, Admissions Representative, Chairman of the Golden Stairs Committee, and member of the Executive Board of the Alumnae Association.

She studied law at the University of Virginia and was the first woman member of the Law School Council. She is founder and owner of The Very Thing, a mail-order business in Charlottesville, and operates a horse farm at her home, "Verulam," near Charlottesville.

Mrs. Burton has been a member of the Sweet Briar Board of Overseers since 1983 and for many years served as a member of the Executive Board of the Alumnae Association. During her 40 years of volunteer service to the College, she has made outstanding contributions to the field of fund raising. In particular, she was influential in the establishment of recognition clubs for major donors to the College and of expanded alumnae reunion giving.

Mrs. Burton holds a master's degree in psychology from Ohio State University and has been a school psychologist and active with the Cincinnati Planned Parenthood Board and with her church parish.

Profiles

Elizabeth Johnston Lipscomb

Dr. Elizabeth J. Lipscomb, associate professor of English at Randolph-Macon Woman's College, has received the Gillie A. Larew Distinguished Teaching Award for 1984.

A 1959 Phi Beta Kappa graduate of Sweet Briar College, Dr. Lipscomb received her Ph.D. from Harvard University. She has studied at the Shakespeare Institute, Birmingham, England, and held a Fulbright scholarship and Woodrow Wilson and Vassie James Hill fellowships. She is coauthor, with her mother Mary Tabb Johnston of Blacksburg, of Amelia Gayle Gorgas, a biography of a 19th century Southern woman and has been published in Masterplots, and Magill's Literary Annual, among others.

Mary Murchison Gornto

From the Wilmington (NC) Morning Star, Sept. 1, 1984:

Calling her move "bittersweet," Mary M. Gornto has resigned as executive director of DARE (Downtown Area Revitalization Effort) to become assistant manager of New Hanover County...Mrs. Gornto was chosen from 86 applicants...because her experience with DARE and other public organizations, including the Chamber of Commerce, the Junior League of Wilmington and the North Carolina Azalea Festival, make her well-qualified for the job...A (1969) graduate of Sweet Briar College, she has a bachelor's degree in American Studies...She and her husband, Deanes, live in Wilmington with their two children, Catherine and Deanes Jr.

Lendon Gray

The beauty and complexity of dressage riding as practiced by Maine's premier horsewoman, Lendon Gray of Dixmont, Maine, was the subject of an hour-long profile on the television stations of the Maine Public Broadcasting Network last summer. Lendon Gray:

Equestrian presented an in-depth look at the life of a championship rider as she trains and teaches at her home, Puckerbrush Farm, located in the rolling hills of central Maine, and as she meets stiff competition at the Olympic trials for the U.S. Equestrian Team.

Lendon, a graduate with the class of '71 at Sweet Briar, was selected for the 1980 Equestrian Team, but did not compete because of the U.S. withdrawal from the Olympic Games. A premier dressage rider, she raises and trains horses and instructs young riders in the finer points of horsemanship. From her childhood fascination with horses to her participation in the Summer Olympics in Los Angeles in July, Lendon's dedication to her sport has propelled her to the top of the riding world's foremost events.

Nominee for the Board of Overseers

The Executive Board of the Sweet Briar Alumnae Association submits the name of Gwen Speel Kaplan '60 to the members of the Association as a candidate for election to the Board of Overseers of Sweet Briar College.

Gwen was involved in campus activities from the time she arrived at Sweet Briar. She was a member of the Orientation Committee, of the Art and Music clubs, and the YWCA cabinet, was often on the Dean's list, was listed in "Who's Who in American Colleges and Universities," was a member of Tau Phi, was the Editor of the Sweet Briar News as well as its Art Editor, was head of publicity for many events, was an enthusiastic member of the Sweet Tones, and was a Mary K. Benedict Scholar.

After graduation, Gwen took courses at Northwestern University working towards a Master's degree in math. She worked as a systems engineer for IBM for four years. She then became involved in free lance illustrating and advertising, which she has continued to do part-time. After her husband was transferred to New York, the family settled in Wilton, Conn., where she took a crash two-month computer course for IBM and shifted into a program used by high schools and universities to schedule students into classes. When she decided to work part-time, she became involved with market research for Icon Research Co. More recently, she has been associated with Gould and McCoy in New York where she has been a Research Associate.

Gwen has been as involved as an alumna as she was as a student. She served as president and as treasurer of the Chicago Club soon after graduation. After moving to Fairfield County, Conn., she became active in that club, serving as its Bulb Chairman. She was also secretary for her class. In 1972 she was elected to the Board of the Alumnae Association as Chairman of Region I. She maintained her interest and enthusiasm in the bulb project, and in 1976 was named National Bulb Chairman. From that position, she was elected president of the Alumnae Association, an office she held from 1980-1983. During that time she was also an ex-officio member of the Board of Overseers, as well as a member of the Presidential Search Committee.

Gwen's son, Charlie, is a sophomore at Vanderbilt, and her daughter, Ellie, is a senior in high school. Her community activities include serving as a Director of the Wilton Woman's Club, Deputy Registrar of Voters, and as a Board member of the local school system. Her hobbies include figure skating, tennis and gardening.

Other names may be added to the ballot if they are sent to the Director of the Alumnae Association, Sweet Briar, Virginia 24595, accompanied by 15 signatures of 15 alumnae and written consent of the nominees within two weeks after publication of this name as the nominee. If no additional nominations are made, the Director of the Alumnae Association is instructed to cast a ballot to elect the proposed slate. The elected candidate's name will be submitted to the Board of Directors as the nominee from the Association for election at the spring meeting of the Board.

New Staff in the Alumnae Office

Cathy Cash Mays

One new person in the Alumnae Office is Cathy Cash Mays '84 whose title is Records and Computer Program Manager.

Her responsibilities include updating the computer's records of alumnae, continuing the development of network directories and computerizing programs for the bulb project.

Cathy was a 1980 honors graduate from Amherst County High School, with an Advanced Diploma and membership in the National Honor Society. At Sweet Briar, she received a degree in Anthropology/Sociology and a Business Management Certificate. She was active in INTERACT, Pi Gamma Mu, the newspaper and literary magazine staff, and Executive Committee of the Student Government (as Day Student Representative). She also served as a student delegate at a regional conference of the Council for Advancement and Support of Education during her senior year.

Since her marriage last July to Neal Mays, Cathy is living in the Amherst area.

Louise Swiecki Zingaro

Louise Swiecki Zingaro '80, now living in Lynchburg with her husband, Scott, is the newly appointed Assistant to the Director of the Alumnae Association. Now sitting in the office recently vacated by Mary Hughes Blackwell, she is working closely with Ann Reams, Carolyn Bates and the other members of the staff at Alumnae House.

Of Polish descent, Louise has a reading and speaking knowledge of the Polish language. She has traveled in Western and Eastern Europe, partly to trace and visit with her relatives in Poland, and to study at the Jagiellonian University in Krakow.

Her major at Sweet Briar was International Relations and Economics. She was a member of the Wailes Center Planning Committee, the International Club, the Career Planning Committee, the Sweet Briar News staff and the Intercollegiate Equestrian Team. While living in Utica, NY, she was Alumnae chairman of the local club's Bulb Project. She also worked in the Children's Hospital and Rehabilitation Center in Utica.

Among her new duties will be management of the Sweet Briar Bulb project, planning Alumnae Council and reunion gatherings and supervising arrangements at Garden Cottage. Her knowledge of computer programming will come in handy as she assists with the expansion of the networking directories of alumnae across the country and further development of the bulb project.

Notices

Association Constitutional Changes

Article XVI: Amendments of the Constitution of the Sweet Briar Alumnae Association states: "This Constitution may be amended by a two-thirds vote at the Annual Meeting of the Association, provided notice of the amendment be sent to each member with the notice of the meeting at least one month before the Annual Meeting." The Annual Meeting is held during Alumnae Council in October.

It has been customary for such proposed changes to be printed in the fall issue of the Alumnae Magazine, which usually goes out the first week of September. This year, as a result of several unusual situations, the Magazine was late and only a few alumnae received the notice before coming to Council.

It is important that these amendments be enacted so that we do not have to wait a year before taking an official vote. After consulting with counsel, we found that something could be done. A copy of the proposed changes and the entire Constitution was given to each alumna on her arrival at Council to allow time for her to study them. At the Annual Meeting, the question was discussed as though a final vote would be taken. A signed, written straw vote was then taken with the number of members present and the number of votes carefully tallied. Every person there voted to accept the proposed changes, 52 in number.

It was agreed that this statement of explanation be printed in this issue of the Alumnae Magazine with the request that each of you read the by-law statement in the last issue. If you have any questions, comments or disagreements, please write to the Alumnae Office immediately. Unless sufficient objections arise, on January 1, 1985, we shall declare that the Constitution is amended as presented and voted upon at the Annual Meeting on October 9, 1984.

Thank you for your serious consideration to this important issue.

Trish Neale Van Clief '72
Secretary & By-Laws Chairman

Staff Members Honored

Employee Service Awards were presented on Founders' Day by President Nenah E. Fry to staff members who have served the College for ten, twenty and thirty years.

"All of these fine people have 'earned the rose which they are carryng' today," said President Fry as she gave plaques and special proclamations to staff members who have "exemplified the dedication, hard work, loyalty and concern for the welfare of the community which characterize the spirit of the College's founders."

Especially honored for thirty years service were Nancy H. Adams (Library), Shirley P. Reid (Library) and Carolyn M. Davis (Halls of Residence).

Twenty years of service to the College were recognized for C. Vivian Burch (Food Service), Carolyn M. Davis (Food Service), Jewell M. Harris (Food Service) and Annie Mae Smoot (Halls of Residence).

Honored for ten years employment were Alice S. Davis (Halls of Residence), Francis Swift (Alumnae Office), Brenda L. Fitts (Infirmary), Gloria A. Higginbotham (Development Office), Marilyn B. Toms (Food Service), Nelson R. Adams (Buildings and Grounds), Ruby Cash (President's Office), T. Winston Berry (Food Service) and Edward J. McDaniel (Food Service).

Books...

CORNWALL, CONNECTICUT, A SMALL NEW ENGLAND TOWN by Mary Swift Calhoun '31, Marvelwood School, Cornwall, CT.

A sociological study of the author's hometown made under the direction of Prof. Catherine Seaman to fulfill requirements for a long-delayed Sweet Briar degree, this book is based on many taped interviews with the inhabitants of Cornwall and contains a number of original maps of the area and many old and contemporary photographs. The book is being used as a textbook in a minicourse in town government in a U.S. history course at the Marvelwood School, a preparatory school in Cornwall.

TOURIST'S GUIDE TO WEST FELICIANA PARISH, A Little Bit of Heaven Right Here on Earth, by Ann Butler Hamilton '65, Habersham Corp., New Orleans, LA.

This guide to a unique Louisiana parish presents, as the jacket suggests, "what visitors most want to know and what natives most want to tell them" — "what to see, what to do, where to stop, sleep, breakfast, lunch and dine, where to drop in, what to do in emergencies...." The author's previous works have included several prize-winning children's books containing stories about Little Chase and Big Fat Aunt May.

Banner year for Bulb Sales!

Special thanks are due to Courtney Stevenson, for her hard work and dedication to the Sweet Briar Bulb Project. The record breaking $130,000.00 plus in total bulb sales is a fitting conclusion to her term as National Bulb Chairman, a job well done. We also give grateful thanks and appreciation to Mary Hughes Blackwell for all of her years of dedicated service as Bulb Project Manager.

There were 11 more bonus winners this year than last, a total of 49 sellers. Twenty-five sold between $50 and $749, six sold between $750 and $999, and there are now eighteen Bloomin' Alumnae (those with sales over $1,000).

Starting at the top, they are Rosalind Ray Spell '74 of Atlanta, GA, who sold $5,379.69 worth of bulbs, followed by Irene Mitchell Moore '42 of Greensboro, NC, with $3,311.10 and Louise Woodruff Angst '43 of St. Louis, MO, with $2,944.00. Other big sellers were Jean Craver '65, Dallas; Genevieve Marsh Fisher '38, Washington; Nancy Keen Butterworth Palmer '51, Nashville; Nancy Nalle Genung '37, Princeton; Mary Morris Gamble Booth '50, Lynchburg; Nancy Haskins Elliot '40, So. California; Virginia Squibb Flynn '32, Fairfield County; Margaret Stuart Wilson Dickey '41, Texarkana; Chloe Lansdale Pitard '61, Philadelphia; Lydia Goodwyn Lorentzen '34, Richmond; Mary Swift Calhoun '31, Solo; Julia Gray Saunders Michaux '39, Richmond; Pamela Larson Baldwin '64, Lynchburg; Sara Callison Jamison '29, Indianapolis; and Laura Brown Deters '63, Louisville.

The top-selling clubs in 1984 were Atlanta, GA, $11,341.18; Washington, DC, $9,798.63; Richmond, VA, $8,774.88; Dallas, TX, $5,805.61; Greensboro, NC, $5,343.28; and Lynchburg, VA, $4,784.65.

Virginia Squibb Flynn '32, was rewarded for her record setting bulb sales last year, with an inspirational trip to Holland last spring and a tour of the famed Keukenhof Gardens with a representative of Van Eeden Brothers, Sweet Briar's bulb grower and supplier. Next year Louise Woodruff Angst '43, of St. Louis, and Rosalind Ray Spell '74, of Atlanta, have the same treat in store. Congratulations and thanks are in order to them as well as to ALL the sellers who worked so hard to make this such a successful year.

This spring, for the first time, parents joined our bulb selling efforts. Betty Phillips Sanford '58 and husband, Bill, from Lynchburg, parents of Crystal, a sophomore, are chairman of the Parents Bulb Committee. They offered the use of their house at Wintergreen as an incentive to the highest seller. We congratulate the winners, Sarane and Arthur McHugh of Glencoe, MD, parents of Comer, a junior. They sold $341.15 worth of bulbs. We are pleased to welcome the parents group to this project and hope that their participation will increase each year.

As you know, the real bottom line for selling is to provide scholarship funds for Sweet Briar students. This year, 1984-85, $94,053.00 has gone towards this end. Forty-six clubs through their endowed scholarships are helping sixty-eight students including three foreign students from Germany, England and Peru and four turning point students reap some of those very special benefits of a Sweet Briar education that we are all privileged to enjoy. This is approximately 1/10th of overall scholarship funds distributed by the College — a remarkable statistic considering the small number of participants. Just think what we alumnae could do if each one of us had a share in this vital endeavor. Any or all ideas of how we can do this would be appreciated. Drop a postcard to Louise Swiecki Zingaro '80, whom we welcome as Bulb Project Manager, or to Sally Bumbaugh '54, National Bulb Chairman, care of the Alumnae Office. Check the spring edition of the Alumnae Magazine for more bulb information.

Did you know...

that if each of Sweet Briar's 13,779 alumnae sold $10 worth of bulbs, we would have sales of $137,799, and $55,000 more for scholarships!

1918

At age 90, Elizabeth Wilson lives in the Sun Valley Lodge Retirement Home, Sun City, AZ, a retirement community. She attended Sweet Briar for only one year, then transferred to Vassar, and graduated there in 1918.

In Avon Park, FL, Jane Pratt Betts leads an active life for an 86-year-old. She is grateful to have both of her daughters living close by.

Elizabeth Lowman Hall lives alone since the death of her husband of 59 years in January. She has a devoted helper three days a week, who also drives for her, and neighbors are thoughtful. Visits and long distance calls from her son are also a help. In spite of arthritis, she manages to "fuss about" the flowers her husband planted in the borders of three buildings on the Elmira College campus, where she lives.

At 89, Charlotte More Meloney, Walton, NY, was still teaching Early American Decoration one day a week when she wrote, but she was planning to give that up and sell her patterns this fall. She has taught about 150 people in the last 30 years, mostly in Delaware County, NY. She has loved attending Fletcher Farm Craft School in Ludlow, VT, for 14 summers. (Those names should evoke thoughts of Sweet Briar history!) While visiting her daughter in Washington, DC, Charlotte had a long letter from Cornelia Carroll Gardner. Helen Sturgis Pond AC, who married a Walton man, has been Charlotte's good friend through the years, and they enjoy talking about how they loved Sweet Briar in the early days.

Emma Davis Kuykendall lives alone in Rivercliff Apartments in Little Rock, AR. She enjoys her grandchildren and great-grandchildren, as well as friends and clubs. Her health is fairly good; she still drives her car and goes where she wishes.

Margaret Garry Reading has been confined to a nursing home in Chagrin Falls, OH, for six years, and her daughter-in-law writes that she is unable to respond to news of any sort.

Martha Falk Shaffer's daughter-in-law also replied for her, since Martha had a serious illness in March. Fortunately, she is recuperating well at her home. She celebrated her 86th birthday on June 14, along with her sons, daughters-in-law, grandchildren, and husband Carl, who will soon be 88.

Alice Miller Bly has lived in a delightful retirement complex in Muncie, IN, for ten years. This year she ordered a contour chair custom made to her measurements, and she finally read The Source by James Michener (She didn't say whether one inspired the other) and learned "that our social and governmental problems today are simply repetitious of others just like them that so-called civilization has lived through...."

Aline Morton Burt writes from Laguna Hills, CA, that her three children have given her 14 grandchildren (counting marriages) and 3½ great-grands. They are scattered across the country from the Mississippi River westward. She is still trying to "retire," yet finds herself still involved in responsibilities in organizations which interest her. She writes, "My children claim that Sweet Briar should have taught me how to say that simple little word, 'No!'"

President

Dorothy Keller Iliff (Mrs. William S., Jr.) 2800 S. University Blvd., No. 60, Denver, CO 80210

Secretary

Helen Dunleavy Mitchell (Mrs. Henry D.), 140 Ivanhoe St., Denver, CO 80220

Fund Agent

Ellen Newell Bryan (Mrs. W. Wright), P.O. Box 470, Clemson, SC 29631

Margaret (Peg) Reinhold Mitchell has moved into a retirement community in Devon, MA, where she is near her family.

In England, Margaret (Peg) Krider Ivey has a few more aches and pains but is still mobile, which is the operative word. Still a member of "Inner Wheel," she helps when she can. She drives her car locally, and four of her widowed friends go out together to a pub lunch. Her daughter-in-law was remarrying the end of June. Peg was very happy over it. Judy, Peg's daughter-in-law, met Jim, whose wife had died three weeks after Jim (Peg's son) died. Judy and Jim will move to Portsmouth. Peg spent four days at Christmas in Tanguary.

Mary Elizabeth Stoddard Fray had a most enjoyable telephone call from Dot Keller Iliff when Dot was in Chicago. Both were sorry they couldn't get together, but they had a marvelous chat. Mary will be in Florida in the winter.

Kathleen Willis Peavy's family sent the sad news of her death on Dec. 21, 1983, in Shreveport, LA.

Ruth Will Beckh writes that her only claim to fame is four great-grands — two girls and two boys. The latest, a boy, was born May 15 to Ruth's only granddaughter. Ruth and Karl had a great trip to Florida in Feb. '84 to visit their daughter. Ruth writes that Mildred Gribble Seiler is temporarily in the Presbyterian Home in Quitman, GA, but she is hoping to find a live-in companion so she can return to her home in Savannah.

Janetta Fitzhugh Evans writes a most cheerful card. She lives at the Hughes Home for Adults because she wants to, as she doesn't want to be a burden to her two sons and their wives. Janetta was raised in Fredericksburg and has a first cousin who has always lived there too, and she watches over Ruth tenderly. Ruth writes that she is very alive and happy!

Catharine Farrand Elder writes how she loves S.B. and has many fond memories. She writes that she and Sam are quite well and says they are a very close family, enjoying very much Sharon and Valerie, their beloved daughters. Catharine and Sam have four married grandchildren and four greats. The grandchildren are three girls and one boy, and the greats, three boys and one girl — all very precious.

Lois (Loey) Peterson Wilson and Betty Moore Rusk were trying to have a mini-reunion on the Eastern Shore of Maryland, maybe Tidewater, the last week in June with Peg Reinhold Mitchell, Marj Shepherd and the two of us, but it had to be postponed. Loey had a wonderful month of March — three weeks in Phoenix at Royal Palms Inn, which she loves, and one week visiting friends in Carmel, CA. She spent eight days in Bermuda celebrating her "Big Birthday" (80th) and adored Bermuda. Betty and Loey thought we were all celebrating our 80th, thought Maryland a fun place to celebrate it, and are now planning it for our 81st. Loey writes that the cancer bug hit her, so immediately after Bermuda she went to the hospital for two weeks for an operation. We are all so happy with the wonderful news that everything is fine with her now. She was happily planning to be on Lake Superior in Michigan the third week in July and then on Cape Cod for another week.

Jensch Harris in July. Kitty has had a great year: Thanksgiving in New York with her sister-in-law and family, followed by a binge in the City with her niece, and a Christmas family gathering of the Andersen clan at Kitty's home with great-grand #8 — 6 months old — the main attraction. She had three weeks in India, where she realized a life-long dream of seeing the Taj Mahal, which Kitty said is more marvelous than she ever dreamed. She was well escorted by a granddaughter and a grandson — rode elephants, went tiger hunting in Nepal and India, and loved every moment of it. She arrived back in Captiva Island, FL, in time for a telephone visit with Edna Lee Gilchrist, who was leaving the next day for Naples, FL. Kitty has had a busy year with all her projects flourishing. She is chairman of her Elite Reading Club's final banquet celebrating their 50th anniversary. Knowing Kitty's expertise, I am sure the final production was a complete success.

Frances McCamish McNeel's son writes that Frances is still in Sarah Roberts French Home suffering from Alzheimer's disease. In spite of gradual decline, she still watches TV, reads newspapers, enjoys visits of her friends and family, and seems to get along with a minimum of frustration and depression. We '26-ers send prayers and love.

Marjorie H. Shepherd had a lovely luncheon with Dorothy (Dot) Fairbairn Miller. One of Dot's beautiful daughters, who lives nearby, joined them. Marj sees Betty Moore Rusk when Betty visits her daughter in Maryland. She also sees Frances Dunlap Heiskell and hears from Mary Bristol Graham and Elizabeth (Cobby) Cobb Sutherland.

Ruth Johnston Bowen writes she and Hascall lead a quiet life. Hascall is 80 and Ruth, 83. They are grateful to be on their feet and well.

Ellen Newell Bryan visited Edna Lee Gilchrist for the installation of President Fry, for whom both had high praise. Ellen is so happy to have her granddaughter Ellen Bryan Tozzer a sophomore at SBC. She was president of her Freshman Class. She is the third Ellen in the family to attend SBC: her mother is Ellen Newell Bryan Tozzer '55. Her aunt Mary Lane Bryan Sullivan is a '58 graduate, and her great-aunt Ann Lane Newell Whitley '28 also attended SBC. The family all gathered at Atlanta for the Presentation Ball, where Ellen (3rd) was presented. Edna Lee Gilchrist and Joe visited Ellen and Wright at their Sea Island, GA, home. Ellen and Wright had planned to go to France for D-Day plus 40. Wright was to cover it, but he became ill at the eleventh hour and they had to cancel their trip. All '26-ers send special thanks for the great job Ellen is doing as our Class Fund Agent.

Betty Moore Rusk writes that she is doing more of the same: volunteer jobs at church, Red Cross, and Needlework Guild. Her travels have been to Florida for two weeks with her sister and then to Houston to visit her son Whit, his wife Pat, and their family. May 21 her granddaughter graduated at Boston College. (Needless to say, Betty was there.) She graduated magna cum laude and received a big scholarship to law school — the first in her family. Betty was in Maine to open their camp for the summer and spent six weeks there with children and grandchildren. Then she was taking off for Italy, Austria, and Germany, including the Passion Play in September.

Friends will be saddened to hear that Frances Dunlop Heiskell's beloved husband Jimmie died in Georgetown U. Hospital Feb. 25, 1984. Remember, Jimmie, always a complete dear, coached our outstanding chorus line in our "Young at Heart" song at our 55th Reunion — to a tremendous success. Jimmie will be sincerely missed by all of us and his many friends. Our love and deepest sympathy we send to Frances, who also lost her brother shortly after Jimmie's death. Dot Keller Iliff spent a night with Frances when Dot was on her way to the S.B. Reunion, and Frances said Dot's visit meant so much to her. She is staying in her lovely home, with her devoted cat, Inky, always at her side and such a comfort.

Katharine Tracy writes that she never thought she had much news, as she hasn't a husband, child, or grandchildren — not even a dog. "The best news," she writes, "is that I am hale, hearty, and in my right mind." After leaving S.B. she worked with a large advertising agency until she retired. Since then she divides her time between Sewickley, PA, and her home in Florida. She lives on an island (large) named Anna Maria on the West Coast of Florida between Tampa and Sarasota and returns to her home in Sewickley for the summer.

When Edna Lee Gilchrist wrote, she had had a good year. Joe's hip is working well and he enjoys his golf and hunting. Edna and Joe enjoy the many activities of their children and grands — Judy's Thomas Lee Hollohan (18 months) and Joan's Michael Winston Danzansky (15) and Katherine Cox Danzansky (12). Edna is a trustee for Seven Hills School in Lynchburg, on the board of a local bank, lay reader for St. Paul's Church, and an occasional worker at the Fine Arts Center. They had various short trips to Florida, a house party at Hot Springs, a visit to Joe's family in North Carolina and with Judy and Bob at Rehoboth, and a trip to New England in the fall. They were just back from a glamorous trip through Japan, Singapore, Bangkok, and Hong Kong. Unfortunately, since she wrote her card, Edna has been ill, but she is now out of the hospital and recovering well.

Dorothy Keller Iliff, who was at SBC for Reunion (our class' only representative), reports that S.B. House is looking more like the S.B. House most of us knew. Many of the lovely old pieces and furniture are back. Ann Marshall Whitley '47 and Helen McMahon '23 have worked tirelessly on the restoration, as well as on the Sweet Briar Museum, housed in the remodeled basement of the Inn, where the tea room was. Dot says the campus is as lush and beautiful as ever. She was very impressed with Prothro Commons; the new dining room windows face Daisy's Monument and Paul's Mountain and east to inspiring vistas. The whole campus eats at the same place — cafeteria style with islands of special service. The entire room is very efficient, but beautiful. Dot tells of the beautiful memorial service in the Chapel for Anne Gary Pannell Taylor. After Reunion Dot spent two weeks in Washington, D.C. She had a good visit one night with Frances Dunlop Heiskell. Then she was off for three weeks visiting and touring in South America, including a four-day South American Conference on Ikebana, and reports seeing many marvelous and interesting spots. Dot, my co-writer, is so generous in helping me. To her my most sincere thanks!

We received the sad news that Margaret Milne Record died Sept. 9, 1983. We send our sympathy to her family.

The Denver S.B. Club had a delightful visit with Mary K. Lee McDonald '65, president of the Alumnae Association, and John, her husband, Thursday, July 12. The fun evening with dinner was held at Pres Hodges Hill '49 and Gene's lovely home. It was complete pleasure to see Mary K. and John and have news of Sweet Briar and the Alumnae Association.

Helen Dunleavy Mitchell had a spring trip to Phoenix, a wonderful trip last July to Copenhagen, and then two weeks cruising on the Royal Viking Sky. I'm still on three volunteer boards.

Once again Dot Iliff and each of you have done a wonderful job, coming to my aid for '26-er's news. My sincere thanks and appreciation to each of you.

Peg Krider Ivey enclosed this smile:

"To my deafness I'm accustomed. To my dentures I'm resigned. I can manage my bifocals. But how I miss my mind!"

Gladys Wester Horton (Mrs. Leonard M.), P.O. Box 308, Short Hills, NJ 07078

Your secretary is about to be fired. We (my husband June and I) are in our summer home, built by my father in 1924. We spend every summer here and are visited by our children and their families. Presently our daughter Penny Writer Theis '64 and her husband and children, Jeff, 17, Tim, 15, and Ginger, 10, are here. Next week our son Jack and his wife and children Wendy, 19, and Jordy, 14, will join us. I had planned to write the class notes here in Maine, but somehow the class correspondence was left in Connecticut. I will do the best that I can from whatever notes I do have with me.

Among the notes left at home was a picture of Mona Stone Green and her husband Thornton which I will send to SBC to put in our scrapbook. I had an unusual experience. I had a note from Wilhelmina Rankin Teter and was surprised to see her return address, 1802 Westminster Towers, 70 Lucerne Circle, Orlando, Florida — the exact address of my cousin whom I saw in March. Wilhelmina is a distant cousin of my husband. When children they played violins together. In her note, she said she is no longer the "shy waif of a person" that she was in college. She has kept busy being a reporter of the Tower news publication and playing music for Wednesday devotions. She also plays a lot of Scrabble, attends symphony concerts, plays chamber music with friends three times a week, and is still playing quartet (or quintet) twice a week.

Mary Douglas Lyon Stedman, Dougie to us, sent a note with her gift to SBC. All is well, and she has seven grandchildren. Four are college graduates; one is a college senior; one, a college freshman; and one a senior in high school — her last hope of an SBC student!

My husband and I, while driving through Charlottesville, saw briefly Liz Copeland Norfleet and Betsy Williams Gilmore. They had visited SBC for the inauguration of Dr. Nenah Fry on Founders Day last October, the only ones there from our class. My daughter Penny was there too. All three were very pleased with President Fry. Liz and Betsy think classmates will be interested in knowing that Diana Muldaur '60, the actress, who gave the Commencement address at SBC in May, is the daughter of Alice Patricia (Patsy) Jones Muldaur, who died in 1959.

I also heard from Evaline Edmonds Thoma. We extend sympathy to her in the loss of her husband a year ago. She had just returned from a swing around Illinois, New Mexico, California and Arizona, seeing old friends and relations.

A letter from our president, Marjorie Sturges Moose, sent me sad news too about Martha Lambeth Kilgore, Lammie to us. She too has lost her husband. She has moved from New Orleans to Nashville, TN. Marjorie wrote later about a marvelous trip to France she and her husband had just enjoyed.

Betty Carnes wrote that she had a change of address in Tampa. She and her sister are living in an apartment in a place more convenient for her church work, volunteer jobs, and present work on voting days. Her big trip this year was to the Passion Play in Oberammergau, during its special 350th anniversary. She toured Belgium, Switzerland, and Germany.

I also heard from Sims Massee Rand. She has moved back to Georgia from Texas and keeps busy with volunteer work at the hospital, playing bridge, and being with her family. In 1983 she went on a cruise with friends to Bermuda, and in March she and a friend took a beautiful cruise through the Panama Canal to the Caribbean.

Enroute home from our Florida trip, June and I stopped to visit Agnes Sproul Bush in Swoope, VA, enjoying her usual hospitality. She is hoping to attend reunion.

I do hope many of you will start planning to return for our 55th Reunion in 1985. Even the husbands had fun at our 50th! If you have any news please send it to me.

1934

President

Katharine Means Neely (Mrs. Rodgers), Baylors Lake, P.O. Box 76, Fleetville, PA 18420

Secretary

Anne Corbitt Little (Mrs. Lamar W.), 140 Fairview East, Tequesta, FL 33458

Fund Agent

Elizabeth Bond Wood (Mrs. Ernest M., Jr.), 1202 Greenway Court, Lynchburg, VA 24503

Memories of reunion or regrets at being unable to attend come to me from so many of our class. "What could be more satisfying," wrote Jane Morrison Moore, "than feeling closer to reunion classmates than even fifty years ago." Jane spent a week in Los Angeles just before the Olympics and hopes each of us will manage to see the paintings gathered for the exhibit, "A Day in the Country: Impressionism and the French Landscape."

Mary Lee Ryan Strother missed reunion, as she was traveling most of April and May — to Washington, where their two sons live; to Edam, Netherlands, where their daughter lives; with their daughter to Vienna, enjoying the Easter decorations and festivities; then to Athens and Crete; returning to Frankfurt, Edam and Washington; but staying in each place long enough to absorb it.

Because of emergency surgery and a stay in the hospital until June 10, Virginia Broun Lawson not only was unable to come to reunion but also unable to go with her husband, a member of the Board of Governors of the American Bar Association, to their meeting in Alaska and to China where they had been invited by the Chinese Ministry of Law.

Tacky Williams McCollum had cataract surgery and was allergic to all medication, so could not make reunion. Marcia Morrison Curtis helped Tacky through this with great talks together.

Julie Sadler de Coligny's letter about Reunion gave Helen Hanson Bamford a good idea of what she missed. Julie wrote that letter for Lou Dreyer Bradley who had planned for so long to come to reunion but found she could not because of fluid in her lungs. Lou died on July 19 and Julie attended her memorial service in Stamford, CT, on Aug. 11.

Julie went to a meeting of NNFA (National Nutritional Foods Asso.) in Atlanta with daughter Amanda, who runs a health food shop near Sweet Briar, and became a believer in nutrition theories. Her daughter Anne will help in the shop, S'amanda'S, and enter her two children, David and Arleigh, in Amherst High School.

Betty Carter Clark was cheered by Julie's reunion report. She had a busy and exciting summer in L.A. with the Olympics.

We were greatly saddened by news of Julia Shirley Patterson's loss of her husband Fred. They met at Sweet Briar in 1933.

Dee Hutchinson Howe lost her husband very suddenly in July.

Mary Rogers Moser lost her husband in March. They had been able to enjoy a 12-day cruise to Alaska on the Royal Viking to celebrate their 50th wedding anniversary in Sept. 1983.

Our heartfelt sympathy extends to them all.

"My most exciting news," wrote Majorie Lasar Hurd, "was the birth of my great-grandson, Michael Charles Brady, on July 9th. Nothing can top that in my life." Lasar continues as administrator of the Chabillon-DeMenil Mansion in St. Louis.

Kitty Means Neely and Helen Hoffer Roehm drove to reunion together. Hollie went home to have minor repairs on her house but found no repairs could help the rubbing vertebrae of her backbone. Kitty had visiting relatives from California and all went for a week's cruise out of Boston on the Newport Clipper — a wonderful trip.

Class of '34 at 1984 Reunion

Grandchildren visited Nancy Russell Carter for lots of tennis and swimming, and Nancy went to visit her children in Vermont, canoeing and swimming. Nancy continues to help with riding, etc., with blind and handicapped.

After attending our 50th at Sweet Briar, Jo Fink Meeks went to her 50th reunion at Northwestern in June. She later spent three weeks at Harbor Springs, MI, for a wonderful family reunion. Two of her three daughters were there with their families, one from Kalua, Oahu, HI, and one from Billings, MT. Her son and his wife came from Sonoma, CA.

Becky Strode Lee had a lovely time at the Tucker reunion with 165 relatives of her late husband's, St. George Tucker Lee. Becky plans to travel to Florida (Carabelle) with daughter Eleanor for Thanksgiving and spend Christmas in Atlanta with Eleanor and another daughter Brownie '60. Brownie is teaching in Niger, West Africa.

Rosemary Frey Rogers enjoyed rooming with Mary Pringle again after all these years. She returned home with a blood clot in her leg and spent some time in the hospital. Later she visited in Richmond, IN, and Cincinnati. Now she is preparing for her volunteer job as vice-president of the State Preservation Asso.

On her way to visit her son in Canada, Elizabeth Scheuer Maxwell visited Bonnie Wood Stookey, and they had lunch with Mary Moore Rowe in Boston. Bonnie has a new grandson who will soon travel to Pakistan for two years with his father Jeffrey Stookey, his mother, and live-year-old sister. Bonnie's guiding program at the Boston Museum of Fine Arts keeps her busy during the winter.

A granddaughter's graduation prevented Ruth Myers Pleasants being at reunion. Ruth and her husband are enjoying their retirement cottage. They left on Aug. 25 for Venice to board the Royal Viking Sea and cruise for thirteen days through the Greek Islands and into the Black Sea. They will have three days in Athens before returning home.

Pricilla Mullen Gowen and her sister Evelyn '31 go in October to Australia and New Zealand for six weeks.

Pricilla had heard from Mary Walton McCandlish Livingston, who was having a great vacation on Nantucket. She also read of Mary Moore Rowe's son's wedding in Richmond.

Summer was a busy time for Emily Marsh Nichols, entertaining her mother's grandchildren and five great-grandchildren. The wonderful thing was that at 95 her mother could enjoy it. Emily loved reunion and felt Julie's follow-up letter was just right.

Many of us were on the move abroad. Martha Lou Lemmon Stohman loves summer in Princeton, but when the stamps stuck, she took off on a Swan Hellenic Cruise, her second. They sailed from Dubrovnik through the Corinth Canal (dramatic at night), circled the Black Sea touching six ports, made shore excursions, and had lectures by four professors on board and at sites. "Now I can chime in on conversations on Nessebur, Adamklissi, Yalta, and Trabzon. Three-fourths of the travelers were British which adds breadth to the experience."

Eleanor Cooke Esterly writes that she and Dan enjoyed every bit of Reunion and were greatly impressed with Sweet Briar. Seeing the Littrells (Mary Evelyn Wood) and Schirmachers (Dorothy Wood '36) was a special treat, as was driving to Hilton Head with Betty Suttle Briscoe and Chris, Dan's roommate at the U. of Pennsylvania Medical School for three years, before heading back to Pasadena. Later they visited family in Kansas.

Mary Walton McCandlish Livingston, still euphoric from Reunion, had an enjoyable, if strenuous, trip to Rome with her grandsons, 13 and 16. They stayed at a lodging run by an order of Dutch nuns for non-Catholic visitors and benefited from the good location, international flavor, talks on Roman points of interest, and a trip to the complex popularly known as Hadrian's Villa. Mary Walton says this was her first trip back since she, Tacky Williams McCollum, and the late Alice Shirley Moore went in 1933.

Eleanor Alcott Bromley enjoyed her summer with no meetings. She takes off in September to go to Northern Britain and on to Denmark for a few days. The trip to southern England last fall was so enjoyable, she will do the same this year in a new location.

I stayed on in Virginia for a few weeks after reunion, then came home, changed clothes and suitcases, and took off to Aix-en-Provence, France, for a six-week painting course. The French countryside was in full flower: yellow Scotch broom covered the hillsides and highway banks, red poppies peeped up in golden wheat fields, bluets sparkled in the morning sun, whole fields of sunflowers raised their heavy heads, and acres of purple lavender scented the air. We had seminars and critiques and took field trips once a week to sites where Cézanne and Van Gogh painted — Arles, St. Remy, Avignon, Cézanne's Atelier and Château Noir. We were even given a day to paint Mont St. Victoire, a favorite of Cézanne's. Here Marius Sextus and his Roman Legions defeated the wild barbarians from the north several decades B.C. It was an exciting and inspiring experience.

My ex-roommate Connie Burwell White passed the summer chasing rainbow trout — unsuccessfully — on raging run-off rivers and keeping her garden flowers from growing bigger than the house. White and White plan to move their office to smaller quarters in the fall.

"Reunion this year was terrific, and it was such fun to see everybody," Lydia Goodwin Lorentzen felt, as we all did. Let's try to make it back to our 55th.

Hooray and merci to those who penned a line to give the whole class news! We are far flung!

The first reply came from New England. Mary Ann Housel Carr spent two wonderful months on Cape Cod with Fergie (Barbara Ferguson Hill) and her tribe next door. The Carrs were in New Zealand in February. Fergie stays six months on Cape Cod and six months in Stuart, FL. She and Janet MacFarlan Bergmann are golf partners — in Florida Connie Currie Fleming '40 is her tennis partner.

Speaking of Florida, it is home base for Brownie (Marion Brown Snider) who is off to the Adriatic on the Greek ship Argonaut. Cruising is her "thing" apparently: she just completed a trip down the Mississippi River on the Mississippi Queen, stern paddle-wheeler, ending in New Orleans for two days at the World's Fair. In April Brownie was in Washington, DC, for the National League of American Pen Women. LeW Griffith Longstaff drove over from Baltimore to scoop Brownie up for a great overnight visit. Brownie's two bad spinal disks are not keeping her down.

Back up the coast to New Jersey and Lucy Taliaterra Nickerson — she and Charlie head for Switzerland in the fall of '84. Their three children are scattered — Clark and Suzanne in Alexandria, Paul in North Jersey, and Ann in Sewickley, PA. She reports that M.J. Miller Hein is happily remarried but does not give new name or location. [Ed. note: Our records show that her name is now Raber and her home, on Hilton Head Island.]

Isabelle Franke DeGraaf lives in St. Petersburg, FL, and is an elder in the First Presbyterian Church there. She works part time for an ophthalmologist and is an enthusiastic member of a folk dance group.

There were two reports on a forthcoming "mini-reunion" in Rhode Island the last of September. Betty Hopper Turner is the intrepid hostess for a week of chatter, sightseeing, shopping, and more chatter, reports Sammy Hamilton Schuck from San Diego, CA, and Virginia Guild Colmore from Lookout Mountain, TN. Also chatting will be Kitty King Corbett Powell (Houston, TX), Louisa Grace Prince (San Francisco, CA), Helen Walton Andrae (Jefferson City, MO), Dottie Gilbert Browne (address unknown — please send), and Janet Forbush Fead (Birmingham, MI). This will be their seventh get-together. (The gatherings occur every 18 months.) Virginia Guild Colmore is now living in a new home built from logs over 100 years old! Her two sons are in this business.

Jo Sutton McCandlish writes from Fairfax, VA, with Nancy McCandlish Pritchard next door (where she has lived for 30 years!). She asked if I remembered the non-air conditioned train ride on red plush seats to begin our freshman year at SBC. Do I ever! Billie Byrd Maurer and I started out at Norfolk. At Richmond the St. Catherine's group all boarded with tancy box lunches; Billie and I had not realized there was no diner! That's how friends are made! Jo's mother still lives in Richmond and will be 100 in November! Jo's husband is "of counsel" in his law firm. Their two children are Becky (on Marblehead Neck) and Charles (Winchester, VA); each has four children (two of each in each family). Jo sees Ida Todman Pierce in Richmond. Ida writes that Gertrude Alexander Young (Alex) stopped by last spring going to Florida. Last fall the Pierces had a fascinating trip to China.

From Raquette Lake, NY (in the Adirondacks), came an enthusiastic card from Mary Brown-Serman Walke. She has turned an old building into a "bright, darling, wonderful" spot — furnished it from attic and yard sales.

Spring brought millions of flowers and hundreds of migrating and summer birds. She had a great trip to the Southern Vermont Artist's Center, the Bridge of Flowers at Shelburne, MA, the Williamstown Theatre, the Boston Symphony at Tanglewood, and the wedding of one of her five new step-grandsons. Life is good!

Gertrude Alexander Young invites us all to visit her either in Schenectady or Lake George. She's busy as secretary of the Queen's Fort Board (a woman's club) and on the board of the Boys Club, plus grandchildren.

Ruth Chartener's sister-in-law, Joan Whitehead, sends word that Ruth suffered a stroke last Christmas. She is alert, in a wheelchair and in a nursing home. Take out a postal and mail her a note to Awyndd Square Center, 773 Sunnyside Pike, Lansdale, PA 19446.

Molly Talcott Dodson and Grif went to the 50th reunion of the Class of '34 at St. Catherine's in April. They summer on Chesapeake Bay, sailing, with assorted grandchildren, aboard Blue Heaven.

Howell Lykes Colton has moved to San Francisco for the summer, for Christmas, and for the opera. This puts her near her two daughters and three grandchildren. (Otherwise she's in Florida.) Howell and daughter Keenan Colton Kelsey '66 took in the Olympic equestrian events, some swimming, volleyball finals, and closing ceremonies. How marvelous!

Late grandmotherhood is a special joy, according to Jo Happ Willingham, who now spoils Spain, age 3 (son John's) and 7-month-old Frank (son of Helen Willingham Hildreth '69). Jo travels, reads, has a mountain cabin for cool, and keeps in regular touch with Rose Hyde Fales. (We visited with them both in London in Sept. 1981.)

Dorothy Gipe Clement's husband John runs three miles every morning and rows in the Maumea every noon. Dottie loves her house, six children, eight grandchildren, and miniscule garden. "The picture doesn't change much — just slower motion!" Dottie and Janet Forbush Fead had a good get-together at John's 50th reunion at Cranbrook and Janet's at Kingswood.

Toto (Lucile) Sergeant Leonard says she and Earl are still unpacking after two years in the Missouri Ozarks. She, too, will welcome traveling Briarites.

From Charleston, WV, Margaret Weimer Shepherd reports she's a great babysitter but took time off for a Scandinavian cruise in July. Husband Walton and both sons are lawyers.

Genevieve Marsh Fisher has had a full year. Her daughter married a young cancer research specialist last September. In January she went on a delightful trip to the Galapagos Islands, Ecuador and Peru with the Agnes Scott-Sweet Briar tour group. (Maggie Cornwell Schmidt '37 was on the trip.) In June her son was married. On Labor Day she departed for six weeks in China and Japan to absorb Asian art!

Another good traveler is Dorothy Tison Campbell. This past winter Dot toured the Southeast with a widowed friend. In May Dot went to Central Europe, Greece and Turkey. June and July she went to the hospital, then convalesced. The end of August she will be seen in Alaska.

Becky Kunkle Hogue and Fred spent five months "on the ridge" in Murphy, NC. Their clan shares time with them. Becky is involved with Hospice (a wonderful group), library, hospital, and churchwork. They reside in Fort Myers, FL, part of the year.

There was a mini-reunion in Dallas on May 9 — all Grammer girls. Sigur Moore Whitaker, Florence Caven Crosnoe, Greichen Critz Bailey, Mildred Pharr Clark, and Harriet Daniel Herd lunched together. Carolyn Potter Ryburn couldn't come, and no one remembered I lived in Grammer junior year, rooming with house president Virginia Eady, so next time call me too! Harriet and Harvey share six grandchildren and delight in their lake house on L.B.J. Flossie took Sigur back to Texarkana with her. Carolyn Staman Ogilvie and Buck drove up from Shreveport so the girls could talk and talk.

Elizabeth Wilcox Riddle married Morton Riddle in August of 1982. They went to his 50th VMI reunion in June. She saw Maude Carson Tucker Drane last year and heard Maude had rented a house in France for August. Look Elizabeth up in Norfolk.

Billy Heizer Hickenlooper has spaghetti squash coming out of her ears and garden this summer. They were in London two weeks last year and this fall plan to be in Vienna and environs.

Surgery works miracles! Bessie Lee Garbee Siegrist has had both hips completely replaced and both feet "repaired" after suffering with rheumatoid arthritis. She calls herself a bionic woman. She is now in a walker but will soon be on her own.

Eylese Miller Latham is off on a fall foliage tour staying at country inns. They had their annual family reunion in June at Natural Bridge, VA — it was a huge talk fest and success!

Dolly Nicholson Tate received an outstanding award — WBT Woman of the Year in Charlotte. She is president of the Council for Children, an advocacy and research group. Dolly's husband Jack received the County Bar Association's annual Liberty Bell Award for a person outside the legal profession whose outstanding community service strengthens "the American system of freedom under the law." They had three weeks in China with daughter Carolina Tate Noojin '64 and daughter-in-law Claire Kinnett Tate '71. Dolly participated in May in the memorial service for Anne Pannell Taylor — a moving experience.

Jane Gregory Marrow, a member of the board of regents of Barium Springs Home for Children in Tarboro, NC, was named Trustee of the Year by the N.C. Child Care Association in June. Jane, an elder at Howard Memorial Presbyterian Church in Tarboro, has been active on local, regional and all levels of the church. Aren't we proud of our great North Carolina SBC volunteers!

Susan Gibson Davenport went to St. Catherine's 50th and had the best reunion with Mickey McGuire Williams, Molly Talcott Dodson, Gene Brock Hawley, Jo Sutton McCandlish, and Ida Todman Pierce. Susan states that no one's changed!

Emma Glass Beasley is proud that their plantation, Westwood, at Uniontown, AL, is finally on the National Register. It has been in the family since 1940. Emma and her two daughters, Ellis Beasley Long '63 and Mary Beasley Schoeffter, are all in real estate — Panorama Properties — in Houston.

Frannie Bailey Brooks says life is so busy and full for George and herself since George's retirement. They are off for three weeks in Italy, since George finished his history book on General Lee's church in Lexington.

Judy Bemis Wills is busy moving to a condo in New Canaan, CT. I missed the Republican Convention in Dallas as we fished and relaxed in Buffalo Creek, CO — our 31st year there. Mid-September we fly to London to share a flat on Berkeley Square with Carolyn Potter Ryburn and Frank for two weeks. We four delight in touring in and out of London, the theater and the dining. The Ryburns will be in France first, and we will travel up the Rhine after London. Carolyn's two grandsons helped carry the Olympic torch through Dallas. We've seven grandchildren and one small lake house in east Texas, where we all enjoy fishing.

The Boards of Overseers and Directors of SBC meet in Dallas mid-September, but we'll be in London! See you all in 1988 at SBC!

Too late for last year's notes was a newspaper account of Ruth Hensley Cambios' work with the preservation and restoration of the Smith-McDowell

House in Asheville, NC, for which she was named winner of an historic preservation award by the Garden Club of America. The article further stated that Ruthie had served as president of the Jr. League and president of the Western N.C. Historical Assoc. and co-authored and published Shopping Round the Mountain, a popular guide book to western North Carolina. She has a beautiful daughter Margaret in Atlanta, and daughter Stuart has three little girls, who had just been visiting, apple-picking, and rafting on the river.

And from the Shreveport Journal comes news of Gloria Sanderson Sartor, who was named Sustainer of the Year by the Shreveport Jr. League. She was acclaimed for her work as president of Volunteers of America, vice president of YWCA and United Way; with the Opera Guild, Symphony, Association for the Blind; on the board of a retirement home; and as president of United Church Women, in addition to her innumerable League activities.

Another accomplished, busy classmate is Florence Bagley Witt. She's involved in Chattanooga's Family and Children's Service, president of Hospice, on the board of Girls' Preparatory School, on the administrative board of church, and chairman of the Library Building Committee. Husband Raymond and their children are equally happy and busy. Daughter Elder's husband is a senior editor of U.S. News, and Elder covers the Supreme Court for Congressional Quarterly by computer at home. They have three children. Son Evans and wife are also in Washington, DC, he with Associated Press. Daughter Mary Alice is teaching in Chattanooga.

Speaking of computers, Diana Greene Helfrich returned her card written by computer. She says she uses two regularly for letters, household accounts, and inventory purposes. Her oldest grandson just finished his first year at Colorado School of Mines. His mother Hope is an internal auditor with London Fog, working to become a CPA. Di's oldest son David is an environmental engineer, who lives outside Baltimore with wife and three children. Youngest son Dan graduated from the U. of Maryland, married, moved to Melbourne, FL, and produced a granddaughter — all in one year.

Another Diana reporting in was Diana Stout Allen. She doubled her quota of grandchildren last summer. Helen in Massachusetts had a second daughter and Melissa in South Carolina had a second son. They were all together at Christmas "trading gifts and germs." In the spring she and Richard and three other couples enjoyed a trip to Greece and Italy, where she ran into Mimi Galloway Duncan looking great.

What a traveling group we are! Vive Walker Montgomery took one of the SBC Alumnae trips to Vienna, Prague, Dresden, and Berlin. Rene Mitchell Moore and Beverly also went to Vienna in September for the International Bar Meeting, on to Munich for Oktoberfest and Passion Play, and returned for Rene to take up her job of regent of her DAR chapter.

Two reported trips to China. Margaret Leonard Proctor went in '76 and again in '79 and is "rarin'" to go again. Between additional trips to Italy and Egypt, she's busy being a grandmother, vice president of the garden club, volunteer for the Baltimore Museum of Art, and board member of Ladew Topiary-Gardens. The other China traveler, Frannie Meek Rowe, reported a fabulous Lindblad trip up the Yangtze on Mao's yacht seeing gorgeous gorges. Her grandson Billy Niscock is an all-American diver, entering Annapolis. Her son Randy is happily married and loves flying for Delta. She says Sally Schall van Allen has been in Italy.

Another traveler is Marion Mundy Young, who with her daughter Ann '82 had a marvelous trip to Germany and Austria and visited Carolyn Sample Abshire '51 in Brussels. Her husband is ambassador to NATO. Her son is married, living in Fort Worth, and her daughter Marion McCron just received her Master's from Case-Western Reserve. She'll soon be moving to Boston where her husband will have a two-year post-doctoral internship at Harvard.

From her home in Geneva, Switzerland, comes word from Mary Alice Bennett Baumberger. She wants to know where Peggy Cunningham Allen is.

Jan Darby Cranfield got her card in the mail the day she and husband Shaw were leaving for England and France. She said Maudie Headley Allen had coached them thoroughly on English history. Their son Shaw, Jr., is in law school and spending the summer studying international law at Cambridge.

While some of us are circling the globe, others are staying close to home. Grace Bugg Muller-Thym's husband Harry has been ill, so she's been busy with their family-owned business, Thymly Products, Inc., which manufactures ingredients for commercial bakeries. She visited Adelaide Boze Glascock '40 in June for their 40th wedding anniversary party. Another stay-at-home is Eleanor Ringer Linn whose husband John is not well. Her son John and wife thrive in Massachusetts in computers. She's doing a huge index for a book by a colleague of John's. "Ringer" did have a 36-hour trip to Charleston last fall to meet a charming Polish cousin whom she didn't know existed.

Elsie Diggs Orr's husband Sam is suffering from a mystery ailment which keeps them fairly close to home, although they manage to visit their sons and families in Virginia and Atlanta. Bill and I visited with them in Winston-Salem last fall and had fun seeing old movies of graduation.

Polly Peyton Turner's husband Carol had a heart attack in November, but by the time she wrote in June he had made a good recovery and was playing golf but with a take-it-easy attitude. Polly had a visit from Si Walke Rogers (now supposedly retired and living in Charlottesville), and they lunch with Virginia Beasley Holzer who was better than ever. Polly also reported the sad news of the death of Daphne Withington Adams' husband Willard last November. Other sad news comes from Debbie Wood Davis, whose husband Bill died in February after a long bout with cancer. We all send you two our heartfelt sympathy in your great loss. Debbie's youngest daughter is going to Niger in the Peace Corps. Her Palo Alto daughter and family are moving to Boston while her New Haven daughter and family are switching Yale for USCLA. Debbie says she's mighty grateful for her big, loving, supporting family. It's also been a traumatic year for Dotty Hutchings Donley. Her second son, Barker, was critically injured when shocked by a downed power line last Thanksgiving in L.A. The road back has been rough, but he's had a miraculous escape. During all this, the place where Dotty works was on strike and she had to be guarded in and out by police. She was looking forward to seeing Shirley Hauseman Nordhem in Louisville for a June wedding and had recently talked to cheery, fun-loving Alice King Harrison.

Jane Taylor Lowell writes, "I'm still battling degenerative arthritis of the spine and spent five weeks in a pain center in Indianapolis last fall for chronic pain. The pain didn't go away, but they taught me how to live with it." She has discarded the back brace of 11 years, does an hour of exercise each day, and even does volunteer work in a nursing home to help others. She spends live winter months in a condo in Cape Coral, FL, and though she can't travel to reunions, she says she's grateful to be alive and well.

Now we come to the retirees, who are an interesting lot. We can all look forward to gaining a second wind if our retirement is anything like Si Walke Rogers'. She drove herself all over Scotland and managed not to hit anything or person. She was headed back to the Midwest from Charlottesville for some consulting work and then to a conference in Vancouver, where she would be on a panel, "Young People in Today's World." She sees Laura Graves Howell and Toppin Wheat Crowell occasionally and says all have aged well and are still full of life.

May 23 marked the retirement date for Cynthia Abbott Dougherty's husband Dick from the Metropolitan Museum. She said, "We will lie down and tan ourselves in our newly landscaped mini-terra in Ouogue, L.I., play croquet, and study Italian. Dick will consult for the Museum and plans to write a mystery novel." Cynthia's 20-yr.-old grandson is a junior at Rollins, while his 18-yr.-old sister is modeling in London.

Almost 1,000 people turned out to honor Charlie Yates, husband of Dorothy Malone (for those of you who don't go to reunion) on his retirement as head of the Atlanta Arts Alliance in April. He is presently serving as president of the Atlanta Rotary Club, so he and Dorothy went to England in June to attend the International Rotary Convention, also visiting golf friends in England and Scotland. Betty Whitaker Hook's husband Dick is another retiree. After 35 years in their house they're moving to a condo. They spend the mid-winters in Naples, FL, and summers at Sherwood Forest on the Severn River near Annapolis. The oldest of their 11 grandchildren is entering W&L in the fall. They play tennis, golf, and baby-sit.

Another couple enjoying retirement are Dot Myers Morehead and husband "Moose." They had a trip to Scandinavia and Russia in the spring and another to Italy and the Greek Isles in September. Their son was married in May.

Ann Hauslein Potterfield says she and husband Tom don't find enough hours in the day for vegetable gardening, traveling, weaving, reading, etc.

"Rut" (Ruth Jacquot Tempest) retired as U. of W. Fla. editor in October of '83 and has never been busier. She's leading a book discussion group, taking piano lessons and considering breeding her new Abyssinian cat. They're planning to visit their son who is Los Angeles Times bureau chief in India.

Duffy (Betty Duffield Fajans) is considering retirement, having put her lodge up for sale after 26 years in the ski business. However, she plans to design and build again in Wilmington, VT. Her son and daughter now have 15 Morgan horses to dispose of. Anyone want to buy?

Jean Hedley Currie is enjoying the hills and trees in Ocala, FL, after 23 years in Ft. Lauderdale. She likes being near the grandchildren, and catch this: she expects to be a step-great-grandmother in June!

Douglas Woods Sprunt and husband Worth decided the time had come for less house and garden and more money. "Hope it works," says Doug. She says she's now a "born-again pack rat" with the Historical Society and their house, garden, and attic.

Betsy Gilmer Tremain and husband Mike, like the Sprunts, have opted for a smaller house and garden — from 2½ acres to ¼ acre. They sold their house in Farmington to an SBC girl, "Kitchie" Roseberry Ewald Tolleson '52, and built in a condominium area directly across from Farmington. They're planning a trip to Italy in the fall.

Jeanne Sawyer Starwood and husband Chris loved their first all-year-round stay in Maine — a condo in Kennebunk for eight months and Squirrel Island in the summer. Son John and family have moved to Oakland, CA, to a new teaching post at a private school, but daughter Cindy is still nearby in Massachusetts.

Bobbie Engh Croft reported an interesting trip through the Panama Canal, followed by a visit to a native village via a one-hour trip in a dug-out canoe on a river in the jungle. They spent the winter in their Tucson, AZ, townhouse and their time in Illinois enjoying the families of three of their five children, Crowell's growing business, tennis, and church. They have one daughter in San Antonio and another in Radnor, PA.

Eddie Syska Peltier is another who enjoys a winter home in Naples, FL, and summers in Sag Harbor, NY. After spending Christmas with son Mike and daughter Sue and husband in N.Y.C., they were off on a Caribbean cruise to celebrate their 36th anniversary.

Julia Groves Martin ("Chookie") recently completed a two-term presidency of the National Society of Colonial Dames — after which husband Bob served three years as governor general of the Society of Colonial Wars. They welcomed their 10th grandchild in June and now have four of their five children in Savannah. The other daughter is in Winston-Salem, NC.

"Army" (Lucy Case Wendelken) has a new title as administrative assistant for Epilepsy, Kansas. "No more money, just more meetings and responsibilities," she says. She's peeved that three of our classmates hit Kansas without calling her. She has two grandsons, Benjamin and Derek, and was looking forward to vacationing in Denver with son Larry.

Laura Graves Howell has had visits from classmates Betsy Chamberlain en route to the West Coast, Si (Sally Walke Rogers) who was on a panel at SBC, and "Poose" (Lucy Call Dabney) in Lynchburg for a christening. She and husband Todd looked great, says Laura.

Helen Sanford has inspired me to "shape up" with her exercise classes three mornings a week at 7:00.

"Vanity is driving me on," writes Helen. She tried skiing at Lake Tahoe last winter but says it didn't take. So now she's just finished a course in scuba diving with her great nephews. They were going to scuba in the Cayman Islands in July. She attributes her sudden athletic prowess to her short haircut — says it's completely changed her lifestyle.

Ann Morrison Reams says that being director of SBC alumnae continues to be the best job in the world, especially since she gets to see so many wonderful people. She adds that when our Board met in Atlanta in February, Dottie Malone Yates and Sudie Hanger Clark were truly the "hostesses with the mostesses," and in Dallas recently it was wonderful seeing Betty Hanger Lippincott, Marion Mundy Young, and Helen Sanford. Everybody is thrilled that Helen is now on our Board as reunion gifts chairman elect. Ann writes, "We had our annual family gathering at the beach in July with 19 attending this year. How lucky Bernie and I are that they are all so wonderful and enjoy each other so much!"

Stoney (Mary Stone Moore Rutherford) is not traveling or winning awards, she says, but concentrating on serving the Lord. She saw Blair Bunting Both '40 at a renewal and evangelism conference at Ridgecrest, NC, and has just served on Cursillo Team #18 in her Diocese. Thank the Lord for you, Stoney, and for the whole Class of '42 — surely one of the all-time greats!

President

Jean Love Albert (Mrs. John G.), Rt. 2, Monroe, VA 24574

Secretary

Jane Lawrence Katsidhe (Mrs. Vangel), Rt. 1, Box 463, Robin Ridge, Stockton, NJ 08559

Beatrice Dingwell Loos (Mrs. Dickson R.), 6400 Garnett Dr., Chevy Chase, MD 20015

As I have been reminded by several of you, our Big 40th Reunion will be upon us in May '86, only a year and a half after you read this. It is not too soon to make your plans for May '86 so that you will be free to attend. Let's hope that some of us who have never been back will also be able to seize this opportunity to make it a once-in-a-lifetime occasion for everyone.

Now for the political poll. As I write this, the results are 77% for Reagan, 23% with no opinion stated, and 0% for Mondale. There may be some changes as further reports arrive, but there is a deadline for submission of these notes, so that's it for now. There were comments about the excitement of having a woman on the Democratic ticket, but evidently George Bush is also very much admired.

Surely one of the recent outstanding achievements of our class is the publication of Louise Wilbourn Collier's book, Pilgrimage, A Tale of Old Natchez, mentioned in last year's notes. And now we learn that the second printing was scheduled for October, 1984. At the least, three cheers! As I read it, I was entertained and engrossed and especially overwhelmed by the extent and quality of the research done to achieve her goal.

Jessie Strickland Elcock reports that life is great in Big Canoe and that she and Walter have five grandchildren

(her namesake Jessie is now four years old). She stays in close touch with Dottie Caldwell Crowell and Tody Corcoran Hartzler and says that they are great. Jessie and Walter went to the Olympics as guests of the Olympic Committee, because Walter gave them office space back in '78. I'm not more than very envious.

Wally Evans Landrum has one son who is managing director of the Cincinnati Playhouse, another who is a Presbyterian minister in Mexico, MO, and a daughter who is a psychologist in Louisville. No grandchildren to report.

Eighty-four has been a big year for Jean Love Albert. Their son Jim and wife Kim presented them with their first grandchild, Amanda. Jean and John took a six-day camping-canoe trip through the Fulton chain to Long Lake in the Adirondacks.

Managing 19 houses with 45 tenants has kept Helen Murchison Lane more than busy. She recently had a great visit with Dottie Caldwell Crowell and Bob at their mountain home. Her identical twin granddaughters are now two years old, and her son Charlie has resigned from banking to become an entrepreneur. His first venture is raising shiners (small fish) "which large mouth bass love to bite." He'll sell them commercially to the fishermen who flock to Florida.

Peter Persons, youngest son of our late Eden Taylor Persons, won the Rafael Alarcon Invitational Golf Tournament in Guadalajara, considered by many college coaches to be second only to the NCAA finals. Peter is attending the U. of Ga.

Bea Dingwell Loos continues her busy schedule as director of the Primary Day School with 105 children 4-8 years of age. She is spending 2½ weeks at their beach home on the Center Banks with four of their six children and three grandchildren (only one child is married). She talks often with Betsy Gurley Hewson and Ann Hill Edwards, but missed having a spring visit from Catherine Smart Grier. I know that Margaret Lawrence Bowers '49 (my sister, "Little Larry") would greatly enjoy a visit with her. She has resigned as executive vice president at Lake Erie College to become head of the Midland (TX) Lower and Middle Schools. Her true love is elementary education, as it is Bea's.

There is interesting news from Ellie Clement Littleton. Fred has retired from the practice of law to become a wooden boat builder. Between launchings they spend time on the Chesapeake and visiting children and grandchildren (nine boys and three girls!).

Mary Lou Holton Effler is now a legal resident of Florida — she spends six months there and six in Toledo. She had just come across old journals recording her visit to Paris at Christmas in '46, when she and Carolyn Rudolph Sellers were grad students in Geneva, and Anne Dickson Jordan and I were at the Sorbonne. She had written of seeing Hugh Clos and dining at Prunier's and of Dickie's and my visit to them in Geneva. (I still have the photographs of our skiing week at Davos.)

That brings me to Tody Corcoran Hartzler. She was going to Paris in September and taking the Orient Express to Venice. Although it has been very much "spruced up" since then, we'll never forget it. Tody's older son Jeff is still in Tacoma, and younger son, Jonathan, who graduated last year from UVA with distinction, is working for a Jacksonville NBC-TV station as a news reporter.

The travel bug has bitten Louise Crawford Moorefield and Tom. They were in the British Isles last year and were going to the Rhine country this fall. Their older son, Chuck, is a resident in orthopedics; their daughter has completed her residency in internal medicine and has a fellowship in cardiology; younger son, Crawford, enters Harvard Law this fall. Louise says that they had a fine visit from Carolyn Conley Danley this past April.

Candy Greene Manbeck had just returned from Virginia Beach, where Rosie Ashby Dashhiell had a lovely party for her. Rosie's son David's archeological pursuits are sponsored by the Smithsonian, her daughter Mary has a career in the world of ceramics, and her journalist son, Joe, covered the capture of criminal suspects for a Roanoke TV station. Candy also says that she "had a lovely and sentimental day with Anne Owens Mueller's precious mother."

From North Carolina, Betty Simmons Lynch says that life is lovely. Jack is retiring now from pediatrics. They will spend more time at their Wrightsville Beach house and more time traveling. Son John is in real estate in Winston-Salem and has two children, Caroline and John, IV; older daughter is also in real estate in Charlotte; younger son, Tom, is in High Point in lamp manufacturing; and younger daughter, Sallie, is in D.C., working "on the Hill."

One of our classmates says that reaching the big 6-0 was not particularly traumatic. Tassie Brooks Augustine's five children are all through school, married, and gainfully employed. She is working with the Episcopal Thrift Shop and is state president of the Colonial Dames.

Bambi Rollins Napier is working as a member of a local hospital in Columbia and is serving on the Missouri State Historical Society Committee. Her daughter Julie is an insurance broker in St. Louis, and her younger daughter, Laura, is still tending bar at a Chattanooga discotheque. (I just read somewhere that 50% of the bartenders in the U.S. are now female!)

News too late for last year and more this year comes from Lynn Hannah Crocker. She had had a visit from daughter Camilla Crocker Wadehouse

'71, her husband Chuck (UVA '70), grandson Charlie, 4, and granddaughter Carey, 2½ (registered for SBC 2003). Daughter Connie Crocker Betzendahl '75 and her husband Richard have moved to Napierville, IL, and would like to hear from SBC alumnae in the area. They have a daughter Lindsay registered for SBC in the Class of 2004. Lynn and Ken have sold their sailboat, put in a pool, and are traveling and enjoying. They are in Moorestown, NJ.

Ruth Houston Baker reports her occupation as Republican. Perhaps I should have included that in the poll. She sees Hallie Tom Nixon Powell often and reports that Hallie is active in everything from the Garden Club to quarter horses. Ruth also reports that Barbara Hood Sprunt's husband Hugh died in February. We offer our love and condolences to Barbara and to the Sprunt family.

Helen Graeff Ellerman is still full of music — 35 years of it. She is now a deaconal minister of the United Methodist Church and an adjunct instructor at James Madison U. teaching several church music courses.

Legare Thompson Robertson is working from her home since her real estate office burned completely in January. It will be rebuilt, she hopes, since she was renting. She and Freddie play a lot of tennis. Their youngest daughter, Legare, was married in May and lives in NYC. Son Stephen is a senior at W.&M.

Charlotte Dinsmoor Olin's husband Frank died in September '83. They had just returned from a Greek Island cruise a few days before his sudden death. Charlotte strongly urges each of us to go through our records, since we all accumulate many things which have no meaning for our descendants, as many of us have discovered on the death of our own parents. You know you have our love and sympathy, Charlotte, and at the same time we thank you for very good advice.

Betty Ann Bass Norris' daughter and husband have just relocated to an historic house, "Runnymede," on 20 acres somewhere between Middlebury and Leesburg, VA. Bass lunched recently this past year in N.Y.C. with Mary Vinton Fleming, Pat Arms Brown, and Jenny Bell Bechtel Whyte '48. She was looking forward to a visit from Ellen Thackray Wilson.

Louisa Lloyd is still caring for Jeanette Stafford, the quadriplegic Louisa has been nursing for several years, and is busy with church-connected activities when she can find the time.

The news about Vange and me is not world shaking but is good (except that we still have no grandchildren). Vange has had a three-year bout with cancer and with osteomyelitis. He is now doing very well and is feeling and looking great. We are at the same old stand, entertaining a great deal and traveling when we get the time. Son Jacques is completing his doctoral thesis on Surrealism in French Literature at NYU and is teaching courses in French (and in English and American literature). He and his wife Shelly have restored a brownstone in Brooklyn and love it. Shelly is moving up in the film production field — most recent film released was The Natural with Redford. We went to Buffalo and Canada for the filming of the baseball scenes. Redford is even more impressive than he seems in articles — so is Duvall. Our daughter Carey is now merchandise manager for Duty Free Shoppers, International. Her travels take her constantly to the Orient, Europe, and happily very often to the East Coast of the U.S. We are going to see her and others in S.F. this fall.

The news from Cholly Jones Bendall and Jean Pollard Kline is that their mothers are not well and are living with them and being cared for at their homes. Cholly also mentioned her recent pleasure in reading Very Much a Lady by Shana Alexander and The March of Folly by Barbara Tuchman.

From Florida comes the news that Eleanor Myers Cole was in Tallahassee with her mother and was returning to their Panama City beach condo, where their daughter, her husband and three children were joining them. Eleanor mentioned that the return post card attached is an effective method for gathering information, a comment made by others. This method is thanks to the Alumnae Office. I send in the text for the card, they do the rest, and then the final result is up to you all! The attention given to the needs of the class secretary seems to be typical of the way in which the college is managed, financially and administratively at all levels. This seems to be one major factor in SBC's having weathered the storm against single-sex schools — a nearly miraculous achievement.

One more word. I won't go on about it until next year, but let's make it a great 40th. And when you get the post card next summer, please sent it to me as soon as possible.

P.S. Just got one vote for Mondale.

Secretary

Lola Steele Shepherd (Mrs. Wilson E. D.), 861 J Ave., Coronado, CA 92118

Fund Agents

Elisabeth Elmore Gilleland (Mrs. Guy W., Jr.), 1098 McKean Circle, Winter Park, FL 32789

Virginia (Ginger) Luscombe Rogers (Mrs. Justin T., Jr.), 175 Aurora St., Hudson, OH 44236

Gather around, you lucky wise ones. It's taken 35 years to qualify for this event. The pay-off will be Reunion May 24-26, 1985. It will be the time to turn around in the paths our lives have taken us and see it, as "all roads lead to Rome," ours may lead to Sweet Briar. Though different in all of our experiences, we will find we share attitudes and values which give importance to our analysis of events and the human condition.

Using her executive planning skills, Kay Leroy Wing, Flossmoore, IL, has arranged her husband's annual physical at the Greenbrier to coincide with the dates of our reunion. Kay is a first time "gramma." Wallace E. Wing, IV, was born 4 Feb. Her #2 event of the year is a Mediterranean Cruise the first two weeks of September. Pat Holloran Salvadori, Arlington Hts., IL, joined Kay for a reunion after many, many years. Life in suburbia is a far cry from Pat's European experience. Her husband travels to the Far East, Europe, Mexico and Canada for Motorola. Last summer, her daughter Margaret worked at MCI and lived in Greenwich near a hospitable Diana Dent. It is Pat's guess that Moe Gamble Booth last heard from Beebe Streeter Smith in 1950, and that Mary Lanman Brown did run in the Boston Marathon in '82. Wrong, though about Ginger Luscombe Rogers living in Shaker Hts., OH.

Nor is Peter Thompson Holzworth correct. She was disqualified when she left for Fort Lauderdale, FL, and an active life as a senior account executive in the Pompano office of Merrill Lynch. She keeps track of five children, two of whom are married, and two grandchildren, while managing to play tennis and "etc." The youngest married daughter, a Smith grad, is now a law student living in Ft. Lauderdale. Others live in Salt Lake, Boulder, L.A. and Pensacola. Her only son, Chris, a UVA grad, is flying jets in the marines.

Jan Neumark Fribourg, Cleveland, OH, could be the right answer. However, Jan is headed for Florida, too. Their two "lovely daughters are grown." So, in May, Jan and Don sold their home and moved aboard their 41' ketch, Passages, to sail down the Intercoastal waterway to winter in Florida before a spring crossing to Spain via Bermuda and the Azores. During the next few years they will be cruising the Mediterranean.

There are several classmates in Florida Jan could look up when she needs supplies, or wants to do the laundry. Dotsy Wood Letts, in Palm Beach, FL, is always asking us to come visit, and if Jan is ready to return to land, Dotsy can sell her a house out of her real estate office. Dotsy is home from England where she saw Hallie. Judy Campbell Campbell's daughter, in May, which made her more anxious to visit Judy in California. To see Dotsy's card is to know she is the artistic sort and will be successful in her ambition of "translating the world through coloured pens." First, she is pondering the question of how Martha B. influenced her life in ways besides being impressed by the aighans and white convertible. Husband Gavin is a judge in the 4th district court of appeal. Their daughter Sophy transferred to NYU to be near her fiance in New York. Here's another definite "yes" to our 35th.

The second classmate for Jan to find in Florida is B.G. Elmore Gilleland in Winter Park. B.G. might try to stow away to satisfy her urge to travel, but her new second career as a travel agent combined with teaching should tie her down, at least this trial year. To be in the "know," B.G. drove 4,000 miles through England, Wales, Scotland and Ireland last summer. One of the highlights was staying in a Scottish castle, once the home of Mary Queen of Scots. B.G. congratulates Diana Dent for her novel way to pass around the tapes of Martha B. Lucas's funeral, and with Ginger Luscombe Rogers thanks those who have contributed to the Alumnae Fund.

Then there's Nancy Storey White in Sarasota, FL, on leave from teaching English. Nancy visited SBC in fall '83 to talk with Dean Fontaine Belford with the idea of writing an article, possibly expanded to a book, about "Miss Lucas." Miss Helen Mac, Miss Von Briesen, Miss Ballenger, and Mrs. de Coligny were extremely helpful, but Nancy decided against authorship at this time. She'll have more to say at Reunion '85.

In Miami, is one who appears to delight in discovery and actually reads rosters. Julia Freels Chwalik wondered if Veda Brooks Norfolk in the SBC 1950 roster was the same Veda who was her Chi O sorority sister and room-mate at U. of Miami. Thirty-four years later, they realized they had been SBC classmates.

The correct answer to the first Trivial Pursuit question was given by Sally Bianchi Foster, Verona, NJ. It is Todie Probeck Wiant who lives in Shaker Heights, OH. Sally suggests that Dottie Montague Cholnoky plays the trombone that Louise McCord Faulconer's cat went feral in Daisy's cemetery. Sally's nimble mind is not dulled by the prospect of becoming a grandmother courtesy of her daughter Meg. After their Olympics visit, Sally may understand why her two children work and study in California. In a few more years and with some money saved, Sally plans to quit working and travel a bit. The prospect of more free time than she's had for the past 15 years cheers her. By the way, Dottie Barney Hoover, Sally's first quilt is her last quilt. "Too exacting!"

Kay Lang Gibson and Gib, 34-year residents of Larchmont, NY, are chucking it all and returning to their childhood home of Savannah. A visit in March renewed their love affair with "God's country." Their New York house went on the market in early May after Kay's gigantic garage sale. Items included: "lovely old chipped china, unmatched stainless steel forks and spoons, priceless clocks and radios that don't work, an ironing board to iron puffed sleeves, and 15 straw hats from every island I ever visited." The new home will be either Dutch Island or Skidaway. Kay planned to continue work through June to train a replacement. It's wrenching to leave their daughter and son in New York, but she is encouraged by the examples of others of us. Shall we discuss this in May 1985?

Before you leave NYC, Kay, Genevieve Hammel Geer, your old buddy, is found, live and well enjoying Manhattan with her husband Peter who heads the advertising agency, Geer, DuBois & Co. Their children have grown and left home. Genevieve has a private practice as psychoanalyst. She also teaches and supervises analysts in training, lectures both in English and in French, usually in Canada, and writes an occasional paper. When there is time, they fly to Switzerland and England to visit two granddaughters.

Children are a good reason to travel. Lucy Kreusler Carey took a vacation from the same job and same struggle with social issues in Luther-ville, MD, to visit northern Ohio where son David finished his sophomore year at the College of Wooster near Akron. Dr. Kreusler, her father, who was professor of Russian at SBC, died on 19 Sept., 1983, after a long and productive life. Lucy is in Lynchburg frequently to visit her mother.

I'm counting on motherly curiosity to bring Betty Todd Landen from Cincinnati, OH, to California to visit her daughter Marg and husband Tim at 29 Palms, after the desert heat subsides.

That snooping took Edith Brooke Robertson from Norfolk, VA, on her momentous Christmas trip to Nepal. Her journal impressions are of a return to the Middle Ages in the bazaar in Kathmandu, lying in her sleeping bag on the clay floor of her son's village in Nepal watched by curious children with diamonds in their noses, the wild rides in local buses driven by drivers who kept one arm outside the bus to fend away the cows and livestock, women sitting beside the road picking lice out of each other's hair, and the visit to a jungle safari camp. With this, she compares the elegance of Delhi in India and visits to the palaces and the Taj Mahal by sunrise. Son Brooke has completed his Peace Corps tour, returning via Moscow to see his cousin at the Embassy, Wales, and his birthplace, Paris. Peyton, Jr., is working for the Chesapeake Bay Foundation. Edith figures Mary Lanman Brown did run in the Marathon because "she beat the daylight out of me on the tennis court."

Garland Hunter Davies, Atlanta, GA, was another visitor to a Third World country, though a rapidly emerging one. This time China. Last fall, while Nick inspected medical facilities, Garland spent three exciting weeks studying the universities and their language teaching facilities. They especially liked the southwestern part of the country, the province bordering on Laos and Vietnam. There is now a Connecticut Yankee grandson, Andrew March Halsey, Jr., born 12 July, 1984. Juggling their busy work schedules, Garland and Nick are off this fall for a vacation in Holland, England, and Scotland.

Maybe they'll holler at Jane Lewis Zollicoffer and Gus from Henderson, NC, in Scotland in September. Jane and Gus are looking for pleasure in golfing and hope the weather is not a repeat of the cold climate rigors of the British Open. Daughter Ellen is a freshman at Salem College, while daughter Fannie and her brother Allison are in grad school at UNC, Fannie in journalism and Allison in an M.B.A. program.

Bill Bailey Fritzing says she won't leave Weston, VT, again in case we turn up. They've added ducks to their pond and one grandchild, Michael Muldoon. "Peas and lettuce are selling well."

Since Frindy Burden Gronen just bought a new house in Dubuque, complete with an extra bed for travelers through Iowa, I imagine she'll stay put, too.

Former Class secretaries do NOT just fade away. Mary Waller Berkeley Fergusson, Richmond, VA, caught up with Janie Munnerlyn Carter in Atlanta a while back, but missed Muffet Murchison Corse who was down in Jacksonville, FL. Please help Waller by appearing at our reunion. She couldn't believe all of the strange faces at a reception in the spring for Pres. Fry. She needs the old familiar ones and wants to see you there in May.

Fran Cone Kirkpatrick, Wilmington, DE, faithful class secretary for eight years, is proud of honors earned by her daughter Christine, a junior at SBC. Like mother, like daughter. Christine has made Dean's List all four terms, played varsity hockey and lacrosse, and now is in "Sweet Tones." When husband Andy can leave law work, the family, which includes daughter Melissa, 13, and son Charlie, 12, goes skiing in Vermont and Colorado and suns in Florida and the islands. It was just Fran and Andy on their latest trip to the Republic of South Africa and Zimbabwe, via Rio and Lisbon because of Fran's squeamishness about flying.

It is a sad duty to tell you of the death of Lacy Skinner Eckardt's husband last October in Rye, NY.

Bonnie Loyd Crane, Dover, MA, in partnership with Gallery on the Green in Lexington presented "Collectors' Choice," an exhibit of nineteenth century American Paintings, in January. Virginia Quintard Bond '31 listened to Bonnie's lunchtime talk and praised Bonnie as a "fabulous, knowledgeable, interesting and easy-to-listen-to speaker."

Emma Kyle Kimpel had an exhibit of her photographs, "Beauty in the Ordinary," at the Colortax Gallery in White Flint, MD, from Aug. 24 to Oct. 18. As a press photographer, she has taken many kinds of photos, but her current interest is to show the beauty that exists in ordinary household tasks.

Diana Dent's tapes arrived at Mary Dame Stubbs Broad's home in Hampton, VA, to bring contact with Mim Wyse Linsky after many years. Mary Dame had a vacation in Vail, CO, with children in April to celebrate their son-in-law's new master's license (VA Pilot Asso.), their son's 2nd-year apprenticeship in architecture and just anything else "we can think of." They planned to visit the World's Fair in New Orleans in September. Maggie Craig Sanders, be on the look-out!

After all, I routed out an unsuspecting Mary Virginia "Robbie" Roberts Mellow in St. Louis, MD. They have four children fast entering the adult world. There were two weddings in '83. Daughter Ann, a computer analyst with Southern Bell, married Chip Harrington, a senior consultant with Arthur Young. They live in Atlanta. Jim, jr. was married in Honolulu to Laura Kistner whose family originally came from St. Louis. Daughter Lucy received her M.B.A. from Washington U. in May and is a marketing analyst with Xerox in Rochester, NY. Tom is a junior at Middlebury in Vermont. Robbie and her husband have a cottage on Crystal Lake in Michigan which they share with on-going visits from the children during the summer.

My roommate and I went on a vacation in May to visit old friends near Southampton, England. We sailed in the channel, visited the Normandy beaches, and struck out by car to sneak through narrow lanes in southeast England, aided only by my backseat driving and my roommate's good nature. I made two decisions: the first, that we are not sailors, and the second, that I don't need a stove. I came back to dismantle my kitchen and found a chain letter asking for recipes from Frances Martin Lindsay in Norfolk. My cookbooks number exactly three, my lucky number. Could you send recipes to Frances, please? Her address is on the roster.

May I thank you in person for your marvelous letters and cards the 24th-26th of May, 1985?

Those who were there say our reunion was a huge success! The faithful few who were able to plan their children's graduations and their trips at some other time so they could come were: Joy Bennett Hartshorn, Jean Gillespie Walker and George, Karen Looker Hyde and Nelson, Mattie Mohlman Degler and Bud, Mary Hill Noble Caperton, Bee Pinnell Pritchard, Faith Rahmer Croker, Mary Jane Roose Fenn and Dick, Ruth Sanders Smith, Susan Scott, Anne Sheffield Hale, Helen Smith Lewis, and Ann Thomas Donahue and Tom. Since I was in South Africa, I don't know any details of what went on except that the class party was held at the Hydes' farm. The Fenns and Deglers continued reunion with a few days at an inn in Irvington, VA, where Maggie and Bud had spent part of their honeymoon.

I found out it was a mistake not to be there — I was elected a class officer — again. (Had I been there, my platform would have been 100% attendance in 1989!) So I was very surprised when I got home from vacation in mid-August to find the class scrapbook, a new deadline, and a letter from Helen Smith Lewis written on bended knee to please write us some notes for our reunion year news. So here goes a rather mishmash of things gleaned from our class scrapbook.

Anne Allen Pilugelder visited with Pinky Walsh Cabouet both New York and Pasadena. Pinky's husband is now head of Crocker and Bank. We were glad to hear Anne and her husband thought South Africa was as terrific as we do. They were there in March, and we were there in May and June — Bill on business and me on birding. What fabulous birds in that beautiful country! Too bad everyone can't visit there to see what it's really like rather than just have the picture our press gives. Page Anderson Hungerpillar is president of the Savannah Tree Foundation and the Garden Club. We saw each other briefly at the Southeastern Wildlife Exposition here last fall. She looks exactly the same except for a very glamorous gray streak — she recognized me by my voice before she saw me — that tells us all something!

Merrill Underwood Barringer does interior decorating now. She still plays successful interior decorating business, as does Faith Aldrich Wycoff. Nancy Campbell Zivley is a decorator too. The Zivleys take a lot of ski trips and also visited the Canary Islands, where their daughter teaches, and then toured Spain and Portugal — followed by Wimbledon. Their other three children are lawyers.

Joy Bennett Hartshorn shares my interest in historical homes and antiques and is a guide at Winterthur. Tennis is her recreation. Doreen Booth Hamilton, who has been a volunteer for everything, is cutting back to concentrate on conservation issues. They rented a house in France with friends and plan to do the same in the British Isles next year. Doreen recently had her malignant thyroid removed but is feeling and looking wonderful.

Joan Chamberlain Englesman has started her own business, Program and Resource Aides, which assists religious and community groups with speakers, retreats, and programs, and helps personnel with special problems. She's a published author and lecturer. They were traveling in China during reunion. Jerry Driesbach Ludeke has so many outside activities it's hard to see how she is a full-time learning specialist at Bakersfield College too. She's a lay reader, teaches retarded adults in church, is in the handbell choir, a recorder consort and choir, and lots of conservation groups. A recent picture of her handsome family shows her totally unchanged in 30 years!

Lamar Ellis Oglesby lists herself as an executive of domestic affairs. The great pictures of her family prove her success in this field, and you'll be pleased to know she has stopped smoking! Ruth Frye Deaton sent a good picture of Barbara Chase Webber, Ann Collins Teachout, Dilly Johnson Jones, Vaughan Inge Morrisette, and herself at the Morrisettes' place in Cuernavaca, Mexico. They continue a nearly annual reunion.

Ann Henry Lake is working in an antique store and taking business courses. Hattie Hughes Stone is involved in a Graduate Counseling Program. They had a wonderful visit with Clare Traetter Rosegger in Austria where Clare's husband is a visiting Fullbright Professor at the U. of Innsbruck. They share a love of skiing. Vaughan Inge Morrisette is Chm. of the Board of the Mobile Infirmary, V.P. of the United Way, and on the Vestry of her church.

Billy Isdale Beach was selected as one of the Society of Women Engineers' "People to People Mission" to China and Russia in September. Margaret Letterhos Smith is owner/manager of an office supply and printing store.

Gigi Mitchell Frank is a brand new CPA and has boating, watersports, and (like me), Doberman pinschers as hobbies. Our class attorney, Nancy Moody, is still busy with the American Horse Shows Assoc., although she doesn't ride as much as she used to. She does travel a lot, with recent trips to Switzerland, France, Italy, and Britain, where they stayed at Jane Keating Taylor and Bob's lovely manor house inn, Ardsheal House, in Scotland. Nancy's very close to her ex-stepchildren and their families. Sissy Morris Long is president of the 1200-member Memphis Symphony League. She and Betty Orr Atkinson see each other every day. Jeanne Stoddart Barends says she's only a housewife but then tells about all the elderly and ill relatives and friends for whom she's financial manager and that she does the bookkeeping for husband Dr. Fred's family practice. Their son Freddie has a graduate degree in athletic administration and had the opportunity to help with Smith's tennis team while in grad school. Jeanne sees Ellie Vorys Matchneer weekly at a prayer group. Jeanne's strong Christian beliefs have given her strength in all the wonderful work she has done with the elderly and helped her through her own periodic bouts with depression that have fortunately lessened in recent years. It was so nice to see her nice long letter to reunioners.

Class of '54 at 1984 Reunion

Joan Oram Reid is back in the U.K. after three years in Australia. She is a careers advisor and a lecturer on the Sociology of Work. They visit in New York and Houston every six months or so.

I see by the responses that many of us have tennis as an interest, but Fran Reese Peale is the only one who lists fox hunting as an activity. My son Kurt is an avid hunter also. Liz Carper Hoffman bakes French bread and muffins for a local grocery and keeps books in Roy's offices once a week. They are very busy as this is being written because Roy is co-chairman of the PGA tourney at their club. Liz is very proud of her own six club championships in golf. Margaret Jones Steuart added a new interest to her many school, travel, photography, piano, etc., activities. She is a founding trustee of the National Museum of Women's Art, which is to be at 13th and New York in Washington and is presently in a four million dollar fund raising campaign. Peggy chaired the first benefit and worked with Givenchy! It sounds like a wonderful and timely museum — she hopes we'll all become members. Write her for details. The Steuarts' third and fourth sons are off to W&L this fall. Guy is a trustee there. Did you know Peggy's sister Elizabeth, sculptor for the U.S. Mint, designed the Olympic gold dollar? Another of the Steuarts' interests is in the Half Moon Club in Montego Bay in Jamaica where they recommend we vacation as they do. I just returned from nearly there — ten days sailing in the British Virgin Islands — lots of good new birds and my first snorkeling — such beautiful fish and coral in that gorgeous water! We saw Mary Anne Bowns Bell and Dan's vacation home as we sailed by the northwest corner of Tortola. They are developing 260 acres at Belmont there. Another Caribbean paradise of which we're encouraged to take advantage! Ann Collins Teachout was in Switzerland in August visiting the family of their former exchange student. Anna White Connell is teaching and studying French and spent time in France again this summer. Ann May Via's daughter was a freshman honor student at SBC. Ann sells designer decorator fabrics as a side line. Bev Smith Bragg and Bill's '84 trip was a month in India, Sri Lanka, and Nepal. They circled Mt. Everest in a small plane! Margaret Davison Black gave up the presidency of our class to have more time for her new career — giving lectures on 18th Century pottery and porcelain. She still does all her charitable work for the Opera. BB Smith Stamats lives with a friend in a 1750 saltbox in Ridgefield, CT, and has an apartment in New York City too. She is managing director and part owner of the Greenwich Opinion Center, which does market research and promotions. Weezie Aubrey McFarland is a middle school guidance counselor in Columbia, SC. Our sympathies go to Barbara Tompkins Ames whose parents both died recently and whose husband is seriously ill following spinal surgery. Erwin Alderman Davis and family have moved to Lancaster, VA. We got an invitation to Mike McCallfree's change of command ceremony on Okinawa, (we declined!) at which he became commander of Amphibious Group One and Task Force Seventy-six. Lynn (Carlton) has gone to Okinawa — they'll be there a few years. Jean Gillespie Walker's home on Sea Island was on a tour last spring and the whole ('bout a million) family spent Christmas there. The Walkers celebrated their 30th anniversary in London and then had a tour of France. Mary Lee McGinnis McClain has her own successful business doing flowers for parties and weddings. She and Frank attended Senah Fry's installation, with Frank representing the oldest college in the procession. Everyone seems to think our new president is terrific.

Joan Potter Bickel has been having some hyperbolic oxygen therapy for her multiple sclerosis and feels it really is helping her balance some — very exciting.

Mag Andrews Poff recently participated in a six-month study and special report, "Black Virginia: Progress, Poverty, and Paradox," for Roanoke's Times & World-News, where she is a senior writer. Cindy Sinclair Rutherford is an assistant principal at North High School in Wichita. She and Bill really tried to find a niche in the East, but just didn't like it.

Joyce Wamsley Wellford has been appointed to the Board of Governors of St. Margaret's School in Tappahannock, VA. Since settling in the Northern Neck, she has served with the Churchwomen of St. John's Episcopal Church in Warsaw, the Friends of the Library, Rappahannock Community College, and the Garden Club of Northern Neck.

Harriet (Hatsy) Robinson Taylor writes a weekly column for the Berkshire Eagle, Pittsfield, MA, called "Hilltop Harvest." Recently a full-page spread on Hatsy appeared in the Eagle which revealed that she also travels to garden clubs, schools, and women's organizations over the country presenting singing lectures. The most popular is "Wildflower Facts and Folk Songs"; another is "A Medley of Vegetables and Verses" on how to raise a backyard of delicious edibles. The Taylors have three daughters, all artistic, and a granddaughter who appears frequently in Hatsy's column.

So many of you mentioned on the forms that SBC gave you the confidence to try things. The vast majority regard your families as your greatest accomplishment, although many have found recent career successes very gratifying. In 1989 there'll be very few graduations to go to, and please tell your grandchildren not to be born that May. Sweet Briar considers the 35th to be a real "biggie," so start planning now!

Elizabeth Moore Gardner (Mrs. William R., Jr.), 30B Greenway Lane, Richmond, VA 23226

Secretary

Jane Shipman Kuntz (Mrs. Edward J., Jr.), 646 Runnymede Rd., Dayton, OH 45419

Fund Agent

Claire Cannon Christopher (Mrs. F. Hudnall, Jr.), 2837 Reynolds Dr., Winston-Salem, NC 27104

I apologize for the sparseness of this issue's notes, but I did not get the card out early enough, so the response was slim. Nonetheless, I am grateful to those of you who did take the time to answer my plea. It is always a joy to hear from each and every classmate.

Betty Rae Sivalis Davis, Midland, TX, crams more news on one small postcard than anyone else I know! She and Paul celebrated their 25th wedding anniversary in London. Now that Paul, Jr., 22, is in the Army at Fort Benning, GA, and on the shooting team, B. Rae has become her husband's #1 fishing partner. She went to fishing school in Vermont in the spring in preparation for fly-fishing expeditions to Colorado. Her daughter Mary Jane, 23, is a petroleum engineer. B. Rae saw Virginia Griffin Hartrampf in Atlanta in the spring. Virgie, who looks great, is office manager for a real estate firm. B. Rae says that pictures of Virgie's children — no number or age, sorry — are gorgeous.

I'm sure you will all join me in sending deepest sympathy to Linda McGuire Last whose husband Bob died in June in Duncansville, TX.

Ceci Dickson Banner's daughter graduated from Albion College in May '84 and is now in Barra Colorado Island, Panama, doing a research project on fruit-eating bats for the Smithsonian Institution. Her son Larry graduated from Lawrenceville this spring and is a freshman at Stanford. Her daughter Becky is a senior at Emma Willard. CeCe, who lives outside Washington, DC, is a consultant for Browning & Assoc.; her clients are non-profit organizations, primarily independent schools.

Betsey Worrell Gallagher is celebrating her 10th year as Director of Development and Public Relations for the National Cathedral School in Washington, DC. She had two graduations this spring, Sara from U. of Pa. and Larry from St. Alban's. Her daughter Lynne, newly engaged, works and goes to night law school.

August 1, was the deadline Dorothy "Pogie" Wyatt Shields, Charlottesville, VA., set for her Master's thesis in Religious Studies; she is also starting a practicum in counseling, hoping to be certified as a secondary school counselor soon. Pogie's daughter Sarah, a senior at UVA, had a semester in Paris last year; daughter Carter is a freshman at Tulane; and daughter Julia, 17, is a candidate for SBC. Her son Wyatt, 15, is a lacrosse goalie.

Claire Cannon Christopher sends news from Winston Salem, NC. She says that although most of our classmates' children are in college, hers are still in high school. Daughter Ashley, a senior at Forsyth County Day School, attended the July Experience at Davidson College, a non-credit program in the humanities for rising seniors. David, who will be a junior at Woodberry Forest, had a cowboy fantasy come true, the summer working at Valley Ranch in Cody, WY.

Betsy Pender Trundle was one of 12 women to be honored as an Outstanding Professional Woman of Hampton Roads, VA. Betsy is editor of the Port Folio magazine in Virginia Beach.

Jane Oxner Waring, Charleston, SC, was elected president of the Board of Trustees of the Charleston Museum. She is the first woman to hold this position in the museum's 211-year history. The museum, the oldest in the Western Hemisphere, not only emphasizes the story of Charleston and the Low Country but also owns three historic houses in the city. Jane has served on many committees of the museum and is presently a board member of the Charleston Preservation Society, the Comprehensive Energy Services, Inc., and the City of Charleston Arts and History Commission.

Cornelia Long Matson sent me the handsome business cards for her antique store/gallery "Antiques des Provinces" which opened November, 1983. She specializes in period country French furniture. She and Dick will go on a buying trip to France in the fall. Cornelia's beautiful armoires are the subject of a two-page spread in an up-coming issue of Sarasota Lifestyle and Decor; look for the publication on both Delta and Eastern airlines as well as the newstands. The Matsons love to sail on their 23' sailboat.

In Memphis, TN, Marietta Eggleston Burleigh, who has learned a lot about computers, does financial work two days a week for an investment company and three days a week for a discount brokerage house. Her daughter Fontaine spent the summer backpacking in Europe; son Doug is in sales for an advertising firm; Stephen, a bank teller for the summer, is a student at the U. of Tex. Business School; and Kathryn, who spent the summer teaching swimming, will be a sophomore at Middlebury College. Marietta had a grand visit with Judy Graham Lewis, Ann Arbor, MI, when Jim preached at Lenten services in Memphis.

Look for a cookbook called Rush Hour Superchef written by Dianne Stafford Mayes of Carthage, MO. It will be in your bookstores by Christmas and was co-authored by Dianne's mother. It is directed at women of today who want to produce delicious, hearty meals without spending long hours in the kitchen; the recipes are clear enough for anyone to follow. Dianne also has a company, Deanne Creations, Inc., which designs and manufactures Christmas decorations primarily for commercial and business customers. She and Roy have two sons; the youngest will leave in September for a Semester at Sea. Dianne keeps in touch with Ann Taylor who is heard regularly on NBC news; perhaps many of you have heard her.

Camilla Mueller Parker's daughter Camilla '83 made her debut in San Antonio, TX, last spring.

There was a mini-reunion of Sweet Briar Alumnae in April when the Garden Club of America held its Annual Meeting in Nashville, TN. Lanny Tuller Webster, Greenville, SC, Eleanor Cain Pope, Columbia, SC, and I were in the same tour group, so we got to see a lot of each other. We had fun reminiscing about our 25th Reunion last spring and catching up with each other. We enjoyed seeing Ruth Ellen Green Calhoun '57 from Nathez, MS; Betty Bryne Gill Chaney '55 of Roanoke, VA; Helen Smith Davenport '57 of Lookout Mtn., TN; Lizora Miller Yonce '59 from Greenwich, CT; Alice Cary Farmer Brown '59 of Prospect, KY; and her mother-in-law Sally Shallenberger Brown '32 of Harrod's Creek, KY — all delegates to the meeting. A highlight of the four days was having breakfast with Peggy Smith Warner and Dotsie Woods McLeod at our hotel; Gertrude Sharp Caldwell was unable to join us because she and Ben were off on a trip to Puerto Rico. I wish I could remember all the details of everyone's life but my memory fails me, perhaps because we were all talking so fast. I can assure you that all are well, happy and thriving. Nashville was ablaze with dogwood and the hospitality we received was gracious and limitless. Chloe Fort Lenderman '62 acted as a hostess for the Garden Club of Nashville.

Eleanor Humphreys Schnabel's daughter Ellie is a sophomore at SBC, and daughter Liza is a senior at Kent Hill School in Maine. The Schnabels live in Hingham, MA, where Hank continues to work for the Talbots, locating sites for their stores; the Schnabel Gallery, Eleanor's business, is going well. Eleanor had a good dinner visit in NYC in May with Penny Meighan Martin, Polly Benson Brown and Lucy Martin Gianino '60.

In May, Adele Scott Caruthers, Wellesley, MA, took a wonderful two-week vacation to England and Ireland. Her two children are Bruce, 15, and Susanna, 16. Adele is an occupational therapist at Emerson Hospital working with orthopedic and stroke patients.

Dianne Chase Monroe and Sam will be moving from Baltimore, MD, to Durango, CO, on Sept. 1; Sam will be a banker there. Sam, III, works in Baltimore, Jennie will be a senior at Ithaca College, and Chase, a freshman at UVA.

Beth Mears Kurtz writes: "Capricorn Theatre Co., of which I am artistic director, is mounting its third production, Music in the Western Country, based on religious and folk music and dances of early 19th C. America. We will be touring New York State and Massachusetts in July and October. Also Connoisseur magazine has done an article on The Vision of Delight, our last year's Ben Jonson masque; it will appear in fall 1984."

Jean Lindsay De Stree leads a busy life in Easton, PA. The family had a delightful holiday at Manchester-by-the-Sea at Cape Ann, MA. Jean and daughter Muffy enjoyed seeing the Equifest in Hamilton, MA. Son Giles, 15, attended Wolfboro Summer Camp and will go to Blair Academy in the fall. Muffy, a Merit Scholar finalist, will be a freshman at Hamilton College; she attended the March symposium at SBC and spent some time in Europe this summer. Jean will be teaching E.S.L. in Phillipsburg, NJ, as well as helping with the local pony club she helped start. Quentin is busy with a new library in Easton and is president of Family Counseling this year.

Mary Lane Bryan Sullivan, Cleveland, OH, is director of occupational therapy at Heath Hill Children's Specialty Hospital. Her son David, a senior at Yale, spent six weeks with the U. Mass. English Studies group in Oxford this summer. M.L., John and daughter Ellen Keeley, 14, visited him, and M.L. had a visit with Alice Morris Gaskell '59 for three days in Cornwall. The Sullivans' younger son, Wright, is a junior at Clemson in Engineering although he works for the Forestry Dept. He lives with his grandparents, the Wright Bryans (Ellen Newell '26).

Ina Hamilton Hart, Shaker Heights, OH, is a candidate for Master of Divinity degree from McCormick Theological Seminary in Chicago. She expects to graduate in 1989 after completing her studies, both in Chicago and Cleveland. She is also "under care of" the Presbytery as a candidate for the Gospel Ministry in the Presbyterian Church and is a parish visitor this summer; in addition Ina also works part-time as a bank teller. Her oldest son Bob is a junior at Purdue; Jim is a freshman at the College of the U. of Chicago, so he will be on the same campus as his mother; Fred, 16, and husband Bob will keep the home fires burning until Ina returns in December.

Libby Benedict Karlstrom/Maynard, Flint, MI, is happy with the new challenge of her position as director of State Office on Aging. Her husband Olof is the City Attorney for Flint. Libby's daughter Liz is in her senior year of veterinary school at MSU; Ben graduated from Union College and works in Albany; and John is a sophomore at Knox Col.

Dan and Linda MacPherson Gilbert, Eureka, IL, have had a busy year. Dan is in his eighth year as president of Eureka College, alma mater of President Reagan. The Gilberts have enjoyed a trip to the Orient and a private audience with Pope John Paul II, as well as other interesting experiences. Their two older children are married, one living in Illinois and the other in South Carolina. Their youngest daughter is a forestry major working at Yosemite Nat'l Park for the summer. Although Linda is unemployed this year, she is taking the time for "re-ordering, re-organizing and reflection." The Gilberts spent the month of July on vacation on the North Carolina mountains "renewing their souls" for another school year.

Claire Cannon Christopher, our class Fund Agent, asked me to remind all of you to send your donations to the Alumnae Fund. Your support is vital!

My newsletter is written while vacationing at my mother's (Martha McBroom Shipman '31) summer home on Burt Lake, MI. This has been a busy year for me. I have been very active in the Garden Club of Dayton and am serving my second term as program chairman. Besides attending the Garden Club of America Annual meeting in Nashville, I chaired a committee for the Zone X-G.C.A. meeting hosted by our club in May. My mother celebrated her 75th birthday by taking my brother and sister-in-law and Eddie and me for an eight-day Caribbean cruise on the Vistafjord in March; we had a fabulous time and really enjoyed having our small family together. Our older daughters, Lee and Martha, are both in the working world: Martha is a research assistant for John Adams and Assoc., a public relations firm in Washington, DC, and lives in Arlington, VA; Lee an assistant supervisor in Customer Service for the TSI Division of NCR, has her own apartment here in Dayton. Anne, our youngest daughter, is a senior at St. Mary's (Jr.) College in Raleigh, NC; she spent the summer as a tutor for learning disabled children at Alpha School. I am events coordinator for the Carillon Park, a local private historic park; this is a part-time position with lots of fascinating duties.

One of my colleagues in the Dayton Foundation, which directs Carillon Park, is Virginia Marks Paget '57, whose husband is rector of St. George's Episcopal Church. We just discovered each other this summer although Ginny has been in Dayton for seven years. I still sing in the choir at St. Paul's Episcopal Church, serve on the Arts and Worship Comm., and have just joined the Altar Guild. With our "empty nest" Eddie and I have been able to find a little more time to travel; we will celebrate our 25th anniversary in January. It's been a great 25 years too!

Again, many thanks for your cards and letters. Keep in touch and have a great 1985!

President

Anne Allen Symonds (Mrs. J. Taft), 11 West Lane, Houston, TX 77019

Acting Secretary

Alison Moore Garrott (Mrs. Thomas M., III), 4001 South Galloway Dr., Memphis, TN 38111

Fund Agents

Nancy Fleschman Bowles (Mrs. Bowlman T., Jr.), 11 Amphill Rd., Richmond, VA 23226

Millie Anderson Stuckey (Mrs. George C.), 4201 Oxford Circle, East, Richmond, VA 23221

As I sit to compile class notes for our illustrious class of 1962, my thoughts immediately turn to Patsey Carney Reed, our class secretary for whom I am substituting. Patsey and Brad and children Brad and Louise leave tomorrow for a nine-month sabbatical in New Zealand. Their daughter Elizabeth, who is a junior at Davidson College, will join them after Christmas. Elizabeth will spend her fall semester in France, at Rennes in Brittany. Tom and I went to a good-bye party in Nashville over the 4th of July, which was given by Ann Carter Brothers '63 and husband John and several other couples. The party decorations included a huge flag of New Zealand, draped over the tennis court, and paper cups which were inscribed with "Why New Zealand?" The Reeds plan to travel extensively and generally have a unique family adventure. Brad will be associated with a law firm in Auckland.

I also enjoyed seeing Chloe Fort Lenderman in Nashville, she had just that day returned from a marvelous trip to England on the Queen Elizabeth II with her daughters Chloe and Wynn. The highlight of their trip was the time spent in Bath, where they actually rented a house. Chloe is now at Vanderbilt Graduate School studying English, and she loves it.

Macon Winfree Hilton looked as cute and young as ever at the same Nashville party.

It was so good to hear from Nina Harrison Scribner, who is happy with a busy family life in Yarmouth, ME. Her daughter Anne is a sophomore at Trinity College in Hartford, CT. Curt and John Hartwell, ages 18 and 17, are finishing up their last two years of high school, and Elizabeth is a freshman in high school.

Barbara Sublett Guthery reports from Ridgewood, NJ, where she is a certified financial planner with Prudential-Bache. Last year she was named a 1984 Twin Honoree from New Jersey. Barbara's daughter Katie just graduated from Duke in June.

Beth Johnson Phillips and Jim are thoroughly enjoying their four children and 19 assorted pets in Hampton, VA!

Mig Garrity Sturr and Dixon have just moved back to Kingsville, MD.

where they live on three acres in the country. Their daughter Sharon will attend college as a freshman in Colorado and daughter Dixanne is transferring to Hood to complete her education. Mig has started a small consulting business in "color/wardrobe/personality analysis."

Brooke Hamilton Cressall's son is a high school senior looking forward to college — but he hasn't decided which one. Brooke is teaching math 3-6 in Columbus, GA, and took a grad economics course in the summer.

One of the chief interests of our class at present is where our children are attending college. Mary Louise Kelley Moore's oldest son Mark is a freshman at W&L.

Ann Ritchey Baruch's two teenagers went away to boarding school this past year. Richie is now a junior at Lawrenceville, and Marcy a sophomore at Dana Hall in Wellesley.

We all definitely seem to "know where our children are." Pat Perkins Wolverton writes from Wichita Falls that her son Alan is a senior at U. of Texas, and son Kirk a sophomore at Duke.

Suzie Hunt Wright and Jay are still in Middletown, OH. Their son just graduated from Dartmouth last spring and is now studying medicine at the Ohio College of Medicine. Their younger son is a junior at the U. of Ky. Suzie herself has started her own custom framing business.

We all join Alice Allen Smyth in rejoicing at the accomplishments of her son Jordan. After graduating from Andover in June, as president of the student body, he has received one of the enviable Morehead Scholarships to the University of North Carolina. Alice's daughter Elliot is a junior at Andover and is full of her mother's charm.

Lois Kennedy Dunn lives in a 200-year-old house in Old Town, Alexandria, VA, where she is part-owner of a boutique called "Why Not?" Her son Rhett is a senior at Reed College in Portland, OR, and her daughter Eliza is a Dartmouth junior.

Sally Sharrett Perryman has written from Jacksonville, FL, that she and Paul planned a trip to Europe for July, which would include a five-day visit in St. Andrews with Louise Durham Purvis and John. Sally's oldest son, Tad, graduated from Engineering school in June and plans to enter graduate school. Her son Will is in college at Auburn. Sally is a counselor two days a week at a retirement village, and is thoroughly enjoying it.

It was great to hear from Betsy Pearson Griffin, who is still enjoying her job as executive director of the Houston Protocol Alliance. Her most important summer visitor was to be the Lord Mayor of London — the first female ever — who would be visiting Houston's first lady mayor. No grass grows under Betsy's feet! She is also involved in a leadership forum for people in "mid-career," which entails a four-day Outward Bound experience. Son Edward Griffin is a senior at W&L.

Jocelyn Palmer Connors writes that she and Tom have sold their farm on the outskirts of Roanoke and have been remodeling a 50-year-old house. Both of their daughters, Katherine and Dede, have earned academic honors at Sweet Briar. Jocelyn herself plans to begin teaching 8th grade algebra and also is taking piano lessons.

Bettye Thomas Chambers was on SBC campus in March, 1984, to introduce her husband Al, who spoke to the Friends of the Library on "Lynchburg, an Architectural History." His book on the subject is highly regarded.

Nancy Hudler Keuffel writes that they have returned to Birmingham, MI, after almost three years in Taiwan. They are enjoying being home.

Chris Christie Cruger's daughter Laurie is a junior at American U. in Washington, majoring in visual media en route to being a film-maker. Chris also writes that her own business, J. Christie, Ink, Public Relations/Writing Services, is thriving.

Peggy Johnson Curtis was written up in the Chattanooga News-Free Press in an article called "Cooking with Style" — complete with pictures and recipes. Peggy is a decorator on the staff of Jane Harper Interiors.

After spending two years in graduate school in Chapel Hill, NC, Laura Connerat Jelks is back in Savannah as director of the Savannah Science Museum Planetarium. Her son Freeman is at Sewanee, and daughter Lolly is finishing up at Connecticut College. Laura and Lolly visited Rosalie Smithy Tallman at her chateau in the South of France, and Laura said Rosalie is a marvelous gourmet cook.

Louisa Turner is working as a Senior Planner on IBM's internal communications network in New York City. She had a wonderful trip to Israel in January, 1982. Louisa enjoys working in the soup kitchen of her church, All Angels', where she also serves on the Vestry.

As a result of her November, 1982, marriage to James Duncan Phyle, Winifred Swoyer has acquired two new children in addition to her two. We wish you much happiness, Winnie.

Mott Mason Atherholt admits that "the mid-life crisis struck with a vengeance" and she and her husband Bill are now in business together, as well as running a farm in Maine that they are "re-claiming."

Congratulations to Mary Sturr Cornelius, who has finished her M.B.A. and is now an internal auditor for Standard Oil of California. She often sees Gwen Weiner, who is a practicing interior designer in San Francisco.

Anne Parker Schmalz is still involved in the horticultural business, and also serves as president of the League of Women Voters in New Haven. Her daughters Jenny and Caroline are students at Wellesley and Oberlin, respectively. In May of 1983 Anne visited the Chelsea Flower Show and went on a walking trip on the Cornwall Coast. That sounds like the ideal trip.

It was good to hear from Andrea Denson Wechsler in Santa Fe, who is busily engaged in weaving lessons, among other projects.

Ann Gail Meredith Hilgeman writes that her family is moving to Monticello, AR, where they have bought a 100-year-old home.

Julia Shields has received a fellowship from the National Endowment for the Humanities and plans to read about 25 literary biographies. Julia is still teaching high school English in Charlottesville.

Barby Ross Goode's eldest daughter Anne is a senior at St. Mary's College in Raleigh, NC, and 15-year-old daughter Amy is an avid basketball player for the Charlotte Latin School.

It should make us all smile to think about the reunion that Mina Walker Wood and Robin, Alice Allen Smyth and Ross, Ray Henley Thompson and Mike, Eva Pringle Boyd and Bill, and May Belle Scott Rauch and Ted had at Lake Toxaway in the North Carolina Mountains in July. Incidentally, the Woods have three darling boys whom we met last summer. The oldest, Sackett, is a sophomore at UVA.

Do continue to send us your news.

Anne Ward Stern has been named development director of Oak Knoll School of the Holy Child in Summit, NJ.

1970

President

Heather Tully Click (Mrs. A. Richard), 101 Hunter's Halt, Peachtree City, GA 30269

Secretary

Emmy Moravec Holt (Mrs. J. Williams, III), 105 Rockingham Rd., Greenville, SC 29607

Fund Agent

Debbie Oenemark, 1255 New Hampshire Ave., Washington, DC 20036

I hope that all of you are looking forward to our 15th Reunion next May, 1985. It will be a memorable time...the more the merrier! Details will come later in a letter from Heather Tully Click. For now, circle May 24-26, 1985. Here's what's happening to our classmates as we approach the 15th-year milestone:

Anne Adare Wood is enjoying her work in real estate with Shannon and Luchs in the Washington metropolitan area. Through her work she has seen several SBC alumnae and has traveled to Spain, France and ski country.

Tricia Mast George lives there, too, while husband Kenn serves as an Assistant Secretary in the Dept. of Commerce. She volunteers at the Corcoran Gallery of Art, and is expecting their 3rd son in October. She and Kenn have traveled to Australia, New Zealand, Singapore and Hong Kong.

Tracy Savage is Assistant Head/Academic Dean of Foxcroft School, Middleburg, VA, and also directs Community Theatre. She keeps up with SBC and activities at Mt. St. Angelo. Jane Elizabeth Gott married Ron Tant last March. They have led a singles group at their church for the past two years. She is still in sales at Sterling Drug Co. in Fairfax, VA.

Claudia Forman Ostrander continues as an A.V.P. in real estate lending with Maryland National Bank. She hopes to be starting a new Virginia real estate lending unit in 1984, based at Tysons Center, VA (closer to home). In Annapolis, Louise Hayman lives with her daughter who is starting boarding school at Oldfields. She commutes to Baltimore where she has been promoted to assistant vice president, Consumer Services and Marketing Division, with Union Trust Bank. She keeps up with Barbara Waters Larson from Baltimore thanks to the WATS line. Kim Muller-Thym writes that she has seen several SBC-ers this year — vacationed with Connie Haskell on the Isle de Mujeres off the Yucatan, and saw Kristin Herzog at the Illustrators and Designers Workshop in Tarrytown, N.Y.

Cindy Bacon is also living in Baltimore where she is a stockbroker with Baker, Watts, & Co., a regional investment firm. She chairs the League's Corporate Sponsorship Committee for the Baltimore Jumping Classic, a fundraiser held at the Civic Center. She still loves to ride, plays tennis, and races sailboats. May Humphreys Fox, husband Charlie, and their two children are all fine in Richmond, VA. She has joined a law firm, Messull, McCandlish, & Framme, and is working in the health care area. She also does a lot of sailing — she and Charlie helped sail a 44-foot Swan from Antibes, France, to Alicante, Spain, via Marjorca and Ibiza the past spring. They also spend time at their new house at Fishing Bay. May sees Katie McCardell Webb all the time and says that she's fine. Betty Glass Smith is an assistant V.P. with SOVRAN Bank in Richmond. Husband Bill is with VEPCO, and they keep busy with sons Ran (2) and Corbin (1). Betty has worked with Mary Fantone Davies '74, who is a V.P. with SOVRAN Bank in Norfolk. From Lynchburg, Betty Rau Schewel writes that she is enjoying her position as copy editor of her Junior League Cookbook — having tasted and tested for three different sets. She is involved in the music program at her Synagogue.

Jo Shaw Robinson sent news that their new son Edwin O. Robinson, III, arrived seven weeks premature and only 3 lbs. 7 oz., but is now doing well. She visited Candace Buker Chang in Portland, OR, last March. Candace and her two daughters (now 6 and 10) anticipate moving back to Boston this fall. In Portland she was a parent trainer for Children's Services Division — working with abusive, neglectful, and incest — offending parents. Sandy Hamilton Bentley is also in Portland having moved from Pennsylvania when Bob joined INTEL. They are awaiting completion of their new home and look forward to living in it with Andrew (5) and Matthew (2). She would love to hear from any Portland area SBC-ers and loves the beauty of the area. Margaret Sharp Howell and family are in Denver, CO. Their older daughter, Ruth (5), enters kindergarten at the Stanley British Primary School. She and Bill have been very involved with its expansion from one classroom into three classes of K-2 in an historical school building. Bill is working as an architect with the National Park Service on historical structures in Alaska and Hawaii. Margaret keeps busy with Jr. League, church, school, and Ruth and Lorene (2). Lucy Lombardi Evans is enjoying life and outdoor sports with husband Stu in Littleton, CO. Susan Hampton VerNooy and Stan are glad they moved back to Fresno last year. Justin is in second grade, and Dean is 3. She is still enjoying stitchery with the Creative Circle — doing it and teaching it.

Several notes from the Midwest... Debbie Jones describes a busy year: passed her doctoral oral exams at UNC-Chapel Hill, moved to Chicago, married John Engel and began working for the American College of Surgeons — all in three months! Linda Edgerton Goslen and Blake also transplanted themselves to St. Louis, MO, and are expecting their first baby — a daughter — in November. They love the St. Louis area. Rose Ann Feldman graduated from St. Louis University Law School in May and took the Missouri Bar exam in July. Schuyler Gott Herbert is in St. Louis and is now Assistant Vice President of Clayton Mercantile National Bank. She is also Senior Trust Officer of the bank. After SBC, she graduated from the National Graduate Trust School at Northwestern University.

In Nashville, TN, Sarah Becker has just completed publication of a book entitled Off Your Duffs and Up the Assets; Common Sense for Non-Profit Managers, Farnsworth Publishers, Inc. The book is reportedly perfect for volunteers involved in Jr. Leagues, fine arts, and charitable organizations.

Deborah Warren Rommel writes from Houston, TX, that she and Ross are busy with Sadie (1), Andy (5), and Emily (7). She says that when the going gets tough, they head for Texas Hill Country to watch the stars and the deer. Ann Gateley is still jogging and backpacking in spare time and invites visitors to drop in. Her job at U.T. Medical School is stimulating, and her "magnus opus" for this year — a medical textbook she's editing — is to be out winter of 1984-85. One of the contributing authors is Kathy Upchurch '72. Karen Hartnett sends news of a fantastic year in Dallas, TX. She joined Republic Bank Corp in January of '83 and last year was promoted to manager of human resources for general banking. She has personnel responsibility for all of the Republic Bank System affiliates — 37 banks around Texas. She is also assistant V.P. of the Corporation. She says its exciting, hectic, and that she loves it.

In Montgomery, AL, Kitty Litchfield Seale is still dancing away madly. Her ballet company was accepted into the Southwestern Regional Ballet Assoc. this year (only two companies in Alabama are members). They are doing a dance seminar now with a fabulous teacher from Los Angeles. Turner (7) and Kate (10) are doing fine, while big Turner has been busy as ever with his building business. Bonnie Palmer McCloskey and Tom have had their fourth child, second daughter, Devon. Lauren (3) and Devon were born on the same date, planned around March skiing! They were all in Aspen, CO, this summer and took a side trip to Yellowstone. Bonnie is back to riding and is loving it. Margaret Arnold Jackson is living in Macon, GA, with Jim, Meg (10), and James (5). Margaret will begin her twelfth year working with emotionally disturbed and L.D. children. Both she and Jim still sing in the choir where they met 13 years ago.

Jean McKee Carmichael attended Diane McCabe's wedding in N.Y. last fall — Diane is now the very happy Mrs. Brandon Reid. Jean is happy and busy in Charlottesville, VA, as a fitness director for the "Y," selling wine for their company (great combination!), and playing taxi driver for sons Ian (10) and Ross (6½). She reports also that Susan McGrath Moses has moved back to Virginia Beach, where she is now a real estate agent. Kay Parham Picha and David enjoyed a "honeymoon" at home this summer in Greensboro, NC, while Mandy (8) and Tom (7) visited grandparents in Washington State. Both children are involved in Suzuki violin, cello, soccer, and swimming. Kay plans to take some courses at UNC-G this fall.

In Atlanta, Kathy Barnes Hendricks is taking care of Nat (2) and Baby, due the same week visitors from England are coming in connection with her job as chairman of special events of the High Museum Antiques Show. She continues to work at revitalizing 750 acres of their newly acquired hunting preserve and fiddles in her English garden at their Atlanta house. Kathy is still president of the Herb Society, has been doing cooking classes, and is trying to keep up with her lawyer-turned-developer husband. Sydney McCampbell Glass had a wonderful visit with Page Kjellstrom and Mary Jane Hipp Brock while in NYC. Normally, she, Fred, and their two children live in Atlanta. Kate Schlech is also in Atlanta, working in the Antitrust Division of the U.S. DOJ, "still single, still renting, still breeding guppies, still skiing, still happy, and reasonably well adjusted." Heather Tully Click and Richard have relocated in the Atlanta Area (Peachtree City), where they have just moved into a new home with baby Benjamin Edwards Click and Amanda (3½). Heather will be in touch with you as Reunion plans progress. Please send any suggestions to her.

In NYC, Pat Swinney Kaufman is now college counselor for the Spence School. Pat and Lloyd see lots of Fran Griffith Laserson and Steve. Fran has made a career switch after thirteen years on Wall Street — to full time mothering. Their second daughter Galen Griffith, born in April, and Tenley (4) provide long work hours at home! She is continuing her work with Jr. League and is now a member of SBC's Board of Overseers. Mary Jane Hipp Brock and Charlie had a little girl, Suzanna, in April. Mary Jane had a mini-reunion last October, while in Richmond at a St. Catherine's Development Council meeting, and loved seeing Wallis Wickham, Mary Humphreys Fox, and Ann Gateley, who flew in for the week-end. Page Kjellstrom is a constant source of news tidbits of many classmates: Corbin Kendig married Tom Rankin in Richmond, VA, and expects their first child this fall. Becky Mitchell Keister got her M.B.A., and she and Larry took a vacation on the Queen Elizabeth II to Europe. Jo Prevost Browning was here from Hong Kong last January, and now she and Jim have moved to Tokyo where Jim is head of the Wall St. Journal Office. Jo has left Chemical Bank and is enjoying being a lady of leisure. Allen Lybrook has become an R.N. and still is living in Thomasville, NC. A picture of Miffy Walton Bright and her daughter was in the N.Y. Times in a series of articles on Philadelphia. Page has also seen Molly Woltz Carrison in Greensboro, while at the furniture mart. Molly is busy with two children and a part-time accounting job. Page herself has become special events officer at Chase Manhattan Bank, doing the events for the top executives in the bank.

Wallis Wickham spent a fun summer catching up with old SBC friends. She saw Jessica Holzer and 9-month-old Pete, and Tricia Parks on Martha's Vineyard, and Ann Gateley spent a week with her. Wallis is still a guidance counselor in the Brookline Public Schools and is doing divorces and family mediation part-time. New addition is an adorable Springer Spaniel, "Zinnia." Mary Kyger is currently associate director of the M.I.T. Alumni Fund, and loves it. She lives with her twelve-year-old son, Todd, in Beverly, MA, by the ocean. Mary claims she's enjoying everything but being thirty-five! Suzy Yates' big news is her marriage to Bob Cahill, at her parents' home in Reedville, VA. Betty Brewer Caughman and Jerry and new baby, David, were there, having come from Chester, SC, for the wedding. Suzy is doing special events for the President of Brandeis U. and Bob is a psychologist with a private practice in Boston. Barbara LaLance Kelly lives in Loudonville, NY, where her husband is an attorney in Albany. They have two little daughters, Sarah and Rachel.

Alexandra Weyant de Bruyn is teaching German at Wheaton College in Massachusetts. Daughter Nichole is a high school freshman. From White River Junction, VT, Mary Beth Halligan Griffin sent news that her daughter Lindsay starts kindergarten this year, and son Garrett will be at home with her another year. Mary Beth tutored last year and summer and hopes to continue during the school year. She, Terri Eoff Walsh, and Nia Eldridge Eaton got together last July for a wonderful week-end.

In Greenville, SC, Marcia Pollock Ragsdale is busy serving as SBC Club president, taking graduate courses at Clemson in Education, and keeping Bill and sons Will and Craig happy. Marcia had also been very involved in her Church in Easley, selecting a new organ and directing the choir. Mary Scales Lawson has had a busy year with Margaret and Roselle (B) and Joseph (3), museum board work, church, and school activities. Things came to a sudden halt in August when her sister, Grace, died of acute leukemia.

As for us, we are busy with Will (7), Elizabeth (6), and Emily (3). I love singing in a group in the League, and am busy with several organizations, and at the children's schools. I took a week of courses at Converse College and feel all fired up about going back to SBC for an Alumnae College summer program. Thanks for all your news. Think Reunion 1985. Hope to see you there!

President

Elizabeth (Betsy) Redwine Garner (Mrs. Ralph Edward), 433 Roslyn Rd., Winston-Salem, NC 27104

Secretary

Elinor Plowden, 20 Twenty-sixth St., Unit F-3, Atlanta, GA 30309

Fund Agents

Margaret Myers Sullivan (Mrs. John J.), 7741 N. Sherman Dr., Indianapolis, IN 46268

Jane Piper who offered her capable services as class secretary for the last five years warned me that the duties were somewhat involved, but she never told me how much sympathy I would get! Keep those cards and letters coming and I promise not to hold up the news as long as I held up the Boxwood round robin (8 years). Without further ado, here is what is happening in your region:

WEST

Jane Piper is taking a much-deserved two-week trip around Northern Germany in September and plans to be in Switzerland at Christmas. She still manages to keep busy in St. Louis after relinquishing her SBC duties, as president of the Campbell House Foundation, as an involved member of the Junior League, and with the Art Museum Library. Jane traveled from St. Louis, MO, for the reunion and is already looking forward to '89.

Barbara Ashton Schiller's biggest news is Benjamin Ashton Schiller, born June 25, 1984 — B lb. 11 oz. Barb and Scott took a cruise last fall on the Song of America with Nancy Lea Houghton and Hoot. While in Birmingham last winter, Barb saw Liz Thomas Camp and son Harry.

In Woodlands, TX, Mary Ann Reese Rosenberg is enjoying a "change of careers" and finds being a full-time mother challenging and rewarding. Rebecca Lynn was born on February 20, 1984. At 12 weeks, she was fishing and camping with Maryann and Bern at Cado Lake.

Barbara Moore is still with Texas Christian U. as a psychologist and maintains a private practice in Fort Worth. She welcomes any visitors to Texas. (Maybe she'll consider giving us all a special SBC discount rate.)

Sherrie Sneed McLeRoy writes from Texas City, TX, that she and Bill survived their first hurricane — Alicia. Sherrie works at the Galveston County Historical Museum. She is also freelance writing and sold her first two national magazine articles and a book proposal, which will be published in the spring. She has great hopes for breaking into the "Big Time" and enjoyed the reunion and a vacation trip to St. Louis to visit Jane Piper.

Virginia Shaw Khandke is currently studying oriental porcelains and working as a right-hand lady to the owner of a lovely antique shop in Denver, CO. In November of last years she and Jay traveled to India where they spent time in the pulsating city of Bombay and in the tranquil island of Goa.

Out in California, Julia Shuer enjoyed open access to the Olympic Games as a volunteer at the Basketball Forum working with officials and athletes. Most of her time is taken up by a thriving occupational therapy private practice with 13 professional employees. She still lives in Beverly Hills and is enjoying the southern California good life alter 10 years.

Jane Renne writes from Costa Mesa, CA, that she will finish a degree program at the Interior Designers Institute in March. She was awarded a scholarship to attend college full-time and works part-time at a design firm in Irvine. On July 4th she had a working vacation in Maui, and Carol Ann Kroese flew out from New York and stayed for a week. She met Kirk Coleman Lammerding in Valencia for horseback riding outings.

Kelly Borrowman Slabodjan and Paul moved to Rancho Palo Verdes, CA, after Paul finished an M.B.A. from MIT.

In Salinas, Andria Francis is still working and traveling for CTB/McGraw-Hill in Monterey, CA. She has been nominated for inclusion in the 20th Edition of Who's Who in the West. She and Fred have just moved into a new house in Salinas complete with redwood hot tub and finally found the time to take a honeymoon to Fred's Condominium in Kapalua Bay, Maui, for 10 days in November, '83. In September they plan to visit New York for a week to see family and friends and play in the Big Apple.

NORTH

Jana Sawicki living in Bangor, ME, teaches philosophy at the U. of Maine at Orono. This summer she was in Maine — her last two were spent in Boston and London, doing research and writing. She is involved in women's studies and recently attended the National Women's Studies Association Conference at Rutgers U. She keeps in touch with Georgene Vairo '72 in Long Island and recently saw Sarah Clement '75, who was vacationing after finishing her law bar exam.

We hear via Miss Sprague that Nathalie Ward Larkin and Jonathan are in Woods Hole, MA. Natalie is a naturalist, researching Western North Atlantic Whales and serving on the Whalewatch boats. She also belongs to two artisans cooperatives in Woods Hole and in Boston, designing hand-painted ceramic tiles. Jonathan continues his music career as a flamenco-folk guitarist, and they both enjoy the pleasures of parenthood.

Tana Meier Parselitti, Hartford, CT, gets more involved, as her children get older, in her husband Frank's restaurant business. As of the fall, Tanya and Frank will be atop the tallest building in the state of Connecticut: City Place, on Asylum Street in the center of downtown Hartford.

Mimi Hill Wilk traveled from Regina, Saskatchewan, Canada, for a mini-reunion with Mary Killoran and Sarah Johnston Knoblauch on the Isle of Palus, SC. She and Kenney expect their 2nd child in November.

Mary Lee Burch Weil, Bellona, NY, continues to enjoy her two-year-old son, Grant, substitute teaching, and aerobics exercise class.

Kristan Amylon Swain, Corning, NY, joined the Corning Works Foundation

as a program manager last December.

Helen W. Travis, Woodside, NY, was recently promoted to assistant personnel manager responsible for the entire secretarial staff of Doyle, Dain, Bernbach, Inc., in charge of 159 Staffers. Helen continues to sing with the St. Cecilia Chorus which gave its Christmas concert to a sold out audience at Carnegie Hall. From New Jersey, Sally Brice O'Hara writes she is still in the Coast Guard Station, Cape May. She was recently selected to take charge of the Coast Guard Search and Rescue Station there, the first woman chosen by the CG to command an operational shore unit. Sally and Bob are expecting their second child in early fall. Their son, Chipper, is two years old. Between work, pregnancy, and "the terrible twos," she manages to stay on the go and welcomes visitors in that part of the country.

Bonnie Chronowski Brophy and John have settled into Summit County, NJ. John finds L. P. Rothschild stimulating, and Bonnie finds volunteering, aerobic dancing and mothering especially rewarding. Bonnie will be working with the Women's Resource Center as a counselor and representing the Northern New Jersey Alumnae Club at the Alumnae Council in the fall.

Pat Carroll Bankenstein announces the birth of a son, Neil, born May 13, 1984. In addition to keeping up with two children, she still consults in regulatory affairs and serves on the Board for a Shelter for Abused Women and Children. She is also researching historic locations for the local Preservation Society.

Laurie Kreckler Stuib writes from Pennsylvania that with the birth of her second child, Emilie, she temporarily retired from the workforce and is now trying to get organized and return to life as she once knew it.

Mary Witt, settled into Indianapolis, IN, this past summer as a clinical investigator for the Eli Lilly Company. Mary is working closely with company marketing and regulatory groups to advance human insulin products.

Christine Weiss Pfeil and Dave have just purchased their first home in Cleveland, OH, and are learning the joys of homeownership (remodeling). Christine has been working with the Cleveland Museum of Natural History as a science instructor and coordinator on the Education Division Volunteers. She continues her chairmanship of the Lake Ridge Academy on the Board of Trustees and enjoys being an aunt to Susanne Thompson. Cathy Weiss Thompson and Todd have also just bought a farm near Winchester, VA, a good excuse to keep in close touch with the old school.

Connie Norweb Abbey and Paul announced the birth of a little girl, Lindsey Hanna, born November 23, 1983, in Gates Mills, OH.

Betsy Biggar Hellmuth and Ted have moved to Chagrin Falls, OH, with Katie (7), Teddy (5) and Kimberly (1). Ted had joined Roulston Research as an investment trader.

From Lake Forest, IL, Karen Fennell Holly announces the birth of her daughter, Meghan Duborg Holly, who was born September 24, 1983. She and Don have never worked harder than as the new owners of an old farmhouse in Lake Forest near the lake. Don is still in the restaurant business managing a Chicago group for Annie Norton.

SOUTH

Taffy Moffett Litz and Don are keeping busy with Anne (2) and six-month-old twin daughters, Paige and Ashby, in Butler, MD.

Vicki Bates Roy and Daniel went to France in February to visit Daniel's parents in Nice and observe the Mardi Gras festivities there and to see friends in Paris. During the summer and fall they have put aside computer concerns from time to time to enjoy weekend bicycle excursions. They live in Columbia, MD.

Catherine B. Pritchett obtained an M.S. in architecture after a year in Finland and three years in graduate school at VPI. She now happily works in a small firm in Georgetown. Her projects include a horsebreeding farm, bank renovations, and house additions.

Anne Hall Whittle is living in Alexandria, VA, and has two girls, ages 5 and 3.

Sally Rebutisch Randolph observed how well preserved our class was after 10 years. Sally and David welcomed a second child into the family on January 19, 1984. Sally attended Karla Kline Bradshaw's wedding in April. Also in attendance were Bebe Wheelock Zavell, Ann Smith, Mary Killorin, Sally Clary, Ceci Kirby and Marsha Phillips Smith.

Jean Connor Churchill and Paul announce the birth of their son, Zackary Paul, on October 12, 1983. Jean is working part-time for Catholic Charities in Arlington, VA.

Edie McRee Whiteman and Mac are moving to Richmond, VA, where Edie will be the executive director of Virginia Association of Museums.

Sandra Taylor Craighead and Bill have moved from Rochester, NY, to Richmond, VA. Sandy and Bill were married March 3, 1984. Sandy's sister, Marshá Taylor DeLain '76 came from the Phillipine Islands for the wedding. Elizabeth Andrews Watts and Bobby also attended from Norfolk. Debbie Hart Eisele and her husband were also at the wedding. Debbie was a bridesmaid. Sandy is now working at United Virginia Bank as a products manager. At the beach, she saw Mary Reid Roach and Terry Starke Tosh '75.

Janine Ray Cummings and Robert were unable to attend the reunion but Janine sends greetings and news of her daughter, Jannessa, born November 24, 1983. Janine is back at work at Woodrow Wilson Rehabilitation Center.

Pamela Hughes Ganse and Dave have returned to Virginia after five years of "living it up" in Vail, CO. She is working as a bookkeeper for a contractor in Upperville and Dave is an architect in Winchester. They really miss Vail and are looking for a home to buy in the Winchester area, but enjoy being closer to Sweet Briar friends, Debb Ryan Cairns, Cindy Craighill, Kathy Vuicich Schinasi and Taify Moffett Litz.

Betsy Redwine Garner, Winston-Salem, NC, was voted Most Excellent Mother by her family and Most Likely To Succeed As President and 15th Reunion Chairman by the Class of '74. Let's have a hand for Betsy.

Long-lost Sandra Herring Bloomberg writes from Cary, NC, that she and Ed are enjoying their daughter Carson, now 5, and a new son, Austin, who was a year old in August. Ed has his own photography study in Cary, and Sandy is working on her dissertation in computer science at U.N.C.

Susie Fitzgerald Dahl, Ty and Catherine have moved from Tulsa, OK, to Winston-Salem, NC. Ty is with Womble, Carlyle, NC's largest law firm, as a trial attorney. Susie stays busy with Catherine and volunteer work. Both are looking forward to being closer to family and a trip back to SBC.

Tricia Barnett Greenberg of Florence, SC, attended Rozzie Ray's wedding and had a long visit with Beth Franke and Meredith Thompson. She has been extremely busy on the homelife (now 3 children — 5 years, 4 years and 10 months). She ran into Jane Perry Bean '75 and Anne Cogswell Burns and their children at Kiawah Beach. Tricia donned cap and gown to represent SBC at the local college's Frances Marian inauguration of a new president.

Rossie Ray married Penn Spell in Atlanta, GA, on February 11, 1984. Rossie had a busy year as president of the Sweet Briar club of Atlanta, GA, but was unable to attend the reunion in May.

In Columbus, GA, Lynn Watson Philpott is still with American Family Life Insurance Corporation and has been promoted to manager of the Computer Services Group. She and Sonny still grow blueberries and grapes and raise cattle on the weekends. Most of her free time is taken up with son Drew, one-and-a-half years old. She keeps in touch with Betsy Roberts and Kirk Coleman Lammerding.

Mary Bush married Felton Norwood, a pediatrician who sees the children of several SBC graduates in Atlanta, GA. Mary gained an "instant family" with Felton's two lovely girls, 13 and 15. They have just bought a "new-old" home and will be fixing it up to move in by February, 1985.

Liz Thomas Camp has been promoted to Georgia Administrator for Representative Newt Gingrich (R-GA), the rising star from Carrollton, GA. Liz reported several actual and expected blessed events, including one for Laura Elkins Robbins and John of New York, who expected an arrival in November.

Laura Murray Abernethy is in Birmingham with husband Richard and daughters, Lucy, 5, and Murray, 3.

Cheryl Viar Upchurch hated to miss the reunion but reports all is well in Birmingham, AL. Cheryl is a constant chauffeur to Shannon (7), Kit (5), and Gene (2), with some time for volunteer work and tennis. Sam is moving from his partnership in a law firm to the Torchmark Corporation.

Laura Hutchinson Thompson lives in Montgomery, AL, where Laura works as a certified physician's assistant with thoracic and cardiovascular surgeons. She enjoys daughter Laura Hales (age 2), riding her Arab quarter mare, and remodeling their first house.

Mary Combs writes from Runner's Roost in Lexington, KY, that she has finally found her calling as a travel agent and loves it but she misses the Houston crowd.

Donna Slingerland Callery, now in Louisville, KY, has three daughters, Amy, Megan, and Lauren.

Ann Pritchett Van Horn is in New Orleans, LA. She and Woodie have bought a Victorian cottage and said there always seems to be a project. Her two children, Little Woodie and Greg, were enjoying the "freedom of the summer." Aside from teaching Sunday School, Ann will be working on hearing, testing and screening in Little Woodie's pre-school. Big Woodie is in clinical practice of E.N.T. and is very happy with his new surroundings.

Kathy Bonis Pearson and Michael are in St. Petersburg, FL, with daughter Jennie (6) and son Jeff (5). Michael is ad manager of United Media Enterprises based in New York but maintains an office in St. Petersburg and handles the Southeastern Region. Kathy is working part-time as a travel counselor and enjoying vacationing with the family on snorkeling expeditions.

In the shadow of the Coca-Cola building at Georgia Tech in Atlanta, GA, your class secretary reports that high technology is thriving. After returning from a trip to Hanover, West Germany, to represent Georgia Tech, and a skiing trip to the Austrian Alps with Wendy White, I attended the class reunion and assumed the duties of class secretary. According to the financial statistics, "nothing like us ever was" — we surpassed all 10th year reunions before us by raising $18,056, with a whopping 60 per cent participation — and we had a great time doing it! Thank you for your cards and letters on short notice. Nancy Blackwell Marion won't let me print all the juicy stories and pictures from the reunion, so you'll all have to come back again in '89. Sorry if this is a bit choppy — I compiled it between rehearsals of You Can't Take It With You.

President

Becky Dane, 2827 28th St., N.W. Apt. 14, Washington, DC 20008

Secretaries

Suzanne Stryker Ullrich (Mrs. Rick), 155 South Chapel St., Newark, DE 19711

Cannie Cryslar Shaler (Mrs. Edwin H.), 12 Shirley Rd., Narberth, PA 19072

Fund Agent

Lu Litton, P.O. Box 845, 608 Summit St., No. 12, Winston-Salem, NC 27102

Leslie Anderson Battle and Michael are still in Miami and are finally finished renovating their house. The two of them were able to take a mini-vacation over Memorial Day weekend to Sawgrass, a resort outside Jacksonville, FL, where they met up with Ann Baldwin Mann and Randall and Anne Ramsey Hill and Dave. A great time was had by all.

Lisa Azeberg reports that she has been working on a weekly newspaper in New Orleans for the past year.

Roberta Lehet was down for a visit in the spring and spoke of her trips to Europe since graduation. Lisa hadn't heard from Pat Boyce Tuchy since she and husband Kevin had a baby. "Anyone heard anything?"

After making a "career move" to the Big Apple in '83, Nancy Baroody has worked with Exxon Office Systems, selling business information system computers, and is now with Motorola Co. in their Cellular Mobile Telephone Sales Division. She writes that she really likes NYC now that she is all settled in her new apartment.

Barbara Baydush White writes in that she and Robert Graham White, III, were married June 6, 1981. They now have a daughter, Margaret Stern White, born Dec. 16, 1983, and are all living in Alexandria, VA.

Paula Brown spent five weeks in May-June with two friends from D.C. traveling all over Europe — Italy, France, Germany, Holland, Austria and Ireland. In July she went down to Charleston, WV, with Marybeth Lipinski McAdoo to see Carey Johnson Fleming.

After leaving SBC after Freshman Year, Ginger Castle Bickley married Jim Bickley. They have three children, Jimmy, 7; Christopher, 5; and Deidre, 21 months, and live outside Philadelphia. Ginger is trying to complete her undergraduate work at Beaver College's Continuing Education Program while juggling her riding, tennis, golf, home decorating ("my own") and home making. Ginger would also, as would many others, love to hear about whatever happened to Vicki Saigh, Eve Baskowitz and Drasi Von Wiesenhal.

Toni Christian Brown and Jim moved back to Lynchburg so Toni could teach first grade at James River Day School after finishing her Master's in Education in Early Childhood in Aug. '83. Toni wrote that she expected to take some time off this past fall as their first child was expected the end of Aug. '84. Pam Jefferson Floyd returns to Lynchburg fairly often. She and Toni get together whenever they can. Toni also saw Dianne Torn Duffy (who left after Freshman year) in Ft. Lauderdale during the summer of '83. Dianne had just gotten married to Michael Duffy, and they let Toni and Jim stay with them before the Browns sailed to the Bahamas.

Cannie Cryslar Shaler had lots to report! While still teaching at Episcopal Academy outside Philadelphia, Cannie had been busy with coaching (girls 8th-grade basketball and lacrosse), taking busloads of 45 students to Killington, VT, for ski weekends, moving to a new house four blocks away, and going to Cancun, Mexico, in the spring of '84. While in Cancun, Cannie and Win did some "ruins climbing" and Cannie won a conch blowing contest in which the conch was the prize! Cannie started graduate school this past fall, going to classes at night after a day of classes and coaching! "Hope there's a room like the 'The Pit' or I won't be able to study." Cannie would like to have someone come and stay in their guest room besides their three cats!

Anne Clement Buck and Blair welcomed the arrival of their second daughter, Ellen Meredith, on April 17, 1984. Their first daughter, Grace, will be 9 at Christmas. Anne says they win "The most Unusual Living Situation" award — they are house parents to 23 high school boys at Episcopal High School, outside D.C., where Blair teaches biology and coaches football and pole vaulting. They have been there for two years and love it. Ann has retired from teaching for the time being to raise children, enjoy her ballet classes, and smock dresses for the girls. A summer camping trip to Vermont was also planned.

Suzanne Collins has been busy moving both herself and her company, "Briar Patch," to Greenville, SC. "Briar Patch and I will finally have separate addresses!" As of July 31, 1984, Suzanne expected to have the move completed and to have an accessory outlet store in "The Front." She was also thrilled to be back in her hometown. The Greenville Piedmont published a long feature article on her, her mother (Susan Hayward Collins '55), and her business.

Lee Carollo Piorsich had been teaching chemistry for the summer at College of the Desert, Palm Desert, CA, and was offered a full professorship for fall '84 but says, "I'm afraid I'm not a desert person." Instead she has been teaching Honors Chemistry at Oak Grove High School in San Jose, CA. She hoped that living in "Silicon Valley" would present some new lab career options. Lee was recently divorced but her two-year-old son (and two Labradors) manage to keep her busy along with riding, playing the French Horn and tennis. Lee also gets to talk to Tricia Mason fairly often since Tricia moved out to Los Angeles.

Deb Davison Weidner and Doug became new parents last July 16 when William Davison Weidner was born. They had a fun summer seeing Mary Page Stewart and Bob, Maria Rixey Gamper and Dickie, and Mary Goodwin. They were also finishing up work on their house.

Laura "Buster" Farmer Gebhardt and John have moved to a new house in Littleton, CO, with their two-year-old, Trevor, who is already turning out to be quite a rider. While looking for a career change, Laura has been working for Richmond Homes, a subsidiary of M.D.C. John has been busy writing a lot of new songs.

Cathy Finley Onder and Tuna spent a week last spring touring around New England and are still trying to decide whether to move from Virginia Beach to Richmond or not.

After being in Jane Lauderdale Armstrong's wedding in March, Libby Freeman Goetz and Wade were busy getting ready for the arrival of Wade Haralson (Ralson) Goetz, Jr., on June 28.

Martha Glover Perry was married to Dennis in April, 1983, and after a move from Florida to Stamford, CT, Martha works in N.Y.C. as an account supervisor at Grey Advertising.

Drusie Hall is in Nashville, TN, working for J.C. Bradford & Co., a brokerage firm, in their Institutional Sales Dept. as an assistant and is really enjoying it.

Kim Hershey Hatcher and George are happier than ever with their little girl Mary Anne, 2, and a new little puppy.

Dudie Hiemenz DiLeo stopped working in late June so that she and Tony could get ready for the arrival of their first child in late August. She had been a word processor for Citicorp. Dudie wrote and said that Lisa Neuenschwander Smith is pregnant, due sometime in early 1985. Dudie also saw Becky Mulvihill McKenna and her daughter, and also keeps in touch with Ann Key Lucas.

Eelen Humphrey Gora was keeping busy over the summer with her two girls; Heather, 4½, and Sarah, 14 months, and getting a fair amount of help from "Het" in taking care of sister. Ee seemed to be anxious for Het to start kindergarten and Sarah to get a little older so that she could get back to her sewing and exercise classes, just having more free time to herself! Al, Ee's husband, is working for an aluminum extrusion company in Watsonville, CA, as one of their drafters.

When Betsy Hurley last wrote in, she was working hard in Austin, TX, as state organization director for U.S. Senate candidate, Phil Gramm, and looking forward to the Republican National Convention in Dallas.

News from Kathy Jackson Howe — "18-month-old Trey is WILD. Why didn't someone warn me about kids?" Swearing that she would never have another "rug rat," Kathy is due with child #2 in Feb. '85. Root is still doing his general surgery residency in Winston-Salem while Kathy is finishing up her real estate obligations "so I can hug the bathroom bowl!" Good old morning sickness!

Robin Jones Eddy took a trip down to Virginia and saw Mari Monahan and Barbara Behrens in N.Y.C. She was lucky enough to see Dream Girls with Allison Egbert. While in Virginia, Robin and Suzanne Collins trekked down to Winston-Salem to visit Mary Page Stewart and Kathy Jackson Howe and finally got to see Trey Howe. They also saw Liz Perkinson at a restaurant there. "I have discovered that what I thought was a reaction to a terrible case of poison ivy was really my being pregnant! A little turkey due Thanksgiving!" Robin also reported that Carol Cordell was studying at Oxford for the summer, then traveling.

Anne Jarrell Berry wrote in saying that she and Will had a baby girl, Marion Ellis Berry (Ellis), born on Dec. 29, 1983, and that they love being parents.

Carey Johnson Fleming's big news was that she and husband David were expecting a baby around Nov. 6th, '84. She is also back in school working on her M.B.A. Paula Brown and Marybeth Lipinski McAdoo were down in Charleston, WV, for a visit in the summer of '84.

Brian, Elizabeth Lambert Bowden's husband, finished up at Harvard Law School and is now with a law firm in Portland, OR. After leaving Boston, Liz and Brian took a great cross-country trip through Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, Montreal, Quebec, then down through the U.S. with a day in Yellowstone.

Jane Lauderdale Armstrong was married to Michael, W&L '77, on March 24, 1984. Ann Yauger was her maid of honor and Libby Freeman Goetz and Nancy Hatch '79, were also among her attendants. Many other SBCers from '77 to '81 were also at Jane's wedding. Mike is with an investment bank in the San Francisco area.

Maggie Laurent Gordy's news is that Meg, born in Oct. '83, has been teaching Maggie and Joe their proper places in the household structure! In Jan. '84 Maggie, Joe and Meg went north from Jacksonville to the D.C. area for Meg's christening, and they got to see Betsy Wood and Leigh Ramsay (Meg's godmother). Then Meg and Maggie were in C-ville in April to see Betsy again and Leigh in N.Y.C. later in the same trip. Maggie talks to Susan Negard Mendel, who is very involved at work and looking forward to her 10th high school reunion. Maggie is also back in school taking computer courses, trying to keep her sanity!

Karen Lemon Hassett and Mark have been living in Southern Pines, NC, for a couple of years and Mark has three deli-restaurants open in the area. Karen has been very busy trying to keep up with Megan Ann, born in Nov. '83.

Lu Litton has switched jobs and consequently relocated from Greensboro to Winston-Salem, NC. She is now assistant manager, planning and development, Special Markets in the Promotions Department, which will involve a lot more traveling. Lu saw Kathy Jackson Howe and Mary Page Stewart at the Annual SBC Bulb Meeting. When up for Bar- bara Mendelssohn's wedding in June, Lu saw Sue Griste, Jeanne Beard Barden and Bob, Ann Maricle, Becky Dane, Cecie Gardia-Tunon, Julia Sutherland, Eileen Scully, Karen Kuhlman, Janet Smalley Todd and Peter, Lucy Darby and Monica Shaffer. In May, Sue, Cecie, Julia, Becky and Janet all met at Lu's vacation home in Myrtle Beach for their annual get-together.

Catherine Lumsden is an ensign in the Navy, stationed in D.C. as a computer security specialist at the largest data processing installation on the East Coast. This past year Catherine went to her ten-year high school reunion in Va. Beach, and to California and Mexico. She was also going to be starting work on her Master's in Computer Science this past fall.

Tricia Mason has made a move from N.Y.C., working for the Italian Trade Commission, to Los Angeles, working in small business management of a retail store selling imported and domestic ceramic tile. "It's great to see the sun shine so much!" During the Olympics, Tricia was busy attending lots of Olympic cultural activities as well as various Olympic events with her new California (native New Yorker) boyfriend, Eric. Tricia has been in touch with Candy Casey '76, who is with the Italian Trade Commission in L.A.

Mary Ella Mays Lewis is happily married to Jimmy and has two children, Mary Elizabeth, 5, and Timothy James, 4. She's not working, just busy being a happy wife and mother.

As of Aug. '84, Leigh McDonald Forrester and John were going to be moving from Greensboro, NC, to Boston, MA, so that John could work on his M.B.A. at Harvard Business School. The two of them were really looking forward to student life in Boston.

Cindy McKay is still busy in Columbus, OH, with the Blue Cross. She was able to go to Atlanta in March for Jane Lauderdale Armstrong's wedding where she saw Ann Yauger, Libby Freeman, Clair Cartwright Vaughan, Nancy Hatch '79 and many others. From Atlanta, Cindy went on to Bermuda for a quick vacation. Over the summer while in D.C. Cindy got to see Paula Brown and Robbi McBride '79.

Caroline McKissick Grace and Joe are living in Florence, SC, with their two children, Joseph Page, 3, and Anna Katherine, born May 25, 1984. Caroline is teaching riding lessons, training, selling and boarding horses. She and Joe also went on a fun trip to the Thoroughbred Horse Sales in Kentucky over the summer.

Cathy Mellow Goltermann and Chris have done quite a bit of traveling during the past year. They've been to Bermuda, the Bahamas, West Indies, and Naples, and spent a couple of weeks at their summer home in Wisconsin. Cathy has given up teaching to try her hand at retailing with Pappagallo.

Barbara Mendelssohn Price was married to Dr. Gordon Wesley of High Point, NC, in Washington, DC. Eighteen SBC-ers were there, and a fantastic time was had by all. Barbara is still working in sales at the State Dept. for Wang Laboratories but finds time to train her horse in Great Falls, VA. A move to D.C. was expected in November, and Barbara was looking forward to the change to city life!

Donna Mihalik Gelagotis is now in Greece for a year with her husband Alex and his family and has taken a leave of absence from her job as supervisor of the Editing Department at the Office of Administrative Law in New Jersey. Donna and Alex were married here in the States last August '83 and were to have a second ceremony in Greece. Donna was looking forward to a lot of relaxing on the island of Lesbos with Alex and his family and then moving to Athens. Donna was able to go to Debbie Dalton Yeskey's marriage to Kevin Scott Yeskey in Sept. '83.

Mo Moffett Haislip was busy enjoying her summer vacation from teaching when last heard from, but was looking forward to the challenges of teaching and coaching in the fall. Her summer included some church league softball, swimming, gardening, and trying to keep up with everyday chores.

Betsy Moore Rice and John are living in Las Cruces, NM, with their little girl, Molly, 1. In May, 1983, Betsy finished up a Master's of Arts in Counseling of the Hearing Impaired and did her internship in East Sussex, England. Anyone coming through New Mexico is guaranteed a margarita and some Nachos!

Becky Mulvihill McKenna is hoping to have her Doctorate in Education — Marriage and Family Therapy, finished up by fall 1985. She is finding that to be a juggling act of time, since she and Ken had a little girl, Katie, on Dec. 8, 1983. Since Becky and Ken are both in the same doctoral program and are both sharing in the taking care of Katie, they feel they are doing a "family practicum" together.

Ieke Dsinga Scully was married to Mark Scully, W&L '81, on June 23, 1984, at the Chapel at Sweet Briar. Debbie Snead Shrader and Jane Hemenway were among her attendants. Ieke turned Dutch Yoghurt, Inc., over to her brother John, but still retains controlling interest in the company. She and Mark are living in Canton, CT, outside of Hartford, where Mark is training to be an actuary with Traveler's Insurance Co. Ieke was in the process of casing the area "for the best opportunity I can find!"

Liz Perkinson is still a paralegal in Winston-Salem and is very busy with renovations on her condominium and many Junior League activities. During the summer Liz was a member of the local steering committee of the Orton Duplexia 35th Annual Conference. She was Chairperson of the local exhibits for the area, and Liz felt that the whole experience had taught her a lot about the area. Liz was also co-chairman of draperies and linens for the League's major fund raiser, a two day rummage sale. "Perk" has also been teaching CPR.

After leaving the Navy in D.C., Mark and Julie Plautz Bodenstab and Phillip, now 2, took off in Feb. '84 for Cleveland, OH, where Mark accepted a job with Air Products and Chemicals, Inc. They are all loving the area and hope to be able to stay put for awhile after moving five times in five years! Julie gets to see a lot of Lauren MacMannis Huyett '79 and her daughter Katie and also saw Kristy Judson Prins '77 since moving to Ohio. Julie was also a bridesmaid in Karen Bowers Lazar's wedding, along with Suzanne Stryker Ullrich last Nov. 10th.

Lauren Place Young and Chris have been very busy in Nantucket, MA, with their "fixer-upper" home, from floor to ceiling, but love it. Lauren also made a career change from selling antiques and gifts at her own shop to selling real estate on Nantucket. "So far, it's been a strong market and I adore my new job." Lauren and Chris bought a J-24, a 24-ft. sailing sloop, last summer and sailed as often as possible. They were able to take Marianne Hutton Felch '79 and Bob for a sail when the Felchs were on Nantucket last June.

Sally Polson Slocum's big news was her marriage to Bill on Aug. 11, 1984, in Old Towne Alexandria, VA. They met in the Peace Corps and after five years decided to settle down in the D.C. area. (We hope Bill made it back from Cameroon, Africa, in time for the ceremony.) Bill owns his own company that contracts out to USAID. Sally is a director for an organization called Project Helping Hand that is putting together public/private partnerships in areas such as juvenile diversion. In the summer of '83, Sally had two shattered discs removed and her back fused. It was a long recovery but she is up and about now.

Since the last notes came out, Katherine Powell has moved out to Cleveland, where she is manager of medical illustration in the Educational Media Department at Case-Western Reserve U. Her "young man" (so dubbed by Annie Stelle Sadler!) is a resident in the Orthopedic Surgery Department there, so Katherine's phone bills are considerably less! When Katherine was at a high school buddy's wedding last summer, she was surprised to see Lynn Spilman and Suzanne Collins. Then, on the way home, she ran into Mary Page Stewart's husband Bob on the return flight.

When her husband Ross was offered a job with Mellon Bank, he and Missy Powell Adams were off to Pittsburgh, PA, in Dec. '83. After trying her hand at being a housewife ("which I did have fun with"), Missy accepted a position as marketing director for One Oxford Centre, a gorgeous 46-story complex with an atrium filled with designer boutiques. Missy said that she was having a ball.

Lisanne Purvis is still living in N.Y.C. where she is licensed as an attorney. She is also in her second year at the Graduate School of Acting at NYU. Lisanne gets to see Liz Lambert Bowden in Boston now that the Bowdens have moved there from Ft. Worth, TX.

Janet Rakoozy Hudson is busy working as an executive assistant to the president of a firm called Growth Stock Outlook, which handles $100 million in investments. Janet is also pursuing a graduate degree in Computer Science at American University. Janet also had the pleasure of meeting Carrie Ruda Clark's son Johnson over the summer.

Since July '84, Leigh Ramsay has been in Belgium for a two-year assignment taking care of some of Grey Advertising's P&G (Proctor & Gamble?) business. Leigh says "very exciting to finally be heading into a truly international slot! I will be enjoying my recent promotion to account executive and my long-sought-after European life style!!"

Ann Ramsey Hill is working as a CPA in the Tax Department of Harcourt, Brace Jovanovich, Inc., in Orlando, FL. Last Memorial Day weekend, Ann and her husband, David, spent a wonderful time with Leslie Anderson Battle and Mike at Sawgrass, outside of Jacksonville. While there, they also saw Anne Baldwin Mann and Mike.

Katie Renaud is still alive, well and living in Alaska! However she was to be returning to D.C. in Sept. '84 for her brother's wedding and then returning to Detroit in November for her marriage to Cary Baldwin. She hoped to see some SBC buddies both times. Both she and Cary were going to be returning to Petersburg, AK.

From Houston, TX, Meg Richards Wiederseim sent an adorable picture of her two-month-old daughter with the two-month-old son of Mimi Borst Quillman.

Anne Riordan has become a property owner in Spokane, WA! She bought a condo which she moved into on St. Patrick's Day '84 and has enjoyed having her own place and decorating it. When she wrote in, Anne was planning a trip to Paris and London during the summer and was still enjoying work at the Bankruptcy Court.

Nancy Robinson Lindberg writes in that after "umpteens tries," she has been accepted to Georgetown U. Medical School!! Nancy was to start on Aug. 16, '84, and was thrilled at being back in the D.C. area but was going to be doing a lot of commuting up to Connecticut since Mike, her husband, is in his second year of residency at St. Francis Hospital in Hartford. Mary Lewis '76, who just finished up at the University of Louisville Medical School, is doing her internship and residency at St. Francis also, so Nancy gets to see her often.

Donna Roos is living in Williamsburg, VA, and is teaching riding and horsemanship in a new riding stable in Gloucester, VA. She has also been riding a little thoroughbred mare that she bought from SBC several years ago.

Carrie Ruda Clark and Jack moved from Leesburg, VA, to Alexandria and are enjoying the convenience of the subway and real neighborhood, especially since Johnson (John Robert IV) made his arrival Nov. 9, 1983.

Betsy Ryan is still in Atlanta working for Robinson-Humphrey, an investment banking firm. She has seen Catherine Taylor Moore and Liz Day and was in Eve Jackson's wedding. Betsy also spent a weekend in Hilton Head with Lisa Wray Longino's family — she and her sisters are all doing well.

Sallie Sexton McKenney was promoted in Oct. '83 from assistant manager to manager of Beaky's Records but would like to get out of retailing before "the headache of another Christmas season approaches." Sallie and Bob are looking for a house to buy, and besides that, their two cats take up what little spare time they have.

Lucy Smith Rogers is working as a bookkeeper in an office supply store in Houston which is owned by both her parents and managed by her mother, who is also an SBC alumna (Margaret Lotterhos Smith '54). Lucy saw Jeanne Many '79 in New Orleans in the spring of '84. She also enjoys the SBC parties which are held periodically, with the hopes that she will recognize a familiar face.

Debbie Snead Shrader is starting her fifth year in the Development Office at Sweet Briar as assistant director of annual giving. Tom is general counsel for First Colony Life Insurance Company in Lynchburg and is also a partner in the law firm of Sanzone and Shrader in Amherst.

Dru Springer Oswald and Harris had a son, Joseph Harris Oswald, Jr., August 27, 1983, and she writes that all is well.

Jessica Steinhice is in the Chattanooga, TN, area where she is working for a modest advertising agency doing typesetting and graphic arts.

Catherine Taylor Moore was sorry to have missed reunions last year, but it was one week before she got married, so.... She and Bob are living in his hometown, Augusta, GA, and are living in a renovated "chauffeur's cottage." They spent a week's vacation over the summer at Lake Tahoe and a second week at Sea Island, GA. A seminar in Atlanta last summer (bank business for Catherine) made it possible for Betsy Ryan, Cindy Dillard and Catherine to get together. Catherine also saw Cindy McKay, Nancy Hatch '79, Ann Yauger, Libby Freeman Goetz, Claire Cartwright Vaughan and Francie Root at festivities prior to Jane Lauderdale Armstrong's wedding. Catherine also keeps close ties with Lucy Eubank Peak '77 who lives in Franklin, VA.

Cindy Whitley was up in Stamford, CT, last summer visiting Jean Beard Barden and Bob in their 1739 house that they have been working on for the past few years. "Whitless" is still living in D.C. and still working in politics — fundraiser for the Republican Governor's Association. "Hopefully, though, this 'career' in politics is coming to an end soon." She "had" to attend the Republican National Convention in Dallas last August. After that she was going to be training her dog for professional competition, and had actually broken down to take tennis lessons. Cindy was also planning some canoeing/rafting trips for fall '84.

Leslie Wilkinson Brotman has been busy since the arrival of her daughter Elizabeth Ann on Thanksgiving Day, 1983! Then, June 1, 1984, Leslie, Sol and Elizabeth all left Baltimore, MD, and headed down to Jacksonville, FL, where Sol went into dental practice on the southside of the city. Leslie was planning on going back to work at The Luggage Shop as a buyer, and, at the time of this writing, was enjoying her "last days of leisure."

Betsy Wood taught hearing impaired and language delayed preschoolers in '83-'84 and was promoted to clinical supervisor of the Hearing Impaired Program at the UVa Speech and Hearing Center this past summer. She is supervising student teachers and other graduate students who work with the kids, as well as doing administrative work. Betsy says that the only excitement in her life has been visiting people — Barbara Clark McLaughlin '77 and her new daughter Sarah and Debbie Koss McCarthy '77 who also has a new addition, Alex. Carrington Brown Wise '76 has a new baby girl, Anne. Sue Pitler '79 is in D.C., so Betsy gets to see her often.

Lisa Wray Longino and George are still living and working in Dallas but their highlight of '84 is that they are building a very contemporary summer house in the North Georgia Mountains. Lisa came to Baltimore for a baby shower for Deb Davison Weidner and saw Maria Rixey Gamper, Mary Page Stewart and Mary Goodwin. Lisa and George were hoping to go to Italy in early '85.

Ann Yauger is still with AT&T, but after selling business phone and data systems for two years, she has switched to a staff position in advertising. Ann was in Jane Lauderdale Armstrong's wedding in March '84 and also reported that Claire Cartwright Vaughan and George were awaiting the birth of their first child last July/August. Ann also went to Kit Newman Detering's ('76) wedding last April in Houston. Ann mentioned that she saw Paula Brumm Hennessey '77 and Louise Aiken Calhoun along the beach and that the two of them were also expecting children. "All these kids!"

As for me, I spend most of my time trying to keep up with and after my two boys, Alex, 3½, and Andrew, born Sept. 7, 1983. But being centrally located in the "northeast corridor" I do get to see a lot of people from SBC. Last June, I was up in Rye, NY, for a "29½ Birthday" for Nancy White Bryant's ('79) husband G.B. where I also got to see Janet Myers Deans '77 and her husband Robbie, and Jean Beard Barden and Bob. Jean had just gotten back from Hong Kong, where she was for a month on business for Chemical Bank. Since Marianne Hutton Felch '79, her husband and two children moved to Baltimore, MD, from Larchmont, NY, last winter, I get to see them once a month, instead of once a year! Carey Johnson Fleming stopped by early one morning in May to tell me about her pregnancy and to check in on us. It was rushed, but great nonetheless. I also get to see Karen Bowers Lazar (married to David Nov. 10, 1984) quite often, as she is Alex's God-mother, and lives very close. Julie Pfautz Bodenstab was east from Cleveland for a weekend in August visiting her family and in-laws in Wilmington, DC, but she, Karen and I all got together one day for fittings for the dresses for Karen's wedding and then a lovely lunch spent catching up.

Rick, the children and I all went camping for a long weekend in mid-August — what an experience — but also had the sense to go on a short vacation without the kids, camping in New England for a week in late August! Besides working on the house, renovations and general maintenance, I keep busy with various projects, reupholstering chairs, and refinishing furniture, and have also been involved with organizing Newark Community Day (New Ark) which is held each September.

I want to thank you for all the great response with news about yourselves and others. Also thank you for your encouragement and appreciation. It all helps make my job a lot easier and enjoyable. I'd like to be able to sit down and write to many of you or just pick up the phone, catch up on new pregnancies, new jobs, or whatever is going, but... In the meantime, I hope you all continue to be well and greatly look forward to hearing about you next year!

1982

No notes were received from the Class Secretary. The following news was received in the Alumnae Office after the Secretary's deadline.

Frances Ruth Fowler was married to John R. Bauerle on June 2, 1984. After leaving SBC, Frances attended and graduated from the U. of Ga., as did her husband.

On June 29, Sarah Wright Davis married Mark Elliott Daniels in Wyckoff, NJ. Mary Kennedy (Molly) Davis '81 was her sister's maid of honor; Betty Bell, Jennifer Hebb, and Katherine Reynolds were among the bridesmaids. After a honeymoon in Hawaii, Sally and Mark will live in Mahwah. She is employed by the Chase Home Mortgage Corp.; Mark, a graduate of Lehigh U., is president of Lintech, Inc.

The engagement of Nancy Daugherty to Michael James Davidson was announced in July. Nancy works for Sotheby's, N.Y.C., and Michael, a West Point graduate, is an Army first lieutenant, stationed at Fort Carson, CO.

Wendi Lu Brunell married Steven Mark Plenge on Aug. 25, 1984. They spent a month-long honeymoon in Paris and the South of France and now live in Manhattan Beach, CA. Steven, a graduate of Cornell U. School of Hotel Administration, is the director of acquisitions for McDade and Shidler, Beverly Hills, CA.

Laura Noble was featured in an interview in a San Antonio, TX, newspaper article about debutantes.

Virginia Carabelli and Roberta Perillo stopped by the Alumnae Office and told us about their wine importing business, Monticello Mountain Wine Imports, Ltd., in Charlottesville.

In the Sweet Briar Tradition

The Annual Fund Committee of Sweet Briar College has announced a $1 million goal for unrestricted annual gifts from alumnae and parents for the 1984-85 Annual Fund as a fitting culmination to the Generations Campaign. This goal, when successfully met, will make Sweet Briar the first women's college in the South to receive unrestricted gifts at this level from alumnae and parents and one of a handful of colleges in the nation to receive annual support at this outstanding level.

In recognition of the importance of this goal, five donors, four alumnae joined by the parents of a current student, have established a $100,000 Incentive Gift which will be earned for the College only when the $1 million goal is reached.

The Five Incentive Donors are:

Jody Raines Brinkley '57

Mrs. Arthur S. Brinkley, Jr.
Richmond, Virginia

Serving as Fund Agent for her class, Jody joined her Reunion Gifts Chairman, Flo Barclay Winston, in providing leadership for a record-breaking 25th Reunion gift for their class. Now, as National Chairman for Reunion Gifts, she is providing leadership for ten Reunion classes in 1984-85. Jody serves as a member of the Sweet Briar Alumnae Executive Board.

Alice Cary Farmer Brown '59

Mrs. W. L. Lyons Brown, Jr.
Prospect, Kentucky

A member of the Sweet Briar Board of Overseers, Alice Cary serves as Chairman of the Annual Fund Committee. She has been a Fund Agent for her class, a member of the Alumnae Executive Board, and a member of her class reunion committee, which broke all previous records with their $72,597 25th Reunion Gift. She also serves as a member of the Boxwood Circle Committee.

Nancy Dowd Burton '46

Mrs. Robert M. Burton
Cincinnati, Ohio

Nancy is a former Chairman of the Alumnae Fund Committee and the first Chairman of the Boxwood Circle Committee. Hers was the first class to raise a record-breaking Reunion Gift for their 35th Reunion. Following her reunion year, she provided leadership for the next four years as National Chairman for Reunion Gifts. A recipient in fall 1984 of the Alumnae Association's Award for outstanding alumnae service, she currently serves as a member of the Sweet Briar Board of Overseers.

Lyn Dillard Grones '45

Mrs. Dow S. Grones
Virginia Beach, Virginia

Lyn has served since 1981 as Chairman of Planned Giving at Sweet Briar and is playing a major role in developing this important area of support. She is a member of the Alumnae Executive Board, a member of the Friends of the Library Board, and an ex-officio member of the Development Committee of the Boards of Directors and Overseers. She is the parent of Keedie '76 and Kathie '79.

Carol and Henry Groppe

Mr. and Mrs. E. Henry Groppe, Jr.
Parents of Laura '85
Houston, Texas

Under the guidance of Carol and Henry Groppe who serve as Co-Chairmen of the Parents Fund Committee, annual gifts from parents have grown significantly. This year in their dual role as incentive donors and Co-Chairmen for this committee, the Groppe's will be seeking to raise a Parents Fund of $100,000. Their daughter, Laura, is a senior at Sweet Briar, majoring in philosophy. Henry Groppe serves as a newly elected member of the Sweet Briar Board of Overseers.

Each of these people, in the Sweet Briar tradition, is providing thoughtful and deeply committed service and support for the College. Sweet Briar is grateful to them and is stronger because of them.

Indian Island in Amherst County by Peter W. Houck, M.D.

Rummaging around in an attic, one gets a mixture of feelings — curiosity, nostalgia, a sadness of bygone days. Exploring old musty boxes, hoping to find something of hidden value, one might promise that “someday I’ll get up here and organize all this stuff.”

That is how I got into writing Indian Island.

I have been rooting around Amherst County for the past few years, some hunting here, a little fishing there, and had heard legends about the Indian descendants living in the area, known as Issues. I was curious about them and tried my best to extract them from their “musty box in the attic” and to see if there was a shred of hidden value.

It wasn’t easy at first. In addition to not being a writer (I’ve been a practicing doctor in the area for 12 years), nobody seemed to want to talk about it, especially the people themselves. It seems other writers had blundered in before and made a mess of it. Finally, after many dead ends, I got some help from two valuable sources. The first was John Haraughty, the spiritual leader at the old Indian Mission; the other was Dr. Catherine Seaman, anthropology professor at Sweet Briar.

From that point on, I quit going down blind alleys and began to piece together the story of these people, their genealogies, their link to native Indians in the county and even deeper. The key, I learned, to the foundation of their culture was to research the ancient Indian history of the land before the white man came. For that I had to find old maps, documents and historical notes from libraries in Charlottesville and Richmond.

One of the many pearls found in the ocean of material was the link of these people to Sweet Briar College. There were previous professors like Bertha Wailes, who had talked to and written about them. The son of Arthur Gray, one of the original trustees of the College, was the ministerial student who started the Indian Mission, St. Paul’s, in 1908. There were Sweet Briar students down through the years who spent time, money and energy in working with the children at the Mission. With one exception, the faculty and students were a special blessing in helping the Indian people.

One Sweet Briar professor, in 1926, wrote a damaging book about their social history. It was poorly researched, inaccurate and perpetrated many of the gossipy stories about them through the next half century. It certainly did not undo all of the good work by others, but it left a stigma which precluded any social growth and search for a true identity.

Indian Island is an attempt to resurrect their past in such a way that in the future their culture can be nurtured. It may take years for them to even want to look back; many have moved away from Amherst County to escape their legacy. Since the book was written, I have been told by Mr. Haraughty that a new pride is beginning to emerge, and there is talk of establishing a museum in the old Mission building.

The book is divided into five sections, the first devoted to the prehistory of the Indians in Amherst County and the Piedmont (I was surprised to find that the prehistory of central Virginia had never been researched). The next section describes the first settlement of White-Indian families, and then there is a section on the years when the people in the settlement were tormented. The establishment of the Mission and that period in their growth is next and finally there is an account of their road to recovery. There is a glossary of Indian idioms and interviews with the people themselves.

The design from the cover shows one arrow pointing north, another south, and the other east-west. This sign identified the Piedmont Indians as separate from their Cherokee-Algonquin neighbors. It said they were Monacan.

From Mt. San Angelo: Stories, Poems & Essays Edited by William Smart

Sweet Briar and Mt. San Angelo have been neighbors since long before the College’s founding. In her diary, Daisy Williams often mentions riding her pony across to visit her Uncle Sydney. We read later, in The Story of Sweet Briar College by Martha Lou Lemmon Stohman, of students in the early days tramping over the fields to celebrate Thanksgiving with the Walker family and singing around a huge bonfire.

This symbiotic relationship continues today, as the current occupants of Mt. San Angelo — poets, writers, artists and musicians at the Virginia Center for the Creative Arts — frequently interrupt their treasured solitude to exchange visits and ideas with the College community.

William Smart, director of the VCCA and Associate Professor of English at Sweet Briar, has edited a recently published anthology of stories, poems and essays written by VCCA residents. The book is unique in being the first ever to come out of an “artists’ colony.”

Although the names of some of the contributors to From Mt. San Angelo may be unfamiliar to readers, their work has appeared in all the leading literary journals, and among them they have won all the major literary awards that America has to offer, from the Pulitzer Prize and the National Book Award to the PEN/Faulkner and O. Henry Awards.

Sweet Briar may take some parochial pride in the inclusion in this collection of “Captain Farley’s Fireflies,” a poem by Jan Haagensen, a 1968 graduate of the College. Miss Haagensen received her M.F.A. from the Writers’ Workshop, U. of Iowa, and a Ph.D. from the University of Connecticut. At Connecticut she won the Wallace Stevens Prize in poetry. Her first collection, Like a Diamondback in the Trunk of a Witness’s Buick, was published by Cleveland State University Poetry Center in 1977.

SWEET BRIAR WILDFLOWERS R

Article and photographs

Columbine

Did you know that Sweet Briar has 13 species of native orchids? I have photographed that many over the years, though I should be hard pressed to find some of them on demand. Wildflowers have a way of appearing, disappearing, and sometimes reappearing in another place. Actually my number does not take into account another species, the Green Adder's Mouth Orchid (Malaxis unifolia), which I have not seen but which is listed by Dr. Ernest P. Edwards, Duberg Professor of Biology at Sweet Briar. Dr. Edwards and especially his wife, Mabel T. Edwards, have pointed out to me many of the approximately two hundred wildflowers I have photographed on the Sweet Briar property. Mrs. Edwards has made careful field notes of regular trips to the far reaches of the Sweet Briar acreage and probably knows more than anyone else what is blooming where — or at least when to start looking for a certain plant.

But if you look for those orchids, don't expect to find a Cattleya, the florist's specialty, or even the smaller Cymbidium. The showiest of the Sweet Briar orchids are the Lady's Slippers (Cypripedium) — the pink (C. acaule) and the yellow (C. calceolus). Even these are not easy to find. The orchid called Showy (Orchis spectabilis) is lovely with its magenta hood and white lip and spur, but actually not nearly as "showy," because it is smaller. Others are even less prepossessing, both in appearance and in name. You might not expect much from something called Downy Rattlesnake Plantain (Goodyera pubescens) or Puttyroot (Aplectrum hyemale), and indeed the blooms are small, but a hand lens reveals the orchid characteristics. Incidentally, the Rattlesnake Plantain takes that name from the white network of leaf markings, which might suggest a snake's skin, and Puttyroot is said to refer to the use of the glutinous matter in the corm to repair broken pottery in early days. The Crane-fly Orchid (Tipularia discolor) really does look like a crane-fly — or the pictures I have seen of it.

Coralroot, another kind of orchid, is represented by three species — two in the genus Corallorhiza, Wister's (C. wisteriana) and Autumn (C. odontorhiza), and another, Crested (H. spicata), in the genus Hexalectris. These three are saprophytic — not manufacturing chlorophyll, but living off the decayed matter on the forest floor and having no green leaves.

The Slender Ladies' Tresses (Spiranthes gracilis) is common, though its small size might cause it to be overlooked. The scientific name, meaning spiral flowers, describes the flower stalk, and the common name, suggesting plaited hair, may be appropriate too, though some think that "tresses" here is a corruption of "traces," the belt worn by medieval ladies.

Finding the Small Woodland Orchis (Habenaria clavellata) may take you farther afield, probably to a stream bank in Fern Woods.

Lily-leaved Twayblade (Liparis lilifolia) with its mauve, translucent lip, is often unnoticed. It seems to blend into the background of the woods' dappled light. Perhaps the rarest of the orchids I have photographed on the Sweet Briar property is the Whorled Pogonia (Isotria verticillata) with its exaggerated sepals looking rather like space antennae.

There are many other wildflowers at Sweet Briar. One of the earliest is the Skunk Cabbage (Symplocarpus foetidus), found in swampy places. Neither beautiful nor fragrant, it is nevertheless extremely interesting. A rapid increase in the metabolism of this strange Arum helps it produce the heat needed to allow the fleshy spadix of flowers, protected by a hood, to push up even through the snow. The leaves grow large later. The foul smell apparently attracts flies for pollination.

Another early bloomer is decidedly more attractive — the Hepatica or Liverleaf (Hepatica americana), a member of the Buttercup Family which gets its name from the lobed shape of its leaves and perhaps also from their liver color after surviving the winter. New green leaves come after the bloom. The sepals, which pass for petals to the untrained eye, may be white, or pink or, most likely here, a pale lavender.

Lady's Slipper

Another member of this family is the Marsh Marigold (Caltha palustris). It does indeed grow in marshy places, but marigold, in the garden sense, it is not. Its golden yellow color reminds us of the common flower that gives the family its name — in English (Buttercup) and Latin (Ranunculus to Ranunculaceae).

Two other family members have their own colors and less conventional flower shapes: Columbine (Aquilegia canadensis) dangles its delicately shaped red and yellow bloom that looks like five spurred flowers fused into one; Monkshood (Aconitum uncinatum), a deep blue or purple, has an irregular flower, hooded by the large upper sepal and blooming late in the summer.

A member of the Poppy Family, Bloodroot (Sanguinaria canadensis) is among the first wildflowers of the season. The red-orange color of its sap gave the plant its name. The stem of the white flower is at first tightly wrapped by a growing leaf, which may eventually surround the bloom. Usually tucked away in a more remote part of the campus, last spring Bloodroot appeared on the edge of the entrance drive.

A walk through the Carry Nature Sanctuary, which includes part of the woods on each side of this drive, may reveal several members of the Lily Family. Large-flowered Trillium (Trillium grandiflorum), that flower of threes — leaves, sepals, and petals — has been found there. At least one kind of Bellwort (Uvularia perfoliata), with drooping pale yellow bell-shaped flowers and a stem that seems to pass through the leaves, grows there too. A stem with two whorls of green leaves and dangling greenish-yellow blooms with dark red or brown curving stigmas signifies the Indian Cucumber Root (Mediola virginiana) which gets its English name from a rootstock somewhat resembling a cucumber.

Also in the Sanctuary one can find the Wild Geranium (Geranium maculatum), a pink to purple, rather showy, regular flower, whose other name, Cranesbill, refers to the long beak of the fruit. Other members of the Geranium Family, less conspicuous and often weeds from Europe, such as the Dove's-foot (a reference to the shape of the leaf Cranesbill (G. molle) or Storksbill (Erodium cicutarium) may be found in lawns and roadway edges on the campus.

The rainy summer of 1984 apparently provided just the moisture needed for abundant production of Jewelweed or Touch-me-not (Impatiens). Flowers often seem to have common names describing both the flowering and fruiting stages, as the irregular suspended jewel-like blossoms of the orange Spotted (I. capensis) or the yellow Pale (I. pallida) Jewelweed and the ripe capsule of the Touch-me-not, which bursts at a touch. The juice of crushed Jewelweed is said to relieve the itching of poison ivy.

Whorled Pogonia

Turtleheads (Chelone glabra) (the flowers really do look like turtle heads, though they are white or sometimes pink) and the pinkish lavender Square-stemmed Monkey-flower (Mimulus ringens) (it bears a fancied resemblance to a monkey's face), both members of the Snapdragon Family, also like a wet situation.

Down by the West Dell Pond you might find the white Foamflower (Tiarella cordifolia), sometimes called False Miterwort, and the May-apple (Podophyllum peltatum) with its almost hidden nodding white flower growing in the fork of two large leaves. If you come later you may be lucky enough to see the fruit, which looks more like a lemon than an apple. Here, too, the Cut-leaved Toothwort (Dentaria laciniata) grows, as well as in other places on campus.

The Spotted Wintergreen (Chimaphila maculata), which might better be described as "striped leaved," is found throughout the woods, while another species, Pipsissewa (C. umbellata) with its whorls of shiny green leaves, is more elusive. Both have nodding waxy-looking white blooms, the Striped Wintergreen with a ring of yellowish anthers and the Pipsissewa with rosy anthers.

In mid-spring there are often masses of low-growing Bluets (Houstonia caerulea) along the Sweet Briar entrance drive, and before they have finished blooming, clumps of Fire Pinks (Silene virginica) add their long-lasting splashes of brilliant red color. Another much less conspicuous Pink, the Deptford Pink (Dianthus armeria), of European origin, is now a well-established garden escape, found in the pastures and, at one time, at the edge of the tennis courts. Close inspection reveals that its small rosy bloom, easily overlooked, is spotted with white.

The Common Blue Violet (Viola papilionacea) is found many places, often making an especially pretty display with a mixture of the blue and white or Confederate forms in the small dell behind Patterson House. The Marsh Blue Violet (V. cucullata) may edge the small stream that runs into the Dell Pond, but one has to go farther afield to find the showier Birdfoot or Pansy Violet (V. pedata), not to be confused with the widespread Field Pansy (V. rafinesquii), more modest in size and color.

One is likely to think of Gentians as blue, but two found at Sweet Briar are white or green and white: the Striped Gentian (Gentian villosa), which at least has a characteristic bottle Gentian shape, and the low-growing Obolaria (Obolaria virginica), whose dense grayish-green leaves and dull whitish blossoms may be easily overlooked in the leaf litter of the woods floor. Still another member of the Gentian Family, the Rose-pink (Sabatia angularis), lives up to the color of its English name but adds a yellow star in the center. The Latin species name refers to its four-angled stem, a characteristic usually associated with the Mint Family.

The Mints, most of which are considered weeds, are well represented on the campus. One year between mowings Henbit (Lamium amplexicaule) gave a rosy-purple blush to the usually green sward near the willows at the Sweet Briar entrance. A patch of Purple Dead-nettle (L. Purpureum) has often popped up in the Post Office dooryard. Less well-kept grass almost anywhere may be full of Gill-over-the-ground (Glechoma hederacea), but other Mints may be more remote, as the showier Downy Skullcap (Scutellaria incana) or the inconspicuous Bluecurls (Trichostema dichotomum) with their fascinating long curled stamens. There are too many other mints to mention them all.

One representative of the Bluebell Family is the Southern Harebell (Campanula divaricata) with its delicate pale blue flowers, notable for the curled tips of the corolla lobes and exaggeratedly long styles. It may be found on the road to the Monument, dangling its bells from the bank, or along the trail beyond the Boat House by the Sweet Briar Lake. Some other members of this family are in the Lobelia Subfamily and seem, on the whole, to like wet places. At one time Great Lobelia (Lobelia siphilitica) grew down by the Lake and Downy Lobelia (L. puberula), at the edge of a stream near the old sewage plant. The blooms of even the commonest Lobelia, Indian-tobacco (L. inflata), though pale and tiny, still show the typical Lobelia shape: two narrow lobes above and three wider ones below. The swollen base of the flower, which becomes the seedpod, shows why this species is called inflata.

The familiar shape of the flowers of the Pea Family may vary in size from the showy Butterfly Pea (Clitoria mariana), found on the entrance drive before it was so well manicured, to the individual pea blooms in the round head of Red Clover (Trifolium pratense) — or any of the other Clovers for that matter, right down to the minute yellow Least Hop Clover (T. dubium). Most of the Clovers seem to be aliens, but they are widespread.

Squawroot

Some of the plants don't manufacture chlorophyll, have no green leaves or stems, and depend on nutrients from other plants. One of the commonest of these at Sweet Briar is the Indian Pipe (Monotropa uniflora), whose waxy, translucent, nodding flowers, white or pink, raise their heads as they mature to hold their seeds aloft. Since they are saprophytic, they are often found in the woods, though the exact spot and time may not be predictable. Several years ago there was a remarkable stand of them on the edge of the woods almost across the road from the Wailes Center. Less common, Pinesap (M. hypopithys) seems almost a reddish or yellowish version of the Indian Pipe, but with multiple flowers. Since Sweet Briar has many Beech trees, Beechdrops (Epifagus virginiana), which are parasitic on the roots of Beech trees, can often be found in our woods, though the trick is to find a clump of these delicate, branched plants which are fresh enough to have an almost peppermint candy stripe. Another parasite, Squawroot (Conopholis americana) often chooses the roots of Oaks. With its low-growing, thick, amber-colored stalk, it somewhat resembles a pine cone.

Space has run out, and I have not mentioned Queen Anne's Lace, Black-eyed Susan, Goldenrods, Asters, Milkweeds, Morning-glories, Thistles, Dandelion, Chicory, and dozens of other wildflowers or weeds, your classification depending on your orientation.

I must, however, say a word about the Sweet Briar Rose or more properly Sweetbrier Rose (Rosa eglanteria). Only in the loosest sense is it a wildflower. A native of Europe, it has widely escaped from cultivation, but as reported in the fall 1982 Alumnae Magazine, only the bushes still cultivated were known at Sweet Briar until Tom Hartman of the Sweet Briar Philosophy Department discovered two bushes on the edge of the pasture, near the old entrance road to the campus. The Sweetbrier, which has smaller blooms than most pink-flowered wild roses, has two other notable characteristics: its foliage also has the rose fragrance and its leaves are doubly serrate or toothed.

Sweet Briar is fortunate to own over 3,300 acres of land — some used for the campus itself, some farmed, and some kept in a natural state. Even those who haven't explored very much of the acreage have probably admired the beauty of the entrance road, but what a great deal they have missed if they haven't enjoyed the wildflowers hidden away in woods and fields.

My thanks go to the Edwardses, to Dr. Elizabeth Sprague, Professor of Botany, Emeritus, who has tried to teach me a little botany in the field, and to Gertrude Prior '29 and Mary Hughes Vaughan Blackwell Hon. '28, who have explored some of the Sweet Briar acreage with me. I recommend that you find a friend to do the same with you. □

THE EWALD SYMPOSIUM
APRIL 17-20, 1985

A Birthday Party for Bach, Handel and Scarlatti

by John R. Shannon
Professor of Music
Chairman, 1985 Ewald Symposium

entire Handelian ballet. On Friday evening a joint concert by Fenner Douglass, organist, and Penelope Jensen, soprano, with other instrumentalists is scheduled. And finally, on Saturday night, there will be a joint performance by one of the most brilliant of young harpsichordists, John Gibbons, and perhaps the world's greatest recorder player, Frans Brueggen.

In the last twenty years, the musical literature of the Baroque period has captured the attention of wider and wider audiences, and the popularity of this music now rivals that of such 19th century giants as Beethoven, Tchaikovsky, Brahms.

Three hundred years ago this year, three major composers of the late Baroque, Johann Sebastian Bach, Georg Friedrich Handel, and Domenico Scarlatti, were born, and the worldwide celebration of those births promises to be one of the most splendid in the history of music.

The Ewald Scholars Symposium for 1985 will be devoted to a celebration of these three birthdays, and the symposium will bring to the campus performers, instrument makers, and scholars whose work is in the forefront of a new musical way of thinking.

Sweet Briar College is hosting the symposium in conjunction with The Southeastern Historical Keyboard Society, a group formed several years ago to address some new issues as they affect keyboard music. The sessions during the day will be devoted to papers, demonstrations, and performances. Many of these will come from the society itself. In the evenings a dazzling series of concerts is scheduled. On Wednesday evening, April 17, there will be a performance of Bach's Brandenburg Concerti by the Ars Musica Orchestra, a group which specializes in authentic 18th century performance. The program the next evening combines another such orchestral group, The Concert Royal, and The New York Baroque Dance Group in a performance which includes an Recordings of such composers as Handel, Bach, Telemann, and Vivaldi are widely available, and much of the repertory played on public radio is drawn from this era. Recently a survey determined that a minor creation of a minor Baroque composer, The Canon of Johann Pachelbel, is one of the most widely recognized compositions from the repertory of serious music. We now get married to marches of Purcell; we revel in Messiah performances at Christmas; and we introduce Masterpiece Theater by an obscure march by an even more obscure composer of the French Baroque. Music of this period has become very important in our 20th century lives.

The general public rarely sees music as an academic discipline in which issues of importance are regularly debated. Music is regarded more often as recreation or an entertainment, and that is in itself proper. But music, particularly as it should be studied in the context of the liberal arts, is an important index of culture. It is a means by which the history of the past is revealed, and it often was (and for that matter still is) one of the most obvious outward manifestations of the inner reality of an era. For instance, the inner nature of 19th century cultural and intellectual life is best studied and most clearly revealed in the music of such composers as Berlioz, Chopin, Liszt, and Wagner. Their music reveals the aspirations of their world, the values dear to their age, and the place of the 19th century individual in relationship to his wider environment.

The music of the 19th century, which has constituted so much of what is played in the concerts in our day, was a repertory passed directly to us from the past. (One might ask: does this fact in itself not tell us something about ourselves?) One of my teachers, for instance, had been in class with one giant of late 19th century German composition, Max Reger. We understand that repertory because the tradition which passed it to us is a tradition to which we are very close. The repertory of the Baroque, however, went into a severe eclipse when taste rapidly changed at the end of the 18th century. The music of Bach was largely unknown, even within inner circles of sophisticated musicians, until Mendelssohn's revival of it in the 1830's. Handel's reputation hinged largely on one work, Messiah, and few of his other compositions were ever performed. Much of the music of the period was quite literally lost. But equally as important and disastrous was the loss of the tradition of performance upon which the validity of so much of the music depended. Revival performances of this repertory normally took on strong romantic flavor, and the artistic result was often as appealing as hearing a performance of Shakespeare in modernized English.

The work of the scholar of Baroque music has been directed to two tasks: first, unearthing and editing the musical scores themselves, and second, providing clues to the nature of this lost performance tradition. The first task is now largely completed, and, despite such welcomed events as the recent appearance of a new manuscript of Bach's organ works at Yale, we can look forward to fewer and fewer discoveries of unknown Baroque music. The second task, however, is on the cutting edge of musical issues in our day. Unfortunately, the 18th century lacked the electronic technology we take for granted. There was simply no way to record the infinite nuances that go into producing a musical style. And, in fact, the Baroque era recognized at least distinct concurrent musical styles! Many musicians of the day left textbooks or manuals on performance, and from these we can discern much. Luckily the painters of earlier times often recorded events they portrayed very accurately, and hence we can learn much iconographically. Interior evidence within the scores themselves provides many clues, and the extant examples of instruments of the time provide many more. Work on the restoration of instrumental resources is now the most exciting arena for the performer of Baroque music.

With the exception of those of an electronic nature, the musical instruments we use today are largely products of the 19th century. Central to the musical life of that century was the public concert hall seating several thousand persons. The goals of instrument makers of that century were to produce, on the one hand, powerful sounds which could adequately fill large physical spaces and, on the other, to use the fruits of the industrial revolution to produce time and time again absolutely predictable machines for making music. Neither of these goals was similar to the goals of 18th century instrument makers.

There has been a movement in the last fifteen years, to restore Baroque music to appropriate Baroque musical resources. The thesis is this: composers of all periods have written their compositions with certain sonorities and textures clearly in mind. For the music they wrote, these textures and sonorities were (and remain) the best conceivable ones. In fact the musical composition and the musical resources were two sides of the same coin. To perform a composition of Bach or Handel on musical resources of later times is to remove an entire dimension from its musical conception. The argument that if Bach had had the modern Steinway piano he would have written for it is well taken. But the corollary to it: that he would have written different music than that which he wrote for the harpsichord, is equally true. What is not true, at least from the new way of thinking about musical performance, is that since the Steinway piano evolved from the harpsichord, it therefore must be superior to it in the performance of Bach's music.

MUSIC LOVERS' REUNION

The Ewald Symposium has created a marvelous program for all music lovers. Whether they were music majors, work in the music world, or simply find themselves drawn to music-related events, all are invited to share this occasion and this common interest.

The Alumnae Office is enthusiastically planning a "mini reunion" of alumnae who fall into any of the above categories. Registration will begin Wednesday afternoon, April 17, and the opening reunion reception will be at 5 o'clock. Reunion registrants will participate in all the activities planned by the Symposium Committee and, in addition, will have several panels composed of alumnae who are doing something interesting in the world of music.

When you receive your Ewald Symposium brochure, please fill out the reservation form and return it as soon as possible. If for some reason you do not receive a brochure, call the Alumnae Office (804/381-6131) and one will be sent you.

This will be a unique and rewarding experience during the four wonderful days, April 17-20.

paintings of the masters. At the same time, instrument makers devote endless hours to studying the old instruments, learning their secrets, and making new harpsichords, gambas, flutes, and organs in the tradition of Baroque instrument makers. A new school of performers has appeared who see these instruments not as curious museum pieces, but as the unique means by which a musical tradition can again be brought to life.

The Ewald Symposium this year is directed to everyone interested in music and is not addressed solely to the professional, the performer, or the historian. We hope to be able to communicate something of the sophistication of Baroque music to the entire audience and, at the same time, to have the opportunity to discuss a most important trend in the musical life of our day. In doing so we should be able to capture something of the spirit and life of the Baroque. Music of the Baroque was music for celebration. It is going to be a wonderful birthday party. Please do come and help us celebrate!

There is now an entire craft devoted to the restoration of 18th century musical instruments. Major museums now have expert musical curators, who care for and restore old instruments with the same concern that their colleagues approach

The Reverend Myron B. Bloy, Jr. 1926-1985

The Rev. Myron B. Bloy, Jr., chaplain and associate professor of religion at Sweet Briar College since 1979, died in his sleep January 27 in Washington, D.C., where he was leading a conference at the College of Preachers at the National Cathedral.

A funeral service was held February 2 in Newton, Mass. and memorial services in the Sweet Briar chapel on January 29 and February 5.

Nationally known as an Episcopal churchman, civil rights activist and educator, Mr. Bloy was active in the religious life of Amherst and Lynchburg, as well as the colleges in the Central Virginia area. He sought to develop a sense of community on the Sweet Briar campus, to foster closer relationships among the white and black churches of the region and to involve students in actively seeking ways to achieve peace and end hunger in the world.

Mr. Bloy is survived by his widow, the former Caroline Kuhn; three grown children, Michael, Peter and Sarah; and a brother, Frederick G. Bloy, of Grosse Pointe, Mich.

“What about me?” Those three, very simple words will always have a prophetic sound in my ears, a prophecy of both promise and dream. They also marked one of the best moments of my life, and happily I knew it immediately for what it was — so often we do not. And the moment led to personal and professional consequences of great value.

It was spring, 1979. I was telephoning from Sweet Briar College, as I had done on previous occasions, as so many college presidents have done under similar circumstances of searching for a college chaplain. I was telephoning Mike Bloy, President of the National Institute of College Ministries, to ask for recommendations. To my surprise and total delight, he responded, “What about me?” It was serendipity beyond compare. Never, never had I dared believe that Mike could be lured away from his beloved Newton, from Cambridge, from Brookline. All of these had been so much a part of his life and work. So many were dependent upon his staying right there and doing all the things he was doing so well for so many.

We quickly arranged a visit to Virginia and a meeting with the Sweet Briar Church and Chapel Committee. Everyone responded as I had. Mike, Caroline and Mattie moved into Lancaster House.

It was, in fact, a fairly simple move for Mike. In one way or another he had devoted most of his ministry to college students and campuses, to the interplay of religion and intellectual life, which was the title of the publication he was editing at the time of his death. Mike loved the duality of action and thought; he was proficient in both. If the move to Sweet Briar was easy for him, it had a profound effect on the College. Soon there was action on many fronts: student voluntarism was revived after a long dormancy; study groups met each other coming in and out of Lancaster House; regional intercollegiate activity was given a new dimension as numerous groups from nearby colleges began frequent meetings to examine current social and political questions.

Some — left confused by the pace — felt Mike was becoming “issue-oriented,” even a “one-issue person.” Had they put a time-frame on that observation, it might have been accurate. Whatever the most important issue was, today or this week, Mike was there, helping the rest of us grapple with it, intelligently, passionately — but above all on the basis of sound information.

Mike was almost equally busy on the Academic side. He was named an Associate Professor. He taught a variety of courses, stepping in when needed to fill a gap or adding new areas of study to the curriculum when that was possible. He also brought a new dimension to the Sunday worship services, a dimension of close personal touch, a dimension of shared experiences. His sermons were best delivered while standing at the head of the center aisle, or from within the aisle itself. I occasionally felt he was almost sitting in a chair in our midst, talking with us, upon occasion even “winging” it, but never delivering a lesson from on high.

In short, he practiced — he preached — he taught — he wrote — he did — he organized people and he led organizations — and his intellectual contributions matched his religious leadership. But all of this fails to reveal what Mike was to me and to so many at Sweet Briar and elsewhere. There was so much more.

Mike was an extraordinary human being who, in his every encounter, left an indelible mark on the other party. This I learned as he became my friend, my colleague, my confessor, my inspiration to do more. My best memories are of Mike, flying across campus on his bicycle, pursued by Mattie, stopping for a quick word about shared concerns or shared delights; or sailing across the waters off Little Deer Island when the wind was so light that only conversation was left; or in a mixed doubles game on the tennis court when his fierce and frequent poaching dismayed Caroline and led to another kind of conversation. What bound us together? What bound Mike to many, many others? Never was he inhospitable to a person, although frequently he would cast off a poor idea.

Not long ago I found answer in a quotation: “a sense of God, and of tragedy and of humor.” Mike brought with him a constant questioning of life, a constant hunger for something better, and above all a sense of not being alone. Surely this is what God intended when he gave us freedom and freedom of choice.

Mike and I shared the tragedy of some small broken dreams, failed undertakings, but they only gave us the ability to enjoy more fully the ones that were achieved. The greatest tragedy we — and all of us — shared, however, was his going too soon. Too many things were unfinished; too many unrealized dreams were still his dreams for us. Once more we were reminded that the tolling bell tolls for all of us.

Finally, Mike still managed to remain true to the Eleventh Commandment, “Thou shalt not take thyself too damn seriously.” This was his saving grace, one he willingly shared. Surely, again, this was as God wanted it and surely God smiled.

These things combined in one man rendered easier for all of us the search for understanding. We found it in Mike. And when he went, I heard anew the words of the Prophet: “They that wait upon the Lord shall renew their strength; they shall mount up with wings as eagles; they shall run and not be weary; and they shall walk, and not faint.” □

ENDOWMENT FUND GROWS

by Peter V. Daniel, Vice-President and Treasurer

The fiscal posture of Sweet Briar College is healthy and this is evidenced through the tables and graphs following. We continue to increase all the fund balances of the College. The most significant growth occurred in the Endowment Fund which had a book value increase of $2,830,000, of which $1,556,000 was contributions through gifts and bequests. The market value of the Endowment Fund was $27,167,000 on June 30, 1984, and the book value was $23,170,000 on the same date. Total assets were $56,554,000, a fine increase of $4,400,000 over the previous year.

In connection with capital projects, the conversion of the Refectory to a multi-purpose art gallery, an art library, faculty offices, and facilities for the History of Art Department and Archeology has been completed. We are grateful to all those who assisted in this project, especially our benefactors. The new facility has been well received, and will prove to be a great asset in the future.

Our most pressing concern at this time is enrollment, which is of great concern to all private colleges. We are confident that by having our priorities directed toward this issue we will not experience declines that would affect our programs. This will, however, require the cooperation and effort of all sectors of the College.

Again, Sweet Briar College continues to be strong financially, and all indications are that we will be able to maintain that financial strength.

Cabbage Patch at the Briar Patch

Jack Wilson, son of Rebecca P. Wilson '85 of Monroe, Va.

by Byrd W. Stone '56
Associate Professor and Chairman
Department of Education

Cabbage Patch, Transformer, Premie, Strawberry Shortcake, My Little Pony, Rainbow Brite...If the reader of this article happens to be over 40, romance in life may not be over, but awareness that the words just noted do not refer to life on a farm may well be lacking. Rather, they are the hottest items in children's toys, and one has to be in constant contact with young children to fully appreciate the part they play in the life of a four or five year old. To work with young children today and be unaware of Transformer and Premies would be very difficult indeed.

At the Sweet Briar Nursery School and Kindergarten, college students interested in learning about young children come in daily contact with the preschool vernacular of the day. By the end of a semester they are well versed in My Little Pony and the Cabbage Patch, and not just because Sweet Briar has a rural location!

Sweet Briar students who elect Education 207 and 208 (The Pre-school Child), or Education 309 or 310 (Advanced Nursery School and Kindergarten Practice), or the more concentrated Winter Term offering (Early Childhood Education), spend from four to six hours a week during the regular semester, or 15 hours per week during the Winter Term, actually observing and working with the 35 or more children enrolled in the campus nursery school and kindergarten.

With this daily contact, a lecture-discussion each week, one of the latest texts on early childhood and a variety of assignments including the planning and implementing of real lessons, the students learn what makes children act the way they do, and in learning this, develop a better understanding of themselves and others.

They learn that childhood is not all fun and games, that children can have problems too, and that these problems are usually more serious than the lack of a Saturday night date!

They learn that children can be irritating, and that it's not wrong to feel annoyed with them just because the object of the irritation is a cute little kid. This may well stand them in good stead years from now when they have momentary negative feelings about their own children and are overcome with guilt because of feeling that way.

They learn that children are funny and lovable human beings (most of the time!), and not just miniature adults with whom they are afraid to be left alone. As the year progresses, many of the students admit that they were scared to death of children until they worked with those in the campus school.

What does a Sweet Briar student find after making the decision to sign up for Education 207 or one of the other courses mentioned above? It's a long way from filling in little circles on her registration scan sheet to walking into the low brick building at 8 Elijah Road.

The structure, which was bricked in only two years ago, was remodelled in 1972 to fit the expanding needs of the education department. It was named the Crawford Education Building in honor of Miss Lucy Crawford, a beloved professor of philosophy and education at Sweet Briar in the 40s and 50s. Entering through the front door, the student finds a room which appears to be a fairly typical kindergarten classroom — colorful, chaotic and cacophonous. There are at least six or seven different activities going on simultaneously, including drawing with magic markers, painting on a double-sided easel, mass production of "snowflakes," various board games and puzzles, reading in the library corner and the construction of elaborate structures to house an ample supply of trucks, cars and various Fisher Price figures.

Three children at one end of the room appear to be "plugged in" to something, with a mass of cords and blue earphones on their heads. Is this the new telephone system which Peter V. Daniel raves about? No wonder there are so many complaints! For that matter, no wonder Sweet Briar stays in the black financially. No wonder AT&T threw in the towel!

Looking more closely, one can see that these wee people are actually plugged into a record player and are carefully following along with the record with the books in their laps. A small figure attired in a crinoline, à la the 1950s, pulled up under her arms and another on her head wanders into the room, a scuzzy looking "baby" with hair standing on end held carelessly in her arms. "I can't find a husband," she mourns when questioned by one of the student teachers, who is trying unsuccessfully not to laugh. Another student teacher tries in vain to interest some of the kindergarten boys in at least becoming engaged to the nurseryschooler in distress, but the unanimous response is, "Yucch, NO!"

Two firemen and an astronaut whip through the room, but little attention is paid to them other than by a teacher who suggests they return to the other room if they are going to run in the building. Of course, they are not allowed to run during free play time in the other room either, but that will be the nursery school teacher's problem!

Against the wall near the telephone operators, another type of activity is going on. Between an Eskimo and a penguin holding up a calendar and an orange cardboard "jar" which notes the name of the cookie-passer for the day, stands a putty-colored work station holding a color monitor, a Dot Matrix Printer and an Apple IIe computer!

With a student teacher standing by, two children are watching the monitor anxiously as they type in various numbers or letters. A correct response is rewarded by a smiling face on the teacher and the monitor. Five correct answers elicit fireworks, flashing colors all over the screen. Could this be learning? It looks like too much fun!

As one child turns to say something to the teacher, another little bottom slides into the chair in front of the computer and a new game is started. For some reason, the children rarely fight for a place in front of the Apple. They just reach over and punch the keys rather than the usurper, or tell him which key to push. The only time an argument might ensue is when one child is so excited with the answer he just knows is right that he gets impatient with the child controlling the key-computer just does not satisfy their social needs.

"Disk drive," "monitor," "peripherals," "floppy disks," "software," "Press RETURN"....these are all part of the preschool vernacular of today. For the few Sweet Briar students who have not yet made contact with a computer, this comes as a great shock. They are quickly given a mini-course in computer, taught by directions, posted on the wall above the work station, and by the five-year-old experts! More often than one would like to admit, the teachers have to ask a child how to enter a game or which keys to push, for each company's software has just enough differences to make them difficult to remember from week to week, at least for anyone over five!

Block building (a future Frank Lloyd Wright, perhaps?), easel painting (Picasso?), housekeeping, firefighting and many other activities are readying these children for whatever life may bring.

In both classrooms, many methods and materials are used to give both college students and children a maximum of experiences. Student teachers are urged to try new ideas with the children and to use the Amherst and Lynchburg communities as resources in teaching (who is ever going to forget the letter "P" when she has been taken to a "Pizza Hut" for pizza?!). Also, because of Sweet Briar's spacious campus, there are many opportunities to use the campus and its facilities as a resource when working with the children. Each college student working at the campus school has different strengths and knowledge. This, plus the very great amount of individual attention given to the children, is considered to be one of the school's major assets.

Cabbage Patch Dolls are not software, Transformers don't drive disks, and if one presses RETURN, one will not get Strawberry Shortcake. However, whether college student or nursery schooler or kindergartener, if one walks through the doors of the Sweet Briar Campus School, somehow it will all make marvelous sense. □ board. I might note that I purposely use the masculine pronoun, even though some might condemn me for it, especially at Sweet Briar. I have noticed, during the year and a half that we have had the computer, that many more boys use it than girls. The girls have to be urged to do so and quickly lose interest because, more often than not, they prefer to play in groups of three or four. The

Although the nursery schoolers have been mentioned only in passing, they are very definitely in attendance. In the room adjoining the kindergarten, there is also chaos, cacophony and color, but it sometimes seems less ordered chaos. However, it soon becomes obvious that there is a lot of learning going on in here too; it is just four-year-old learning rather than that of fives.

CAREER SERVICES

FOR ALUMNAE

by Carter Hunter Hopkins '68, Director of Career Planning

For several years the Office of Career Planning has been actively helping alumnae deal with various problematic situations which run the gamut from planning a career and seeking a job for the first time to re-entering the job market in a new capacity after an extended absence.

In addition to conducting several group presentations every year, at Fall Council meetings and at Reunion, on topics of interest to alumnae, the career planning staff is available to work with alumnae on an individual basis as well, particularly at vacation times and during summer months. Interested alumnae are urged to visit in person, if possible, but career planning services may be utilized through letters and telephone calls. The Office of Career Planning is a member of the national Catalyst Network of women's resource centers and can easily refer alumnae to excellent career planning sources closer geographically and to specific professionals in any location.

Credential File Service

The Office of Career Planning maintains permanent, confidential placement files at the request of students and alumnae. It is a simple matter to start or update a credential file. And it's a safe, convenient way to store valuable letters of recommendation from employers or faculty. Once your file is activated, copies of your letters of recommendation can be mailed from the Office of Career Planning at your request whenever you need to present your credentials. There is no charge for this service.

Dorothy Wallace Wood '49, who lives in Anchorage, Kentucky, contacted the Office of Career Planning during her 30th Reunion "out of sheer desperation." She felt "totally unprepared and had to do something," but she was not sure what to do. After talking a while about her different interests and about her requirements from a job, Dorothy elected to take the Strong Campbell Interest Inventory in an attempt to organize and prioritize her occupational interests. This instrument, which was interpreted for Dorothy by mail after it had been scored by computer, "helped to crystallize ideas I had about the direction in which I should be heading." She realized that she prefers "working alone in some artistic sort of way." She started a little dress-making business, which is "something to hold on to." When asked to comment on her experience with career planning at Sweet Briar, she says, "I hope the girls take advantage of it, and alumnae are aware of it. It is an enormous help for this day and age. It is important that we all have something we can do, especially when husband and children are no longer at home...it gave me a straw when I was quite desperate."

Darrell Ann Humphrey '76 of Dallas, Texas, also set aside a portion of her Reunion time to come into the Office of Career Planning for an individual conference. Cissy was dissatisfied with her position as a paralegal, and wondering which step to take next. As she says, "I was not sure I was in the right career — and considering going in another direction." She also "wasn't sure" Sweet Briar's Office of Career Planning could help her. After taking the Strong Campbell Interest Inventory "and receiving a lot of moral support...I decided to stay with what I was doing. I am still looking for a different career, but it is not a full-time effort. If I ever finish looking, I'll call back!...the Office of Career Planning is an excellent service."

Lenore Lee Cox '78 lives in Lynchburg. Her most recent contact with the Office of Career Planning was in July, 1984, when she participated in a Job Change Seminar conducted on campus for interested members of the Amherst-Lynchburg community. Lenore wanted "help in strengthening and developing better communication skills; how to figure out office protocol and politics; and how to make herself more attractive to her company." She feels that the seminar and the staff were "extremely helpful" and provided "good innovative ideas." She learned how to express her concerns to her supervisor. As a result, significant positive changes have occurred, and she is happier in her job at First Colony Life Insurance. The major advantage she received through the seminar was "learning about appropriate methods to use to address my concerns and about the appropriate channels to use in a business situation." Indirectly, though, she points to even more benefits from her association with the Office of Career Planning. Lenore feels that "if there were ever a possibility of relocating...I could tap into the networking system." She also "appreciated referrals to other groups"...and feels that the Office of Career Planning is "a central place for putting women in touch with helpful people, organizations and information." Lenore reports that she is now in the process of helping another alumna who has recently returned to the Lynchburg area, and who was referred to her by the Office of Career Planning. □

Retirees Return to Classes

by Cornelia Perkins Zinsser '52

Mary
Hughes
Blackwell

One of the recurrent joys of life at Sweet Briar is the yearly influx of new students — freshmen from high schools all over the country, foreign students in saris, transfers from other colleges and Turning Point students, occasionally with tots in tow.

Three faces familiar at Sweet Briar for many years were among the annual crop of “unknown quantities” during registration for the 1984 fall term. All recently retired, these three returned to college in the guise of students, each entering a field entirely new to her.

Mary Hughes Blackwell, former Assistant to the Director of the Alumnae Association, came to Sweet Briar in 1952 with a nursing background and quickly adapted to office work for Development and the Alumnae Association. After 1960, she worked exclusively in the Alumnae Office with responsibility for organizing reunion activities and Alumnae Council meetings, coordinating the College's Bulb Project and acting as assistant editor of the Alumnae Magazine.

Retired in 1984, Mary Hughes enrolled in Loren Oliver's Introduction to Studio Art. Studio Art is a new field for her, although she has four daughters who are involved with the arts either professionally or personally, and she admits that their careers and interests have influenced her choice. More importantly, she recognized that through the busy years of earning a living and raising a family she had had neither time nor opportunity for self-expression. The course she chose offered that missed opportunity and her retired status gave her time to explore her own creativity in many different ways.

Although the techniques used in Studio Art I are at the beginner's level, there are many new skills to acquire and, as Mary Hughes says, “a whole new language to learn in the process of becoming visually literate.” Students work with both abstract and concrete elements, and Mary Hughes describes how different forms in a drawing can contribute to something as abstract as the mood which it expresses. She illustrates this with drawings of her backyard, one emphasizing the curving lines of hammock and foliage, the other stressing the verticals of tree trunks.

Laws of perspective are studied in Art I and Mary Hughes' portfolio includes a remarkable scaled perspective drawing of her living room with which she solved the technical problem she was assigned. Her teacher, Loren Oliver, is very pleased with this piece as he is with much of her work. Mary Hughes in turn expresses deep appreciation for her professor's supportive attitude. She finds her fellow students talented and enthusiastic, and the excitement and stimulation of working in class has extended to her home where she now has a studio of her own. She spends long hours on both assignments and her own exploration of her new skills, drawing extensively from nature, with leaves, trees, birds and flowers as subjects, as well as her beloved cats.

Mary Hughes plans to continue in Bobbi Perry's Design course in the spring term.

Kay Macdonald, formerly of the Physical Education Department, is also enjoying the unbound time which she can now spend on her new project, a full year course in Modern Poetry taught by Cheryl Mares of the English Department. Kay says that she could never have done the work in the days before her

Kay
Macdonald

Phyllis

retirement. Claiming to have written only departmental reports in her thirty-five years at Sweet Briar, she has averaged about sixty hours on the three major papers which she has written in the fall term. Two of her papers concern major nineteenth century poets, Emily Dickinson and Walt Whitman. Kay has compared their poetry and their portraits in terms and techniques which she learned in her previous professional life when she studied body movement according to the Leban System, which will be familiar to dancers. Professor Mares suggests that Kay may revolutionize literary criticism with the intriguing dovetail which she has constructed between poetic style and body movement as revealed in the portraits of her subjects. Ms. Mares has urged Kay to send her paper on Gerard Manley Hopkins' poem The Windhover to the Hopkins Society.

Kay Macdonald has been in the field of physical education since before she came to Sweet Briar. Her degree from Tufts University was earned at the Bouvé-Boston School, at that time the physical education school of Tufts. After teaching at Abbot Academy in Andover, MA, she took an advanced degree at Iowa State.

She chose Modern Poetry for her post-retirement studies because she felt she needed to deal with something abstract after years of working with teams and individual athletes and their performances. She expresses real gratitude to the College and her appreciation for the opportunity to develop interest and talents of which she previously had been unaware.

Phyllis Stevens, retired from her position as Professor of Psychology, comes to her new interest with a scientific background. In a sense, however, Stevie is returning to her roots since she is studying philosophy, the discipline from which psychology derives. Since her retirement in 1983, Stevie has taken two courses in the history of philosophy with Margaret Hartman and this fall enrolled in Tom Hartman's course on Contemporary Philosophy. She plans to continue and will probably take "every course which the Philosophy Department offers."

She has recently been wrestling with such questions as "How do we get at Truth through Language?" which have come up in Phil. 245's study of Wittgenstein (a real hero of Tom Hartman's says Stevie). Stevie particularly enjoys the metaphysical emphasis of this course. She feels that everyone needs to explore ideas, and that is something that she has done throughout her life. Her wide interests have included journalism and politics and more recently the status of women and issues of religious freedom in the United States.

Well known on campus for her activist stance, the license plate which says Go 4 ERA and the bumper sticker "The Moral Majority is Neither," Stevie has many friends who envy her involvement with the College on a new level.

In this wonderfully mutual arrangement everybody benefits; the life-experience which these senior students bring to their classes enriches the whole group and delights their professors; the support of the faculty, the enthusiasm of the younger students, and the exposure to new areas of learning have all rewarded Mary Hughes, Kay and Stevie. □

The Classical Experience in Greece and Italy: Art from Antiquity through the Baroque

Sweet Briar and Randolph-Macon Woman's College are joining to present a study-travel program designed for students, alumnae, parents, and friends May 20-June 8, 1985. Mary S. Ellett, Instructor in Art (R-MWC), and Dr. Diane Moran, Associate Professor Art History (SBC), will lead this 18-day educational experience. By adding pre- and post-tour assignments to participation in the structured on-site program, students may earn three hours (one unit) of undergraduate credit. Others will find an exceptional travel value in the rich itinerary: Athens, Crete, Olympia, Delphi, Meteora, Rome, Pompeii, Sorrento, Assisi, Siena, Florence, Ravenna, and Venice. The rate per person, double occupancy, is $2,475, with a single supplement of $275.

For more information and application blanks, please write Dr. Diane Moran, 04 Refectory, Sweet Briar, Va. 24595.

Volunteers Needed

Alumnae volunteers are needed to serve on a new Career Advisory Board. Members will be asked for advice and ideas to further strengthen and expand current career services to students and alumnae, including networking and recruiting. A wide variety of careers are needed, as well as a broad geographic spread. Please contact Ellen Harrison Saunders '75, 502 N. Broad St., Suffolk, VA 23434, or Carter Hunter Hopkins '68, Office of Career Planning, SBC, by May 31.

CORRECTION:

The name of Anne Davant Mobley, sophomore, was omitted from the list of alumnae daughters published in the last issue. Anne is the daughter of Sue Lawton Mobley '55. We regret this omission.

Letters

Regarding your profile of Lendon Gray on page 22 of the recent issue of your magazine, an error is at least implied. Lendon was not able to participate in the Olympics in Los Angeles last July, since she had to withdraw from the trials earlier in the summer because of Seldom Seen's mysterious lameness from which the little gelding has recovered.

I am enclosing several pages from the most recent United States Dressage Federation Bulletin which contain much information about Lendon and her successes in Kansas City. I am sure you people will want to have this material.

Please greet my many Sweet Briar friends for me.

—Miriam P. Bennett
Chairman of the Department and Kenan Professor of Biology
Colby College, Waterville, ME 04901

Editor's note: The successes referred to include sharing the Grand Prix Championship with gelding Seldom Seen in the United States Dressage Championships; being Fourth Level Champion with Later On, her own Holsteiner gelding; and riding the Reserve Champion, Guerlain, Hanoverian mare, at the First Level.

Plan Workshop for Volunteers

Managing Voluntary Organizations was the topic of a workshop held on campus in January. Twenty-eight community service leaders, including three alumnae, addressed such issues as Accountability, Setting and Adhering to Standards, Boardmanship, Organizational Politics, Financial Reporting and Executive Administration.

Evaluations of the program were overwhelmingly positive. Many comments, however, suggested another seminar over a longer period to allow time to delve into other significant functions such as Program Development, Personnel Supervision, Public Relations, Budgeting, Fund-raising, Marketing and Long-range, Planning.

The Department of Continuing Studies and Summer Programs has planned a similar, but expanded, seminar for alumnae (with room and board available on campus). Any alumnae interested in attending this program this summer should contact Mrs. Gail Morrison, Director, Continuing Studies and Summer Programs.

Giuseppe Mirri

Professor Giuseppe Mirri, Assistant Professor of Italian at the College from 1965 to 1968, died November 2, 1984. He was forty-eight when he suffered a sudden and massive heart attack. A colleague remembers him with these words: "He contributed much to our community as a true friend, a valued colleague and a scholar, and those of us who remember him feel greatly diminished by his passing." His wife and their two daughters reside at Via N. Sauro 6, Verano, Brianza, 20050 (Milano) Italy.

Selling Tips!

- 1) Think Bulbs!
  - 2) Be enthusiastic. Sweet Briar Bulbs are the best, and our reason for selling is the best — $$$$$$$$ for scholarships.
  - 3) Know your product. Learn the catalogue and as much as you can about what is in it. It is hard to sell what you don't know.
  - 4) Be prepared. Keep some catalogues and order blanks with you at all times. Put YOUR name and address on them. Prospective buyers will often appear when and where they are least expected — at a party, at school, the dentist's office, the grocer's, etc.
  - 5) Call for help. Don't be afraid to say, "I don't know, but I'll find out." If your own Bulb Chairman doesn't know, call or write the Alumnae Office. Louise Swiecki Zingaro is tops on finding answers.
  - 6) Use that Sweet Briar imagination. Bulbs make excellent gifts for any occasion. No garden? Don't forget about Paperwhites and Amaryllis.
- Above all, be a "B.B." (Bulb Booster). Good-Luck and Happy Selling!

Sally Bumbaugh '54
National Bulb Chairman

Pschirrer Scholarship

The Jean Pschirrer Memorial Scholarship Fund has been established at Sweet Briar College by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Martin E. Pschirrer of Rockford, Illinois, in memory of their daughter, Jean, a freshman who suffered heart failure last year.

The scholarship will be awarded annually to a student who has achieved a strong grade point average and who is involved in some phase of the athletic program, with preference given to a student who is active in the tennis program.

Julianne Burkhardt, a sophomore from Pottstown, PA, is the first recipient of the Pschirrer Scholarship. She is a member of the Sweet Briar varsity swimming and the lacrosse teams and an ODAC All-Conference Swimmer. She has been recognized by Sweet Briar as an "all-academic" team member, a designation reserved for students who maintain a 3.0 grade average or better during the term when they are participating on the varsity team.

Association Perspective

by Mary K. Lee McDonald '65
President, Sweet Briar Alumnae Association

High on the list of important activities of Sweet Briar alumnae are recruiting students and raising funds to help assure that we can offer them a quality educational and co-curricular experience.

An emerging priority for alumnae is "networking" or building a support group among ourselves based on the shared background of our Sweet Briar experience. Many of our local clubs are implementing specific directories to help with job and career searches — New York, Chicago and Washington. Others are developing plans to have their network extend beyond employment to help with personal needs as new alumnae move into their communities: where to find a doctor, a shoe repair shop, churches, schools and how to meet other Sweet Briar alumnae. One alumna expressed her sentiments on the worth of "networking with alumnae" as: "It's like moving into a city and having several experienced older sisters to help you."

There is also a larger support group emerging, a network of alumnae of women's colleges. As president of our Association, I have been participating in a group referred to as ADAPT — Alumnae Directors and Presidents Together. Fifteen women's colleges belong to this network — Agnes Scott, Cedar Crest, Chatham, Converse, Goucher, Hollins, Hood, Mary Baldwin, Mills, Newcomb, Randolph-Macon, Wells, Wheaton, Wilson, and Sweet Briar.

The exhilarating exchanges of ideas, programs, success, "not-so successes," contacts and wonderful "war stories" have been invaluable to me and consequently to our Association. When this group met in November at Mills College in Oakland, California, we had an outstanding program with the college presidents of Mills, Chatham, and Hollins, followed by a reception for all of the Bay Area alumnae of these colleges. It was encouraging to be a part of a huge roomful of women who were meeting with strangers, but not feeling like strangers because they were all part of that special group of women who have the distinction of being alumnae of women's colleges.

I encourage you to seek out other alumnae and alumnae clubs, chapters or branches within your communities and get together for something fun. The cause of liberal arts women's colleges definitely will be enhanced. Certainly there are areas of competition and rivalry for students but there are also possibilities for support and growth among this emerging network.

From the perspective of alumnae involvement in the continued development and strength of women's colleges, I would like to share with you a "priceless" quote from one of our many illustrious alumnae, Dale Hutter Harris '53, Vice Chairman of the Board of Directors. "There is no competition among lighthouses."

Alumnae Directory

The Sweet Briar Alumnae Association is planning to publish a new Alumnae Directory in 1985. The last Directory was published in 1981.

Will you please help us make this Directory as accurate as possible by sending us any changes of name, address, or phone numbers.

The deadline for changes will be June 30, 1985.

Class Notes

1911

One of the last two members of the Class of 1911 with whom the Sweet Briar Alumnae Association was still in touch (Two are "lost" in our files.), Alma Booth Taylor, died in February, 1984, in Norfolk at the age of 95. She had spent 38 years in China as the wife of a medical missionary, after having herself been an Episcopal missionary in Japan for two years. Two of her three daughters attended Sweet Briar — Dr. Helen W. Taylor '40 and Mary Taylor Hollowell '46, both of Norfolk. Her son is a doctor in Norfolk.

At age 90, Frances W. Pennypacker continues to be quite well and happy at Kendal at Longwood, where a new resident is Alice E. McBee '41. Frances reports that Anne Schutte Nolt still lives in her big house in Lancaster, PA, with a housekeeper-companion and someone to take care of her lawn and garden.

Rosalie "Cricket" Feder Sarbey writes that she is not setting the world on fire at the age of 92, but she still keeps her home open in summer with a constant run of guests from far and near. In the winter she moves to Key West to be with her daughter and son-in-law. Her two daughters are very active and her grandchildren are "contributing members of society." She finds life good and rewarding.

Anne Lois Cummins Schutte writes, "There is little to tell except that my interest in Sweet Briar is enduring, although I am unable to be an active participant in any project."

Isabel Luke Witt had a lovely trip last summer, with her daughter, son, and grandson, to St. Andrews-by-the-Sea on the Bay of Fundy and back by Nantucket. Isabel has four grandchildren and four step-grandchildren. Two young ones are taking music lessons, and in the absence of a piano at home, come to her house to practice. Her eldest granddaughter was married in May, and Isabel and her daughter gave a luncheon for her on the Witt lawn. Isabel's youngest son still lives with her. She says, "Life continues busy."

Carrie Taliaterro Scott has had a difficult year with the loss of her daughter from cancer, her husband of 59 years, and her sister Lucy Taliaterro '16 following a broken hip.

Marie Klooz writes from Sandy Spring, MD, that she can still walk two miles a day, as well as swim a quarter mile, but she has given up her small house for an efficiency in the main complex, takes more naps, and entertains less. She is still active with prison work and study sessions.

Last summer Lorna Weber Dowling, Fort Worth, TX, spent four weeks in Cleveland, her old home. She was looking forward to becoming a great-grandmother in February. She is in very good health and stays very busy.

Mary Allen Campbell wrote in May from Van Buren, AR, that she was recovering well from trouble with her back which required hospitalization. She plays the piano once a week for a sing-along at a local nursing home, lunches with friends, and is active in church work. An especially lovely spring in Arkansas this year stimulated nostalgic thoughts of her time at Sweet Briar and the beauty of the campus.

Corine Walton Hess traveled from her home in Coral Gables, FL, to spend Easter 1984 in Philadelphia to meet and attend the christening of her first great-grandchild.

The Agnes Irwin Alumnae Magazine says that Lulu Newkirk Steeb is the vice president of the Council for the Preservation of Historic Sites and Houses in Fairmont Park and works for Robert Scott, the president of the board of directors of the Philadelphia Art Museum.

Jane Guignard Curry is well and active but suffers from limited vision, which curtails her independence. She no longer drives but enjoys her comfortable house in Sarasota, FL, with its garden, water views, and congenial neighbors. Her grandson is living with her for the second year during his college term, and she expected to spend the week of Thanksgiving visiting friends in London, escorted by her son. She had also seen Helen McMahon in Little Switzerland early in the fall, but it was "hardly more than a tantalizing glimpse."

Muriel MacKenzie Kelly and her husband have moved from Westchester, IL, to Bethesda, MD, to be near their sons: MacKenzie and Ruth live in Takoma Park, and Keith and Judy, in the District. Dorothy MacKenzie, Muriel's sister, lives with the elder Kellys. Grandson Stuart received his Ph.D. this fall.

Virginia Thompson McElwee and her roommate have not been able to get together this year since both have eye trouble and can no longer drive. They wish they could come back to Sweet Briar for a visit. Virginia was about to leave Maine for her Florida home when she wrote.

Frances Insley Carroll is residing at Budd Terrace at Wesley Woods, Atlanta, GA. Her daughter Fran lives nearby in Newnan, GA, and her other daughter, Anne, lives in Clearwater, FL. She visits both and still enjoys bridge and eating out at Atlanta restaurants. She now has six grandchildren (one, Rob, is enrolled in a Ph.D. program in clinical psychology in Atlanta and was to be married in December) and two great-grandchildren.

Helen Quayle Preston is well and enjoying life. She and her husband have two homes, the main one in Bedford, Quebec, in Canada, and the other in Sun City, FL. They enjoy the Canadian summers in the country with visits from family. From November until May they are in Florida, where they have many American friends. Since they fly between homes now, they are unable to stop at Sweet Briar for a visit en route, but Helen is pleased by what she reads about the College and proud to say she once went there.

Emma Mai Crockett Owen, now 82, ended 10 years in June as a member of the Jackson-Madison County (TN) Library Board. She has a married daughter, who lives in New York and has two sons.

Elizabeth Mason Richards and her husband are still living in the home they built over 30 years ago in Norwell, MA, although it is now too large and empty. They want to be near their two children and old friends. Their six grandchildren have scattered now, but it is still a pleasure to hear about their interests and achievements.

Katherine Weiser Ekelund ("Budweiser" to some of you) is happy to have a girl great-grandchild at last — two, in fact, as of October 4. In May the loss of a grandson at age 25 was heartbreaking, but she finds keeping busy is the answer. She is well and active in several volunteer groups, as well as in her church.

Mildred Baird White, Asheville, NC, is thankful for the good health which allows her to volunteer one day a week for the Red Cross at the V.A.

Hospital (which she has been doing since Pearl Harbor) and for Meals on Wheels. She has been a bridge addict since Sweet Briar days. College roommate Maylen Newby Pierce '22 had lunch with her last summer while visiting sister Kitty Newby McGee '24 in Spartanburg, SC. Mildred keeps hoping for a visit from Helen McMahon when she is at her summer place in Little Switzerland.

Fitzallen Kendall Fearing writes from Macon, GA, that she, Beth Hall Hatcher, and Margaret Wise O'Neal have lunch together quite often and exchange news. One recent item was that Martha Newton Groover, who has had some ups and downs in health, lives in Orlando with her daughter and is happy to be able to see her two great-grandchildren who live in Jacksonville. When Fitzallen wrote, Queenie O'Neal had just returned from a week in London with her daughter, during which they enjoyed plays, ballet, museums, and good music. Fitzallen and Queenie were planning a November holiday at St. Simons Island, GA.

Yelena Grgitsh Prosch misses the foreign travel that she enjoyed for a number of years and which has now been curtailed by age and poor health.

Jeanette (Dan) Boone, P.O. Box BB, Sweet Briar, VA 24595

You are so good to respond to my plea for news — my best year in almost ten!

Bebe Gilchrist Barnes wrote last April that her address is changed to 11586 West Bay Shore, The Islands, Crystal River, FL 32629, though she still spends summers in Cashiers, NC. More about her later. Mary Lib Turner Baker is active in church, political and government affairs, and she has 11 grandchildren to enjoy. Hilda Harpster sees Lois Peterson Wilson '26 often in Toledo. Hilda finds her love of Sweet Briar as "great as ever." Helen Smyser Talbot has just taken a 1200-mile, fall-viewing trip in New England. Jerry Reynolds Dreisbach has had a wonderful year of world travel.

Madeline Brown Wood says that the neck brace she wears because of a fall down the steps makes her appear to be looking at people down her nose. When I passed the Sophomore Wall at the end of Randolph basement during Alumnae Council I could see us all sitting there listening to her sing and play her guitar. I even went for a look at her room and Bebe's, Dan's, Tinka's and mine on second floor Grammer. Madeline and Mac moved to a retirement village in the fall. Bass Boynton Rawlings has a new grandson plus three granddaughters in college. Wouldn't I love to walk to Bus Rhea's for a cigarette with Bass once again! At Alumnae Council on Founder's Day I walked to Monument Hill with our Sweet Briar senior granddaughter for Daisy's memorial service.

Jean Berlew (Mrs. F. K., RFD 1, Box 61, York, Maine 03909) wrote a dear note about her mother's death in August, 1984. Her description of Beth Williams Cadigan is "Mother was cheerful, outgoing and full of fun." What an epitaph!

Martha Ambrose Nunnally and Jim have a first great-grandchild. Our six grandchildren are backward — one graduated from college, four there and one trying to decide which one to enter in September. Emilie Halsell Marston had lunch with Mary Sturgis '25 and Bobby Rich Adams' sister, Mary Rich Robertson '24, on Gibson Island last summer. Mary Sturgis and Margaret Powell Dldham both live near us in Onancock, VA.

Emily Jones Hodge tried to outdo M. Brown with a stairway fall last year. About her broken hip I quote her, "Disgusting this age business, eh?" GIN Stephenson is having a rough time getting around. She and Peg Williams Bayne call each other often. I wish I had seen her when she visited Peg in Norfolk. Peg has had a book published, The Wood Family of Fluvanna County, Virginia, 1795-1969.

Connie Van Ness sent a clipping about Marg Cramer Crane's daughter, Catherine Cowle Crane. She was being married and it stated that she retains her name as she is a lecturer and consultant in interior design and is the author of What Do You Say to a Naked Room? and Personal Places.

Frankie Sample Holmlund has joined the group — she fractured a vertebra ("not serious") at the Dartmouth-Princeton game. She didn't mind the fracture — just being beaten.

Mary Kelly Vizard Kelly divides her time between New England and Florida. Lib Wood McMullan had a wonderful trip through Southern France. When not traveling, she lives in Richmond, VA.

At long last, Bebe Gilchrist Barnes has confessed that she and Dan Boone did indeed climb out a second-floor window of Grammer on a "rope" of sheets when some pranksters had blocked their door with trunks, brought to the hall for vacation so many years ago. Afterwards, they rushed in the door and upstairs to greet their surprised hallmates. Bebe thinks Dan doesn't remember the episode as vividly as she, because her short legs made easy work of the climb, while Bebe's "long, lanky legs" made the maneuver more difficult.

We saw Dan Boone at Sweet Briar in October. She looks far too young for me. I also talked to Catherine Johnson Brehme just before leaving camp.

By request, The and I spend half the year near Alderson, WV, where we have a boys' camp, Camp Greenbrier. Our SBC daughter and her husband Bob Hood really run the place now. The does the maintenance, and I, the farm — potatoes, tomatoes, cabbages. Our legal residence is Norfolk, VA, but our dear small solar house on the Eastern Shore of Virginia is so nice that we live in it all but occasional weekends and holidays during the winter. Some life, but we flourish with it. A thousand thanks for your generous responses. But how about Ruth, Nar Warren, Claire, Sally J., and all the rest? I am ancient too!

All of a sudden in early December came a hurried telephone call from Polly Swift Calhoun wondering if I could order cookies for Nathan, her grandson, and 30 of his friends here in San Diego as navy recruits. Of course I could — and did! A final transcontinental tour in July took Polly and her husband to visit Natalie Roberts Foster — a highlight, writes Nat, as her usual routine is nursing Walter and raising terriers. From Natalie's they went to visit Emma Knowlton Lytle '34 on her cotton plantation in Mississippi, then north to Colorado and Oregon to visit son Ted and family, and on to visit Jo Gibbs DuBois in Wisconsin. Latest scoop from Polly: the book she wrote to get her college degree has been published and is to be used as text in the U.S. history course (town-meeting type of government) — "Am so thrilled!"

Mary Stewart Kelso Treanor and her husband hope to be at our 55th reunion, "a top priority as Wally has never seen our beautiful SBC!" I have a feeling Ruth Schott Benner wins out on great-grandchildren — a dear little third great-granddaughter! Helen Sim Mellen commends her husband on acquiring several domestic skills when she was having a siege of medical problems! It was lovely to receive Ella Williams Fauber's news in her own handwriting! She has a granddaughter at St. Mary's in Raleigh, N.C. Nancy Worthington wrote that Ella was making darling little needlework decorations for the Christmas tree. About herself Nancy writes "'Tis a real joy after having had foot surgery to be able to walk again without screaming with pain!" She sent me a clipping stating that the SB Alumnae Club of Amherst-Nelson Counties re-named its scholarship award to honor an SBC alumna, Bertha Pfister Wailes '17. Mrs. Wailes now lives in the Westminster-Canterbury retirement complex where Nancy and Ella live. Nancy sold over $600 worth of bulbs during the past year! She speaks of having had a chance to see Dr. Nenah Fry, who hosted a dinner at SB House for the Indiana Fletcher Williams Association. A clipping from Nancy entitled "Sweet Briar History Unveiled" by a 1947 SB graduate should entice us to our 55th reunion!

Evelyn Mullen was planning to attend the SB Friends of the Library meeting before taking off with her sister, Priscilla Mullen Gowen '34, on a five-week tour to the Antipodes! "Quinnie" Quintard Bond enjoyed traveling with an SBC group to "Uncommon Europe" — Prague, Dresden, Vienna and Berlin. She has a new granddaughter, Laura Quintard Bond. Her son's oldest daughter, 15½, has entered Westminster Simsbury, and Heather 11, goes to Day School in Dover, MA. Quinnie hopes she'll be ambulatory for our 55th! Eileen Fowler Bardwell Clark tells us she has the "best of both worlds — winter in Scottsdale, summer in Prescott, AZ!" Her good news was the wedding of her oldest grandson, "beautifully and happily"; her bad news was that her darling daughter lost her husband to cancer, leaving her with two sons to raise ("she's doing fine, fortunately"). Ellen Eskridge Sanders and her husband had put a new addition on their house and had then gone out to California to visit their son Grayson. "Whit" Pearsall Smith had "two outstanding things to report": their only granddaughter was married on March 17; the other event was breaking her hip badly while walking their little dog. She was recovering well and walking with a cane when she wrote.

Charlotte Kent Pinckney announced a new granddaughter born last year to their youngest child. After their usual cruise to the Caribbean in February, Charlotte and Toni had all the children, grandchildren and in-laws (17 strong) at Kanuga in August. She planned to be at SB for the Fund Agents' workshop (hoped we would all contribute generously!).

Gill Hilton Pritchard and her husband had their usual flock of summer visitors; they were saddened by the death by poisoning of their little cocker spaniel. Ginny Cooke Rea reports that the biggest event in their lives this year is that Fritz is in the process of retiring after 46 years of pediatrics — "a rather emotional experience for an old-fashioned doctor who has taken care of three generations in a very personal way." Their granddaughter had just entered Trinity College in Hartford, CT. Martha McBroom Shipman's daughter Jane Kuntz '58 and her husband and her son and his wife joined her on a nine-day Caribbean cruise; they also surprised her with a lovely party to celebrate her birthday. One of Jane's twin daughters, Martha, who works in Washington, will be married in December. Twin Lee works in Dayton, OH. The other four grandchildren are still in school.

Harriet Wilson Tarbert and her husband had spent two months in Naples where they had an SBC reunion with Eda Bainbridge Kolbe, Martha McBroom Shipman and Jane Muhlberg Halverstadt.

Jean Cole Anderson wrote: "Nothing really exciting here — well, lightning hit a tree at 4:20 a.m., blowing a trench along a big root to the wall back of my bed, blew the 'phone jack and light plug out of their sockets onto the floor. I think I hit the ceiling under my own steam — and Bart, the Corgi, hasn't been the same since! Had a wonderful time Sept. 1 helping my daughter Lovat entertain over 100 of John's kin the eve before the Hart family reunion in Union Point — 250 people came from all parts of the U.S. — and it didn't rain!"

Martha von Briesen had a most interesting December '83 visiting a niece and family in Albuquerque and another week with cousins in Austin, TX, with whom she went to San Antonio for the festive opening of an exhibition of oil paintings and pencil drawings by their great-grandfather, Hermann Lungkwitz, graduate of the Royal Art Academy in Dresden, who brought his family to the U.S. in 1858 and settled near Fredericksburg, TX, a year later. At a charming chamber music concert Martha met distant cousins whom she hadn't seen since childhood days. By mid-June she felt like "going abroad" so arranged a trip to Canada to visit her oldest nephew and family in Kingston, Ontario, where she had a delightful time!

It was good to hear from Marjorie Webb Maryanov. Her husband, a doctor, is semi-retired and they often fly down to Ft. Lauderdale, FL, where they have a condominium.

Cynthia Vaughn Price wrote from Greensboro that her husband had two lengthy stays in the hospital during the summer but is on the mend now. Libba Stribling Bell, along with her son Dick and two of his children, paid an unexpected and all too brief visit last summer. According to Cynthia, Libba looked great.

Dorothy Ayres Holt, Hampton, CT, spent a lot of 1984 acquiring a new knee, and now she is getting around well. She keeps busy with church, politics, Antiquarian Society, etc., and she keeps in touch with Eda Bainsbridge Kolbe and Polly Woodward Hill. She and Eda were planning a cruise together in January '85.

1935-1995. Fifty years! One-half century! How great to be able to celebrate such a wonderful event.

Reunion is May 24-26, 1985, as I am sure you know. When you read this, if you have not signed up for that weekend, run (don't walk) to the nearest phone and have your name placed on the list. We need you, each and every one!

Our 45th reunion was a tremendous experience for all of us. It was amazing how the years just disappeared and we all became carefree undergraduates again.

I urge you to make every effort to attend as your presence is needed. Wouldn't it be wonderful if we could have 100% attendance? I can assure you that attending this joyous event will be a rewarding and rejuvenating experience for each member of the "illustrious" class of 1935.

Please return your questionnaires to me by April 15, 1985. The Reunion Scrapbook "waiteth."

Here are a few items to encourage you to respond.

In July Jane Lauder participated in a Scandinavian cruise and was surprised to find classmate Mary Templeton was also a member of the tour group. They had great fun getting reacquainted and reminiscing about Sweet Briar days of long ago.

Alice Laubach, Asheville, NC, was planning to go on the Sweet Briar South China Seas trip in February. She attended an Elderhostel in Brattleboro, VT, in September and judged Vermont a beautiful state and The Experiment in International Living fascinating.

Frances Spiller Scott wrote last year to tell us of her marriage to Ralph E. Scott. She was formerly Mrs. George Merrill.

We are sorry to report that Mary Whipple Clark's husband Don died last winter.

When Suzanne Wilson Rutherford answered the Network questionnaire for Chicago last year, she mentioned her part-time work as assistant librarian at the Crow Island School of the Winnetka Public School System.

Carey Snow Garrison, now in Palo Alto, CA, recalls for us that she met her husband Gary in Hawaii in 1938 after a trip around the world and lived there 18 years while he worked for the Del Monte Corp. Two sons and a daughter were born during this time. After five years in Piedmont, CA, three years in New Jersey, and a year and a half in Manila, Philippines, they moved back to California in 1965 and have lived there ever since. Gary retired from Del Monte in 1981. Except for one year in the '40s when she ran a kindergarten, Carey has done volunteer work through the years, though she claims to have slowed down considerably now.

Blanda Jones Skilton stays busy in Winter Park, FL, with church and keeping track of six grandchildren, 3 to 17. She and Judy Peterson hope to come to Reunion.

Lavalette Dillon Wintzer and Fred spend nine months in Delaware and three months in Elkhart Lake, WI. They have a new grandson, born Mar. 11, 1984, the second child of son Charlie and Mary. Fred, a security analyst in N.Y.C. (who was on the Today Show in November!), and Eliza, who lives in Ketchikan, AK, are not married. The Wintzers hope to come to our 50th, especially after the good time they both had when they came down last fall for the Reunion Gifts meeting!

Alison Dunne Harrison writes she can't make it to our 50th — she's too well entrenched on the West Coast. The Harrisons spent Thanksgiving in Pasadena with their daughter and son-in-law; he trains race horses, and she, show hunters. They have 15-year-old twin daughters. Son David and wife Judy are editing Canoe Magazine in Camden, ME.

Maud Winborne Leigh had a wonderful trip to Hawaii with her M.O. daughter, Margaret '73, in the spring. Then she went to Nag's Head with her oldest daughter, Winnie Leigh Hamlin '58, and she expected to spend Christmas in Stockton, CA, with her second daughter and her grandson — Maud's great-grandson! Her two sons and their families live near her in Norfolk. She has eight grandchildren. Her husband died in '74.

Martha Jane Gipe Earle writes from Jackson, MI, that springtime makes her think of Sweet Briar with dogwood in bloom and bluebirds in the air. They tried to entice bluebirds to nest in their orchard last year. We haven't heard the results.

Eugenia Peek Johnson stopped by Sweet Briar in Nov. '83. Besides having the pleasure of a nostalgic visit, she and Willis were gathering admission information for their granddaughter, daughter of Genie Johnson Sigler '64. Eugenia wrote, "We were impressed with Sweet Briar's continued beauty, hospitality, and growth in the field of education."

Anne Baker Gerhart is over the worst grief at the loss of her husband, and her four children seem to be happily married, some for the second time. Her daughter is married to a lawyer in Columbus and, having two children in the upper grades, is in law school. Her first son is assistant dean at Ohio State Law School, the second is a Presbyterian minister, and the third just sold his business and is in school preparing for a teaching career. Anne spends her summers in Michigan and travels and does volunteer work the rest of the year.

Mary Honeywell Dadds writes from Sarasota that Mark Whittaker's parents are friends through their church. Mark is SBC's Director of Development.

Hester Vail Kraemer Avery has been traveling this year — to Egypt last February and to Germany, Austria, Switzerland, and Italy in the summer, a nostalgia trip to places she had lived as an Army wife. She spent Christmas in Boston. In October she was at SBC for Alumnae Council, and she expects to return in May for Reunion. Two more grandsons bring her total of grandchildren to 12!

Come to Reunion and be brought up to date on these and other classmates. See you May 24!

Grace be unto you, and peace. There are many tidbits to share, for which I thank one and all.

Augusta Saul Farrier visited every beach in August which Diana hit in September. "reuning" with family everywhere. She is deeply involved in conservation. Late word tells of a visit in December to N.Y.C., where she had dinner with her Princeton grandson and visited with Sarah Belk Gambrell. She spent Christmas with daughter Betsy Edwards Anderson '70 and family in Charlotte and enjoyed Roanoke's SBC Day with her sister Mary Lou Saul Hunt '35 and Jane Lewis Kingsbury.

Ellie Wallace Price is busy with the natural Christmas decorations which the Brandywine Museum features every year, and is this year sending some 3000 to the White House by special request.

Kay Porter Read is an avid golfer, mother of three, and grandmother of three. She and Henry take several trips a year to Florida and Canada.

Henri Minor Hart, Lillian Neely Willis, Lottie Lewis Woollen and Gracey Luckett Bradley are the peripatetic musketeers. This year they were in Scotland and saw the shows, the sights, the Queen, and the Highlands in full heather. At home in Colorado Springs, Henri is the professional volunteer, well padded by love with children and grandchildren.

Boot Vanderbilt Crampton was in Vienna and Oberammergau and took in the Passion Play with Henry. Summers are at Squam, NH, with respective families. Winters are in Naples FL, a block away from Gracey.

Anne Benedict Swain reports a splendid summer at Mantoloking, NJ, with beach, tennis, bridge, entertaining of family and friends.

Audrey Siebert Snyder's daughter Cora '77 is back on campus with Aominions. Audrey is a speech therapist in rural Maine, spicing the long winter with politics and Quaker meetings in their house.

Patty Balz Vincent and her husband were in the Canadian Rockies this summer, and then visited Barbara Earl Reinheimer and her husband at their home high on a hillside outside San Jose. The Reinheimers have been harvesting their crop of walnuts, which must be picked up when they fall on the ground, outer shell removed, and put on trays to dry in California sunshine. They also had a great crop of olives this year, which she likes to cure.

Elizabeth Perkins Prothro summers at Pebble Beach, CA. She is involved with church, museum, and civic work at home in Wichita Falls. Her interests are photography, rare books, 11 grandchildren, and one great-grandchild!

Valeria Gott Murphey sends everyone her best, as does Mary Lou Simpson Bulkley, who is helping plan her 50th Emma Willard reunion

Florence Swift Durrance and her husband are now happily situated at a retirement complex in Tallahassee after 43 years in Gainesville, but they are always in their mountain cottage in Asheville, NC, with children and grandchildren from May until October

Ann Parks wrote a charming poem negating any claim to virtue or fame. She has had a tedious and painful recuperation from a fall from a ladder but I know of her church, civic, filial devotion in the past

Yvonne Leggett Dyer and Danny have been busy entertaining foreign business associates. They will go to Maine in December to spend 10 days with their daughter and husband and 2-year-old grandchild.

Gertrude Robertson Midlen had a fine five weeks of visiting grandchildren. Upon removal of a cataract this spring, she offers hospitality to all '39ers.

Ruth Harman Keiser's son is a urologist at Stanford, and while visiting him, she supped with Judy Judd Patton and husband.

There are eight(!) secretaryships in the capable hands of Julia Ridgely Howe. Her one paying job is a weekly column in the Whitefield, NH, Coos Democrat.

Ethel Hauber Crowe had a trip to Alaska and a fabulous cruise on the Inland Waterway. After two weeks in New England, reveling in rock and ocean, she is back to the usual club and volunteer activities in Newark, DE.

Kay Richards DeLancey toured the U.S.A. by car, ending with four days at the family Camp Aloha with three generations, canoeing, golfing and crafting. She is busy with church work and cares for five elderly professionally.

Another staunch member of the Loving Mother and Grandmother Club is Bennett Wilcox Barnett. They spend much of their time in their condo at Rehoboth Beach, DE.

Kay Bonsall Strong forsook St. Tropez and Italy with veddy British cousins to be a Republican Committeewoman. Mother of four, she has two grandsons in South Africa whom she is planning to visit in April.

Grace Robinson McGuire languishes mid her flowers and yard and doting husband and eight grandchildren, the youngest being twins.

Not unexpectedly we learn that Helen Cary Stewart is mother of five and has six grandchildren. She is the legal secretary of her son.

Church, Shenandoah Music Festival, DAR, and Garden Club take the time and talent of Mary Jeff Welles

Pearson, but the salt of life is the visit of children and grandchildren.

Since 1940, Jean Oliver Sartor has been consistently exhibiting her art work and has won many regional and national awards. She also lectures — and enjoys every minute of it, and not at the expense of her four married children and 11 grands.

Another artist is Eleanor Claflyn Williams, who is active as a docent at the Boston Museum of Fine Art. Last winter she had a commission for 20 paintings at the five-star Hotel Anatole in Dallas. She is showing and selling, and loving every minute of it, and not at the expense of her four married children and 11 grands.

High on the list of heroines is Nancy Gatch Svien. Her art is in tourism posters in Cancun, Mexico, and the dollars she earns go to Guatemalan refugees who have poured across the border. Her heart aches for these people who slowly realize they will never get back to their own land.

A visit to six national parks was made by Julie Saunders Michaux and her husband this summer. With all her traveling as an overseer, she is constantly running into Briarites. She particularly enjoyed Dallas hospitality.

Lucy Gordan Jeffers writes of an active New York Alumnae group. She and Bill are retired and thoroughly enjoy the New York scene.

Anna A. Espach Weckler is enjoying Sedona, AZ, 120 miles north of Phoenix, especially the glorious weather she was experiencing in November. The scenery is always amazing, she says. She sends thanks to Betty Barnes Bird for undertaking the job of Fund Agent for the class.

Marion Mann Roberts and husband are back in Mountain Lakes, NJ, after enjoying a house in Southwestern France for a month.

Bettina Bell Emmons was remarried July 26 in the presence of children, grandchildren, and spouses. They divide their time between her houses on Cape Cod and Naples, FL. She has been so active with the Class of '39 at Dartmouth that she has been made a member.

With all this euphoria, there is a note of sadness in reporting the death of Anne Dearstynne Cornwell's husband, July '84. He was an artist and a dear — blessed with grandchildren all over.

With Fritz's retirement, Mary Treadway Downs is running harder than ever. Garden Club and golf blaze in-between Australia and New Zealand. Two grandsons are in Seattle.

Betty Barnes Bird is taking a course in geology at N.Y. Community College and can have no cuts.

Not to be left out in all this traveling is Marguerite Myers Glenn, who visited Assateague and Chincoteague this summer. They boast nine grandchildren. She was with Leila Bond Preston and Mardie Hodill Smith at reunion. Mardie had wall to wall family thereafter, then a trip to the British Isles. Leila wrote in November that she was expecting four children plus spouses and eight grandchildren for the holidays.

Virginia Wellford Farwell and Sumner cleared 34 years of living in their 1881 barn-turned-house in Connecticut and moved to Florida. She sounded ecstatic in liberation from possessions (Having just had a robbery, I envy her detachment!). She urges all to join in 1989 reunion — physically, intellectually, financially!

Janet Thorpe took the old busman's holiday with two museum trips to Washington, where she saw the "glorious" Watteau exhibition, as well as the Bonnard and Whistler shows, the show of "Orientalist" painters.

Nine months it took to add 900 square feet to the house of Lee Montague Watts and Grady. To preserve their sanity, they spent September and October in England, France, and Italy, visiting their son in Worcester-shire.

Perhaps Jane Holden Walker holds the record for globetrotting. Last January and February the Walkers were in New Zealand where their son lives; thence, to their condominium at Kauai; June took them to an APA convention in Las Vegas and enabled a visit to Disneyland for two grandsons. For various reasons, they went then to Michigan, Northern Ontario, and on a Eurailpass in Europe for a month, back to Kauai, and home — Palo Alto — for Christmas. Jane graduated from the U. of Michigan.

Jean Moore von Sternberg is also traveling. Earlier this year she and her husband enjoyed a trip to London to visit friends before a Scandinavian and Russian cruise ending in Copenhagen. Now they are setting out for Hong Kong and a cruise to China, Korea, and Japan. Retirement has been and is wonderful. Our 50th in '89 has travel priority.

Aside from being busy with their four children and two grandchildren, traveling every other year to Canada and Italy, Jean McKenney Stoddard is regional chairman (in Madison, CT) for our National Cathedral. This involves attracting new members as well as funds.

Another happy sexagenarian, busy with Bible study, fishing, dancing, and five grandchildren, all living in Greenville, SC, is Kitty Lawder Stephenson.

The Library of St. Andrew's School in Jacksonville, FL, was named in memory of Doxie Dingman Cobb, our late classmate, in appreciation of her services as librarian and her role as one of the founders of the school.

Mary Treadway Downs is one of those interested in the Mary MacKintosh Sherer Scholarship Fund and thinks we would be interested in a progress report. The corpus had reached $9,993 by the end of December. Of course, contributions are still welcome. Lisa L. Redd '86 is this year's Sherer Scholar.

Shirley Irving Nalley '40 and I are partners in duplicate on the team of our club and play bridge throughout the county. Bob and I had an interesting trip to Yugoslavia in October. No artistic or any other talent here, but we are arch members of the doting grandparent club. The offspring are relatively far-flung, but our judge son lives nearby, and all brighten the patterns of our sybaritic pursuits, punctuated by just enough causes to assuage.

Thank you for sending your cards full of news. I wish you could all read the original cards. They are much more interesting and fun than any summaries. Jane Findlay Tate observed that SBC gave us a sense of civic responsibilities. Our class notes are proof of that.

I am doing the usual volunteer jobs: taking inner city children on environmental awareness walks for the Connecticut Audubon Society, working with mentally disabled children, and serving on the staff of Women's Fellowship at church. Kathy, our daughter, is clerking for a federal judge in Syracuse, and Doug is a research associate at Cornell. Since neither has produced children, I made do last December with a beautiful litter of cairn terrier puppies.

Sarah Adams Bush reports a great year — the arrival of two grandchildren: Louise's son, born in Dallas, and Jeannette Bush Miller's ('71) daughter, Sarah Adams Miller, born in Montclair, NJ. Oujia and Bob's vacation in New England was climaxed by an all-family gathering at an inn in New Hampshire. They arrived home after seven weeks away in time for the SBC Board meeting in Dallas.

Frances Gregg Petersmeyer was there with Wrede, who is the new chairman of the Sweet Briar Boards of Directors and Overseers.

Brooks Barnes was greatly impressed by Pres. Nenah Fry, whom she met at the Boston Alumnae Club's dinner. Brooks still enjoys volunteer work, other outside work, and her vegetable garden. After viewing Fay Martin Chandler's interesting art exhibit, she had lunch with Fay and Nancy Pingree Drake. Recently Brooks attended a party given by Fay and husband Al to watch the boat regatta on the Charles River from their 17th floor apartment with its glorious view.

Dorothy Campbell Maher just returned from a marvelous seven-week journey through the South and Southwest, calling on numerous children, meeting her newest grandchild, No. 12, in Dallas, and visiting with Bonnie Key Garrett and Gavin on their ranch near Lampasas, which Dottie claimed is a whole new world to suburbanites.

Mary Carter Richardson, after 19 years, finally made it back to England for a glorious two weeks. She writes, "I love being a grandmother and am intrigued with the development of my twins. My daughter has been transferred to Atlanta with a big job by Coca-Cola Co. Now I have two chicks in Atlanta and one nearby in Chattanooga."

Mary Christian Mulligan, having returned from a trip to Japan and Hong Kong, had another successful summer running the housekeeping department of the great 109-year-old Chalfonte Hotel, Cape May, NJ. It was a busy hotel season with lots of fascinating people, including several SBC people and Diddy's 91-year-old mother. Two of Diddy's children are in Portland, ME. The youngest daughter is teaching at Phillips Academy, Andover, MA.

Elizabeth Dichman Smith is still plugging away at her varied job at Rutgers (State U. of N. J.). She and Bevin travel as much as possible and were in China and Japan at the time of our reunion. Also she has been to England and Ireland this year for a short visit to daughter Caroline, who was taking a graduate year at Trinity College, Dublin. The oldest son produced a grandchild, Beth's only one. Warren, No. 3 son, is currently a lieutenant aboard the new Aegis Cruiser Yorktown.

Katherine Doar Jones had a grand and interesting time on the Sweet Briar tour of Ireland. The Alumnae Office appointed her "Official Hostess" and the cocktail party giver. Kitty rejoices in her family, all living nearby. The fifth grandchild is due in March. Her two daughters and one daughter-in-law are all SBC.

Clare Eager Mathai has cut down on a few of her jobs, but is extremely busy — serving on the boards of Children's Hospital, Utica, NY, and of a home for disturbed children; doing altar work, church guild work, and gardening; also serving as representative and class fund agent for a certain Virginia college; and playing golf and tennis. Clare visited Anne McJunkin Briber on Amelia Island. Clare's daughter and grandson have been living with her, but are moving to their own quarters, the daughter having acquired a good job in Utica.

I write this sad note to you from Roselle Falconer Scales because I think SBC friends should know, not only the happy news, but the sad news of their classmates. Maybe one of us can comfort her a bit. Rose, having retired from teaching, was looking forward to baby-sitting with her grandchildren. In August her youngest daughter died suddenly of leukemia.

Mary Love Ferguson Sanders, Corsicana, TX, found the SBC gathering in Dallas a wonderful opportunity to see many old friends (some for the first time since leaving SBC) and discovered that they really had not changed at all! She'd like to do it again soon.

Jane Findlay Tate wrote Clare Eager Mathai Feb. 1984 that they had put their house in Sonora, Mexico, on the market. After living in ten countries she wants to come back Stateside, in spite of now living in a most perfectly beautiful spot. Every summer Jane goes to her family place on a lake in Canada for about 3½ months. In Mexico she gets involved in all sorts of community ventures.

Dorothy Friday volunteers at the St. Louis Zoo and enjoys the pleasant atmosphere. She is trying to learn bridge but is considering giving it up. Dorothy goes to her book club, where she sometimes reads lolly and way-out books and feels as if she were back at SBC.

Charlotte Garber Rudolph has been lighting cancer, but is in great shape now. She and John had a wonderful time in Kitzbühl, Austria, with their three children and spouses. This fall they went on a foliage-viewing trip through New England. The real estate and insurance business had been turned over to their eldest son, and after 26 years of working, Charlotte and John are really enjoying retirement.

Elizabeth Hall Schwartz and husband have been enjoying their Get-Up-and-Go Passport, visiting many parts of the U.S. In Pompano they dined with Dot Stauber McCarthy and then spent a night with Sally Bryan Allen on a trip to the Bahamas, where they sailed for a week. Tish claims an easy and pleasant life.

Rozelia Hazard Potter suffered a heat stroke last July, is doing OK now, but is not yet allowed to play tennis. Posy was going to Maryland at Christmas to visit her children.

Marguerite Hume, who works with the Louisville Area Red Cross, wrote last winter of being swamped with disaster victims, mostly from a rash of fires. Marguerite found that Louise Peak lives in Cynthiana, KY. Please let Marguerite know if anyone knows where Annie Laurie Malone Bolling lives. She was her roommate, and Marguerite would dearly love to hear from her.

Nancy Jameson Glass and Bob celebrated their 40th wedding anniversary in Puerta Plata, Dominican Republic. It broke the winter doldrums, and they had a wonderful time. In summer they did a lot of sailing on Lake Erie and cruised across the Lake to Ontario.

Esther Jett Holland wrote her note while flying over Virginia on her way to Rome, Florence, and Naples on a special trip sponsored by the Chrysler Museum in Norfolk and escorted by the chief curator. She had just returned from Michigan to help daughter Martha with her new baby. Esther sat next to Lucy Doar Jones recently at Elizabeth Shaap Dixon's ('21) 85th birthday lunch. Esther also reports seeing Lucy Kiker Jones at Virginia Beach and talking to Byrd Smith Hunter, mostly about numerous grandchildren.

Primrose Johnston Craven tells us that her greatest trips this year have been to cross the bridge off of Cape Cod several times. She enjoyed visits from family and friends. Prim still works for the AAUW. She raised ¾ lb. tomatoes and is contemplating more elbow grease and polishing on Grandmother's dining room table.

Valerie Jones Materne is still farming in Washington, CT. She and her husband are now building a smaller, solar house right above their present home. Their children are living all over the world.

Bonilee Kay Garrett happily reports much needed rains in their dry area of Texas. She and Gavin enjoyed the much too short visit to their ranch by

Dottie Campbell Maher and her husband Jim. She says the talk was non-stop. Also Bonilee recommends a marvelous trip put on by the Smithsonian to Arches and Canyonlands National Parks, which they did in September.

Lucy Kiker Jones reports that Willy has retired, and they have moved to smaller quarters, but still live in Virginia Beach.

Karen Kniskern White continues to work at the busy Family Court. Bob, though partially retired, still travels to Australia. Tookie claims a great family: Terry, a marine engineer with two daughters; Pip, an architect; Mele, the daughter and public relations specialist, expecting a baby; and Mike, the manager of the Mauna Lani Hotel on Hawaii and his wife with their two girls and a baby boy.

Jean Greer Latham Jones wrote that she has three great children; Martha Faust, Bobby, Jr., and William Gordon, who was married in June in Canada to a nurse. Jean and Bobby have five grandchildren: Martha has two boys, and Robert, Jr., has three children.

Elizabeth McCormick Johnson enjoys her home on Portage Lake in Michigan summers. Then she works winters happily involved with pots and pans at Si Bonapproaches, Sanibel, FL. Traveling north and south by indirect routes offers excellent opportunities for Betty to see most of the Eastern U.S.A. Louise Lutz '29 is a delightful friend in Sanibel.

Fayette McDowell Willett claims that she and Roscoe are the oldest living first-time grandparents. Roscoe, IV, arrived this year, and their youngest son and wife have a baby on the way.

Jane McJunkin Briber's Frank is partially retired, having just returned from his ninth trip to China. Frank and Junk arrived home Halloween to Amelia Island, FL, via daughter Anne's ('69) in Washington, DC, sister Jane McJunkin Nelson's ('45) in West Virginia, sister-in-law's in North Carolina, and a friend's in South Carolina. They enjoy semi-retirement, but find themselves busier than ever. Junk, having done wood-carving for 27 years, is now silk-screening her Christmas cards.

Caroline Miller McClintock and Gales celebrated their 42nd wedding anniversary. Since Gales retired, they have been traveling and playing a lot of golf, on golf trips and at home. They visit their children in the Carolinas and love to watch grandchildren develop. They had a wonderful trip to Scandinavia. Caroline continues to find her volunteer work at two hospitals interesting and rewarding.

Anne Mitchell Albyn spends a lot of time visiting and being visited by five children and four grandchildren (two more expected). She plays tennis and loves gardening. Anne represented SBC in the academic procession at the inauguration (Oct. '84) of the new president at Denison U.

Nancy Pingree Drake claims her ninth grandchild, Courtney, arrived in September. She is the third daughter for David, Ping's son, and Kathy Walsh Drake '72. Ping and Em had a super trip driving through the beautiful Austrian mountains from Vienna to Munich. They were off to spend Thanksgiving in Philadelphia with their youngest son, Jonathon, and his wife. Jon is getting established in a law firm there.

Harriet Pullen Phillips had a wonderful bike tour in France last summer, bicycling through the Loire Valley, Brittany, and Normandy. Now she is busy at home doing the usual volunteer and yard work.

In 1983 Page Ruth Foster and Jim had a wonderful trip to England and Scotland. This year ('84) they took two trips to the Mainland, one to California to visit daughter Dolly and her family and the other for a month in New England to be with members of their families. Son Robin and his wife had a second son in April, and Nelson has returned from Japan.

Marjorie Shugart Short wrote Clare Eager Matthai that she had seen Posy Hazard Potter for three days in Florida. They relived all their wonderful memories of their SBC years and made a blood oath to return to our next reunion.

Byrd Smith Hunter held off writing us until she could announce that daughter Baird Hunter Campbell '70 had given birth to a little girl on Nov. 14. Byrd and Henry took a delightful cruise off the New England coast with friends in July, but the high point of last year seems to have been the family reunion at Garden Cottage on the Sweet Briar campus after the baptism of the first granddaughter, Ann Courtney, daughter of Carter Hunter Hopkins '68 and Ed. Blount is now working for the Rouse Co. in Maryland, so Byrd has no children living in Norfolk.

Judith Snow Benoit's first cousin, Joanie, won the Olympic marathon — a thrill for the Class of '43! Judy has been sick, but after a pleasant trip to Wisconsin, she is back teaching nursery school. She enjoys her children and eight grandchildren, all living within easy visiting distance.

Margaret Swindell Dickerman had a good trip to England and Scotland in June. The summer was pleasant, but uneventful. When she wrote, she was planning to go to Florida, provided the hurricanes stayed at sea.

Frances Taylor Trigg tells of a great party given by her children and two grandsons to celebrate her and Locke's 40th wedding anniversary.

Elizabeth Weems, with her Master's in architecture from Rice U., has been designing and building dwellings. Two are completed on the mainland side of the Gulf of California in Mexico, three condominiums and a large residence are at the model stage (temporarily on hold), and she has numerous other smaller commissions. Betty was recently in an exhibit of the Municipal Arts Society of New York's Times Tower Contest in which she placed in the top 1/6th of the entries.

Virginia White Brinton tells of the loss of her mother, age 97, who remembered all our SBC friends until the last, and of the loss of another family member, Jane Goolrick Murrell '40, who made a tremendous contribution to the gardens of Virginia. Ben and Ginny are involved in a Richmond Conference for Moral Re-Armament, called "Unity in Diversity — Will Richmond Lead the Way?" for which she sent me a brochure and invitation.

Louise Woodruff Angst is enjoying having John retired, but she finds she has much less time for garden club and civic activities. Weezie is playing lots of golf with her gorgeous new set of clubs. She and her husband took a trip to Alaska to visit two grandchildren and then went to Bermuda with friends from St. Louis. But she was ecstatic over a wonderful surprise — having won the trip to Holland for selling a lot of Sweet Briar bulbs! She'll go the end of April.

In April, '84, a card arrived from Nairobi, East Africa, from my star correspondent, Margaret Munnerlyn Haverly, who had traveled by air and box car (with other livestock) across Africa to meet Ben, her son. He had been living in a small village in Uganda since January of 1983, working as a Presbyterian Missionary out of World Harvest Missions in Philadelphia. "He greeted me at the Nairobi airport 3:00 A.M. Easter morn. What a happy reunion!" Munn wrote. Before leaving Kenya she went on a photo safari and photographed many beautiful animals. Munn is also on the list of "new" (some are seconds or more) grandmothers. Her daughter Peggy Glover recently moved to Charlotte, NC, had a little boy in May, their second child.

Our sixth grandchild, a dear little girl, was born to our No. 2 son, Ken, and Bonnie in October, and I went to Massachusetts to help out. The previous August Mac and I spent a pleasant ten days in South Wellfleet, where lies Cape Cod's National Seashore. We enjoyed being near our two Massachusetts children (our daughter Jean lives there too) and wandering trails of park or sanctuary or through the villages nearby. We find we like bird-watching and nature walking, and therefore we also spent a quiet week in the Blue Ridge, so occupied, last June.

Yet another proud grandmother, Julia Holt Coyle, writes, "At long last a dear little granddaughter, Kinsley Hel Gelkeson, was born to Isabel and Tommy Sept. 6th. Claiborne and Shannon have an Art Gallery in barn end of their huge old South Londonderry, VT, home. Julia (other daughter) and Steve travel — Europe-Australia, Canada — when he is 28 days off from work on oil rig. She practices law the 28 days in between — here (Charleston, WV). Lucy is a commercial loan officer in New York City with Citi-Bank. We are thrilled to have a granddaughter living nearby. Isabel (a nurse) is not working now. Thank goodness!"

Several classmates reported weddings in '84. "Wash" Ferrier Ramsay's fourth child, George, married Ann Stuart Edmonds, of Onancock, VA. Maria Gregory Tabb's daughter Keith was married Aug. 11 to Tom Wylie, who is on the Christ School faculty in Arden, NC.

Jane-Arthur Etheridge Hamlin went back to Florida for the first time in the 15 years since her mother moved to Wilmington, DE, and found you can go home again. Among the cousins and friends she visited were Sweet Briar alumnae Marjorie Wing Todd '36, Jane Cook Ross '46, and Sylvia Shaw Blount '48.

Nan Hart Stone and Billy are building again, this time a phase III (empty nest) smaller house not very far from their family home in Bon Air. Nan is well qualified to be our class consultant on all phases of house planning and construction. She tells me that Judy Burnett Halsey, now back in Richmond, has a daughter who is absolutely brilliant, Mary Stuart McGuire Gillam must also be proud of her younger daughter, Catherine, architect and lawyer, now a member of the firm of McGuire, Woods and Battle, in Richmond. Mary Stuart and Eleanor Bosworth Shannon came through illnesses this past summer. We are so glad to hear that the crises are behind them, and all is well.

Our deepest sympathy goes to Katherine Street Sharp on the loss of her husband, Alfred, in November.

I wish you all a healthy and interesting 1985, which should include the possibility of a letter to this correspondent before we both get too old to read and write.

Ann Marshall Whitley contributed additional news:

In early September Jean Old held a party at her beach house in Virginia Beach. As it turned out 7.9% of the entire graduating class of 1947 turned up with bathing suits, beach towels, and high hopes that Hurricane Diana would let them absorb a few rays. It was touch and go with the weather but we did manage a few pink noses and lavish use of assorted suntan lotions. Further south the hurricane lashed the coast of the Carolinas but for a day of heavy rain the group was spared the actual hurricane.

When it rained we trooped into Norfolk to visit Patty Traugott's ('48) husband James Rouse's Waterside. This is the new waterfront adventure for that city. It is full of marvelous restaurants and shops — very international. So what did Fuzzy Brinson Nelson buy? Three pounds of high calorie chocolate fudge which the rest of us polished off over the weekend. We decided to worry about our hips when we got home.

Jean next took us to her wonderful Norfolk home. She designed the house herself and built it with cantilevered balconies hanging right over the water of the bay. This, so she can hang her crab pots out and bring the crabs directly to the kitchen. Clever girl! While we explored the house, Jean went out to her garden and brought in a basket of apples, fresh figs, and 18" long chinese beans. We later managed to consume all of this as well as the fudge.

Back at the beach house Jean instructed us in how we were going to catch our dinner for the next evening with her gill nets. Shirley Levis Johnson would be anchor girl while Jean swam out to sea with the other end of the net. At 7 A.M. the next morning we were down at the shore untangling the nets and expecting nothing. Shirley anchored with the help of Eleanor Crumrine Stewart, Ann Marshall Whitley, and Ginger Barron Summers.

Jackie Murray Sanner decided to supervise, saying she was a white collar worker. "Not fair," we yelled over the crashing surf.

Nancy Cofer Stacey thought it advisable to go home to Norfolk and bring back a few spots and croakers that she had in her freezer just in case we didn't catch enough. When the day was over we had so many fish we couldn't eat them all. In fact when Jean came to Amherst to see Ann in November, she brought enough of the left overs to have a fish fry in the mountains.

Margie Redfern and Martha Smith Spencer wandered in for the big fish fry, and the jokes, laughter, and general hilarity nearly collapsed Martha. She was just recovering from an appendectomy and kept clutching her side. She said that splitting a side was no joke for her. Margie's niece, Kathleen Redfern, joined the party in order to take a few photos of the assembled 590 years of collected experience. At this writing I still haven't seen the photos but I can assure you classmates that we were really relaxed with our bare feet, sweat shirts and other items of most casual wear. We all let our hair down and Ginger did better than that — she took off her hair niece. We thought Martha's license plate went beyond the call of duty — MCS-SBC.

Our diversified lives and jobs made interesting discussions. Jean is an investment broker. Shirley is a travel agent. Jackie, a practicing artist, brought some samples of her gorgeous hand-painted Christmas ornaments. Margie is a librarian and Coter is an interior designer. Crummie is President of the Washington Sweet Briar Club (also an avid bird watcher). Fuzzy has just retired from the Norfolk area Red Cross and Ginger is into everything in the state of Georgia. We will never forget her raising $58,000 for our last class reunion! Ann is still running the Sweet Briar Museum and has had the antiques in Sweet Briar House added to her joys!

The mini reunion was so successful and fun we think we should repeat the performance next year.

Kay Fitzgerald Booker came to Sweet Briar for both Council and the Board of Dverseers meetings. She said they were dull compared to what she heard of the beach party.

Ann Beth Beard Eubank who lives in Monroe, VA, close by SBC, has recovered from a heart attack and looks fine. She had no daughters to send to the College as she raised a houseful of boys. For a number of years Ann Beth worked in the Amherst County Library system.

Alex Marcogiou Tully, still assistant to the director of Colt Industries in N.Y., went to Greece to stay with her mother for six weeks last summer. Her mother at 85 is doing well, and Alex said it was such a wonderful visit that for the first time she really hated to come back to New York. New York is just not what it used to be, says Alex.

Sara Bryan Glascock wrote up for Chattanooga's Girls Preparatory School's alumnae publication an account of the awarding to another SB alumna, Mildred Moon Montague '39, the school's Distinguished Alumna Award.

Aimee DesPland McGirt is still teaching Spanish at the local consolidated senior high school and working toward a Master's in Spanish from the U. of Northern Iowa Summer Institute in Soria, Spain, where she plans to take her comprehensive this summer. Her husband Vance, also a high school teacher and former coach, retired in '81 after 33 years in the classroom and on the playing field. Aimee saw Jackie Stilwell Clark last January when she and Dave stopped by on their way to Florida and again in August as Aimee and Vance stopped with them in Doylestown, PA. on their way back from Vermont.

Maria Tucker Bowerfind had a great day with Buzzy (Eleanor Boswell Shannon) en route home from Nags

Head in October. None of her girls is in residence. Maria has three boys in the nest — one hasn't flown (a junior in high school) and two have returned! Jane, the only daughter, is teaching 8th grade at The Wheeler School in Providence.

It has been 3½ years since our 30th Reunion in 1981, and my term as class secretary is coming to an end. I am sorry that I have not been able to gather more "real" news to include in these annual notes. I have just a few "crumbs" to share with you...when I had hoped to have a feast. Please write by Nov. 1, 1985...the next deadline. As time passes, old friends and good memories become more precious.

Bed and breakfast is a new concept for travelers here in the U.S. Three of our classmates (and there may be others) have entered the B & B field: Susan Taylor Hubbard and Ashby Jenkins Willcox of Norfolk are partners in Bed & Breakfast of Tidewater. Jean Randolph Bruns (Randie) has opened her "Anderson Cottage" in Warm Springs, VA, as a bed and breakfast accommodation. Keep them in mind when you're touring Virginia.

Mona Wilson Beard sends good news about her career. After teaching social studies for seven years, Mona has been appointed dean of students. On the lighter side, look for Mona on an upcoming episode of Magnum, P.I., which is filmed in Hawaii. Mona had fun working as an "extra" this past summer on the series — and even had lunch with the star, Tom Selleck!

Diana Weeks Berry accompanies her author-husband Henry on speaking tours and book-autographing trips. Last year, they were in North Carolina and Virginia promoting Henry's book, Semper Fi Mac. Diana had lunch with Mary Pease Fleming and Seymour Laughon Reynolds in Richmond and writes that they "laughed for hours." Diana's daughter Wendy was married last September in Darien, CT.

Patty Lynas Ford sent a Christmas letter summing up her family's activities for 1983: A June wedding for daughter Becca (her father performed the ceremony). The newlyweds are now living in Tampa, FL. After the wedding, Patty and Dick spent several weeks touring England.

Ruth Clarkson Costello continues to be a faithful correspondent. She sent the sad news of the death of Mary Pierce (Skeeter) Clark's daughter Mary Elizabeth in an auto accident last June. Ruthie also writes that the California contingent had a reunion on her Sausalito houseboat in the spring of '84 when Randie Randolph Bruns, Julie Micou Eastwood and husband Dick, and Patty Lynas Ford and husband Dick shared lunch and laughter. Ruthie continues to be busy writing poems and raising chickens!

Nancy Pesek Rasenberger echoes the sentiments of many of us when she writes: "Happily we are on the last rung of the college years with Jim a senior at Dartmouth..." She and her husband took a trip to England and Scotland to visit him when he was taking a term at the U. of Edinburgh. Daughter Mary is studying for her Ph.D. in Philosophy, and three other daughters are busy with careers as a lawyer, in cable TV, and in movie production — "all too busy with careers to be married."

Joan Hess Michel's youngest son entered Colgate U. last fall. Her daughter Jennifer is studying for her Master's in childhood education. Joan has recently taken a job as copy editor with historic Trinity church in New York City.

Angie Vaughan Halliday's children are all about grown. Marion, the youngest, is a junior at Dartmouth. Paul, 22, is teaching at the Field School in Washington, DC. Jane (25) is a free-lance violinist and is getting a second Bachelor's, this time in music. Culver, 26, was just admitted to the Kentucky Bar. Malcolm is in Boston making his way as a pianist, organist, and choir director. Angie and Bob are line and enjoy the yard and garden together, as well as hiking and other hobbies. She is involved with the Kentucky Opera Board and the Street Ministry program at her church.

Janet Broman Dingle and Larry had a wonderful trip to England last May. In June Janet's daughter Cathy had a second baby, making Janet grandma to two — plus Larry's five grandchildren! Her daughter Susan was co-leader of a group of 25 students from the States working for Campus Crusade for Christ in Argentina last summer.

Please send news!

Having heard from so few of you, I am assuming that you all plan to be at Reunion where we will catch up on each other in person. Until then, here are a few newsworthy notes.

First, in December, 1983, Fritz Merriman was married to Lester Naylor in Cleveland. Ginger Chamblin Greene and Art went up to see them in February and reported that he is a delightful man and they had a fine visit. Perhaps Art can persuade him to come to Sweet Briar in May to help him with his hospitality chores!

Pat Smith Ticer was elected Alexandria's vice mayor by the city council in June. Long active in civic affairs, Pat has been on the council for two years. Obviously, her energy level has not diminished with the years.

A couple of cards that came too late for last year's notes deserve mention even if the news is a bit stale. Sue Lawton Mobley reported a busy season as chairman of the Volunteer Board of Atlanta's Cerebral Palsy Center. With both children in college now — John at Tulane and Anne at SBC — she and John enjoy some getaway time at their house in the north Georgia mountains. Pat Meyer Robinson and family are now living in Austin, TX. Their children are grown and scattered. Their oldest son is a captain in the Army Corps of Engineers, stationed in El Paso; daughter Carol '79 is a bank officer in Winston-Salem, NC; Bob, finishing up at Texas A & M, is working for Pepsi; and Patti is at Baylor. Pat is still working for the IRS.

Mary Lange Holecamp, a launderer and past president of, first, the Boxwood Study Group of the St. Louis Herb Society and, then, the Boxwood Society of the Midwest, was elected second vice-president of the American Boxwood Society in May, 1984.

Susan Haywood Collins is vice-president of her daughter Suzanne's ('78) fashion accessories company. Briar Patch Designs, which has recently moved from Charlottesville to Greenville, SC. She now operates the retail outlet for Suzanne and says she has no problem with working for her daughter.

Diane Johnson DeCamp is baby-sitting again — or, at least, baby-admiring! The DeCamps' first grandchild, Abigail, was born to their son Doug last December.

I had a wonderful, newsy, Christmas ('83) letter from Dede Crater Pearse. She is still enjoying the Valley of the Sun and has become director of Sun Sounds, the radio reading service for the blind and physically handicapped in Arizona. They broadcast 16.5 hours a day, every day with 350 volunteers reading newspapers, magazines, and books. They also produce talk and call-in shows and do some of the programming in Spanish. "Exciting and challenging" sounds like an understatement to me! Dede's son Paul, a graduate of the Cornish Institute of Music in Seattle, is in Boston working for Cable-Vision. Beth, who is 25, is assistant manager of a riding and jumping school in Virginia. Dede and Beth spent Christmas last year in Boston with Paul.

In the travel department — and at our advanced age we seem to be more on the go than ever! — Evelyn Sanders Haugen reports trips to Egypt and Austria, as well as a nice visit with her sister Letitia Sanders Downing '61, in San Francisco. Mitzi Steit Halla's travel consulting business continues to thrive. In 1984 she had trips to West, East, and South Africa, and Ecuador and Peru, and Europe, and I saw her name on the brochure for the Alumnae Association's trip to Tunisia. Kenneth (21) is All-American in cross-country and a junior at William and Mary. Brian (19) is a sophomore at Duke U. Mitzi enjoys seeing Anne Lyn Harrell Welsh in Washington. Joan Kells Cook says their trips to Hawaii (daughter Betsy lives there), Connecticut, and Cape Cod are for relaxation. She stays very busy in the real estate business in Tacoma, and the other two children are nearby — Peter is a sophomore at WSU and Meredith is in Seattle.

Speaking of travel, Barbara McLamb Lindemann and I spent three wonderful weeks in Great Britain last summer. We took a two-week tour through England, Wales, Ireland and Scotland and spent a week on our own in London. It was marvelous and we plan to go back just as soon as we can accumulate enough cash!

Lee Fiducia Hartmann and Ruedi sold their house last spring and moved to Florida shortly after their youngest son, Eric, graduated from high school. I envy them the change in climate but shall miss having them in the neighborhood.

Shirley Sutliff Cooper called the other night to report on Alumnae Council and to nag a bit, but she also had some news of classmates. Gretchen Armstrong Redmond, Betty Sanford Molster, and Camille Williams Yow were also at Alumnae Council, and it sounded like the four of them had a wonderful time planning for reunion and discussing the rest of us! Shirley and Tom once again hosted the annual mini-reunion in Maine last August with Nancy Douthat Goss and Woody, Bar Plamp Hunt and George, Lydia Plam Plattenburg, and Anne Williams Manchester and Eli. They missed seeing Bexy Faxon Knowles and Bob by minutes. Their walk took longer than planned (I guess we're all slowing down) and Bexy and Bob were raising their sails and heading out of the harbor when the crowd spotted them. Shirley also reported that Vida Radin Stringer's Washington boutique is a big success. She went to Atlanta in October for a showing featuring Oriental objects.

All right, girls, it's our turn and I'm sure that by the time you read this, you will all have begun planning your trips to Sweet Briar in May. Aside from all the fun we're going to have, what better time to bring those younger daughters along to see the campus? Surely you remember how pretty it is in the spring. If you don't have a daughter handy, come anyway — I promise you'll have a wonderful time. You should receive Shirley's letter with the scrapbook questionnaire very soon, if you haven't already. Please send them to me right away so that your good intentions don't have time to melt away — and include pictures. The scrapbook is always fun, but the more pictures we have, the better it is. If you haven't sent your Alumnae Fund/Reunion Gift check yet, do it today! See you all in a couple of months!

A special thank-you to Di Doscher Spurdle, Betsy Smith White and Ann Young Bloom for all their efforts and hard work to make our 25th such a success. By now you have heard that we had the largest class gift in the history of Sweet Briar.

A brief summary of the Briar Patch Poll is in order. Of those responding, 11 did not wear glasses, 3 had tace-lifts, no tummy tucks, somebody claimed to be a grandfather, 1 person is a grandfather by marriage, nobody broke the rules and lots of people still have their originals.

Ann Pegram Harris was the star of Reunion. Ann just recently completed her degree requirements and received her diploma from President Nenah Fry during the Reunion class presentations.

Many familiar faces were gathered at the boat house for the class picnic. Everyone looked terrific and we just picked up from the last time we had seen each other. I shared a taxi from the airport with Betsy Colwill Wieggers. Betsy took early retirement from Time-Life and is taking life easy. She took up golf last summer on a challenge from George and is taking lots of courses to keep the mental side going. Betsy, George and Alex took a skiing trip to Cortina last winter.

The contingent from Northern California was there in force.

Liz Meyerink Lord came from Pebble Beach via London. Daughter Kathy is married and son Chris is at Dartmouth. Liz is working in interior design. Anne Wimbish Kasanin is living in Belvedere with husband Mark and two sons. (Older son Marc is a freshman at Cornell and Jamie is a freshman in high school.) They enjoy camping. Anne is looking forward to a busy two years as president of the San Francisco Opera Guild. Gretchen Smith Falk came from San Rafael. She has three girls. Ingrid is a junior at U. of Chicago, Erika a freshman at Colgate, and Lise is a junior in high school. Gretchen is indulging her theatrical aspirations as an actress in TV commercials and has been teaching high school English for 15 years.

Cookie Payne Hudgins reluctantly left the beach in Jacksonville, FL, to join us. On non-beach days Cookie is catering director at The Carousel, a gourmet lunch cafe and catering service. Son Bob, 23, is a U. of Fla. graduate and working in Jacksonville. Daughter Sally, 21, is taking a break from studies after two years at U. of Fla. Mary Blair Scott Valentine was extremely busy just before reunion with daughter Molly's wedding. In addition to her duties as director of alumnae affairs at St. Catherine's, Mary Blair is our new Class Fund Agent.

Snowdon Durham Kisner, who thought reunion was "marvelous," says they became grandparents when Chuck's daughter had a little girl in August. Kenneth is a sophomore at William and Mary, and Richard is a senior at St. James, playing football and applying to colleges.

Susan Taylor Montague is in real estate with McEneaney Assoc. in Alexandria, VA. Tabb Thornton Farinholt is director of admissions and college counseling at Norfolk Academy. Son Bart graduated from UVA in '84 and daughter Mary Blair is at SBC and will spend her junior year in France. Dede Ulf Meyer is pursuing graduate studies in Erie, PA.

Teenagers Hank and Tom are demanding, but Dede finds time for tennis, reading, music and special interest groups. Alice Cary Farmer Brown is as effervescent as ever. Her two eldest are both graduates of UVA. Lyons in '82 and Cary in '84. Son Stuart just finished his first year at U.Ga. Alice Cary is chairman of the Annual Fund and hopes we'll try to maintain our fantastic level of giving to help meet the $1,000,000 goal for '84-'85. She points out that the search for well-qualified students is equally important. As our representative on the Board of Overseers, she solicits our comments and concerns.

Ann Young Bloom convinced Rachel Bok Goldman to drive down from Philadelphia with her. Rachel and Dr. Allen S. Goldman were married in Nov. '81. Rachel has two grown sons and is extremely active in numerous civic organizations in Philadelphia. I hope someone took a picture of Rachel before or after the Sunday service; she was in a smashing outfit, hat and all.

Dr. Elizabeth (Liz) Johnston Lipscomb, associate professor of English at Randolph-Macon Woman's College in Lynchburg, has received the Gillie A. Larew Distinguished Teaching Award for 1984 for her outstanding scholarship and teaching effectiveness.

Another distinguished and accomplished class member is The Rev. Fleming Parker Rutledge. Fleming is a priest at Grace Church in New York. Ann Eagles Carrell is secretary-treasurer of the Board of The Carrell-Rogers Company, founded 1883, and is involved with many church committees in the Episcopal Diocese of Kentucky. Son William, 16, is a Life Scout.

Connie Fitzgerald Lange was with us at a reunion planning session in D.C. Now that twins Reed and Sarah are away at college, Connie finally has time for her own pursuits.

Dottie Moore Lawson is a speech pathologist at the Speech and Language Center of N. Va. and also a tennis professional. Dottie manages to juggle career with responsibilities as wife and mother to sons Ty and Gray.

You wouldn't have any trouble recognizing Gay Hart Gaines. Gay was at the planning session in D.C. and was returning for her first reunion. Travel, an interior design business, freelance writing, and research on the common "back problems" keep Gay on the go. Stanley, Jr., was married in Denmark in Aug. '83, and Gay included a classic family picture for the scrapbook. Stanley, Sr., just bought a new business. Gay and Elsie Prichard Carter had a chance to catch up on each other. Stanley and Prichard's brother grew up together in Charleston, WV.

Jane Jamison Messer brought the Freshman Rule Book. Jane also resurrected and repaired Grandfather and wants you to know that he is alive and well.

Vicki Meeks Blair-Smith came at the last minute and thought it was "neat" to see so many of us and sad not to see so many of us. She is enjoying life in Cambridge, MA. Vicki's interests include reading history, distance swimming, gardening, woodsing, and eating. She can get away with it. We had such a large turnout for Reunion, it's impossible to mention everyone. Other faces in the crowd at the boat house include Sally Beattie Sinkler, Lizora Miller Yonce, Cookie Cooke Carle, Betsy Duke Seaman, Barbara Sampson Borsch, Judy Sorley Chalmers, and Kathy Tyler Sheldon, our long distance traveler from Newfoundland.

Many could not be with us because of previous commitments over the holiday weekend.

Erna Arnold Westwig, in addition to her duties as family living instructor for Steuben County Teen-Age Parents Program, has been enjoying her hobby, traveling. She cruised the Danube over Easter, and Erna and husband Ralph went on a Windjammer cruise to celebrate their 25th wedding anniversary.

Martha Burnet Carlisle, executive assistant to the president of Salem College, says that working for a women's college makes her aware of the critical need for support from alumnae. She and Bob went hiking last summer in the Austrian and Italian Alps. "I'm sturdier than I ever imagined!" she wrote.

Ethel "Ess" Bruner Canfield is in her 24th year of teaching piano. Her two daughters are in California; Kathy is in graduate school at U.Ca. (Riverside) and Mary is a freshman at UCLA. When not teaching, Ess keeps busy with various volunteer work and is writing Easy Piano Course for Geriatrics. Next time you see Arnie Palmer on a Torro, notice the background — that's the Canfield residence.

Liz Chambers Burgess is very involved with Day Care and Child Development Centers in Norfolk, VA, a United Way agency. Her teenagers, Beth and Chuck, have inherited her love for the theatre.

Tricia Coxe Ware is in the catering business. She and a partner own and manage Gourmet Delights, Inc. Their business has doubled in the last year.

I talked with Susan Hight Rountree in February, and she wrote later. Sue is a miniaturist for the Rockefeller Folk Art Collection for Colonial Williamsburg and is working on several new books for Colonial Williamsburg. This time of year Sue is busy preparing dollhouses for the Christmas show and a huge new Regency Christmas tree for the Williamsburg Inn. She is on Garden Clubs of Va. State Conservation Committee. Jeff (15) and Chris (12) are involved with Scouts (Jeff is an Eagle Scout), tennis, choir, etc.

Jini Jones Dyer hopes you will look for Old World Dairy Yoghurt if you live in the East and Dean & DeLuca in NYC. Jini is director of public relations for Old World. She and owner/manager Allan Kern will soon be married.

Jane Kroegar Larimore couldn't make reunion because she was busy with son Lee's wedding in June, son Bob's graduation from TCU, and Susan's "point" horse shows.

Ginny Marchant Noyes and Tom were celebrating their 25th wedding anniversary in Russia at the time of reunion.

Sally Mayfield Schreiner is owner of SMS Publishing Corp. and has just co-authored her first book, Schooling for the Learning Disabled.

Karen McKenzie Smith is tutoring learning disabled students in Yuba City, CA, and is "domestic engineer" to four children and husband Art. Karen's daughter Jennifer will be attending American U. in D.C. this fall.

I just received word from Judy Nevins LeHardy that husband Ward has been promoted to Brigadier General and they might have to move again. This will be the 22nd move in 28 years. Sons Ward and Marcel are 2nd lieutenants in the Army. Daughter Sally has two children, ages 3 and 1½. Son Peter is a junior in high school. Judy received her B.A. (magna cum laude) from Austin Peay

St. in June '82. For relaxation Judy plays tennis and golf and jogs about 9 miles a week.

Virginia Ramsey Crawford had a busy summer. She toured Spain with the Fairfield County Chorale and then met Mac in Paris for two weeks in the Loire Valley, Normandy and Brittany. Two of their daughters were married — Jean Crawford (Mac's daughter) on Aug. 11 and Wynne Easton (her daughter) on Aug. 18! Virginia is a school librarian in Greenwich, CT. When she isn't being "Mother of the Bride."

Ginny Robinson Harris teaches 8th grade Language Arts and Science in Smyrna, GA. Son Carter is at Ole Miss, and daughter Whitney entered SBC in Sept. '84.

Debbie Von Reischach Swan couldn't be with us because her daughter was graduating from boarding school reunion weekend. Debbie sent a picture of the family, daughters 20 and 18 and son 15, at their summer home in Boothbay Harbor, ME. Debbie is on the Board of Directors of Boothbay Yacht Club.

Jane Wheeler Garcia gets the prize for having the youngest child. Augustas Israel, age 5. Jane's teaching duties in Oregon didn't permit her to be at reunion.

Ali Wood Thompson sent some beautiful pictures of their condominium and the beach at Kinei, Maui. They rent out the two-bedroom apartment, if any of you are interested. Son Taen is a mechanical engineer with Otis Engineering in Ventura, CA. Daughter Lynne is at Thomas College.

I ran into Susan Perry Farmer in the parking lot of Whittier College three years ago when her son Tom and my daughter Elinor were entering freshmen. Tom has since transferred to Occidental. Susan has moved to San Diego, which is what I'm doing in November. Susan, come over and pick up your pictures of Polly Space, Di Doscher, Jamison et al sunbathing on the deck between Manson and Randolph — also your record of the Freshman show.

I've had quite a time compiling the wealth of information received from all of you. My apologies but I could not include it all. To complicate matters, the day these notes were due I moved out of my apartment and am in the throes of moving to San Diego. The furniture went to storage, and I'm living out of the back of my car and borrowing beds until I can get into the new apartment Dec. 4th. Daughter Elinor is a senior at Whittier College and has had no trouble taking to the California life. Hope you all have a Merry Christmas and Happy New Year.

President

Allison Stemmons Simon (Mrs. Heinz K.), Bebo Travel Agency, 1431 Motor St., Dallas, TX 75207

Secretary

Elizabeth (Lisa) Wood Hancock (Mrs. Edward H., Jr.), P.O. Box 130, Sweet Briar, VA 24595

Fund Agent

Nancy Roberts Pope (Mrs. James), 2721 Farmington Place, Lynchburg, VA 24503

Thank all of you who took the time to respond to my plea for news. To those of you who didn't, I quote from one of your classmates: "I always love reading these notes from everyone else, so I thought I should contribute." Please remember that the next time you get a summons from me.

I went alphabetically by maiden names the last time and, since nobody seemed to complain, I will do so again. Betsy Beale Gunter has moved to a farm outside of Richmond, with a greenhouse and stables. She hopes to become a plant genius and begin riding again in her spare time. As far as I can determine, Betsy has very little spare time since she is still busy selling toys and children's clothes at her shop and is head of the Memorial Guidance Clinic Board for emotionally disturbed children. Katharine Blackford Collins is another very busy person as director of two group homes for abused and neglected adolescents. John teaches political science at Western Wyoming College. They and their two boys enjoy skiing, both cross country and downhill.

May Bowers was married in June to the Rev. Donald R. Morris in the National Cathedral in Washington. In September they moved to South Carolina where Don is rector of Christ-St. Paul's, Meggett, and Trinity, Edisto. They have become real natives, boating and fishing for shrimp and crab. May's Daley is in 7th grade at Charleston Day and her Tina is at St. Timothy's in Baltimore. Laura Lee Brown Deters writes that her 13-year-old, Polk, is away at Indian Mountain in Connecticut and loves it. Laura Lee is taking her museum collectors group to New York this year to buy contemporary art. No fakes for this group, she insists!

Nancy Caldwell Briggs, responding with the news for the first time ever (other lost souls take note), writes that she is a real estate broker and her husband, Bob, is a real estate developer in Vero Beach. Their 16-year-old son is at Episcopal High School, and they have a 10-year-old daughter at home. Ginger Cates Mitchell wrote just after a trip to San Francisco where she enjoyed a long, chatty lunch with Cinnie Hooten Magowan whose two older boys are in college at Yale and Trinity. Ginger said that Cinnie looked wonderful. Ginger's 18-year-old Jennifer is in the process of selecting a college, her Mandy is a "sophisticated" 14-year-old, and Edward is a delightful 10. Ginger also gave us news of Olive Wilson Robinson's daughter Sara who is spending her junior year at St. Andrew's before finishing at U.Va. Olive wrote later that Sarah had a marvelous visit with Lu Durham Purvis during her first week as a student. Trigg, the second daughter, is enjoying a freshman year at Princeton.

Doris Chu has just married Stanley L. Schultz and they live in Long Beach, CA. Doris is director of music, marketing and merchandising for a new film production company. She is also in the NBC Writers' Workshop and on the Association of Asian Pacific American Artists' New Projects Committee.

Lyn Clark Pegg is busy working with the Office for Children which is a state agency in Massachusetts. Her community interests and activities continue to be in the areas of peace and justice, especially as these issues relate to women. Lyn's daughter is looking at colleges, planning to major in political science and international relations. Her son David is 15.

McNair Currie Maxwell's post card amused me enough to quote it entirely: "Lisa, your comment about middle age and the implication that we should have changed or progressed struck a chord. In the fall of 1963, just out of SBC and about to go to New York to do something important (whatever that might be) I was asked to replace my own Latin teacher and filled that job for a year. I never got to NYC except to visit, but off and on I have taught Latin (as well as English and History — my real field). Now 21 years later I am again teaching three levels of Latin in a local high school. What progress!!"

Nancy Dixon Brown and Oon have adopted a baby girl born October 4, 1984. She reports that their new daughter is lots of fun and very good, but she stays up too late. Nancy stays busy teaching, taking care of the baby and her older sister, Katherine. Betsy Flanders Spencer wrote from Charlottesville the day she and Bill were leaving on a trip to France. She reported on a grand visit that she, Susan Terjen Bernard and Marta Sweet Colangelo had last summer. She also saw Lynn Carroll Blau and her lovely daughter when they were looking at U.Va. Rusty McHugh Lilly's daughter and Betsy's son are classmates at St. Anne's-Belfield. She also had a good visit via the telephone with Marion Behrens Collins from Texas.

Ann Funkhouser Strite writes that her career in teaching embroidery is really taking off, literally, since she's on airplanes frequently. She has been to Atlanta, Louisiana and out to Mills College in California to lead seminars and will be in Lynchburg in April.

While at Mills, she took advantage of the close proximity to visit relatives in Hawaii. Ann's mother is part Hawaiian, so it was a real treat for her to trace her roots. Lucetta Gardner married Edward J. Mannion last August. He is a claims manager for Hartford Insurance and Lou is working part time with a school psychologist. She is still active in the Republican Party and is working on a Winter Festival for Casper, WY, to be held in February. Prue Gay continues to teach 6th grade in Lexington, MA, and has been learning obedience methods with her dalmation. She is looking forward to an exhibition put on by Mandy McCormick Cronin and her beagles at the Centennial Dog Show in Philadelphia.

Karen Gill Meyer had an exciting summer with trips to the spectacular Opening and Closing Ceremonies of the Olympics, the Baseball All-Star Game in San Francisco, the Miss America Pageant, and to Washington, DC, for the opening of the Bob McCall Show at the Smithsonian. Katherine Haskell Subramanian is a medical editor at the American College of Physicians in Philadelphia. She and Ken bought a small Victorian house in 1981 right across from an entrance to Fairmount Park, the "largest city park in the world." They had a great bicycle trip in Vermont in October.

Joan Johnston Ambrose a real estate company with offices in midtown Manhattan and Greenwich Village. They sell buildings of all sorts, townhouses, co-op and condo apartments, and do some management and rentals. Joan says she has to work too hard! Her husband is an investment banker and their son is a sophomore at Columbia. Sue Jones Cansler and Chuck are back in Atlanta after ten years and are happily settling in. Sue has a new job working for a software development company and loves it. Prue Gay reported that Sue sounded great when she called Prue in October.

Randy Kendig Young has started an interior design company and is involved in several Chicago institutions on a volunteer basis. Ron has sold his business to a British firm, so they look forward to some overseas travel.

Anne Leavell Reynolds is busy teaching full-time for the first time ever. She has two at Hotchkiss and had dinner with Anne Pinckney Gay and her family on Parents' Day. Chenault McClure Conway and her daughter stayed overnight with the Reynolds last fall. Chenault's daughter spent last summer in Japan with Youth for Understanding.

Keith Matheson Wood and Frank traveled to England and Scotland in September where she visited St. Andrew's and enjoyed seeing old favorite places. The Woods' daughter Helen is a freshman at SMU. Nancy McDowell Fairbanks is still a school social worker in Manchester, CT. Her Ted is a National Merit Scholar freshman at Occidental College in Los Angeles. Her 16-year-old twins are juniors in high school. Nancy says she loves not driving car pools now that they have their licenses, but she doesn't sleep as well. She also has a small private clinical practice in Storrs and is on the board of the Connecticut Chapter of the NASW.

Temperance Parker joined Bishop Allison's staff in the Episcopal Diocese of South Carolina as Executive for Program last summer. Tempe has spent the last three summers studying theology at Regent College in Vancouver. Elizabeth Randolph Lewis is adjusting to a quiet household this year since her Elizabeth, a 10th grader, is the only child still at home. The other three are at U.Va. Elizabeth is still busy with all her "club stuff" as she puts it. Very exciting news from Harriet Reese Jensen. Her daughter Marianne is a freshman at Sweet Briar. My mother has met Marianne and says she is lovely. Harriet is fine, still raising dogs and horses on their farm in Denmark.

Sally Smith Cahalan lives in rural Pennsylvania. She is executive director of an historic house museum, Wheatland, in Lancaster and is working on her master's in American Studies at Penn State. Her husband, Jim, runs his own computer business.

Betty Stanly has given up her very successful travel agency and in May she and Alvin B. Cates, Jr. were married at the Cathedral of St. Philip in Atlanta. Betty and Alvin are now living in Vero Beach, FL. Allie Stemmons Simon was the organizer and coordinator of the Sweet Briar Overseers meeting in Dallas last fall. From all reports, here on campus and from people at the meeting, she did the Class of '63 very proud. I have the pleasure of Allie's company when she is on campus for Board meetings and can testify that she is one busy woman. In addition to running her own travel agency, helping Heinz with his clubs and working for Sweet Briar, Allie still has time for travel. They were in Europe last summer and spent a week sailing in the Virgin Islands the week after Thanksgiving.

Mary Ann Utterback Burritt and Jim are now living in Mt. Laurel, NJ, since Jim has taken over the Naval Sea Systems Engineering Command in Philadelphia. Their Cheri is our first class daughter to graduate from Sweet Briar. Their Kiendel is a junior at Wellesley, and their Jimmy is a high school sophomore. Sally Yon Williams is working on two books at once. She says this hustling is to help pay for a New York apartment she and Peter have bought. Those of you who do not know of The Art of Presenting Food would be smart to find it soon. Those who do know it will join me in anticipating her new books.

That is all the news I was sent. I see Jessica Bemis Ward from time to time and she is flourishing, staying busy with many activities, among them being a moving spirit on the Board of the new Lynchburg Symphony Orchestra. I talk to Nancy Wood occasionally. She is living in rural southwestern Virginia and is working at the Bristol Mental Health Center. She sounds blissful living in the country, making composts and gardening, and tending her three dogs and two cats. I am happily working again after taking several years off to be full-time mother and stepmother. In September I began a hectic, but delightful, job at the Lynchburg Fine Arts Center and, now that I am not tied to the house and car pool, I feel like myself again! We are all fine and still love being so near Sweet Briar.

Fund Agent

Lindsay Smith Newsom (Mrs. Major C., III), 1501 Carr St., Raleigh, NC 27608

Again the Class of 1967 responded to the call for news! Thank you, and I hope you enjoy everyone's news as much as I did. Keep May 1987 (two more years) circled on your calendar for the big 20th. Happy birthday to all those 40-year-olds in the class! (Age 21 seems such a short time ago.)

Mimi Harrison Rippin wrote that she is back in Atlanta and working as education director for the Georgia Trust for Historic Preservation. Daughter Allyn is 10 years old.

Kim Waters is very busy in Washington, OC, with her job at American Bankers Association as well as being a deacon at her church and working on the Hunger Committee for their local missions. Kim traveled to Dallas and visited Daphne Baynham White, who has been flourishing as a Realtor for the past seven years. Daphne's husband Kemble is a partner in a law practice, as well as director in newly formed Midway National Bank.

Beth Glaser Morchower is a hostess with the mostest. Margy Dortch Brooks and family visited in Richmond, as well as Carroll Randolph Barr and her family.

Ashland, OR, is now home for Gene King Leyden. Gene is still practicing her midwifery, teaches dance/movement to children 2½ to 9 years of age, and also teaches preschool gymnastics. A busy lady!

Jane Stephenson Wilson has the same job, same house, and same husband and two sons (7 and 4 years old).

A career of coordinating activities in a household of five keeps Beth Dixon Baldwin busy. Her children are 16, 11, and 3, and she is "mother" to a large dog and two cats, as well.

Melissa Sanders Thomas is driving her 14- and 11-year-olds more and enjoying it less. Her ballroom dancing classes are her greatest joy. Along with a partner, Melissa taught over 200 adults and teenagers to be "happy hoofers."

The year 1984 brought lots of travel for Susan Tucker with three trips to Paris, on one of which she visited the family she lived with during her Junior Year in France. Her advertising and P.R. business is booming — in new quarters since summer.

Pat Neithold Hertzberg finally finished her M.B.A. program at Va. Tech and is working as an equity analyst in the investment department of an insurance company. She's becoming an expert in "out foxing" the market. By accident, on a recent trip to Hawaii, the Hertzbergs ran into Pam Sullivan Livingston and Curt and caught up on old times over sunsets and rum drinks.

Mary Bell Timberlake just moved into a new home in Staunton, VA, with lots of leaves to rake. Son Wayt is now driving, so Mary has to share the car with him, as well as her clothes with daughter Julie.

Mellie Hickey Nelson has been commuting to Houston from Washington, DC, for about a year for a trial. Back home now, she and Paul are enjoying Gunar, age 3. Mellie saw Polly Eells in South Carolina recently and reported that Polly looks wonderful and has a great job in Charleston.

A 10th year reunion at Harvard Business School Ph.D. program brought Kay Trogdon Hightower and Neil to Boston from Thomaston, GA. Kay is president of the Jr. Woman's Club this year.

Beth Gawthrop Rieli is thriving in Boston. Beth's food writing can be found in Gourmet, Bon Appetit and Grand Diplome cookbooks. Beth also just signed with a publisher to write her first book — a culinary glossary. Congratulations! John, who teaches English at B.U., has his caricature exhibition traveling from Yale's British Art Center to the Library of Congress to London's Victoria and Albert Museum.

Lucille Drr Morrison and her family have decided to stop moving every weekend and live in the country permanently. She and Lane live in Savannah, GA, and will be renovating their ca. 1810 home.

Diane Mann Lankford writes that her nine-year-old interior design business is now a career. Her children are 13 and 9. Diane sees quite a bit of Susan Tucker and Kay Trogdon Hightower when they can all escape together.

August 1983 found Mary Cary Ambler Finley, John, and the children in England for the month. They rented a cottage in Cornwall and totally enjoyed themselves. Mary Cary is V.P. of the Parent's Assoc. of Riverdale Country School for this year.

Toni Naren Gates is one proud mama! This summer her daughter played one of the orphans in a professional regional production of Annie. The grease paint calls mother and daughter. Freedom is a word used by Toni now that her young son is off to kindergarten. Toni and Bud did find time to get two weeks in Europe this summer.

Carol Hartley wrote to update us all on what has happened since 1963. Carol graduated from Ohio U. with a B.A. in English. One husband, one baby, and 10 years later, Carol got her M.B.A. in Marketing from Marshall U. Living in Charleston, WV, Carol is a broker for Hutton, and she and Heather travel on many sales trips that Carol wins.

Mary Eckman Echols and Steve and Lee, age 7, are now living in Greensboro, NC. Mary is still a member of the almost extinct group of "homemakers" who run around volunteering and playing an occasional game of tennis. Steve has become a rockhound, looking for gems in the mountains of North Carolina.

Lynn Frazier Gas had an action-filled 1984. Lynn married Francois Gas in Dec. 1983 and they will be transferred from Pasadena, CA, to Westfield, NJ. On their house-hunting trip East, Lynn visited with Bonnie Jackson Werbe.

Pam Ford Kelley is busy with her law firm and lace import business in Newport, RI. She and Brendan just renovated a 1740 building, so both businesses have a home. Brendan works in Boston as creative director for Ingalls, an ad agency.

Sally Twedell Bagley has two active children, 13 and 3, but also finds time to teach 30 weekly piano students and work with the Jr. League, Children's Hospital and Boys Club. Husband Philip was recently elected to the American College of Real Estate Lawyers and is president of the Legal Services Corp. of Virginia.

Moving to the Dallas/Fort Worth area is Stephanie Lucas Harrison. She will start law school at SMU and try to juggle two sons, 8½ and 2½ years old.

Judith Haskell McCarthy wrote to tell us of her marriage to Kevin McCarthy, a classmate at UVA. In May of 1982 Judy graduated from UVA with her M.B.A. She and Kevin live in Winter Park, FL, where Kevin is president of the McCarthy Co., a greeting card company that carries a line of "Corporate Cackles."

Back from three weeks in France and England is Colleen Collee Hall, who is trying to face reality. She is kept hopping with her children and her interior design business.

Word from Gina Dunlap Cogswell is that she was treasurer of the Atlanta Jr. League for 1984. As an American Studies major, Gina feels that says something for the versatility of SBC graduates. Gina also keeps busy as a mediator for the Neighborhood Justice Center.

Lynn Lyle is now working in Raleigh, NC, as assistant director of development at N.C. State. Lynn received a warm welcome from SBC-ers Lindsay Smith Newsom and Tea Burnette.

Jo Weins MacMichael works as a cost analyst with the Navy while husband Skip is commanding officer of the T.C. Hart, stationed in Norfolk. Jo is also working toward her M.B.A. at George Washington U. Their elder son is a RAT at VMI, while their other son is a freshman in high school.

Dolly Caballero Garcia and Julio are still working with the Opera de Puerto Rico. This summer included trips to Washington, DC, Hershey, PA, New Orleans, and Florida.

Back from 12 years in Texas, Baird Shinberger Bell and family are enjoying Washington, DC, and the change of seasons. Baird will be teaching chemistry at St. Agnes Episcopal School in Alexandria. She is very proficient in "carpooling" with her two sons, 11 and 8.

Lisa Harvey Morton announced the birth of their son John Tilghman in Dec. 1983. Lisa says her five months of total bed confinement was worth every minute. Her son was welcomed by sisters aged 11 and 15. Her next-door neighbor in Nantucket during the summer is Pam Sullivan Livingston, who travels all the way from California.

News from Judy Hay Speary in Maryland is that she has her own company, System Designing and Programming, Inc., while her husband Bill also enjoys systems programming and financial overseeing with his microcomputer manufacturing company. The Spearys are planning to buy a sailboat and travel to the Caribbean and Europe.

Lindsay Smith Newsom is helping rewrite Raleigh's Art-in-the-Schools lecture series for 3rd and 4th graders. After our gymnastic triumphs in the Olympics, daughter Kate aspires to be the next Mary Lou Retton. Mac's interest in garden restoration keeps him busy in everyone's yard but his. Lindsay and Sue Morck Perrin are godparents to Gretchen Bullard Barber's twins. Fun visits took place last summer with Page Munroe Renger, Lynn Lyle, and Tea Burnette.

Barbie Tillman Kelley is still working with the Artmobile in Birmingham, AL, and is back in school getting her Ed.S. in Early Childhood Education. Her baby Trey is 3 years old, with David, 11, and Darcy, 8. The family visited Florida and Pennsylvania last summer.

Maria Wiglesworth Hemmings is exhausted chasing after Emery, 7, and Anne, 3. To keep her sanity, Maria is working part time as a product designer and planner for Micro Computers. She and Jeff started skiing again last winter and practiced in Austria.

Katharine Barnhardt Chase earned her B.S. in Nursing in May 1984 and has passed her state boards. She will be working part time at the Public Health Dept. in a Lead Poisoning Prevention Program and part time at a hospital on a medical surgical floor.

It's been two years since we've heard from Jill Berguido. Jill wrote to announce her marriage to Bruce Gill in September 1984. She is now Jill Gill! Jill and Bruce bought an 1860's farmhouse and are busy restoring it. They are getting used to "love among the ruins." Bruce is a museum management consultant and also does cabinetmaking. Jill's son Timmy is 4½ and is in nursery school.

Lang Lloveras Gomez wrote to tell us of the birth on Mar. 8, 1984, of her son Juan, who was born in a blizzard, like his brother and sister. This winter their restored home will have a heating system after two years of a wood stove. Lang is also involved with saving the historic district of Waterford, VA, and finishing up the fourth year of her Education for Ministry program.

Carroll Randolph Barr and Mike flew off to Sun Valley, ID, last summer with Pam Jones Brown '66 and her family, visited in Michigan, and came home on the plane with a 1971 graduate of SBC. Carroll is planning a 40th year birthday party for anyone interested and willing to admit it.

Belinda Gullett Strazzini is employed at Ft. Eustis, VA, as a management consultant. Husband Ed is completely rebuilding her 914 Porsche in his spare time, when not working as the chief of doctrine for U.S. Army Aviation Logistics School. This year he made the Lt. Colonel list. Lynn's stepdaughter Suzy is a freshman at U. of So. Fla., and stepson Tim has been accepted at Jesuit H.S. in Tampa.

It was so nice to receive news from Ginny Young Phillips in Swampscott, MA. She and David have four children, Marleigh, 11, Dean, 9, and twins Eben and Palmer, 7 years old. The family keeps busy skiing in Vermont and sailing. Ginny works part time consulting as a systems analyst/programmer.

Page Munroe Renger enjoyed her summer being a bum! She spent five weeks at the beach and traveled to Boston. After the children were back in school, Page worked for the election of a Congressman from North Carolina. Page is still running three miles a day, as well as walking from four to nine miles a day. Exhausting to think about!

Emily Chenoweth Major was written up in the Birmingham Post Herald as a "Wonder Woman who practices what she preaches." Emily owns two workout studios, runs marathons, swims, bikes, and leads exercise classes. She and her husband have three daughters.

Betsy Kuriz Argo is now associate director of development at Columbus School for Girls in Columbus, OH, and finds the new job challenging and rewarding.

Carole Munn will celebrate 15 years as a flight attendant with Pan American World Airways. She stays busy with tennis, golf, horseback riding, and travel. She's still single and loves the freedom; she's tied down only by her five-year-old kitty, Abba.

Victoria Jones is once more working for the French government in its export promotion office in N.Y.C. The strong U.S. dollar makes for a very lively atmosphere right now, she says.

I received word from the Alumnae Office of the death of Peggy Schulz Graziano. The Class of 1967 will miss her and we extend our sympathy to her family.

Having practiced law with the Washington office of a Wall Street firm, Marion M. MacRae has decided to take four or five months off to contemplate needed changes in her life style. She seeks endeavors more meaningful than services to corporate clients.

Your secretary is working part time as a relocation coordinator for a large local real estate firm, as well as just having been appointed director of their Luxury Homes Division. Being a grandmother is much fun. Andrew Douglas Stone was born in March and is now a bouncing bruiser ready to walk. After major surgery in October, I was ready to enjoy a month's rest and recuperation with a good book, my quilting and knitting. I had a nice visit from Bonnie Blew Pierie, Tim, and family last summer. We relived being roomies so many years ago.

Beverly Van Zandt Steele (Mrs. Robert E.), 3627 Newcastle, Houston, TX 77027

Hello again, everybody! My biggest news is our move, but I'll get to that after I've caught you up on everyone else's doin's (as they say here in Ag-gieland). I think you'll all be impressed with the way our numbers are swelling (pun intended): we've added scads of new babies to the ranks, as well as a number of husbands!

To begin with our northernmost correspondent, Lendon Gray dismounted long enough to pen a brief card noting that her horses had won five national championships this year, and that she also had two students win national junior championships. "This was a big boost after my disaster in the Olympic Trials," she notes, referring to the fact that she and her horse Seldom Seen made it onto the "short list" of alternates for the Olympic team, only to have the poor beast come up lame for the first time in its life a mere four days before the final trial.

Three of our number managed to check in from Massachusetts: Wendy Weiss Smith announced her aunthood to sister Cathy's ('74) daughter Suzanne and reported that she is teaching in an extended-day program organized by Lexington, MA, parents and English as a second language in a Boston corporation headquarters. She noted she has done lots of autumn traveling in New England and the East Coast, and was anticipating with relish W&L's trip to East Europe scheduled for the winter. Jan Pridmore broke a long silent streak to send a card from Boston, where she has been living for the last eight years, slowly working on a Ph.D. in English at Boston U. She's a teaching fellow there, which gives her needed experience while leaving her a trifle battle-weary, after three years teaching composition! And Liz Mumford is still painting in Hyannis Port, keeping extremely busy, what with two art shows last summer (one at an Evansville, IN, museum, the other on the Cape) and another last Thanksgiving.

Louise Dempsey McKean is taking advantage of the fact that all of her brood (Molly, 12; Margot, 8; and Matthew, 6) are finally in school to catch up on 12 years of unfinished projects and put the finishing touches on a major addition to her house. She's also volunteering at school and gearing up for another snowy winter in Manchester, NH.

Susan Greenwald managed to whip off a card postmarked New York City as she was packing for a vacation in the UK. It looks like she's hardly ever home, for she reports visits from Robi Randolph Hearing in Feb. '83 and with Mim Washabaugh Meglin over July 4th in New Orleans. Mim is busy with her M.B.A. program, but it seems Sioux was able to lure her away on a plantation tour, which is described as "much in line with our SBC training"! Sioux also writes of Dee Kysor Smith's now past November wedding, where she was to be a bridesmaid. To top it off, she reports a November visit with Ann Tippin and her managerie and continued "mental health getaways" to Wendy Weiss Smith's home in Littleton, MA.

Midge Montgomery Hebard and Doug are recent transplants to Manhattan's upper west side, having spent 10 years in Colorado. Midge performed in The Dining Room in Vermont and has appeared several times on One Life to Live. Doug is a project engineer with Amman and Whitney in the World Trade Center.

Also in the Big Apple is Lissy Stevenson, who reports that the "only thing that hasn't changed is her location...same tiny apartment." She's presently director of licensing and marketing for the National Audubon Society, and is very happy with the change from her years of retailing with Saks and Laura Ashley.

Wendy Weiler was married to Donald Chappell on June 30, and they had a trip to Europe before returning to live in Manhattan.

Not much has changed with Maggie Mather Feldmeier, who still claims the "same husband (Jake) and the same children (Kate, 7, and Julie, 4), "and the same old job as director of community relations for CONTACT-Syracuse, the area's 24-hour telephone listening and counseling service. She also acts as a trainer/facilitator at listening skills workshops for corporations, on a consulting basis. There was one big change, though: a move to a new home was to have taken place last December.

One of our New Jersey contingent, Jill Minnema Worth, has entered the world of volunteerism after illness obliged her to leave her position as prosecutor for the city of Paterson. Now she finds that "working full time may keep one less busy than all the part-time and volunteer jobs you have thrown at your head once people find out you're not working!" Husband Larry has also made a career change, from being city manager of Ridgwood, NJ, to the construction company founded by Jill's father. Jill celebrated joint birthdays with Susan Greenwald and also talks frequently with ex-roomie Martha Bickham Traini, who, she says, is well and happy and extraordinarily busy being a CPA.

Upper Montclair is still home for Jeannette Bush Miller and Flip, who welcomed daughter Sarah Adams Miller on July 27. They attended Becky Randolph Boyer's wedding in January '83 and get together often with her and her husband Scott.

In nearby Summit, Anne Milbank Mell and John have added #3: Caitlin was born July 2nd, and joins Meredith (7½) and Johnny (4). Caitlin and baby Sarah Miller are great pals, Anne says. She's still president of the northern New Jersey SBC club, where she recently welcomed as a member Harriet Newman Twig '73, our classmate Carol Newman's sister. Anne is also active in Junior League and the Junior Woman's Club (in which she completed two years as president last May, during which time her club received the "Diamond Dozen" award as one of the 12 most outstanding clubs in the state). She also encourages everyone to start planning now to attend our 15th reunion next spring.

Debby Proctor III and Rob now have a brother for daughters Courtney (5½) and Kelsey (3); Gerritt Proctor III arrived November 3, 1983. Rob still works on Wall Street, and Debby has been busy with an addition they've built to their house. She took up golf last summer but notes her major form of exercise is still chasing after the children.

From Wayne, PA, Katie Horan also writes of decorating a new home, and of having moved her office from Philadelphia out to Westchester. She made a trip to Palm Beach last February with Jennifer Slade Belovsky, who, Katie says, looks the same as ever ("terrific and thin"). Katie also wrote of plans to spend some time in Scandinavia this summer, as well as of hoped-for visits to the North Cape region. Fellow Pennsylvanian Marilyn Boyd checked in from York to say she'd settled back in her hometown about three years ago, after living in Fort Lauderdale, Honolulu, and Washington, DC. She also made a career change after ten years in retail and is now with the AAA in commissioned sales. Mimi has just bought her own townhouse condo, acquired a cat, and is seriously contemplating matrimony in '85.

I always hear a lot from Washington and the surrounding areas — though not, unfortunately, soon enough to have a chance to get together with these folks! From Severna Park, MD, Pammy Henery Arey and Pat send word of waterfront life outside Annapolis, which is agreeing with the two of them and new son John Patrick Kane Arey, born August 23, 1984. He joins Lindsay (12), Anne (11), and Molly (5). Pammy laments that her energy level isn't what it was 12 years ago (whose is?) but notes that "somehow, the Lord provides!"

Barbara Brand, administrator of the Hammond-Harwood House in Annapolis, an elegant 18th century building designed by William Buckland and reflecting the work of Andrea Palladio, spoke in October in the art gallery of St. John's College at the opening of an exhibit there on Palladio's influence on Buckland.

Gina Mancusi Wills was one of the few Washingtonians with whom I had a chance to spend some time before my move. She hasn't changed a bit — still an Ass at heart! She's back in school while Ashley is posted to the State Department, which is hectic at best, but we enjoyed a lovely afternoon poolside, catching up on at least the big things, while our sons and her daughter made friends over drippy chocolate creamsicles.

My ex-housemate at Boxwood, Alice Meyer Hughson, and husband George have resettled in Alexandria, VA, after four years in Seattle, WA. She is working as a labor and delivery nurse in her spare time from mothering daughter Bonnie.

A bit further down the road in Virginia, Alix Sommer Pearce is still assistant principal at Drew Middle School outside Fredericksburg, restoring a 1912 house (she decided to hire out painting the trim after she fell off the porch with the trellis on top of her) and is discovering the joys of cross-stitch. Husband John is teaching historic preservation full-time at Mary Washington College, to which Carolyn Rusch Rose Von Endt was to have paid a visit in November to lecture on conservation of museum collections.

From Chester, VA, Kathy Jones Yuell, a clinical psychologist, writes that she is working at Poplar Springs Hospital in the Adult Psychiatric Unit, plus part-time in private practice. Both kids are in school now.

Amanda Megargee Sutton and Michael are in Petersburg, where Amanda is enjoying "everything about motherhood except that Jamey's growing so fast." At 12½ months, Jamey was walking, adding words to his vocabulary every day and being "a super kid for a working mother." Amanda's still teaching preschool handicapped children, and they see Pat Conner Bland, Bruce and Catherine (2½) constantly.

From Gloucester Point, VA, a fishing village on the Chesapeake Bay where she lives in a little waterfront cottage, Susan Schmidt wrote of sailing in Florida and the Bahamas as a delivery skipper for pleasure cruisers, and earning a Coast Guard Captain's license — all this in '83. (She also did some other things, but unfortunately part of her postcard was missing!) In '84, she spent six months writing for a sailing newspaper out of San Diego and is currently working as Sea Grant editor for the Virginia Institute of Marine Science.

Elodie Taylor Thompson FINALLY has a change to report! Her new job is as librarian at the Central Elementary School in Amherst, VA. Son Clay, 7, is now in second grade, and Meredith, 4, tells everyone she goes to college (at the Sweet Briar nursery school). She also remarked she'd seen Valeria Murphey Robinson's picture in her Va. Education Assn. Journal.

From Blacksburg, Dee Kysor Smith announces her marriage to George Crafts, noting she'll use Smith-Crafts as her new name. She is in her second year of vet school at Va. Tech, and her daughter Jennifer is now in kindergarten and was to have been one of her mom's bridesmaids.

Kathy Garcia Pegues sent a tome from Jeffersonton, noting that the highlight of her year was receiving the Fauquier County Excellence in Education award for 1984. With her grant money she went to Haiti, and her experiences there made fascinating reading. Those of you whose interests include the crusade against world hunger might want to get in touch with her. Kathy is also teaching high school English and again coordinating the CROP Hunger Walk for Fauquier County. Daughter Emily is 6 and Adam, 4; husband John is still assistant principal at the high school where Kathy teaches and is branching out into Real Estate with Merrill Lynch.

Winding up the Virginia contingent are Mary Frances Oakey Marshal and Heman, still in Roanoke and now the parents of three, the latest arrival being their second daughter, Courtney, who put in her appearance on July 7.

Over in West Virginia, Janet Burks Ross and Larry are still in Princeton, where Janet is teaching second grade at Keystone Elementary "in the coal-fields" and Larry is in his last year at Bluefield College and pastoring the Silver Springs Baptist Church. Their children Lisa and Chris are both in junior high this year.

More babies! Cathy Gross Hendren and Tom welcomed their first, Matthew Thomas, on May 16, '84. Another first: Cathy completed her first year of law school soon after the delivery! She's on leave of absence for a year and then will return to Wake Forest U. law school. They are making their home in Kinston, NC.

From Charlotte, Claire Kinnett Tate managed to unearth a pen to write of an April trip to China with her husband John's parents, a move to a new house in June, and the fall spent honchoing the residential drive of her United Way campaign. Bright (5) and J. Austin IV (2) are a source of constant activity as well. Who was it once said, "If you want something done, ask the busiest person you know"? That's Claire! Brighten her day and send a generous reply to her Alumnae Fund appeals next time you hear from her.

The adoption of a beautiful baby girl brought joy to Caroline Gibbs Crosswell and Bill in March '84. Sarah Gibbs Crosswell is now 11 months old, and her new mom and dad are "looking forward to everything she's going to teach (them) in the next year!"

Down in Tennessee, Sally Uptegrove Lee and Bob say things are about the same in Nashville. She's teaching algebra and keeping the books for Bob's masonry company, albeit now with the help of a computer. Daughter Rachel is in kindergarten, and Sally's collecting early American antiques and refinishing antique furniture when she can find time. She has also taken up stenciling and has done the walls of several rooms with borders, and even finally finished a cross-stitch sampler. It's body as well as house beautiful for Sally; she's working out thrice weekly at a health club.

Linda Whitlow Knight got husband Dick (of 13 years, VMI '70) to pen a card (nice going, Linda!) saying Linda's private law practice continues to grow and prosper. She's handling bankruptcies all over the state as either attorney or trustee, and loves it. Their two daughters, 7 and 5, have announced they will attend Vanderbilt, which prompts Dad to ponder how they will meet any Keydets! Linda would love to hear from Marilyn Kolb, too, he notes. Other news: they spent a week in Dallas in August during the Republican convention, where Dick was a delegate from Tennessee's 5th congressional district, and where Linda met and was most impressed by Jeanne Kirkpatrick, our U.N. ambassador.

One of our favorite Georgia peaches, Kathy Wilson Lamb, is alive and well in Atlanta, where she and Rex and daughters Marie (9) and Katie (6) are enjoying the onset of "real school" for the girls. Kathy's using her extra time with a lot of volunteer work, work on the house, tennis, exercise classes, and generally ferrying about.

Carolyn Jones Walthall wrote more on a single card than any other contestant. She and Julian are still in Foley, AL, where he is pastor of the Foley Presbyterian Church, chairman of the elementary school's playground committee, active in the kids' soccer and Cub Scouts, and a "liberal" Democrat volunteer in a conservative Republican voting area. Carolyn is still coordinator (and founder, as I recall) of the children's school's Imagination Celebration Center for art and music, where she manages a volunteer arts education program for 1100 kids, and is about to be overwhelmed by "volunteeritis." Son David is 8, in the third grade, and into Scouts, soccer, piano, and GI Joe. Claiborne is 5 and into swings, writing, running and hammering. The two kids were kind enough to give their folks two weeks off to wander in Scotland this summer while Grandma and Grandpa guarded the castle.

Also in Alabama, Amanda Thrasher Segrest and James added son Clay Michael on Christmas afternoon, 1983. ("He politely waited until after Santa for sisters Jordan, 7, and Ellen, 3.") Amanda is active in Panoply of the Arts, a four-day festival in their hometown of Huntsville; two Junior League Committees, PTA volunteer work; and alumnae representative duties for SBC. She also reports having a delightful reunion with Taffy Turnbull Carpenter, Wendy Norton Brown, Ann Webster Danford, and their families at the Segrests' river cabin this past summer.

Carol Everest Keeney and Arthur added a daughter, Sarah Katherine, in Jan. '84 to keep Malcolm, 8, company. Carol sings a familiar tune: "Boy, do they keep me busy... may have to go back to work to get some rest!" Mim Washabaugh Meglan, who's in New Orleans finishing her M.B.A. at Tulane, will graduate in May. She spent last summer working as an internal auditor at Martin Marietta Aerospace, and muses, "If Debbie Pigman could see me now...the military-industrial complex, etc!" She passes along word of Debbie's marriage and a teaching position at a private girls' school in Colorado Springs. Mim also notes she passed a great weekend in July with Sioux Greenwald, who is now, she reports, a "marvelous photographer."

Speaking of long-lost friends, word has arrived from Kristi Bettendorf Swartz, who neatly typed her response in an oldy English font (pretty tasteful, I guess!). She's not sure when she wrote last, so reminds us her husband's name is Jeffrey, a lawyer in private practice. She's also in the business, an Assistant State Attorney in Miami, FL, prosecuting homicides (unfortunately, she laments, she "never run(s) out of work to do"). Also a mom to Stephen Aaron, now 2, she spends weekends house-hunting, anticipating a second child, and generally enjoying motherhood.

Michela English and husband Rob Quartel have also joined the ranks of new parents: their daughter Eleanor English Quartel was born on July 20, '84. Michela took some leave from McKinsey in Washington, DC, but returned to work in late November. This news almost takes a back seat to that of Rob's campaign for Congress from his hometown of Orlando, FL...wouldn't it be nice to have two men in Washington (the other being Rosemary Dunaway Tribble's Congressman husband Paul, R-Virginia)? Michela will be busy commuting between Florida and the Capitol City.

Barbara Gracey Backer married husband Ronald Backer in June '83. He's an engineer with Pratt-Whitney Aircraft. Their wedding in Oelray Beach, FL, was attended by many SBC-ers. Barbie notes she has "the challenge of three teenage stepdaughters who are with us every other weekend," adding a happy face at the end of that tidbit. She also notes they hope to start their own family soon.

Fellow Floridian Cami Crocker Wodehouse stole time from grading papers to fill us in with her news: she dragged out some old SBC texts and is now teaching chemistry as well as team-teaching a physical science lab course and really enjoying the challenge. (Translation: she's working like crazy.) Son Charlie, 8, has become quite a surfer, soccer player, and fisherman, and daughter Carey, 4, is famous for her rendition of "I'm a Little Teapot" and dry pants at night. Another happy note: Cami was thrilled at a call out of the blue from Kathy Burns who has moved to Jacksonville and was living at the beach not five miles away; the two had not seen each other since graduation and are having a marvelous time getting reacquainted. They sweat together in exercise class! Cami and Chuck hit Palm Beach last fall for a Lawrenceville reunion and sat with Eddie Hidalgo and wife who asked to be remembered to several SBC-ers, another reunion trip to Charlottesville was to have come off last November for a St. Elmo Hall get-together.

Jill Lowry Warfel wrote and commiserated with my laments regarding the Texas heat: "Husband Jim and I spent a year (1972) in Laredo where he went through pilot training for the USAF. Be glad they closed the base." That represents part of her first communication with us since leaving SBC her sophomore year to get married! Fifteen years later, she and Jim are the parents of four daughters: Kathryn-Claire (10), Juli (8), Molly (6), and Betsy (2). (Yes, we can guess which one was a big surprise.) After six years in the Air Force, Jim and Jill returned to Florida where for the past eight years they've been dealing in citrus. (This year's twin freeze and citrus canker disasters have been "interesting.") They've just remodeled a 60-year-old farm house they had to move back off a highway, and Jill is teaching a transitional first grade, carpooling, acting as the state junior education chairman for the Florida Federation of Women's Clubs, carpooling, teaching Sunday School, and carpooling.

We'll motor back on up north to Wisconsin now and check in with Linda Lewis Brauer in Sheboygan. She can emphathize with Jill; her three kids (Scott and Erick, both age 7, and Lindsay, 5) are in three different schools! Linda's now dentisting part-time to allow more hours for jitney service to swim lessons, ballet, tap, gymnastics, etc. Husband Warren is in family medical practice and does his share of volunteer work, chairing many committees.

Barbara Wuehrman is keeping her name after her marriage to Jim Palazolo, a local Grand Rapids fellow who is an engineer. His two lovely sons from a previous marriage live nearby. They spent their honeymoon hiking in Aspen, CO, and attending the Aspen Music Festival. Barb is in private medical practice now, having quit emergency room work. Nancy Wood Ambrosino and Drake are new transplants from Grand Rapids to Grosse Point, where Drake is helping Nancy's dad manage his car dealership. Son Ben (first grade) and Cara (kindergarten) can now walk to their new school, and little brother Joel was 2 in November.

Some buckeyes sent a card: Honey Hammer has switched jobs and is now sales training manager for Mead Oata Control, the electronic publishing division of Mead Corporation in Dayton. She explains that LEXIS (legal research) and NEXIS (news research) are their two biggest products. Her job keeps her traveling, and she has seen Gale Hull Whetzel in Columbus and Jen Mackenzie Hayden and Alison Jones MacEwan in NYC. Honey says she's still riding a lot, foxhunting, showing, and competing in dressage with her three horses, kept company by the two dogs. She'll be at our

Gale Hull Whetzel penned one of her own to say she's working part-time for a photographer, volunteering in school and for a brand new wildlife society that concentrates on rehabilitation and research, and feeding all the racoons, woodchucks, owls, hawks and herons she can find. Birdwatching is a new enthusiasm, though I'm not quite sure what she means by, "We all knew it would come it that!" Her sons Jamie (5) and Robin (9) are both in school now.

Terry Helm wrote a resume mailed in South Bend, IN, which itemizes her last few years: she's gone from teaching mentally retarded children for 13 years to being the fund raising director for the Southwestern Indiana Easter Seal Society, and she also volunteers as the coordinator for the Special Olympics for eight counties and is president of the Junior League of Evansville and bookkeeper for her family business. She's single, enjoys downhill skiing or sailing as vacation pursuits, and was to have been the downhill coach for the Indiana Special Olympics team at Park City, UT, for the International Special Olympics which were to have been held in March '85.

Our lone Kansas respondent, Anne Sniffen Cates writes from Pittsburg that she and Ward opened a retail computer store called MicroSupport there. Her title is store manager, but she's into everything and yet still considers child-raising as her most important job. Katherine is 4 now and in pre-school. Across the river in Missouri, Sherrill Marks Byrd and Hugh Hunter are still running their family farming operation in Charleston and keeping up with Nelson (4). They travel often to Nashville and other parts of Tennessee. Husband Hugh Hunter is on the Board of Trust of the Webb School and is also active in the University of the South at Sewanee, where they were to have attended a reunion in October. Sherrill had a "short but wonderful" reunion with Martha Stewart Crosland in Washington a year ago and this past fall with Louise Archer Slater in Memphis.

I guess the fact that I'm now close to Houston brought out the cards from the '71-ers from those parts: Bev Van Zandt Steele writes of the birth of Beverly Fonville Steele on June 15. Mom and husband Robert are "having a wonderful time" and Bev's enjoying being a full-time mother. Lind Doré Fountain and Edmund are another pair of new Houston parents: Cristin Doré Fountain, born May 26 '84, has been keeping Mom close to home.

Liz Glassman formed a new company this past year: Glassman & Lorenzo (they do art exhibitions and projects for corporations) which is, so far, very successful and kept Liz on the road to San Francisco in spring '83 and to Tokyo, Guam, and Micronesia last fall.

Betty Duson Kahn has survived her first year of marriage, having learned it is possible to learn to negotiate at the age of 35. They moved into a new house and then her husband, also a psychologist, and a colleague of his decided to join Betty and her partner in their private practice. They're now into their new larger office and well on their way to establishing a substantial group practice. Betty fills in the cracks by chairing the ethics committee of the Houston Psychological Association and seeing the Junior League through a year of change.

Dr. Margaret Mackie Sanders writes from Richardson, TX, that she is starting a new practice.

From Utah, Anne Wiglesworth Munoz and Milton were expecting baby #2 in January. Daughter Maya (3) was so excited she was pretending to have a sympathetic pregnancy and told Oad she couldn't help him in the yard because her baby was getting too big! The three spent a great summer camping, attending art festivals, and traveling to New Orleans and Kentucky. Anne has been doing a lot of batik, selling quite a few. Milton is teaching 5th grade.

In California Cynthia Riddle is working as an assistant director on films and television programs, having graduated from a training program sponsored by the Directors' Guild.

Winding up the West Coast replies are two from Oregon, the first from Jan Dickel Lapinski. Her husband of five years, Greg, is a VPI grad who runs his race car shop in Portland. Jan notes she's been in early childhood education and the study of French since leaving SBC. She got her M.A. in ECE in '75 and has been working in pre-school, kindergarten and primary settings since then. She's currently doing bookwork and customs for Greg and occasionally teaches an ECE class through Portland State U., as well as being involved in a parent-cooperative preschool for their three-year-old daughter Sonja Kathryn.

Last but certainly not least, Jacque Penny Goldstone sent me an obscene notecard depicting two elderly demoiselles and a passing exhibitionist. Anyway, she and Bob are still doing a thriving records and tapes business in Portland, but are not so tied to work that they can't find time for some great trips: Florida with Jacque's folks in November '83, Mexico in April '84, and Cape Cod and New York last July, the latter for Mary Lou Skinner's wedding to Rocky Kimball. She even put in a week at a health spa in Palm Springs, which appeared to help avert the decline she swooned into upon hitting the big three-five. Jacque notes Mary Lou is still in Santa Fe architecting and made a trip to Hawaii last September. She also says Prue Rasco Courtney is in Denver, and that Mereditth Mill McKelway was leaving Virginia for Chicago when she last heard from her. Jacque also asked me to tell you all you were TERRIFIC at giving last year and you'll be hearing from her, Bev, and Claire again soon, so save up.

That brings us to me. Bill retired from the Army after 24 years and took up an associate professorship in the civil engineering department at Texas A&M U. where he is in hog heaven teaching students how to survey. We bought a huge house with an office for me and an office for him, and plenty of room for Boris the basset and Judith (18, senior in high school and hoping to be a commercial artist) and Matthew (5 and in private kindergarten, a budding engineer/architect/mechanic). The horse is boarded out pending sale; he earned himself the No. 1 spot on the Appaloosa breed's green and regular working hunter national lists for 1984, a fact of which I am inordinately proud and because of which I am inordinately broke. So it's back to work: for a branch of A&M that assists inventors in commercializing their ideas with an eye to improving Texas' economy by starting new businesses in the state. As soon as Matt gets into "real school" I may unemploy myself and try to make a living writing.

I did manage to make it down to SBC for Alumnae Council again last fall, and the new Refectory is marvelous. My visit there, thanks to this marvelous job as your secretary, was crowned by a visit with ex-Carson neighbor Judy Brown Fletcher, our first since graduation. She and Stephen are again in Indianapolis, where he has begun his own ecological consulting firm at which Judy aids him, in between mothering duties.

That about winds it up for another year, friends. If you enjoyed catching up on the wherefors and whereabouts of your particular chums, just IM-AGINE how much MORE fun you can have doing it in person at our fifteenth reunion next spring! Save all of May '86 until we get more specific dates to you, because I guaran-darn-tee you there'll be nothing else more worth doing than coming back to SBC!

I enjoyed reading your news, and I can't wait to see pictures of homes, husbands, trips and children at our reunion in May.

After three years of marriage, Jody Anderson Wharton and Henry are taking the plunge into parenthood. Baby Wharton, who was due in November, will keep Jody busy, as will her job on the staff of the House of Representatives' Small Business Committee.

Randy Anderson Trainor is expecting her third child in April. She and Tom have a 300-acre farm in central New Hampshire with five greenhouses and a large roadside farm stand to sell their produce.

Joanna Arias is completing her residency in general surgery and will begin a residency in plastic surgery in July at Strong Memorial Hospital in Rochester, NY. She hopes to set up practice in the Virginia-Carolina area.

Bet Bashinsky White continues to enjoy living on her Tennessee farm. Her son Case keeps her busy as does volunteer work at Vanderbilt Hospital.

From Greenwich, Gail Bradley Ledbetter writes that her children, Alexandra and Jamie, are now 5½ and 2½ years old. Gail enjoys working in her garden, where she grows herbs and roses and breeds Japanese beetles.

Betsy Brooks Jones has been very active in her community, involved with the Cancer Society, church, Hospital Auxiliary, and her daughter's Brownie Troop. She gets together with Ellen Harrison Saunders, who has a two-year-old boy the same age as her son Thomas.

Clark Carlton, one year old, and daughter Cameron, now 3, keep Cece Clark Turner on the go. Cece is still working at the Hop-In as property manager and finds time to work on the Roanoke Festival in the Park and volunteer at the Ronald-McDonald House.

Anne Cogswell Burris came to Richmond this summer with Lon and her three boys, Scott, 3, Ben, 2, and Will, 10 months, for a visit with Ann Wesley Ramsey and me. Anne is busy with volunteer work with the Cancer Society, Junior League, and her church.

Yvonne Collier Gwin's husband Oscar has recently been named vice president of Barriere Construction Co.

Catherine Cranston Whitham continues to work for Thalhimers and also finds herself playing piano for 2- and 3-year-olds.

Beverly Crispin Heffernan moved her family to a new house with 6 acres in Dakton, VA. She visited Robin Singleton Cloyd in Houston and planned a November trip to England with Nancy Haight to do a little fox hunting.

Richard and Coni Crocker Betzendahl and daughter Lindsay are enjoying their new home in Naperville, IL. Coni works out of her house, specializing in artwork for consumer packaging. The Betzendahls are expecting their second child in March.

Nan Cunningham Watson was married to Patrick in Nov. 1983 and has moved to San Antonio. Jo Ellen Lenoir was Nan's maid of honor and many SBC friends attended the festivities. Nan is busy gardening, remodeling her home and volunteering with the Jr. League.

Penny Czarra has returned to D.C. after six years in India. She is employed by a private consulting firm overseeing projects in Third World countries. She is spending 50% of her time in the U.S. and 50% traveling. Penny was recently selected by Harvard to be a Loeb Fellow for 1985 and is the youngest and only female in the group.

Bonnie Lee Damianos Rampone and Chuck took a lovely cruise to the Greek Isles this summer. She is still on leave from her teaching job and is busy with Chuckie, 4½, and Christopher, 2½. The family plans to rent a camper in the spring for a visit to Sesame Street Place.

Stephanie Dewey Hoffman has gone to work for husband Ron. She is the art director of his ad agency. Stephanie writes that she wishes there were more SBC pals in the Memphis area.

Mary Dubuque Desloge and Chris are planning to make a trip out of our 10th Reunion. Mary is busy in St. Louis, and William keeps her on her toes and absolutely exhausted.

Jeannette Egli Stamm is employed by General Physics Corp. in Columbia, MD, as an emergency plan consultant to nuclear utilities. She continues to work part time with the Air National Guard with the rank of captain. In her spare time she enjoys rollerskating.

Francine Ely Cannon and Rob have opened a second store for their second son, Scotty, who is six months old. They are busy with the boys and the stores but find time to work on rebuilding Jaguars.

Debra Goitein Hodge and Angus live in Titusville, NJ, with dog "Silver Fox" and horse "Drews Landing." Debbie completed her M.Ed. this summer and is teaching Science and Biology at Morrisville High School in Pennsylvania.

Katylou Gray Brittle and Gould bought a house and 30 pretty acres in Marshall, VA. Katylou is still galloping race horses and hunters and is doing some bookkeeping.

A new resident of Richmond, Cathie Grier has started working for Sovran Bank as an operations training specialist. Before moving, Cathie toured England and Scotland in the summer.

Ellen Harrison Saunders retired from work this summer to spend more time with Harrison, now 2 years old. She is doing some free-lance public relations work, and she and Whitney are in the final stages of planning a new house. Ellen is also involved with the SBC Alumnae Association in Career Development.

Helen Harrison Willy and John are proud parents of Helen Marie, born April 18, 1984. They have just moved into the house in which Helen grew up. The Wittys had a visit in August with Betsy Clay Fernandez and her family.

Ann Henderson Stamets and Jay are in Rota, Spain, where he flies all over the Mediterranean area. Ann and her sister-in-law have a catering service. The Stametses' son Jon is now a busy two-year-old.

Helen Hodges Richards and Steve are in Scottsdale, where he has taken a new job with Intel Corp. Their children, Sarah and James, are 4 and 2, and Helen is teaching piano and co-directs a children's choir.

Chris Hoefer Myers and her husband announce the birth of daughter Aidan Hoefer Myers Nov. 8, 1983. I hear that Chris is busy with her baby but has returned to work with the Public Television program.

Neil Hunter King and Chip have opened an antique shop in Charlottesville near UVA and are renovating a turn-of-the-century house in Scottsville. Neil also finds time to take courses at UVA and to teach aerobics.

Jacque Johnson has been living outside of Boston for seven years. She is practicing law at the firm of Riley, Weafer and Garretson in defense litigation.

Beth Jones Elkins and Steve are moving to Fairfax County, CT, where he has a new job at Union Carbide. Beth retired in April to take care of Meredith, born April 5, 1984.

Edith Jones lives in Atlanta and survived the break-up of AT&T and is employed by Bell South. She is volunteering with the Jr. League and has run into SBC alumnae.

Carol Leslie St. John is very busy with her interior design business and spends one or two days per week in N.Y.C. She plans a buying trip to Europe and will visit her sister Diane Leslie '73 in London. Carol took a month's vacation in Bay Head with her boys, Bryan, 3½, and Kevin, one. Her husband is with a computer company and travels more than he is at home.

Linda Lucas Steele is directing communications at Hollins College, which has just received CASE's Grand Award for its publication program.

Dot Lyons completed her neurology residency and started practice in Sept. '83. She is engaged to be married to Glenn Hellner in Feb. 1985 and will be moving to Washington, DC, to take a new position in neurology.

Claire Marlin Avegno is busy volunteering at the parenting center in New Orleans. Her son Martin is 2 and started pre-school this fall. Claire sees Yvonne Collier Gwin frequently.

Another Richmonder, Polly Mason Dunn is busy teaching Sunday school and doing volunteer work in the community. Courtenay, now 18 months, keeps her running at home, and Polly tries to run on the tennis court as much as possible.

Margaret McFaddin England stays overworked at her job but loves it

She is the information technology coordinator for the Governor's Office in Columbia, SC.

Shari Mendelson Gallery is expecting her second child in May. She is still working as director of publications of American Society for Industrial Security, and classmate Sarah Dowdey works for her. Shari and her husband are building a house in West Virginia and have started a Christmas tree business.

Beth Montgomery called me the other day to say good-bye before her five-week trip to Tahiti, New Zealand and Australia. She is taking a break from her job on Capitol Hill and traveling solo.

Denise Montgomery received her M.L.S. from Florida State U. and is the reference and interlibrary loans librarian at Valdosta State College.

Pam Myre Turner had a new baby girl Feb. 12, 1984. Beverly Rachael joins sister Lauren, who is 5.

Lynn Norris Pfeiffer and John are busy with 2-year-old Christopher. They are expecting their second child in January.

Motherhood keeps Patty O'Malley Brunger busy watching her two sons, John, 2 years, and Phillip, 9 months. Patty met the new Dean of SBC and many Board members in September when they met in Dallas.

Kathy Osborne joined Dominion Bankshares in Sept. 1983 and was promoted to asst. vice president in April 1984. She finds her new job in Roanoke challenging.

Patricia Parker Pech is enjoying being a working mother. Sarah is walking and talking, and Pat is in her fifth year at Connecticut National Bank.

From down in Atlanta, Jane Perry Bean writes that although life is busy with Jill and Jeffrey, 4, and Emily, 1½, she finds time to devote to the foundation of a new school. Having retired from teaching, Jan is on the steering committee of the Atlanta International School, which plans to open Sept. 1985.

Johna Leigh Pierce has continued her career with the U.S. Dept. of Agriculture in the Human Nutrition Information Service. She was promoted to the position of head of the public affairs staff and public information officer of the agency. She bought a house in Annapolis, MD, and spends spare time fixing up the house and fox hunting her horse, Halloween, in Warrenton. Somehow she is squeezing in a course in public relations management at NYU Business School.

Linda Poole Maggard writes that she has become a "Newport Beach Housewife" after her marriage to Ron in May. She and Ron honeymooned in Europe and even traveled on the Orient Express. After a summer of the Olympics, Linda is settling down and doing some volunteer work with the Jr. League. She expects her first baby in July.

Lizanne Potts Fisher is on the go traveling for Satellite Business Systems

Corp. of D.C. She gets to see SBC-ers on the road and attended Martha French Roberts' wedding in Arizona.

Louise Pulizzi married Daniel John Perka on Nov. 4, 1984, in Washington, DC. She is director of public relations for The National Bank of Washington, and her husband is an attorney for Marriott Corp. in Bethesda, MD.

In Columbia, SC, Celia Robertson is the administrative assistant at the American Heart Association, the South Carolina Affiliate.

Anne Ross Shipe and Jim have been busy moving into a new home in Charlottesville and taking care of James Ross Shipe, born July 11, 1984. After a three-month leave, Anne returned to work at UVA Hospital in October. Sandra and Maria Vonetes are frequent visitors to the Shipe family.

Ted and Sara Ruhle Kyle bought an older house in Hillsborough, NC, a quaint 18th century town near Chapel Hill. In October they went to Germany, where Sara studied musicology in Heidelberg and Lubeck and Ted attended a professional conference.

Jan Schnibbe Cleary is on maternity leave from teaching and enjoying every minute of it. She and Jamie adopted a 6-month-old Korean boy, Kevin Nam Jim, who has brightened up their lives. Jan was matron of honor at the wedding of Dolores-May Scott Arias and Maximo in El Paso. Dolores-May and Maximo live in Boston, where he is a social worker and she is a medical social worker at Boston City Hospital.

Janet Sheppard Kelleher and Ed have two children, David Christian, 6½, and Sarah Elizabeth, 2½. Ed is in business for himself, and Janet is involved in training teachers how to use computers and teaching Sunday school. They have a new house in Columbia, SC.

Robin Singleton Cloyd and Marshall announce the arrival of Trudi Cloyd on Sept. 17, 1984. She joins big brother David, 15, and big sister Carey, 8.

Terry Starke Tosh and Ed had a busy summer. Ed got his M.B.A. in the same week that Carolyn Phillips Tosh arrived, Aug. 10, 1984. Red-headed Carolyn was given a shower by Catherine Cranston Whitham, and many SBC classmates attended.

Barbie Tafel Thomas is beginning to see the light at the end of the tunnel, as her children are now 2, 4, and 6. She is playing tennis again, teaching Sunday school, and serving as co-chairman of the Jr. League Horse Show. The family was planning a Christmas trip to Wintergreen, VA, and to Richmond to visit Barbie's sister.

Gwynne Taggart Barter was married in October 1983 and is expecting a baby in March 1985. She is working full time as a books and journals buyer for a medical library and part time keeping the books for her husband's business. Gwynne volunteers on a committee to establish a day-care center at her church.

Dorsey Tillett Northrup has been busy mothering, volunteering, and playing tennis. She attended Linda Poole Maggard's wedding in Charlotte.

Another "Newport Beach Housewife," Patti Tucker O'Desky, writes that she has retired and is playing golf, sailing, and traveling to such exotic spots as Hawaii, Sun Valley, and Scotland. She and her husband have twin beagle puppies named Pickles and Jackson.

Beply Walton relocated to Birmingham in January 1984 as district marketing manager for Delta. She has enjoyed seeing some SBC girls in town.

Carroll Waters Summerour and Toby announce the arrival of Katherine Ingram July 10, 1984. Toby was admitted to partnership at Arthur Anderson in September after spending most of last year in N.Y.C. Patrick, 7, and William, 4, accompanied Carroll to N.Y.C. and are now in school at Trinity Episcopal in New Orleans. Carroll is still involved with Jr. League, PTA, and her church.

Ann Wesley Ramsey has been busy teaching Sunday school, volunteering for the Jr. League, and helping Rick, 5, with kindergarten projects. Alden, 3, is in nursery school, and Ann has been able to do some horseback riding and gardening. Her husband has started his own company marketing a new product called a voice mailbox. The Ramseys are looking forward to a new addition to the family in May.

Libby Whitley has had a busy year working for Paul Tribble, U.S. Senate. She and her sister Cindy '78 share her condo in Arlington. Libby is riding again and still has her dogs, Zachary Taylor and Fenwick. Libby's name appears in Outstanding American Women, 1983, and Who's Who Among American Women.

Penn Wilcox Branin was married in May and she and her husband live in N.Y.C., where she is a merchandise manager for Milliken Co.

Worden Willis Galasso and Dale moved into a new house with a new dog, Bert, an Old English Sheepdog. Worden changed jobs over the summer and is now a loan officer in the Boston Branch of Bank Hapoalim, which has headquarters in Tel Aviv, Israel.

Kathy Wilson Drton and John announce the arrival of their second daughter, Virginia Stewart, on August 1. Kathy has returned to work at Texas Commercial Bank.

In December 1983, Wendy Wise was married to Carlos Routh in N.Y.C. Jane Perry Bean, Betsy Burdge Murphy, and Ann Wesley Ramsey were among SBC representatives.

Suzanne Wright Godfrey has retired from her stockbroker position to take care of Christopher Ryan Godfrey, born March 13, 1984. She and Ed are enjoying their son.

First, I want to thank you again for writing, and, second, I want to include that, with the exception of five or six people, everyone who wrote is planning to come to Reunion. A group of us met in October for a mini-reunion to plan for the reunion and had a blast. It was my first trip since the arrival of Catherine Shelton Avery on February 13, 1984. Rusty and I have had the best time with her! We all vacationed with Ann Wesley Ramsey and her family for a week at Nags Head this July. I am working one or two days a month and volunteering and garden clubbing, but enjoying motherhood the most. See you in May (my next vacation!).

President

Anne Garrity Spees (Mrs. Richard L.), 3361 South Wakefield St., Apt. A-1, Arlington, VA 22206

Secretary

Graham Maxwell Russell (Mrs. Hollis), 230 Miraflores, Palm Beach, FL 33480

Fund Agents

Laura Evans, 333 East 55th St., Apt. 5-B, New York, NY 10022

Ashley Wilson, 502 West Main St., Elizabeth City, NC 27909

It is time once again for news of figures, facts and fun from the class of 1979! I want to thank those of you who wrote to me; and to those who did not, I am giving you a reprieve and will not make up anything about you. Just write next time, O.K.?

Babies are booming, marriages are multiplying, and women are working.

Shari Sellars' new addition is a four legged one: a "labmalhound," which will most likely be her first passenger now that she has acquired her private pilot's license. Cindi Little Townsend may have to put her CPA career on hold, temporarily, because of the arrival of her baby in April. Barbara Lackey Mormondo is an investment officer at a bank in Richmond, and she and Jim have made their own investment for the future: they have a four month old baby! Judy Williams Carpenter and Ray certainly have their work cut out for them. Their baby is due in May, and their new house has been nicknamed "The Black Hole" because it has a strange way of sucking up paychecks whole. Judy knows of a good charity!...

Lauren MacMannis Huyett and Jim are in the process of moving to Fullerton, CA with their daughter Kate and don't have much time to settle in before the arrival of their baby in June. Joanie Dearborn Choremi finds herself three steps closer to Bellevue, and that can be blamed entirely on the purchase of a new house on Long Island, a Jack Russell puppy, and Boisee (also known as Alexander Nicholas.) They keep her busy but she seeks refuge in her art studio in the basement! Caro Lawrence Slingluff has three of the best "date raters" anyone could have: her daughter and her two dogs. They make her decisions much easier!

Susan Anthony Lineberry is fading away to nothing and going gray because baby Cole has become a 4.9 second 50-yd. dash expert! Just wait Susan.... Betsy Byrne Utterback has not only acquired a Master's in Art History but also a second baby, Christopher, born on Mothers' Day. She left the boys behind when she presented a paper at the Art History Symposium at Sweet Briar in October. Betsy took Karen Ries as a replacement. Jacquie Kenner Carmody finds that taking care of their new house in Richmond and their baby Arthur Rodenek, IV, keeps her busier than ever and she loves every minute of it. Debbie Kocik Benton has her cup running over. She practices law in her home, is taking care of her 8-month-old daughter, Diane, and still finds time to be an attendant in Janet Baldwin McColloch's wedding in November. There is a guest room for anyone in Quito, Ecuador, offered by Irene Rothschild de Dorfzann. She has her own business and two children, one of each! Pam Ramsdell Mitchell and John spent the summer in Europe and England, where John was studying, and they were accompanied by a very young traveler, their daughter Elspeth, born January 1984. Louise Wright Schmucki is back at work as a securities trader after the birth of her son Alexander in January 1984. Wendy Attee Woodward and Stanley are living in Philadelphia, where Stanley manages White Horse Farms. Future equestrians may be their sons, Stanley, Jr., 2, and William, 1. She sees a lot of Lynne Einsel and Kelly McBride. Marianne Hutton Felch is living in Baltimore, keeping busy with Sarah and Dean and visits from Jean Beard Barden '78 and Nancy White Bryant. Nancy has a new job as traffic manager at Dancer Fitzgerald Sample in NYC. Teresa Marshall Tingley has returned to work after the birth of her son Andrew in September.

Lisa Dennig Couller has her hands full, caring for a new baby, finishing law school, and moving into a new house. How nice and convenient to open the baby section of this edition with a four-legged "baby" and to be able to close with the same with news from Bunny Brown Bomar and her Westie, Tugger MacDuff! She saw Holly Harrison, Katie Ewald and Laura Tucker while in N.Y.C. attending account executive school.

Amy Smith Modrick rang in the New Year in true celebratory fashion; she got married! She is working as a T.V. producer in New Orleans and manages to find time to work on a book on being an Air Force brat. Vivian Hamlett McEntire found time amidst her medical studies to get married. Lydia Wardwell Zimmerman and Shantini Senanayke attended her wedding in Montgomery, AL. Debbie Parker is mixing business with pleasure now that she has wedded a fellow lawyer and is anticipating the day they face off in court! Mikki Farley Cannings' husband Rob stood in as a last minute usher. Sandie Erlebach Gershenfeld is working as a buyer for a Philadelphia-based department store and manages a couple of trips a year to Europe and the Orient.

Mary Margaret Girard was married to Robert John Thompson on Sept. 22, 1984. She is with Keane Ray Proof as an export sales manager. Her husband is a fireman-engineer with the Town of New Canaan.

Clara Jackman Garbett has taken on two very big responsibilities. She married a Wahoo and is director of La Petite Academy. Quite a handful! Are you ready for this one?... Jenny Kelsey is married. Richard Breining is the lucky groom, and he and Jenny are happily ensconced in their love nest in N.Y.C. Jenny is working as an anthropology instructor at the Museum of Natural History but is able to tear herself away from husband, hearth, and history to see Laura Evans, Joanie Dearborn Choremi and Mimi Walsh '80. Becky Trulove Symons is juggling the Richmond Sweet Briar Club presidency, the Junior League, and a full time job; however she was able to attend Ashley Wilson's wedding in February. The nation's capital and environs are teeming with fellow classmates. Hannah Craighill Moorehead is in Baltimore where she is working as a real estate "mogul" and is in close touch with Kate Evans Van Hecke who is working for a fabric company as showroom manager at the Washington Design Centre. Saralee Cowles is working as a legislative assistant for Senator Mack Mattingley and sees a lot of Cari Thompson Clemens '80 and Anne Garrity Spees. Anne is project manager of the U.S. International Trade and Cultural Center under the State Department. Martha Miller has turned a deaf ear to the call of the sea and is landlubbing at a political research firm. Patti Snowden Cloetingh and David have moved into a new house in Richmond where Patti works as a Claims Representative for Allstate. Mary Cowell has found a new career with Danskin, selling tights and leotards. A great contact for all you dancers! Speaking of dancing, Connor Kelly is vice president of the regional chapter of the American Dance Therapy Association. She was invited to Sarah Skaggs' dance concert in N.Y.C. last October but was unable to attend. Phyllis Shelton Higginbotham has a 42-mile commute between Altavista, VA, and Amherst, where she works as a lawyer. She often wishes she were back working in Charlottesville! (So would I!) After completing her M.A. in history at Hollins in 1981, Kristia Furches is currently a riding instructor at Eagle Point Plantation near Gloucester, VA. Aimee Kass is still teaching at "the ghetto's best day care center" but supplements her income by running a numbers racket on the weekends. Beth Bogdan Tetrault is working at V.C.U. under a grant program to place and train multiple-handicapped individuals in competitive jobs. Now that Terry is in nursery school (Terry, Jr., that is!), Mary South Gaab has time to herself after the terrible twos. She is a provisional in the Jr. League in Pittsburgh, as is Sally-Ann Sells, who is working at Mellon Bank. Her job takes her to Southern California for a week each month, a nice respite from overcast Pittsburgh days! We have two movie stars in our midst: Kim Louis is in a film about the history of flight to be shown at the Smithsonian Aerospace Museum in 1986 and is also in a new Matt Dillon movie. Robbie McBride has scored big; not only is she in a movie being shot by her house in Georgetown, but she is dating one of the actors! Susan Andrews Cruess has moved to Chicago where she continues her career in commercial lending.

News from the Georgia Crackers:

Prue Saunders wins the award for having the most pets — a dog, three cats, one stallion, two yearling fillies, two hunting horses and four in-foal broodmares. Yikes! In her spare time she works for a marketing firm that does work in the soft drink industry. She went to the Olympics with Karen Jaffa McGoldrick, who splits her time working for a veterinarian and working at a dressage and combined training farm north of Atlanta. Bridget Wray Gardener is keeping busy managing and buying for a dress shop and organizing the Savannah annual Tour of Homes. Nancy Hatch had a slow start last fall after "rearranging" her ankle, but she is now back on the road trying to balance the hectic travel schedule with Dow Jones and activities at home. The state of Alabama offers us the following: Laurie Bowen Carmichael is playing lots of tennis, teaching exercise classes and is selling Dorcoster/Young Tradition Clothes.

Tricia Paterson has completed graduate school and has been granted both a Master's in Public Health and an M.B.A. By the time you read this she hopes to have a job in health management. Tucker McGowin is considering video dating since she is unable to find that special "someone"! Maybe now that she has been promoted to director of the Patient Representative Department at the University of Alabama Hospitals her luck will change! One doctor she won't be dating is Mary Harris, who is now in residency in internal medicine at the U.Va. Hospital and plans a fellowship in gastroenterology. Pam Milne received an M.B.A. in May 1984 from Lynchburg College and has been promoted to senior loan review officer at Central Fidelity Bank. Other promotions: Caroline Curme is an assistant treasurer at the Bank of New York and is responsible for business development and account management in custom banking. Blyth Steere is an assistant secretary in Manufacturers Hanover Trust Company's Financial Controls and Marketing Department in N.Y.C. News from west of the Mississippi: Annette Teng Cheung received a Ph.D. from UVA and is working in the heart of Silicon Valley for Signestics. It is the sixth largest ic chip producer in the world. Julie Lenardi is working for a literary/software agent in the high tech field in California. While she was in Rhode Island last summer, she saw Mandy Steel Rich and husband Tim. Pam Weiler and Gretchen Kurtz were bridesmaids in Mandy's wedding.

Moving east... Lee Applegate is practicing law in Denver and enjoying the mountains tremendously — she's doing lots of backpacking and skiing. Holly Perkins is in Lutkin, TX, practicing law with her father. Wendy Igleheart is administrative assistant to the executive director of Leadership Evansville — an Adult Education program that prepares leaders for the community in Evansville, IN. We arrive back on the East Coast and hear from Melinda Truette that the Commonwealth Ball in N.Y.C. drew lots of N.Y.C. alums of Virginia schools (what a mouthful!). She is working at Citibank as a product manager in tax shelter marketing. Sherri Manson has become a real world traveler — Hong Kong, Thailand, China and Spain; between all this she is assistant branch manager for Provident National Bank in Philadelphia and is on the Board of Directors for an agency that deals directly with unwed mothers. Cathy Harold is in Southeastern Pennsylvania working as an associate editor of a professional magazine. She is very active in her church and is considering doing full time Christian service. From the looks of it, there might be a Sweet Briar guest bed in just about every state. That includes southern Florida, where I manage to maintain my sanity while dealing with the terrible twos by playing tennis, doing community work, teaching Sunday School (don't laugh!) and performing with a repertory theatre. We have yet to do The Toad of Toad Hall!!! Thanks again for writing. Keep up the good work.

Mary Ware became Mrs. Brian Gibson on June 16th with Laura Mixon as Maid of Honor and Kathy Barrett, Lea Sparks, Ann Goldman and Anne Alleva '84 as bridesmaids. Many SBC friends were there. Mary and Brian live in Winston-Salem, NC, where Mary teaches third grade and Brian is a third year med student. Jeanne Lewis, after working as a travel advisor with the Auto Club of Hartford, attended paralegal school in Philadelphia. She is now busy organizing her high school's fifth reunion, looking for a job, and learning karate. Tracy Galewood moved from Dallas to New Orleans and is now a residential real estate agent with a large New Orleans firm. Carolyn Hall, still in med school at South Alabama, has some exciting news; research she did this summer on "mechanisms of chemically induced DNA damage which lead to insulin dependent diabetes mellitus" will be published in the Alabama Journal of Medicine next spring.

Elizabeth Taylor is in her second year of Law School at Wake Forest. This summer she was in London attending Wake's criminal procedure class. Libby Glenn is living in Cincinnati and working at Procter and Gamble in their Financial Managers Training program. Her job calls for lots of travel which has allowed her to see classmates Sue Gay and Mary Ann Albright. In her spare time she is a "Big Sister" and on the SBC board. This year the Board met in Dallas where she saw Ann Goldmann, Eleanor Bibb and Tracy Galewood. Mary Ann Albright is living in Boston and working for an ad agency. Ann Goldmann and Eleanor Bibb share an apartment in Dallas and are loving "Big D"! Ann works at a financial executive search firm and Eleanor works at Harcourt, Brace, Jovanovich and is selling real estate part time.

Ellen Chaney is living in Arlington, VA, where she works at a law firm. She is in the Jr. League of Washington, and this fall she took a trip to Paris. Sharon Patton is working at First Colony Life Insurance in Lynchburg. She is also busy with insurance classes, giving clarinet lessons and being her church's choir director. Sarah Sutton went to Colorado last October and spent the winter there. Now, after reluctantly leaving the Rockies, she is pursuing her Master's in History and Museum Management at William and Mary. Elena Quevado is still in N.Y.C. working toward her Master's and the Doctorate. Last October Elena was at SBC to participate in a small symposium on graduate studies in art history.

Kathy Barrett, Meg Price and Blair Redd are still living together in N.Y.C. Kathy worked for the Reagan-Bush advertising team and since November has been working at J. MacLaughlin. Blair is working for Forstman and Left and Meg is still at Lancome. Kathy is the corresponding secretary for the SBC of N.Y.C. Bridget Ferguson is finishing her undergrad work at U. of Calif. in Santa Barbara. She later plans to go back to school and get her teaching credentials. Churchill Bird is living on Hilton Head and working as a loan officer for City Mortgage. She also teaches aerobics and is planning to buy a young horse.

Blair Clark writes from Atlanta where she lives with Lucy Chapman and Anne Little. Blair is working as an office systems analyst at Equifax and will marry Steve Smith in February. Lucy and Anne will both be in the wedding, and Blair and Steve will live in West Germany for three years, as Steve will be stationed there with the Army. Anne Little is working at Nuveen, where she sells bonds and funds. Her territory is the Carolinas. Amy Boyce is still in Philly working with the National Park Service, at Independence National Historical Park and Independence Hall. Desiree Bouchat spent last fall and winter in Europe and is working at Nippon Steel USA, Inc., in NYC. She has begun taking Japanese lessons and says that How Kum Kuan is in Philadelphia working with computers.

Sandy Ahern is living in Athens, GA, and managing a small store. She is engaged to Michael Simmons. Nina Pastuhov is living in Cambridge, MA, and is the office manager at a small investment firm in Boston. Leigh Cox is loving life in London where she is a training officer for Macroscan Systems Ltd. She will be back in the States next spring. Pam Weekes is working for Norma Kamali. She is the lingerie sales manager and works with the swimwear line. Josephine Andrews is living in Nashville and is working as a dress buyer. This job keeps her traveling to NYC and Los Angeles.

Carol Hadley is living in Bronxville, NY, and working at Home Savings Bank as a mortgage processor. Myra Merritt is in Ann Arbor, MI, working on her Master's in the History of Art. Angelia Goodwin is living in Richmond. She works for O'Neal, Jones and Feldman Pharmaceuticals as their Virginia sales representative. Ann Sterling lives in Florida and works as a model and spends time horseback riding. Barbara Esham graduated from Rollins College in '83. She now lives in Baltimore and is working in an interior design firm.

Polly Parker spent spring traveling through Europe. Now she is back home working as the assistant of the general office for Saks. Elise Wright spent last year working on her design degree. Melissa Pruyn is full of news! She is working as an assistant buyer of sportswear for Hahne's Department Store. She reports that Danielle DePaul '84 is in New Orleans working for Rouse Corp. and that Ellen Howard is in Mobile selling real estate.

Rose Boyce is living on Hilton Head and working as a Reservations/Rental Manager for Marriott Ownership Resorts. Bridget O'Reilly and Melissa Byrne share an apartment in N.Y.C. Bridget is working in the Corp. Intern Training Program at Paine Webber. Betsy Birkhead is living on Hilton Head and loves it! She is an administrative assistant for Russ Brown and Assoc.

Claire Cieszko has had a very busy year! She is living at home and working at AT&T in NYC. Her hard work has brought her a promotion and new job in Livingston, NJ, by year's end. Becky Campbell is living at home and is the assistant editor of a consumer magazine. She is now busily putting the magazine on the computer. Mason Bennett is living in Washington, DC, and working as a head of correspondence for the Secretary of Agriculture. She and Rick Rummel were planning to be married this December and will continue to live in the D.C. area. Alice Cutting is living in Warrenton, VA, where she works as an assistant to a veterinarian. Effie Holladay is living at home in Pell City, AL. Leslie Wright married Randy Root last October and they live in Houston, where Leslie is a customer service representative at Talent Tree Employment Agency.

Elizabeth Alexander married Michael Scott Caudill on May 27, 1984, and they live in Raleigh. Elizabeth graduated from Florida State U.

Deborah Lynne Mays married Joe Namath, former New York Jets quarterback, on Nov. 7, 1984. They will divide their time between homes in Beverly Hills, CA, and Fort Lauderdale, FL.

Michelle McSwain finished her Master's in Theology and Literature at Wake Forest U. and has recently moved back home to Memphis, where she is working on pre-med courses and hoping to enter medical school in two years. She is also tutoring and teaching part time.

Camilla Parker made her debut in San Antonio, TX, on Nov. 5, 1983, to begin the '83-'84 season.

Ellen Clare Gillespie is a syndicate associate with Merrill Lynch in N.Y.C.

Miriam Tevis Baker is teaching kindergarten in Birmingham, AL, where she has an apartment with a friend.

Gretchen Wulster Hamrick was married to David on Nov. 3. Sarah Babcock is living in Richmond and working as a systems engineer for IBM. Barbara Rose Page worked for a year at Bethune Nursery in Lynchburg and is now teaching kindergarten at Schuyler Elementary in Nelson County. Sarah Edmunds has completed eight months of her two-year commitment as a missionary in Japan.

Nancy Cunningham and Bobbie Serano are sharing an apartment in Richmond. Bobbie is working at United Virginia Mortgage Corp. and is planning to get married in Aug. 1985. Wendy Chapin is living at home. She spent a few weeks in Spain this summer and was working at a cruise travel agency. Ava Carmichael has received her M.S. degree in Sports Medicine and Physical Fitness and has moved to San Diego. She is working in the field of corporate fitness for a company called Corporate Aerobics. Cindy Shirley is living in Atlanta and working as a paralegal.

As for me, I still live at home, but now home is Morristown, NJ. I am working as a manager at AT&T Communications and tutoring a third grader. I am also engaged to Herb Bennett — we are planning an Aug. 1985 wedding. Thank you again for your responses! Please keep the news coming and send me any newspaper/magazine clippings about yourself so I can fill a scrapbook for our fifth reunion. Until next time — take care!

In the Sweet Briar Tradition

It is in the Sweet Briar tradition for many alumnae to wish to express their gratitude for all that Sweet Briar has meant in their lives in a significant tangible way. The decision to make such a gift can take many forms, among them the establishment of scholarship funds, special endowed funds to provide support for a project or department, or support for the unrestricted endowment — an ongoing need of the College.

Increasingly, alumnae are considering irrevocable planned gifts like the Charitable Gift Annuity which allow them the protection of their financial position during their lifetime, while providing the satisfaction of making a significant gift to Sweet Briar.

Wes Ward Francis '37 is an alumna who has made this decision in recent months by purchasing a Charitable Gift Annuity, ultimately to be used to fund the Wes Ward Francis Fund.

Some of the experiences that have stayed with me longest from my time at Sweet Briar are not only personal contacts with stimulating professors, but also with visiting lecturers and/or artists nationally acclaimed for excellence in their respective fields. I believe that the pursuit of excellence is what makes the wheels go around in a successful society. I further believe that people who are giants in their fields, whether in sports, business, the arts, philosophy or whatever, and whose vision and clarity of purpose have allowed them to achieve that greatness, are an inspiration, one I would like to make available to young women at Sweet Briar.

It has been my intention over a period of years to build an endowed fund to bring such people to Sweet Briar for a long enough period of time to allow a valuable interchange with students. While I have set aside an amount in my will for this purpose, now, because of my tax situation, the time was right to make an investment which would continue to provide income during my lifetime and could then be added to the Wes Ward Francis Fund. It was attractive to my husband and to me that a large part of the income from our Charitable Gift Annuity would be tax free. It was also attractive for us to consolidate several small blocks of stock, which had been pesky to manage, for the funding of this gift, thereby ridding ourselves of a management problem. Finally, we wanted to take advantage of the opportunity under current tax laws to deduct the fair market value of our gift of appreciated securities.

What is most important for me, however, is my wish to offer students at Sweet Briar an experience which will influence their lives in a significant way. We hope that the Wes Ward Francis Fund will do that. The purchase of a Charitable Gift Annuity has simply provided an advantageous way to help make that possible.

Wes Ward Francis '37

A Charitable Gift Annuity does offer many advantages for a donor. If you are interested in doing something special for Sweet Briar and would like to know how the advantages of a planned gift could apply to your financial situation, please write or call F. Mark Whittaker, Director of Development, for a copy of "Planning Options Available Through Gift Annuities."

NEWSFLASH

...Dateline NYC... Worldwide television viewers focus attention on the New York City 26-mile marathon race as a runner, wearing a Sweet Briar tee shirt, crosses the finish line. She's not the winner of the race, but she has finished as a winner for her alma mater to the tune of a thousand dollars for the Sweet Briar Scholarship Fund.

NEWSFLASH

...Dateline NYC...At Madison Square Garden tonight the huge marquee is flashing "Welcome to the Sweet Briar Alumnae" as thousands of jet setters and equestrians move to their seats to watch the National Horse Show.

NEWSFLASH

...Dateline NYC...The Wall Street Journal, page 1...Sweet Briar Alumnae Club publishes innovative networking directory for women, soon to be prototype for other clubs and colleges.

NEWSFLASH

...Dateline NYC... Virginia colleges host Circle Line Cruise around Manhattan...Sweet Briar banner waves on high.

People within the Sweet Briar family, and outside of it, have often asked "Why is the New York Alumnae Club so successful?"

The answer is simple. It is the enthusiasm and participation of almost every member of the club. As in all successful organizations, it is the people that make the difference. The common denominator and driving force behind our club is the special confidence and love that we all have for Sweet Briar.

The Sweet Briar Club of New York has more than 300 members in Manhattan alone. New York is a large and sometimes impersonal city, so the Sweet Briar Club offers a haven for advice, help and camaraderie — a special sisterhood. Our club tries to bring a little bit of Sweet Briar to New York City and, when we are lucky, to bring some of the wonderful aspects of "The Big Apple" to our friends on campus. The ties between the College and our club are strong and important.

To maintain the activity level of the club and to get as much participation as possible, besides our monthly meetings, we try to present many different types of events so that we can appeal to as many different factions within the club as possible. We have been extremely successful.

Fran Griffith Laserson '70

□ The Networking Resource Directory is one of our most important accomplishments during this decade. It is the first directory of its kind among any of the major women's colleges. The idea originated with Fran Griffith Laserson '70, who has been very supportive through its second publication. This directory has been invaluable to all the members of the club as well as the Sweet Briar community at large. We have found that we are one of our own and very best "natural" resources.

The Directory provides job information and contacts for alumnae in New York. It also helps recent graduates in New York bridge the transition from college to career and to make better informed choices about jobs. Students can also use the Directory in finding internships. It is great for all kinds of networking: looking for schools for children, seeking advice and/or friendships, searching for an apartment, thinking about a career change or finding volunteer groups to which to devote time and energy.

This prototype alumnae networking directory will be developed on a national basis. The New York Club is proud to have been the innovator of this valuable communications tool, which received national attention on April 11, 1984, when it was written up on the front page of The Wall Street Journal.

□ The New York Club's January Internship Program hosts, on average, 20 interns from Sweet Briar working in businesses ranging from brokerage and banking to publishing and the arts. The program is kicked off each year with a special meeting for interns and alumnae to exchange ideas on career pursuits. Months of planning precede this gathering, matching students with available internships and trying to arrange housing. Melinda Treutle '79 and Deborah Price '82 have coordinated it in New York in cooperation with Carter Hopkins in Career Planning and Dean Belford on campus.

□ Our National Horse Show event has become a real tradition. Every November, Paul Cronin, director of the riding program at Sweet Briar, and several equestrian students join the club for dinner at alumnae homes and the show at Madison Square Garden. It has become so popular that now it is "first come, first served" due to limited space. Marie Walkley Giannini '71 has organized this event for the last few years and Kate Delano Condax '68 has joined forces with her this past year in order to accommodate more dinner guests. Those who attended the horse show got a big thrill when a welcome to Sweet Briar Alumnae was flashed several times on the huge Madison Square Garden marquee in front of thousands of people!

□ Our 1984 Sweet Briar Scholarship Fund Benefit was a cocktail reception, lecture on "Buying and Selling at Auction" and private viewing of impressionist and modern paintings, drawings and sculpture at Sotheby's Inc. We drew almost 200 Sweet Briar people and art enthusiasts from all around the country. Nancy White Bryant '79, then affiliated with Sotheby's, made this delightful evening possible.

□ On a more individual basis, Mari Monahan '78 ran in the New York City Marathon in October, 1983, and took pledges from fellow alumnae for every mile she ran for the Sweet Briar College Scholarship Fund. A mailing was sent out to all club members in New York and many supported Mari's super idea and effort. She ran all 26 miles and earned more than a thousand dollars for the Fund. Donning a Sweet Briar tee shirt, Mari managed to get our college name in front of thousands of spectators.

□ Numerous events, both social and educational, have been organized through the Intercollegiate Alumni Association of New York of which Sweet Briar, Cornell, Smith, Vassar, Dartmouth, Columbia, Princeton and other colleges are members. Claire Dennison Griffith '80 acts as liaison with this organization that has afforded our members the opportunity to attend worthwhile events of other schools as well as given our club the opportunity to market our activities to an ideal target group.

□ Our club is an active member of The Virginia Council of Colleges here in New York. Their very popular events during the year are the Commonwealth Ball in the fall and the Circle Line Cruise around Manhattan in the spring. Many Sweet Briar alumnae participate and help in the planning and organization process. Melinda Treutle '79, Barbara Behrens '78 and Mari Monahan '78 have been instrumental in promoting the success of these benefits and the participation by Sweet Briar club members.

□ Our annual Sweet Briar Day party brings the Sweet Briar family in New York together during the Christmas holidays. We invite students home on vacation and professors visiting New York during their break to bring us up to date on what is happening on campus. One year, we showed the Sweet Briar recruitment film, which was of particular interest to the prospective students we had included in the festivities. A lovely cocktail reception has become the tradition for Sweet Briar Day in New York. Those responsible for this celebration during the past few years have been Nancy White Bryant '79, Susan Clay '81 and Toni Santangelo Archibald '80.

Nancy White Bryant '79 and Wendy C. Weiler '71

□ On a more educational note, we chose a Sunday afternoon to show the film "On Humans and Apes" which was produced during the 1981 Ewald Symposium. This movie featured Drs. Jane Goodall, Dian Fossey and Birute Galdikas, a rare meeting of the world's foremost primatologists. Many husbands and children joined us to view this most provocative presentation.

□ The 1983 benefit for the Sweet Briar Scholarship Fund was an opening reception at the Vanderwoude/ Tananbaum Gallery featuring important paintings by Bob Thompson, an American Modernist. This party was a gala event accented by the bright colors of the art work, the lovely food and colorful clothing of the guests. Nancy White Bryant '79 chaired the committee for the reception.

---

□ An evening of travel and adventure featuring an informative talk and slide show on African safaris was our club's most recent benefit for the scholarship fund. This cocktail party just happened to be held in a fabulous penthouse apartment overlooking all of Manhattan! Susan Clay '81 was in charge of the arrangements.

At the 1983 Scholarship Benefit: Anne Joyce Wyman '53, Anne Bowen Broadus '44, Murrell Rickards Chadsey '44 and Lucy Gordon Jeffers '39

□ Even though it is more difficult to sell bulbs in the city than in the suburbs, the New York Club has held its own under the expert direction of Mari Monahan, Lucy Gordon Jeffers '39 and Jan Storey-Honick '73. We are big on beautifying interior spaces with paper whites and amaryllis! We have had kick-off meetings each spring with speakers such as Susan Pflugfelder Lamb '81, a flower consultant who spoke on "The Art of Flower Arranging," and Jan Ohms of Van Eeden Bros. who told us about bulbs and how to care for them. We have also offered prizes, such as dinners for two or theatre tickets, to top bulb sellers.

---

□ Our Alumnae Representatives work hard to keep prospective students interested in Sweet Briar, talking to students in local private and public schools, showing the recruitment film, inviting them to the club's various events, speaking to them personally, writing letters and notes and answering questions. Lola Brock Meakin '77 and Carrie Maynard '81 have worked tirelessly heading up this important effort.

---

□ To show the club's appreciation of dedicated leaders, we have had parties to honor them: Elizabeth Scheuer Maxwell '34, who worked so hard building the club during the 60s; Harold and Deedie Whiteman before they left Sweet Briar; and our last three club presidents upon their retirement from office.

---

---

□ The Boards of Directors and Overseers of the College were honored in September of 1982 during their New York City meetings. The New York Alumnae Club hosted a cocktail reception at the Colony Club for more than 300 guests.

---

□ The 1980 Scholarship benefit centered around one of our talented alumnae, Mimi Garrard '58, and her avant garde dance company. A French picnic supper preceded the superb danced performance. Chairing the committee personally, I know how much hard work goes into organizing a special event. It could not have been accomplished without the help of Lucy Martin Giannino '60, Anne Cross '66 and Mimi Garrard.

---

□ The New York Club maintains memberships in The Friends of Art, The Friends of the Library, The Friends of Athletics and has even adopted a pin oak and a red maple tree on Sweet Briar campus.

□ To keep in touch with what is going on at Sweet Briar, our monthly meetings have featured speakers from campus including former President Harold Whiteman, President Nenah Fry, former Dean Beatrice Patt and Carter Hopkins, director of career planning. Ann Whitley will be our next speaker, showing her program "The Treasures of Sweet Briar" and describing the new Sweet Briar Museum of which she is the director.

A "byproduct" of all of these activities has been the addition, in the last few years, of over $10 thousand to the New York endowed scholarship fund, which already had in excess of $33 thousand. The interest from this fund goes directly to scholarship aid for students attending Sweet Briar. Our bookkeeping and money management experts have been Chris Kulczycki '68, Claire Dennison Griffith '80 and Margot Enright Aghnides '45.

New York City is unique, and the Sweet Briar Alumnae Club here is very special. We hope that other alumnae clubs may be inspired to adapt some of our ideas to raise funds, enthusiasm and interest in Sweet Briar among the members of their communities. □

On the Road with Nenah Fry

One of President Fry's priorities has been to meet as many alumnae as possible. Quite a few clubs have invited her for a reception, a coffee, a luncheon, a dinner or just for a visit. On each occasion, Nenah spoke briefly about the College, answered questions and engaged in informal conversation. In many instances Mark Whittaker and I have traveled with her, and what wonderful times we have had! Each visit has had a distinct personality all its own, and has been very special to us.

This year got off with a bang when the Board of Overseers met in Dallas in September. The Dallas alumnae left not a thing undone which could have added to our pleasure. Allie Stemmons Simon '63 orchestrated the entire visit with the help of her good husband, Heinz, Cissy Humphrey '76, the club president, and many other hard working alumnae. The reception, which area alumnae and parents attended in large numbers, was held at the Dallas Country Club and was a grand affair. The next night, Boxwood Circle members from all parts of the country held the annual formal dinner at the Lincoln City Club. On Saturday night, Charles and Elizabeth Perkins Prothro '39 entertained Board members with a dinner at the Tower Club. Meetings were crammed in during the days to make sure that business matters were also attended to. We will long remember our Texas trek.

In October, Nenah and Mark had a fine visit to Boston. The Boston Club had a beautiful dinner at the Harvard Club. Club President, Lucinda Young Larson '73 and Marcia Brandenburg Martinson '74 planned this delightful event. The next day, Joanne Holbrook Patton '52 invited a few educators to join Nenah for lunch at her farm, another unique and pleasant occasion.

The end of November found us in beautiful Philadelphia. The cocktail party at the Merion Cricket Club was well attended and elegant in every way. Laura Krecker Stulb '74 and Robin Christian Ryan '74, co-presidents of the club, with Ann Young Bloom '59 and many others, had all arrangements worked out to guarantee a successful party. We went from the party to dinner at the home of Dick and Ann Ritchey Baruch '62, which was a lovely affair.

The next day we had a rather unusual box lunch meeting at Marion Locks Gallery in downtown Philadelphia. Quite a few alumnae were able to attend who could not come the night before. Ellen Harrison Saunders '75, chairman of Career Planning on the Alumnae Association Board, was able to be there from Suffolk, VA, so we talked a great deal about networking. This very interesting meeting was planned by Rachel Bok Goldman '59. Many alumnae expressed an interest in seeing the networking program grow and become active in the Philadelphia area.

In mid-December, Mark and I met Nenah in Charlotte where she had to change planes on her way home from Atlanta. The Charlotte alumnae prepared a delicious cocktail buffet at the home of Dr. and Mrs. James B. Boatright. Dana Dewey Woody '58 is president of the club, and all her good alumnae rallied round to prepare the hors d'oeuvres and to enjoy the party. Charlotte was decorated for Christmas and it was a beautiful sight. We hurried home the next day inspired to begin work on our own Christmas preparations.

In February, Nenah was on the opening panel for the annual conference of Region III, Council for the Advancement and Support of Higher Education, which was held in Williamsburg. She made an impressive talk and we were all very proud of her. Mark was the chairman of the conference, and we were excited about the excellent job he did in that capacity. We knew that we wanted to see alumnae while in the Williamsburg area as we are so seldom there, so we invited them to join us for a wine and cheese party with Nenah the first night we arrived. We had an interesting group of people come and we were so pleased that they seemed to enjoy seeing each other as well as visiting with us.

Our excursion to Florida took place in mid-March. Our first stop was in Jacksonville. The party given that night for Nenah was held in the home of John and Rebecca Yerkes Rogers '52. The food was delicious and the setting perfect. Steve and Courtenay Sands Wilson '66 invited us for an informal supper afterwards, which was also a lovely occasion. Ed and Helen Murchison Lane '46 entertained us at lunch the next day at a beautifully located restaurant overlooking the Bay. Many people in Jacksonville contributed to our pleasure. Polly Clarkson Stein '82, club president, must surely be an active member of the Chamber of Commerce. She, Courtenay, and several others drove us around the city and told us many fascinating and positive things about Jacksonville.

By Ann Morrison Reams '42
Director of the Alumnae
Association

Our stay in Miami, brief as it was, was delightful. Alumnae there had prepared a delicious dinner on the terrace at the home of Bill and Laura Campbell Walker '68. It was a gorgeous setting and such an enthusiastic group of alumnae gathered to meet and welcome Nenah. Mark and I thoroughly enjoyed riding on her coattails!

The next morning found us driving up the east coast of Florida to Delray Beach. Mrs. J. Wilson Newman (Clara) welcomed us with lunch at the Gulf Stream Golf Club. That evening, an elegant cocktail party was held at the lovely home of George and Wes Ward Francis. A nice group of people gathered, some coming from quite a distance, and everybody enjoyed the occasion. Following the party, Len and Gladys Wester Horton '30 entertained us with a magnificent dinner at the Yacht Club. It had been a spectacular day!

The next morning, we boarded a plane for Tampa and arrived in plenty of time for luncheon at the Palma Ceia Golf Country Club. Susan Lykes Mueller '70 was in charge of the arrangements with the help of Cecile Waterman Essrig '44 and others. This party also attracted alumnae from quite a distance and everybody enjoyed sitting at the round tables talking long after the luncheon was over. George Steinbrenner, father of senior, Jessica, graciously invited us for breakfast at his motel, the Bay Shore Inn, before we went to the airport to catch our flight home. Our stay in Tampa had been a wonderful adventure.

Nenah and I visited the Tidewater, VA., club in mid-April and had a good visit. We met at the home of

Strib and Eleanor Potts Snodgrass '48 where alumnae gathered for coffee around 10:30 in the morning. This was the spring club meeting which focused primarily on bulb sales. Nenah spoke next, followed by a sumptuous luncheon which the alumnae had prepared. Spring had burst forth with azaleas, dogwood and bulbs in bloom. It was a fine day and the excellent turnout of alumnae made this such a memorable function.

The last trip on our schedule for this school year was a trip to New York in early May. This was a beautiful cocktail party at the home of Steve and Fran Griffith Laserson '70. There was a nice group of alumnae of varied ages and everybody had a wonderful time. We enjoyed seeing old friends and also meeting many young alumnae. Steve and Fran took us to dinner afterwards at the Union Club, which was most attractive. Our last trip of the school year had been a magnificent experience.

Lest you think that this is all the traveling Nenah had done, just remember that this represents only visits with alumnae clubs. She had made an equal number of trips to attend professional meetings and to call on other friends of the College. She is a wonderful traveler and everywhere we go, people love her. You have to step lively to keep up with this activity oriented president. It is a privilege and lots of fun to travel with her. □

Bonny Lea Farm... Productive Living and Personal Dignity

by the Rev. Dr. M. Allen Gibson
Chairman of the Board of Directors
South Shore Community Service
Association

Alberta Pew Baker '49, along with Prime Minister Garret FitzGerald of Ireland and other distinguished recipients, was honored by Saint Mary's University in Halifax, Nova Scotia, at its spring convocation this May.

According to The Chronicle-Herald of Halifax: "Alberta Baker, president of the South Shore Community Service Association, will receive an honorary doctor of letters degree. Mrs. Baker, who has received numerous awards and citations for her volunteer work with handicapped persons, was the force behind the establishment of Bonny Lea Farm for mentally handicapped individuals which was founded more than a decade ago. She is a member of the farm's board of directors, and is widely known for her work in education, especially as it bears upon the needs of the multiple handicapped...she has contributed manifestly to the development of special education in this province and beyond."

Bertie was an active member of the class of 1949 at Sweet Briar. She was vice-chairman of the Judicial Board, president of her junior and senior class, a member of the News, Brambler, Tau Phi, Choir, Glee Club, Political Economy Club and English Club. She was an avid hockey player, playing on a team that had the reputation of being the most powerful team in Virginia. Her degree at Sweet Briar was in political economy; she later earned the degree of Bachelor of Education from St. Mary's University, and is now working toward a Masters degree in the Psychology of Reading at Mt. St. Vincent University in Halifax.

After leaving Sweet Briar, Bertie married Dr. David Baker. They have had six children, and David now continues a private practice in electro-acupuncture while also serving as executive secretary of the South Shore Community Service Association.

The story of their accomplishments in establishing the Bonny Lea Farm, as told by Allen Gibson, is an inspiring one.

In a rural setting of wooded hills and distant sea, Bonny Lea Farm is a Nova Scotian answer to the needs of the multiple handicapped for education and training. There are some who say that the residential school is Canada's best within this area of reference. It is a claim which there is little reason to dispute.

It had its beginning about 12 years ago when a group of people, having dined, turned in their discussion to the needs of the multiple handicapped residents in the area around Chester, a small resort village on the south shore of Nova Scotia. At that time, the province had nothing to offer them. The school system had no place for those branded "retarded" by an indifferent society.

Usually, the families looked after the children. Where that was impractical, they became wards of the government which either placed them in foster homes or put them in an institution where they lived out their days in an utterly meaningless manner.

What could be done for them? Many could respond to training, but the opportunity simply was not available. For many of them, life could have a richer dimension but the means did not exist to make such possible.

What started out as an after-dinner conversation lasted far into the night. A challenge was discerned. Enthusiasm mounted and, ere the guests departed for their various homes, a dream had been born.

Today, that dream is being realized through Bonny Lea Farm and associated enterprises. Incorporated as the South Shore Community Service Association, the contemporary successors of that dinner group of more than a decade ago are providing a ministry and a leadership that have won widespread recognition and admiration.

Within a few months of the inaugural meeting, a new school term commenced in the province of Nova Scotia. As usual, there was no accommodation for the multiple handicapped. Nevertheless, there were seven young people from among the multiple handicapped who, with their brothers, sisters and friends, went off to school, some of them for the first time in their lives. Still, there was no place for them in the public school. Instead, their classroom was a rented hall where a teacher and a nurse's aid worked with them under the auspices of the South Shore Community Service Association.

84-acre farm had been purchased and construction of a building had been initiated.

Since there was no model from which to plan, the design of the structure occupied a great deal of time. It was desired to have a building which would be practical, economic, designed for ease of movement and to meet the special needs of the population which it was planned to serve.

The completed work won the admiration of its visitors. It had classrooms — bright and airy — a gymnasium-auditorium, kitchen and cafeteria facilities, vocational assessment-training and productive assembly areas, as well as office space.

Meanwhile, about four miles from the village, work was proceeding on a permanent campus. An

The South Shore Community Service Association found that just as there was no prototype for the building, there was none for curriculum. A philosophy had to be worked out and a program planned through which it would be expressed.

Very simply, the governing concept was to be that every child or young person entering Bonny Lea Farm should be helped to attain maturity to the fullest extent of his or her potential. It was not determined that every student should fit into a curriculum as prescribed by the school. Rather, it was the aim to make the course of studies adaptable to the individual's needs. Each individualized program is thus designed to challenge the young person to the utmost of his or her capability and is interwoven with encouragement, support and the expectation of success. After a decade, there has been no need to change that basic policy. It has worked and it continues to work.

Every entrant is carefully assessed to determine his or her abilities. The emphasis then becomes one of developing those particular talents through available programs which include total communications (including speech and language therapies); academic support; adaptive physical education; daily living and socialization skills (personal and home management, community awareness, use of leisure time and recreational options); pre-vocational skills; productive and specific occupational skills training. The accent is positive and free of the discouragements which accrue when an individual is faced with constant frustration and failure.

From the beginning, the directors have emphasized that this must not be a "dead end." To train the multiple handicapped for useful and satisfying places in the work world is a chief goal. Where that is not possible — and it is difficult in these days of economic restraint because of limited employment opportunities — the aim continues to be to help to the achievement of a fuller and more enriching life.

The success of the program is evident in the young people who have been able to go from Bonny Lea Farm to engage in gainful employment. It is evident, too, in the numbers who have been able to go into the regular school system because of the preparation they have received.

The years have seen much of growth. The campus today is occupied by the original farm buildings, the house converted into a group home. The first school and office building is at the heart of the scene. Around it are grouped farm structures, a work activity center in which, currently, a government-sponsored program is being conducted by the South Shore Community Service Association to help in the rehabilitation of those who have difficulty gaining or maintaining employment by upgrading their work and social skills. One of the finest buildings is the Center for Independent Living. It includes two training homes for six participants supervised by a residential counselor, ten apartment units (two of which are designed for non-ambulatory residents) which together allow the cultivation of the art of independent living. In addition there is an off-campus training home, an apartment in the town of Chester.

The impact of the enterprise has been far reaching. Because of the leadership given and the example set, the province of Nova Scotia was forced to amend its education act to open its schools to the multiple handicapped. Special education became a recognized part of education in the province. The leadership given by Bonny Lea Farm has placed Nova Scotia in the van of all the provinces of Canada in respect to the education of these special students.

From the inception, the directors have desired that this should be a pilot project. There is no desire to be "locked in" to rules and systems that cannot be changed. It is much more difficult to do things that way but progress is something that does not stand still and Bonny Lea Farm intends to grow and to lead in its chosen field. With the advent of the enforcement of mandatory public education for all children with special needs in 1983, our population has changed. Consequently we are seeking currently to provide additional programs to include on-site training and full-time employment opportunities for the young adult population as they are exiting the school systems. Greater options to live and to work in integrated settings will require the expansion of community oriented affirmative (productive labor at an appropriate wage) industries and longer-term

luncheons and mid-morning and afternoon treats, is operated by program participants as a community outreach project. A lawn and yard maintenance service, housekeeping services, an herb growing and production industry are also currently in operation. A "you bring it, we'll do it" coin operated laundry is on the drawing board. Productive living and personal dignity have been and continue to be our commitment.

The Board which directs the affairs of the school is composed of community leaders from a variety of backgrounds. Merchants, lawyers, medical people, scientists, writers, professors, military personnel, clergymen — the list of those who have found an opportunity to exercise their talents through Bonny Lea Farm is boundless.

Such an undertaking requires a great deal of financial support. Parents and support agencies pay as they are able. Governments and corporations assist in large measure. Still, however, it is necessary to seek public support through fund drives. It is a time-consuming effort but it pays off in two ways. For one, there is the financial support which is realized. For another, there is a definite publicity value. The public is learning that the multiple handicapped are real people who simply need a little more help than do some others in realizing their goals in life. It is another of the accomplishments of Bonny Lea Farm that it has contributed greatly to an enlightened public.

A year ago, one of Scotland's leading workers among the multiple handicapped visited Bonny Lea Farm, talked with board members, staff and students, and said, "I've never seen anything like it." It was high praise from one who knew whereof he spoke. It is different and in that difference lies the determination of those responsible that the multiple handicapped shall have the best opportunities that possibly can be provided them.

In the spring of 1984 Bonny Lea Farm was nominated for international recognition by the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Develop- ment as an exemplary transitional program for adolescents and young adults with special needs. □

The Class of 1910

A DIAMOND ANNIVERSARY

Nan Hodges, Frances Rickards, Eugenia Burnett, Louise Ewell, 1960.

Seventy-five years ago, in the spring of 1910, President Mary K. Benedict presented diplomas to Sweet Briar's first graduating class.

The class had started in 1906 with 13 members; five persevered to complete the academic program. They were known as "The Big Five."

Pioneers in their day as women earning college degrees, the five graduates were Anne Cumnock Miller, Louise Hooper Ewell, Annie Powell Hodges, Eugenia Griffin Burnett, and Frances Murrell Rickards.

At reunion this spring, Frances Murrell Rickards was honored as Sweet Briar's oldest living graduate, the last of "The Big Five."

Mrs. Rickards was not able to attend her seventy-fifth reunion (although she did come five years ago for her seventieth). Her daughter, Murrell Rickards Chadsey '44, has written a warm tribute to her mother which we have been given permission to publish in this issue.

In an interview in 1977, Mrs. Rickards recalled incidents of life at Sweet Briar in the early years:

Of the first president: She was 32. Miss Benedict, of course, lived in Sweet Briar House. Every president we've ever had lived in that suite, you know, in West Wing, on the second floor. Doctor Whiteman and his wife live there now. Well, Miss Benedict, although she lived at Sweet Briar House, don't think she didn't keep up with everything that was going on in the dormitory, because she was over there every night after the lights went out and roamed around the halls and all the buildings and all the grounds and you never knew where she was going to appear on the scene. Out of the blue she would appear. We didn't go to classes on Saturday. So we had very much time on our hands that day unless we were going to Lynchburg or some place else. So on Saturday morning, Claudine Hutter and Ally Henry, who was from Tazewell, and I decided we'd have a game of bridge. So we put up a table in the sitting room, the little sitting room of Gray Hall. Well, we put up the card table in there and got our chairs all around it, and were having a grand game, but suddenly in the door there was Miss Benedict, with her cane. "Girls, do you think this is a summer resort?" Well, that was the end of the bridge game. She thought we ought to be studying, not playing bridge.

Of Dr. Harley: She taught hygiene...and I went to the first class. Everybody was supposed to get that class...when she told us at the end of the class that she was going to cut up a cat the next time, that finished me. I never went back...and they never found out. I graduated without taking hygiene. Isn't that lovely?

On leaving Sweet Briar: I stayed over for one day (after graduation). I had been the business manager of the Briar Patch and I guess I had a little business. Anyway, I cried all the time I was packing my trunk. We had trunks in those days, you know. I'd put a layer of clothes and a layer of tears. And I'd say, "Well, they'll be mildewed when I get home."

The Alumnae Magazine is proud to honor these first five graduates of the College on the occasion of their seventy-fifth reunion year. □

Frances Murrell Rickards

SWEET BRIAR'S OLDEST LIVING GRADUATE

by Murrell Rickards Chadsey '44

My mother, Mrs. Everingham Rickards, whose maiden name was Frances Payne Murrell, was born on January 20, 1888 (the year of the great blizzard) in Rustburg, Virginia. She is the only daughter and third child of William McKendree Murrell and Flora Scott Murrell. Her father was the Commonwealth Attorney for Campbell County, Virginia. The family moved to Lynchburg when my mother was four years old.

One reason she wanted so much to attend Sweet Briar rather than be a day student at Randolph-Macon Woman's College was because she had two older brothers and two younger brothers and lived in a neighborhood where there were many boys. She fervently wanted to be with all girls at Sweet Briar College.

When she graduated from high school in Lynchburg in June of 1906, she was president of her class. She entered Sweet Briar that following fall. In college she majored in mathematics. She had taken piano lessons for seven or eight years before entering college. Her music teacher was so upset when she heard she was majoring in math instead of music that she threatened to come over to Sweet Briar and try to dissuade her from her unfortunate choice. But she stuck to math, and Dr. Eugenia Morenus who taught her math in her senior year in 1909 and 1910 became one of her best and life-long friends. Before Dr. Morenus died my mother established a scholarship fund at Sweet Briar in her name.

Frances Payne Murrell before her wedding in 1916.

She also established a second scholarship in memory of her husband, Everingham Rickards, and her son, Garrett Van Schaick Rickards. In January, 1984, the income from the two scholarship funds enabled six young women to receive very substantial grants totaling $19,992.

In 1916 Frances married Everingham Rickards, a businessman in Norfolk, Virginia. She had one son, Garrett and one daughter, Murrell. Garrett was a captain in the 307th Infantry Regiment which, with the marines, invaded many of the Japanese-held islands in the Pacific in the second World War. Garrett was killed in the invasion of Okinawa. Murrell graduated in the class of 1944 from Sweet Briar and is now Mrs. Carl T. Chadsey, Jr., of New York City.

Frances has two grandsons by Murrell's first marriage, of whom she is very proud. Garrett Rickards Bowden, now thirty-four years of age, is in the commercial real estate business in New York City. Sidney Lee Bowden, thirty years old, is in the hotel business in Vermont. Both have A.B. and M.A. degrees in subjects relating to their fields.

My mother has said many times that the four years at Sweet Briar were the happiest of her life. I believe that those happy four years and all that they entailed gave her much of the strength that she needed to live to such an age. In her lifetime she experienced five wars (Cuban, World Wars I and II, Korean, and Vietnamese Wars), the terrible Depression beginning in 1929, the loss of her son in World War II just two years after the loss of her husband, and a widowhood of forty-three years to date. She saw the birth and development of the car, airplane, radio, television, computer and the myriad electronic inventions of today. She did not learn to drive a car until after she was married and had her first child. She continued to own and drive a car until she was ninety.

She has been, as the old saying goes, "a tough little pine nut!" She survived three major operations after she was 79 years old and then in her early nineties had two cataract operations. She still reads, watches TV and frequently goes with friends to the Norfolk Symphony concerts or occasionally an opera. She still flies to New York to spend Christmas with me and my family. This past Christmas for the first time she brought her nurse-companion with her. She has spent every Christmas with me since I was first married in 1948, even flying to Venezuela in 1966 when I was living there.

She lives in a comfortable apartment in Norfolk with beautiful views of the inland waterways. Keeping her astronomy globe and book (which Dr. Morenus gave her many years ago) near the window, she often studies the heavens and can identify many planets and stars. In 1986 she hopes to see Halley's Comet which she saw once before in 1910 while sitting on the steps of Sweet Briar House with Dr. Morenus.

Genealogy has been a lifelong interest (she claims descent from four governors of Virginia), and she is a member of the DAR and Daughters of the Runnymede. She also belongs to the American Association of University Women, the Algonquin Garden Club and the Good Shepherd Episcopal Church.

My mother has never been an emotional person but rather one of quiet courage and acceptance of the fact. This facet of her personality plus a conservative life style and good genes (her mother lived to 97 years) have contributed to her longevity. I believe that her abiding interest in her Alma Mater ever since 1906 has been and continues to be a great source of strength for her.

The Reverend Susan C. Lehman Is Named Chaplain

President Nenah E. Fry has announced the appointment of the Rev. Susan C. Lehman as Chaplain of Sweet Briar College for the academic year, 1985-1986.

Ordained priest in the Episcopal Church, The Diocese of Southern Ohio, in 1977, Rev. Lehman holds the B.A. in History from Miami University; the M.A. in History from Xavier University; the M.A. from the Divinity School at the University of Chicago, and has studied at the Divinity School beyond requirements for the M.A. She taught history and government in a public high school and has served as parish priest in a combined Episcopal/United Church of Christ congregation.

The Rev. Lehman will assume the position held by the Rev. Myron B. Bloy, Jr., College chaplain since 1979, who died January 27, 1985.

In making her application for the position, Rev. Lehman affirmed her interest in women's studies and feminist scholarship. She hopes to maintain the high quality of the present program of the Chaplain's office and to work for the emergence and testing of possible new directions in ministry in an academic setting with a female student population.

The Rev. Lehman is the wife of John Dalzell of Cincinnati, Ohio, father of Ann Seymour Dalzell '84.

Nancy Dowd Burton '46, a member of the Sweet Briar Board of Overseers, describes her friend

Susan Lehman as a person with "the ability to relate scripture to our daily lives and to convey faith with strength and conviction. She preaches magnificent sermons that are challenging and relevant. In short, she has the best of all I would see in a preacher and teacher." □

Second Annual Lacrosse Reunion

by Alice Dixon '82

The Second Annual Lacrosse Reunion, held May 4, proved once again to be a great weekend. Although the alumnae team suffered a defeat to the Varsity Vixens, this year a tennis match was held and the alumnae prevailed, 5 to 4. The tennis match was held Saturday morning with Jane Dure '82, Mary Pope Hutson '83, and Cindy Shirley '83 playing for the alumnae. Faculty members Caroline Bloy, June Booth, and Jennifer Crispen supplemented the team. The alumnae credit their win to the coaching from alumnae lacrosse players.

Lacrosse was played Saturday afternoon. Robin "the lost alumna" Behm '79 headed the alumnae effort with reunion veterans Alice Dixon '82, Brianna Boswell '82, Molly Finney '82, and Jean von Schrader '82. Mary Watt '83 had a busy day on defense as did Chris Svoboda '84 who played an honorable game as goalie. Crispen, Hutson, Dure, Loys Frates '88, Kathryn Ingham '88, and a red-shirted Longwood player rounded out the alumnae team.

The game was played in four 10-minute quarters and the alumnae were strong in the first two. However, the varsity team, which was being considered for a bid to the NCAA national finals, outlasted the alumnae, 13 to 4. Nancy Webb '81, who partially funded this year's refreshments, was once again sorely missed.

After showers the alumnae hosted the varsity teams at the Bell Tower for a Kentucky Derby Party complete with mint juleps and cheese pate. The alumnae stayed at Alumnae House Saturday night and were treated with refreshments from the Alumnae House staff and an endless Trivial Pursuit game against Jennifer Crispen and students who seemed to know far too much trivia for their own good. The weather was perfect and the varsity players from both teams were good sports about giving up a pre-finals Saturday for the alumnae. The interest in the reunion is increasing and plans are in the works to include a Sunday softball game to knock out the kinks from Saturday's play. Also, alumnae sports fans are joining the effort to make next year's event (tentatively scheduled for May 2-3, 1986) a Sports Reunion Weekend. □

Alumnae Hold Mini-Music-Reunion

by Marie Musgrove McCrone '49

In mid-April, a very harmonious alumnae group of music majors and music lovers gathered on campus to breathe in the rarefied atmosphere of the Ewald Symposium.

As soon as we heard about this mini-reunion, Ruthie Garrett Preucel '49 and I determined to attend. Our four days there were glorious. Sweet Briar preened herself in her spring greenery and allowed us to enjoy her fully as much as the performances, talks, demonstrations and concerts that were cohosted by Sweet Briar and the Southeastern Keyboard Historical Society.

The Alumnae Office had planned special events just for our group: a reception each afternoon at different and lovely locations and a varied program of talks and performances by alumnae worked into the hour before lunch.

Judy Greer Schulz '61 and Ann Morrison Reams '42 introduced the participants, all of whom are doing interesting things with music.

Thursday's panel featured Nancy Bullard Reed '66 who told how music shapes her life as assistant organist at St. James Episcopal Church in Richmond. Her church service can be heard on radio each Sunday and Nancy's own organ recitals can be enjoyed throughout the year.

Wick Nalle Rowland '66 of Houston shared with us the trials, tribulations and rewards of raising the money for, and planning and executing, a European trip for a young people's choir.

Ruth Garrett Preucel explained how she literally fills her days working voluntarily in the arts as a member of the Board of Trustees of the New School of Music in Philadelphia. She recruits and does all the planning for their eight concerts each year. Ruthie had to leave the Baroque Symposium early to attend a concert she had planned, given by the American Society of Ancient Instruments at the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts, another of her volunteer efforts.

On Friday our panelists included Marian Dolan '76, one of a rare breed of female orchestra conductors, who showed slides of the high school chorus and orchestra that she directs. They toured Italy and were warmly welcomed by the Pope in Vatican City. Marian has recently accepted a job as director of the community orchestra in Sussex County, New Jersey.

Ellen Apperson Brown '72, a soprano soloist in her church choir and a teacher of German at Virginia Episcopal School in Lynchburg where her husband also teaches, entertained us with a delightful array of German lieder. Her voice was charming and her concert impressive. Professor Allen Huszti accompanied her.

Robin Swain Davis '63, a piano teacher and a continual student of the piano, displayed her considerable talent with a fine rendering of three Bach fugues.

At the Saturday session, I did what I've been doing for over forty years, gathering people around the piano for a sing-a-long. By then everyone knew everyone else, and we agreed the mini-reunion was a resounding success! □

Fond Farewells

At the alumnae luncheon held during reunion, the following four people were honored and recognized for their special contributions to Sweet Briar. All will be leaving their posts the end of June.

Terry Scarborough — Director of Admissions

Edith Page Gill Breakell '45, Admissions Representative Chairman on the Board of the Alumnae Association, paid tribute to Terry by expressing how much all alumnae, especially Admissions Representatives have enjoyed knowing and working with her, and how much she will be missed. Edie Page also expressed appreciation for the excellent job Terry has done for the College, which is of great importance to all alumnae.

Terry graduated from Wake Forest University in 1974 with a major in English and a second major in religion. She earned her Master's degree in Education in School Administration from Lynchburg College in 1981. She came to Sweet Briar from the Patterson School in Lenoir, N.C., where she taught religion, language arts and English before becoming Director of Admissions there. She was named Assistant Director when she arrived at Sweet Briar, was later promoted to Associate Director, and in 1981 became Director. Terry and her husband, John Savarese, will leave Sweet Briar in July for Davidson College where John has accepted an appointment working with academic computers. Terry has several irons in the fire. We hope that she will be happy in her new position, whatever it might be.

David I. Abrams

Fontaine Belford — Dean of the College

Gwen Speel Kaplan '60, past President of the Alumnae Association and presently an alumnae elected member of the Board of Overseers, paid tribute to Dean Belford. Gwen expressed appreciation for the innovative ideas and programs which Fontaine had brought to Sweet Briar, two being establishing a student exchange at Royal Holloway College of the University of London and also the first American undergraduate program at Oxford (St. Hugh's College) for Sweet Briar students. Closer home she co-taught a course for Sweet Briar and Hampden-Sidney students with the president of that institution.

Dean Belford, a graduate of Hollins College, received her A.M. degree in philosophical theology and ethics from Yale Divinity School, and her Ph.D. in comparative literature from the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill. She also studied at the Sorbonne in Paris, the University of Munich, Harvard University, Massachusetts Institute of Technology, and the British Museum. She has published several articles and contributed to books in her field. Dean Belford leaves Sweet Briar to accept a prestigious appointment as National Fellow for the Association of American Colleges in Washington, D.C.

Carolyn Bates — Assistant, Alumnae Office

Tribute was paid to Carolyn Bates by Mary K. Lee McDonald '65, President of the Alumnae Association, who pointed out what a beloved member of the Sweet Briar community as well as the alumnae body and office staff Carolyn has been. Carolyn moved to Sweet Briar 37 years ago with her husband, Art, who joined the French faculty here at that time. Sweet Briar has truly been her home ever since. Her daughter, Vicki, was born here.

Carolyn taught English both at Sweet Briar and at Randolph-Macon, ran the Vocational Guidance Office on a part-time basis for 12 years, and since 1974 has been a member of the Alumnae Office staff, where in addition to other responsibilities she has ably and conscientiously edited class notes for the Magazine. This has brought her close to many alumnae of all ages. Some alumnae also remember her for her accurate handling of the tour program, as well as for her cordial greeting to visitors in the office. Carolyn earned her B.A. degree cum laude at the Mississippi State College for Women, and her M.A. at the University of Illinois. Her extensive travels have provided her with knowledge of a variety of places, and through her excellent photography she has accumulated impressive records of these travels, as well as thousands of slides of Virginia wildflowers.

Fortunately Carolyn will not go far. She is looking forward to spending more time pursuing her hobbies from her home on Waugh's Ferry Road, just a few miles off campus.

John Shannon — Professor of Music

Sara Ruhle Kyle '75, a music major, musician and former student of Mr. Shannon, paid tribute to him. Even though Mr. Shannon was not able to be there, alumnae wanted to honor him at his retirement. Sara remembered him as a caring and sensitive teacher who "greatly influenced my musical and academic development at Sweet Briar and beyond." She noted that his retirement "marks the end of a very special era in the musical life of Sweet Briar College."

John Shannon earned his B.S. degree at Davidson College, and his M.A. and Ph.D. in Musicology from the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill. He came to Sweet Briar in 1958 as Instructor in music, and had been here ever since. He studied organ and harpsichord extensively, and became quite a connoisseur of antique instruments. He was the College organist and co-director of the Collegium Musicum as well as teacher.

John and his wife, Sylvia, have moved to Ocean Isle Beach, N.C., where he plans to go into construction work, building beach cottages. □

Winter Term in Vienna

by Julia Sadler de Coligny '34

On January 2, 1985, I was standing in my hallway in Amherst, Virginia, fastening a leash on my huge new lightweight suitcase on wheels. I had just filled it with all the warm garments from skin out, stuffed the corners with granola, figs, apricots, soups, medicines and toiletries befitting someone in the drying stage. The television was on, and I was suddenly aware that I was watching Walter Cronkite hosting a New Year's show from the Musikverein in Vienna, delayed because of America's commitment to Bowl Games on New Year's Day. A very colorful and exciting panorama was opening up to us with strains of Strauss waltzes played by the Vienna Philharmonic Orchestra seated in front of great gold columns festooned with flowers which reached from floor to ceiling. Little did I realize that in a few short nights I would be a part of an audience in that very hall, listening to the same orchestra playing Haydn's Creation. was about to embark on one of the most daring and courageous undertakings of my life to date. I was to be a part of a Winter Term Study Tour entitled: Vienna: The Art and Culture of Austria. I had only the spirit to survive the rigors of mid-winter climate, the sharpness of mind, the fleetness of foot and the soundness of body required to cope with exposure to all that art and music in the coldest month anyone had experienced on either side of the Atlantic. But I did it, I did it, and I never even caught a cold! It was wunderbar!!!!

There were twenty students — three seniors, seven juniors, eight sophomores, two freshmen, and seven adults fitting into almost any category including four alumnae, a faculty widow, a mother, a daughter, and our resident professor, Diane Moran.

In addition to Dr. Moran we had an impressive faculty from Vienna, including for History, Dr. Max Peyfuss, Asst. Professor at the Institute for East- and South-East European Studies, University of Vienna; for music, Professor Walter Moore, of the Hochschule für Musik; for current economics, Dr. Raoul Kneucker, Secretary-General of the Austrian Science Foundation, associated with the University of Vienna and the Diplomatic Academy; and the most important one, Dr. Lucia Gunz, formerly director of educational programs at the Kunsthistorische Museum. She went with us everywhere, took us on gallery tours until she couldn't speak above a whisper, got us into all sorts of special places, and got the girls dates for the balls, to boot!

She further enriched our program by having two young assistants who came along whenever possible. One was her nephew, Markus, a beautiful young man working on an advanced degree in Art History, and his attractive school chum, Daisy Hauser, whose mother entertained us one Sunday afternoon in their handsome Biedermeyer house on the outskirts of town to let us see the best of present-day living in the real world of Vienna.

I had lost track of time when we landed in Vienna, but it was dark and the snow had been falling for some time. The air was as cold as I have ever felt it, and it stayed that way almost the entire time. The snow never melted, but toward the end of the month it warmed up enough for a cleaner, purer cover to fall. The snow was a shock to the townspeople as well. Our bus load of students and their luggage had a hard time getting up the narrow street of Taubstummengasse. The garbage truck blocking our way was short-handed because the young men had deserted to fight the snow. That was the first bit of communication I heard from our Pension-Keeper, Herr von Thelen, who was to dominate our lives with his strict orders about use of telephone, bath, toilet, towels, tea pots, and the elevator!

When we had gotten our luggage safely into our rooms, we looked at the package of materials. Each had been given two books by Richard Pickett: A Brief Survey of Austrian History and Music and Musicians in Vienna. There were pamphlets about money, maps, restaurants, Vienna from A to Z, language tips and whatever. In between reading all this information, we went on a walking tour that first Saturday through all the cobblestone courtyards of the Hofburg Complex, palaces, churches and riding stables, located around the Scala. We stopped at a little deli nearby and checked that nice man out for fruits, instant soups, tea, and a few staples. It was so cozy to come in out of the cold, plug in our little coil and pleasure ourselves with being warm and dry that we soon got to be the proverbial "bag ladies," and it took a lot for us to go out when the schedules didn't demand it.

That first Sunday we walked to the Karlskirche, the most important of the city's baroque churches built in 1713 by Fischer von Erlach for Karl VI. We huddled together to hear Haydn's Missa Brevis with organ, orchestra and singers in the choir loft a long distance from us. We came back to our own lecture room and heard a talk by Dr. Moore in preparation for the afternoon concert, which was Haydn's Creation at Vienna's most beautiful concert hall, The Musikverein, from which I had heard Walter Cronkite hosting the New Year's Concert the night before I left home.

We were told we would be given our schedule on Monday during lunch at our own special restaurant, Weidinger's, around the corner from the pension (about four blocks!). In a spirit of great indulgence, they were starting the week off by giving us a half-day of free time. All we had to do was to go to the bank, learn about schillings and droschens and change our traveler's checks into something useful; go to the cigar shop and get a Metro ticket with our pictures glued on; locate the post office to get stamps; and do any grocery or drug shopping we might need for the week. It was hard to use up all that free time!

Wienerschnitzel for lunch tasted very good and prepared us for our only visit to the University of Vienna for our first class in Austrian history. We were so conscientious in attending all events that no classroom space available to us was adequate; so from then on Dr. Peyfuss met us in the lecture room at the Pension, as did all the other lecturers except for the gallery talks and sightseeing walking tours outside. Gradually we gave up looking for easy weather, and we were very thankful that so much of our learning took place right there at home. The elevator shaft and the marble stairs surrounding it were as cold as a tomb, but doors closed off the halls, and once we had made it inside our own level it stayed consistently warm and wonderful, that is, until the oil gave out during the last week!

The miraculous result of the careful planning that had gone into our schedule was that we tasted just about every slice of life both past and present. The Habsburgs were our constant companions. It was said of them that their protecting god was Venus, not Mars, since their wealth and power came through marriage, not wars. Their collections of music, art and books inspired architects to design some of the most highly acclaimed concert halls, galleries and libraries in the world.

Every composer of any talent and accomplishment from the Bach family on found his way to Vienna, and left his mark. The Staatsoper (where we heard Puccini's La Boheme, with Pavarotti, no less, and Verdi's La Traviata) and the Volksoper (where we feasted on Mozart's The Magic Flute, Smetana's The Bartered Bride, and Johann Strauss' Die Fledermaus) and The Musikverien (where we heard Bach's B Minor Mass, Haydn's Creation, and Strauss waltzes for the Philharmonische Balle) are all three places of international renown architecturally and acoustically. For all seven of these major concerts, Dr. Moore had provided us with preliminary lectures, including tapes of major themes, copies of stories of the operas and words being sung in the masses. So thoroughly prepared were we that we couldn't have failed to learn from it. But nothing prepared us for the perfection we found in the sets, the performance and the audience behavior. One student, in assessing the value of her experience, said never again would she be able to listen to classical music and turn it off!

And then there was art! Someone said that the only reason the Kunsthistorisches Museum is not as famous as the Louvre or the Prado is that the name is not as catchy! The collection is endless and magnificent and reflects the cultural diversity of the Habsburg empire. On our first visit we "did" the first floor with the crown jewels and the clocks as the main features. The second visit we made with Dr. Gunz was mainly to study the Italians — Giorgione, Titian, Tintoretto, Veronese, Raphael, Caravaggio. It was mind-boggling and very tiring. We had to build up our strength for the next day when we saw the Brueghels, and that night was the Philharmonische Balle at the Musikverein — and the next night was Mozart's Zauberflote! It all came rolling over us like a flood. Each time we'd gasp for breath and say, "We'll be back!" But we never got back because new thrills were waiting for us. The Kunsthistorische is only one of 50 museums, but that is the largest. We saw Austrian art displayed elegantly in the Lower and Upper Belvedere, special palaces of the Prince of Savoy. We saw 19th and 20th century paintings and sculpture at The Neue Galerie in the Stallburg (Klimt, Kokoschka, Schiele, etc.). The sculpture exhibit of Marino Marini was closing at the end of our first week, so we had to rush off and see his dying horses out of context.

Ann Schuyler McAllister rejoicing in her shopping tour with the nutcracker as her guard.

We saw wonderful rugs and tapestries.

We went to the Bosendorfer Piano Factory, which was very close to our lunch place, Weidinger's, and learned how to make a piano. We followed the whole proceeding and when the girls found out that Toni Nelson was a piano teacher, they made her try out one of the finished products. She did very well, though she longed for her music. We learned that Kimball, an American company, has bought Bosendorfer, and I swelled a little with pride that my Kimball was sitting at home. The tour ended in a small auditorium where Dr. Moore presented five of his young pupils in a recital of German lieder. They were from Japan, Norway and other countries, and their task was to illustrate what they had learned in interpretation. Dr. Moore played the accompaniment on a brand new Bosendorfer, and we provided an appreciative audience without revealing our lack of linguistic skills any more than we could help.

Junie Lee, Mollee Buckingham, Kaky Connors and Christine Navratil share their good cheer with their companion in spite of fog, mist and snow in the background — typical weather in Vienna during January.

One of our most memorable days was when we went to the Gardens and Palace of Schönbrunn, the summer home of Maria Theresia where she raised her sixteen children, the youngest of whom was Marie Antoinette. The guide books tell you to start with the gardens and build up to the elaborate, festive interiors with gold leaf and lacquer, elaborate parquet floors, highly decorated porcelain stoves, shimmering chandeliers, portraits and statuary of all those beautiful children — rococo at its best. We did start out with the gardens, but where there were supposed to be plantings, geometric designs, ponds, statuary, we saw only snow and ice with a lot of big noisy black crows pacing around in the mist and fog looking in vain for food. We saw the bare trees cut to look like walls extending on either side past the palaces to the crest of the hill beyond where stands the Gloriette, a purely decorative pavilion built to commemorate the victory of Kolin (1757) over Frederick II of Prussia. We saw the Imperial Coach Collection in the Wagenburg with models of the horses appropriately harnessed to the ceremonial coaches and carriages of the Habsburg Kings and Queens. There is an enormous greenhouse (Palmery), a zoo, a theatre which offers summer performances of the Vienna Chamber Opera and many other items of interest to tourists, but our group will always remember stumbling around making new paths in untrodden snow, with Dr. Gunz in all her zeal for our enlightenment, brushing off the snow to read the inscriptions on the monuments. It was not enough that we walked the length of the garden before we stopped for lunch, but we had to go back for more and return for tea and dessert of some strange and exotic nature. I lost my hat in the wind, and I was so cold I didn't even know it. But we know it must be beautiful in the summer!

We got a good taste of contemporary life when we accepted an invitation from the director to have dinner and spend the evening with some young men and women who were doing practice teaching in a rural setting. After feeding us food they had prepared, the girls modeled the garments they were wearing, which they had made, explaining the significance of all the smocking and embroidery which reveals where they came from and certain native customs. They were courageous in their use of the English language and enthusiastic about trying to make themselves clear. The boys undertook to demonstrate the folk dances with their Austrian partners first and then sat them down and gave the Sweet Briar girls a good lesson. Before the evening was over names and addresses were being exchanged and visits to Sweet Briar were being discussed. There was one young man who wanted to look into working for the SB Dairy, and Kaky and Harriet and Christine had supper the next night at the apartment of some of the girls. The evening came to a close with the formation of a friendship circle, the exchange of songs, and a few lumps in a few throats.

Another present-day tradition that we had two chances to experience was a "Heurigen." This is a happening when new wine comes in and pine branches are hung over the door. These are not strictly wine cellars but customers may be served buffet-type food of cold meats and snacks along with the ripe wine for 300 days of the year without the burden of taxation of a regular restaurant. The most famous, and the ones to which we went, were those at Gringing and Heiligenstadt on a trip to Beethoven country on a Sunday evening. The jolly local citizenry urged us to join in a sing with their guitars and accordions as we drank our wine and ate their good food. The atmosphere was beautifully relaxed and we loved it.

I have come this far in telling about our trip, and I haven't even mentioned St. Stephens Cathedral, which dominates the entire Vienna landscape. We had tours inside to study the marvelous statuary, altar pieces, stalls, lofts and sanctuaries. We had tours around the outside of the building, up into the bell tower, down into the catacombs to see the piles of bones of victims of The Black Plague. The city comes up to the very doors of the cathedral. Stefanplatz soon became the most familiar stop on the Metro. We could meet there to shop and eat as well as to worship and see new sights. Vienna has many beautiful "kirchen" where, even in the weather we were experiencing, there were fresh flowers on the altars. Christmas decorations were still in evidence. We had gone first to Karlskirche to hear the Haydn Missa Brevis. At the Hofburgkapelle we heard the Vienna Boys Choir sing the Schubert Mass in C. This was a ticketed affair; so we moved in a body, but the Sunday before some had gone to St. Stephens and others to the Augustinerkirche, famous as the scene of the wedding of Maria Theresia and François of Lorraine in 1736 and that of Franz Joseph and Elizabeth in 1854. By the fourth Sunday our classes were over, and we were on our own. Toni and I were on a two-day package deal in Salzburg for the February Mozart Festival and taking a "Sound of Music" tour with a quick look at all the cathedrals playing a part in the movie on the von Trapps. For that last week some went to Budapest; some went to Salzburg; only one went skiing, and all of us came back to the Pension Scala to revisit some of those masterpieces we hadn't gotten enough of on the first go-round.

Our only activities in which there was no unity of action were in eating and shopping. Some had arrived ill-prepared for the shockingly cold weather with which we contended every day. For those it was boots, Loden coats, Geiger jackets, sweaters, fur hats, wool socks and scarves. For some there was a yearning for clutter to take home for gifts or personal use, such as: enamels, porcelain, tea pots, duty-free liqueurs and perfumes, Mozart chocolates, Sacha tortes and all the pastries for which Vienna is famous. Some went out every night and found places to dine that varied from the Chattanooga Burger and McDonald's to the Schwarzenberg Palace and Sirks. Some were young and foolish and caught colds and sniffled while others were older and colder, cherished their health and were thankful to have soups and fruits stored in the room for a cozy supper on nights when no events were scheduled.

All in all, we experienced wonderful things in music and art and sights and people. The snow never melted so we'll just have to go back to see those wonderful flowers in the picture books, the Lippezaner stallions who were away for the winter season, the ballet for which we had no tickets, and the Choir Boys who operate behind a screen in Vienna but are in full view in the USA. I think we saw everything else, thanks to the teamwork of Diane Moran and her Austrian counterpart, Lucia Gunz, who captured the hearts of us all. We learned from seeing, hearing, coping and being together. If anyone wants to question the validity of winter-term, don't expect anything but positive reactions from the Vienna group. It was stupendous! □

Off Your Duffs & Up The AS$et$: Common Sense for Non-Profit Managers by Sarah Becker and Donna Glenn (Farnsworth Publishing Co. Inc.)

A guide book for people who handle donated money for non-profit organizations, this softcover manual takes a humorous approach to the serious business of managing other people's funds.

Meaning to Manager, Accounting, The Language of Business, Keeping the Books, Beating the Budget Blues, Stealing You Blind are among the titles of the 14 chapters which are aimed at education of volunteers to prevent loss of income through poor management or misguided investments.

Sarah Becker, SBC '70, majored in political economics (despite an "allergy to math"). After working as an aide to former 8th District Congressman Roger Zion in her home state of Indiana, she studied and graduated from the London, England, School of Economics and then worked for the World Bank putting together health programs for Third World Countries.

She now lives in Alexandria, VA, where she heads her own management consulting firm and deals especially with non-profit managers.

Grape Expeditions in France: Bicycling in the Vineyards of France by Sally Taylor & Friends (Sally Taylor & Friends, San Francisco, publishers)

After the successful publication of Grape Expeditions in California, Sally Taylor, SBC '70, and her friends have now explored France by bicycle. A compact, complete guide to the vineyards of France, the book maps 12 routes through the easy river valleys of the Loire, the Bordeaux and the Rhone; the gentle rolling hills of the Beaujolais, the Burgundy and the Champagne; and a real mountain pass to St. Tropez in the Provence.

Accommodations, from elegant chateau hotels to local campsites and youth hostels, are listed as well as bistros and bicycle shops, train tables, and information on how to deal with the French (who are ardent admirers of bicyclists and wine enthusiasts).

Interest Rates on Savings Deposits by Professor Marie E. Sushka.

Marie E. Sushka, SBC '67, is Professor of Finance at the College of Business Administration at Arizona State University, Tempe, Arizona.

Schooling for the Learning Disabled co-authored by Sally Mayfield Schreiner SBC '59 (SMS Publishing Corp, publisher)

The Art of Presenting Food by Sallie Yon Williams, SBC '63 (Hearst Books, New York, publishers)

Other book notes: Tinsley Place, '80, has written a spy thriller Startex Assignment (on sale in the United Kingdom) under the pen name Russell Pope; Dianne Stafford Mayes, '58, has published Rush Hour Superchef; Suzanne Gay Linville, '32, has written a biography of her mother, Jennie Coker Gay, including her poetry and letters from her 1909 round-the-world honeymoon.

Anne Pannell — A Friend

Anne Pannell and I arrived at Sweet Briar at almost the same time in the summer of 1950 — she, as President, and I as Alumnae Secretary. We were next door neighbors, and our children good friends. We took over for one another when one of us was “on the road,” and we made many trips together, visiting alumnae clubs and attending meetings.

Clifton Pannell and Ruthie Schmidt attended the Amherst School and boarded the bus each day at the old Sweet Briar Post Office. Reuben, the S.B. house man, and Virginia (“Ginya” as the boys called her), the cook, were the children’s best friends.

The Pannells and Schmidts shared many happy times with the Gilchrist family who lived in the Sweet Briar farm house. We went sleigh riding in the winter and hay riding in the summer, with many impromptu family gatherings all year long.

Although always very busy, Anne had time to be a friend. She was genuinely interested in everyone and everyone’s family, and was the first to come to one’s aid when a problem arose.

Her library at Sweet Briar House always fascinated me. It was where she spent all her “at home” time, with a cup of tea and an ever-changing mountain of library books. Her interests and knowledge covered every conceivable subject. The Episcopal Church was very much a part of Anne, and she assumed it was the same for everyone else.

Looking back on these special years of my life makes me realize how much I cherish them and how privileged I am to have been a friend of Anne Gary Pannell.

Roses

From a letter received by Ann Morrison Reams '42, Director of the Alumnae Association, regarding the celebration of the 75th anniversary of the Class of 1910:

Saturday afternoon I received a dozen beautiful pink roses. They are the prettiest I ever saw and in a very attractive vase. They made me feel like a prima donna, and I believe you were behind this very gracious gift, although the card said, “From the 500 alumnae attending their reunions.”

I was so disappointed I couldn't be with you.... I must, since my fall last November, have someone with me day and night and be very careful not to fall again. Murrell (daughter Murrell Rickards Chadsey '44), since she couldn't go with me, advised me not to go....

I am trying to live to see Halley's Comet in 1986. Best wishes and thank you again.

Sincerely,
Frances Murrell Rickards '10

P.S. I saw the comet from S.B.'s President's House steps on May 10th, 1910, one month before I graduated.

Sweet Briar Receives Gift of Audubon Prints

Sweet Briar College marked the 200th anniversary of the birth of John James Audubon, America's great naturalist and artist, with the announcement of a gift to the college of six Audubon lithographs of American quadrupeds, printed in Philadelphia, 1842-48, and an original engraving of "Havell's Terns" printed in London, 1832.

The prints are the gift of an alumna, Jean Van Horner Baber (Mrs. Malcolm J.) of Philadelphia, Class of 1933. The announcement of this important acquisition was made to the Sweet Briar Boards of Directors and Overseers on Friday, April 26. Audubon was born on April 26, 1785.

The lithographs of squirrels, meadow-mice, spermophiles (relatives of the squirrels) and "little nimble weasels" were published in Audubon's Viviparous Quadrupeds of North America, coauthored by John Bachman, 1845-49. They were lithographed, printed, and colored by J. T. Bowen, Philadelphia. Both the lithographs and the etching are of the "elephant folio" size — 24" x 18."

The prints will become part of the Sweet Briar collections and will be hung in Sweet Briar House.

Refectory to be Named for Anne Gary Pannell

The newly renovated Sweet Briar Refectory will bear the name of the late Anne Gary Pannell, president of the College from 1950-1971. The building, which contains an art gallery, facilities for the Department of Art History, faculty offices, and an archaeology laboratory, will be dedicated on October 4, 1985.

The choice of the name was approved unanimously by the Sweet Briar Boards of Directors and Overseers. In announcing the Boards' decision, President Fry said, "This decision reflects the belief of all who knew her that no one shaped the program and facilities at Sweet Briar more profoundly than Mrs. Pannell. To pay tribute to her influence through the naming of such a beloved building seemed to all of us compellingly appropriate."

Following her retirement from Sweet Briar, Mrs. Pannell married the Rt. Rev. George Albert Taylor, retired Bishop of Easton, Md., who died in 1978. Mrs. Taylor died in February, 1984, in Alexandria, Va.

Sweet Briar Offers Fifth Year Plan

As of the fall, 1985, Sweet Briar will inaugurate a Fifth Year Program, making it possible for graduates of the College to return to campus to study for another year.

The program is designed to enable people to return to their alma mater to fill out various areas of their education, as they feel that this is needed. It will be helpful for alumnae who find themselves in the position of needing an academic update, who need additional courses in order to qualify for admission to graduate school, or who need a refresher in certain areas to advance professionally.

Some may simply want to go back to Sweet Briar to take some of those courses that were deemed "irrelevant" during college years.

Fifth year students may live on or off campus, depending upon space available, and will pay half the tuition charged to other students. They will be expected to pay the full cost of room and board, if they elect to live on campus, and may also purchase the college meal plan. They will have access to courses on the same basis as any other student.

Interested alumnae should contact the Dean's Office for further information.

RECRUITERS FOR 1985-1986

The Office of Career Planning seeks to expand the roster of national and regional employers interviewing seniors on campus next year. If your organization anticipates openings for bright, motivated young women with a strong liberal arts education and excellent internship experience(s), please encourage on-campus recruiting visits to Sweet Briar in either the fall or the spring. For further information, contact Carter H. Hopkins, Director of Career Planning, Sweet Briar College, Sweet Briar, VA 24595.

We are also interested in openings for internships and summer jobs. We would appreciate being put on various personnel mailing lists.

Women in Chemistry

Sweet Briar is one of a consortium of five colleges that sponsored a workshop on "Women in Chemistry" in Washington, DC, in April, 1985. The other colleges were Mount Holyoke, Skidmore, the College of St. Catherine and the New Jersey Institute of Technology.

The workshop was part of a larger project funded by the Camille and Henry Dreyfus Foundation to attract women to enter the field of chemistry. It brought together women chemists and students from colleges, industry, government and nontraditional fields to share information about chemistry careers and the preparation necessary for succeeding in them. Julia Mills Jacobsen, SBC '45, president of the College-University Resource Institute, Inc., and director of government relations and sponsored programs at Sweet Briar, organized the workshop.

Dr. Susan B. Piepho, professor of chemistry at Sweet Briar, and two Sweet Briar chemistry students, Mary Cole and Roberta Sue Stewardson, represented the College. Dr. M. Elizabeth Tidball, professor of physiology at George Washington University and a member of the Sweet Briar College Board of Overseers, gave the keynote address.

Mrs. Yeager Appointed to Sweet Briar Board

Mrs. Frank J. Yeager of Wichita Falls, Texas, has been elected to the Sweet Briar College Board of Overseers, succeeding Mrs. Thomas E. Martin, Jr., of Atlanta, who has been named to the College's Board of Directors.

Mrs. Yeager, the former Kathryn Anne Prothro, is a 1961 honors graduate of Sweet Briar. Her connections with the College are multifold, with daughter Kathryn Elizabeth a 1984 graduate, daughter Linda Anne a 1985 graduate, and her mother, Elizabeth Perkins Prothro, an alumna, Class of 1939. Mr. and Mrs. Yeager are members of the President's Parents Council where Mr. Yeager has served as chairman for the past four years. Her father, Charles N. Prothro, was a member of the Boards of Directors and Overseers for 18 years and served as chairman of the Boards from 1972 until his retirement in 1978.

Mrs. Yeager is currently chairman of Region IX of the Sweet Briar Alumnae Association and has previously served as a class fund agent and as a member of the Boxwood Circle Committee. She is also active in civic affairs in Wichita Falls and is founding director and past member of the board of the American National Bank.

For recreation she enjoys sewing, cooking, gardening, and flying, and holds a commercial pilots license with multi-engine instrument ratings.

Sweet Briar Plates

From time to time we have a request for some Sweet Briar plates. If anyone has some, of any color, and no longer has need for them, please contact the Alumnae Office and possibly we can help you dispose of them.

Class Pictures

Alumnae who failed to order class pictures at Reunion but now would like to do so please send your name, address, class, and $7.00 to the Alumnae Office.

1985 Sweet Briar Alumnae Directory

A new Sweet Briar Alumnae Directory will be published in the fall. All alumnae will be listed alphabetically by maiden names with classes and addresses. In addition, married alumnae will be listed alphabetically by married names with maiden names, classes and addresses. All alumnae will be listed geographically by states and cities, as well as by classes.

Order your Directory now at the special advance sale price of $10.00 a copy (which includes the cost of handling and postage). After publication the price will be $12.00, but we will have only a limited number to sell. Don't miss this opportunity to reserve your copy and take advantage of the pre-publication price before August 31, 1985. Fill out the order blank and return it, with your check, to the ALUMNAE HOUSE, SWEET BRIAR COLLEGE, SWEET BRIAR, VIRGINIA 24595.

Please reserve _____ Alumnae Directory(ies) for me.

Sweet Briar History

Copies of The Story of Sweet Briar College, Volume I, by Martha Lou Lemmon Stohlman, are still available from the Alumnae Office for $10 each. This account of Sweet Briar takes the story to 1956. Volume II, which will be published in the future, will continue the history. Don't miss the first 50 years!

1916

Grace Minor, who attended Sweet Briar from 1912 to 1913, is a retired school teacher living now in a retirement complex at Lee's Summit, MO. She is enjoying good health and the many activities offered daily for residents of the John Knox Village.

Jean F. Stockdale, who celebrated her 90th birthday in September, moved to the Solheim Retirement Home on the last day of 1984. She plays the piano daily and enjoys working in their garden and watching TV.

Louise Bennett Lord, who lives in the Mary Elizabeth Home in Mystic, CT, and is in a wheelchair with a broken hip, also celebrated her 90th birthday recently. There was a lunch party of eight ladies at her son Bennett's home at Mason's Island. Her other son, James, lives in Paris, France, where he has completed a biography of Alberto Giacometti, which will be published in June.

1920

At 86, Mary Virginia Crabbs Shaw feels fortunate to still be in her own home in Crawfordsville, IN. She "celebrated" Dec. 28 with area S.B. associates. She says she wouldn't ride now over all the Blue Ridge alone with horse, Topsey, as she did from 1916 to 1920.

1924

President and Acting Secretary Mary Rich Robertson (Mrs. Robert E., Jr.), 1406 Bolton St., Baltimore, MD 21217

Fund Agent Jean Grant Taylor (Mrs. W. Randolph), 785 Arlington Blvd., Ann Arbor, MI 48104

Sad but true, we were not represented at our 60th Reunion last spring ('84). Three of us were hopeful, but problems intertered; so news is a bit light.

Clara King Maxwell has sold her home in Charlotte and moved into a condo nearby.

Betty Guy Tranter and Parke sent a picture of their two grands, taken in Canada — very handsome girls.

Esther Jack Arnold is getting about now after six months in the hospital following a shattered hip complicated by infection. She writes, "Luckily my daughter Susan and I had a lovely cruise to the West Indies on the Nordic Prince just before my accident." Esther is a grandmother for the third time — another boy, son of her doctor son in Baltimore.

Janet Schureman Wilson is living with her son in Lake Forest, IL, temporarily until her condo (only fifteen minutes away) is finished. Her 15-month-old grandson leads all the family a merry chase — including two school-age sisters. Janet's son is vice president of human resources with Household Merchandizing.

Katherine Slaughter Thornton and John are fairly well but don't lead their former active lives.

Janet Shutt's Chamberlain's health is also moderately good. She lives alone in her own home, and though her activities are not strenuous, she reads a lot, sews somewhat, and plays bridge several times a week. She also visits her two children on the West Coast occasionally. There are five grandchildren, the youngest of whom is at the Sorbonne in Paris as an exchange student from Smith College.

Augusta Gee Loggins writes that she had a great sorrow in the death of classmate Susan Fitchett last year but a great joy in the birth of her third great-grandchild, a girl, in June. She and her young cousins all live in Alexandria, near enough for Augusta to enjoy.

Frances Nash Burgher sold her house and bought a condominium when her husband died three years ago. She finds the lifestyle quite a change for a gardener and says she can only vent her frustrations on house plants. She feels blessed with three daughters, seven grandchildren, three great-grandchildren, and stepchildren galore.

Bernice Hulbard Waln writes of celebrating her husband's 90th birthday in August with over twenty of their children, grandchildren, and great-grandchildren there for several days.

Susan Simrall Logan remembers that she had four great years at SBC and is glad she had the opportunity to be there during its "pioneer days."

Elizabeth Massie Davis spent Christmas in the area of San Francisco and had a great time with her daughter, her son-in-law, and all four of their grown children. Elizabeth's husband died two years ago last fall. She writes, "My eyes are very low-visioned, and I now have to use a cane to walk, so being 81 isn't all that much fun! I am most thankful for what I have and that my thoughts make sense still (if they ever did)!"

Florence Westgate Kraffert spends her summers in Titusville, PA, and her winters in Pinehurst, NC, right on one of the seven golf courses. However, her favorite activity is playing bridge. She now has two great-grandsons, one in New York City and one in Janesville, WI, where her daughter Nancy also lives.

Phyllis Millinger Camp is happy she is still around and is amazed at how many others are too. She says, "We must have been a healthy class!" She is active in the Episcopal Church Guild and is doing some craft work. She writes, "We live in the country overlooking the Allegheny River and love our beautiful Western Pennsylvania hills and valleys which surround us."

Frederica Bernhard has sold her house, reduced her belongings (no easy task after 39 years in the same house!), and moved into a new life-care condominium retirement residence in San Rafael, CA. She learned about it at a Sweet Briar gathering and feels it has everything one could wish for, including ownership of the apartment.

And now for a few lines on other Sweet Briarites — not in our class but still known to many of us. Dorothy Leatham Nelson '25 writes that she is walking with a cane but manages to get along. Mary Sturgis '25 visited here early last fall, and I took a few ladies to Gibson Island for luncheon. Mary is living at the Hermitage in Onancock and is very happy there.

Emilie Halsell Marston '27, still in Severna Park, MD, has a darling new home. I talk with Lillian Everett Blake '23, who is pretty much a shut-in, and visit with her once in a while. She is proud to say that she has two great-grandchildren — a boy nearly three and a new baby girl. Lucile Miller Matthews '26, from Henderson, NC, is pleased that I am taking care of a real estate project for her.

As for the Robertsons, we three keep well, busy, and happy. Bob was in the hospital for two weeks last winter with heart trouble but is now leading a 95% normal life, for which we are very thankful.

Let us all aim for attending our 65th Reunion at Sweet Briar in 1989.

1928

President Elizabeth Prescott Balch (Mrs. Richard H.), died May 5, 1985.

Marion Sumner Beadle has four great-grandchildren — including 3-year-old twins — all of whom live in Iowa. Both daughters now live in Albuquerque, NM, where Marion lives. Her sad news concerned the death of a 22-year-old granddaughter after a long illness. Earlier Marion spent six weeks in Hawaii, her old home, to be with friends.

Several mentioned keeping in touch with classmates. Winnie West Morriss and Grace Sunderland Owings visit at least once a year, either in Kentucky or Maryland, and both are also in touch with Anne Harrison Shepherd Lewis, who lives in a retirement home in Richmond. Grace lives with her Border collie on her stepson's farm and keeps in shape by walking through the woods and fields. She likes living between Washington and Baltimore, since she can take advantage of theatre and museums in both cities. Winnie divides her time between riding and painting and, when she wrote, was planning to attend a workshop in watercolor to be held in Mexico but sponsored by the U. of Oklahoma and another under T. Scott at Patagonia, AZ. She has a grandson at Cambridge, England, and two granddaughters at the College of Charleston, SC.

Virginia (Rip) Van Winkle Morledge mentioned a delightful luncheon with Bonnie Mathews Wisdom in New Orleans last fall when Rip and Margaret McWilliams Rentschler were on a short tour there. Bonnie took them to see the Garden District and her own attractive home. Rip also saw Katherine Phillips Pope several times last winter in Naples, FL.

Connie Furman Westbrook and Marguerite Hodnett McDaniel live next door to each other in Atlanta, and the two families share many things. The men are both vegetable gardeners, in spite of the fact that Mac is recovering from a stroke and is in a wheelchair, and their wives have the task of freezing their produce. Connie and Joe travel as much as they can and were planning a two-week cruise to the Bahamas in February.

Betty Failing Nelson reminds us that she entered the U. of Wisconsin after two years at Sweet Briar. In 1929 she married William G. Bernhard, and they had two children, Bill and Barbara Bernhard MacLea '56. Last year Betty married R. D. Nelson, whom she had known since they were 10 years old, but he had a stroke and died soon after.

Just before press time the Alumnae Office received the shocking news of Betty Prescott Balch's death — a year after her husband's death. Betty had just sold her large house and moved into a condominium. She recently reported the birth of her first great-grandchild — grandson of Cynthia Balch Barns '52.

Lil Wood has moved into Westminster-Canterbury, a retirement home just north of Richmond, and likes it enormously. She has many old friends there as well as new ones, and they enjoy a full program of activities — exercise classes, swimming, travel films, dances, and three good meals a day. An adjoining building houses the health care facilities.

Virginia Morris Kincaid had a nice trip to Europe last summer with her daughter who lives in Coronada, CA, and spent Christmas with her grandchildren in Memphis, TN. She is still quite active and enjoys her life in Washington, DC.

Louise Harned Ross drove out to Davenport, IA, in October with two friends to visit St. Katharine's School and was thrilled with the physical lay-out and teaching plan. As usual she was spending the winter in Delray Beach, FL, but expected to be back in Wilmette, IL, for the summer.

Evelyn (Tommy) Claybrook Bowie (I think — she didn't sign her card!) also wrote from Florida — Pompano Beach, where she and her husband were spending a month before going to Grenada for three weeks. Last year they were not able to go there, as they had for the previous six years, because of the political unrest. They were anxious to see the changes in that beautiful island. At Christmas they were with all of their family at daughter Bev's in Cranford, NJ. Bev and her husband, who have two teenagers, own a weekly newspaper. Son Lee and his wife, who have an 8-year-old, both teach philosophy at Mt. Holyoke, where Lee heads the department. Gordon celebrated his 81st birthday by playing four sets of tennis; he and Tommy then dined with friends and played bridge until 1:30 a.m.!

Mary Hughes Vaughan Blackwell, honorary member of the class, says that she is enjoying retirement more than she ever dreamed she would. The only disadvantages she sees are that the days, weeks, and months are slipping by too fast and projects planned for one day are sometimes left unfinished. Mary Hughes has just welcomed her eighth grandchild, Lucy Blackwell Marion, daughter of Nancy Blackwell Marion '74, who designs this magazine.

Fund Agent

Eleanor Wright Conway (Mrs. Theodore J.), 2160 Tanglewood Way N.E., St. Petersburg, FL 33702

My dear Girls, I am dewy-eyed over your response to my plea for news! Now I just hope that all of you who didn't answer this time will do so next time — and all will be accounted for. Our dedicated and hardworking fund agent, El Wright Conway, is such a help to me, and we keep up a steady correspondence swapping news. She and Ted have sold their Durham, NC, home and now reside year round in their St. Petersburg, FL, one except for visits to their children and grands in Gladwynne, PA, and various travels. El enjoyed immensely Alumnae Council last October, meeting President Fry and Dean Belford, and the reception in the new Arts Center (formerly the Refectory). Our Class President, Ruth Remon McRae, wrote that she is busy in Arlington, VA, with volunteer work at George Washington University Hospital, regular attendance at Theatre Guild productions and National Symphony performances, and trips to New York City and New England. She issued a cordial invitation to all our classmates to visit her when coming her way. She often sees Ted Clary Treadwell in Washington. Ted wrote that she and Ben were flying to Riverside, CA, to spend Christmas with Ben, Jr., and family, and she had talked to Marion Malm Fowler in San Diego and would spend several days after Christmas with Marion and Mac. In February Ted and Ben are flying to Hawaii. They will be on the Independence for seven days, visit all the Islands, and have several days in Honolulu. This trip will complete their travels to all the states of the U.S.! Wow! Helen Pratt Secrest wrote that she'd had one trip to New Mexico to visit her daughter and family, but the rest of the time has been at home in Washington trying to keep her yard and garden in shape. She says her rock garden is the talk of the neighborhood! She sees Ted Clary Treadwell sometimes and attended a high school reunion with her recently; she has another grandchild and loves her church work, bridge, and going to the ballet. Susan (Tiny) Marshall Timberlake wrote from Charlottesville that her granddaughter, the daughter of Susan Timberlake Thomas '59, was married last November to Neal Payne of Charlottesville, and she hopes they will someday have a Susan to send to Sweet Briar. I was so glad to hear from Margaret Ellen Bell Hare. She and her husband Stan enjoy retirement on Long Island Sound near the Larchmont Yacht Club where their activities center. She plays in "the Duplicate" and Stan sails his Har- poon. Stan had cancer surgery some years ago with complete recovery. They go to Staunton every Christmas to be with cousins and old friends and had been to SBC for former president Whiteman's first dinner for Golden Stairs. Henrietta Bryan Alphin lost her mother last July at the age of 102½ years. Our love and sympathy to her. This last fall Henrietta became a guide for the Ivy Creek Foundation in Charlottesville — a beautiful 215 acres of woodland. She loves this; it brings her back in contact with children and young people. She loves her church work, and she may visit all three of her children in the next several months, which will take her to Maryland, Atlanta (hope she calls me!) and California. Dot Smith Berkeley reports that her granddaughter Susan Harrison, daughter of Judith Berkeley Harrison '60, was married last September to Kevin McLure in Marietta, GA, and her grandson, Judy and Bill's son, graduated in June from Georgia Tech. The nicest letter came from Courtenay Cochran Ticer telling me she was spending a few days around New Year's with her daughter who lives in Atlanta to go to the Peach Bowl game and had hoped to contact me. I was sick about missing her — I was on a two-week Caribbean cruise over Christmas and New Year's. I hope she'll come to Atlanta again before long. Her news of the year was that her house had caught on fire last January while she was visiting her sister in Florida. The furnace didn't turn off! The fire did a lot of damage before detected. Fortunately she didn't lose anything of great value and all could be repaired and restored — but it took six months!

A Christmas card from Betsy Higgins Plummer tells that their house was almost demolished in July '83 by a fire, but they have finally finished rebuilding it and moved back in before Christmas. Christmas Eve John was rushed to the hospital with a heart condition and came home 10 days later with a pace-maker. He's fine now — feels better than he has in years, and they plan a spring vacation in the Caribbean, and Europe next fall. Their Christmas card was a snapshot of themselves, and I declare Betsy is as pretty and trim as she was in college!

A letter from Alice Dabney Parker enclosed a photograph clipping from Horizon magazine of a magnificent Henry Moore sculpture given by Sally Shallenberger Brown in memory of her husband W. L. Lyons Brown to the J.B. Speed Art Museum in Louisville, KY. Alice's big news is that she and John are building a house on land in Franklin, VA, owned by John's ancestors. What courage! What stamina! She says that by the time you read this they should have something resembling a house instead of just a hole in the ground. My admiration has no bounds! Eleanor Franke Crawford lives in New Orleans but wrote from Houston where she was spending the Christmas holidays with her son and his wife who are expecting a baby in February — her fifth grandchild. I have promised myself a reunion with her the next time I'm in Louisiana visiting my sister. Charlotte Magoffin's card from Wayzata, MN, says she has little personal news; but the fact that her sister lives in Wayzata and her brothers who live out of state come to see her several times a year says a great deal to me. Also, El Wright Conway told me that Charlotte has completed a family history for her nieces and nephews, and I can think of no more wonderful gift she could give them! Congratulations, Charlotte. I wish I had done the same. By the way, I am so cold at this moment (Jan. 21) from the "Siberian Express" which is passing through Georgia. I wonder how it is in Minnesota!

A card from Marion Malm Fowler says she and Mac have had a good year. Mac still plays golf and she gardens, plays bridge, and works for the San Diego Symphony. They attended the wedding of a grandson in Chattanooga where "the lovely Mrs. Olan Mills, II (Norma Patteson '60) was the lay leader for the ceremony at St. Peter's." In October they had a wonderful trip to China. Elizabeth (Jobie) Job Jopp's card came from her hometown of Pikesville, KY, where she is serving her sixth year as deacon in the Presbyterian Church. We're so proud of you, Jobie! Her older sister, Dorothy Job Robinson '21, lives in England. Last year Queen Elizabeth II awarded her the "Silver Shilling" for being the oldest parishioner in her Cathedral town of Millford Haven. Jobie says she is quite adjusted to being a widow and loves being in a town of 5,000 where everyone knows each other. Amalie Frank Kohn writes that she has been more or less grounded the past eight months with hip replacement surgery and is now facing the same procedure with the other hip. She sends her best to all her classmates who may read this. Elizabeth Layfield Smith lives in Raleigh, NC, and says they have three daughters living in the West: San Francisco, Denver, and Wyoming. Their oldest grandson is a freshman at Princeton. Billie Hancel Pearson wrote from Los Angeles that she lost her husband John in March 1984. Our love and deepest sympathy to you, Billie. Katherine Scott Soles tells us that her son Dr. Jeffrey Soles was director of the summer school at the American School for Classical Studies in Athens last summer and took 20 graduate students to all the archeological sites in Greece. He also received a National Geographic grant for the work at his own site in Maklas, Crete. He teaches archeology and classics at U.N.C. Greensboro. Katherine lives in New Canaan, CT.

President

Ruth Remon McRae (Mrs. John T.), 1701 North Kent St., No. 1007, Arlington, VA 22209 and is an artist.

A lovely Christmas card from Sally Ainsworth Glass gave me great news of her "doing." Last summer she spent at the U. of Edinburgh taking courses, enjoying the Festival, and "looking around Edinburgh." She also made a brief visit to the Outer Hebrides and then London. What a wonderful summer that must have been! Eleanor Mattingly Littlepage retired in March '79 from private practice of gynecology and obstetrics to nurse her totally paralyzed husband at home. He died in 1984, and since becoming a widow, she is trying "to learn how the non-medical part of the population live." She remembered how she enjoyed playing bridge at SBC and now takes bridge lessons — delighted to find it still fun. She goes to church on Sunday and has joined a garden club. "Tis a different world," she says and will let us know more later. It sounds to me as though she not only has a beautiful attitude, but also has things completely under control. Our love to you, Eleanor, and full speed ahead! The card from Nancy Tucker Wilson Mann says she is still painting and writing, mostly poetry at present. Her children and grandchildren sound so interesting and attractive. All of them are planning trips to the Caribbean or Brazil. Nancy herself is going to St. Marten in February. Susanne Gay Linville has published a biography of her mother Jennie Coker Gay, including her poetry and letters from her round-the-world honeymoon in 1909. I am so proud of the distinguished members of our class: doctors, poets, writers, artists, sculptors — besides all of us run-of-the-mill housewives who just cook, sew, market and play bridge!

My SBC roommate and beloved friend Barbara Munter Purdue has had a terrible time these past six months, but I am happy to report she is on the mend. Last summer somebody else's golf cart got away, knocked her down, and broke both of her ankles — terrible splintered breaks that had to be surgically mended with pins. She spent weeks in the hospital with knee-high casts; finally at home, she used a wheel chair and then a walker, visited the hospital daily for therapy, and exercised at home. Then three months later a compression fracture in her lower sacrum developed and sent her back to the hospital and traction and later home and traction. But now she is doing fine and able to go with Bob to Hawaii for the month of February. It was a nightmare, but she was courageous and determined, and her husband and children carried her through it. She will see Marge Gubelman Hastert '33 in Honolulu and also Mildred Larimer. Larimer sent me a note telling of a wonderful and unusual trip she had last year. From Honolulu she flew to Singapore via Tokyo and Hong-Kong to board a U.S. President Lines container-freighter (12 passengers). They crossed the Indian Ocean and visited Colombo, Sri Lanka, and Al Fujairah — a new United Arab Emirate in the sea of Oman at the entrance to the Persian Gulf. After returning to Singapore, she visited Taiwan. It was such a relaxing trip she read fourteen books! En route home to Honolulu she stopped for a week in Hong-Kong. Fascinating! Virginia Squibb (Squibby) Flynn wrote of her wonderful trip to Holland which she won last year selling the most bulbs. She said Holland in May was "beautiful beyond expectations!" Then she and Jim enjoyed further travel in France.

Marcia Patterson's letter said, "God has blessed me in many ways this year, especially through family and friends back East and here in Ohio; the good care I've had in the nursing center, attending my cousins' swim meets, visits with my family on their new patio, watching the opening of the Olympics with them, visits with Beth's daughter Julie, home from college in Seattle, and pet visitations here from the Zenders' two labradors." Emma Knowlton Lytle reports "a very good year for me capturing memories in sonnets, painting, swimming, doing sculpture, and in all and through all praising God." She won a thousand dollar first prize for a painting in Greenwood, MS, and is working towards a show of paintings at Delta State U. in 1986. A card from Hazel Stamps Collins says last year was pretty much the same for her, divided between Naples, FL, and Atlanta. She had a great trip last August to Amsterdam and up the Rhine for five days — delightful group and beautiful weather. I missed Hazel's Christmas visit in Atlanta except for a brief encounter at a luncheon before I went away. Sue Burnett Davis and Frank took a cruise from Hobe, Japan, to Hong-Kong and saw China the easy way. Also, they took a barge trip in France with former SBC dean, Catherine Sims, and her husband Roff.

Mildred Hodges Ferry wrote from Birmingham recounting her fabulous travels far and wide for the past couple of years. Last year she and Mary Nice Jemison '31 went to Germany, Austria, Switzerland, and to the Passion Play. In September the two drove to Virginia to visit friends and Mil was delighted to see again many friends she'd known in college days. She drove all over SBC campus one Sunday afternoon before college had opened. When not traveling, she is busy being an elder in the Presbyterian church. Lib Oouglass Foote, my close friend and neighbor, had surgery in January but is fine now and about to go back to her very pleasant job. Yours truly had a fine two-week cruise over the Christmas holidays, my first visit to the Caribbean, and I loved all the places where we stopped. My most consuming activity is lip-reading, which is the hardest thing I ever tried to learn. But I keep on plugging at it and my instructor says I am getting better.

It would be grand to have letters from you all through the year!

As I write these notes I am in the midst of the preparations for an 18-day trip to Russia and Finland beginning the middle of February. My two daughters, Lindsay Smith Newson '67 and Charlotte, and my daughter-in-law will accompany me. If there are mistakes of omission or commission, forgive me and know that I mean well.

Other peripatetic members of our class include Lucile Cox Jones, who with her husband toured Fiji, Australia, New Zealand, and Tahiti. "La" Donohue McCormack, who has recovered after breaking her arm in a December fall while en route to spend Christmas in Idaho with one of her sons, will visit the same South Pacific area in April. In January Peggy Huxley Dick went to Kenya, Zimbabwe, and South Africa and, en route home to North Carolina, was to visit ski schools in Vermont. Her grandson Col-in has set his sights on being an Olympic skier. In April '84 "Kin" Carr Baldwin flew to England, where, after a short stay, her daughter Stuart Baldwin Osmond '64 joined her for a wonderful trip to Salzburg and Vienna. In August Stuart and Louise, Kin's 16-year-old granddaughter, flew to Norfolk to help Kin move from her home of 36 years to a new high-rise apartment. Kin also went to Winston-Salem, NC, to see her newest grandson, born in the fall. Lillian Steele Cook had a delightful three-week trip through Italy in May. She spent most of her nine days in Rome following Thomas Hoving's footsteps as outlined in his article in Connoisseur and seeing many places not on the "tourist trail." Lil has a grandson attending law school at American U. in Washington, DC, another grandson who is a college sophomore; and a granddaughter who is a PFC in the Army and is stationed in Germany. Margaret Robertson Whitney and her husband Al had planned a cruise to Greece in February, but in January he had an automobile accident and fractured a vertebrae: so they had to cancel their trip. Margaret talks to "Tory" Himes Beddoes often and is busy planning and later working in her garden, which she says is wonderful exercise. Nancy Dicks Blanton wrote that she and husband George, who is still active as president and CEO of his bank, had a lovely Danube trip last fall with several extra weeks in Vienna. Nancy and her daughter Catherine, whose husband Sydney Freedberg is chief curator at the National Gallery, are going to the Holy Land in June. Her other daughter, Lydia, her husband and two little boys live in Shelby, NC, also and are the joy of Nancy's life. The first direct news of Carrie Marshall Young Gilchrist and Peter that I've had in a long time convinces me that they are truly peripatetic. They have circled the globe 10 times and visited 160 countries. This past fall they sailed on the first passenger liner's Northwest Passage voyage, a 41-day trip from St. John's, Newfoundland, to Point Barrow, Alaska. They enjoyed the trip, even though they were twice ice-bound, and were glad that the weather was much warmer than the severe cold they had experienced 10 years ago on an Antarctic trip. They planned to leave the first of February with their son Peter, III (Mecklenburg County, NC, District Attorney), and his wife for a cruise out of Tahiti, visiting several of the small islands in the vicinity. They look forward to the warm weather, swimming, and snorkeling. They have another son and two little grandsons. Carrie Marshall adds that she keeps in touch with her SB roommate, Elizabeth Marton Hodges, who with husband Barney planned to spend February in Florida.

A lovely surprise arrived in the form of a card from Suzanne Moot Strother, which I shall quote in its entirety. "For nearly 50 years I have been procrastinating, thinking 'Next time I'll write.' After leaving Sweet Briar, I graduated from Cornell and then did graduate work. The next 49 years produced three children and in time five grandchildren. We moved to Dobbs Ferry 30 years ago and still live here most of the time. My husband (Cornelle), a former vice president of Union Carbide, is retired now, and we travel quite a bit, the most exciting trip being a fishing one which took us above the Arctic Circle, where we became ice-bound (in August) and had to be airlifted! Would love to hear from any of you if you get to N Y C — we're only 11 miles outside."

Anne Thomson Smith went on a cruise in the South China Sea in February with her son Michael and his wife Myra. (Ann had expected to have Liz Tomlin Jewell as her roommate, but Liz had to cancel at the last minute.) Michael teaches science at Chapel Hill H.S., has written a book, Discipline in the Classroom, and invented a stove for backpacking. He and his wife have one daughter. Anne has another son and a daughter and seven grandchildren who live in Cincinnati. She keeps one grandchild at a time for all day and often through the night once each week. I am sure they and their parents are a great comfort to her as she lost her husband Bud in July to brain cancer — a terrible blow, as many of us know.

We also sympathize with Ruth Gilliam Viar in the loss of her husband Earl to lung cancer in August. She too finds that her children's love and concern are vital to her well-being. She reports that she has a new grandson, making seven grandchildren, with four in college. She does some volunteer work in the Jones Library in Lynchburg.

All of us were saddened by the news of the death of Aline ("Stumpy") Stump Cook after a two-year battle with cancer. Our hearts go out to her widower and her daughter.

Corinne Fentress Gray saw Jackie Moore Hoofnagle and Logan Phinizy Johns when she visited Richmond in January, and they decided they are going to attend our 50th Reunion; most of my correspondents say that they'll be there too. I'm looking forward to the occasion and expect us to have the largest representation ever. Remember, husbands are welcome in the dormitories and are honored with their wives. Corinne also wrote that this past fall she went to Kansas City and watched her daughter London '71 win U.S. championships on three of her horses. She says, "We have between 40 and 50 horses here at Puckerbush Farm, ME, many for training, and the horses have people, so it's a busy place."

Corinne also wrote that Jackie Moore Hoofnagle has moved from her home to a condominium. Betty Fesser MacLeay (mother of our class baby, remember?) and Don moved in June into Goodwin House, an Episcopal retirement community in Alexandria, VA, where Sweet Briar's late President Emeritus Anne Pannell Taylor lived until her death in February of '84. They miss their old home but are only 20 minutes from their former neighborhood.

Fran Baker Lamb and Wilson have enjoyed family weddings in Pennsylvania and New Jersey. Wherever they go they look for antiques for their interior decorating clients. The Wilsons worked hard in the past Democratic campaign, as they usually do.

Mary Sue Wescott Ubben retired in 1982 (as a professor emeritus) from the Biology Department of Cedar Crest College. She lives in Breinigsville, PA, and is very busy with music, a trip to China, community work, and her children, now that she has more time of her own.

Marie Gray Valentine Curtis, Ted, and their three children and three grandchildren are healthy and happy. Daughter Louise lives in Goochland County, VA, and has 70 pupils in her horseback riding classes. Calvin Curtis Jackson is a junior at Longwood College, Farmville, VA, preparing to be an elementary school teacher.

Margaret and Ted, Jr., work hard all week and enjoy their boat on weekends.

Frances ("Chickie") Gregory is spending the winter doing research in Harvard's Widener Library stacks for her next book. She plans to spend next winter in Richmond and will attend our 50th.

Our May Queen, Chloe Frierson Fort, had a wonderful Christmas with all four of her children and 10 of her grandchildren, who range in age from 16-year-old Chloe, III, to twin girls, born June 30, 1984.

Marjorie Wing Todd still lives alone in her home in Eustis, FL, and three of her children live in the same town. Her older daughter, Wing Todd Sigler '66, after taking her Master's degree, is teaching school in Eustis.

Dorothea McClure Mountain and Bill are at their apartment in Pompano Beach, FL, in the winter and return to spend the rest of the year in their Kintaning, PA, home. Their only child and her family live in Clemson, SC.

Our class president, Margaret ("Smitty") Smith Thomasson, continues to work in the family distributing company. She is enjoying her work on the board of the Central Virginia Commission on Aging and has close association with the faculty at the Belle Boone Beard Department of Gerontology at Lynchburg College. Smitty saw Polly Langford Payne '35, who recently retired from running The Carousel gift shop, and Nancy Worthington '31, who lives at Westminster-Canterbury, at the Sweet Briar Day luncheon.

Our wonderful and efficient fund agent, Katie Niles Parker, is progressing nicely after her second complete knee replacement and expects to be walking normally soon. She writes that husband Frank "has become an absolutely super housekeeper-nurse-cook but is glad that 1984 has ended and I can now take over in the kitchen."

The Parkers saw all their four young families and many of their 14 grandchildren during Christmas. Katie joins me in hoping that all of you will attend our 50th Reunion in May 1986 and that you will be as generous as possible in your contributions to Sweet Briar. Also, please be thinking about whom you'd like to take over as Class of '36 secretary as my term is up with the Reunion. Volunteers are welcome!

1940

President

Connie Currie Fleming (Mrs. Richard E.), 42 Meadowbrook Rd., Chatham, NJ 07928

Secretary

Mildred Moon Montague (Mrs. William L.), 6 Bartram Dr., Lookout Mountain, TN 37350

Fund Agents

Elizabeth (Nickie) Gockley McLellan (Mrs. Robert S., III), 200 Roxbury Rd., Garden City, NY 11530

Barbara Smith Whitlock (Mrs. James P.), 214 Exeter Way, Hillside, NJ 07205

With C.P. Neel's wonderful guidance I hope to develop into a fascinating chronicler of our class events. 'Tis fun hearing from you and I can't report what I don't hear — so just keep on writing!

A copy of the Hospital Newsletter with a write up of C.P.'s progress was most interesting. She was determined to be on an out-patient basis for her chemotherapy and made it on her own. She even put on a cocktail buffet at Christmas.

Joy Carter Forse calls her life "blessedly uneventful." T.S. Eliot calico cat, Grizabella, as well as two granddaughters keep her happy.

Beth Thomas Mason and Tate alumnae. Louise Kirk Edwards '41 and Ann Hauslin Porterfield '42 were among those aboard. Beth plans to be at reunion in May.

Jean Tyree Willman admits to never sending in news but gave a thumbnail sketch of her life after SBC. She married a Navy lieutenant in Honolulu in 1940, was evacuated in 1942, and had three children, Julie in '44, Celia in '47, and Alexander in '49. She completed her college work in 1960 at Salve Regina College in Newport, RI, and got a Master's at UVa, as working with Head Start program in Alexandria fascinated her. She taught kindergarten in Fairfax County and Alexandria until retirement in 1981. She now works in the Armed Forces History section of the Smithsonian, where she loves operating the Wang computer. She volunteers at Northern Virginia Hospice, church and civic organizations. She sees Ruthie Collins Henry often.

Cynthia Noland Young says she keeps up with me through her sister who lives in Hixson, TN. Cynn had a new grandson Andrew Carter LaFiar in Middlebury, VT. Her daughter Betsy has a son, 6, and lives in Houston. The remaining four children are unmarried and scattered. Douglas, youngest, is a senior at Cornell majoring in computer. Cynn and Karl were taking off for Colorado Springs and Vail before attending a wedding in Lake Forest.

Reba Smith Gromel and George had a visit to SBC last Easter a year ago and saw Betty Frantz Roberts and Tom as well as Helen Mac. They planned to stay in Florida Christmas and "avoid all those germs and flu bugs" they caught the last time they ventured north.

Blair Bunting Both is busily raising that $70,000 we'll need for our class 45th reunion gift. She visited with Ellie Snow Lea and Connie Currie Fleming and was rejoicing over her son's marriage to a darling girl from Durham, NC. Her daughter Blair '65 is at Trinity Episcopal School for ministry in Pittsburgh for a year of lay studies. Blair is involved in Delaware Hospice and Emmanuel Dining Room, a downtown facility that feeds the poor in Wilmington.

Helen Taylor writes from Norfolk that it is hard to believe we graduated 45 years ago, and she will be on hand to see how we all are.

Irene Vongehr Vincent says she will come from Bainbridge, WA. Irene wrote of a fabulous trip — bicycling through Inner Mongolia; a train ride from Peking to Moscow; visits to Uzbekistan, the Ukraine, and Lenin-grad; three weeks in the Scandinavian capitals; and ten days in England.

Ginny Leggett Cameron thinks I live in "a beautiful state" — that could be taken two ways, Ginny — as she saw it first-hand when visiting in Sweetwater, TN, last summer. She stays contentedly in Florida where she enjoys resting and reading.

Anne Conant Weaver is covering Colorado as regent for her DAR chapter. She is an hour's drive in all directions from state board meetings and now flies commercially as she gave up her pilot's license several years ago. She had a month in Germany and Austria with a quick trip to Nova Scotia, which she considers "second home," before going to Mexico, the Canary Islands, Greek Isles and Turkey, returning in time to keep grandchildren in shifts all summer.

Jeanne Adelaide Harris works at the Kansas City, MO, Art Gallery and visited in Salt Lake City, UT, last summer.

Anne Waring Lane and Mills have retired to Savannah, GA, and both are leaders in the restoration of that Colonial city.

Louise Patrick Newton usually spends her summers looking after grandchildren: two 4-year-olds, two 6, and one 6 weeks in Durham, NC. She loves to swim, walk and study Arabic, which she'll use to help her husband with his Arabic glosses. However, for the next 16 months they will be in Europe, where her husband will be doing research on 11th century South Italian manuscripts scattered from Copenhagen to Oxford to Salerno.

Helen Cornwall Jones and her energetic Homer come to Warren Wilson College outside Asheville, NC, twice a year with groups of interested friends of the college. Last fall Tell F. Sinclair came along and they called me. Tell writes for the Princeton Packet and had a line article on Helen and Homer and their work with Presbyterian Church USA. Tell also lectures on cut glass and teaches at Hofstra U.

Mary Height Black, Polly Boze Glascock, Tell Sinclair, Connie Currie Fleming, Barbara Smith Whitlock, and Nickie Gockley McLellan lunched at Connie's last fall and sent me a picture of a very "well preserved bunch." Barbara loves caring for her grandchildren, all four of them, who visit her at the shore. Her daughter Nancy attended a tennis clinic at SBC. Son Chef has bought a farm house in Newfield, near Ithaca, NY.

Emory Gill Williams says she and Carrington enjoy life in the country where they do a lot of sailing and golf. All six children are easily accessible, so they celebrate holidays and birthdays together. They have an apartment in Richmond so see lots of our class there. The Williams plan a trip to England and the Netherlands come spring.

Connie Chalkley Kittler, Ann Adamson Taylor, Canny Lancaster Pasco, and Mary Petty Johnston Bedell all see each other frequently in Richmond where Anne has an apartment. She made big news in Baltimore when elected to Baltimore City Republican Central Committee. She won in the May primary so went to the Republican Convention in Dallas in August! Naturally she worked in Reagan-Bush headquarters and was delighted with the results. Her only daughter, Sally, is a free-lance writer and has been all over the world this past year. Ann plans to see us at reunion.

Mickie Mitchell Gillis and Wats were going to Cape Cod for Christmas with Susan and family. The Gillises live at Ormond Beach, FL, where their son moved last year to join them.

Nancy Haskins Elliot and David's family spent last year traveling. Our bloomin' alumna — big bulb seller for her club — spent a month in Britain and another in France while David attended an Arms Control meeting. Daughter Enid went to NYC, son-in-law Rick was in NYC and Boston, son John went to Victoria, and daughter Nan came from Alaska to join her parents in France.

Polly Boze Glascock sells real estate in Short Hills, NJ, where Jim is now retired. She ran into Kitty Estes Johnston and Gilbert when in New Zealand last winter with Margaret Dowell Kearney.

'Twas fun chatting with Hortense Powell Cooper whom I called about our class gift. She is busy with Colonial Dames, attended the bi-annual meeting in Washington, DC, last fall, and has been elected the new president of the Tenn. Society. Her youngest son, Jim, is Congressman from his district and doing a fabulous job. At Easter he was to be married to Martha Hayes '76, an ornithologist with World Wildlife Federation in D.C. Hortense's son William is a lawyer in Nashville, and son John is in the executive program at Vanderbilt's Owen School of Business.

Ramona Spurlock Fite claims to be "fat and sassy" and lives in Nashville, TN, where her husband, who is retired from the Army, is connected with one of the banks.

Katharine Hill Apperson hoped to come to our 40th. She is busy coordinating food service for her church, learning restoration of metal trays and antique furniture, serving on her condo's board, helping the Raleigh Museum support group, and growing gorgeous S.B. bulbs. She has three "beautiful" grandchildren.

Betty Hammer Morrell "still loves living at the beach," Myrtle that is. She's a golfer and plays on three of those marvelous courses.

Midge Fleming Gray is taking therapy after her stroke and looking after her 90-year-old father.

Margaret Woodward Countess is widowed and living in Huntsville, AL.

C.P. sent a book review of Mary Lee Settle's Beulah Quintet and how she came to write it from the N.Y. Times. Settle had a seminar at UVA some years ago which our middle son took. He'll never forget her, he vows! Mary Lee is Mrs. William Tazewell in private life and lives in Norfolk.

Jackie Sexton Daley stays close to home needpointing. She has made 11 Christmas stockings since husband Jack retired 10 years ago. Their social life revolves around the '49ers.

Kathleen Ward Allen has retired with husband to Green Valley, AZ, near Tucson. Winters are spent at Sanibel, FL. Then they move on to Cape Cod for 10 days before spending the summer at their camp in the Adirondacks. Daughters and grandchildren visit on weekends. Since the Walker family award was recently established at SBC, Kathleen has been inspired to write the family history. That should be an interesting project.

Martha Smith McGown writes from Rialto, CA, of her 1,000-mile trip through Arizona, Nevada, Utah, Wyoming, South Dakota, Minnesota, Wisconsin, and crossing Lake Michigan to attend her brother's wedding. She found Lake Sweet Briar in North Dakota! Life is "full and dazzling since retiring from the Library in Rialto" where she worked for 20 years. She and her husband have been in several plays and Martha takes aerobics three times a week.

Lisa Pugh Worthing summers on a farm 10 miles from Camden, MA, and winters in the South. This year it will be the OE II to New Zealand, Hong Kong, Thailand, and Singapore before flying home. Mary Sue Kilham Davis enjoys her grandchildren as well as various community activities in Alexandria, VA.

Two nice honors came my way last year. Girls Preparatory School gave me their Distinguished Alumna Award in April. In October I went to Nashville to receive the American Cancer Society's Annual National Divisional Award. As this is the highest award a volunteer can receive, you know how grateful and humble it made me.

Final Flash! Ellen McClintock Templeton was setting off on a three-month odyssey starting in San Diego and heading South and East in their 5th-wheel trailer. They plan to fish in Florida Keys, head north and see Ann Clauthorn and Patty Balz Vincent '39.

New York, Washington, and Pennsylvania will be toured before they head back West. That should take three months of retirement. No grandchildren to report and Ellen won't make reunion. Eleanor Bosworth Badal, Cleveland Heights, OH, will also be absent from reunion; she has a meeting in Denver, CO, her hometown. She will be glad to see family and friends there but will miss seeing classmates at SBC.

President

Peggy Gordon Seiler (Mrs. Robert), 4810 Stuart Ave., Richmond, VA 23226

Secretary

Frances Longino Schroder (Mrs. Hughes S.), 3947 Tuxedo Rd., N.W., Atlanta, GA 30342

Fund Agent

Emily Ann Wilkins Mason (Mrs. Thomas B.), 2608 Richelieu Ave., S.W., Roanoke, VA 24014

What makes this job so enjoyable is receiving news of so many of you and of your children and grandchildren. The first card I received was from Lucile Christmas Brewster. She and Bill were leaving that week to spend six weeks traveling to the Great Barrier Reef, Christmas in Sri Lanka, then the Malabar Coast of southern India, and Israel.

From Alice Johnson Fessenden I heard that following reunion she had journeyed to Washington, Martha's Vineyard, and Cape Cod; then she met Lucille Brewster in Boston. Alice was recently asked by an honorary educational association to travel for them from Toronto to Tucson and several places in between "(not Atlanta, sadly)."

Another traveler, Pat Whitaker

Waters had a marvelous trip to England in October. She and John rented a cottage and thoroughly enjoyed being a part of village life.

Marge Willetts Maiden's life is as busy as ever. Her office went on computer... "besides 'computerese,' I took conversational Spanish again as well as a Bible study course." She also edits a monthly magazine, is involved with social activities and the altar guild at church. She is periodically in touch with Dykie Watts Fournier.

A long newsy letter from Leslie Herrick Danford extolled the virtues and the climate of Prescott, AZ, where she and Douglas have moved from Miami. They have bought a small lot on a hill in the mountains and plan to build. The primary reason for moving to the West is to be a little closer to their three daughters, who live in Seattle, Portland and San Francisco. Some of you may recall that her daughter Mary was Student Council president while she was a senior at SBC in '73. Leslie keeps in touch with Margy Brendinger Robinson, Millie Brenizer Lucas and Tina White Murray.

From Jean Blanton Murphy: "Our 40th Reunion renewed ties, brought nostalgia, gave meaning to a special week-end. Since those May days I enjoyed seeing Libby Vaughan Bishop, Tee Tift Porter and others in Dallas in September and had the added fun of week-ending with Libby and Louis in San Antonio... Meanwhile, back in Washington, my life revolves around Jim, his/my children, my job at Wesley Theological Seminary and the inner-city church in which we're co-chairman of prison ministries."

Murrell Rickards Chadsey had some terrific news: her mother, Frances Murrell Rickards '10, is the oldest living graduate! She is 97! Ricky said that she flew from Virginia to NYC for Christmas. Ricky frequently sees Dottie Tobin Baldwin and Anne Bowen Broadus; the three are members of the Colony Club.

Anita Lippitt Clay and Tom had a trip to England last June and were unable to attend reunion which came so close to their departure. Tom and Anita went to Costa Rica for Christmas to be with their son Henry and his family. Henry, Wendy and little Walt (b. 27 Sept. 1983) are attending a missionary language school in preparation "to serving in Argentina under a cooperative agreement between The Navigators and Mission to the World, winning and disciplining students at the U. of La Plata."

An interesting letter from Jinnie Noyes Pillsbury told of her journey to Adelaide, Australia, to attend the Fifth International Congress on Mathematics Education at the end of August. Since school had already started, she and her friend were not able to travel in Australia, but she hopes to return "before too long and visit other parts of that vast and interesting country." Jinnie is planning to retire at the end of this school year and is truly looking forward to it.

Tee Tift Porter is finishing a two-year term as chairman of the Atlanta Town Committee of the Colonial Dames. This has kept her busy traveling back and forth to Savannah periodically for board meetings. Her eldest daughter, Cathy, is a '69 Phi Beta Kappa graduate of SBC and also a graduate of Georgetown U. Law School. She is married to a lawyer, lives in Washington and is on the staff of Sen. John Chafee of Rhode Island as a tax assistant. Patty, Tee's second daughter, lives in L.A. is also married to a lawyer and has two children. Patty founded the Westside Art Center in L.A., a place where children may study art, music and dancing. Their two older sons, Jim and Tommy, are both married and work for their dad, Russell, the youngest, graduates from Westminster High School this spring and leaves for college in the fall.

Alex and Betty Haverty Smith have nine grandchildren and another on the way. Betty is not only busy with children and grandchildren, but is active in Continuum, an outgrowth of the March of Dimes. It is a service and advocacy group promoting maternal and infant health. She is studying art at the Atlanta College of Art and is very interested in Ignatius House, a Jesuit Retreat. One daughter is married to a lawyer; the other is married to a Harvard architectural student; the oldest son is with Haverty's Furniture Stores; the next is an architect; the next is a lawyer; one is with GE in Pittsfield, MA; and the youngest is a rising senior at the U. of Ga.

I talked to Bev Holleman Richard. She and Hank are very excited about a forthcoming trip to Europe. Gen. Bernard Rogers, Supreme Allied Commander in Europe, was a classmate of Hank's at West Point. He has invited his entire class of June '43 to hold a reunion at his home in Mons, Belgium. Bev and Hank plan to be gone about a month and will combine more continental travel with the reunion.

Another traveler is Mary Jane Brock, who will spend the month of May in England where she has rented a studio flat. She has been to England several times, but says that there is still so much that she has not seen. She has lost both of her parents in the last two years, so she will be moving soon to a smaller home.

A late bulletin from Ellen Boyd Duval Miller reports that both of her children were home for Christmas. Dabney is in Bryn Mawr where she is working on two more master's. Reed is in LA where he is writing, playing music and doing carpentry and wood-working.

Louise Smith Barry had a wonderful idea which I will pass along to you. She feels that since we have all had such fun together at recent reunions that a mini-reunion in between at some terrific vacation spot would be delightful!

Jane Rice McPherson, who is enjoying her new position as receptionist at the Mass. Mutual office here, had quite a bit of news for me. She had recently heard from Ann Moore Remington, who was going on the three-week trip to the South China Sea with the Sweet Briar group. They fly from Seattle to Hong Kong to board the Pearl of Scandinavia and journey to Canton, the Philippines, Borneo, and Bangkok, too. Jane had also heard from Toni Hart Moore, who had attended the wedding of Sally Hollerith Nietsch's nephew in Charleston, SC. From Libby Vaughan Bishop came the news that she plans to be in New York in March and San Francisco in April. Jane also gave me news of her own family; Heather, who is practicing law in Indianapolis, is volunteer chairman of Indiana Advocates for the Arts; Bruce has a publishing company in New Paltz, NY; and Dwayne is in a neuro-science doctoral program at the U. of Texas.

A few days ago I received a note from Louise Hesson Shelburne, who lives in Asheville, NC. Her daughter, who has been living in San Francisco for the last few years, has recently moved to Atlanta. Anne is an attorney and has joined a law firm here. Louise stays busy with church and community work. She expects to go to SB in the near future.

Mary Churchill Walker Van de Water writes that husband Ken has sold the family business after four generations of ownership. They are now free to travel — and they do, spending February in Belgium and France, March in Florida, and late May in Scandinavia with the S.B. Alumnae. Daughter Julia has completed all but the dissertation for her doctorate in Education Administration.

Hughes and I are looking forward to a trip to Florida in late March to see Harry and Marty Falk Vallery, who have a beautiful condominium at Deerfield Beach. We also hope to see Joe and Norma Bradley Arnold, who have a home in nearby Delray, while we are there. In the meantime my twins, Mary and Beth, are finishing up their college applications; my daughter Gwin and her two children live fairly close, so that we see them frequently (Gwin graduated from SBC in '72 and works in the Medical School at Emory U.); my son Hughes is in Israel where he is studying Arabic at the Hebrew U.; and Anne is working on her doctorate in Art History at UNC.

Please keep your notes, cards, and letters coming, so that we will have more news next time.

Meon Bower Harrison (Mrs. Archibald C., Jr.), Route 1, Box 55, Orange, VA 22960

Martha Mansfield Clement (Mrs. Martha M.), P.O. Box 6, Sweet Briar, VA 24595

This year seems to have brought weddings and grandchildren to many of us, husbands in retirement and wonderful trips, but also some sadness. Pottsie (Eleanor Potts) Snodgrass lost her 6-year-old grandson in November to leukemia, and Peggy Pierce McAvity lost her husband this year. Peggy wrote that her three children and seven grandchildren give her wonderful support. Pottsie also keeps busy with a lawyer son in New Orleans and another son in Virginia Beach and one daughter in law school and another working in Washington, DC. She added that she and her husband loved seeing Jane Miller Wright and Howard on their boat, Compadre.

Speaking of the Compadre, Jane Miller Wright and Howard sailed from California down the west coast of Mexico, through the Panama Canal, then north and up the east coast of Mexico all the way to Maine. They sailed back down to South Carolina and put the Compadre to a winter's rest. Along the way they saw Pottsie, Westray Boyce Nicholas and Roy and Meon Bower Harrison and Arch. In fact, Meon and Arch spent several days sailing with the Wrights and were on board when they joined Westray and Roy. What a wonderful blast — er, I mean, reunion! Westray writes that she is so happy with her new house on Seabrook Island and enjoys her view of a tidal creek and salt marsh. Skipper Mattison is another adventurer, but it's the mountains for her. She wrote she had finished climbing New Hampshire's 47 peaks that are over 4000 feet last summer. In between the climbs, she is the administrator of a rural health center.

More travelers include Betty Johnson Ragland. Since husband Bill sold his business to their son-in-law, they stay on the move. They spent six months in Florida plus took various side trips. Ruth Faulkner Howe spent a wonderful three weeks in Germany, Switzerland, and Austria with her daughter. Mary Jane Luke continues to enjoy "retirement and travel" — and travel she does. She spent the summer on Cape Cod with a visit from Betty Kernan Quigley. Then Jane took off for San Francisco, Alaska, and finally home to Virginia. Tommy Porter Mullen keeps busy with volunteer work and took a fabulous photo safari in Kenya last summer with her daughter. Martha Frye Nye is one of us with a recently retired husband. However, they stay on the go. They are still involved in overseeing the operations of four nursing homes, which means weekly and/or monthly visits. She and Bill took their children and spouses on a seven-day cruise this year. There were 12 of them, which must have been quite a party. Nancy Moses Eubanks and Bill had a wonderful two weeks in England this fall.

Martha Mansfield Clement is a proud grandmother for the third time as of last April. She also has a new lawyer in the family — her daughter Sarah. One of her sons is stationed at Quantico and there's a married daughter in Texas and another son taking a biology course at SBC. Martha was at Bess Pratt Wallace's daughter's coming out party in Huntsville, AL. She saw Twink Elliott Sockwell and Evie White Spearman '47 there. Martha was also at the wedding of Vi Whitehead Morse's daughter in October in the S. B. Chapel. Vi says Walter is on the Amherst School Board this year and he's stirring things up.

Twink Elliott Sockwell was the mother of a bride too. One of Twink's daughters married in September. She wrote that they had "the yard landscaped, fish pond built and a gazebo constructed." Whew — what we won't do for daughters! Another daughter, Helen Holmes '74 is with NASA in "creative design," is president of Women's Causus for Arts in Alabama, paints, and still has her horse. Son Steve and wife practice law in Arlington. Twink and Warren have also managed to hit the road — visiting children, Epcot, and Europe and taking a Caribbean cruise out of New Orleans. Closey Faulkner Dickey's son married in June in Richmond, VA. She wrote that Whit sold the National Bank of Lebanon and they are looking forward to a more relaxing life. Her achievement she says was losing "unmentionable number of pounds," and she now weighs 125. Sally Smith Williams serves as a part-time tour guide in Richmond, VA. She has two children who just graduated with master's degrees and one bride. Husband Tom had a total hip replacement in June but was fine by October when they took a trip to Greece.

Martha Davis Barnes is a new grandmother. She also continues to work in real estate, but took a break and went to Cape Cod last June on a naturalist's tour. Ann Orr Savage is also a grandmother this year and wife of a newly retired husband. She is still active on the Library Board and with the N.Y. Philharmonic Society. Ginny Wurzbach Vardy and Judy Perkins Llewellyn also have brand new grandsons. Judy wrote that she had a wonderful golfing trip to England last fall. Caroline Haskell Simpson has squeezed grandmothering, trips to Europe, and needlepoint into this year. Some combination. Ardis Fratus Porter spent two weeks on the West Coast visiting children and was awaiting two new grandchildren. She summed it all up beautifully when she wrote, "Just love grandmother business."

Ann Paxton Gail writes that she had a "fun get-together" with Nan Steptoe McKinley and a telephone reunion with Bea Backer Simpson. Her two children are in school. Bill is getting a doctorate and thinking of a summer at the South Pole, and her daughter is in law school. Patty Traugott Rouse stays busy working with Jim in the Enterprise Foundation, which is now in 15 cities. Vickie Brock Badrow's husband retired last March, but she is still teaching school. They have a daughter graduating from college this May and two sons, one of whom recently married.

Quizee Lloyd is "still busy running my little private school, Copeland Run Learning Center" in Downingtown, PA. She is also an avid gardener — at least where Sweet Briar bulbs are concerned. She's been planting them for five years, she writes, and loves the results. And speaking of S.B. bulbs, I had an amaryllis that was breathtaking. I highly recommend them. Blair Graves Smith is running a cottage industry doing spread sheets, mailings and term papers. Evvy Sharp Vidal is still using her French as assistant to the head of the headquarters of a French crystal and glass company, J. G. Durand. She also serves on the local Township Committee, which is an elective post. Evvy's daughter is an S. B. senior. Jane Shoesmith Newcomb continues as a reading specialist in the school district in Mirror Lake, NH. She coordinates the various programs for the elementary through high school levels — all of which sounds very important.

Marguerite Rucker Ellett and husband were off to Hawaii last November for the International Kiwanis convention. They returned in time for family visits at Thanksgiving and an invitation from Helen Pender Withers and Burks to visit their new home during Christmas. They share two grandchildren. Indie Bain Lindsay Bilisoly writes that she is, and I quote, "your average middle-aged (?) housewife" — but I doubt that. Her time is taken up with old people and children. Indie Bain's oldest child is a lawyer. She has two others in real estate in Norfolk, and her youngest is at Virginia Tech. Ann Rowland Tuck characterizes herself as "one of those alums who have lived in the same house in the same town since 1950, raising three children and working from time to time in interesting jobs in state government." Jim is retired now and they have traveling in mind, including three months at their home in Fort Myers Beach, FL.

Judy Blakey Butler writes that life is "bittersweet." Since losing her husband Bob, Judy divides her time between Oregon and the East Coast visiting her parents and her children. She did have some great visits to New York City and the Jersey and Maryland beaches. Oiane King Nelson had a visit with Felicia Jackson Burns in New Orleans during Mardi Gras. Diane has two children in college and a daughter who was teaching in Florence, Italy, until Christmas. Liz Graves Perkinson writes that she still has children in college. One has just graduated and the other is leaving for six months in France.

Peggy Sheffield Martin was looking forward to having her whole family for Christmas. It was an event, since one son was coming in from Hong Kong. Peggy has been back and forth to S. B. three times this year and urges all of us to help with recruiting new students for SBC. She and Vi Whitehead Morse both commented that the new visual arts center in the old Relectory is fabulous.

As for yours truly, John and I continue to enjoy our empty nest. We've done some traveling, married a daughter and, of course, grown a year older — if not willingly, may I say graciously. Well, OK, the word is inevitably. Out of all my trivial pursuits this year, I discovered that we were a class of 180. Eighteen are deceased, ten are lost, which leaves 152 of us present and accounted for. The bottom line of all this trivia is that only 36 of you wrote me. So c'mon girls, let's do better than that next year.

Secretary

Nancy Messick Ray (Mrs. Christopher Ray), 1570 Forest Villa Lane, McLean, VA 22101

Fund Agent

Peggy Moore Ripley (Mrs. Margaret M.), 18 Old Mendham Rd., Morristown, NJ 07960

Editor's Note: In listing the class officers for 1952, we were poignantly reminded of the sad fact that your Class President, Robbin McGarry Ramey, died in November 1983. Some members of the class may have overlooked her name in the list of Recent Deaths last year.

Marty Legg Katz reports a mini reunion with Betsy Wilder Cady, Pat Ruppert Flanders, and Joanne Holbrook Patton at the Boston SBC Club dinner in October. Marty lists her occupation as art student/sculptor. We will look for your work in the Boston museums, Marty. Meanwhile, those of us in the Washington area can see some of Jane Ramsay Olmstead's paintings on display in a restaurant near Du Pont Circle called Ristorante Galileo.

Jane and Mary John Ford Gilchrist and I had our own mini reunion and Mary John and I were surprised to discover that we had both started new careers in real estate. Jane Guthe Coffey writes that she is a real estate agent and active volunteer, currently being president of the San Francisco Auxiliary to Children's Hospital at Stanford. We should start our own Sweet Briar real estate referral network.

A number of our classmates seem to be forever traveling. Sallie Anderson Broyles and Norris traveled the coast of California last spring and went to Maine in the fall plus tennis camp in Vermont and then off to London. Leila Booth Morris and Jim have taken big trips to Ireland and Spain. Jim teaches flying part-time and Leila gives four clothes showings a year for Young Traditions. Barbara Baker Bird is very happy in her job as executive director of Welcome House, the U.S. and intercountry adoption agency started by Pearl Buck. She travels frequently to Asia.

As usual, our classmates are active in volunteer work. Carma Lindsay Burton is Chairman of the Board of the National Premenstrual Syndrome Society, a non-profit tax-exempt advocacy group for women suffering from that disorder. This nationwide organization was founded by Carma's daughter, Lindsay Leckie. Jean Caldwell Marchant is in her second term as President of the Hawaiian Humane Society. She is also doing some horse show judging and has an AHSA card in Dressage. Frances Street Smith was pictured in the Chattanooga News Free Press when named the second vice president of Hospice of Chattanooga.

Ginger Oreyfus Karren deserves the mother of the year award. She has been living in New York City for a year and a half with her younger daughter Lynn Elizabeth who is a student at Professional Children's School and the Joffrey Ballet School. Her husband holds down the fort in San Antonio, and they commute back and forth.

Nancy Laemmel Hartmann has a Master's in Christian Education from Scarritt College and is currently Director of Christian Education of a Disciples of Christ Church in Nashville. Katharine Shaw Minton and Ginge Sheaff Liddell each has a new grandchild, born a month apart.

When she wrote, Grace Jones Fishel was expecting her first grandchild, child of son Harry, III, a chemical engineer with W.R. Grace Co. Second son Frederick is finishing his Master's in Crop Science at N.C. State, Raleigh.

Mary Bailey Izard called to chastise me for being lost and to tell me that her son John is getting married in March. I am not really lost. We moved back to McLean last summer and I spent six months scraping wallpaper and replacing toilet seats, so naturally I didn't have time to keep in touch.

Speaking of keeping in touch, before I write our next class notes, I intend to send out double postcards. If anyone can offer some provocative questions, I am certainly open to suggestions.

Let me tell you something, you Loquacious Loties, you Il Erma Bombeck had to depend on the Class of '56 for her material, there would be one less syndicated column in the daily papers! At least if she makes up things, her family can only do so much or she can threaten to cut off the three squares a day. But I can't cook and I can't even hide from you all since I'm rather in the center of things. As it is, I spend the month of February hiding from Carolyn Bates, Class Notes Editor, because she wants my column and I don't have anything to put in it because the Sweet Briar Post Office has neglected to send the postcards requesting news that I periodically word in my head. The Postal Service certainly has gone to the dogs. Actually I spent weeks taking detours around the Alumnae House, staying in my office until after Carolyn had gone home, not attending alumnae functions, or anything that met in the Alumnae House, and then someone tells me that Carolyn is in EGYPT! I breathed a sigh of relief...for one day, because by the time I found she was gone, she had returned, and wanted my notes. She is so unreasonable. I was only 6 weeks past the deadline. In truth, Carolyn has got to have the nicest disposition of anyone I have ever met. I would have killed me long ago. I bet she takes early retirement just to avoid me and my problem with deadlines!

As usual, a few good people did write or come by or phone or have daughters in my classes, whose brains I could pick for news as well as knowledge. Louisa Hunt Coker notes that she is about 4 miles due north of those lovely plastic flowers I referred to in last year's column. I'm certainly relieved that they weren't hers. Now about the pink flamingoes... Son John graduated from VPI last spring and is now in the Building Products Division of Union something. I can't read her writing, but it isn't Carbide, although it begins with "C." Jolly Urner writes that she is "alive" (that's nice) and well and happy with Husky, "Pushkin," in yard and sailboat, Indulgena, at yacht club. I'm assuming I've transcribed that correctly. When I first read it I thought she had a "husky Pushkin" in her yard, and I was dying to know what a "pushkin" was. You know these Californians! I had all sorts of neat ideas. Anyway, Jolly is enjoying competitive sailing as a crew and daysailing as a skipper. I wonder if the Husky Pushkin goes with her?

Karen Steinhart Kirkbride is a senior management analyst. She writes that she and Dick have three sons: Steven, a freshman at U. of Richmond; Kevin, a junior at St. Stephen's School; and Trevor in Kindergarten at Fairfax-Brewster. Another '56er with three boys is Frances Gilbert Browne, who writes that son Howard will finish Wake Forest Law School in May and after a bit of traveling will join Smith, Anderson in Raleigh. Gilbert finished Chapel Hill last May and is working until this May at Snowmass, CO. Frances sounds dubious about the educational aspects of this work, but I bet he's learning a lot! Son Paul is a freshman at UNC and is very happy there. Herb's law firm has just restored a marvelous old building uptown in Charlotte, and Frances has been active as president of the women of First Presbyterian Church. Frances notes that she had a visit from Mimi Thornton Oppenheimer and daughter Jane last spring and was anticipating one from Helen Wolfe Evans and family this spring. Also from North Carolina, Gary Maxwell Rousseau wrote that son Jule is an attorney in Raleigh and will be married on June 29. I hope if I ever got in trouble, I'm in Raleigh. We certainly seem to be well represented by the younger generation. Eleanor Russell spent last summer recovering from back surgery but has apparently bounced back, as she writes that the PTA of an elementary school asked her to have a one-women show of her work in calligraphy. There were 42 pieces and she reports that they were starting to sell. She notes that most of the works are based on hymns. She has also been asked to give a workshop on cut calligraphy at the National Art Ed. Assoc. Convention in Dallas this spring. Eleanor has taught at a high school in San Antonio for over 13 years. Speaking of calligraphy, Jane Black Clark has got to practice writing larger if I'm going to put her news in the Class Notes. She not only looks younger than I know we all are, but she must have 25-year-old eyes. I can't even read her tiny printing with my glasses on, so if I say something scandalous (that isn't true), it's all Jane's fault. She notes that they are loving, busy grandparents (now that's scandalous), as Alden has a daughter, Jessica, who was a year old in January, and Janie '79 produced Louisa Ashby Morrison in April '84. Both women live in Arlington and all get to Norfolk often. The Clarks third daughter, Ashby, is at SBC, and although she is nearing graduation, Jane hopes to have the two granddaughters interested in the College soon!

Bunny Burwell Nesbit writes that she is currently living in Tustin, CA, and is working for Computer Sciences Corp. She is an advisory staff consultant and does a great deal of traveling, troubleshooting special projects. Although just reading that doesn't mean a whole lot, Ethel Ogden Burwell '58 says that Bunny has one fantastic job. Bunny's daughter Katherine '78 works for the same company. Bunny enjoys gardening, cooking and golfing, though like so many of us, has trouble finding the time to do them. I had Ethel's daughter Lisa Burwell '84 in classes for at least two years and never knew that she and Bunny were related. I certainly would have been squeezing news out of her if I had known! Ann Train Ross certainly must have one of the most interesting lives of '56ers, just by virtue of where she lives. At least it sounds interesting. The Rosses have been living in Muscat, Sultanate of Oman, in the Middle East since March 1984. The Guidelines for Class Secretaries doesn't seem to list any abbreviation for that spot. I wonder why. Carolyn must be slipping! John is working on the Sultan Oaboos U. and teaching hospital which has started from nothing in the desert. Ann helps John in his office and does volunteer work...in the desert? Son Richard graduated from Oxford and is working as a trainee computer programmer in London. Elder daughter Tish is a trainee management accountant and lives in the Rosses' house near London, and younger daughter Ali is in her last year at Durham studying zoology and psychology. The Rosses hope to return to Britain in June 1986.

I have been lucky enough to see or at least talk on the phone with, a number of '56ers. The only problem is that I get so excited with first hand communication that I forget to write anything down, i.e. I act like a "normal" person instead of a class secretary! It's only after I've hung up the phone or waved the last goodbye that I remember my mission in life. Unfortunately that's what happened one cold Sunday afternoon when I picked up the phone to hear Rose Montgomery Johnston's voice. She was on her way to UVa to visit one of her daughters and drove through SBC. I remember the weather that day. I remember what I was wearing. I remember how familiar her voice sounded after so many years. What I can't remember is what we talked about! I think she said that she had four daughters, one at Duke, one at UVa, and one who is going on the SBC Jr. Year Abroad program. However, the last two may be the same person. At any rate, it was neat to talk with her. Joan Broman Wright and Jim surprised me with a visit in the fall, and it was really grand to see them. I was so afraid that once daughter Elise '83 graduated, they wouldn't come this far north anymore. I'm sure they had a marvelous time at my house. Joan did all the cooking for the three of us, and Jim spent the day they were going to look at the fall foliage trying to construct a door for the basement that "Fletcher," my German Shepherd, couldn't eat through. While the Wrights were there he ate through two. Maybe I should stop the high protein dogfood. Son Jimmy is a star soccer player at Davidson and will graduate this spring. Elise worked for a while but is now taking courses...I think in interior design, but I may have made that up.

Jane Slack Sigloh whips through this area periodically because her mother is living at Westminster-Canterbury in Lynchburg, but we have never been able to make connections. However, I have her daughter Sally '86 in class and I make all sorts of threats if she doesn't give me news of her mother. Sally tells me that Jane is working towards her Master's of Divinity in Social Work at Yale Divinity School. Is this the Ass Jane (as in Ain'ts and) that we all know and love? Sally also told me that her brother Ethan was getting married in December. Whitney, my niece, and Sally have become good friends...in fact Whitney has willed her senior robe to Sally and messed up Sally's room during the Junior Banquet, in time honored tradition. Now that's friendship! It has been very special to know that they are carrying on the tradition of Jane's and my friendship at SBC. Two others from '56 whose daughters are friends are Ashby Clark, daughter of Jane Black Clark and Frances Clardy, daughter of Frances Shannonhouse Clardy. It was great to see them all at Parents' Day. I hadn't seen Frances in a long while and she looked terrific in a lovely pink sweater. One could hardly tell which was the daughter. Nancie Howe Entenmann was here in March for the Alumnae Board meeting. She came a day early so at last we were able to find the time to get together to chat. She came to my house for dinner (BLT's!) and we had a fine time. I know all of you are dying to come visit me as I note how I entertain so lavishly. Nancie's daughter and husband are living in Portsmouth, VA, and her son lives...somewhere. I forgot to write it down. Nancie and Dick were going to meet in Florida for a much earned vacation after the meetings.

One letter I forgot until now was a long one from Nancy Eltinger Minor. She wrote in July right after the last news of our class came out, and although I have clutched it to my meager bosom lo these many months, when the time came, I forgot it. Nancy notes that she just knows that being 50 is going to be at least as easy as being 49, and that was no fun. So what else is new! She has two children whom Nancy describes as "not super achievers." She started a gourmet cooking school, gave it up, is working on a cookbook, plays golf, and serves on a United Fund board. Nancy wrote that she "couldn't find a stud she liked in New England," at which point I fell off my chair. I was going to tell her that's why I came to Virginia, but reading on discovered that she raises miniature Dachshunds. Actually that should be past tense since she couldn't find...! My life continues to be full...full of work, full of missed deadlines, but also full of many good things. I have been secretary of the Instruction Committee this year (that's not one of the good things), clerk of the Vestry of Ascension Episcopal (that is), and secretary of the class of 1956 (that won't be if you all don't write!). I can not believe that Whitney is going to graduate from SBC in May. She has really enjoyed her four years here and has been most active in so many things. This spring she was named to Who's Who and naturally I was very proud. She has no idea what she is going to do with her life, but neither did a lot of us as I remember. Please do write. If you don't, I'll nominate you for class secretary at our reunion NEXT year!

Fund Agent

Nina Wilkerson Bugg (Mrs. William A., Jr.), 471 West Wesley Rd., N.W., Atlanta, GA 30305

It's been a delight to hear from so many of you who shared those care-free salad days not too long ago. Thanks for all your notes and news and, again, my apologies for not being able to include all you wrote because of our obvious space limitations. You have been great correspondents, and it has made the job of secretary an easy one. Thank you!

Mary Laird Silvia's letter to the class is postmarked "Bath, England." Her husband is now a participant in a Navy exchange program with the British Ministry of Defense. They are living in Combe Down, a small village just outside of Bath, and Mary is working on the final segment of her doctorate.

From Toronto, Canada, Pat Russell Binnie sent word that she was especially looking forward to Reunion after a year filled with family illness and the death of her father-in-law.

Katie Mendelson McDonald announces that after 16 years Hong Kong has truly become home. Distance will prohibit Katie from being in Virginia in May, but she invites us to call if we do get to Hong Kong. Jack and Katie's children are at school in Europe, and the family gathered in Madrid for the Christmas holidays.

Mary-Jane Hilton Field will also be prevented by distance from attending Reunion. She is staying on in Australia with her three children even though her reason for going there (second marriage) didn't work out. Mary-Jane is deeply involved in music, especially folk and soft rock, and will be represented at Reunion by a tape of songs she wrote and sings.

Sue Speed Ford Hall is teaching school in Honolulu and writes glowingly of four-year-old Sabrina's worldliness. Husband Jim works in the Honolulu Managing Director's office.

Dinny Muldaur Dozier was a most impressive speaker at SBC's 1984 graduation. Dinny lives in Pacific Palisades, CA, and is president of the Academy of Television Arts and Sciences, an organization best known for sponsoring the Emmy Awards.

Starr Bullis Phillips spent Christmas with the Bullis family in the Washington, DC, suburbs. Starr is about to publish the 4th edition of her popular book, I Never Pay Retail. Starr has two children in college and a daughter in high school at home in Newport Beach, CA. Starr voices my sentiments exactly when she writes, "How can they be so old? They must belong to someone else!"

Shirley Hayman Sudduth and John live in Madera, CA, where Shirley recently resigned as director of Madera County Cancer Society. Her older children are married and son Peter is a college senior.

Mary Anne Claiborne Johnston completed her Ph.D. at U. of Colorado and is teaching in Denver where husband Dick is chief of pediatrics at the National Jewish Hospital. Son Richard is a sophomore at Amherst. Claiborne's daughter is in high school.

Winkie Wimbish Chalfant and Ed have moved to Cape Elizabeth, ME, where they have spent many summers in the past. Their son is a freshman at Wittenburg College, and daughter Meg is a senior at Cape Elizabeth H.S.

Betsy Buechner Morris received her M.B.A. in 1982 and is in the corporate marketing department of a Boston Bank. Betsy writes that her family enjoys skiing and sailing and that life changes little except for the addition of bifocals. Brave are those who admit it, especially away from the telephone book!

Gwen Speel Kaplan is with Survey Sampling, a Westport, CT, math computer base business.

Anne Rienecke Clarke commutes everyday from Wilton, CT, to White Plains, NY, where she is in the General Foods Market Research Dept. Anne's daughter is a junior at the Master's School.

Adrienne Massie Hill is a trust officer at the Bank of New York and is also President of the Ethel Walker Alumnae Association. A's two sons are at Vanderbilt.

Debbie Lane Lyon commutes from Montrose, NY, to NYC where she is employed by an executive search firm. Husband Bill is with Associated Press and Debbie reports that her son David is an ardent football, soccer and basketball player.

Isabel Ware Burch will be a "mother of the bride." Margaret, a senior at the U. of Vt., is planning a June wedding. Isabel's son Allen is a freshman at William and Mary, and young Charlie is a budding and noisy drummer. Isabel and Bob had a fascinating trip to the Far East last summer. They visited with Kalie Mendelson McDonald in Hong Kong, and then went on to the Philippines, Taiwan, and Korea. Isabel works as the director of finance at the Westport, CT, Nature Center.

Lucy Martin Gianino has been on the other side of the lights this year.

She directed Children of a Lesser God in Florida. Her film New Kids was to be released in January '85. Jack Gianino is stage manager for the Broadway show Tap Dance Kid.

Charity Paul is to receive her Master's of Social Work in June. This year Charity has been working at the Bronx Psychiatric Center.

Janet Holmes Rothard is a mother of the groom as her older son Tom was married in November. Congratulations to Janet on making the N.J. State Million Dollar Club for real estate sales. Janet still finds showing and breeding dogs an interesting and challenging hobby.

Ginger Newman Blanchard has done an outstanding job as Reunion Gifts Chairman. Ginger's three children are all in college now which gives her more time for her work as a Doncaster representative. She continues to travel with Bob as often as possible. The Blanchards live in Madison, NJ.

Margie McGraw McDonald is on the faculty of Friends School just outside of Baltimore. She is busy as area Bulb Chairman and hopes that daughter Melissa, an eleventh grader, will be applying to SBC.

Barbara Murphy Hale's daughter Lenetta Archard graduated with the SBC class of 1985. Barbara and Phil visited Lenetta during her junior year at St. Andrews. Two of Barbara's sons are in college and a third son is traveling through Mexico and Central America.

Also in Annapolis is Joyce Cooper Toomey whose daughter Cathy '84 was married in July. My daughter, Chris was a bridesmaid and the bride and groom departed by boat — only in Annapolis!

Barbara Beam Denison and her family are still in Bethesda, MD. Beam's daughter Tracy graduated from the U. of Delaware and Heather is a sophomore at Denison. Her youngest daughter is a high school senior. Beam's framing business has grown tremendously since she began it a few years ago.

Elizabeth Meade Howard continues to teach journalism at UVA. Last summer she was at Ms. Magazine in NYC. Elizabeth says that she has spent much of this year "agonizing" with 18-year-old Jamie over college catalogs. I read this note with great empathy!

Judy Cowen Jones, Waynesboro, VA, has planned a trip to Spain to visit her daughter who was spending her junior year in Madrid. After Spain, Judy and Mac were to go on to France for the French Open Tennis Championships.

Patti Powell Pusey says that one of the best parts of being on the Reunion Committee is catching up on everyone's activities. Patti reports that Carter Nichols March was to be married in December to Harold Jump and that Heidi Wood Huddleston's daughter will graduate from Vanderbilt during Reunion Weekend. The Pusey countdown finds Brent a senior at Montana State, Biff at Duke, and daughter Glen cheerleading at the Collegiate School. Patti is the manager of the Disability and Life Department for King Insurance in Richmond, VA.

Judy Barnes Agnew teaches high school in Durham, NC. Judy wrote that her family had a great trip to Italy last summer with AIFS. Judy recommends it as a terrific and inexpensive way to get to Europe. When Judy wrote she was looking forward to visits from Lura Coleman Wampler and Ann Crowell Lemmon.

Becky Towill McNair was on campus last May for commencement. Daughter Harriet is an SBC junior who has spent a semester in France rooming with Tabb Thornton Farinhardt's ('59) daughter. Becky's son Willis is a freshman at W&L. For those of you who have been unable to keep up on Virginia news, W&L will welcome its first coed class in September 1985.

Ann Smith Brelscher hoped to have received her Ph.D. by Reunion time. Ann wrote in November and was just finishing up all the loose ends for her doctorate. Ann and Bob's oldest daughter has a Lloyd's of London internship, their younger daughter is at Davidson, and Prentiss is in high school at home in Athens, GA.

Barbara Bowen Moore writes from Atlanta that she is continuing her "professional student" existence and both she and husband Clay, who recently received his M.B.A., are trying to decide what to do when they grow up! Last Christmas the Moores visited Egypt where Barbara had taught following her SBC graduation.

"Wild, but fun" is how Ellen Pringle Read describes running the travel agency which she and her husband bought last year in Charleston, SC.

Dotty Westby is a corporate pilot flying out of Fort Lauderdale. While Richmond shivered Dotty described Dec. 22nd in Florida as a sparkling and sunny day with the children sunning on the beach. Kristen was home from the U. of Colorado and Rob from Vermont Academy.

Annie Laurie Martin Carlton is a French and Latin teacher in Chesterfield, MO. Her daughter Alice is a high school junior and Jennifer is an eighth-grader.

B. Schwab Stephen was sorry she couldn't join us for the 25th. Her summer months will be spent between Montreal, Quebec, and their cottage in Charlevoix, MN. Beth Stephen is a Vanderbilt freshman and her two younger sisters are high school students at home in St. Louis. Platt-form tennis continues as B's favorite love and activity.

Jane Talman Wallace is a grandmother via her step-daughter. Jane is a docent at the Indianapolis Children's Museum and is also helping to research and develop school tours. Her two children attend Indiana U. Jane enjoyed seeing Winnie Ward Henchey in New York and running into Anne Rienecke Clarke at a Marketing Research Association Exhibit.

I was so glad to hear from Lydia Montgomery Bond after many years. Lydia and Bill live in Prospect, KY. They have two daughters who attend Kentucky Country Day. Melissa was accepted into the Freshman Honors Program at Indiana U. and Molly is a successful horsewoman.

"A hillside farm in Estill County, KY, is an unlikely spot for a Long Island born New Yorker who holds a degree in Philosophy from Virginia's Sweet Briar College." This is the lead of a delightful newspaper article on Cookie Canaday White. After her divorce Cookie and three children moved from Lexington to a farm, where they are raising cattle and learning to be entirely self-sufficient. The children are now in college and Cookie has enrolled in the U. of KY to study — of course, agriculture.

Liz Few Penfield visited with our M.D., Grace Suffle, in Colorado last summer. They had a fine time "touring around, skirting mud slides and avalanches." Liz saw Betty Forsyth Harris's daughter who is considering graduate school in New Orleans, where Liz lives and teaches. Liz pondered the passage of time by surmising that its passing will become real when Reunion strikes and we find those middle aged women are, indeed, the class of 1960. Come on, Liz, we're not getting older, only better!

Lee Cullum's card brought such sunshine to my January typing days. She wrote that it had really been a memorable year because last February she had gone out to dinner with an old high school friend; they were engaged in April and married at her home on June 2nd. They honeymooned in the South of France with stops in London and Paris. Lee is continuing as editor of D Magazine. Lee said that she is not changing her name this time because, "I've already changed it enough."

Maline Gilbert McCalla is an art gallery owner and is dancing with the Austin Ballet Theatre. She is on the Board of Directors of the National Wildflower Research Center. Maline has two college sons, one attending Tulane and the other attending Hamilton. Her youngest is in Connecticut at Avon Old Farms.

Maydelle Foster Fason's card was cheery and I could almost hear that wonderful Texas voice. Unfortunately Maydelle could not make Reunion as she was leading a theatre tour to NYC at the same time. Maydelle was at SBC last fall when she and her husband had "come East" for Parents Day at W&L where son Drake is a freshman. Maydelle continues to work as the Women's Employment Advocate at the Austin Women's Center; this program was started by Maydelle as a Jr. League Volunteer in 1977.

This is my last column, and I want you to know that I've enjoyed visiting with you all and have loved getting to know each and almost everyone of you again. My days are filled with a little skiing, a little tennis, volunteer work with the Historic Richmond Foundation and the Richmond Ballet, and classes at the Virginia Museum. Chris graduated from SBC in '84. Kerry attends Mary Baldwin, and Robbie is a rising "first grader" at St. Christopher's.

To the 30 of you who journeyed to our 20th Reunion last May — it was terrific seeing you! It's nice to know that we are as crazy and rebellious as we were back in the 60's, a fact to which many of my snapshots will attest, and, as more than one of you commented, we didn't look half bad!

To you who were not in attendance — you missed a rousing political discussion in which many of us said we would vote for the Democrat if he picked a female running mate. (I wonder if we did.) You also missed eating and drinking wine on the grass outside Meta Glass, and getting caught in a thunderstorm, while everyone else was inside enjoying the "barbaric" (to use Josephine England Redd's expression) atmosphere of that dining hall.

To Grace Mary Garry Dates — your class notes of the past five years have been so witty and so well written. Hats off to you for a job well done! I don't know how a physics person can begin to match an English person, so I'll just let the words and phrases roll and have some fun.

I begin with some news from some of those who were at the reunion.

Grace Mary Garry Dates sent me a page-and-a-half typewritten letter to test my editing abilities. She and husband Wally thoroughly enjoyed being at SBC. Wally intends to come again, and we hope he does! An economics conference in Paris provided Grace Mary and Wally with a fine excuse to return to Scotland to reminisce at St. Andrews. While in Paris, Grace Mary spent a nostalgic afternoon with Vera LeCraw Carvaillo. Son Chris graduated from Stanford and is teaching in the Peace Corps. Daughter Mora is also at Stanford and is participating in SBC's Junior Year in France program.

Linda Lee McAndrew provided us with another enthusiastic husband, Robert, at the reunion. He is an actor, and she continues her choreography-dance career in New York. Linda highlighted a program entitled Art in Motion, presented by the Dance Theatre of Central Virginia at RMWC last June. Ginny deBuys owns and operates her own computer software and systems installation company in Princeton, NJ. She has a long-term contract with IBM and therefore is anticipating a year of relative relaxation.

Laurie deBuys Pannell (continuously sporting a smashing, sophisticated hat) brought us a third husband (her first!), Cliff. Many of us attended the very moving and spirited memorial service for his mother, our President Pannell. Cliff and Laurie have returned to Athens, GA, after spending the fall semester at West Point, where he was teaching and where Laurie had an exhibit of her prints and paintings in December. She was also to have one at the U. of Ga. Botanical Gardens in April.

Jean Walker Campbell was selected by a jury panel to participate in an Art Goes Public program in which artists, working in several media, demonstrate and explain their art at libraries in the South Amboy, NJ, area. Jean, who did oil paintings on four dates in April and May, obtained art training at the Art Student's League in NYC.

Josephine England Redd, Umland, and sons Edward, 17, Mitchell, 16, and Umland, IV, remain in Florence, AL, where Josephine is active in church and school board activities. She also is a part-time flower arranger and interior decorator. The insurance business keeps Lynne Smith Crow busy in Short Hills, NJ, and so do children David, 14, Sandy, 13, and Margaret, 10½. Sandy came to the reunion with mother — checking out SBC already. She had a companion, Nancy Arni Briggs' daughter Elizabeth, 14, with whom to escape our carrying on. Nancy has spent the year working two (!) hospital emergency departments and working toward an M.S. in Emergency Health Services. It sounds as if a trip to Greece over the holidays was well deserved.

Two of my ex-roommates were at SBC in May. Mary Green Borg didn't send my card back, but I have been in touch with her. I have to say that I am so glad she left her five (!) boys and husband Andy back in Colorado to come to see us. As for V.M. Del Greco Galgano, the two of us went to her sister's home in Charlottesville after the reunion — and lost some more sleep. V.M. and Michael have returned to her beloved Virginia after many years in Huntington, WV. Michael has assumed new responsibilities as chairman of the History Dept. at James Madison U. in Harrisonburg, and V.M. is teaching in the Math Dept. Children Robert, 14, David, 11, and Laura, 9, are adjusting to new friends and more hours of homework.

Finally to Penny Writer Theis, who organized this memorable 20th and who remembered almost all the words to our class song, "First Bumper Crop of the War," a big thank you! Once again I had to endure looking at that awful picture of the two of us in miniskirts taken 10 years ago in Cleveland. As for myself, I have recently dispensed with husband number two. (Some of us will never settle down!) After several enjoyable years teaching college math and computers, I have gotten back into the aerospace field, having accepted a position with Martin Marietta Corp. in Orlando, FL. I'm sitting here in the Florida sunshine while sons William, 16, and Guy, 13, finish the school year in Tennessee — and I've had little trouble putting shoes back on after living in that state for eight years!

News from other classmates includes the fact that Marilyn Dunlap Laird is enjoying single parent life too. She and children recently moved to Simsbury, CT. Elisabeth Scott Porter writes from Washington, DC, that after many years of being independent, she is engaged to marry a very special Englishman this year. Her furniture leasing company, now ten years old, remains successful, and she has been named to Who's Who in America and Who's Who in American Women! Daughter Erin is 16 and president of her class. Up in Boston, Leasia's old roommate Alice Fales Stewart is devoting time not consumed by family and teaching to playing the violin, which she says she does very badly, having no talent to begin with and starting at age 35. (I doubt the truth of that!) Hedi Haug White writes that 1984 was filled with good health, prosperity, and growing up — for all generations in the house in New York. M.C. Elmore Harrell and Martin have moved to a three-acre "farmette" in Severna Park, MD. She is a C.P.A. and serves as an area council member for the Junior League. Son David, 14, and daughter Susan, 12, have filled the house with several dogs, cats, rabbits and goldfish. In Greenwich, CT, Christie Calder Salomon and Betsy Pidgeon Parkinson serve on the same school board. Christie's two older children, David, 17, and Tina, 15, are away at boarding school, leaving only Evanne, 12, and Jenny, 8, to keep things active at home. Graphic design courses and some free-lance projects occupy extra minutes. Betsy's oldest, Heather, visited SBC, but decided on UVA. Son Geolf is a high school sophomore, and daughter Debbie is in 5th grade. Betsy is considering retiring from full-time volunteer work to go back to school.

Ann (Nan) Brook Williams, who is director of music at the Church of the Good Shepherd Presbyterian in Golden Springs, AL, and the assistant director gave an organ concert on April 7 celebrating Easter and commemorating Bach and Handel on the 300th anniversary of their births.

Kathleen Stevenson Turner of Charleston, SC, stopped to visit SBC en route to the Homestead. Yet another single working parent, Lee Huston Powell, contemplates computer software by day and cooks, drives, and helps with homework by evening. Son Huston, 16, is at Woodberry Forest. Griggs is in 7th grade, and Caroline in 5th grade. In Little Rock, AR, Genie Johnson Sigler is teaching high school math and computer programming. Daughter Beth attends the same school. Nancy Banfield McIlhenny writes that she has moved into a new home in Spring, TX. The year 1984 found Pemie Mercur Cleveland, John, and children Carrie, 4, and Kaycee, 7, traveling to California, Italy, Antigua, and Vermont. Pemie is a board member of Historic Bethlehem, PA, and John operates a travel agency. Frances Mallory Meyers' oldest son has started driving up in snowy Cleveland, OH; Fran has mixed feelings, as do many of us! Tennis, volunteer work, and a buying trip to New York for the shop where she works have kept her busy. From St. Louis, MO, Sheila Carroll Cooprider reports that husband Chuck is retiring (!) from the USAF (we are getting old, aren't we!). He will be taking a position with a company in the area, which pleases the family. Sheila makes two trips to SBC each year for Executive Board meetings. Peggy Aurand Young is teaching high school Spanish in Peoria, IL. Horse-woman Peggy is also trying to turn her hunter into a polo pony for son Dennis, a sophomore in the Black Horse Troop at Culver Military Academy. Last summer she took son Peter, 14, and a dozen of her students to Spain, France, and England.

Out in Phoenix, AZ, Rosamond Sample Brown graduated from the American Graduate School of International Management with an M.I.M. degree and celebrated by driving her children to Mazatlan, Mexico, for the Christmas holidays. Additionally, she studied last summer in Germany, France, and Belgium. While in Paris, she found and had a sentimental reunion with the lady she lived with during her Junior Year in France. Now she is doing international bank marketing with Worthen Bank in Little Rock, AR. After 12 years at Stanford, Carrie Peyton Walker has taken a position at San Jose State as associate professor of English. She also finds time to run her own consulting firm, Waverly Associates, which seeks out teachers to instruct Stanford U. and Silicon Valley employees. As an ex-teacher, I'm impressed.

From California, I jump out of the country to Ontario, Canada, where Mary McGraw Clarke has been for four years and is teaching at a community college. Daughter Jennifer, 19, is at Wellesley, and son Charlie, 16, is a free spirit, mostly interested in sailing and skiing. Finally, Marsh Metcalf Seymour has been enjoying the rain in Belgium (where husband Jack has been stationed most recently in the Foreign Service) for the past five years. Marsh is teaching art and bringing back fond memories (fond to some of you!) of SBC's "C.C." by reading Homer, Sophocles, and... Son Peter is a senior at Kent, while Randle, the clown and musician, is juggling three foreign languages at the E.C. School in Brussels. Randle sounds like a "dead ringer" for my 13-year-old Guy.

This has been fun. English majors, leave me alone — I talk in phrases. Peace and contentment to all of you in 1985. Start making arrangements, financially speaking, for a substantial Alumnae Fund gift in 1989 — our 25th! You're welcome. V.M.

Emmy Savage Borthwick (Mrs. E. Mark), 3322 Hemlock Dr., Falls Church, VA 22042

Annual greetings to our far-flung class! Thanks to all of you who sent news to your beleaguered class secretary.

Generally speaking, we are all busy with careers, families, and volunteer work. Many of us have moved, demonstrating the need for a current alumnae directory. Most have moved locally, but some have skipped town altogether. Among the latter: Ann Biggs Lewis from Palm Beach, to Washington, DC; Susan Brush Croft from Roanoke to Richmond, VA; Connie Hunt Jones from Dallas to Hampton, VA; and Trina Jensen Betzold from Pittsburgh to Seattle.

Lesley Bissell Hoopes reports that her husband Toby is often found using his newly acquired home computer when not at The Bank of New York. She isn't "too thrilled with this fifth member of the family." She continues to volunteer at the Metropolitan Museum of Art, giving tours in the American and Egyptian areas.

Sandy Blynn Staniar says her daughter, Lauren (now 16), is "way ahead" of her at all times. Sandy is in her tenth year at Chesebrough-Pond's as a recruiter, and still loves it. She finds time to play softball and paddle tennis on the side.

Melinda Brown Everett writes that she is a medical/public relations writer for Pacemaker, "an award-winning publication" of Worcester Memorial Hospital in Worcester, MA. She also makes frequent contributions to New England Living magazine. Phoebe Brunner Peacock is enjoying reunions with classmates while serving as recording secretary of the SBC Club in Washington, D.C. She reports a great visit with Carol Vontz Miller and family in July. She says, "I am actually back 'in the ribbons' with my TB mare — including one on Mother's Day in an equitation over fences (!) class." Phoebe has twin daughters born Oct. 15, 1980, who could be part of the Class of 2002. They are identical and, from their pictures, adorable!

Elizabeth Cadwalader caught us up with her life since leaving SBC. After graduating from the U. of Mich., she worked in Boston for a while, then lived and studied in Mexico for three years. She was a Vista Volunteer for a year, and then went on to acquire an M.A. from Fairleigh-Dickinson in English as a Second Language. She taught this in New Jersey and traveled extensively. She married Gene Baron in June, 1981. They are now "settled" in Baltimore, where she has worked as a foreign student advisor and has earned another M.A., this time in Special Education-Learning Disabilities from Johns Hopkins. She now teaches sixth grade learning-disabled students.

Frances deSaussure Meade reports that the Army moves them around a lot. They took a wonderful trip this summer cross-country from Fort Monroe, VA, to Fort Ord, CA. She says, "We love it here except for being so far away from our East Coast roots and families and friends." Jan Haagenen's poetry was published in William Smart's anthology of "new writing." From Mt. San Angelo: Stories, Poems and Essays.

Carter Hunter Hopkins and Edward had a daughter in February, 1984. "practically on campus." As you all know, she is one of the mainstays at Sweet Briar as director of Career Planning. Anne Kinsey Dinan reports that Terry is running The Jockey Club in the New York Ritz. She sounds cheerful and busy with her children and life.

Frances Kirvan Morse is finding her second year of teaching computer science to 7th and 8th graders in Brookline, MA, easier than the first. Her husband John, a group manager at Digital Equipment, is in the process of finishing his doctoral dissertation. Her daughter Sarah (12) is three inches taller than she!

Celia Newberg Steingold has relocated to Washington, DC, and is enjoying urban life benefits. She saw Jennie Lyons Fogarty at a PTA meeting. She says she finds full-time volunteerism rewarding. Ann Peterson Griffin also saw Jennie in October, 1984, on a visit to Washington. Ann was looking forward to a repeat tour of the city similar to the one Jennie gave her twenty years ago!

Catherine Porter is "still working as a tax legislative aide to Senator John H. Chafee" and anticipates being exceptionally busy this year with "all this talk of tax reform."

Patricia Skarda ("I haven't been Patty since graduate school days") was granted tenure at Smith College in '84. She is finishing some work on Mary Shelley and Southern writers of the Gothic mode — Welty, O'Connor, and Faulkner — before returning to work on Gerard Manley Hopkins. She feels she can now "relax a bit" and re-establish contact with undergraduate friends.

Suzanne Torgan Weston worked as a consultant on a project on the North Slope during the year. She says it was "a fascinating job and a fantastic experience." Her husband Steve prefers his in-town job with ARCO Alaska, spending his evenings on various woodworking projects.

Barrie Trimmingham Van Dyck sounds very busy with small children and volunteer work. She also sounds as happy as ever.

Joanne Tumolo Bario enclosed a jacket from her book published Feb. '85, entitled Fatal Dreams. The book courageously reveals her life with her late husband, Sante (Sandy), an undercover IRS investigator and later an agent with DEA. We all wish her and her son the best of luck. She is currently working on a novel.

Sandy Waters has a new job as legal counsel to Denver's Regional Transportation District. Between jobs she spent three months traveling "all through Africa." She loved seeing those who made it to our 15th reunion.

Cheers to you all! I continue in my mental muscle exercises in the master's program at Manhattanville. I love it! Like so many of you, I have difficulty believing I have a daughter in high school, who is tall, straight, and gorgeous...and looks better in my clothes than I ever could. I hope that life is as exciting for you as it is for us!

Carler Frackelton, 1606 Littlepage St., Fredericksburg, VA 22401

So many of you wrote such touching notes that I feel I have a mandate from the class to express our deepest sympathy to Susan Snodgrass Wynne, who lost her six-year-old son, Lee, on Nov. 20, 1984, to leukemia. Lee had battled with his illness for nearly five years, and during that time Susan founded the support group, Our Children's Hope, for families with critically ill children.

It is a cold and dreary day in January. I feel as if I am back at SBC with a term paper due tomorrow, except that your notes are always so warm and interesting to read, it does make the job easier! From the North, in NYC, Georgie Vairo writes that she remains at Fordham Law School as a professor and, on the side, a consultant on antitrust cases. She enjoys lecturing around the country on various legal issues and, after a bout with bad knees, playing basketball and jogging to relax. B.J. Martin is also in NYC and has recently changed jobs. She is now at Warnaco, a large men's and women's apparel manufacturer, as director of their division, "Rosanna."

Still living in Boston, Dale Shelly writes that husband James Graham's computer software company opened an office in Tokyo last summer, and he's been doing some globetrotting to get things underway over there. Dale is hoping to go to Japan, Hong Kong, and Hawaii with him in the spring. Meanwhile, she works in his Boston office, and writes a monthly column for a computer magazine. In her spare time she chairs a committee and sits on the board of the Boston Jr. League. Dale reports that Penny Walsh is still working for Bay Banks and is planning on doing some amateur competitive ski racing this winter.

Mercedes Gravatt Grandin is involved with the League of Women Voters in Dover, MA, and has been working a lot on toxic waste issues. Kathy Upchurch Takvorian, also in the Boston area, says that she and her husband, Tak, have had a busy year keeping up with Sam, born in February 1984, and their medical practices. They managed to sneak away with Ginger Upchurch Collier, her husband Tom, and their mother for a great ten-day trip to Hong Kong and China. Kathy also writes that Sam will have a sibling in late June!

Eileen Gebrian Barberich and husband Tim have moved to Princeton, NJ, where Tim had an opportunity to start his own business. Eileen had a baby girl, Sophia Elizabeth, on July 26, 1984. She is enjoying being a housewife and mother for the first time in her life and living in her native state of New Jersey. Not far away in Montclair, NJ, Cynthia Heye Hopkins is still with the orthopedics division of Pfizer. She writes that she and husband Steve went white-water rafting last summer for eight days down the Colorado River through the grand Canyon, a spectacular trip! Tobey Gilmore Shaw moved to Greenwich, CT, last year and stays busy raising her 19-month-old twin daughters Carroll and Katie. She keeps in touch with Sue Norton Allen, Marilyn Prichard, and Cissy Gott. Susan Norton Allen wrote that she has temporarily retired from painting restoration and appraisal work in New York to await the birth of her second baby, due in April. She stays occupied taking care of her 22-month-old son, who is crazy about airplanes after trips to California, the Caribbean, and Italy! Susan says Cissel Gott now has her own business in D.C. and that Marilyn Prichard Harvie now lives in England and had her first child, a daughter, in Dec. 1984.

From Maine, Kathy Walsh Drake and David relate the birth of their third daughter, Courtney, born September 5, 1984. Kathy says it sure is fun having three of a kind, but David is a bit overwhelmed at times. She finds time for a little volunteer work to keep her in touch with people other than preschoolers!

Sharron Uhler has changed jobs and is now curator of the historical collection for Hallmark Cards whose headquarters are in Kansas City, MO. This is a newly created position, and Sharron is in charge of over 40,000 antique greeting cards, post cards, toys, and Christmas ornaments. She loves the job and also lectures on the history of traditions at holiday times throughout the year. Gail Garner Resch, also in the Midwest, from Cleveland, OH, sends news that she and Michael took a fabulous trip to Spain in October. Gail saw Marcia Wittenbrook over Christmas. Marcia has bought a new condominium and has a new job in D.C. Gail keeps her hours full with a part-time job, tennis, and volunteer work for her high school and the Jr. League. Martha Holland dropped a note from Detroit, MI, saying Elizabeth Holland Iribe arrived on October 8, 1984. She is a redhead and joins her big sister Katherine (3). Emily McNally Brown, also in Michigan, has had better years. She had a kitchen fire that resulted in several thousands of dollars damage, and her oldest son (10) injured his neck break dancing. Her four-year-old son is fine and all boy. Her husband Jim is now with Ford Motor Co. in Dearborn. Emily works full time in adult education and on her second master's degree.

In Philadelphia, PA, Ann Barton Brown was named associate director of museum and collections for the Chester County Historical Society in December, 1984. She will inventory and research the museum's excellent collection of furniture, dresses, dolls, paintings, and antiques, as well as create new exhibits. Ann had been curator of collections at the Brandywine River Museum since 1977. Before that, she worked at the Rockefeller Folk Art Center in Williamsburg, VA, and has her master's degree in American History and Museum Studies from the U. of Del.

Internationally, Stephanie Harmon Simonard writes from France that Sophie (9) and Vanessa (7) are thoroughly enjoying their Franco-American childhood and even celebrated Halloween in their French neighborhood last fall. Stephanie and Baudoin have bought a lot and are building a home, while he also works at getting a factory started, and she continues as an international tax consultant.

Down South, there is lots of news from Texas. Rhonda Griffith Durham writes that she and Lynn and their three children, Trevor (11), Caitlin (6), and Jonathan (2), are healthy and happy. Rhonda serves as trustee for a private school in Midland, and this past year was able to promote and help an SBC graduate, Margaret Lawrence Bowers '49 from Ohio, receive the position of new Head of School. Rhonda states Mrs. Bowers was the best candidate in a very qualified field. She and Lynn visited SBC when he interviewed law students from W&L and UVa. She relates there are more places for students to go in Amherst, but the pit hasn't changed one bit! Vicki Michaelis Bartholow and her husband Peter live in Dallas. He is chief financial officer of Merchantile Southwest Corp. They have three children, Peter (7), David (5), and Sarah (3), who keep her extremely busy with their various activities. Vicki also finds time to work for the Hockaday Alumnae Board and the Jr. League. Margaret Lyle Jones writes that her family loves Houston, and she and her husband are busy remodeling their 50-year-old home while keeping the three boys out of the construction! Bobo Ryan Hoyt says it's been a great year for Mont as chairman of the international section of the American Bar Assoc. Little Mont is 8½ and into spike haircuts. Kathleen (6) has her own ideas about what she will and will not wear, which excludes saddle shoes and includes rainbow tennis shoes. Michael (3) and Caroline (1½) are, quote, "monsters," unquote. Cutler Bellows Crockard, also in Houston, relates that Bradford (7) and Callie (5) keep her on her toes cheer leading at T-Ball games, swim meets, soccer games, and ballet recitals and listening to choir practices! She and Doug are redecorating their home and spent two weeks in Maine last summer.

In Shreveport, LA, Margaret Butler Williams is writing her Ph.D. dissertation on archetypal symbols in dreams and complexes in women with infertility. Bitsy also is working on becoming a registered Dance/Movement therapist and should graduate from the Fielding Institute this summer.

Here in Alabama, Elise Webb Neeland and David are enjoying Montgomery and being near family again. Her girls are ages 5 and 4 and are busy with school, ballet, and gymnastics. Up in Birmingham, Marion Walker continues to practice law and, last time I heard, was into buying race horses and had bought into a travel agency. Susan Waller Nading and I had a wonderful visit not long ago, looking through her Christmas cards for news from classmates in a puddle of hot chocolate spilled by her youngest son Will (2½). Susan looks wonderful, and to keep in shape she jogs, does Nautlius, and plays tennis, in between carpooling Murray (8), and Alex (6). Dr. Nading is of course still enjoying his urology practice and his golf! As for me, my husband Bill was transferred to Mobile last March and will head credit administration for the southern region of AmSouth Bank. We love living near the coast and have purchased a small 22' sailboat. I have been working for an interior decorator here in Mobile, but will retire soon to have my first child in March. I look forward to my new career as full-time housewife and mother!

Mary Pat Varn Moore and her husband Paul have moved back to Tallahassee, FL, where they both grew up and still have family. Paul opened an office with Northwestern Mutual there last December, but had to commute to Tampa for six months while they tried to sell their house. Mary Pat is juggling her active 4½-year-old son, Warren, and her first year of law school at FSU.

Kathryn Sheridan Hutchison is in Coral Gables and enjoys working with "Art Path," a Jr. League project for bringing school children to Miami's new Center for Fine Arts. Kathy tours ninth-graders, as well as doing research and editing the guide's manual. Linda Odum is busy planning a "face lift" for a house she bought in Orange Park, FL. She still works with her pine tree farm project, but plans to take some time off for a ski trip in February to Steamboat Springs, CO. Beverly Horne Dommerich writes from Fort Myers that she is a brand new mother. John William, Jr., was born Oct. 28, 1984, and is according to Bev's mother the world's most beautiful baby! Abby Flynn still lives and works in St. Petersburg, FL, teaching math at a post-secondary vocational school. She just moved into a new condo and enjoys the Florida life, sailing and beaching.

Deborah Wilson Hollings writes from Columbia, SC, that Michael finished law school at USC and is working for the South Carolina State Development Board as the production coordinator for the film office. He attracts film and T.V. producers to make their films and commercials in South Carolina like The Big Chill. Deborah is pushing for the Cannes Film Festival as a business trip this year! Their son Christopher is now almost four.

Alice Johnson finished her fellowship in gastroenterology at Emory in Atlanta, and has started a faculty post at Duke U. Medical Center. In May, 1984, she married Dr. David Krendal, who did his residency in neurology at Emory University Hospital. David is now doing a fellowship in neuromuscular diseases at Duke. Before moving to their new house in Chapel Hill, NC, Alice and David honeymooned in Italy and Greece for a month, and each gained 10 pounds!

Jane Powell Gray writes from Raleigh that the Grays are expecting number two in May. Big brother Matthew says only a baby sister will be acceptable, but Jane is making no guarantees. Professionally, she is still with the North Carolina Attorney General's office, and husband Frank is hard at work at his law firm. Edna Ann Osmanski Loftus is living in Laurinburg, NC, where she is on sabbatical from her teaching position at St. Andrews Presbyterian College. Edna is writing a book, the idea for which came from her SBC honors thesis. She and Bill are expecting their first child this January. Martha Neill Boney writes that Andrew, at age 3, puts Dennis the Menace to shame. Kristen spends her first-grade days flitting from books, to "breakin'," to Barbies. Marty spent a lot of time last year in Charlottesville, finalizing the U.Va. Press publication of the Jr. League book on Wilmington, NC. She is now volunteering at the hospital, working with the ultrasound technicians, scanning pregnant women, and says it is fascinating!

Jeanie Mann Hardesty dropped a card saying that Margaret (6) and Gray (4) keep her busy as she enters the "carpool era." She and Ben have bought an older home in Clarksburg, WV, and say renovation has been quite an experience.

From our old stomping ground, Virginia, there is much news to relate. Barbara Tessin married William R. Derry, Jr., another lawyer in her firm, last May, and they are now expecting a baby in late March of this year. Gini Stevens Purcell and Riker have moved back to Richmond, where Riker took a job with the national headquarters of Lawyers Title Insurance Co. He supervises problems with claims in the western U.S.A. Their children are Brookie and Anne Riker, ages 5 and 3. Jeannette Pillsbury plans a five-day trip to Nicaragua this February to attend the consecration of the first native Nicaraguan Episcopal bishop and to visit friends there. Jeannette spent Christmas with Briggett Keith. Dolores Connor Margeson and David have bought a small farm in Batesville and have a new baby boy, David Alan. Dolores loves being a mom and works full time too! Charla Leonard Reynolds writes from Culpepper that she still works two days a week in speech pathology at the hospital and a third day doing language evaluations with a community service agency. Her boys, Keith and William, are now 5 and 2. Recently, she and Tom bought a mountain cabin with three other couples and plan to do some skiing and hiking this year. Ginnie B. Payne Sasser and Flip report from Fredericksburg that the second little Sasser will be born in February and will join big sister Nancy (2). Mary Phillips Donohoe writes from Alexandria that her son Peter has begun Montessori school at the age of 2½. Mary continues to work with Time Life Books as marketing manager of their television and magazine advertising department. Her job often takes her to New York City, Chicago, and Montreal! Jenni Castle Gerrish reports that she and Dave went to Monte Carlo for a week in October and then to Palm Springs in January for the Bob Hope Golf Classic. Their son Christopher is now a year old, and Jenni plays as much tennis as possible.

Grace Janelle Sherfy writes that she and her husband, Malbon Straszheim, had a daughter, Rebecca Lori, born Apr. 12, 1984. Her oldest step-daughter started at the U. of Wis., and step-son Gordon is currently a junior in high school. Grace is a tax lawyer with the firm of Ginsburg, Feldman, and Bress in D.C. She specializes in employee benefits and estate planning. Karen Medford Distelhorst says she is looking forward to tax preparation employment for the tax season, and that she and her husband are restoring an 1870 Victorian home, built by a Confederate sea captain in Annapolis, MD. Finally, Ceci

Albert, also in Maryland, relates that she was promoted to major this year! She spent much of last year renovating an old row house in the Polish section of Baltimore, but now she has been selected for Air Command and Staff College, which she will start in August. This means nine months of learning military doctrine, leadership, and softball in Montgomery, AL.

Thanks to all of you who wrote this year, and please keep the news coming.

Sally Old Kitchin reports big news for the growing Kitchin clan — a second child, James Leggett Kitchin, III, was born on December 14, 1984. Sally sees Lisa Nelson Robertson often and Dede Ryan visited her last February. Dixie Torbert graduated from Cumberland School of Law in 1984 and was admitted to the Alabama State Bar. After clerking for a federal judge for one year she now works for the State of Alabama Department of Mental Health. Mary Weston Streitz reports the birth of Christopher Weston Streitz on January 6, 1985. They are enjoying living in Joliet, IL, with their new addition and Briar, the English setter. Catherine Adams Thompson writes that she still works part-time for a general practitioner in The Plains, VA. She also keeps busy with her two children, Sally and Preston, garden club, church auxiliary, tennis and needlepoint.

Peggy Weimer still loves her job with the Federal Reserve Board. She spent the month of August ('84) in Los Angeles and spent some time with Mary Aiken Wright. She bought a condominium in Arlington and is busy making it a home. Elliott Graham Schoenig had a baby girl Sarah Quincy in November '84, and Peggy is the godmother.

Wendy Bursnall Weston is working for the senior partner at a Denver law firm. Daughter, Aubrey, now 2½, is in school now, but they both plan a vacation to California this summer with a sidetrip to Disneyland.

Lochrane Coleman Smith is on the road a good deal with her job — she stayed with Dede Ryan in Houston in March. She reports that she is also doing regular nautilus workouts and we may not recognize her at the 10th reunion. Watch out Racquel! Margaret Minor Mallory is excited about the anticipated arrival of her first child in June. Kit Newman Detering is enjoying married life and is expecting a baby in the first week of July. She and Carl had a great honeymoon in Hawaii and traveled to Boston and London last October. Cynde Seiler Eister and husband Ron are enjoying their new home, an old Colonial home in Williamsport, PA. At this writing, she also was expecting her second child in March 1985. Ron is working at Allenwood Federal Prison as the prison physician while Cynde stays busy as mother and homemaker, along with church, community and social responsibilities.

Jennie Bateson Hamby has been working as a real estate broker-salesman in her father's real estate company. Her husband Lou is still practicing real estate law and both enjoy their work. They are expecting their first baby in late April. They enjoyed a trip last fall to celebrate the pregnancy and to have a last fling before baby responsibilities keep them close to home.

I was delighted to get a surprise card from Susan Hungerpillar Delschig, who is living in Atlanta, GA, with husband George and one daughter Page, age 2. Mary Woodford is still enjoying living in Philadelphia. She is a financial analyst in FMC's specialty chemical division. For recreation she spent a week on horseback in the Tetons last summer and went skiing in Switzerland last February.

Diane Michael is working as a broker for a real estate management company, Pan Am Equities, and lives in east Manhattan, NY. Recently she saw Lisa Schubert, who continues her work at the Museum of Modern Art. Ellen King Gillentine is an assistant professor at the University of Southwestern Louisiana. She is a member of the graduate faculty and serves as director of both Children's Motor Development Program and the Recreation Program for mentally retarded adults. She has two daughters, Jennifer and Claire. Her husband coaches and teaches high school in Lafayette. Catherine Catlett is practicing law with a firm in Hollywood, FL, that specializes in real estate, probate and corporate law. Linda Jean Smith continues as a law librarian for a Philadelphia law firm. She is also enjoying singing with several choral groups. She's been to Florida, Canada, and San Diego of late and saw Hill and Maureen O'Hearn Slowinski in California. Maureen and Hill are happy to announce the arrival of Christopher Hill Slowinski in October 1984. Maureen is taking a leave of absence for a year from Hogan and Hartson, and Hill is now working for the Bureau of National Affairs.

Becky Burt bought a bungalow in Houston and is enjoying ongoing renovation work. She has become an expert in stained glass and has been applying her skills on her new home as well as on gifts for others. She is still working for a subsidiary of American General Life Insurance and playing slowpitch softball in the summers. Gail Ann Zarwell Winkler has moved to Neenah, WI, because of John's work transfer. She is taking sewing classes — learning everything from the basics to heirloom stitching. They went to Death Valley last February for some golf and a break from the cold weather.

Susan Ray Karlson, husband Ron, and Henry (now 2½) have a new family member — who at this writing was due in February 1985. They still plan a September departure for nine months' travel in Australia however!

Sallie Hill Bernard Armstrong and husband Bob are enjoying their respective law practices. Bob made partner in January '84. In their spare time they work on their condominium, but work is slow since the condo is on the golf course and it's more fun to practice than paint. Sallie Hill also stays busy as assistant treasurer/treasurer-elect of her Junior League. They went to Hawaii twice last year, once to Maui and once to Mauna Kea. Connie Radford Butt's sewing business, daughter Austin, and a bundle on the way (due in August) are keeping her busy. Husband Bob has been in real estate and property management for about a year now.

Chris Carr Dykstra started two years of post-doctoral work at MIT last September after finishing her Ph.D. at U. of Georgia. She is still doing E. coli genetics. Her husband has taken a job at N.C. State, so her stay in the North with daughter Susan is temporary. Missy Briscoe McNatt and husband Jim have moved to Baltimore. Missy is teaching part-time at Maryvale Prep. She was expecting a second baby in May '85 at this writing. Debbie Vatterott got married in March to Thomas Ruck also from St. Louis. Meg Shields Duke and Lisa Nelson Robertson were bridesmaids. An around-the-world honeymoon was their plan!

Marylyn Moran has been traveling south for business and to England and France for pleasure. She was a bridesmaid in Diane Ball's ('78) wedding to Joseph Brendel last May and has kept in touch with Bonnie Damianos Rampone '75 and Kim Wiese Smith '77. Liz Farmer Jarvis and husband Andrew are still living in Philadelphia. She started a new job in February '84 as a museum curator of the Historical Society of Pennsylvania in Philadelphia. This past winter Liz attended the Winter Institute of the Winterthur Museum for additional training in American Decorative Arts. Candi Casey is attending business school at the American Graduate School of International Management (Thunderbird) in Phoenix, AZ.

Rebecca Wilson Cunningham got married in May 1984 to Edward Moore Cunningham of Richmond. Missy Briscoe McNatt and Nonie Mickleby were bridesmaids, and Pat Neal was maid of honor. Melanie Coyne Cady, husband Bob, and daughter Caitlin also attended. Becky is still in sales with Haskell Chemical Company and plans are to stay in Richmond for the near future.

Gina Jackson Spare finished her Ph.D. in biology this past May. She plans to stay at Bryn Mawr College and do research in genetics until her National Science Foundation grant runs out. Suella Epple Behrns is working as a music director for her church, Christian Fellowship of Columbia, MO. They have implemented a 4-year music curriculum at their Bible College. She has been teaching classes and thoroughly enjoying her work. Betty Sprowls Reuwer is living in Blacksburg with her husband John and their 2 children Clare (3) and Christy (1). They had their 10th wedding anniversary this year.

Kari Andersen Shipley, at this writing, was 9-months pregnant and expecting their third child! Last year started off with great heartache for them as their second child, Katie, died. I know the rest of the class shares in my wishes of great happiness with the 1985 newborn. Kari has been very busy with real estate, Junior League and, of course, husband and son. It sounds like a trip to D.C. is in the offing for them — I hope so!

Ann Kiley Crenshaw had her first child in 1984, Clarke Hutchins Crenshaw, and also made partner in her law firm, Weinberg, Stein and Crenshaw. The Crenshaws have recently moved into the house they built. They have vacationed in Hawaii with plans for a trip to Africa this spring. Cynthia Wattlely Washburn has gone back to school full time in library science, as Emory U. has just given her a grant to earn her master's. Her husband just got his M.B.A. from Emory and works for AT&T Communications.

Laurie Fitzgerald Nowlan had a little girl this past year, Caroline Halloway Nowlan, nicknamed Carly. Her brother Patrick is now 3. When they are not changing diapers, the adult Nowlans are on the tennis and paddle courts as much as possible. Melanie Holland Rice had George Rice, III, in February 1984. Husband George is now senior vice president, Commercial Division of United Virginia Bank. They had plans to build a larger house this spring to take care of the toy overload problem. Debbie Massie Thurman and husband Russ are still living in the San Diego area. She has "retired" from private industry to enter into co-ownership with her husband of their more enjoyable and lucrative marketing business. Russ is retiring from the Marine Corps after 21 years as a public affairs officer. Debbie reports that this is their year for starting a family. Tennessee Nielson Indorf and husband David are the proud parents of Kelsey Caroline Indorf, born June 5, 1984. She is named after Kelsey Canady, her godmother. After a two-month maternity leave, Tennessee returned to work at Dtis Engineering, where she has been promoted to Corporate Counsel. Brooke "Peaches" Weiler Thiess lives in Western Pennsylvania with her husband Kenneth, an attorney. She is enjoying her work as a substitute elementary school teacher. Demetra Georgis Bowles had Henry Miller Bowles, III, on April 4, 1984. Demetra reports that at 9 months, he has become a world-class explorer. They still have two dogs and go to the country nearly every weekend. She has been in touch with Chardon Harrigan Jenks, who also had a baby last year. The Jenks are living in Albany, NY, with their son Story. Susan Verbridge Paulson is now living in Springfield, CO, where her husband Larry is a Methodist minister. Susan is a full-time mother of Christina, 2, and is expecting a second baby this summer. Kay Elisor Hopkins is back in Dallas after six years in Wichita Falls. Joe is a production manager with Chapman Energy Inc. They are living two blocks down from Beth Bates Locke (still in advertising) and husband Claude. Kay, Beth, and Cissy Humphrey enjoyed catching up with Sally Crickenberger over lunch, during her stay with the Republican National Convention. Kay thoroughly enjoyed singing with the 2,000-voice choir at the Ecumenical Prayer Breakfast attended by President and Mrs. Reagan and Vice President and Mrs. Bush that week. Daughters Sarah (4) and Beth (2) keep Kay hopping, but she has been involved with the Innovators Group of the Dallas Symphony Orchestra League and Pi Beta Phi Alumni group, in addition to making smocked dresses for Sarah and Beth. Kay also reports that Cissy Humphrey did a great job of coordinating the September meeting in Dallas of the Sweet Briar Board of Overseers and Directors.

Jill Sawicki graduated from DePaul U. with an art degree last year. She has been in Chicago for 10 years. Jill ran into Mary Beth Hamlin and they went out on the town in a major way according to this report. Jill has been working with a graphics studio for the past year and a half. Carrington Brown Wise and husband Alex have two children, Henry and Ann Churchman Wise. Between the two births, she gave two voice recitals — one at Episcopal High School and one at SBC. She also sang two anthems at the German American Friendship Garden on the mall in D.C. Carrington will resume studying voice at Georgetown U. after a self-imposed maternity leave.

Laurie Lenkel is working as a laboratory instructor at a pharmacy school in New York. She is also working on her Master's Degree in a combined program of M.S. in Pharmaceutics and M.B.A. Melanie Coyne Cody is re-enlisted in the Evanston Junior League and is involved in the historic preservation area. She and her husband had just returned from the Bahamas at this writing and were planning a bed-and-breakfast tour of the English countryside in the spring.

Carol Fiske Platt is busy as mother of two girls, plays team tennis, teaches Sunday school, and is active in Junior League. Last October she and husband Tommy met Ann Lee Webster and her husband for a weekend in the North Carolina mountains for a respite of tennis, golf, partying, and reminiscing. Karina Schless is still working at Wyeth International as personnel representative and riding and showing her quarterhorse Drambuie. She's planning a trip to London in July/August to visit friends and spent New Year's in Palm Beach, FL, visiting "long-time boyfriend with horses." Susan Walton has been brushing up on her ballroom dancing in spare time. She saw Sharon Coe Glenn over Christmas and reports that Sharon expects a baby in June. While Susan plans a trip to Europe for the summer, she is still a paralegal in NYC and enjoying the city to the max.

Tricia Talbott Reed and husband Tom are enjoying their jobs (he has a new position as Comptroller of Arbitron Ratings). They enjoyed having Melanie Holland Rice and George visit in February. Megan Morgan married Craig Fischer in August and SBC-ers in her weeding were Christy Mills Allen, Elizabeth McMartin '79 and yours truly, Sally Mott Lawrence. Megan and her husband moved to Manhattan where Megan works for WABC Eyewitness News. Craig is thoroughly enjoying his new job with the Criminal Justice Newsletter. Megan is happy to report that she is expecting her first baby in May.

Ann Stryker Busch has a new job as Marketing Director for Michael Fox Interior Consultants, a space planning interior design firm in St. Louis. Ann had plans to spend the winter "doing research" in Boca Raton, FL, while Adolphus plays polo at the Royal Palm Polo Club and works at the Anheuser-Busch Distributorship in Homestead, FL. They are finally settled in a farm near D'Fallon, MI, after being completely flooded out of their home last year. Ann hears from Ann Kiley Crenshaw regularly and planned to see Meg Shields Duke over the holidays. Margot Mahoney has been promoted to VP/Finance and Operations for the Washington Consulting Group in DC. She has enjoyed traveling with the firm and in her spare time does volunteer work and takes pleasure trips on weekends.

Cissy Humphrey sent news of herself and many other classmates from whom I did not get cards. She reports that Robin Rodger Heller and Bill are still living in Detroit and are doing well. Robin's job keeps her busy and she is also active in Junior League as well as serving as president of the Sweet Briar Club of Detroit. Pat Dean is in Falmouth, MA (Cape Cod), enjoying life in real estate. Felice Ludington is still in NYC working in advertising and no doubt making men swoon wherever she goes. Janet Durham Ezzell has moved back to Midland and thought to have started her own business. As for Cissy, she is still doing paralegal work for Stutzman and Bromberg in Dallas and, as I reported earlier, is doing a great job with the Sweet Briar Club of Dallas.

Ann Works Balderston got married in December '84 to William Balderston, IV. Andie Yellott was her maid of honor. They had a festive Christmas wedding, a wedding night in a castle on the Finger Lakes and then a honeymoon in Florida. In March they headed for the Bahamas with husband Bill's family. They are living in a farmhouse in Pittsford but are looking, at this writing, for a more permanent home to buy. Ann reports that she saw Dede Alexandre Le Comte in NYC, and also spent a great weekend visiting with Felice Ludington.

Speaking of Andie Yellott, she reports she is thoroughly enjoying her return to single life. She is now teaching English to middle and upper schoolers at Bryn Mawr School in Baltimore. Andie loves teaching but is constantly looking for extra time to ride and pursue fiction writing. She and her horse, Finest Kind, hope to advance a level in eventing this year. Andie also reports that Erica Hain Eager is still in Baltimore and doing well. Karen Adelson Strauss had a beautiful baby boy named Lewis Adelson Strauss, Luke for short, and by reports looks great and is very happy. Sally Berriman was working as a territory manager for Stuart Pharmaceuticals for 4½ years, until May '84, when she became an account manager with Medical Economics Company. Her accounts stretch from New York and New Jersey to Florida, and Sally enjoys the travel. At this writing Sally was leaving for Cancun, Mexico, where she owns a condo. She is living with her dad in Valley Forge, PA, while she's waiting for her house to be built. Sally has heard from Cheryl Lux Cobb, whose husband John was recently elected to the Montana legislature. Cheryl continues to enjoy helping to manage their farm and assist John in his law practice.

Martha "Ookie" Hayes has big news this year — her engagement to Jim Cooper, U.S. Congressman from Tennessee. A goose-pimple story from start to finish, the proposal occurred at the 1984 White House Christmas party. The wedding was on April 6, Easter weekend, in Ookie's home town of Gullport, MS. They have bought a house on Capitol Hill (I mean, where else?) where they settled after a honeymoon to Italy. The same week as her engagement Ookie landed a job as assistant to the Vice President for Science, The World Wildlife Foundation. Cathy Slainshek also has a new job to report, executive assistant to the president of CBEMA, Computer and Business Equipment and Manufacturers Association, which she thoroughly enjoys. Cathy had an engagement party this past spring for Sue Elzinga, who looks great. She married John Reynolds on April 20, and Slats was in the wedding.

Treacy Markey Shaw is a new mom this year, of a baby girl, Morgan Farley Shaw. Morgan was born in December, and mother and daughter are doing very well. In the spring of '84, Treacy and Mark enjoyed a last hurrah trip to Europe where they had a memorable vacation, despite Treacy's bout with morning sickness. Real Italian pasta reportedly cures it like a dream. They undertook massive renovations on their house in Atlanta in the meantime, in preparation for the new arrival. Mark is a VP with Citicorp, and Treacy is taking extended leave from her public relations job at Rich's Department Store to devote her time to Morgan's care.

Marion Dolan, who directs the upper class choirs and orchestra at Roxbury High School (NJ) and teaches flute, has recently been chosen to conduct the Sussex County Community Orchestra, which is more than 20 years old and has 45 to 50 members.

And last but not least, news of me and mine. I am still spokesperson, by political appointment, for the Federal Communications Commission in Washington and continue to enjoy my job. I also stay busy with Junior League activities — this year I am one of the chairmen of the Annual Junior League Christmas Shop, a major fundraising event. And husband Bob and I are very happy to report that our firstborn is due August 11, at which point I plan to take at least a short break from all the above to experience the joys of motherhood.

Please, all of you, start planning now for our TENTH SBC Reunion next spring (probably late May). The more of us there, the better it will be. Thanks to all for your great news.

In The Sweet Briar Tradition

"My college in large measure has made each day a pleasure and a challenge to me. Believing that education leads to a better world and that a liberal arts education is the foundation for every specialized field, I am happy to be a member of the Indiana Fletcher Williams Associates."

Jean Van Horne Baber
(Mrs. Malcolm J. Baber)
Class of 1933

There could be no better statement than the above words of Jean Van Horne Baber '33 to describe the satisfaction of membership in the Indiana Fletcher Williams Associates. Named after Sweet Briar's founder, the Indiana Fletcher Williams Associates recognizes a special group of people, starting with Indiana Fletcher Williams herself whose original bequest established Sweet Briar College as a women's college of national stature.

Membership in the Williams Associates is shared by alumnae, parents, and friends who have made the College part of their long-term financial planning. This can take a variety of forms and includes people who have

1 stated in writing that they have included the College in their will,

or

2 made an irrevocable life income gift or gift of life estate,

or

3 named the College as a beneficiary of a life insurance policy.

Each of these forms of essential support for Sweet Briar can provide substantial benefits for a donor as well.

The College is deeply grateful to Jean Van Horne Baber and the many members of the Indiana Fletcher Williams Associates who have made the decision to remember Sweet Briar in a permanent way. Sweet Briar is glad to provide information about estate planning, both as a service and to heighten awareness on the part of many alumnae, parents, and friends of the ways in which they can benefit from including Sweet Briar in their estate plans.

If you would like to know how your estate taxes could be reduced by a charitable gift, if you would like to pass substantial assets on to your family through your estate planning without incurring estate tax, or, finally if you would like to make a gift to Sweet Briar but receive income from that gift for your lifetime and/or the lifetime of another, you should contact F. Mark Whittaker, Director of Development, Box G, Sweet Briar College, Sweet Briar, Virginia 24595.

Please know that every request for information about planned giving is confidential and that the interest and support of each member of the Indiana Fletcher Williams Associates is continuing a tradition established by the College's founder. Members of the Williams Associates provide lasting testimony to the place Sweet Briar has held and will continue to hold in the lives of many women.

Friends of the Library

Won't you celebrate the Friends' 20th with a Life Membership?

The 1986 Annual Meeting of the Friends of the Library will mark the 20th Anniversary of the organization (a history of the Friends appears elsewhere in this magazine). Shortly after assuming the chairmanship of the Friends in 1983, I decided the goal of my administration would be "20 new Life Members for the 20th Anniversary": admittedly a rather lofty goal but who wants to make small plans?

A Life Membership is $3,000 payable in six annual installments of $500 each, if you wish, and is fully tax deductible. Sounds like a lot, doesn't it? However a major reference work such as Grove's Dictionary of Music and Musicians now costs several thousand dollars.

The library is an essential tool for the academic instructional and research activity of both students and faculty. Our college administration is strong in support of the Mary Helen Cochran Library and its branches but faces an accelerating race to keep up with increasing book prices.

Won't you help to keep our library growing by becoming a Life Member of the Friends?

*T*he Sweet Briar College Library, from its beginnings in 1906 in a single room in Academic Building (now Benedict) to its present location in the handsome Georgian building known as the Mary Helen Cochran Library and in three branch locations, presents a fascinating history of change and growth.

The earliest library was in a first floor room of Academic and was begun with almost a hundred volumes which had been bought in Europe by Dr. John McBryde, Jr., a member of the original faculty. Apparently members of the faculty served as librarians between 1906 and 1914 when the first librarian, Jessie Brown was hired. She was succeeded by Nan Spotswood Strudwick from 1919-1921. Elizabeth W. Steptoe became librarian in 1921-1922 when all 9731 volumes were moved from three rooms in Academic to a building which had been purchased from the YWCA called "The Hut" (now in another location called the Music Box). The librarian's annual report of 1923-1924 records a gift of $500 from the senior class of that year — no small figure for the time! Miss Steptoe also noted the urgency for a new library building, writing a special plea to President McVea (against the advice of the dean).

Despite the fact that a library building was planned by the well-known architect, Ralph Adams Cram, as early as 1906 when the master plan for the College was executed, it was not until 1928 that

The Mary Helen Cochran Library

An Informal History by Patricia L. Wright, Associate Director of the Library

the financial means for the actual construction became available. Mr. Fergus Reid of Norfolk, a member of the Board of Directors, and, at the time, President of the Board, gave funds for a library building to be named in honor of his mother. Subsequently, in the fall of 1929, a line of bookladen students could be seen trudging from the old quarters of the library to its present building at the center of the campus. The librarian, Doris A. Lomer, reported that students eager to be able to use the new building had volunteered to help the library staff to move the books. Small wonder, when the old library was spread around in several locations and even in its largest room there was little space for students to sit and read.

Martha Lou Lemmon Stohlman, class of 1934, in The Story of Sweet Briar College relates something of the pre-Mary Helen Cochran Library when she describes the hours during the early years — open only an hour and a half in the late afternoon and slightly longer in the evening, closing at 9 o'clock. This despite a suggestion in faculty meeting that the library not be open at night in order to "prevent girls from spending too much time reading periodicals."

Miss Lomer, a Canadian, was the Mary Helen Cochran Library's first librarian. She had served her apprenticeship under her brother who was librarian of the McGill University Library. She was a librarian who not only cared about collection development and accurate cataloging but about her staff as well. As she wrote in her essay on the library in 1937:

We look forward to a staff large enough to accomplish all the infinite detail of necessary library routine without being stifled by routine work alone. A staff not too overworked to spare time for reading, study and the keeping up of outside interests. Only such a staff can also, besides helping students efficiently with their necessary bibliographical work, make some attempt to find out and encourage their special reading interests.

Over a period of four years, beginning in 1929, the still young library was given $28,000 from the Carnegie Corporation to purchase books, the first of many grants which the library has received.

Despite the fact that some 12,000 books had been moved into the new library in 1929, it was not long (1937) until some 40,000 books had to be moved from the stacks to the Reading Room while an additional floor of stack space was constructed. This moving of books from place to place is apparently one of the conditions that never changes in libraries. Every book gets moved at least once and often more than once.

Miss Lomer continued as librarian until 1942 when she resigned to return to her home in Canada. Her successor was Janet M. Agnew, another Canadian. Miss Agnew's concern that the library's collection be used is stated in her article in the Sweet Briar Bulletin for May 1944 in which she wrote:

Having a well balanced book collection is not sufficient. The real test of a library's worth is the use to which these books are put by the students...Without readers a college library is a static, pathetic organization, without purpose. Only when the contact between book and reader is made does a library come to life.

Miss Agnew was very concerned about staff salaries, stating in one annual report that in order to compete with other libraries for library school graduates, a starting salary of at least $1600 must be offered. She also was concerned that the staff had no staff room — "a great handicap especially when an illness or fainting occurs." Never having known a librarian prone to fainting fits, I was intrigued by this! She noted somewhat tartly that a couch from the Browsing Room could be transferred to the staff room to reduce chances of that room, often called the Drowsing Room, being used as sleeping quarters for students. Some things never change!

H. Tyler Gemmell succeeded Janet Agnew in 1947 when Miss Agnew left to become librarian at Bryn Mawr College. Tyler brought a high level of professional expertise as well as a strong love of reading and books to the library. Her twenty-two years saw great changes, including a more than doubling of the book collection, the establishment of the Kellogg Educational Laboratory Library, the establishment of the branch libraries and the completion of the Charles A. Dana wing of the Mary Helen Cochran Library.

The early years of Miss Gemmell's tenure were full of the previous librarian's pleas for more staff and better pay, including a request that student assistants in the library be paid at the same rate as students working elsewhere on campus. She and Lydia Newland, assistant librarian, thought it would be possible to raise the student pay rate from 39¢ an hour to 52¢ an hour by cutting back the number of hours students were expected to work. She also continued the request of earlier librarians that something be done about the lighting in various parts of the library, particularly in the Reading Room. The relighting of the Reading Room was finally accomplished in 1951 through the generosity of the mother of a former student. The Reading Room is, of course, one of the most admired rooms in the library. H. Stafford Bryant, in his article on the architecture of Sweet Briar for Arts in Virginia, said of the interiors of the library, "Cochran has sumptuous interiors; there are classical details in plaster, including an elaborately worked ceiling in the English restoration style for the reading room and a wood paneled Georgian room, complete with pattern book classical fireplace and overmantel, for the students' browsing room."

The Browsing Room was another concern of various librarians, first that there be an adequate collection of books for it and later that there should be funds available for recovering chairs and for new draperies. Miss Lomer noted in her essay on the library that the room received a number of books from students, faculty and alumnae when in 1929 Tau Phi sponsored a birthday party for the Browsing Room. Various student clubs and individuals have contributed books and funds to purchase books over the years, as evidenced by a look at the gift bookplates in many of the books in the Browsing Room.

The year to year struggle, however, had to do with finding space for the growing book and periodical collection, as well as an adequate work area for the staff. Finally, in 1961, Tyler Gemmell recorded in the library's annual report that approximately one-half of the entire book collection was moved after Commencement. What a summer that must have been! The art and music books were moved to the Mary Reynolds Babcock Fine Arts Center and the former Art Room (now the Library Conference Room) became the Reserve Book Room.

During 1962 the library began to spend a grant of $10,000 from the Kellogg Foundation "to improve the quality of teacher preparation through the acquisition of needed library books." An earlier predecessor of this children's library had been the Travelling Library, a small collection of children's books which had been begun in 1932 with the assistance of the YWCA and had been circulated to the many one and two room schools of Amherst and Nelson counties. This library, however, had been discontinued in 1944 and the books given to the county schools. The Kellogg Library shows the acquisition skills of Clarissa Rowland, who chose many of the books in her role as library assistant and later reference librarian. The Kellogg Library, which is a collection of both children's books and materials for future teachers, is now housed on the main floor of the library (in the old Periodical Room) but began in a "dark room of the psychology department on the ground floor of Benedict." Its intermediate home until 1981 was a room in the lower East Wing of the library.

In the academic year 1963-64 preliminary drawings were submitted for an extension of the Mary Helen Cochran Library and after the announcement of a challenge grant of $300,000 from the Charles A. Dana Foundation, to be matched by $300,000 which the College must raise, work began on the Dana wing early in December 1965. The same year saw the transfer of science books to the new library in the Connie M. Guion Science Building. The academic year 1966-67 was taken up by construction of the new wing, with difficult working conditions for faculty, library staff and students. However, disorder finally came to an end in the fall of 1967 when returning students were welcomed to a library with a greatly expanded stack space, study areas, a Rare Book Room, a place for the Children's Library, air-conditioning and, for the staff, a pleasant work area in a central location. The previous April another important milestone in the history of the library was passed when the first formal meeting of the Friends of the Library, under the chairmanship of Mrs. Charles Prothro, was held. Miss Ruth Bradley was acting librarian that year while Tyler Gemmell enjoyed a sabbatical leave in India. Tyler retired at the end of the 1968-69 academic year and was succeeded by Dorothy Harbin.

Miss Harbin's three years as librarian saw some much needed refurbishing of the main library with carpeting being installed in the Reading Room, lobby area and Study Gallery. The demise of the "battleship linoleum" in these areas was not regretted by anyone who now remembers it. A number of comfortable chairs and sofas were installed in various parts of the library at this time also. The library for the first time offered a course for academic credit, in library research methods, taught by Miss Harbin with some assistance from the professional library staff. Miss Harbin was also responsible for upgrading several staff positions from clerical to paraprofessional.

Mr. Henry James, Jr. became librarian in 1972 after a varied career in writing and publishing as well as in libraries. Henry's ten years at Sweet Briar saw a great growth in the book collection, the book budget, and in the number of hours the library was open. The library was the recipient of two large grants during this period, one of over $110,000 for entering records of our book collection into machine-readable form, a first step toward an on-line catalog.

The Pew Foundation also gave a grant for $57,000 to be used for acquiring periodicals in microform as well as for microform reading equipment.

The 1981 entry of the library into the world of computer technology when we became participating members of the library computer network OCLC/SOLINET was a momentous one for all of us. Mildred Edgemon, who has been a member of the library staff since 1943, and I became increasingly at home with the OCLC terminal, affectionately called "The Machine" and now consider it a full-fledged member of the library staff. The institution of on-line computer reference searches through DIALOG was another important step at this time.

Henry James retired in 1982 and was succeeded by John G. Jaffe, who had served as acquisitions librarian before his promotion to library director. John's short time at the Mary Helen Cochran Library has seen a major change in our periodical backfile from hard copy to microforms and a positive upgrading of the three branch libraries with the addition of Ms. Kathleen Lance as branch librarian and cataloger. The library installed a 3-M security system in the main library as well as the branches, and the system seems to have caused an increase in circulation as well as a reduction in the number of missing books. Computers such as the MacIntosh and the Apple IIe have been installed in the library for the convenience of students as well as library staff and are in constant use, particularly when papers are due. Popular with students and faculty for both entertainment and information is the library's collection of video discs and video cassettes.

An important part of library services today is interlibrary loan, once a very cumbersome process but now much streamlined by the librarian's ability to request a book via computer. Christopher Bean, reader's services librarian, reported a 21% increase in interlibrary loans in one year, partly due to the fact that Sweet Briar loans slightly more books than it borrows.

Another important side of the library which has been little mentioned in this brief history concerns various special funds and collections given by supporters of the library. Some of the funds either given by or named in honor of alumnae are the Marion Mann Roberts Fund, Jacquelyn Strickland Dwelle Fund, Lucy Giles Kimbrough Book Fund, Laserson Library Endowment Fund for Sociology and Anthropology, Babette Levy Library Book Fund, Elizabeth Reddig Memorial Fund, Jeanie Wellford Fund, Carrie Nature Sanctuary Fund, Jean C. Myers Fund, and the Anne Gary Taylor Fund.

Of equal value are the special collections, which include not only the W.H. Auden and the Virginia Woolf Collections (both of which are products of Lydia Newland's book knowledge), but also an important collection of books by and about George Meredith given to the library by the late Elmer J. Bailey, professor of English at Sweet Briar, 1924-28. Another collection presented early in the library's history was the Estill Collection. The Fletcher Williams family collection of 18th and 19th century books is interesting in that it reveals the interest of Sweet

Briar's founding families. The Elizabeth Caldwell Collection, consisting of phonograph records, tapes and theater memorabilia and the Edgar H. Ailes Collection, given by his sister, Serena Ailes Stevens, class of 1930, were gifts in the early 1980's which added new depth to the library's holdings. One small library of books which has been of particular benefit to students is the one in Reid called the Lindas' Corner, established to honor Linda Spence Brown, head of Refectories at Sweet Briar from 1937-1959 and her granddaughter, Linda Spence Marshall, class of 1965.

There are many contrasts between the library of the early years and the library of today, first, not surprisingly, in the amount of money spent to maintain the collection. According to Nancy H. Adams, the library's bookkeeper and member of the staff since 1954, the library's budget today is over $394,000. Contrast this with the figure for 1931-32 which was $14,489. Interlibrary loans amounted to under twenty a year in 1931-32 while our latest figures are over 1700, the loans to other libraries slightly more than those we borrowed. This multitude of interlibrary loans is handled by the reader's services librarian and by another long-time member of the staff, Thelma Jordan, who joined the library staff in 1962. The circulation figures, according to Shirley Reid, head of circulation (she's been a staff member since 1954) reached 21,507 last year. Compare this with 10,099 in 1929-30. The periodical title count was 183 in 1930 at a total subscription cost of $841.75 while today, Helen Edgemon (member of the staff since 1947) presides over 949 periodical titles at an annual subscription cost of over $51,350.

It's fun to compare figures and dollar amounts, of course, but probably a more meaningful test of the library's success has been the proven devotion of Sweet Briar's alumnae to every need which the library has had, from the early days when as students they moved books, raised money and gave books, to their alumnae days when they have joined the Friends of the Library, established various book funds and never fail to stop to see what's new in the library when they come for a visit.

The library's place at the academic heart of the College seems secure since from its beginnings it has had strong support and even devotion from faculty, students, librarians, and alumnae. We anticipate that the second eighty years of the life of the library will be as challenging and productive as the first eighty. □

Branching Out

by Kathleen Lance, Cataloger and Branch Librarian

“I’m going to the library,” you might have said if you were a Sweet Briar student prior to the early 1960’s, and you would have been right, for there was only one library then on the Sweet Briar campus. These days you must be a little more specific, as the Sweet Briar College Library System now comprises not only the familiar Mary Helen Cochran Library but three branch libraries as well.

The Martin C. Shallenberger Art Library, established in 1961 in the Mary Reynolds Babcock Fine Arts Building, now sits in the former food service area of the old Refectory. It spreads over some 2,000 square feet on two floors of the newly renovated Anne Gary Pannell building. The main level holds not only the book collection and circulation desk, but also a separate reference room, small seminar room, study carrels and restrooms. Upstairs are the periodicals, a microforms room and lounge area. The two floors are connected by a stairway, attractively enclosed in a large skylight dome. Another skylight brightens the entranceway to the library, which is framed by a classical pediment and columns. The Art Library contains almost 11,000 volumes, with 30 current periodical titles.

The Junius P. Fishburn Music Library, also established in 1961 in Babcock, is now on the lower level of the music wing. It has been expanded to incorporate the music department’s sound recordings collection, listening stations, the Onegin Collection and college choir scores, in addition to the music books, scores and periodicals of the old Art/Music Library. A number of practice and storage rooms were combined to create this new facility, which provides approximately 1,000 square feet of study, listening and shelving space. The smallest of the branches, the Music Library, now holds more than 2,000 books, 15 current periodical titles, over 3,500 scores and some 1,800 sound recordings.

The third branch library on the Sweet Briar campus is the Fanny B. Fletcher Science Library, located in the Connie M. Guion Science Building since 1964. This branch serves the faculty and students of biology, chemistry, environmental studies, physics, and the mathematical sciences. In the Science Library are a reference area with study tables and carrels, an inviting current periodicals/lounge area and a health careers information desk, in addition to the book and periodical stacks. All of this is arranged compactly in a single room roughly 1,400 square feet in size. This collection now contains 16,500 volumes and 110 current periodical titles, with over 90% of the periodical backfiles on microfilm or microfiche.

All three of the Sweet Briar branch libraries are now fully staffed throughout the academic year, eliminating the self-service aspect which once characterized them. A professional librarian is available in the branches for reference assistance weekdays or only a phone call away at other times. Additionally, we employ one full-time assistant and approximately 20 part-time students to keep the branches operating smoothly.

Many alumnae have fond memories of Sweet Briar as a small, quiet, intimate place in attractive surroundings. We like to think that our small, quiet, intimate branch libraries echo that tradition.

A HAUNTED HOUSE.

Whatever hour you woke there was a door shutting. From room to room they went, hand in hand, lifting here, opening there, making sure — a ghostly couple.

"Here we left it," she said. And he smiled,
 "Oh, but here too!" "Upstairs," she murmured. "And in the garden," he whispered.

"Quietly," they said, "or we shall wake them."
 But it wasn't that you woke us. Oh, no.
 They're looking for it; they're drawing the curtain" one might say, and so read on a page or two. "Now they've found it," one would be certain, stopping the pencil on the margin. And then, tired of reading, one might rise and see for oneself, the house all empty, the doors standing open, only the wood pigeons bubbling with content and the hum of the threshing machine sounding from the farm. "What did I come in here for?
 What did I want to find?" My hands were empty. "Perhaps its upstairs then?" The apples were in the loft. And so down again, the garden still as ever, only the book had slipped into the grass.

But they had found it in the drawing room. Not that one could ever see them. The window panes reflected apples, reflected roses; all the leaves

The Virginia Woolf Collection

by Cheryl Mares, Assistant Professor of English

When I was in college, and even for most of my all-too-many years in graduate school, the Rare Book Room was as mysterious and forbidding a place as the "Famous library" Virginia Woolf describes in A Room of One's Own: "Venerable and calm, with all its treasures safely locked within its breast, it slept complacently and would, so far as I was concerned, so sleep forever."

Times here changed. Women are no longer automatically barred from entering such libraries, as was Woolf's protagonist. In recent years I have spent long hours in rare book rooms throughout the country and in England. But I would guess that, as far as most undergraduates are concerned, the Rare Book Room at this institution is still sunk in a profound slumber which they are too polite, too indifferent, or too preoccupied to disturb. How many of our own students are aware of the treasures safely locked within the cabinets that line the walls of the Rare Book Room at Sweet Briar? Since it probably doesn't occur to most of them to ask for the keys to those cabinets, perhaps some of their professors can try to create more opportunities for them to find out about the Collection. I hope the following example from my own experience of Sweet Briar will generate some ideas about how that might be done.

In the Winter Term of 1983, I gave a seminar on Virginia Woolf. For our last class, which happily coincided with the week of Woolf's 101st birthday, we met in the Rare Book Room. From the students' remarks and from the expressions on their faces, it was clearly a meaningful experience for them to be holding in their hands first editions of the works they had been reading all term, many of which were published by Woolf's own press, and a few signed by the author herself. It is one thing to talk about Hogarth Press and its importance for Woolf's literary career (as well as for the early careers of various other writers). It is another thing to see "Hogarth Press: Printed by Leonard and Virginia Woolf" on the title page of book after book, pamphlet after pamphlet in the Woolf Collection. It is one thing to talk about Woolf's collaboration with her sister, the painter Vanessa Bell; it is another to see some of the products of that collaboration — the original drawings, woodcuts, and jacket designs that grace many of the volumes in the Woolf Collection. It is one thing to tell students how important Roger Fry was to Woolf, as a thinker, an art critic, and a friend; that statement is reinforced when they are shown a first edition of Woolf's biography of Fry, which she began shortly after his death.

The examples proliferate because the Woolf Collection in the Rare Book Room is really quite remarkable. We have first editions of nearly all of Woolf's major works, many in both the Hogarth and the first American editions put out by Harcourt Brace. In addition, the collection contains other treasures, including rare first editions of her first novel, The Voyage Out, a signed copy of the 1928 Crosby-Gaige edition of Orlando, her trail-blazing essay, "Mr. Bennet and Mrs. Brown," in its original pamphlet form, a signed copy of a limited edition of "On Being Ill" (#26 of 250), a beautiful little volume containing her famous essay "Street Haunting," printed by the Grabhorn Press of San Francisco (#5 of 500), and signed by the author, and a rare 1921 first edition of her short-story collection, Monday or Tuesday, with woodcuts by Vanessa Bell.

I also want to mention the holograph drafts of To the Lighthouse and The Waves in the Woolf Collection. The typescripts and proofs of these two novels have never been found. The holographs are transcriptions of handwritten drafts of the novels, with Woolf's deletions and corrections and comments in the margins. I found the holographs particularly useful in helping to disabuse students of certain illusions concerning the idea of artistic genius. They saw that this "genius" obviously worked very hard at writing, developed outlines beforehand, violated her outlines repeatedly, and revised, sometimes drastically, virtually everything she wrote. The students had read in Woolf's Writer's Diary that she was having problems with one of the later scenes in To the Lighthouse. We found that scene in the holograph drafts, saw what the problems were, and discussed Woolf's efforts to resolve them. Another example: we looked at earlier versions of the final lines of Bernard's last soliloquy in The Waves, which by now are so familiar as to seem almost inevitable. When we looked at the drafts of the ending, we saw that Woolf had at first written two lengthy, diffuse paragraphs for her conclusion, then scored them through and started over, going back repeatedly to cut, condense, re-shape. Bernard's last words — "Against you I will fling myself, unvanquished and unyielding, O Death!" — are now engraved in all their perfection on Woolf's tombstone at Rodmell, but we know of the struggle behind the words that they both honor and conceal. The holograph drafts, in short, give insight into the creative process, specifically Virginia Woolf's, but also more generally.

Given the strength of the Woolf collection in our Rare Book Room, it didn't surprise me when, at the end of the term, some of the students in the seminar wrote on their course evaluations that we should have been meeting in the Rare Book Room all along. They have a point, but it is not one they could have made before they had had that experience. What they felt must have been similar in kind to what I felt when, after working on my dissertation on Woolf for a couple of years, I finally gained access to the Berg Collection at the New York Public Library and got to see one of her manuscripts for the first time, or to what I felt when I made my way to Rodmell last summer and saw the house, the grounds, the gardens, the downs that Woolf was forever evoking in her books, and the cottage where she had written many of those books. As is typical of many academics, I tend to be a walking example of the mind/body split, and my sense of literature and of the literary tradition tends to become correspondingly rarefied or abstract. Therefore, I was surprised by the impact that these experiences had on me: they made me realize that the past was alive in ways I was unaware of and in ways whose importance I had not yet grasped.

I think some of the students in the Woolf seminar sensed something similar on that January afternoon in the Rare Book Room. This perception, this felt sense of the past is, in the basic sense of the word, vital. As Woolf herself writes: "In those moments I find one of my greatest satisfactions, not that I am thinking of the past, but that it is then that I am living most fully in the present. For the present backed by the past is a thousand times deeper than the present when it presses so close that you can feel nothing else...." It is with the hope of increasing the chances for our students to experience such moments that I write this. □

Diderot's Encyclopédie

by Glenn Van Treese, Professor of French

Perhaps one of the most important and interesting holdings in the Sweet Briar College Library is Diderot's Encyclopédie or Dictionnaire raisonné des Sciences, des Arts et des Métiers, par une société de gens de lettres. The first-edition set is complete: seventeen volumes of text and eleven volumes of plates, published between 1751 and 1772; seven additional volumes, comprising four of text, one of plates and two index volumes, published between 1776 and 1780 and in which Diderot had no part, bringing the total to thirty-five folio volumes.

The facts surrounding the publication of this great literary monument of the eighteenth century are well-known. We know, for example, that:

□ in the beginning, in 1745, the printer and publisher LeBreton, wishing to exploit the fashionable and growing public interest in the sciences, proposed to Diderot, merely as a lucrative commercial enterprise, the translation of Ephraim Chamber's Cyclopaedia or Universal Dictionary of the Arts and Sciences which had appeared in London in 1727 with considerable success;

□ Diderot and d'Alembert, as co-editors, conceived a much more ambitious plan which would include additional and original articles and, as Diderot was to say later in the beginning of his article "Encyclopedie", the aims of which would be:

to bring together the knowledge scattered here and there on the surface of the earth, to demonstrate to those with whom we live now the general system of that knowledge, and to transmit that system to those who will live after us, so that the work of centuries past might not have been without value to the centuries to come, so that our progeny, becoming more learned, might become at the same time more virtuous and happier, and so that we might not die without having deserved the gratitude of humankind:

□ suspect even before the publication of the first volume in 1751, the work incurred violent opposition, and its publication was twice suspended by the government, in 1752 and in 1759;

□ in an attempt to circumvent the censors and assure completion of the project, certain articles, especially those on religious subjects, were made to appear orthodox, even pious at times, but an intricate system of cross references finally insinuates the incredible character of certain dogmas, and religious skepticism is thus encouraged;

□ also, in part due to the difficult circumstances under which it was published, the work is uneven, sometimes inaccurate, sometimes incoherent, and the subsequent progress of knowledge has rendered much of it obsolete, but the spirit of resistance to intolerance and persecution, the obvious desire to propagate the spirit of scientific method, and the record of technical and scientific advances to that time remain intact;

□ despite censorship and other sometimes related problems, and with the help of some notables, particularly Mme de Pompadour, who hated the Jesuits, and Malesherbes, who was directeur de la librairie (i.e. director of the book trade), the work was completed, and as a commercial venture, it was highly successful; the profit is said to have been nearly 300%.

All of this and much more is common knowledge or certainly readily available information, but details about the acquisition by the College of this first of the great modern encyclopedias seem to have escaped us. We know that in the summer of 1939, Professor Joseph Barker, one-time chairman of the Department of Modern Languages, was able to purchase the entire set for the library for 6000 francs (then approximately $150). The account persists that in the summer of 1939, French authorities, threatened by the approaching war and eager to find secure places for certain national treasures with which, for one reason or another, they were willing to part, were seeking to place first-edition sets of the Encyclopédie. Through contacts, Professor Barker was able to strike a deal. This may be apocryphal, and we would appreciate receiving any scraps of information regarding this acquisition.

What is certain is that the arrival of the books at Sweet Briar on 1 January 1940 was a noteworthy event. The following citation from an account which appeared in The Sweet Briar News of 17 January 1940 attests to that:

RARE FIRST EDITION IS NOW PLACED IN OUR LIBRARY

The subject of this piece of news has come into our midst from war-torn Paris, yet despite weeks of transit, it is still news to us. It is now locked in an upstairs room of the Library, but the Library Assistant will give the key to anyone who wants access. It is quite possible that no college of Sweet Briar's size in the country is in possession of such a Treasure. In short, it is a complete First Edition of Diderot's "Encyclopédie", which was published in 1751....The First Edition of the "Encyclopédie" that is in our library now is not only a great acquisition in itself, but it is also very well bound and in excellent condition. Sweet Briar has reason to be proud of it.

The intellectual excitement and pure pleasure of being able to touch this landmark publication, to consult the very volume that Voltaire, or one of his friends, or enemies, or at the very least, one of his contemporaries, consulted is still experienced by Sweet Briar students today. This is not a treasure which gathers dust on a shelf; it has had extensive use since 1940, so much use that by 1977, professional restoration was in order. It is interesting to note that Volume XII, the volume that contains the article entitled "Philosophe", was the one most in need of restoration. That article rather epitomizes the spirit of the work and is one most often recommended to students in European civilization classes and, in French, in the Survey of French Literature course and in the course on the French philosophes. Professor Emeritus Jane Belcher frequently sent her students to consult the Encyclopédie in certain of her biology courses. It is true that modern reprints of the articles are easier to read, and one can make marginal notes on them and underline significant details, but it's not as much fun as consulting the original, and that intimate, almost spiritual, contact with the eighteenth century is lacking.

We are indeed fortunate to have this great work so close at hand, and it is infinitely more accessible at Sweet Briar than it is at the Bibliothèque Nationale in Paris — no bureaucracy, no red-tape, just ask to see it. Professors and students alike are extremely grateful for the privilege. □

A library can't have too many Friends!

by Julia Sadler de Coligny '34

Toward the end of 1965 the Charles A. Dana wing of the Mary Helen Cochran Library was nearing completion. President Anne Pannell, a firm believer in the importance of the library to the life of the College, already had sponsored significant changes and improvements, one of which was the separation of the art and music libraries from the main library building. Moved to Babcock, they were more accessible to the students and faculties in those fields. The new wing was estimated to provide additional space for 68,000 volumes, which would bring the total capacity to approximately 200,000, so Mrs. Pannell was anxious to take immediate steps to fill those new shelves.

She read of older and larger institutions benefitting by organizations of "friends," which seemed an appropriate way to gain much needed help and participation from interested supporters. Typical of her indefatigable pursuit of any idea for the enrichment of the College, she asked and received authorization from the Board of Overseers at its 1966 spring meeting for the formation of a support group to be known as The Friends of the Library. The first chairman, Elizabeth Perkins Prothro '39, was appointed and even before the first annual meeting on April 26, 1967, there were 94 members and over $25,000 contributed.

At that meeting "it was reaffirmed that the goal is to attract gifts or bequests, to acquire materials beyond the regular budget, and to encourage understanding of the work of the various branches of the library."

The plan of operation adopted in the beginning has remained much the same except for an increase in the number of Council members (from 12 to 20) and the addition of more ex officio members. Council members are elected for terms of three years; the Standing Committees, coming together twice each year in the fall and at the time of the annual spring meeting are Finance, Membership, Nominating, Publications and Library Needs. The Council has representatives from alumnae, parents, faculty and friends. Student and administrative ex officio members include the McVea Scholars, the President, the Dean, the Librarian, the Director of the Alumnae Association and a representative from the Development Office.

Each year every department of the faculty is invited to submit a list of books and/or publications which may afford a richness or depth not available on the "must" list. These requests are studied by the Library Needs Committee and depending on available funds, are purchased insofar as is prudent and possible.

The decision was made to publish a periodical newsletter to keep members abreast of activities and acquisitions. Ann Aiken (Mrs. Ralph Aiken), former assistant dean, professor of English and currently head of the Student Loan Office, was the first editor of the newsletter, which was officially named The Library Gazette. She was succeeded by the highly esteemed English professor Babette Levy, following Babette's retirement until her death in 1977, when Dorothy Vickery, then assistant in the public relations office, took over until 1979. The last eleven issues have been edited by Julia Sadler deColigny '34, who resigned in December 1984.

The new editors of the Gazette will be Dr. and Mrs. Richard Rowland, whose contacts with the library have been extensive. Clarissa was employed in the Sweet Briar Library in various capacities from 1961 to 1970 and has retired recently from a position in the Randolph-Macon Woman's College Library. Dick retired in 1982 and again in 1984 from teaching English at Sweet Briar since 1957, although rumor has it that he will offer a course in oriental literature for the spring term in 1986. Gazette readers are indeed fortunate to look forward to the fruition of their combined talents as the new co-editors; to all those who have enjoyed the Rowlands' scenarios for Faculty Shows through the years this will not be a totally new experience!

Again the library faces an immediate need: more Friends. The cost of joining the Friends has not increased in a very long time. There are many categories of membership, ranging from Life at $3000 to Student at $5, but the basic membership fee is $15 per year. Taking part in the Spring Telethon has seemed to be the surest way thus far of increasing membership, but a main point to remember in responding to the telethon solicitation is that no matter what amount an individual contributes to the College in any given year, membership in the Friends is not automatic; the contributor must designate a portion of the gift for the Friends. Undoubtedly no-one is against having a superior library, but the disheartening fact is that the largest membership ever was 384 in 1983 and that this year the number decreased to 309. The miracle is in what has been accomplished by the relatively small group of contributors specifying funds for Friends membership.

From the beginning of the Friends in 1966 until March 31, 1985, total cash receipts are $222,138. This includes donations of $13,545, and all categories of memberships (with 27 Life members at $59,663). Of that amount, $128,688 has gone for book purchases, $20,932 was transferred to the Friends Endowment Fund, $5,000 to the Anne Gary Taylor Fund and $1,240 to the Lydia Newland Memorial. Gifts of books are valued at $98,353.

In addition the Friends have purchased a display case, renovated the Browsing Room, supplied some of the equipment for taping all lectures and concerts, acquired movies, now available on videodisc and videocassette, for the Browsing Room and "gone modern" with computer software. The famous Virginia Woolf Collection was purchased by the Friends. A very rare and valuable copy of the Declaration of Independence was given to the Friends by Rosemary Frey Rogers on the occasion of the 50th Reunion of the Class of 1934 and is awaiting its temperature-controlled cabinet which the Friends are having constructed for its safe-keeping. Helen Masur has endowed the Gerhard Masur Lectureship to honor her husband, who was Chairman of the Council at the time of his death.

From the beginning the Friends have had excellent leadership. Succeeding Elizabeth Perkins Prothro '39 as Chairman (1967-70) were Lynn Crosby Gammill '58 (1971-73), Gerhard Masur (1974-75), Elizabeth Johnston Lipscomb '59 (1975-77), Anne Gary Taylor, President Emeritus (1977-80), Helen Gravatt Watt '44 (1980-83) and Evelyn Mullen '31 (1984-). There have been more than fifty Council members who have given generously of their time and talents; their names will be listed but there are others whose excellent service on Standing Committees should be noted. Two prime examples come to mind: Martha vonBriesen '31 on the Publications Committee and Helen McMahon '23 on Membership.

From time to time there have been efforts to elicit more participation from students. The McVea Scholar from each class is invited to serve on the Council; the editor of the Sweet Briar News is invited to serve on Publications, and all students are invited to hear the speaker and to attend the annual meeting. Henry James sponsored The Collections Club during his tenure as librarian, making opportunities for members to study special volumes in the Sweet Briar Library, at Washington and Lee and in Washington, DC. at the Smithsonian and The Library of Congress. Under librarian John Jaffe The Collections Club became The Bibliophiles. The framework for a student organization is there.

Meanwhile, general use of the library is very much on the increase. We have couches to nap on, carrels to do research in, and micro-film readers and word-processors in constant use. We also have an exemplary support group, interested and proud to be a part of the growth of a new attitude toward learning — the Friends of the Mary Helen Cochran Library. □

We point with pride to those who have served on the Council:

Declaration of Independence — a Facsimile

Compiled by John Jaffe, Director of the Library

Strange as it may seem, one of the cornerstones of Sweet Briar's collection of Rare Books and Manuscripts is neither a book nor an original manuscript but rather a facsimile. This gem in the collection at Sweet Briar is a recent gift to the College. Appropriately, it is also an item that exemplifies the basic philosophy of both this institution and the United States. Sweet Briar stands firmly committed to the principle that all are created equal and endowed with certain unalienable rights. Its purpose is to provide the best education possible to women, enabling them to ensure their right to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness.

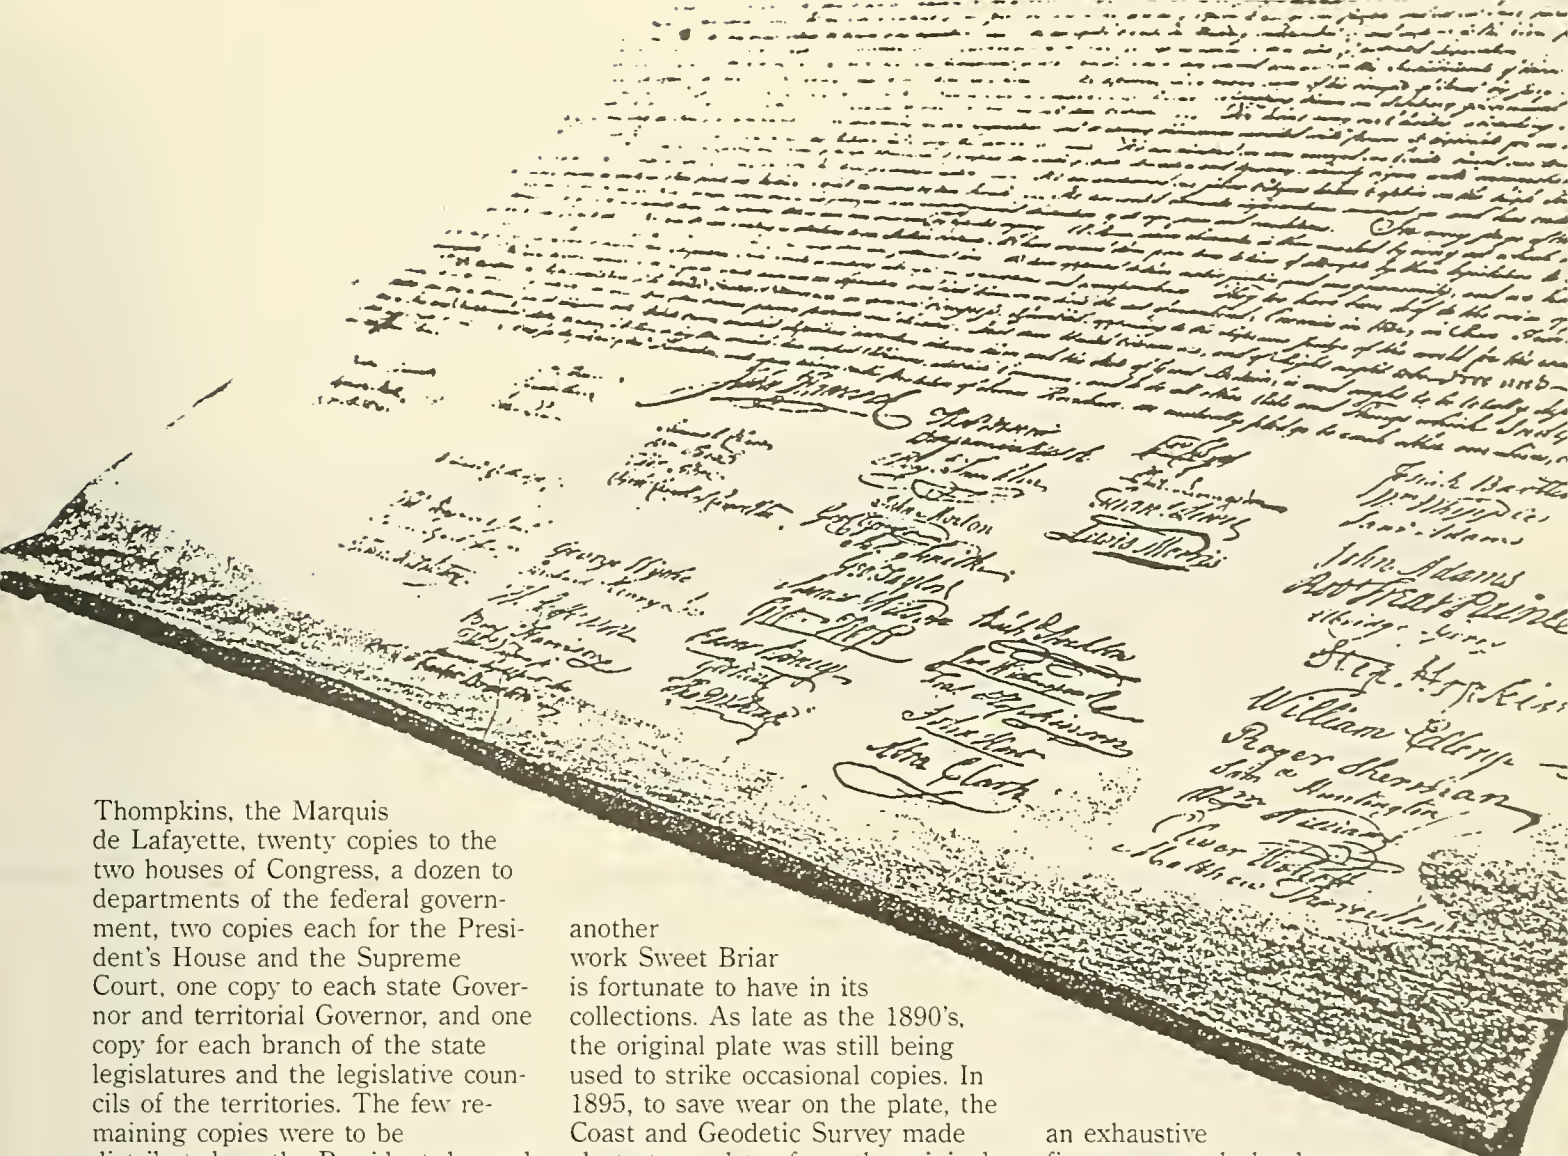

Clearly only one document ever created could be referred to by these words and you have certainly recognized what it is. This fabulous item is one of the first engraved copies of the Declaration of Independence and was given by Mrs. Rosemary Frey Rogers of Gallatin, Tennessee. Mrs. Rogers is an alumna of Sweet Briar in the Class of 1934, and presented the facsimile to the College on the occasion of her Fiftieth Reunion in the spring of 1984. She is a successful business woman who began her career with the Cincinnati Division of the American Book Company as head of their College Department. She went on to work for Globe Wernike and was later advertising manager of Cosco Business Furniture in Gallatin. Now Vice President of the State Association for Preservation of Tennessee Antiquities, she was recently honored by an award from the state for her work on the famous federal mansion Cragfont.

Mrs. Frey discovered the facsimile of the Declaration in an old family trunk. She writes "In 1978, when workers were cleaning a New Hampshire Statehouse vault, they found a copy of this engraving along with an original copy of the Bill of Rights and a copy of the 11th Amendment. These documents were examined by two experts, one of them being George Martin Cunha, Director Emeritus of the New England Document Conservation Center in Andover, Massachusetts, and authenticated. Mr. Cunha recommended they be insured for a million dollars each. He stated '...in my opinion you can't put a price on them. They're so precious, it is impossible to put a price on them.' The copy being given to Sweet Briar was examined, tested and authenticated by Mr. George Martin Cunha. The Associate Librarian of the Houghton Library of Harvard University wrote me stating '...Houghton Library owns a copy...one of our proudest possessions.' An old family trunk was given to me several years ago but I paid no attention to its contents. Just a few years ago, I went through its contents and found at the bottom, carefully rolled up, this copy of the Declaration. It was shortly thereafter, while in Tucson that I read an article in the Tucson newspaper telling of the finding of the documents in New Hampshire. The document is very rare and precious but has limited market. And, of course, it is not worth any amount near a million dollars. One was sold by a New York auction house in 1983 and this one brought many thousands. But, to me, it is far more important to give to my College, Sweet Briar, something of value which otherwise the College may never have received in appreciation for what Sweet Briar gave me and the four wonderful, rewarding and happy years I spent there." The document is on permanent exhibit and bears a plaque reading: Given by Rosemary Frey Rogers, Class of 1934, In Memory of her Father, Clarence N. Frey, and Her Uncle, Walter J. Frey, of Cincinnati.

The American people have long had a love affair with this document, beginning in 1819 when the first engrossed copy of the Declaration was produced. That copy and the copy of 1820 reproduced only the signatures in exact facsimile. In 1820, John Quincy Adams, son of one of the signers of the original and then Secretary of State, commissioned William J. Stone to engrave an exact facsimile of the Declaration. This work took three years. In 1823 the original engraving plate was finished and two hundred copies were printed on vellum and dated July 4, 1823. The copies were distributed two each to surviving Signers, President Monroe, former President Madison, Vice President

Thompkins, the Marquis de Lafayette, twenty copies to the two houses of Congress, a dozen to departments of the federal government, two copies each for the President's House and the Supreme Court, one copy to each state Governor and territorial Governor, and one copy for each branch of the state legislatures and the legislative councils of the territories. The few remaining copies were to be distributed, as the President deemed fit, to "the different Universities and Colleges of the United States."

It was from this first exact facsimile that the millions and millions of later facsimiles were derived. The original of the copper plate is now on exhibit in the National Archives. In 1976, in commemoration of the Bicentennial of the United States, six copies were struck from the plate and one of these is now on exhibit near the plate. The National Archives do not possess one of the original two hundred copies struck in 1823. The copper plate originally had engraved across the top: "ENGRAVED by W.I. STONE, for the Dept. of State, by order of J.Q. ADAMS, Sec. of State, July 4th, 1823." The caption was later removed and "W.J. STONE SC. WASH." engraved at the lower left. Sometime thereafter Stone made about 4000 copies for sale; approximately 1,500 of these were inserted in Peter Force's American Archives, another work Sweet Briar is fortunate to have in its collections. As late as the 1890's, the original plate was still being used to strike occasional copies. In 1895, to save wear on the plate, the Coast and Geodetic Survey made electrotype plates from the original. Reproductions from the federal government were thereafter made from one of these. From the original plate, either directly or indirectly stem millions of the facsimiles of the engraved copy of the Declaration.

On July 4th of 1984, Dr. William Robert Coleman, an optometrist from San Bernadino, California, presented the White House with a copy of the Stone facsimile of the Declaration. Dr. Coleman is a Director of the Manuscript Society, an historian specializing in the American Revolutionary and Civil War periods, and a leading authority on the Stone facsimile. Until his gift, the White House had lacked a copy. Although two were given to it when the engravings were originally struck, they had disappeared or been destroyed in the intervening years. Dr. Coleman acquired two copies of the facsimile many years ago and set out to determine how many other copies still existed. After an exhaustive five year search, he determined that "of the 200, all of which were designated for specified people or organizations, we know of 26. Two or three others may exist." Dr. Coleman also is quoted, in a newspaper article dealing with his gift to the White House, as saying "I contacted 68 colleges and universities and was surprised, appalled really, to discover that only three have Stone copies — Harvard University, University of Indiana, and Sweet Briar College." Of the other copies he has located, 9 are owned by individuals and the rest by states, state historical associations or archives, the Library of Congress, the New York Public Library, and the American Philosophical Society. Sweet Briar is particularly fortunate to possess such a rare item, and all the more fortunate that its alumnae care so for the College that they continually seek to enrich its collections in order that future generations of Sweet Briar students may benefit. □

Reunion 85

Judy Halliburton Davis; Frances (Poody) Morrison Ruddell; Janet Kimball Miller; Lucy Hoblitzell

Reunion — a time to become reacquainted with Sweet Briar. It can mean a time to see old friends, to catch up with your roommate, to visit your dorm room, or just to walk to the dairy. To each of us it is a very personal time. This year, Reunion brought record turnouts, as some returned to the campus for the first time in thirty years or more.

Out of the desire of alumnae to encourage their classmates to come back for Reunion, a special program was developed and has grown. The Reunion Giving program, about to enter its fifth year, has raised both dollars and enthusiasm for Sweet Briar. Guided this year by Jody Raines Brinkley '57, National Chairman of Reunion Giving, and Helen J. Sanford '42, Chairman-Elect, each class has taken advantage of the opportunity to involve all its members in a program that not only benefits the College, but each individual member as well. Classmates call classmates and the energy that is generated strengthens the bonds between alumnae and the College. This was never more evident than this year, as classes, identifying themselves with T-shirts, pens, hats, and buttons, presented the college with record-breaking gifts. The highlights of each class's special reunion program follow.

THE CLASS OF 1930

With memories of "Pop" Worthington, "Birdie" Sparrow, "Pash" (for passionate) Reynolds, Dee Long, Jessie Fraser, and "Adonis" Carl Connors, the participants at the reunion celebration turned back the clock to 1930, hosted by Carolyn Martindale Blouin. Class president Marjorie Sturges Moose and secretary Gwen Olcott Writer were unable to join in the festivities, but the class was ably represented by fund agent Gladys Wester Horton. The class of 1930 also presented the College with a gift of $25,621 in honor of their 55th Reunion. Pictured above are Carolyn Martindale Blouin, Mary Huntington Harrison, Liz Copeland Norfleet, Emmy Riely Lemaire, Serena Ailes Stevens, Jo Reid Stubbs, Lucy Harrison Miller, Betsy Williams Gilmore, Elizabeth Carnes, Scootie Gorsline, Evelyn Ware Saunders and Gladys Wester Horton. Emilie Turner Cowling attended Reunion but is not in this picture.

THE CLASS OF 1935

When Judy Halliburton Davis joined forces as Reunion Gift chairman for her class with Lucy Hoblitzell, fund agent, both hoped to set a record Reunion Gift for a 50th Reunion class. At a meeting of the Reunion Class Committee at Sweet Briar, they set, with what seemed a great deal of daring, a goal of $60,000. Little did they know on that day in October when they began, that they would achieve not $60,000 but $100,000 by Reunion in May; that they would count eleven classmates challengers, a record number; and that 92 percent of their class would take part in this grand achievement. Lucy and Judy were joined in leading their class effort by Jackie Strickland Dwelle, their class president of long standing, "Poody" Morrison Ruddell, acting class president, and Janet Kimball Miller, class secretary.

Lola Steele Shepherd; Dolly Clark Rasmussen; Louise Moore

THE CLASS OF 1940

The class of 1940, under the leadership of Blair Bunting Both, Reunion Gift chairman, undertook the first special Reunion Gift Campaign for a 45th Reunion class. Blair, joined by the class fund agents, Barbara Smith Whitlock and Nickie Gockley McLellan, worked with their committee to contact every member of the class. Their goal was twofold, to raise giving sights among classmates and to bring class members back together in celebration of their 45th and in anticipation of their upcoming 50th five years hence. Setting a goal of $40,000, they were aided by five challengers and 87 percent of the class in reaching $44,126. They were joined in planning for a special Reunion and a special Reunion Gift by their class president, Connie Currie Fleming, and their class secretary, Mildred Moon Montague.

THE CLASS OF 1945

Reunion Gift co-chairmen, Ellen Gilliam Perry and Peggy Jones Wyllie, spearheaded a loyal committee to raise $100,000 in unrestricted gifts for the College — and they tied for the record for the largest ever presented. Aided by fund agent Julia Mills Jacobsen, secretary Mary Haskins King, and Lyn Dillard Grones, who served as president pro tem during the class's fall workshop, the class of 1945 not only raised a record gift but also brought back 31 classmates and 13 husbands — one-fourth of the class. The highlight of the show was the "bag ladies" — Leila Barnes Cheatham and Mary Symes Anderson, who found ten bags in a Refectory garbage can, each holding $10,000 earmarked for Sweet Briar.

New Class Officers

Anne Dickson Jordan — President
Anna Chidester Heywood —
Fund Agent
Helen Davis Wohlers — Secretary

THE CLASS OF 1950

Quietly, diligently, but with ever so much calculation, the class of 1950 walked to the stage on Saturday morning and presented Sweet Briar with a check for $50,161. Louise Moore, as Reunion Gift chairman, guided the committee of twenty who talked with every member of their class. Dolly Clark Rasmussen, class president, Lola Steele Shepherd, secretary, and co-fund agents Elizabeth "B.G." Elmore Gilleland and Ginger Luscombe Rogers were there providing support and help whenever called. Participation and enthusiasm were high throughout the year, as even overseas classmates joined the fun.

New Class Officers

THE CLASS OF 1955

"We're the tops! We're the greatest!" So read the lead line of the freshman show for the class of 1955, and were they ever right! With almost one-fourth of the class back for Reunion, the class of 1955 celebrated in high style! In addition, the class joined together to make a gift of $26,025, led by Camille Williams Yow, Reunion Gift chairman, Gretchen Armstrong Redmond, fund agent, Shirley Sutliff Cooper, class president, and Kathryn "Tinker" Beard, secretary. The class also boasted 73 percent participation from class members.

THE CLASS OF 1960

When the class of 1960 set its sights on $60,000 for a special Reunion Gift, a determined committee of 19 squared its shoulders and set to work. Guided by the disarming smile of Ginger Newman Blanchard, Reunion Gift chairman, and wearing T-shirts boldly bearing the insignia "CLASS OF 1960," the class presented the College with its gift of $60,872. Forty-six class members returned to campus as they celebrated their very special 25th Reunion. Class president Lura Coleman Wampler, fund agent Nina Wilkerson Bugg, and secretary "Mickey" Oliveri Svoboda were on hand throughout the year supporting the effort.

New Class Officers

Jane Ellis Covington — President
Rhett Ball Thagard — Fund Agent
Sally Underhill Viault — Secretary

THE CLASS OF 1965

The 20th Reunion class has not traditionally had a full-scale Reunion Gift Campaign. However, under the leadership of class president, Katie Wood Clarke and class secretary-fund agent Whitney Jester Ranstrom, a mini-campaign was undertaken for this special Reunion. Sarah Porter Boehmler organized a group of classmates in New York to contact classmates by note and by telephone. She was joined by Wiggie McGregor Leon, Neill Myers Ponzer, and Foy Roberson Cooley to head up the New York group. Solo workers included Blair Both, Mary K. Lee McDonald, and Jane Merkle Borden writing notes and telephoning from home. Eileen Stroud Clark represented the class at the Reunion Telethon in Washington, D.C. in March. These efforts, combined with a spirit of camaraderie at the class picnic, resulted in a special Reunion gift of $17,167,

THE CLASS OF 1970

To commemorate their 15th Reunion, class officers Heather Tully Click, class president, Emily Moravek Holt, secretary, and Debrah Denmark, fund agent, undertook the first special Reunion Gift Campaign for a 15th Reunion class. Their goal was to encourage as many classmates as possible to return to Sweet Briar for Reunion and to make a special Reunion Gift to the College. Heather, Emily, and Debrah were joined by Fran Griffith Laserson, Mary Jane Hipp Brock, Page Kjellstrom, Jane Rush Davenport and Pat Swinney Kaufman. As a result of these calls, many from the class arrived on campus with husbands and children. During the convocation on Saturday morning, the class announced $10,950 as a special gift to the College.

New Class Officers

THE CLASS OF 1975

With the largest turnout of any group, the class of 1975 celebrated its first milestone reunion. Over 18 months before the actual Reunion day arrived, four class members began gathering to make plans. Ellen Harrison Saunders, fund agent, and secretary, Gray Thomas Avery, were joined by classmates Polly Mason Dunn and Ann Wesley Ramsey. Class president Libby Stough Rush served on the class committee. Together, they organized a committee of 32 classmates and saw to it that each member of the class of 223 was personally invited back for Reunion. They also presented the College with a gift of $14,091. With husbands and children in tow, the class took over Grammar dormitory for the weekend and caught up on events of the past few years.

New Class Officers

Gray Thomas Avery — President
 Beverley Crispin Heffernan —
 Fund Agent

THE CLASS OF 1980

Coming back to campus for their first Reunion, members of the class of 1980 were not sure what to expect. They found things had not changed as much as they were anticipating, and they had not forgotten what their roommates looked like. Moving into Randolph dormitory, they soon found it was just like old times. Class president Ann Rockwell and fund agent Flo Rowe are pictured above; secretary Sandra Rappaccioli was unable to attend. Together, the class joined in to make a gift of almost $3,500 to the college.

LIFETIMES

---

by Carter Hunter Hopkins '68
Director of Career Planning and the LIFETIMES Center

With the establishment of the LIFETIMES Center in July, 1985, Sweet Briar has publicly focused attention on the mission to serve alumnae throughout the course of their lives. Historically, Sweet Briar has responded to different and changing alumnae needs. Now, through a direct partnership between the Alumnae Association, Career Planning and Continuing Studies in the LIFETIMES Center, the College aims to provide even more varied services, programs and assistance for alumnae, both on and off campus.

The LIFETIMES Center will periodically poll alumnae about 1) the kinds of programs they want and need from the College, 2) what times of the year they would like to schedule such programs on campus, and 3) what kinds of programs or events they would like for the College to bring to their localities. An initial questionnaire was circulated at Reunion in May. Programs with a current events theme or an academic orientation were the front-runners, followed closely by focused field-trips and life planning workshops (leisure time, retirement, crisis point counseling). Most alumnae responding preferred 2-3 day seminars and liked the idea of co-sponsoring some functions with alumnae/i from neighboring colleges. The overwhelming choices for times of the year to present these types of programs on campus were June and October (either before or after Council). Your ideas and suggestions would be gratefully accepted at any time.

Two current services highlight the significance of the LIFETIMES Center. The Sweet Briar Alumnae Network, which has been a cooperative project of the Alumnae Association and Career Planning, is experiencing mushroom growth and increased alumnae use. Students are accessing the computerized version more and more frequently, as are alumnae. In addition, individual alumnae clubs are designing and implementing their own directories for more specialized local uses. The year 1985-1986 will see the expansion of this excellent source of information to include alumnae volunteer experiences and expertise, which can and should be more effectively "shared and borrowed." Sometime in the near future, for instance, we hope that an alumna who has just been elected to a volunteer position or named to a board can locate and contact other alumnae who have held similar posts and benefit from their knowledge and experience.

The second LIFETIMES service deals with career and life planning. It might not be convenient for an alumna in need of career or life counseling to return to campus, although all of the services and programs in Career Planning and LIFETIMES are open to all alumnae. That alumna can call the Office of Career Planning and ask for the name of a professional counselor or woman's resource center in her geographical area. Since Sweet Briar belongs to CATALYST, a national network of women's resource centers, the alumna will be referred quickly to a convenient center and to a specific person in that location who can provide the needed services.

The LIFETIMES Center exists for and because of alumnae. As opportunities and options for women evolve and multiply, the College is committed to providing both students and alumnae with the knowledge and skills necessary for continued success in their chosen fields and/or lifestyles.

Trip to France

The Junior Year in France Department is sponsoring a trip to France this fall and again next spring. Even though the trips were planned with alumnae/i from that program in mind, other alumnae are also invited to take part. The fall tour is filled, but the format for the spring is as follows:

Chateaux, jardins et grottes de France

April 4th - 16th, 1986

Dr. Robert G. Marshall, Professor Emeritus, Sweet Briar College, former Director of the Junior Year in France, and his wife, Katie, will accompany the group.

The tentative itinerary includes:

5 days in Paris at the Hotel Scribe: highlights include a visit to the Marais district, Monet's Gardens at Giverny, Fouquet's chateau at Vaux-le-Vicomte, art exhibits, receptions and some free time.

3 days in Tours: visit to the old town, Saché, Villandry and other chateaux, dégustation de vins.

3 days at Les Eyzies: prehistoric caves, the Dordogne Valley.

3 days in Bordeaux: Saint Emilion, the wine country, Mouton Rothschild and its wine museum, Chateau de La Roche-Courbon.

Additional information can be obtained from the Junior Year in France Office, Sweet Briar College, Sweet Briar, Va. 24595, Att: Mr. Emile Langlois, Director.

Correction

The summer issue of the magazine incorrectly quoted the by-laws which deal with the election of the Executive Board of the Alumnae Association. Changes made last year were not reflected. It should read:

"The slate as presented by the Nominating Committee shall be approved by the Executive Board at its spring meeting, and upon approval will be published in the Alumnae Magazine. If there are no further nominations within four weeks, the slate shall be considered elected by consent. If additional names are received, the decision for the selection of the candidate will rest with the Executive Committee of the Alumnae Association."

Mrs. Dow S. Grones Elected to Sweet Briar Board of Overseers

The Boards of Directors and Overseers of Sweet Briar College have elected Lyn Dillard Grones to the Board of Overseers for a four year term beginning July 1, 1985. Lyn has served Sweet Briar for many years. She has been a member of the Executive Board of the Alumnae Association and chairman of its Planned Giving Committee since 1981, and a member of the Council of Friends of the Sweet Briar Library since 1977 as well as a lifetime member of the Friends of the Library, the Indiana Fletcher Williams Associates and the Boxwood Circle.

In addition to her work for Sweet Briar, Lyn has been very active with the Red Cross since she first started as a general factotum in 1941. She is currently chairman of volunteers for the Va./N.C. eastern region, has served on several national Red Cross committees and in 1978 received the Red Cross Clara Barton Award. Her volunteer work also includes being a member of the Board of Directors of Stuart Hall, a girls' preparatory school in Staunton, Va. She was one of the founding board members of the Cape Henry School in Virginia Beach and has been president of the Virginia Beach Garden Club and local historical societies. She owns and runs a tree farm near Richmond, Va.

Lyn, whose husband was a colonel in the U.S. army, has three daughters: Linda who graduated from Stephens College, Mo. in the class of '73 and is the mother of 18 month old Kimberley; Kathy, or Chick, Sweet Briar class of '79 who is co-owner and manager of the Three Gulls Gift Shop in Virginia Beach; and Keedie, Class of '76 who is manager of the Rogers Riding Center at Sweet Briar.

Lyn graduated from Sweet Briar in 1945 with a major in French. While a student she was vice-president of Student Government, vice-president of Paint and Patches, a member of the news staff, Tau Phi, Bum Chums, the Athletic Association and the International Relations Club. In her spare time, she likes to hunt with her six bird dogs and pursue her interest in theater. She loves being a grandmother and is looking forward to the birth of her 2nd grandchild due in November.

The Myron B. Bloy, Jr. Service Fellowship

Myron B. Bloy, Jr. was Chaplain at Sweet Briar College from 1979 until his sudden death in January 1985 in Washington, D.C., where he was preparing to conduct a seminar at the College of Preachers. Before coming to Sweet Briar, he served as President of the National Institute of Campus Ministries in Newton, Massachusetts. He was highly respected among the leading thinkers of the day and his editorship of the NICM Journal and its successor, Religion & Intellectual Life, constituted an extremely scholarly and important statement of present day religious thought.

His term of service at Sweet Briar was characterized by many new approaches to making the spirit of Christianity more a natural part of the daily lives of students, faculty and administration. Conventional church services were conducted with distinction and Mike reached the community through many channels other than from pulpit to pew; the weekly calendars were crowded with events sponsored by the Church and Chapel Committee as Mike sought to increase community awareness of other places and peoples and their problems.

Friends at Sweet Briar are seeking to establish an appropriate vehicle through which the spirit of Mike's highest goals for his ministry might find expression. Much of what he did at Sweet Briar involved an effort to stimulate students to look beyond themselves and their immediate environment; to expand their horizons and to understand orientations other than their own, whether social, cultural, racial or financial. It is felt that an endowed fund, administered through the Church and Chapel Committee, which could help the selected student have such an experience, would be the best possible memorial.

The Myron B. Bloy, Jr. Service Fellowship has appeal not only to all those who knew Mike personally and wish to honor his memory but also to those who recognize that the Fellowship would provide an unusual opportunity for students of the caliber of Sweet Briar's. Already there are excellent representatives of his ideas in action: Carol Barlow and Stephanie Frantz taught in Kenya in 1983-84 followed by Lisa Fricano in the same school in 1984-85; Marcie Ramsey took part in the volunteer program, Crossroads Africa, in 1982 and is now serving in the Peace Corps. El Warner and Kim Knox did Crossroads Africa in 1983, Joan Collins in 1984 and Laura Fry and Frances Clardy in 1985. Caroline Stacey worked with the poor in the Syracuse Project in 1984, and plans to enter the seminary after graduation from St. Andrew's University in Scotland. Julie Allen '85 has applied for the Peace Corps.

Mike felt that this was just the beginning, that there could be many more participants; however, students who might benefit most by such an experience often find it difficult to raise sufficient funds to finance the project they are inspired to undertake. A considerable sum would be required to generate income enough to assist several students each year, but with Sweet Briar student ambassadors engendering enthusiasm for what their experiences have done for them, perhaps there is no limit to how far the granting of such fellowships may lead both the students and the College.

Checks may be sent to Sweet Briar College, designated for the Myron B. Bloy, Jr. Service Fellowship.

Noreen Parker Joins Alumnae Office Staff

Noreen Parker joined the staff of the Alumnae Office July 1 as an assistant in the office. She replaced Carolyn Bates who retired June 30 after 37 years as a contributing member of the Sweet Briar community, 12 of which were spent as a valued member of the Alumnae Office staff.

Noreen and her family moved to the area two years ago when her husband accepted an appointment as professor of Economics and Business at Randolph-Macon Woman's College in Lynchburg. For those two years she has worked for Mike Bloy as managing editor of the national quarterly journal, Religion and Intellectual Life which was one of Mike's many involvements.

Prior to moving to this area, she was a proofreader/copyeditor in the Book Division of Rodale Press, Emmaus, PA. She also did some freelance writing for a local newspaper in New Hampshire, and edited a booklet on solar energy. She was president of the Faculty Women and Wives Club at Keene State College when her husband was teaching there in the mid 70's, and more recently handled the public relations for the League of Women Voters of Easton, PA.

Her earlier experience was with the Harvard University Press as a Mail Advertising Assistant, and as a research assistant in the U.S. Information Service Library at the American Embassy in London, providing the media with material for their articles and TV programs about the U.S. She also served as an executive officer in the British Civil Service and taught history at an Intermediate School in Northern Ireland.

Noreen is a native of Northern Ireland and was educated at the Convent of the Sacred Heart, Armagh, and Queen's University, Belfast, N. Ireland, from which she graduated with a B.A. degree. She has been living in this country since 1965 with her husband, Peter, and their four children.

We welcome Noreen to the Sweet Briar community and especially to the Alumnae Office.

New Dean Appointed at Sweet Briar

Anthony Robin Bowers, associate professor of English at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln, has been appointed Dean of Sweet Briar College.

Bowers, who was born and raised in England, received a B.A. degree from Michigan State University and a master's and Ph.D. degree, both in English, from Princeton University. His areas of specialization are Milton, Shakespeare and Renaissance and medieval literature and he has published many articles and papers. In addition, he has considerable experience in teaching at both the undergraduate and graduate levels, and in student advising, curriculum development, and administration in a large university department. He has amateur interests in classical music, theatre, campus architecture, cycling and walking.

The Dean's wife, A. Joan Spivey Bowers, a native Nebraskan, is a medievalist and a published scholar also. The couple has two children, Heather Joan, age 13 and Adrian Hardwick, age 10.

Bowers succeeds Dean Fontaine Maury Belford who has accepted a position with the Association of American Colleges in Washington, D.C. as the AAC Fellow with the Council for Liberal Learning.

Upon Bowers' acceptance of the deanship, he and his wife sent this message: "We are delighted to be joining the Sweet Briar community. We are impressed by the fine traditions of excellence at the College, and by the spirit of friendliness and cooperation on the campus."

Winter Term in Vienna

Due to the popularity of the Winter Term course in Vienna last January, (see the story in the summer '85 Alumnae Magazine) the course will be offered again this coming January. If interested, contact Prof. Diane Moran, Sweet Briar College, Sweet Briar, Va. 24595.

Travelling Companion Wanted

Louise Hathaway Norman, 41, wants a Sweet Briar travelling companion. Her address is 5852 Whitsett Ave., Apt. 6, N. Hollywood, CA 91607

Correction:

Please note that the Alumnae Magazine erroneously reported that the article in the summer issue titled "Second Annual Lacrosse Reunion" was written by Alice Dixon '82. Actually it was written by Jane Dure '82. We apologize to both for the mistake, but are most appreciative for such an interesting report of a very special event.

Lake Yields Treasure

Divers in the Sweet Briar lake found some pieces of jewelry this summer. One is a gold bracelet made up of a disc with a rope band. The disc is engraved on one side with the word "Margie" and on the other, "Norris 59." The bracelet looks as if it had been in the lake a long time. If you own it, or think you might have lost other pieces of jewelry in the lake, please contact Mrs. Shipe in the Security Department at Sweet Briar. Her telephone number is: 804-381-6144.

Alumnae Recognition

From time to time the Alumnae Association receives a request to nominate an outstanding alumna for a special award or assignment. Please send us the name of any alumna you know who is doing something unusual or who has made a rare contribution in any particular area. We would appreciate your helping us make the best possible nomination for these recognitions.

Club News Wanted

The article in the summer 1985 issue of the magazine on the program sponsored by the New York Club has created a great deal of interest and response. As a result the editor would like to report on any event of unusual significance from other clubs. Please submit facts on what your club is doing. We would like to give you recognition and applause.

House Swapping

Robin Wawro Bataillon '61 and her husband Georges who live with their two sons in Caen, France, fell in love with California and want to know if anyone in CA would be interested in exchanging houses for two to four weeks in the summer of '86. Let her know if you are. Her address is: Madame Georges Bataillon, 72 Rue Des Rosieres 14, Caen, Normandy, France.

Academy and Specials

Fanita Ferris Welsh is living at the Presbyterian Home in Evanston, IL, but goes to Arizona Inn in Tucson, AZ, for two months in the winter — "a beautiful place — flowers, blue skies, and mountains." She occasionally sees Missie McGinnis McClain '54 and her husband Frank, Rector of Christ Church in Winnetka — "a wonderful preacher and man." Fanita has four grandchildren and one 4-year-old great-grand. She thinks of Sweet Briar with love and remembers walking to the Monument and Amherst.

Jane Snow Thomas's husband wrote for her because of her limited vision. At 93, she has a knee that puts her in a wheelchair, which husband Horace chauffeurs. When we heard, their tenth great-grandchild was expected soon! Jane still speaks of happy days at Sweet Briar, where a roll call of those on her hall in Gray sounded like a weather report: Hale, Sprinkle, Dew, and Snow.

Marion L. Peele's nephew writes that she is a resident of Parson's Convalescent Rest Home in Chesapeake, VA. Now 96, she is frail in body but sound of mind. She has many pleasant memories of the College in its infancy, including her own service as the first secretary of Miss Benedict, the first president of Sweet Briar.

Martha Valentine Cronly, Richmond, says she has no news except the fact that she has contributed to Sweet Briar every year since she was there. That record tells us much!

Katherine Griffith Murphy is recovering from major surgery but is otherwise active. Her son Tayloe, Jr., and daughter-in-law Helen Turner Murphy '56 live in the Northern Neck (VA) also and do much for her. Their daughter Anne, Katherine's youngest grandchild, is going to St. Paul's School in September. One of her grandsons graduated from VMI this year, and another enters medical school at UVA.

Ruth Gibson Venning moved to Greensboro, NC, 50 years ago and, though widowed, still lives in a big old house there. Her daughter is married and living in Charleston, SC, her father's hometown. Ruth's son, a Duke graduate, is a doctor in Boise, ID.

Miriam Jones Vander Voort lives in both Verona, NJ, and Pompano Beach, FL. She writes of her grandchildren, children of her two daughters. Winkie has four married sons: Bob, in the medical field in Sacramento; Richard, with a beautiful home in Northport, Long Island; Randall, with a Ph.D. in Bio-chemistry (his wife has hers in Engineering) in Westbury, OH; Rene, with a new addition to his home in Northern New York. Nancy's son Lance has been acclaimed one of the leading businessmen in Southern Florida, where he is in the contracting business. Her daughter Adrian lives in Southern Florida and is with Delta Airlines. Miriam adds, "They vie with each other in celebrating my many birthdays — 88 so far."

Nannie Claiborne Hudson, Amherst County, is still interested in genealogy and is proud to have her picture in a new book The Descendants of The Rev. Charles and The Rev. Robert Rose, for which she helped gather data. She is a descendant of The Rev. Robert Rose. This spring she spent a week in the hospital with a bleeding ulcer, but she recovered nicely and thinks she's "good for a few more years." She still works with her flowers and plays bridge for recreation. She was anticipating attending the wedding of one of her "six handsome grandsons"; one is already married, three are in college, and one is in high school.

Edwina Hensel Smith, Baltimore, and her twin sister will be celebrating their 94th birthday on December 2. Edwina has always loved cooking — an interest that was first inspired by a course on Domestic Science at Sweet Briar. She thinks there is a great need for lessons in Elocution — including the proper pronunciation of words — for the younger generation today.

Helen Link Weidely, Mount Airy, NC, visited Sweet Briar in May for the first time in 70 years! She said it was wonderful to see the campus and her old room in Grammer again. Her granddaughter from Alaska was driving her to visit other family members. In June, she was planning to visit her old home town of Binghamton, NY, Thousand Islands, and then Connecticut to visit her daughter and her family.

Alice Hogg Seneff is very happy living in an Episcopal Church Home in Pittsburgh. She is 86, but everyone thinks she looks 69.

Eleanor Stone Gates who attended the Academy from 1916-17 feels left out and says that no one remembers her or contacts her. She is now living in Mount Dora, FL.

Jessie Oarden Christian and her husband, at 92, are alert and active and leading a full life in Lynchburg, VA. Politics, religion, reading and entertaining — both in and out — are Jessie's main interests and she is still a strong supporter of Ronald Reagan. The Christians have two children, eight grandchildren (that's three more than last year!) and six great-grandchildren.

From Gloucester County, VA, Katherine Withers Hamilton writes: I wish I were a protoplasm In the prehistoric sea. I wouldn't have arthritic spasm Because there'd be no bones in me.

1913

Eugenia Bullington Walcott was still battling a month-old flu infection when she wrote in April. She hoped to have more to report next time around.

1921

President

Florence Woellel Elston (Mrs. Isaac C., Jr.), 1301 Astor St., Chicago, IL 60610

Secretary

Fund Agent

Edith Durrell Marshall (Mrs. Edward C.), 3550 Shaw Ave., Apt. 155, Cincinnati, OH 45208

Edith Durrell Marshall has, for years, done her utmost to bond us together as a class. She has traveled from her home in Cincinnati to the College campus at all seasons of the year, representing us on committees and councils. Until two years ago she had the strength and enthusiasm to carry many responsible offices, but at that time a fractured disc forced her into a life of invalidism. Largely because of excellent care and her own determination, she has won back her freedom and can drive again. Always a firm supporter of her daughter Ann's resourcefulness in discovering and assembling the Williams historical antiquities at Sweet Briar, now Edith can give her all to help Ann finish a task important for both past and future generations.

Gertrude Anderson of Findlay, OH, writes a zestful letter saying she is enjoying life and considers herself lucky to be able to be in her own home. She keeps closely in touch with Edith by mail and entertains her when she comes through her town on her way to her summer home in North Michigan.

Many of you felt the loss of news about one of our leading class members — Marion Shaler Wadhams. This year we had a letter from her daughter who lives in Rochester, NY, where Marion resides in a special home where she receives understanding, skilled, and loving care. She "looks wonderful, has lost none of her style, and is happy to be near her family."

"Lette" Shoop Dixon, who lives in Suffolk, VA, writes, "I love to tell you how it is with me. I'm thankful to say, 'All is well.'" Her great-grandchildren who live nearby come to spend the day with her and "enjoy my Alice's cooking." She adds that she plays bridge weekly and of course loves her church.

The other "Lette," Mary McLemore Matthews, who lives in Norfolk, VA, also writes with a happy lilt. Recently, her daughter gathered up about sixty friends for a birthday celebration. Lette called it a "Resurrection Party" because she saw so many she had thought were dead! She too is grateful to be near her seven great-grandchildren and feels doubly blessed that an operation in the near future will restore her vision.

Marion North Lewin says she has joined "the club of the less mobile." However, with an assist from observing friends, she attends many club meetings and is involved in church functions. She lives in Fairhaven, MA

My sister-in-law, Frances Roma Evans Ives, our Freshman president, is on the move. She says, "I had thought my traveling days were over, but to my surprise, I found myself in Berkeley, CA (She lives in Montclair, NJ), with my daughter, who was visiting her daughter. I hadn't been so far west in many years. The whole experience proved to be a fascinating adventure, which I survived happily in spite of its rapid pace. I am now almost persuaded (but not quite) to visit my son in Saudi Arabia."

Hildegard Flanner Monhoff's message came too late last year to be included in our column. You will remember Hildegard's dancing in the Dell, or perhaps you have read some of her published poems. She writes about the idyllic days spent among the green foothills of the Blue Ridge Mountains, a place of peace and contentment, not unlike her surroundings in Calistoga, CA. Her home adjoins her son's vineyard. With Roma Evans Ives; A Time to Laugh, Shelley Rouse Aagesen's book of verse, and Hildegard's poems, our class has contributed "voices" from 1921.

This year I was not exempt from the losses that inevitably come with added years. Lloyd died of leukemia May 3, 1984, as our news was going to press. Now that I have waited the proverbial year of adjustment, I know what I am going to do. A small apartment is being constructed on my daughter's home in the neighboring town of Needham. Carol and Ed have four — grandma says, "beautiful" — girls, one 20 and the other teenagers.

Betty Morris Coleman still can't imagine anything she'd rather do than talk on the airways. It is now 25 years since she developed this ham-operating hobby. However, she takes time out for bridge and patriotic meetings and activities. Betty lives in St. Cloud, FL.

Our "travel trotter," Florence Woeltel Elston, has not lost her enthusiasm for "going places and doing things." She has sought out mostly southern climes this year, starting with the Sweet Briar gala celebration in Dallas, going on to Del Ray and villa-living for several weeks, and then to one of her favorite playgrounds, the Windermere Club in Eleuthra, the Bahamas. From there she joined 19 others who cruised the Nile and ended with a three-week journey on the Queen Elizabeth II, touching the Orient. Certainly Florence outdoes us all in the extent of her wanderings. She is not a loner and delights in adding to the pleasure of her companions. Sweet Briar has its place in her thoughts and heart too.

There is always an air of deep satisfaction in the messages from the pen of Catherine Hanitch. She has found a retirement home in Hopkins, MN, in the low-lying mountain ranges which bring back memories of SBC. She writes with pride about its standing among today's women's colleges.

Shelley Rouse Aagesen writes her usual bouncy letter, with the opening remark that should Amey Smyth '22 meet her on the basketball court again, she'd "play dead." Shelley is fine, although Nick frightened her by contracting walking pneumonia in the summer. She and Nick have been married 54 years. Wouldn't it be fun to celebrate our 65th and their 55th next May?

1925

Secretary Cordelia (Deedie) Kirkendall Barricks, (Mrs. Arthur A.) 100 Bay Place, Apt. 2101, Oakland, California 94610

I am finally getting some responses so we'll have a scrapbook to leave in the alumnae office. I left one there in 1980. I'll start with my news and save the best to last, your news.

Summer '84, I had a special little jaunt with three others to the wine country in the beautiful Napa Valley. We saw my son who has now lived in the Veterans' Home for two years.

September and October found me cruising from San Francisco down the coast of Mexico, through the Panama Canal, down the east coast of South America, and through the Straits of Magellan, then back to San Francisco; however, labor troubles arose so we had to fly home from Los Angeles. It was a wonderful trip.

On November 20th Freddie Bernhard, 1924, and I went to the wine and cheese party at Mills College in Oakland where 15 women's colleges were represented and three college presidents were in attendance. This was a stimulating meeting. I received a nice thank-you for my attendance from Mary K. Lee McDonald, 65, who is President of the Alumnae Association, and was at the meeting, as was Ann Reams, Alumnae Director, who also wrote me. Sweet Briar was well represented by these two fine ladies.

My son, Fred, and I went to Oak Harbor on Whidbey Island for Christmas with my oldest granddaughter, Lana, and her husband, Duane, in their brand-new home. They both teach school. We had a merry old time. Our annual Sweet Briar Day Luncheon on December 28th at a French restaurant in San Francisco was fun, informative, and stimulating. Dear Mary Sturr Cornelius, 1962, transported me both ways. I won a prize for my Mardi Gras costume. I went as a tramp and called myself "Time on My Hands." On one hand I had a clock, and on the other an issue of Time magazine. I had Easter at the Towers enjoying my youngest granddaughter, her husband, and their children, ages five and three. There are lots of parties both big and small at the Towers. I'm not only a playgirl, but have my chores and duties, too, such as being a fire warden for my floor and chairperson for the monthly book reviews and lectures. I play a lot of bridge, see the shows in San Francisco, and work in "The Elegant Scarecrow," our Episcopal church and school's thrift shop.

I hope all of you will have a great summer, and I thank those 17 who responded to my letters re our reunion.

Now for your news. According to my records we lost two class members in 1984. Jane Becker Clippinger and Martha McHenry Halter.

Virginia Burke Miller is now living in a nursing home in Aurora, Colorado, a move from Englewood, but is near enough to some members of her family to enjoy their frequent visits. Virginia is confined to a wheelchair but is still able to take care of herself. Bravo, Virginia, for keeping up with sports and rooting for Michigan's football team.

Ruth Pratt Jones married Mary Hampton Martin's brother in 1927 and in 1945 married Paul Jones. They have lived in Stamford, CT, and Jacksonville Beach, FL, the latter place so Paul could be near the Veterans' Hospital, where in 1979 he had heart surgery. Ruth has had troubles, too, a broken hip and osteoporosis and is on a walker, but still hopes that she and "Hampie" can make it to the reunion. Hampie lives in Richmond and has eight grandchildren and four great-grandchildren, including twin girls. Ruth's son and wife live in Winnetka, Illinois, with their baby; her daughter and large family live in Keene Valley, New York. Ruth's son recently was at Sweet Briar where he took glorious photos, including the new station. The one we knew is now on campus. I had a nice letter from Muriel Fossum Pesek in Minneapolis.

Tallulah Holloway Harris writes she can't be with us for reunion because she has illness in her family and is needed to help with the problem.

Mary Reed Hartshorn and husband recently moved to the Bradford Terrace Retirement Apartments in Milwaukee where they are most happy with all the activities and good dinners. They get their own breakfasts and lunches. Mary also sent a photo of her husband, daughter, and herself, all so attractive, and another group taken in front of Grammer in 1921. They were all in midly blouses. Those featured are Mary Dowd, Ida Bues, Laura Darrah, Anna Cleaveland, Mary Reed, Emilie Helsen and Mary Sturgis. Mary's husband is a Dartmouth graduate, 1921. Their son is Dartmouth, 1954, and their daughter a graduate of DePauw in 1950. The Hartshorns have seven grandchildren.

Kay Agard Flewelling is a traveler. In September she was on board the Vera Cruz from Montreal to New York. The next day when the ship was in dry dock it turned over. In October Kay was in South Korea, Japan, and China, and in the spring she was in Yugoslavia. Lucky Kay. She now lives in a condo in Pasadena and is happy there, especially since there is a view of the snow-capped mountains and the two patios allow for gardening.

Dorothy Leatham Nelson wrote that due to the physical infirmities of old age she, with regret, can't possibly attend reunion. We'll miss you and are saddened that you are so frail.

Kate (Catherine) Baker Lockton can't attend reunion because she is taking her granddaughter, a Williams graduate and a first-year student in Columbia's Graduate School of Architecture, to Italy to visit several favorite places, especially Villa Lante in the little town of Bagnaia, outside Rome. Sarah has done considerable research and drawings of it. Kate's daughter completes the travelling threesome.

Marjorie Leute Crouse in February was recovering from a bad fall which hospitalized her. The sprain was taking a long time to heal. She hears from Dede Reed German who is now widowed, but is in good health and still golfing and is fortunate to have a musician brother who takes her to the theater. Marjorie hears every Christmas from the widower of Margaret Freeman Sherdahl who lives in Delray Beach, Florida. Thank you Marjorie for sending the snapshot of you and your nephew, taken in Hilton Head in 1982.

Louise Wolf Arnold can't make it to reunion because her husband is recovering from a bad medical experience — a steroid shot hit a nerve with the result he was bed-bound for two months, but is now on the mend and able to walk and swim daily. There are happy things to report, too. Fritz, a son, is planning to fly in from Spain via London to spend a month. Another son, Robert, visited recently and cheered Louise and George. Mollie, the daughter, is busy with her stockbroker husband and horses. They have a handsome son, 6'4". Bob Jr. has four children — Alison at Washington State and very ecology minded, Bob III at Georgetown University, Washington, D.C., Lanie at Suffield, Connecticut, and Dylan, only 11, at Fay School where Louise's son, Fritz, went.

Almena Perkins Gudas wrote that her husband retired in 1984, his retirement being enjoyed by both. Fabian had been a professor in the English Department at Louisiana State University. Girls run in the family. Almena has two daughters, five granddaughters, one grandson, and a great-granddaughter. The grandson graduated in 1984 from the University of Texas, and the granddaughter is a freshman at Stephen F. Austin. Both daughters came in November 1984 to help Almena celebrate her 80th.

Almena is very active, belonging to book, garden, and dance clubs, and also to the D.A.R., Colonial Dames of the XVII Century, the Baton Rouge Audubon Society, and several other civic and cultural organizations. For the past two years she has been President of the Baton Rouge Opera Guild which offers scholarships to voice students at Louisiana State University. In spite of all these activities Almena finds time for gardening and birding, and yet never neglects her family, her greatest interest. Birding has become a delightful hobby for both Almena and her husband. She reports she is a self-taught amateur and yet is asked to give programs on birds to some of the clubs in her area.

Lucille Smith Lindner belongs to the "single widow" group in Cincinnati and is busy with and enjoying the symphony, the Literary Club, bridge, volunteer activities, and the wonderful Mercantile Library which sends out books and pays the postage both ways, a boon to Lucille who no longer drives. Her daughter lives nearby so Lucille enjoys vicariously her jaunts and travels. Lucille sends her best and wishes she could join us.

Elsie Munro Haller has been my most faithful correspondent. She wants so much to come to reunion, but can't walk, except around her garden. She even thought of getting a golf cart to use on the campus, but couldn't manage any steps. In 1980 she was in a plane accident which led to her present dilemma and then arthritis came along to complicate things.

Elsie didn't give up. She tutors children in reading at an elementary school, works in the technical part of a library and has the usual club and church work. Her bungalow must be ideal and beautifully located, with a canal at the end of her garden which empties into the West Coast Intra Coastal Waterway. The beach community offers much to see and enjoy, but the humid summers in Redington Beach, FL are getting her down, especially since air conditioning isn't to her liking.

Elsie and Giddy Kinsley Whitehead went to the same prep school in Connecticut before their days at Sweet Briar. Elsie's best friend is her black dog, Carney.

She sent very interesting pictures of her home, furniture (antiques), herself, and her dog. They are now in the scrapbook I'm making for reunion and to leave at Sweet Briar.

Dorothy Herbison Hawkins and her husband, Howard, are enjoying his retirement. They now take shorter trips, such as to Florida in late winter. They have seven grandchildren — five girls and two boys. Four are in college at Cornell, Smith, Ohio Wesleyan, and Yale. Dot's contacts with Sweet Briar are with Mary Reed Hartshorn and Mary Bristol Graham, 1926, and one or two meetings a year with the Rochester Sweet Briar Club. She is pleased with the great progress of our alma mater.

Gertrude McGiffert MacLennan will be in Minneapolis at the time of reunion seeing four great-grandchildren who have been born since their last visit. Jerry's family is growing in numbers, now numbering two dozen. There are two sons, one daughter, five grandsons, five granddaughters, two daughters-in-law, one son-in-law, one grandson-in-law, three granddaughters-in-law, one great-grandson, and three great-granddaughters. The MacLennans have lived in Florida for 12 years in the home they built. They have lots of company and are active in the Episcopal Church and still able and willing to travel. Trips have taken them through the United States, the British Isles, Africa, South America, the Caribbean, Sweet Briar three or four times, and Minneapolis yearly. They live in the country and grow citrus. They have had freezes four out of the last five years, but came out better than they thought, with everything in bloom again.

A note from Virginia Coupland of Virginia Beach tells us her mother, Virginia Whitlock Moll, is in a nursing center in Charlotte, NC, and is unable to respond but loved her days at Sweet Briar and her classmates. May her health improve.

Mary Elizabeth Welch Hamphill has been a widow since 1973. Her husband was a physician and surgeon and they had no children. "Brandy," her apricot-colored poodle, and many friends keep her busy and happy. Mary Elizabeth goes every year, from her home in Danville, KY, with friends, to Florida. It was hard to return this year to the cold damp weather of Kentucky, especially since Mary Elizabeth has arthritis, but she loves the town and is still in her home and takes advantage of the interesting activities connected with Center College in Danville.

Margaret Hogue Pfautz isn't quite equal to the drive to reunion. She is well on the mend from surgery that hospitalized her for five weeks. Margaret has three children, and it surprises her that they are even talking of retirement. Jack is 58 and is with the Washington staff of the Today show. Jim is a Major General (two star) and soon to retire from the Air Force. Three of his children were married this year so the Pfautzes can expect more great-grands. Betty, the youngest, is busy with her three grandchildren and husband.

Margaret did get back to her 50th at Sweet Briar when only seven attended. Two came from England, but none from Lynchburg. I couldn't attend because of my husband Arthur being critically ill, but I did get to our 55th. I was the only one to stay on campus and was in the same room in Grammer Hall that was assigned to Dorothy Benn and me in 1921. Giddy Kinsley came by day from her home in Amherst.

Woodis Finch Hudson remembers Sweet Briar very well, even to her playing on the hockey team. She now lives in New Rochelle, NY, and plays bridge with Rhoda Allen, '21, who was a May Queen. Woodis, who has been married twice, has three children, six great-grands and nine grandchildren. She formerly lived for 50 years in Pelham, NY, where she served on the Episcopal Diocesan Board. Widely travelled, she used especially to make many trips to England to visit her sister Helen '26, now deceased.

"What a happy, happy time."

Evelyn Pretlow Rutledge writes from Coral Gables, FL, when reporting that they spent a week celebrating her 80th birthday last year at the New York home of her children, Dick Rutledge, Jr. and Fleming Parker Rutledge '59.

Lucy Reaves Utterback (now Mrs. William Grandison) has been very involved in historic preservation in Little Rock, AR; she is the state chairman in charge of the 18th century drawing-room in the Arkansas Old State House Museum, and spent seven years researching, writing and producing a centennial history of the Aesthetic Club, which has now been published. In spite of having had to cope with a number of health problems, Lucy still enjoys maintaining and repairing her house — "that is my therapy," she says.

In this "Age of Aquarius" no one in our class appeared for our 55th reunion. I had many notes and telephone calls, all with valid reasons for nonappearance; one of these was that our 50th was so terrific it could not be duplicated. It was interesting that so many had children, grandchildren and a few great grands graduating from high school, getting married, graduating from college and making trips galore. I did not find time to send Christmas cards these past two years. We have had fewer Sweet Briar contacts this year than I can recall. I saw Gert Prior and had two nice phone calls to her. Her interest and knowledge of wild flowers is keener than ever. She and Lisa Guigon Shinberger keep in touch by phone. Her great-niece Sarah Harrington is at Sweet Briar now.

In March we helped my husband's sister Elise Cutchin move into a Westminster Canterbury retirement house in Richmond. One of the first residents she met was "Obi Payne Carter." Lisa invited us to stay with her the last two days of this procedure. She is delighted her son John recently married a lovely girl (they teach at the same school near Culpepper). Her daughters Adelaide and Mary Baird have presented her with five grandchildren. She lives again in the charming old house of her childhood on West Franklin St. On various trips to City Point and Richmond we have seen Nora Lee Antrim, Maria Bemis Hoar, Margaret Moncure Johnson and Pattie Moncure Drewry, Class of '39, who we also saw at the Williamsburg Antiques Forum last winter. They all keep busy with homemaking, church, women's club, Colonial Dames, etc., etc. Nora is having Maria and Anne Gochnauer as guests at her camp on Squam Lake, NH, in July. Anne is busy with her antique shop. The Golden Horse Shoe, in Upperville, VA

Adelaide Henderson Cabaniss reports, "our oldest grandchild, Jennifer Eve, graduates from Princeton June 11 in Chemical Engineering. Her family, including two brothers, live in Albuquerque. Our daughter Eve and her minister husband, Raymond Webster, live in Osterville on the Cape. He is rector of St. Peter's. They have two children, Warren and Adelaide, 13 and 5."

Last summer we spent a night and day with Carolyn and Maury Blouin. Old Joy Farm is more beautiful than ever and their flowers and vegetables are delectable! We visited friends in Waldeboro, South Freeport and South Bristol. I had a rewarding phone conversation with Libber Lankford Miles. She and John were going to be away just at the time we were near their home in South Thomaston, ME. We hope to see Louise Dailey Sturhahn and Ed in Sarasota, Florida, next year.

Lee Sidman Smith writes, "I am on the board of the Hunterdon County Library — and belong to the Friends of the Library (raise money for above)...Especially enjoy our Stanton "Holly Trail." We work all year getting ready for a house tour, boutique and luncheon, the money being raised for our local church one year and for the Hunterdon Medical Center the following year. I enjoy reading and writing (at present I'm writing a family history), bird watching and swimming in the ocean in Florida where I expect to be this winter, in Deerfield Beach. We hope Lee can be with us this May for the very special programs in the Lehigh University Packer Chapel honoring Johann Sebastian Bach, who was born 300 years ago. In Bethlehem the Bach Festival is always a thrilling event.

Jane Wilkinson Banyard reports "that my granddaughter, Linda Banyard Higginbotham, is going to make me a great-grandmother in September, 1985. My oldest grandson, Leslie, was married to Nancy Neal, May 27, and they are living in Boston. My second grandson, Jonathon, is an excellent student at the University of Bologna, Italy for his junior year. He is having a most interesting year. My other two grands are 13 and 10." Jane enjoys her part-time job at one of the finest porcelain shops in Pembroke, Bermuda. According to her daughter-in-law, Jane is a great traveler. She still has her home in Bermuda and puts on her helmet and rides her motor bike to work! She has visited in San Diego, CA, Beaumont and Houston in TX and Bologna, Italy, all this year, and she has attended two granddaughters' weddings in Bethlehem and always comes there now for Christmas. We hope that next time we will see her, but we still go out to Cleveland for the holidays. Our second granddaughter, Susan Bennett, made her debut at the Union Club on December 28. She is a freshman at Middlebury, Vermont this year. Her sister Elizabeth Martin, graduated cum laude from Middlebury last May with special honors in History and English. She spent her junior year at the University of London. (She now has a job in New York City working for an advertising firm in the Chrysler Building). We have just spent 10 days in Cleveland staying with our youngest granddaughter, Carolyn Randolph. It was fun to watch her play lacrosse. Her parents went to medical meetings plus golf and tennis at Monterey, CA.

Lou Lutz says her greatest interest is the Art Institute in Chicago. Eleanor Duvall Spruill continues her painting and she has received many accolades for her very fine watercolors. Wouldn't it be nice if she could have another showing like the one she held in Benedict for our 50th?

Sally Callison Jamison and her husband, Jamie, spent 2½ months in Naples, Florida this past winter. She frequently saw Julia Coleman Wing, Class of '30. En route home to Lafayette, Indiana, they spent a night with Ruth Meredith Ferguson Smythe. Sally keeps up her interest in golf. Belle Brockenbrough Hutchins spent the winter at Del Ray Beach, Florida.

I just received a brief note from Janet Bruce Bailey saying that her husband Lindsley died February 1. We send our love and deepest sympathy to her and her whole family. The Baileys came to several of our reunions and we have visited them in several of their interesting homes. (They had some very fine old porcelain which is of museum quality.) Jan writes "I am leaving Florida to be near Anne, my daughter, who lives in Greenville, Delaware. My address will be Mrs. Lindsley R. B. Bailey, Stonegates Apt. 96, 4031 Kennett Pike, Delaware 19807. Stonegates is a most attractive retirement facility."

Last summer we had our usual trips to New England, Canada and Virginia. At our 50th wedding anniversary, Jimmy's family, my family and several generous friends started the Eppes Travel Fund. In September and October we had a thrilling three weeks in London and southern England which our English cousins helped plan. We took Jimmy's sister, Elise, along and we three had a wonderful time driving in our Hertz English Ford! This was her 11th trip, my second and Jimmy's first! In this low-cholesterol, high fiber, mega-vitamin world, please see fit to send me a post card to tell me what you are doing...otherwise our column will be blank.

Thank you for your continuing gifts to our College. Thank you for your marvelous response to a reporter's request for news. We have a special member who wrote a very special card. Read our class notes carefully to discover who he is. Do join in the fun next time round.

Jean van Horne Baber, Pennsylvania, had three weeks in Paris during the summer of '84, twelve weeks at Hilton Head Island, SC and assorted weekends in other places. Genealogical research and needlepoint designing fill up some of the other hours.

Sarah Houston Baker, Illinois, has two adopted grandsons. The older one has already spent a year, his first, in Germany.

Gail Shepard Bean, Iowa, has been to England and will be doing Cincinnati, Boston, Virginia, North Carolina and France. This spring her husband will receive an honorary degree from Jefferson Medical College, Philadelphia.

Mary Kate Patton Bromfield, Connecticut, and her husband had an early '85 vacation in Hawaii visiting her brother and his wife in Kona, then stopping over in San Francisco to visit daughter Susan and her family. At home it's golf and working on alumni material for Kingswood-Oxford School.

Anne Brooke, Virginia, has served and still serves, in many positions in her Gablee Episcopal Church, Virginia Beach. She is currently on the Executive Board of the Diocese of Southern Virginia and for nineteen years has been on the board of Episcopal Church Women. She is also involved in Colonial Dames as Historical Activities Chairman. December '84 Anne attended a Washington, D. C. exhibition of drawings by a niece, Susan Holds Crowder '65. Susan was art fellow at The Virginia Center for the Creative Arts at Mt. Saint Angelo, spring '84.

Marjorie Jones Cook, Wisconsin, hopes that her roommate, Marjorie Ris, will read this column for she too has remarried — "thoroughly enjoying my second marriage with Jack Cook."

Jeanette Shambaugh Elliott, Arizona, is busy with her tennis doubles and hiking in the beautiful mountains. "I go on being a devoted collector of Chinese painting, attending seminars and auctions. I am enjoying the process of making over this 19th and 20th century collection to the Phoenix Art Museum."

Marjorie Morse Emling, Arkansas, has two grandchildren who she sees almost daily. Fall of '84 she and her husband, Ralph, had a two week trip to Egypt which included five nights on a Nile cruise ship. At home their new interest is the Fort Smith Philharmonic Orchestra. Ralph is doing publicity and serving on the board of directors. Marjorie is a member of the women's auxiliary.

Elizabeth Gray, Virginia, in '84 had an enchanted trip to Hungary, Austria, Germany and Switzerland. May '85 it will be Ireland, Wales and southwest England. At home she is very active in the preservation of old St. John's Episcopal Church, King William County, VA. It was built in 1734, left to ruin in 1922. She is also a Nautilus exercise enthusiast.

Margaret Ellen Bell Hare, New York, says "still love everything about SBC The fall magazine is terrific as usual and please give Ann Morrison Reams our very best wishes for the magazine and the Fund."

Margery Gubelman Hastert, Hawaii, celebrated the 50th anniversary of her arrival in Hawaii. She continues her volunteer hospital work, batiks and golf. October '84 she spent with her brother in Australia. She spent a week with Barbara Munter and her husband on the Island of Maui. Mildred Larimer had lunch with them one day.

Nevil Crute Holmes, Florida and Ohio, and her husband, Win, are busy with their new house in Florida. They have seen Glen Worthington Johnson, ex '33 and Marge Van Evera Lovelace, ex '34.

Marjorie Ris Hyland, Florida, writes "We are well and happy. We had a short Caribbean cruise this winter and otherwise just live the good life."

Ella Jesse Latham, Virginia, and her husband, Bob, had dinner with Sue Graves Stubbs and King October '84 when the Stubbs were in Washington for a Colonial Dames meeting. She also saw Gail Shepard Bean. In February '85 Ella took her two daughters to Woodstock, England, for a week's workshop on flower arranging. Sue's sister went with them.

Jessie Coburn Laukhuff, Virginia, and Perry celebrated their 35th wedding anniversary on December 10, '84. Travels have taken them to the Smokies, Nag's Head, Cape Cod and Nantucket and Lake Mohonk, NY. Perry is completing 52 short teaching leaflets for Episcopal Sunday Church bulletins. Daughter Louise is a medical records technician at St. Mary's Hospital in Richmond, VA. She has bought a house there.

Doris Crane Loveland, Maryland, and Sam have moved to a new farm. A course in computers persuaded her to do without one! More to her liking are the Williamsburg Antiques Forum and the Williamsburg Garden Forum.

Helen Martin, Pennsylvania, is renovating her house, pulling weeds and volunteering twenty-five hours a month with the local visiting nurses.

Miki Paulding Murdoch, Maryland, says it all in poetry. "Dear Madame Secretary, Listen to my tale of woe, A Year Ago, I broke my 12th vertebrae bone, A situation to bemoan, Now that it is on the mend, My Renewed Energies I bend, On a verse history of Mount Clare. Charles Carroll, Barrister, lived there."

Frances Neville Newberry, Nebraska, writes that a first great grandchild was born in Denver, CO, on the thirteenth of March. She and her husband spend their winters in Arizona.

Susalee Belser Norris, South Carolina, now calls Charleston her home because all her family are in South Carolina. She is another who has seen the Stubbs (Colonial Dames meeting) and she has heard from Sally Shallenberger Brown.

Jane Martin Person, Minnesota, visited her sister, Helen, summer of '84 then went on to Blue Hill, Maine to visit her brother. This February the weather was 30 below not just one day but many!

Mary Elizabeth Clemons Porzelius, Tennessee, sends greetings to all.

Mary Nelson Neville Sieman, Nebraska, went almost every week, of fall '84, to football games at Lincoln, Nebraska. January '85 she and her sister, Irene Bystrom, cruised from Tahiti to Australia, then had a week's tour of New Zealand. March found her at Isla del Sol, Fl. After a bout with pneumonia she was able to entertain all five of her grandchildren and their friends. Regrettably she had to cancel her trip to Washington, D.C. to attend the National Society Daughters of American Revolution Continental Congress as Regent of the Seaux Lookout Chapter of Nebraska.

Katharine Gochnauer Slater, writes from Upperville, VA that the revised, updated version of her book, to be called The Hunt Country of America Revisited is due for publication by Cornwall Books later this year. The new edition will have added chapters and many more photos than the original.

Sue Graves Stubbs, Louisiana, and her husband, King, are always on the go seeing many of our classmates at meetings of the Colonial Dames. This summer of '85 they are headed for the waterways of England, France and Portugal.

Margaret Wayland Taylor, Virginia, and Robert will be a part of the University of Virginia Alumni travel group going to Côte du Rhone this summer. Peggy's mother was three days short of 100 when she died on the 15th of November '84. Robert works full-time at his law firm and is Commissioner of Accounts of Albemarle County.

Nathan Tufts, California, is pinching for Charlotte Tamblin. "We both got bogged down so I stepped in. We have been in the same home for twenty-five years and Charlotte handles all gardening and planting chores." Charlotte continues to work one day a week for Doris Harris Autographs but no longer is she overgolfed and underdressed. She was delighted to receive hundreds of postcards from Elena Doty Angus to add to her collection. Nate golfs regularly and is in his 19th year as Handicap Chairman at Lakeside Golf Club.

Mary Bess Roberts Waynick, Virginia, says that all is well and that she has had a splendid two years since '83. Easter '85 she was with her niece, Natalie Susan Sheriff '66 and her family in Newport News.

Adah Barber Wilson, and her husband, Bob, will be travelling north on the east coast this summer, to visit their three daughters who all live along that line (Northern Va, Baltimore and Darien, CT.). A new grandchild was expected in Dumfries, VA, around the middle of June.

Virginia Vesey Woodward, Virginia, was happy to have the opportunity to meet our President, Nenah Fry, at a party at Williamsburg Lodge, February 17th '85. Jane Diddy Williams '55, niece of Marge Burford Crenshaw was at the party.

Frances Powell Zoppa is still as involved and active as she was in college days. "I just pray that my life style will last!" Her eldest grandson will be married in New York this June.

Editor's note: Anna Lawrence (Lollie) Redfern Ferguson has resigned as Class Secretary. The following was received in the Alumnae Office.

Mary C. Turnbull Barfield, Jacksonville, FL, lost her husband in February, we are sad to report.

Muriel Barrows Neall, who is happily retired in Marion, MA, enjoyed a long telephone chat with Connie Currie Fleming.

Agnes Crawford Bates, Gloucester, VA, reports that her son, Bill, Jr., was married in August, '83, to Katherine Vansant of Harrodsburg, KY. Agnes's daughter, Margie Marley, who has a 10-year-old son, Jeffrey, is a claims adjuster for All State in Raleigh, NC. In February, '84, Agnes's mother died.

Peggy Cruikshank Dyer and her husband spend November through April each year on Siesta Key, FL, and the other 6 months in Marion, MA. In Florida, they see a lot of Beda Carlson Calhoun and they are joined each spring by Nancy Nalle Genung and her husband, Al. Tennis, boating, bridge, church-work and needlepoint are just some of their many activities.

Sara Kirkpatrick Fearing, and her husband, Jack, live in Leesburg, VA, though they don't spend much time there. Last August they stayed in Cambridge, England, visiting the great houses and gardens. Sara attended a house party in Portugal in October, and then they sailed for the winter to the Bahamas where they were visited by a son and grandson from Tucson and a daughter and son-in-law from Chevy Chase. "Now, sighs Sara, "our sailing days are over."

Marie Walker Gregory, Richmond, VA, has moved to a condominium and reports with great delight that she is at long last a grandmother. Tolley Griffith Gregory was born Jan. 28, '85 — "a lovely little girl, plump like her grandmother." Marie is still the Treasurer of The Va. branch of The National Society of Colonial Dames of America, and joined one of their tours to England and Scotland last year.

Natalie Hopkins Griggs, who has 10 grandchildren, still keeps a wicker shop in New London, NH, in the summers. Izzy Dimstead Haynes and she call each other every Christmas.

Margaret Merritt Haskell, Mentor, OH, was hoping to have moved, by mid-June, into a one-story house they were building themselves; they had to sell their big house and grounds because of Margaret's arthritis.

Faith M. Gort Herpers, Seattle, WA, regretfully reported that Peggy Minder Davis died last summer. We send our sympathy too to Barbara Jarvis Thomas whose husband, Robert McKee Thomas, died of cancer in July, '84.

Polly Lambeth Blackwell and her husband, Winfield, are still travelling, working, visiting their children and 9 grandchildren — "doing all the things we've always done — it just takes us longer to do them now!"

Elizabeth Lee McPhail has moved, after 35 years, into a condo/town house. Simplified living! Elizabeth enjoys being fund agent for the class — it keeps her in touch with her classmates and the college.

"Sweet Briar gave so much to me, and still means so much to me," wrote Margaret Sandidge Mason Miller, from Annapolis, MD.

Ellen Lee Snodgrass Park, Alexandria, VA, went to Dallas when the Sweet Briar Board of Overseers met there in September, '84, and enjoyed seeing many old friends. She had lunch with Jackie Bond Wood and Julia Sadler de Coligny, visited with Ann and Bernie Reams, and said that the Dallas alumnae could not have been more hospitable. Ellen is still enjoying her work in the U.S. Attorney's office. She has two grandchildren in college, one ready to enter college and a fourth who is one year old. She and Jackie Nicholson of Tappahannock, VA, get together occasionally.

Griselda Deringer Plater, Kintnersville, PA, reports that doctors have discovered that she has a serious internal disease, but she is feeling optimistic after her first chemotherapy treatment. Their daughter, Stefania, in New Haven, has a darling little girl.

Dorothy Prout Gorusch, Atlantic Highlands, NJ, was looking forward to two grandchildren in 1985. Her son Steve, a technical director with CBS and his wife, Patti, an associate producer also with CBS, were expecting a baby; so too were her daughter, Laurie and husband, who live in Sea Bright on the river and keep their boat moored conveniently outside their front door. Dorothy is still gardening, freezing the harvest, playing tennis — and job-hunting.

We were very sorry to hear that Jessie Rose Harvin, Henderson, NC, lost her husband last year and we hope that she has recovered from a knee operation.

Elizabeth Sicard Sita, has found lots of alumnae in Naples, FL. Her next-door neighbor is Eleanor Arp, '24 and her bridge partners are Gracey Luckett Bradley and Boots Vanderbilt Crampton. Their rector's daughter, Susan Adger Mann, is a student at Sweet Briar now.

Harriette Dyer Sorenson, who lives in Atlantic Highlands, NJ, near her three married children, now has six grandchildren. She is in the Garden Club and also enjoys playing tennis, visiting New York and travelling.

The D'Donnells have many family visitors in Florida in the winter-enjoying the warmth. Wilma Cavett Bird is teaching Latin at a private school near Oklahoma City. Margaret Craighill Price and Karl went downhill skiing again out west, and she is going to Chestnut Hill, PA to help with a daughter's new baby while the proud father, a doctor, lectures in Sweden. Ellie Damgaard Firth and Swede are turning over their real estate business to their broker daughters. This took political savvy. Betty Doucett Neill and John, after suffering through the cold in Southern Pines, headed for Paris, Scotland and England until they had to return because of John's collapsed back. Pi Dowling Von Wellsheim and Al have 10 children and 12 "grands" scattered even to Morocco. She claims to be a "little tired." Louise Duff Maverick and Albert have enjoyed two Sweet Briar trips, Spain and France, and found them beautifully planned. They enjoy living in booming Houston, TX. Julie Fisher Firman and Win are moving from Norfolk City to Skidaway Island, 2 Goose Quill Lane, Savannah, GA. She and her daughter plan to go back and forth to New York City for workshops on mother/daughter relationships.

Lillian Fowlkes Taylor and Tyler never get off the road, traveling extensively on Eastern's "Get-Up-and-Go" trips.

Marie Gaffney Barry and Ted are covering the West, especially "The Boulders," catching up with SB friends.

Helen Gwinn Wallace and John live in Leesburg, Va. and see "Craigie" and Karl. The Wallaces are retiring and building a house in FL. "Butch" Gurney Betz and John visited their son in England, taking in Scotland and Wales. John is now retired and so they spend time with Decca Gilmer Frackelton and Bob on the golf course and lakes in the Adirondacks.

"Butch" is so happy and proud to have a niece at SB, Nancy Bucky. Helen Hamilton Bixby lost her second husband and we all extend our deepest sympathy. She has a Vero Beach apartment and is expecting a visit there from Anne Teal Carrington and Dicky and Margaret Anderton Dortch and Lawrence.

Emory Hill Rex and Dan are enjoying retirement but he still teaches calculus and higher math in Texas while Emory is busy with library and service work. Nell Hudgens Lewis is expecting a great-grandchild. Louise Kirk Edwards, in between trips to Europe, had surgery in March and British visitors in April. She had a big S.B. luncheon on Sweet Briar Day in Tallahassee. Helen Ann Littleton White and Logan are settling in a new house in Southport, PA, where she is painting and doing aerobics.

Anita Loving Lewis and Bill lost a son to leukemia. We all send our love to her, a wonderful alumna, who will be Finance Chairman of the Alumnae Executive Board. She and "Douc" roomed together in Garden Cottage when they were on campus for the Board meetings in March. Piney Martin Patterson, while recovering from an eye operation in Chestnut Hill, PA, saw Eugie Burnett '42 and Emmy Lou Phillips Lottmeyer. "Piney" has a Va Beach house across from celebrities, one of whom may be Mohammed Ali! Joan Meacham Gay is still running her Christmas tree farm in Northborough, MA. Barbara Nevins Young and Ralph have moved to San Antonio, TX, where they enjoy golf. Emily Peyton Higgins, who I see in Nantucket, in a size 6 and looks like a model. I talked to Ann Pickard McCarry in Lookout Mt., TN, where she and Tom have retired — they miss California, Patt Potter Duncan, who looks marvelous, visited here in New Canaan. Jean Ruggles Hall and Hunt wintered in Naples, FL and ran into Charlie Oavenport Tuttle on their boat.

Mary Scully Olney and Jim are loving retirement outside Savannah. Pat Sorenson Ackard, writing from Naples, FL, has traveled in England, Wales, Scotland, Scandinavia and even Israel. Virginia Smith is now living in CA studying microbiology, physiology and anatomy, preparing to be a registered nurse. Barbara Thompson Parker and Gardiner are going to France and England to celebrate retirement. Marion Webb Shaw won a reward for selling the most real estate (in Bedford, NY) — a barge trip in France.

Beanie Whitaker Bartel lost her husband last year but is keeping busy traveling on SB trips abroad. Mimi Worthington Foster has cruised to Mexico and on to Russia. Peg Tomlin Graves writes of enjoying forums and committee meetings and visiting grandchildren living close by. Joan Devore Roth volunteers at the Cincinnati art museum, heading the book department. Barbara Holman Whitcomb is looking forward to her yearly trip — this time to Spain and France. Elizabeth Hudson Boba finds working in the Classics dept. as administrative assistant and undergraduate advisor at the U. of Washington very satisfying. Ethel James Milburn and Ken are living in England since he retired from U.K. Government.

Last fall, Margaret Stuart Wilson Dickey and Ken toured Germany enjoying the Black Forest and the new wine in the Moselle Valley. She is successfully raising huge funds for "Battered Women's Shelters" in Texarkana — matching a grant from Temple U. She will share with us some choice stories on forty-fifth reunions.

Betty Blount Kempson keeps busy knitting and crocheting for their five granddaughters and five grandsons. Betty's son, who lives in Asheville, NC, has two daughters who want to go to Sweet Briar. Her oldest daughter teaches school in Pacific Grove, CA and has a 16-year-old son, Lane. Daughter #2 lives in Harrisonburg, VA with her lawyer husband and four children and daughter #3, with her husband and three children, lives about 20 miles from Betty and Kemp.

On a trip through Florida this February, Joan Myers Cole and her husband, Basil, saw Anne Burrough O'Connor and John in Naples, and stayed with Lucy Parton Miller and her husband Laymon, in Punta Gorda. Among the guests that Lucy had over were Helen Gwinn Wallace and her husband, John.

Martha Jean Brooks Miller is still enjoying gardening and golf and selling fine homes in southwest Charlotte, NC. Her husband, Tommy, is suffering with emphysema but still goes to his law office for a half day each day. Louise Lembeck Reydel and Charlie had a nice visit with Doris Huner Swiech and Stan on their way north from Tequesta, FL to Chatham, MA. Louise's fourth child, Stephen, was married in May in Ipswich, MA.

Lucy Parton Miller and Laymon travelled to Hawaii and Europe and Laymon continued his lecture tours on this continent. While they were giving a course in Toronto, their Florida house was damaged by fire; it took 10 months to repair but many unexpected kindnesses helped them through the ordeal.

"Yours truly" asks you to dig deep for the Alumnae Fund and plan for our big reunion next year.

Secretary

Mary Haskins King (Mrs. Mary H.), 501 Kimberly Dr., Greensboro, NC 27408

Fund Agent

Julia Mills Jacobsen (Mrs. Lawrence), 4416 Edmunds St. N.W., Washington, D.C. 20007

These notes are being written before our big reunion.

Mary Herbert Taylor has been Chairman of raising money and restoring formal gardens for the Caroliniana Society at U. of SC. The opening and dedication of the gardens falls on May 24th, and after years of work Mary doesn't want to miss the festivities, so won't be able to come to reunion. Neither will Jane McJunkin Nelson as one of Oscar's daughters is being married in Lewisburg, WV on the 25th.

Edie Page Gill Breakall, Stan and two sons flew in for the day, Dec. '84, to attend the 40th wedding anniversary party given for Mary Kathryn Frye Hemphill and Sam at their Montezuma, NC mountain home by their four children and spouses. Perk Traugott Brown continues to teach second graders in Va. Beach. Her three grandsons and granddaughter live nearby, so she babysits when it's convenient. Betty Healy Cutler and Gordon moved from Hampton, VA to Newport News, VA after twenty-four years in the same house. Older son Gordon and Jane had their first child, a daughter, in July giving Betty a total of two grandchildren. Steve Nicolson McIlvaine and husband bought a Bristol 34 and sailed it up to Maine and back making many fun stops and visits en route. Later they sailed with English friends for three weeks off the coast of Turkey. Their son is a junior at UVA and their daughter a sophomore at Lewis and Clark in Portland, OR.

Margaret Swann Norris recently opened an office in Nashville for the private practice of psychiatry. She shares a secretary and waiting room with four other women psychiatrists. Three of their four children live in Nashville as do their two granddaughters. Carol Cox MacKinnon's daughter, Lee, was married in September to a fellow classmate at Williams, Bill Cutler. He begins medical school in Worcester this fall. Lee has her M. Ed. from Harvard and works in Boston with the Child Care Resource Center as a consultant in their corporate division — setting up day care facilities. Son Jock, his wife and two children are in Tuxedo Park, NY. He is a partner in a securities law firm in NYC. Husband John is retired and Carol is teaching and directing alumnae activities at St. Agnes.

Antoinette LeBris Maynard continues working at the Library of Congress as a cataloger in Romance Languages. After so many years abroad they love living in Washington. Son, Philip, a marine, is stationed in California. Older daughter Libby, an artist, lives in northern California. Younger daughter Carol, husband and one-year-old daughter move to Bremerton, WA in July.

Edith Mattison is no longer Mrs. Gerald Henderson; she was divorced and remarried in 1979 to Charles F. Gieg. Now, in addition to the five children and six grandchildren from her first marriage, she has Charley's four children and four grandchildren — a large family! Edith is active in her church, and is a Hospice volunteer and director of a two-county Community Action Program. She swims, sails, jogs, hikes, and cross-country skis in that most beautiful part of the world — Hancock, Maine.

Anne Waddell Garth, Tampa, FL, will not be able to come to reunion because their youngest son, John Alexander, is graduating with an M.B.A. from the Wharton School at the University of Pennsylvania at the same time. Before attending the graduation, the Garths plan to visit their pianist daughter, Eliza, in New York. Son Thomas, Jr., who lives in Charlottesville, has two daughters, so Anne is hoping she'll have a grandchild at Sweet Briar. She keeps in touch with Edie Page Gill Breakall of Roanoke, VA.

Suzanne Thomason Atkinson, a painter and picture-framer in Bartlesville, OK, plans to come to reunion a few days early so that she can do some painting and sketching on campus. Suzanne says that Sweet Briar set her values and was a bigger influence on her than the Univ. of Texas, from which she actually got her degree.

I am sad to report that Virginia Berrier, who lived in the Washington, D.C. area, died in April.

Replies to the questionnaire sent to our class have been interesting and varied. All grandchildren are special and some of our classmates are seasoned travellers. Zulich Reuter and Don go to Vail, CO every winter to ski. Cappy Price Bass and Bruce go to Europe often and recently bought a house in Delray, FL. Hedy Edwards Oavenport and Joe go to Ponte Vedra, FL as often as possible. She and Joe, Hilda Hude Chapin and Ed, Sarah Temple Moore and Tom will attend reunion, Sarah for the first time. Betty Avery Duff (Ave) is also coming from Chattanooga and Tutti Hall Peckham from Asheville.

Dale Bogert Baldwin of Savannah and Joan Stover Kemper of Pasadena, CA are making plans to be there. Sally Leffen Macfarlane, Alice Nicolson McLivaine, Martha Holton Glesser, Anne Dickson Jordan, Jeanne Skerry Tepe and Lile Tucker Bell, don't want to miss reunion.

Alice Gearhart Stinson and Bill, now living in Whispering Pines, NC; Ellen Gilliam Perry and Marvin, residents of Charlottesville; Mary Kathryn Frye Hemphill and Sam; Edie Page Gill Breakall and Stan; Julia Mills Jacobsen and Lawrence will add to our fun.

Mia Hecht Owens of Atlanta wrote that she enjoyed her two years at SBC. She then went to three other colleges including Ga. State and received her B.A. in '70. Jean Ridler Fahrenbach has three years more before retiring as Library Director at Tomkins Cove, NY Public Library. Their married daughter is an IBM engineer. Mary, 23, is a 2nd year medical student at Mt. Sinai, NYC. Robert is finishing his first year at Purdue U.

Betty Gray Gray, widowed, has three daughters, two sons-in-law and three grandchildren. She won't make reunion from Chesterland, OH, as May is a busy time in her job in Special Ed. Helen Davis Wohler's older son married an Episcopal priest last summer at Harvard Divinity Episcopal School Chapel. Younger son is a bicycle messenger in NYC and had another feature article written about him. Their daughter continues to work in NYC with Zen Community's Greyston Bakery Gourmet Baked Foods. The Wohlers' most recent trip was to Kenya and soon they go to Bermuda and Germany.

Eugenia Seaman Spear (Deem), married forty years, has always been active along with her husband in church work, especially music. She helped found Murrysville, PA Meals on Wheels and has been active for fourteen years with that program. In 1980 she was awarded the Woman of the Year award by the Murrysville chapter of AAUW. Bob is a director of technology at Alcoa and recently was named winner of the 1985 Fray Award for Technical Excellence. He is president of the Westmoreland Symphony Orchestra Society and choir director of their church where both are elders. Son Lee is artistic director of Chautauqua County — a new concept in the arts. He directs several music groups in the area, including the Erie Philharmonic Orchestra chorus. His wife is a singer and they live in Jamestown, NY. Cary Anne, their daughter, is an editor for the Congressional Research Service of the Library of Congress. Her main love is the theatre and she is an actress of some note in the D.C. area. She and her husband live in Falls Church, VA.

Ann McLean Loomie (Slug), married to Gil since 1946, has five grandchildren. She taught deaf and blind children until 1978. She designs and makes toys and dolls for a California shop; works with guide dogs and timid owners; raises Yorkies; and, she is writing a braille cook book!! She cannot come from Weatogue, CT for our 40th, sorry to write.

Jodie Morgan Hartman has agreed to room with me one more time. Dale Sayler Morgan sent wonderful pictures but will be in Memphis for her granddaughter Dale's high school graduation. Anne Macfarlane Clark will come from Tampa, and Mary Symes Anderson and daughter will team up with Zu.

Another classmate will be class secretary for the next five years... Please write notes when you mail your gifts in so that all of us will hear about you and your activities. Thanks for sending reunion questionnaires back — and many thanks for those who enclosed pictures.

Note written after reunion. Reunion was great fun with a good turnout and several spouses attending. Helen Davis Wohlers is class secretary for the next five years and Anna Mary (Chickie) Chidester Heywood will be fund agent. Ann Dickson Jordan is our president. Julie Mills Jacobsen as Reunion Chairman made us proud. Accolades to Peggy Jones Wyllie and Ellen Gilliam Perry, Reunion Gifts Committee Co-chairmen, for our gift was $100,000!

Class of '49, you are something else with your correspondence cards and it is fun hearing from you all. I tried to prevail (unsuccessfully) upon my cousin, our classmate, and the editor of the SB Alumnae Magazine to allot this whole issue to us. Even with so many of you not reporting in (and sorely missed) condensation is tough!

Doreen Davis Gove's card expresses the way it is now for most of us. "Can hardly condense 35 years into one post card; so will discuss only present doings. As soon as our three daughters finished their academic studies, my husband, Bob, and I started to travel, with Greece and China being our favorite trips. Bob and I keep busy in Cincinnati with 350 roses, both of us being National Accredited Rose Judges, and I am a National Council Flower Show Judge as well. My husband retired this year. Life is full of changes!"

And that is what I am hearing from you all. Thirty six years after the fact of 1949, we are not yet sitting back to the next generation, but pointing the way.

Kay Bryan Taylor's eight children will have completed their "paper chases" with Pricey's graduation from UNC law school in May. With the other children scattered along the east coast. Kay decided that, in order to keep up with the latest action, "a small New York apartment was preferable as a second home to a beach house with me as inn keeper."

Dot Bottom Duffy is now a full-time editor of the Daily Press and the Times Herald in Newport News, VA. Dot is still working on the longest-running MA in history, on 16th century English history, at Columbia. In conjunction with this degree, she plans to go to England in April for research at the Bodleian and to see a newly-built Godspeer set out under sail-power only, along the same route the original took to Jamestown in 1606-07. Her husband, John, will be one of 10 recipients of the NY Governor's award for the Arts; partly, for his music on the TV series, Heritage, and partly for the program he founded and now runs, Meet the Composer.

Mary Virginia Grigsby Mallett and Gordon, leaving three children in the U.S. of A — daughter Barbara, an organic chemist with Eli Lilly, son Ed, in first year of optometry, and son Steve, with a degree in electronic technology — plan to travel in Europe this spring, visiting son Bill and his family en route.

Patsy Davin Robinson's three sons live nearby in Birmingham, MI, and daughter Davin will receive a degree in public policy from the graduate school of Univ. of Chicago in June.

Preston Hodges Hill and Gene have landed in the grandparent set with the birth of David to Gene III and wife, Joan. Their daughter, Margaret, who has just finished her M.B.A. will be married in the fall.

Judy Easley Mak's daughter, Holly, after presenting the Meks with their first grandchild, plans to return to her job at the Abu Dhabi Bank in January '85.

Mary Fran Brown Ballard who has a part-time law practice, and husband Don, who is travelling for Arco Chemical to southeast Asia these days, plan to travel together to Virginia in the spring on genealogical pursuits. Our own Jean Taylor has been selected as the first woman to serve on a Dept. of Defense "Defense Science Board" summer study for 2 weeks at Colorado Springs, and has also been selected with 21 others to spend 2 weeks in China on a citizen ambassadors' trip to discuss operations research with counterparts in Beijing, Xian, Nanjing, and Canton. Jean had a mini-reunion in April with Sally Legg De Martine, (who, with her husband, is happily retired in Sarasota, FL, studying portrait painting and wishing she'd started years earlier), Nancy Lake, Jackie Tappen Kern, Debbie Carroll Ziegler, and Carolyn Cannaday Evans at Carolyn's Montreat, NC summer place. Carolyn's daughter, Grace Read, is to be married in June to Jay Butler, a young lawyer in Raleigh. Weather permitting, there will be a garden wedding and breakfast.

Mary Louis (and she is that in Charleston) Stevens Webb and Rutledge have recently enjoyed watching the TV mini-series North-South being filmed in Charleston. Their son, Rutledge, is working and studying in Charleston, and their lawyer daughter, Mary, lives in Columbia, S.C. where she has been assistant to the first black judge ever appointed to the State Supreme Court.

Nancy Jones Worcester has spent the last few months dis-establishing from year-round living at Grosse Pointe, MI to Walloon Island, MI, in summer, and Siesta Key, Sarasota, FL, in the winter. Her daughter Kathy and family are still in Grosse Pointe, son John in Denver with Mutual of New York, and son Peter in New York with Chemical Bank.

Larry Lawrence Bower's move to Midland, TX was "a delight in every way," as she loves the community and her school, Trinity. Lots of art shows and teaching add up to a good year for Betsy Dershuck Gay, and she and Frank plan a trip to Paris in the spring.

Peggy Quynn Maples writes that her children all seem happy and she and Sam are fortunate to be able to see them all fairly frequently.

Fritzie Duncombe Millard is starting work for Brooks Brothers soon — "more exciting than that little preppy store, and more men, too!" Her daughter, Susan, has just finished a new "demo" record and is making the rounds to get backing for an L.P. Carter (other daughter) is in charge of graphic design and marketing at First Interstate Bank of California, and son Brook is a sophomore at Denver University. SBC was represented by Lindsay Coon Robinson at the inauguration of the fourth president of Wilkes College, Wilkes-Barre, PA. With four wonderful children-in-law, June Eager Finney and Bill have a very warm (and large) family life, in the midst of which June has found time to work on a YWCA campaign for $1.2 million in Baltimore.

Refreshing news of a bride in our class comes with the announcement of the wedding of Evelyn Kagey Lee to Col. Arthur C. Taylor, both of Lexington, VA on March 13, 1985.

Vidmer Megginson Downing and George celebrated their fifth wedding anniversary by travelling to Kenya, Paris, and Switzerland, returning to Mobile, Ala. where George's soft drink business and Vidmer's interior decorating one keep them busy.

Katie Coxe Reynolds is jumping from the insurance world into starting her own Mexican import business, and from having two college drop-outs back into the tuition scene with their happy return to academics.

Our editor, Bunny Barnett Brown, is retiring from this position as of December, 1985 to devote herself full-time, it would seem, to the birthing and raising of grandchildren (now numbering six), and running around the world with Walter, her husband.

The nimble fingers of Kitty Hart Belew wrote four pages on a yellow legal pad, the only available paper in her class in business administration — at the Park School for pregnant students. That last phrase is more than sufficient news of interest to her 57-year-old class mates. However, she had other reports on '49ers "comings and goings". Liz Hancock Fritschie, having herself moved from Cleveland to Chicago this year, came to Richmond to help her daughter, Mary Wayne, the newly-appointed Director for Education for the Virginia Museum, move into her new quarters. At that time (October) Kitty was in the hospital encased in a hip-to-ankle cast for an operation for arthritis. The cast came off Christmas Eve and, by the end of January, Kitty hosted a luncheon for Preston Hill who was passing through Richmond en route to Petersburg. The guests of this affair all included comments on their cards about the fun they had that day as well as the following items. Marie Musgrove McCrone and Richard continue to enjoy their travelling and their daily Bible readings, and Bible classes are top priority. Caroline Casey McGehee's article for this magazine on miniature books has been published in an Hungarian magazine — in Hungarian. Your secretary also read the article in Southern Accents in which Caroline was noted as one of the leaders in her field, "owning a fabled collection."

Ann Doar Jones is revelling in the birth of a grandson — brother to other grandchild (daughter), both presenting only one problem — living too far away in Massachusetts.

Libby Trueheart Harris and Hiter had a delightful reception for their son Hiter III and his new bride last November. The Harris' twin daughters are changing locales — with Whiz, after five years in NYC, coming back to Richmond, and with Mary's accepting a fellowship in gastro-enterology at Johns Hopkins for July 1986.

Posey Bryan, Anne Fiery and Dick Bryan's youngest, who will graduate from Case Western Reserve in law this spring, is engaged to be married and will go to practice law with her husband in Arizona. Kitty had lunch with "Foamie" and Sue Corning Mann in June, at Anne's old home in Mendon, MA. Sue had married in the chapel there just two weeks before. Kitty also stayed with Pat Brown Boyer in Pomfret Center, CT during this visit to New England for daughter Lindsay's graduation from the Harvard B. School. Lindsay will work for Drexel, Burnham, & Lambert investment bankers in NYC.

Our class sculptress, Ann Henderson Bannard, is still "pounding away", mostly commissions, which must be gratifying. One of her unusual pieces is a large red bull's head for the office of the Chicago Bull's basketball team. Polly Plummer Mackie visited Ann in Tucson and they had a wonderful time. The Bannards have one son in Tucson, looking at TV broadcasting as a career, and one son and one daughter in Boston "blowing their horns;" though Boston son is close to a career switch from music to law.

Ellen Ramsey Clark's son Ken's wedding in Raleigh, N.C. had Polly Plummer Mackie, Ruthie Garrett Preucel, Carter Van Deventer Slatery and husband Herbert, as well as the Slatery's son Charles and his wife, on hand for the occasion and Margaret Towers Talman said "it was a first-class affair." Margaret and Polly will be leaving for a 3-week tour of Russia when Ellen's daughter, Ellen, gets married in Dallas, in April, but the Slaterys will be there, combining this wedding with a trip to visit their son, Hugh, in Fort Worth. Carter and Herbert were at their Hilton Head place, while Ruthie Preucel Garrett was staying at their home in Knoxville. Ellen's son, Marshall is living and working in New York, son, Ramsay, doing same in Memphis, and daughter Allison, is a freshman at UVA. After three years of night-school classes, Alice Dahm Crane is now a paralegal in the law firm in Clayton, MD where she had worked for 11½ years, and is enjoying it thoroughly. Alice also enjoys growing daylilies in her garden, and often thinks of Marie, Betsy and Libby. She has just finished celebrating her 40th reunion at Mary Institute in Clayton.

Your secretary was "mother of the bride" again in December when daughter, Ellen, married a Memphis gentleman, and feels reasonably sure that she will be mother of a U.Va. graduate in two weeks. In between momentous occasions, I "flower" around Virginia. Being "top-blossom" of my garden club is fun and I am constantly running into SBC'ers.

"Second-hand Rose" (when it comes to horse's mouth news) Mackie and I earnestly solicit your involvement with the greatest demographic, sociological questionnaire in SBC history, when we send it out in only three years for reunion. Our one firm question for it so far is, "Who has emptied the garbage most in your home?" Please follow suit with suggestions. The answers will be compiled scientifically and should be fascinating.

In the meantime, please remember Marie McCrone and the Annual Fund.

I am sorry the news is sparse this time but very few of you answered my plea. Hope we can do better next time.

There was a mini reunion in Richmond the end of March on the occasion of the wedding of Kitty Guerrant Fields and Lou's daughter, Frances. It was a beautiful wedding and a fun and festive weekend for those of us who were able to attend. Now that the wedding is over, Kitty plans to spend her time decorating their new condominium in Alexandria and Lou will again be a Washington lawyer. They have ended their four years of jettisoning between Geneva, New York and Washington while Lou was Ambassador to the Committee on Disarmament. He was received by the President in December and congratulated for his dedication to the cause of world peace.

We enjoyed seeing M.A. Mellon Root and John who had a wedding of their own last October in Dallas when their son, Randy, married Leslie Wright, an SBC girl.

Another SBC daughter-in-law is Betsy Bill who married Jock Liles, son of Jane Perry Liles and George on September 30th. Their daughter, Perry, will graduate from Sweet Briar in May.

May will be a busy time for Maggie Graves McClung and David whose daughter, Fran, will be married then.

Catharine Munds Storek is having a busy spring and summer too, preparing for her daughter's wedding in Tuscon, AZ. Dolly Hartman will be there and the Storeks are hoping the Czechoslovakian government will allow Ben's brother and sister-in-law to attend.

While on the subject of weddings, Dale Hutter Harris acted in a dual role last December at her daughter, Jinna's wedding. She was not only mother of the bride but she also performed the ceremony. What a wonderful experience. For those who do not know, Dale was appointed Judge of the Family Court in Lynchburg. Our next Sandra Day O'Connor.

It was also fun to see Dolly Wallace Hartman and Jack, Lynne Kerwin Byron and Jamie, Ann King Dietrich and Bo. Lynne and Jamie are enjoying their life in Shepherdstown, W.Va. where they have a farm and raise horses. Even gave Sweet Briar a horse last year. They will have a son graduate from VMI in May.

Another May graduate is Joan Brophy Tyree and Tom's son, Billy, who will graduate from Dartmouth. Joan and Tom are busy remodeling Joan's family home in Pawling and plan to move there from Albany in another year.

Katzy Bailey Nager and CJ were in Madrid last December while CJ was working on a radar installation. They stopped by New York on their way home and while here CJ had a surprise birthday party for Katzy. Their oldest boy, Bailey, is living at home and attending UCLA Law School. Their son, George attends college in southern California but took some time off to enjoy Hawaii and their youngest son, Dwight, is thoroughly enjoying Yale.

Sallie Gayle Beck was with us for a weekend last summer. Her daughter, Gayle, is living in Houston and doing research and teaching at the University. Sallie still enjoys her work as a manufacturer's rep for several jewelry firms.

Sug Cantey Patton writes that she has a new grandson born to her son, Stuart, and daughter-in-law, Susan a year ago. Her daughter, Leila, will be married in August.

Jane Yoe Duggan's daughter, Wendi Wood, Class of '81 was married two years ago to Dr. Neal Thomas. Her other daughter, Randi, graduated from the University of Georgia and then left to work in Great Britain and Ireland.

Isabel Grayson Parish is still working for Hav as Office Manager but would much prefer to be at home smocking dresses for her three grand babies. She and Hav travel as often as their medical practice allows and she sees Ginny Dunlap Shelton on trips to Atlanta.

Eleanor Johnson Ashby had a glorious month in England and two weeks in France a year ago. One of her daughters, Stuart, was married a year ago and her son, Linden, starred in an off-Broadway production.

Kirk Tucker Clarkson writes that she and Jack and Polly Sloan Shoemaker and Jim took a sailing trip to Florida and were mentioned in the magazine, "Cruising World" Nov. '84.

Nan O'Keefe and Cinnie Moorhead McNair will be here in May for a week visiting Cinnie's son, David, and also her mother in CT. Cinnie and Norm are still enjoying their life in San Antonio but do miss being closer to their children and especially their two grandchildren.

Nan sent me an article that appeared in Business First, Louisville, KY last November about Edie Norman Wombwell. Edie and another gal have started a business called The Rinky Dink Ink, Co. which operates out of a rented pushcart selling more than 150 kinds of rubber stamps from teddy bears to catchy sayings. The business has been so successful that Edie has given up all of her outside activities. We hope Edie will be as successful raising money from our class. Please support her efforts.

Sue Allison Bercaw has changed companies and is now a computer consultant for American Management Systems. She and Bill went back to the Caribbean in February to sail and visit old friends in Puerto Rico, where Sue grew up.

Patti Tighe Walden has completed her 26th year of teaching (19 in kindergarten) and still loves her job. Son Barry enters Villanova this fall and Emily will be a H.S. senior. Over the summer, Patti is planning to go to California to visit daughter Liz, who is head chef at Deetgen's Big Sur Inn. Patti says she treasures her SB years and feels a wonderful serenity in her life.

Nan Locke Rosa still loves her work as a travel agent. She and Frank went to Jamaica in the fall of '84, and to San Francisco for a week in June, but she tells us the work is not all glamorous trips.

This has been both a sad and happy year for us. We greatly miss my sister, Marie-Louise, who died in February after a short illness but we look forward with pride to our son, David's graduation from UVA and his entrance into the Marine Corps as a 2nd Lieutenant.

That's all the news for now — please send your news and that of others by May 1, in time for the next Class Notes.

You may have noticed on page 27 of the spring issue a list of classmates whose addresses the alumnae office did not have. I will repeat just the (Maiden) last names so you can check the list again: Ault, Ballard, Bish, Bradley, Cornwell, Ellisor, Hedlund, Henry, Inglis, Peay, Ritter, Russell, Ryan, Ann Scott, Sherer, Vermooten, and Wallace. If you have an address or phone number, please help us out.

For some folks I have new addresses from the Alumnae Office, but no other news. Baba Conway Gwin was in Washington, DC for a while, but now is back in Oxford, MS, at a new address from before. Sandra Cowen McElwaine is at a different street address in Washington, DC. Joan Harjes Sollitt moved from Edgewater, MD, to Annapolis, MD. Anne Melton Kimzey has a new street address in Lookout Mountain, TN. Anne Richardson Worthy is now in Hilton Head, SC, instead of Martinsville, VA, and my sophomore roomie, Barbara Tetzlaff, went from Albany, CA, to San Francisco. Carolyn Westfall Monger moved from Scarsdale, NY, to Stamford, CT.

Bari Baker Hart writes that she is back in Athens, TX, now that Heather is off to Emory U. in Atlanta (and pres. of her pledge class). Baker was a junior at Texas A&M, working as a busboy and determined to be the restaurant manager in one year! Lindsay graduated and is on his own in Austin working for the Railroad Commission. Bari's doing educational and psychological testing part time for a local junior college. She's also started a local Community Concert Series.

Jane Best Wehland, Elkridge, MD, says Jane Lee was to graduate in May from UVA Engineering and wanted to work on the West Coast, maybe San Francisco. Charles was finishing his second year at NYU Law School and would be working in Dallas this summer, where Jane was hoping to visit him and maybe see Bari!

Jane Campbell was married Nov. 10, 1984 to John Englert in a ceremony performed by her father, with their various kids as attendants, acolyte, etc. John is the guidance counselor at the school where Jane teaches, and Jane acquired six new grown kids and several instant grandchildren. Her own Anne was to give her senior voice recital at Chatham Col. in April, graduate in May, and maybe teach in Pittsburgh at a school Jane's father founded 40 years ago! Tom has a computer job with Electronic Data Systems and was currently assigned to Delco in Kokomo, IN. Steve was teaching at St. Luke's in Greenwich Village in Manhattan, running a fencing clinic there, and also running a camp he started in WV in the summer.

Chips Chao Pai and David have moved to a different house in Livingston, NJ. They have one son at Cornell and one at Duke. Chips was promoted to full professor starting this fall and will be on sabbatical learning about computers as they apply to the teaching of genetics. They are planning a trip to China in the fall. Chips has been to Dallas, Washington, and SBC for her duties as Alumnae Rep. on the Board of Overseers, and welcomes our comments and help. Several times, Chips has seen Virginia

Marks Paget who is working at the Kettering Foundation in Ohio, which is involved in such things as public awareness of government policies.

From Jacksonville, FL, Fran Childress Lee wrote that she was working very hard on their ranch and attending ranching schools when possible, but also traveling a great deal. They went to Switzerland one year for Christmas. Husband Louis is practicing law and ranching also. Louis Jr. practices law in Atlanta and is married; Ann is also married; Childress works in Jacksonville: son Val attends Randolph-Macon in Ashland, VA, where he has concluded mom went to a classy and beautiful college.

Diane Duffield Wood hopes to play golf this summer, has a wedding this fall (whose, she didn't say), still likes her job in an Oak Brook, IL, area bookstore, and is boosting our 30th.

Dot Duncan Hodges writes "Our president was in Charlotte, NC prior to Christmas — What an exciting lady! She had seen Helen Smith Davenport and Susan Elder Martin in Chattanooga for Susan's 30th anniversary and their mutual 50th Thanksgiving. "Two outstanding ladies and wonderful fun."

Ann Frasher Hudson and Edward live in Fort Worth, TX, but bought a house in Aspen last fall and she has been busy decorating. Daughter Frasher was to graduate in May from Hollins. Son Randolph graduated from W&L in '83 and is a geologist with an oil company in Fort Worth. Ann says they are "still immersed in museum work — Aspen, the Whitney, the National Gallery, and the Kimball and Contemporary Museums here!"

Babs Falge Openshaw is in Rockville, MD, and says the fledglings have almost flown, with some coming back to roost. Their #1 son and wife have bought a home in Annapolis; #2 son and wife have both been reassigned to the DC area after a two-year tour in California where he was chosen "officer of the year," and a seven-month tour in Spain; #3 son graduated from the Naval Academy May '84 and was assigned to a ship out of Mayport, FL; and #4 daughter was to graduate from UVA this spring. She and Babs had enjoyed a tour of England last summer.

Nancy Fink Leeds keeps busy with city life in NYC and traveling with Alan as much as possible. They loved a 2-week Baltic cruise last summer. Jennifer was going to Columbia grad school to study Public Health and Laura is at Rochester Inst. of Technology studying photography.

Jane Fitzgerald Treherne-Thomas still is busy with the Pittsburgh Symphony and the Civic Garden Center. She and Jeremy had an exciting trip in November '84 to New Zealand, including a five-day backpack trip through a rain forest, and a side trip to Australia seeing two of his cousins. In January Jeremy became president of a new company. They expected to be in Nantucket in July and have a trip to Scotland and England in August for Jane's 50th birthday.

Nancy Godwin Baldwin loves seeing Chips often for Board of Overseers meetings now. Nancy is hoping to have the biggest group ever back for our reunion! She's in Monroe, VA.

From Poway, CA, Dagmar Halmagyi Yon says she plans to enjoy her child-free years, not worry about empty nest syndrome and all that rot! Her son Joe and his wife plan to move to England until spring at least; her family lives there. Steven chose Brown U. in Providence, RI, for grad school because he liked their program in planetary geology. He had scholarship offers from all over the country. Laura was to marry on August 30, and then finish college and go on to grad school, too.

Lee Haskell Vest, George, and Sallie all went to Morocco for Christmas with Graham who was in the Peace Corps there until this summer. They had a rare time with visits to Fez, Rabat, Marrakech and Al Hoceima, and they met Graham's Dean. Sallie was to graduate in May from Franklin and Marshall, then get her Master's in geology at Oregon State.

Best make reservations if you hope to see Char Heuer de Serio in Bryn Mawr, PA. She and Fran were in Austria and Italy when Duffy tried to visit them, and were to leave May 1 for a month's trip to Japan, China, and Hong Kong.

Ninie Laing is trying for free advertising in this column for the bed and breakfast place she will open (when she finishes renovations) located an hour from Dulles airport and one and a half hours from Washington, "very convenient for a stop on the way to SBC!" Wouldn't that be fun en route to reunion! In mid-May she was going to England and France to continue work on her sabbatical project — a 14th century English Apocalypse manuscript. She also planned to photograph some gardens for a course in landscape architecture; as student or teacher, I'm not sure.

Patricia Lodewick wrote last year from Dallas, TX that she was to be in Geneva, Switzerland one day in summer '84 and wanted an address for Jane Rather Thiebaud, but I never heard whether they were able to get together.

Roberta Malone Henderson is in Glenview, KY, and sees Mary Anne Wilson sometimes when she visits en route from Chicago to Chattanooga. Roberta is busy with volunteer activities, most lately museums, Preservation alliance, and the presidential debate. Wallace (23) and Ian, Jr. (20) were a senior and sophomore at Kenyon; Malcolm (17) a junior at Exeter. They all went to Mexico over Christmas, and planned a trip to England and France in June. Roberta visited Sandra Stingily Simpson in Birmingham and "was thrilled to bring home...one of her beautiful paintings."

Nannette McBurney Crowdus, Lake Forest, IL, does a lot of traveling for pleasure with Bill, and also for her job as Director of Office Computer Products for the National Association of Realtors. Son Warren was to graduate from U. Chicago Law in June, and begin with Baker & McKenzie in Chicago. Carol graduated from Colgate the previous June and was selling investment securities in Chicago.

Anne McGrath Lederer divides her time between home in NYC and a small place in Warrenton, VA. Sloane was enjoying her second year at UVA and Andrew was doing well in sixth grade at St. David's.

From Virginia Beach, Betty Murden Michelson wrote that she was still practicing law in Tidewater and serving as an Advisory Director of the Bank of the Commonwealth. David is in college in Va. Beach. It has been a rather quiet life for them.

Lainey Newton Peters and Gregg are still in Pacific Palisades, CA. They visited Carroll Weitzel Rivers and Buist for dinner and to see Carroll's horses, then went on to Hilton Head and (what looks like) Kiawah Islands for golf and fun on the beach.

Page Phelps Coulter spends her time in Guilford, CT, writing, publishing her poetry, and getting a master's in literature at Wesleyan U. She and Bob celebrate their 25th in January.

In Charleston, SC, Jane Pinckney Hanahan is selling Carlisle clothes. Daughter Maria was working at the Church of St. Stephen and the Incarnation in Washington, and son Bill was in his third year at UVA.

Richmond, VA, is home for Jody Raines Brinkley, but they were planning a Va. Beach house party in June for four classmates and spouses. Jody loves going back often to SBC for her job as National Reunion Gifts Chairperson.

Diana Robin teaches in the Classics Dept. at UNM in Albuquerque, and recently had an article published in the Renaissance Quarterly. Husband Richard Holder has been at the National Science Foundation in Washington, D.C. since Aug. '84, so they have one of those commuter marriages. That is some big commute! Both kids have wedding plans, and Dee will be on sabbatical this fall at the Newberry Library in Chicago. This year on her spring break she went back to SBC for the first time in 20 years and found it as beautiful as ever, and Miss Umbreit as young and energetic as she was in 1957!

Carolyn Scott Arnold's husband Mark was being transferred to the Honolulu Star-Bulletin in mid-April for a permanent move and Scottie was excited about their plans to buy a house and retire there! Her daughter Susan was to be married in Washington, D.C. in May.

From Richmond, VA, Mary Anne Vandervoort Large wrote that she was still married to the same Bob and was still a housewife, "which news will hardly set your column on fire!" However she did send along a newspaper clipping about a pioneer in the clan. Their oldest girl, Anne, won early decision acceptance at the first class of undergraduate women at Washington and Lee, her dad's alma mater. Mary Anne still has SBC hopes for Elizabeth (14) and Mary Kathryn (13). Elizabeth sings, plays piano and basketball, and Mary Kathryn is in the bell choir. A mid-March trip to Disney World was fun for all, except that there was much brown in Florida where it's usually green.

Carroll Weitzel Rivers' fund flap says she's trying to become "the Monet of watercolorists" and has several prints out but prefers originals. (I still love the one I bought at reunion '82!) They spend summers at High Hampton, NC, but live in Charleston, SC. Buist is District Director for the Master of Foxhounds Assoc. of America, so they travel a lot with their horses, and gave clinics at SBC. Reinette was at Vanderbilt, and Buist III graduated from W&L in June '84, did the RDTG bit, and is a second lieutenant at Ft. Sill, due to finish Ranger school and go to Korea this September. They have sold their beautiful 1790 house (effective in two years!) and will build an easy-care Carolina cottage-type house overlooking a steeplechase course, with a studio for Carroll.

Anne Wilson Rowe writes from Fredericksburg, VA, that "fortunately I cannot top my last year's news of marrying off two daughters on consecutive Saturdays," but this January Jeanette (SBC '79) and her Australian husband became parents on their first anniversary. So Anne was off to Australia, with a visit en route to Kuala Lumpur, Malaysia, to visit Swee Lan Wong (SBC '80) whose brother was their son for 5 years. Anne and Joe's third daughter, Sallie, who did not go to SBC, is living in Amherst, VA, where her husband, Ray Roberts, is the Presbyterian minister. SBC's late chaplain was part of Ray's ordination ceremony. Their second daughter, Florence, had her SBC fifth reunion this summer. Last summer was spent in Britain where Josiah participated in a school for choristers, but he was to be 13 this summer so probably will soon outgrow treble choir.

Cynthia Wilson Ottaway, Grosse Pointe Farms, MI, said Allison was expecting her second child in October; Elizabeth (SBC '82) was still in Indianapolis; son Ditto was a marine tank commander at Camp Pendleton, CA; stepdaughter Amy Ottaway will enter SBC this fall. Stepsons: J.P. was in Williamsburg (Wm. & Mary '84); Mike at U. Michigan '86; and Andrew at U. Miami '88.

Lee Morrow Wittich didn't send news this time, but Fritz and I visited her and Paul in Dodgeville, WI, in July '84. Their house is in the Historic Register and is quietly elegant, with high ceilings to fit Paul. Lee is treasurer of countless groups; Paul is a lawyer, gardener, conservationist, and hunter. They advise the church youth group and took them to Chicago last year to do the museums. Lee had spoken to Elaine Floyd Fisher on the phone while visiting California in 95-degree heat a few days before we visited.

Carter Donnan McDowell was named a winner of the Barbara Ransome Andrews Award for outstanding community service by the Junior League of Richmond, VA. The award recognized Carter's accomplishments in the field of housing for the poor. She has helped residents of deprived neighborhoods obtain low-cost loans and founded a nonprofit group to help the poor buy and maintain their homes. Carter also edits Urban Revitalization News, a publication now sponsored by Va. Commonwealth U.

Writing from Montgomery, AL, Marguerite McDaniel Wood said that all the girls in her high school senior class were getting together in Atlanta for a giant 50th birthday party. She is still playing tennis and teaching greenery and flower arranging.

Mary Webb Miller writes that her main job has been lovingly supporting her children through college. Tommy graduated from U. Texas in 1983, got his master's from Trinity College in 1984, and is working with an accounting firm in Dallas. Katherine got her B.A. in History from U. Texas this year. She participated in the fiesta in San Antonio with Linda Falvey Rowland's daughter and Camilla Parker Miller '83.

Fritz and I have taken up western square dancing, complete with western type shirts, big petticoats, ruffles and lace, which I thought I would never get used to. We even danced with a group in Cedar Rapids, Iowa last year on our anniversary and felt very welcome. Fritz was building his own corn planter early this year to suit his own requirements. I play in our church handbell choir, am Clerk of Session again, and now serve on our presbytery's Committee on Ministry. Laurie spent the first half of the year teaching in Glade Valley, NC at a school for kids with social adjustment problems. Nancy presented us with our first grandchild in July 1984 (the same week I got bifocals!), and Lucy was married August 4, 1984. Lucy graduated from Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute in May '84 and is a computer systems analyst for Dupont in Wilmington, living in Newark, DE. Lois is studying optics at U. Rochester, NY. Carl (16) has become a computer fiend and Mark (14) gets very good grades and enjoys life. Ten days after Lucy's wedding I broke my leg and spent the fall going to physical therapy, but it is nearly normal now. I also tailored a lined woolen suit for Lucy. I write lots of minutes on our word processor and hope I can get it to print these class notes double-spaced. Thanks for all your cards and good wishes. See you in May 1987.

Secretaries

Anne Worboys Buske (Mrs. Neil), 408 Sedgwick Dr., Syracuse, NY 13203
Janna Staley Fitzgerald (Mrs. Robert E., Jr.), 2018 Sharon Rd., Charlotte, NC 28207

Fund Agents

Catherine Caldwell Cabaniss (Mrs. William J. Jr.), 3B12 Forest Glen Drive, Birmingham, AL 35213
Judith Atkins Wall (Mrs. E. Craig, Jr.), P.O. Box 830, Conway, SC 29526

Having resolved early on, to write the class notes at least two weeks before due date, thus leaving myself plenty of time to create a masterpiece of wit and information, here I am now with due date tomorrow (May 1), in a hotel in Atlanta struggling to decipher handwriting on 45 cards and letters. And to add insult to injury, I am at a conference where I am being told that my procrastination and lack of organization is a conscious choice that I made and want. After reading the list of "lost" alumnae in the Spring 1985 Alumnae Magazine, Maury Bethea Cain wrote that Dominique Lathrop is living in Paris, France under her French maiden name of Dominique Siegler. Dominique's daughter lives in Georgia and her two high-school-aged sons attend school in the United States, spending summers with Dominique in France. Her youngest son, Marc, lives with her in Paris. Anne Worboys Buske ran into Katie Groat Vansomeren at a New Years Eve party in Syracuse, NY. Katie now lives in Concord, MA and is taking psychology courses at Wellesley College. Anne and her family live in Syracuse where she is active with the Syracuse Symphony Guild and with her daughters' (ages 7 and 12) schools and Girl Scout troops. Daughter Rachel, placed third in a city-wide science competition this spring. Dana, her 12 year old, is in the program for gifted and talented children in the Syracuse school system.

Bea Newman Thayer wrote that her family is happy and healthy in Madison, NJ and still enjoys periodic visits to Kenmore Farm in Amherst, VA. Daughter Emily is at Middlebury College, son Bill is at Delbarton School and youngest child, Chris, is in high school in Madison. Bea is busy with tennis and swimming to stay in shape and works at the hospital in Pediatrics. She and son, Bill, visited Colby College in Maine, and had a nice visit with Miriam Bennett who is head of the Biology Department there.

Linda McArthur Hollis writes that she and her family are enjoying life and the tennis courts in Millwood, NY. Daughter Jennifer won a full scholarship to spend the summer with a family in Europe and will be college bound in the fall. Son Scott is in high school in Millwood.

Marilyn Dreesman Chuang sent the sad news of the death of her husband in August 1984. Marilyn said that she and her children will continue to live in Hawaii for the present.

Lou Chapman Goffman is working in the publications department at the Historic New Orleans Collection.

From Marin County, CA, Pat Anderson Warren writes that she is finishing her second term on the Navato School Board. Pat is also working as a program executive for the Marin Educational Foundation, an organization that awards grants to outstanding students and teachers. Pat's husband is Bridge Manager of the Golden Gate Bridge. One son is at UC Davis and the other is in high school in Marin County.

Robin Wawro Bataillon, husband Georges and two sons live in Caen, France. She and Georges spent some time in Yucatan and San Francisco while both sons were at Phillips Academy summer school. See "Alumnae Notices."

Mary Denny Scott Wray learned in February that she and husband, Michael, would be moving to Dallas, TX. Her children are in school at UVA, Avon, Amherst, RISD and Maine Law School.

Nancy Coppedge Lynn is busy with her interior decorating business. Her son and daughter are at the University of Georgia. Nancy sent word that Stuart Bohannon is happy working and living in Jacksonville, FL. Stuart is Vice President and Chief Financial Officer of Wilson Financial Corp. and has been named to the Regional Consulting Board of Southeast Bank, NA.

Eleanor Colwill just bought a house in the Baltimore suburbs. She has returned to Social Work and is now working in a housing community for the elderly and looking forward to her second promotion in a year and a half.

Judy Greer Schulz gets to SBC often in her capacity on the Alumnae Board and for concerts. Daughter, Cecily graduated from SBC in May and son Garth is a freshman at W and L. Judy teaches piano at home and one day a week at SBC. Judy and Steve had just returned from a trip to London where she visited with Jane Garst Lewis and her family near Winchester. Jane and her family were busy learning Chinese in preparation for a bicycle tour in China in April. Diane Stevens Creedon has moved to England and is working for Linguarama, the language school owned, in part, by Jane's husband. Diane will be teacher in residence at the school and will accompany the Lewis' on the trip to China.

Kay Prothro Yeager is serving on the SBC Alumnae Board as director of Region IX. Her daughter Elizabeth graduated from SBC in May '84, and is in Graduate Business School at the U. of Texas. Daughter Linda will graduate from SBC this spring. Kay is still enjoying flying her own plane and wishes she had taken it up sooner.

Suzanne Seaman Berry spent 1984 in Singapore, the Philippines, Taiwan and China with her husband, Fritz, who was teaching at Beijing Childrens Hospital for the World Health Organization. Their oldest child is in college and the other two sons are in high school.

Penny Stanton Meyer's son is at Deerfield and her daughter is at Loomis Chaffee School. Penny is teaching first grade at a one-room school near her home in Vermont. Penny says the school is straight out of Vermont Life magazine and she loves it.

Susie Prichard Pace writes from Richmond that her oldest son is playing baseball for the Cincinnati Reds, daughter Ann, is a student at U. of Richmond and her two younger daughters are in high school in Richmond. Susie and her husband are in real estate investments together. Susie enjoys tennis and plays on her club team.

Bambi Iliff has completed six years driving a bus for the city of Denver and loves it. She has vacationed each year in exciting places including the Atlantic Islands this spring and has been busy recently having some remodelling done on her house.

Lucy Giles Richey enjoys her job at a library near her home. Her husband, Tom, is an avid sailor. Lucy's daughter graduated from Colgate in May, and son, Tommy, is in high school in Darien.

Winifred Storey Davis is working in the family business (Storey Theaters, Inc.) in Atlanta. Two of her sons are in college and the youngest is in boarding school so things are temporarily quiet around the Davis house. Winifred visited with Judy Haskell Brewer in NY city and reports that Judy is assistant to Mrs. Albert Lasker, philanthropist, and is enjoying the varied and interesting work.

A card from Sheila Haskell Smith mentioned that she ran into Bea Newman Thayer at a parents' weekend at Middlebury. Sheila's son is there too. Her daughter, Heidi, is at Franklin and Marshall and youngest, Meghan, is still at home. Sheila enjoys her work with the Cleveland Orchestra and Opera.

Babs Childrey Fowler is experiencing the "empty nest syndrome" with all three of her children off at college. Babs is enjoying a part-time clothing business in her home and says she does a lot of walking and garden club work. She is looking forward to being at our 25th reunion.

Margaret Gwathmey is another classmate who will be living in England, if only temporarily. Skyline College is beginning a semester abroad program and Margaret will help operate a miniature campus there, returning to San Francisco in the spring.

Simone Aubry is still personal secretary to Joan Kennedy and continues to love the position. She recently enjoyed attending Phil and Betty Pease Hopkins' surprise 25th wedding anniversary party planned by their three children.

Sally Hamilton Staub's letter was full of news about classmates. Ginger Lutz Stephen has a daughter at SBC and a son just graduated from the School of Engineering at U. South Carolina. Ginger just loves an empty nest. It gave her time to work on a Mental Health Association Dinner which honored SC's eight living governors. Then off to Europe with husband, Jim, and now she is preparing for her stepson's fall wedding in Carmel, CA. Deeda Hill Bradford has three sons, one at Auburn, one at Emory and one still at home. Sally Hamilton Staub is working at Discovery Place, a science museum in Charlotte. She is managing after-hours events such as corporate parties and museum functions. Her son graduated from Chapel Hill (UNC) and is working in Atlanta. Daughter, Dabney, is in the School of Architecture at NC State. Sally and Dick have bought a "yet to be constructed" townhouse and are busy revising the plans to suit themselves.

Jill Babson Carter has visited with several classmates this year. She and Sally Ann Mathiason Prince ran into each other at Yale where they both have daughters who graduated in May. She and Jeanne Bounds Hamilton are both members of Madison Avenue Presbyterian Church and see each other quite often. Jill writes that her daughter is on the staff of the US Committee for UNICEF and her son is a sophomore at Dartmouth. Youngest daughter, Lissy, is at The Chapin School. Jill's husband is professor and senior physician at The Rockefeller University. Jill writes free lance for magazines and newspapers and had a recent story in Yankee magazine.

Louise Cobb Boggs and her family have planned a trip to Hawaii in June. This past year, Louise's law practice having outgrown the "spare bedroom" stage, they added onto the house.

Fran Brackenridge Neumann is the marketing coordinator for St. Luke Hospital Share Unit in Pasadena, CA, a brand new position that Fran will be creating. Fran says that her SBC bulbs were beautiful this year — at least those bulbs that her Rottweiler puppy left untouched.

Anne Cone Birgel wrote from Durham, NC that she is not lost. Anne has had a busy year so far with her oldest daughter getting married in February.

Another marriage — Sara Finnegan

Lycett's stepdaughter was married August '84. Sara and her husband visited Wales in March as part of an exchange visit with seven Welshmen who stayed with the Lycetts in 1984 while on tour in the USA with a Welsh mens' choir.

Martha Ann Chandler Romoser and husband, Bill, are enjoying country life at their farm in Oakton, VA. Martha Ann is into long distance and endurance riding on her Arabian horse. They finished the US 50 Mile Ride in the top ten. She also teaches ballet four days a week at her ballet school, "The Ballet Studio" in Alexandria. Both children are at Radford U., and Martha Ann, having very mixed feelings about the "empty nest syndrome" says that the welcome mat is always out for alumnae coming through Wash. DC.

Alicia Laing Salisbury has been elected to the Kansas State Senate for a four-year term. Both of her children are at Kansas U. Alicia said she received a note from Rue Wallace Judd, hand delivered by the Governor of Kansas whom Rue had met at one of the inaugural weekend events in Wash. DC.

Anne Hammond Dure lives in Athens, GA, where her husband, Leon, is on the faculty at the U. of GA. All three of her stepchildren (including Janie Dure, SBC '82) are in NYC now. Anne's son, Beau, is at home preparing for college and continuing to do very well scholastically.

Ann Farnam has been promoted to director of The Essex Institute in Salem, MA, an institution that includes 13 historic buildings, a museum and a major research library of New England history.

Mary Cosby Rinehart and Bruce completed a lifelong dream of cruising the entire east coast of the USA (including the Bahamas). They took a year off to complete the journey on their 42-foot sailing ketch "Duchess". Mary said the trip was fabulous.

Margaret Gwathmey is teaching in London this fall, delighted to escape composition and teach nothing but literature for one whole term. Thank you, Dr. Nelson!

The response for news has been wonderful. Thank you everyone for your contributions to this column. And, don't forget — the important date coming up — May 1986 — our 25th reunion. Do start making plans now to be there and make it the best reunion ever!

1965

[Editor's note: There is a super reunion scrapbook in the Alumnae Office. In addition, we received the following information.]

Saralyn McAfee Smith is a homemaker and full-time mother in Dodge City, KS. She and Hamp have two children, Laura, 2½, and Robbie, 1½. Saralyn enjoys taking an aerobic-dance class, doing counted cross-stitching and reading when she can find the time! In August, she will be taking Laura and Robbie for their first time to her family's annual reunion in Myrtle Beach, SC.

Jean Murray McDermid sent reunion greetings from Stichill, Scotland from herself, Len and the children, Camona, 8 and Finlay, 5.

Speaking of the United Kingdom, Caroline Richardson Cutler was married to The Honorable Raymond George Hardenbergh Seitz in Brooklyn Heights, NY, in May. He is a graduate of Yale and U.S. Minister to the Court of St. James.

Milbey Sebring Raney wrote that they were moving in June to Charlottesville where Bev has accepted an offer to head the division of hematology and oncology in the Department of Pediatrics at UVA. Milbey's parents plan to move next fall to Dunwoody, a life-care community nearby. Mibsy, 17 will be starting at Davidson in the fall and Bev III is taller than his mother, is a fine squash player and, at 14, loves the girls!

Anne Butler Hamilton and Charles announce the birth of their first son, Charles Stewart Hamilton III, on July 16, 1985 in Natchez, MS.

At the reunion in May, Milbey and Pryor Hale were elected co-presidents of the class. The new class secretary is Sally Wright Hyde (Mrs. D. Stephen), 6 Dickinson Lane, Wilmington, DE 19807 — be sure to send her your news before May 1 for next year's class notes. Newly elected fund agents are Alice Perry (Mrs. Robert Park), Guatemala C.A., 15 Avenue A #18-59 Zona 13, Guatemala City, Guatemala and Johanne Vinson Finney (Mrs. George B., Jr.), 4301 Northwiche Court, Midlothian, VA 23113

1969

Secretary

Ann Arnsperger Canipe (Mrs. W. Kent) 3210 Lakeridge Drive, Marietta, Ga. 30067

Fund Agent

Kathy Montz Miller (Mrs. Edward W.), Box 130, Star Rd., White Haven, PA 18661

It's really quite impressive to read about us — this job of Class Secretary is very special and exciting. If I only had one word to describe us, it would be busy — we are busy raising children, acquiring graduate degrees, pursuing part-time or full-time careers in every possible field, participating in every phase of volunteer jobs, getting and staying in shape, and having a good time in our lives. Those of us who came to the reunion last spring had a wonderful time. If you missed it, please plan to come for the 20th!

After putting together a great 15th reunion for us, Frere Murchison Gornio was selected as the Asst. Manager of New Hanover County after 6 years as executive director of DARE, a downtown revitalization project in Wilmington, NC. She travels to Chapel Hill for courses in public administration. The family is doing great and husband Dean is PTO President this year.

Cynthia Hays concluded 13 years at Christian Aid Mission in Charlottesville with a trip to India and Nepal and is now working at Trinity Presbyterian Church in Charlottesville.

Diane Holloway is a TV Columnist for the American Statesman in Austin, Texas. I understand she married in the fall, but I don't have details.

Mary Chestnutt Hunt and husband Tom have 4 active and involved children. Mary works as project manager of Data Administrative Services at Yale and Tom runs a manufacturing company in Ansonia, Ct.

Martha Brewer hated to miss our reunion but was waylaid by orthopedic surgery on her ankle. She is working hard setting up her Ob/Gyn practice in New Orleans and also hopes to redo an old Victorian house. She also reported, after a visit with Linda Donald, that Linda is chief chef for a group which does in-home meals for the "ultra-rich" and is still doing her architectural work.

Beth Beckner Henke continues her health work in Africa. She hopes to do her dissertation research in Kenya for her doctorate specialization in international health training. Upon completion she plans to be an independent consultant.

Connie Lane Stanfield graduated summa cum laude from National College in Rapid City, S.D. and now works for a midwestern regional firm as a stockbroker. Her "free" time is spent playing racquetball, redecorating her house and keeping up with a 14-year-old daughter.

Meny Hill Brooks is leaving Vermont for a summer in Tallahassee working for a firm handling marketing and strategic planning for health care institutions. She travels weekly to Boston working on a master's degree and continues to be involved in Vermont politics.

St. Louis is where Keithly Rose Miller has set up an interior design business and she loves the opportunities there. She travels often to Chicago and New York and also finds time to work at the museum as well as the Missouri Historical Society.

In Washington, with a 4 year old, 2 year old, 2 dogs, 2 cats, 3 hermit crabs, and a travelling husband, Kim Johnson Smith finds time to volunteer as the community liaison for the Junior League, SBC Alumnae Club President, and a room mother, and to participate in the Junior Guild and the local civic association. She was happy to report that this is her first year not working, which she is enjoying.

Anne Rhett Taylor Merrill's big news is the birth of second son, Alexander Heyward (called Zan) on Dec. 19, 1984 while Tony was out duck-hunting. Tony learned the news from the game warden.

Betsy West Dripps stays in shape playing or coaching field hockey, tennis, squash, basketball and lacrosse. She hopes to go to the National Lacrosse tournament. Newest additions to the Dripps household are a windsurfer and 11 lab puppies. Craig runs the math department at Haverford and coaches varsity tennis while the kids, ages 14, 12 & 8 are into all sports.

Melissa Griffith Manning is still very involved with horses — hopes to compete in the Virginia One Day 100 Mile ride this May. When not riding, her time is spent gardening, canning, raising Saanen goats, and mothering 3 children, ages 6, 2 and baby Thomas, 3 months.

Lynn Rick Rosenthal is in charge of community relations for the Palatine Chamber of Commerce which keeps her busy. Other time is spent with her 2 children, a homeowners' association and the League of Women Voters. Her family went cross-country skiing one day with Less Guthrie Ethridge's family.

As typical of many, Sue Thompson Watkins has a part-time job that could fill up 14 hours daily. She's working for a garden center doing container gardening and writing a monthly gardening newsletter. Arch now works for Robinson Humphrey/American Express in Tallahassee.

Another Floridian who's contemplating a move back to the mountains is Mimi Stockover Hull. Her son Todd will be going back to Virginia to attend Emory and Henry college. Mimi is currently serving as chairman of the Florida Cottey College Scholarship for PEO Sisterhood & chairman of the Search Committee for her church's Minister of Christian Education.

I saw Betsy Blackwell Laundon at an SBC luncheon here in Atlanta. She and Walt returned to the Atlanta area a couple of years ago. Betsy's girls keep her busy with scouting, and she also is involved in a Bible study class, nursing-home visits and an aerobic dancing class. Both Betsy and Pan Sinex Subalusky wrote that they live close together and that their daughters have become friends.

Another Georgian, Avis Brown Yount stays very busy. She practices Dermatology and is keeping up with husband Peter, a son and a daughter. She has found time to serve on the Junior League Board and hopes to participate in "Leadership Augusta" next year.

Another math major, Mary Mahan Marco, managed a trip to Paris last summer with husband Bob and even remembered a little French to use. They returned in plenty of time for their third son, Todd Peter, to be born Nov. 17, '84. Not one to waste time, Mary began a full-time position as Assistant Professor of Math at Bucks County Community College in January.

The Atlanta Junior League Admissions/Provisional Committee had 3 SBC 69ers as members this year — Haden Ridley Winborne, Nancy Wendling Peacock, and me. For next year, Haden will serve as Committee Chairman and Nancy will be one of 4 course coordinators. Nancy also has a big job as special events coordinator for the High Museum. She has sold her book business and is investigating the possibilities of importing Mexican china. Husband Tom has spent much of the past year in Saudi Arabia with his consulting business.

Tax season kept our newest CPA, Barbara Hastings Carne, very busy. She received her MS in accounting from Georgetown in December 1984 and passed the CPA exam in November. She will be inducted into Beta Gamma Sigma national scholastic honorary in May.

In the academic field, Bettye Hobbs Pruitt is a fellow at Harvard and an article which she had published in the William and Mary Quarterly was selected as the best article of the year.

Cincinnati finds Marney Millan Upson busy with husband Mark, 2 daughters and 2 puppies. Her activities include being a VP of the Junior League and head of the acquisition committee for an auction held at her daughters' school. She has travelled to Germany, Sweden, California and Georgia in the past 6 months.

Courtney Cash Mustin lives in Charleston, S.C. where her husband is stationed in the Navy. She teaches computer science at Ashley Hall School and is active in Naval Officers Wives, Junior League, Colonial Dames, The Historic Charleston Foundation, and the Preservation Society for which she is a tour guide. She is expecting her second child in August.

Anne Richards Camden and Jerry recently moved from Madison Heights to Waynesville, NC in the mountains where Jerry is an engineer with Dayco Corp. Anne stays busy with the 3 children's activities and recently started a small business with a few friends.

Jean Rushin Brown keeps busy with her 4-year-old son's school and activities, Junior League, Family and Children's Aid plus tennis and snow-skiing. She was looking forward when she wrote to an adult vacation in May to Hawaii.

Kay Hutton Eadie lives in Nashville where she works in the commercial real estate division of Coldwell Banker selling and leasing downtown office space. For the past 3 years she has been one of the top salesmen (or should we say salespersons?). Her volunteer work centers on drug and alcohol abuse.

Barbara Duffield Vaskas has completed her term on the township Board of Auditors and is returning to the working world for Commercial Window Systems. She continues on the board of the local horse show association.

Joan Adriance Mickelson, Charlie, and their children had a busy 1984. They had wonderful trips: to St. Paul for a reunion; South Dakota; and Colorado for hiking, camping, and visiting old Peace Corps friends. Fall found Charlie appointed director of the Intensive English Dept. Their home activities include softball games, tennis, horseback riding, swimming, gardening, and constant remodeling projects.

Ann Tremain Lee wrote that she is cutting back on organizations and activities and is concentrating on more time to delight in Saint, her 3 girls and her home. Our First Lady of Arizona, Hattie Coons Babbitt is still enjoying an active civil law trial practice and travels to Washington quarterly for meetings of the Liaison Committee on Medical Education (an accrediting body). She is trying to spend more time with their sons, Christopher 10, and TJ 8, who are now into swimming, books, computers and skiing. Husband Bruce has announced he will not run for Barry Goldwater's Senate seat in 1986, or for a third term as governor.

Nashville is the home of Mary Nelson Wade and her family. She puts her MBA to good use as treasurer of Wade and Egbert, Inc. insurance agency. The family, including her 2 daughters, enjoy horseback riding on their farm.

It has been an exciting spring for Mary Lee Bell Coffey and Shelby. Shelby has been appointed Editor in Chief of US News & World Report so time is spent between New York and Washington. Mary Lee is practicing emergency medicine and covers 4 hospitals in the Washington area. The children — Ali (14) and Charles (11) are fine and in need of a chauffeur.

Another baby notice was received from Elizabeth Lewis and husband David Thier who are awaiting their first child the end of June. They had a great trip to England in the fall seeing London and the countryside. Elizabeth's practice is going well. She has cut out hospital work and is concentrating on outpatient work. She is working on a research project involving the therapeutic use of fairy tales.

In Memphis, Liz Beach Baker plans to take a year off from most activities and concentrate on an addition to their house. This year has been busy with Liz being president of her book club, treasurer of the Garden Club, secretary of Le Bonheur Club, and treasurer of the Junior League Gala.

Esther Michel has retired from public accounting, married Rich Lyons, and had a daughter Michelle (1½). Esther plans to take the family this spring to tour SBC and Williamsburg.

Susan Scanlan is still "fighting the good fight" on our behalf at the Congressional Caucus for Women's Issues. She sent a report she had co-authored on the Economic Equity Act which was very interesting. She travels the eastern seaboard delivering speeches and attending conferences, while husband Jared is involved in politics. She sent a newspaper clipping about Sylvia Wederalh who was having an exhibition of her painting at the Studio Gallery in DC.

Our fund agent, Kathy Montz Miller's schedule would wear most of us out. She starts the day milking the cow, feeding the chickens and ducks, and getting 4 children off to school. She runs an insurance consulting business and teaches stitchery lessons out of her home. The boys enjoy soccer, baseball and skiing.

Sally Boucher Hovermale's family has moved from the country into the city of Winchester, Va. and they love the convenience. She teaches 4th grade and is working on a masters degree. Their two sons are into boy scouts, soccer, track and tennis.

Caralyn Mapp Rogers came to her first reunion last spring and she said she'll never miss another. Her 3 sons, ages 9, 7 & 4 keep her life busy.

Claudette Harloe Dalton works alternate weeks at The Charlotte Eye, Ear & Throat Hospital and has been appointed to several Medical Society committees. She also finds time to serve as Gordon's Cub Scout den mother.

Michele de Raismes lives in Boulder, Colorado with her husband Max King. She works for the Nalanda Foundation which is an educational foundation. She also travels, giving lectures and training in a type of meditation called Shambhala Training and Buddhism.

Another baby announcement — this one from Pamela Tipton Newton in Boone, N.C. She had a baby boy in August 1984 after teaching French at Appalachian State University through May.

Jan Huguenin Assmus wrote that she was serving church, school and state in addition to cooking meals, washing laundry and cleaning house. Her family is busy and happy. They are planning a summer trip to Germany to visit Gert's family.

In Knoxville, Stephanie Beaudivin Piper is Arts Editor of the Knoxville Journal and also edits the Junior League magazine and acts in local theater when possible. Her husband George is Marketing Director of 13-30 Corporation and they have 3 sons.

Paula Dickey Paddison has recently taken a new position as Director of Policy and Regulatory Affairs of the Regional Transit Authority and serves as president of New Orleans' oldest business association, The Magazine St. Business Association. Paula was also looking forward this summer to harvesting her first vegetable garden.

Jan Holt discovered she and Shelly de Raismes were both Boulder residents and they got together recently. Jan is still enjoying skiing, backpacking, running, travelling, and volunteer work with environmental groups and the Democratic Party. She is trying to get serious about her art work — watercolors for now.

Elizabeth H.S. Wyatt is renovating a second town home in the Park Slope area of Brooklyn and will move in in July. She is working on selling DNA human vaccines.

Just as most people were winding down for a restful summer, Lyn Dakes Miller began a full-time job in international banking at First Interstate Bank, Ltd. in Los Angeles. Quite a challenge, professionally and personally, with children aged 6 and 8. They plan to spend lots of time at the beach this summer with their nanny.

A couple of changes Paula Dickey Paddison has a new address — 1525 Short Street, New Orleans, LA 70118. Connie Lane Stanfield asks that she be listed as Constance L. Stanfield rather than Mrs. James Stanfield — she has been divorced for five years.

As for me, I am still chief cook and chauffeur in the Canipe household. Kent manages the credit department at Trust Co. Bank and Ginny (8) hits soccer, ballet, violin, gymnastics and Brownies around school. I'm still working part-time keeping the books for Nancy Wendling Peacock's husband Tom. I'm finishing 3 Jr. League placements, taking on a job on the executive committee and serving as treasurer of the Festival of Trees. To maintain my sanity I jog and do some gardening.

Your replies are great and I hope even more will write next year.

1973

Secretary

Hibernia (Mac) Cuthbert Langley (Mrs. William John), 403 Patjens Lane, Mount Pleasant, SC 29464

Fund Agents

Susan (Scottie) O'Toole, 6536 Deerings Lane, Norcross, GA 30092

Susan Dern Plank (Mrs. David P.), 302 Rue Lemans, Clarksville, TN 37042

I have had a great time over the past few months finding out what everyone is doing. Now it's your turn, and I hope you'll have as much fun as I did.

Abby Allen Rennekamp, husband Nick and Letti Jane, 3, and Annabell, 18 mos., love the rural life in Prospect, Kentucky. Nick breeds thoroughbreds and plays polo. Abby tries to garden and sew but finds herself being called back to the reality of hard work and motherhood all too often.

Alison Baker and Gary Gruby are in Atlanta where they were expecting their first child on April Fool's Day.

Charlotte Battle Robbins and Todd are marveling at the changes that 1-year-old Jordan has brought to their lives. They are enjoying their return to Memphis.

After having worked for 11 years for the Maryland Division of Parole and Probation and teaching at Catonsville Community College, Mary Jane Berry has retired to be a full-time mother to Allison Jane, 15 mos. She and husband Robert Ullino are settling into their 100-year-old house in the historic district of Mountain Lake Park, MD. They took advantage of the 100+'' of snow this winter with lots of cross-country skiing and have plans for a trip to Scotland. Robert visited SBC last Thanksgiving and reported that it looked great.

Anne Billings McDougall, husband Ed and Maggie welcomed baby Jimmy into their family in January. When her children's schedules allow, Anne is active on her church's Women's Board. As of June 1st the McDougalls will be in Orlando and hope to hear from all the Disney World visitors.

The light is beginning to appear at the end of Weezie Blakeslee Gilpin's academic tunnel. In May she finishes her academic work and after a year's internship she will have an M.A. in Counseling Psychology. Alexa, 8, is in the second grade and loves to read.

Blake, 6, is in kindergarten, and Christopher, who, according to Weezie, is lucky to be alive, is 3. And all Weezie wants is a bathroom she can use in private! The five Gilpins are leaving for June 14 when they leave for their Vineyard house for the summer.

Beth Boatwright Bell is getting used to small-town life after having left Atlanta for Thomasville, GA. Bryan is senior vice-president of C & S Bank there, and Beth keeps busy running after Bryan, Jr., 5, Grey, 4, and Rebecca, 15 mos.

From England, Michelle Brown Badcock reports that in addition to looking after Simon, 9, Douglas, 6, and Heather, 3, she plans to begin media studies next year. She and husband Michael moved into the New Forest last year and have lots to do to fix up their house. She met our Dean in London recently at a luncheon where she also saw Jennifer Erickson, '74, who lives in Southampton.

Life in Charlottesville has been good to Susan Bundy. She is the assistant manager of Manpower Temporary Services and is challenged daily by all the unknowns the job presents.

Mary Buxton is in private practice full-time now in a new office. She had a baby shower for Jane Potts (keep reading) in March and attended Jennifer Wherry Putney's wedding in December.

Betsy Cann Akers and Scottie had their third little boy, William Cann, last March. He joins Scott, 5, and Morgan, 2½. Those three keep Betsy close to home, and she loves it.

After too many years of silence, Evelyn Carter Cowles writes that she and Reynolds live on a farm in Free Union where Reynolds has his vet clinic and they raise horses. Reynolds plays polo, and Evelyn shows hunters, and together they love to hunt and fish. Reynolds' 16-year-old son lives with them.

Peggy Cheesewright Garner and John are building a new house in Medina, WA. Peggy is still under contract with the local hospital to teach their babysitting course, plays tennis four times a week and is very involved with the Junior League of Seattle.

Anita Clarendon Ledsinger and Chuck, UVA '72, are finally beginning to feel at home in Dallas. Chuck is vice-president of finance of Embassy Suites, and Anita works part-time as the editor of the company's quarterly employee magazine. In March Elise joined sister Leila, 3.

Dede Conley and her husband have been in France for about a year. Both are teaching and enjoying life in France even though they just lived through France's worst winter in 30 years. They live in Fontainebleau, about 60 km. from Paris and are taking advantage of all the skiing opportunities in the Alps.

Susan Craig is working in Columbia, SC as an art director for an advertising agency. She says it's a hectic business but one from which she has learned a lot. Susan stays in touch with lots of classmates.

Diane Dale Reiling's baby Steven arrived in November and his first important outing was to Jenny Wherry Putney's wedding.

Though they fantasize about warm places Mary Danford and Michael continue to love Portland. Michael spends his time running and teaching, and Mary practices law. Whenever she can Mary escapes to New York to see old friends including Alice Fahs and Charlie Chubb and their daughter Mimi and Mimi Fahs, '71, the proud aunt. Mary's newest diversion is writing a trashy novel with a friend about the "adventures" of two women lawyers.

Letting no grass grow under their feet, Lucy Dennington Kennedy and John have just returned from a European trip. Last fall they visited in Hawaii, South Carolina, Mobile and Baltimore. While in Baltimore they saw Marye Taylor Miller who, they report, has a great new job and looks fantastic. Lucy sings whenever she can, needlepoints and works on her old house.

Sue Dern Plank and David welcomed Elena Elisabeth Farnum Plank into the world in April. The only disappointment was that David was in Honduras with the Army and so at Sue's writing had yet to meet his daughter. Sue continues her work with the Alumnae Fund and the Admissions Office. She attended the Alumnae Council in October and even walked up Monument Hill on Founder's Day! David continues as a company commander and in July will be working with the post facility engineer at Fort Campbell.

Glenys Dyer Church's 3-year-old Douglas was joined by a sibling in May. Glenys works at TRW and got works together with Chris Mendel Pruitt last fall.

Christine Eng Leventhal reports that all is fine with Amy, 5, Nicholas, 2, and husband Peter who is graduating at the top of his class with an M.S. in clinical nutrition/biology from the University of Bridgeport. Chris is active with her ballet, exercising and free-lance editing.

Somehow Alison Fifer Stonecipher manages to be a real estate agent with Merrill Lynch in Santa Barbara and to take care of her two boys, Will, 4½, and John 16 mos. This spring the family skied in Sun Valley and Park City, Utah. Alison takes aerobic exercise classes and is active with the Junior League.

In Malibu, CA Lisa Fowler Winslow and Bill had their second child in August, and Russell, 3, is delighted to have a running mate. Lisa is working part-time as a law librarian. She saw Jane Potts in San Francisco last October and met Betsie Meric Gambel and Greg in Carmel for a weekend last fall.

After living in Hong Kong for three years, Patricia Gilhooly O'Neill is back in London. With a 4-month-old son and three Irish setters she feels relatively immobile for right now. Her husband spends a lot of time traveling in Asia as an investment banker, and Patricia is a partner in a Hong Kong-based jewelry design business.

When she wrote, Robin Harmon O'Neil and John were looking forward to their annual New York City trip with University of South Carolina art students. John is chairman of the art department there, and as the person in charge of interior design interns Robin was planning to conduct an interior design tour of the City. After New York she and John were leaving for Houston for a Southern Graphics Council meeting.

Wendy Hoilman Mitchell expanded her family in March with the arrival of Justin who joins 6-year-old brother Joshua. Joe is off for a month in Nepal at the Royal Chitawan National Park on a Smithsonian grant to set up a research project on turtles there. After finding the first sample of honey bee tracheal mite in a Virginia bee colony, Wendy was very involved in processing samples. Now she is on a three month leave of absence so she can enjoy her children. She adds that she would love to hear from Chris Mendel Prewitt.

After Christmas Alice Hughes and Carl took Kenneth, 5, and Sarah Beth, 2, skiing in Utah. Then Alice and Carl visited Betsy Perry in New York on their way to Washington where Carl argued before the U.S. Supreme Court. Though being away for two weeks wreaked havoc on her obstetrical practice, Alice said it was worth it.

This has been a busy year for Susan Kirby Peacock and David. Susan, a pharmacist, and David, a physician, are in school part-time in fine arts. They spent two weeks sailing and diving in the Bahamas, a week skiing and mountain-climbing in Colorado and ten days in New York touring galleries and museums. Now they are looking forward to driving through SBC on their way to David's tenth reunion at Harvard.

Janie Knutson James loves being a wife to Michael and a mother to Patrick, 3, and Elizabeth, 15 mos. She spent some time in New York with Cathy Blackburn and is now gearing up for an in-house pre-school program for five little boys that she will organize with some neighboring moms.

Diane Leslie is thrilled with life and work in London. She travels a lot on business but did manage to squeeze in a skiing trip to France in March. Most of her family spent time with her in the spring.

Jane Lowrey Tierney and John had their third child, Laura Kathryn, in March 1984.

Jane Lucas's interior design consulting firm has grown this past year. She now has three employees and a fancy new office and stays on the move with all the various jobs. She spends one day a week in Washington working with the National Cathedral School and still finds time to be treasurer of the New England American Society of Interior Designers and to teach part-time at a local college.

Jane McCutcheon McFadden's third son, George Stillman, arrived on his daddy's birthday in May 1984. Jane, etc. moved from the country into town, and all is well with them in Vermont.

Jane McFaddin Bryan and Charlie have bought another old house in Charleston, SC around the corner from their present home. They have moved their law offices to the first floor there and as soon as their first house is sold will move their residence upstairs to its second and third floors. Jane was looking forward to seeing Betsie Meric Gambel and Greg in London in July at the ABA convention and hoped to travel from there to Belgium to visit relatives. In her law practice Jane enjoys doing an expanding variety of civil litigation work. She serves on the board of a mental health group and works with local and national preservation groups.

A new member of our San Francisco contingent is Dede McIntyre Porter. She is glad to be out of New York and into milder weather but when she wrote was on her way to London to buy antiques for a shop she hoped to open in San Francisco in the spring. She successfully began an English antique importing business, Antiques...Period, two years ago and hopes to be equally successful with it in California.

Ann Major Gibb's Emily, 5, is in kindergarten and David, 3, loves being at home with mom and toys all to himself. Ann and Ernie spent a week in Kansas City and were impressed with all they saw and did. Ann is carpooling and exercising and working with Virginians Opposing Drunk Driving. She also does volunteer work at her church.

Lisa Marshall Chalmers and David welcomed Elizabeth Gordon Chalmers into the world last November. She and Marshall, 4, keep Lisa out of trouble, and David keeps busy in Atlanta's real estate world.

Other new parents this year are Chris Mendel Prewitt and Darwin who were joined by Whitney in July 1984. When Chris wrote they were about to move from San Antonio to the Philippines where she will be flying C-9's and Darwin will be flying C-130's. Chris saw Glenys Dyer Church in Washington last summer and stays in touch with Lyn Fisher Cartwright, a stockbroker in New York.

Betsie Meric Gambel loves having Lee Brennan Kidd in New Orleans, and she and Greg see Lee and Kevin often. Betsie continues her part-time work at Sacred Heart where she is involved with its independent school evaluation. She also helps out at 8-year-old Gregory's school. Meric is now 3 and helps keep Betsie on her toes. Betsie is glad to be riding again. Gregory shares her enthusiasm and has begun entering shows. Greg opened his own law office in September, and though he is busier than ever he loves being on his own.

Jan Merritt and David Bethany are back in their 100-year-old house on Sullivan's Island, SC after jacking it up 12 feet and adding on. All this is in preparation for their addition due in October. Jan continues to write and is still working in a veterinary office while David is happily "hard rocking and rolling." They flew to New York in April and drove through parts of New England.

It's great to hear from another long silent classmate. Sara Meyerdirks Ross. She is in Washington where she is the Director of Media Relations for the National Association of Manufacturers. This involves writing for TV, newspapers and magazines and hobnobbing with the Washington business and political press, all of which Sara loves. She sees Barbara Livingston and Nancy Akers and reports that they have just finished collaborating on a novel with plans for a second.

In 1984 Laurie Norris Solywoda completed her masters degree in higher education administration at SUNY in Albany and has already seen it benefit her job at Albany Medical College in the Planning Office. Her girls, 4 and 2, love staying at the Medical Center day care facility. They recently moved to a big contemporary house in the country north of Albany and enjoyed a visit from Sue Dern Plank.

Betsy Oakley Smith and Smitty are enjoying life in Birmingham with Harrison, 6, and William, 2 and were anxiously awaiting Baby #3's arrival in August. Betsy loves her work with the Historical Society which she does through the Junior League, volunteering with the Alabama Symphony and being a room mother for Harrison's class.

From Detroit Judy O'Keefe Vindici writes that her consulting business, Market Planning and Programming, is thriving. She and an associate specialize in solving the problems of small businesses in the Detroit area. Her children, Desmond, 3, and Christina, 2, are doing well but are growing up too fast.

Mary Anne Osborne is in the Episcopal Divinity School in Cambridge, MA and will be ordained in the summer of 1986. She says she is fulfilling a lifelong yearning and couldn't be happier. Mary Anne stays in close touch with Elaine Hughey.

The short winter and early spring have brought Scottie O'Toole south to Atlanta. She is hiring personnel for Scientific Atlanta and lives in a "yuppie condo" in Norcross, GA. She's the only O'Toole in the phone book there, so please call!

Stephania Paparozzi Williams,

Bruce, Richard, 6, and Bruce, Jr., 3, love life in Scottsdale, AZ. Bruce is syndicating real estate, and Stephania says she is dancing as fast as she can. She now has a real horse trainer and is having a great time showing the AZ circuit.

Betsy Perry and Neale Sweet are juggling work with parenthood, having been joined by Ned this year. Betsy is an acquisitions editor for nonfiction trade paperbacks in NYC.

In Feasterville, PA, Jean Platt Spencer and David have opened their own garden center. Although it takes the long hours and hard work that go along with owning one's own business, it is doing well. Jean also manages her brother's restaurant, "The Country Inn" and is a golf pro. Their greatest pleasure is watching their two girls grow — Jessica, 4, and Katie, 2½.

1984 was a good year for Debbie Pollock Arce. She married Roger Arce last summer, and together they work at a computer software company. Roger is president and Debbie is treasurer, and though it is hard work Debbie says it's a welcome change after having spent ten years in large corporations.

More baby reports come from Jane Potts. In addition to those babies already announced she adds the news of hers and Bud Sutherland's due at the end of April and that of Melinda Williams Davis who was due in March. She and Bud will probably be leaving San Francisco for Atlanta this summer to be near Ted Turner headquarters, and they're anxious to get back to the South.

Kathy Pretzfelder Steele and family enjoyed a convention Kathy attended in Disney World. Husband Dave, Tracy, 5, and Kelly, 2, accompanied her so they could tour the Magic Kingdom and Epcot Center at convention's end.

Another busy mother is Carol Anne Provence Gallivan who, in addition to looking after Anne Genevieve, 8½, Henry, 3½, and Harriet, 2, has expanded her antiques, gifts and jewelry shop, Pineapple Galleries, to two locations. Husband Mills has just completed the renovation of an older downtown Greenville, SC building for his law firm and won the Chamber of Commerce award for his efforts. We always enjoy seeing the Gallivans when they are at Kiawah even if the visit is prompted by ear infections!

This past year brought a move for Char Reed-Miller from Tallahassee to the New York area. While she was looking for a place to rent Char stayed on Long Island with Jean McKenzie '71 who didn't mind Char's four Jack Russell terriers. Char continues with her ophthalmic consulting, mostly for cosmetic firms that want their eye make-up approved for contact lenses. She still rides and is lifting weights.

Nan Robertson Clarke and Hal have moved into a new house in their same neighborhood in Atlanta. Thank goodness this one is big enough, for there are now 4 Clarke children — Boo, 6, Toby, 4, Charlie, 3, and Robbie, 1. They spent a week at Sea Island in August for a family festival there. "Festive for whom?" Nan queried in her card. She wants everyone to know that she is working night and day on our 15th reunion. We spent a weekend with the Clarkes at Hilton Head last September and had a great time after the six children went to bed!

After spending a year at home with her third child Monica Saumweber Spillias has returned to her job with the US Department of Labor. Ken is considering his next political move which might be a run for the State Senate. Monica recently met Dr. Fry at a cocktail party.

Jeanne Schaefer Bingham had her first child, a little girl named Stacy, this past year. This was a real triumph for Jeanne who was involved in a serious auto accident several years ago, and I know we all rejoice with her. She and her husband hope to build a house and a barn soon.

It's great to hear from another first-time writer, Chris Sherwood Warner. She and David are moving back to Los Angeles in early September after having spent two years in Munich. He has finished a major draft of his Ph.D. dissertation in medieval history, and Chris has had a great time doing everything she didn't have time for when she worked. She's counting on being at our reunion in '88 — it's not too early to start planning!

Susie Shoulders is in graduate school in music at Seattle Pacific University. She is also working in the Delivery Information Department at UPS where she enters data into an IBM-PC computer.

Jan Storey Honick has loved being able to work part-time as a travel agent. She returned to work last September after the birth of son David in March.

Mary Beverley Taylor Haque's note brought both sad and happy news. She and Imtaiz had a child born with Down's Syndrome and related heart problems who died at 6 months after having had open heart surgery in Birmingham, AL. But the good news is that Mary Beverley is pregnant again and due in July so we can all look forward to reading good things in next year's note. Both Mary Beverley and Imtaiz are teaching at Clemson, and she will return to teaching in the fall after taking the summer off for the baby. Their house is only five minutes from the University so Mary Beverley rides her bike to and from work as part of her exercise/environmental program.

Now in Houston, Pamela Van Tassel left Augusta, GA to do more training in neuroradiology. She will join the radiology staff at M.D. Anderson Hospital and Tumor Institute this summer and so far likes Houston.

Lacy Williams Nasteff and Roger celebrated the arrival of their first child, Evan Roger, on February 9 and have easily adjusted to parenthood. Both Lacy and Roger are working with computers in Annapolis and are relieved not to be commuting into Washington any more.

This was really the year for babies! Robert Marchant Larson, II was born in October to Lucinda Young Larson and Richard. Lucinda is a finance manager at Digital and is president of Boston's Alumnae Club. In October, 3 days before Robert arrived, the Club had a dinner for President Frye.

And last but not least (finally!), Debi Zigler Hopkins writes that she has loved being able to return to Sweet Briar in the spring and fall for Alumnae Council meetings. Child #2 arrived in July. And New Orleans has been fortunate, Debi adds, to have Lee Brennan Kidd there.

I, Mac Cuthbert Langley, am glad to get to the end of the alphabet! As soon as these notes are in the mail Johnny and I are leaving for five days in New York. We're leaving behind Will, 6, and Hibernia, 13 months, and Johnny's busy pediatric practice in Mount Pleasant, SC. Our big news at the moment is that we're adding on to our house, and so far the only catastrophe has been the plumber's fall through the laundry room ceiling. After I've finished cleaning up from that I'll keep busy with Will's piano lessons and ball games, my church work, the Junior League, helping Johnny in his office and running after Hibernia whose godmother is Weezie Gilpin. Kathryn Teller Johnson '72 and family spent last Thanksgiving with us, and a wild time was had by all. Talk to you next year!

Debbie Koss McCarthy (Mrs. David), 168 Trenton Road, Chapel Hill, NC 27514

Thank you for your great response, I was delighted with all the cards I received. There are still a few of you who I haven't heard from. Please fill me in on your news.

From Hong Kong comes word from Stella Wright Martin who is busy with a new business and with 1½ year-old-son Everett. "Temptations" is the name of her shopping consulting firm that escorts people all over Hong Kong to find the best buys. Buying trips have taken her to India and the Philippines as well. She recently diversified into a retail operation and into the porcelain export business.

Phooi-Ching Lai should be in Singapore by the time the newsletter is published. She planned to finish her studies in Hawaii and get married in L.A. in May before heading back to Singapore. She expected her mother, sister and sister's family to attend the wedding. She will teach Communications to 2nd year engineering students and looks forward to making money again instead of being the poor student. In her spare time she will renovate her husband's flat. With a promise of a mattress, a warm shower and a tour of the "real" Singapore, she has issued an invitation to SBC visitors.

In England, Christine Hand has been building a new business that she and her husband began last September. Although the hours are long and hard, she is rewarded by the results of their labor. Christine is also busy with 18-month-old Sebastian. After the severe English weather with too much snow, she looks forward to a pleasant summer with visits from Harriet Dinegar, and Eugenie Durant.

In Virginia, Sally Kennedy McGroarty recently moved to a new house in Richmond to accommodate her growing family. Ward Gilgan was born Sept. 2, 1984, and Desmond turned 2 last Dec. Between David's busy medical practice, Sally's activities with the SBC alum. club, Jr. League, church work, and her aerobics teaching, they managed to squeeze in a trip to New Orleans. Also in Richmond, Cynthia Kendree Thieringer, is having a great time with 17-month-old Kendree. She and J.T. planned a sailing trip to the British Virgin Islands during the summer. She sees Debbie Hubble Wilson often and reports that Hubble is working for Centenary United Methodist Church in Lynchburg recruiting new members. Another of our classmates (unsigned postcard) moved to Lynchburg recently with husband Bill and two-year-old Blake. As an Asst. V.P. with Central Fidelity Bank's Investment Division, she travels the North Carolina, Virginia, and Washington, D.C. areas. Bill has two video retail stores in Lynchburg.

Sally Bonham Mohle and Pete had a wonderful time on a Caribbean cruise. They enjoyed a visit from Ebet Little Stevens, Bob and baby Lizzie as well as Tricia Waters. Ebet moved to Gastonia, NC from Pittsburgh in Jan. 1984 and is a full-time mother. Tricia still lives in D.C. and works at the Nat'l Gallery of Art in the Dept. of Prints & Drawings. She has been recataloguing their permanent collection, approx. 70,000 graphics, for computerization of the gallery-wide inventory. She enjoyed a trip to Paris last summer.

Martha Crowe married Scott Whitlow Jones in May 15, 1985, and planned to live in Richmond. Patrice Lewis, Cheryl Lennon Gibson, and Joan Pietrucha Furman, attended.

Missy Flanigan Clark and David went to Canada last fall with their daughter Lauren. Lauren turned 3 in the spring and expected to be a "big sister" in April. Missy and David have been busy working on their house. She reported that Annie Hamilton married in April in Colorado Springs.

Denise Etheridge graduated from the University of Virginia in May with a MBA/JD degree. We congratulate her on that accomplishment. She will begin working in New York City in Sept. for the investment banking firm of Brooks Harvey & Company, Inc., the real estate division of Morgan Stanley. Denise saw Gail Flagg Freeman last Dec. with Steve and their new baby. Gail still lives in Tennessee. Still in Charlottesville is Linda Uhlein who just bought a 72-acre farm near the new Farmington Hunt Club. She planned to move into a 150-year-old remodeled log cabin on the farm in June. Linda has just begun working for a national financial marketing firm in Charlottesville. In her spare time she plays tennis, scuba-dives and fox-hunts.

From Virginia Beach, Sarah Longstreth reports that the shop she bought with Chick Grones, '79 is keeping her busy but she loves it. Chic and Sarah will be celebrating their third birthday with the shop, The Three Gulls Gift Shop, in August. They have just added a children's corner. Patti Wornom Henry and David planned to move to Chicago in June. David has joined the Army Judge Advocate and Patti has retired to stay home with Chaz.

Bettie Lee Moore has been in the D.C. area for the past 4 years. She married Robert Moore in the spring of '83 and they have enjoyed restoring their antebellum home in Loudoun County. Robert is an attorney with Lewis, Mitchell and Moore. They expected their first child July '84.

Dabney Bragg Foshee has been practicing law in Mobile for 5 years since graduating from Vanderbilt Law School. She married David Foshee May 18th and planned to live in Mobile. Keith and Louise Aiken Calhoun's daughter, Katie, was born Nov. 6th. Louise is president of the Atlanta SBC Alumnae Club and Cathy Goodhart Henson is vice president. Cathy, Carlton, Catherine and Susie moved to Atlanta from Columbus in Dec. Carlton practices law in the construction litigation area with Peterson, Young, Self and Asselin. Cathy teaches exercise classes.

From Columbus comes news of Glenn King Springer and the birth of Haden Whatley Springer on March 28th. I saw Glenn a week after the baby was born and she looked great. I enjoyed my visit with 2½-year-old Lillian, too. Glenn is secretary of the Midland 3 Day Event and co-chairman of the Columbus Museum Guild.

All is well with Debbie Koss McCarthy and David in Durham, NC. Alex is 2 and keeps everyone hopping. Courtney will be in kindergarten at Durham Academy in the fall. Debbie teaches music at the academy and does church and Jr. League work. She attended the symposium on Baroque music at SBC last spring. David has been promoted to principal licensing engineer for the Harris Nuclear project.

Dave and Debby Epperson Sizer's daughter, Virginia Lee, was born in May of 1984. Virginia has two older brothers, Brian, 8, and Steven, 4. Debby is pres. of Twin County Broadcasting Corporation, which recently purchased WBOB-A.M., an adult contemporary station, in Galax, VA. In Columbia, SC, Caroline Williams Seeling is enjoying life with husband Stephen. They had a marvelous trip to Europe last spring. Caroline is marketing coordinator for an environmental consulting firm. The firm does international work, so Caroline is able to stay active in international business. In Greenville, Louise Lambert Hunter has fun chasing 20-month-old son Graham. She has started wall stenciling and loves it. The house, the yard, and the baby keep her busy.

Kate Carnwath is married to Padge Hopkins and lives in Philadelphia. She is innkeeper and part-owner of The Society Hill Hotel, an urban inn with 12 rooms and a 60-seat restaurant. She recently talked to Kathy McElhinney, who lives in San Francisco and is getting married in September. Sigrid Soderberg is also in San Francisco, running a department of 30 people in a major law firm. She is the legal assistant coordinator. In her spare time she serves on the boards of a child abuse agency and the chamber orchestra. Somehow she finds time to raise funds for abused children and to sail. She reports she is very happy in SF.

In Southern CA, Libby White is a sales rep. for Merck & Co. dealing with large animal veterinarians and cattlemen. She has taken advantage of the mountains, beaches, aerobics craze, whale watching and showing off CA to her east coast visitors. Libby will be returning to the east, however, to marry Douglas Orbal on September 14th. Douglas also works for Merck & Co. in the NJ headquarters, so they will make their home there. Maggie Shriver and Jojo Scott will be bridesmaids, and Keedie Grones, '76, Addy Eshbach, '78, and Vivian Yamaguchi Cohn also will attend. Vivian and Stuart are in Chicago and doing well. They went to London in May on business and holiday. Vivian has changed law firms and has been traveling to Kentucky, Florida, Arizona, and Iowa. She continues to work on insurance defense and is very enthusiastic about her new firm, Conklin and Adler.

Elvira Cash Pecora and Chip went to Ireland in May for a relaxing vacation. They have been working on their house, stripping floors and painting interiors. Massachusetts has been a good move for both of them, Elvira reports. She loves her job at Rolm and David enjoys his job with Atex. She sees Cain Thomas Linzee and David and Christine Davis Boulware frequently. Elvira also hears from Marianne Hutton Felch in Baltimore, Janet Myers Deans in Long Island, and Peggy Haley Sheehan in Denver.

Fran Scott Tesch has accepted a promotion with Northern Telecom Electronics, Inc. in West Palm Beach and is now manager of external communications. She is responsible for government, media, and community relations as well as writing speeches for senior executives, audio-visual presentations, and feature articles. Fran will be traveling frequently and hopes to run into some SBC folks. Carl is working in corporate graphics design and continues to write and arrange music.

In Kansas City, Mary Greaves is public affairs coordinator for Payless Cashways, a building materials retailer. She administers charitable gifts and special events for the company. She traveled to Houston on the job and saw Susie Sowell last fall, and she attended Anne Hamilton's wedding in Colorado Springs in April. Farnell Cowan is working in International Private Banking at Bank of Boston and loves it. She planned to travel to Central America for work last spring. Farnell also went to Japan for 2 weeks last March to visit friends. She is active in the volunteer association of The Boston Symphony, conducting youth tours.

In Nashville, Mary Palmer Blackmon is fundraising at the Cumberland Museum and keeping up with 2-year-old Kate. Buddy has joined the Grand Music Group as VP and songwriter. Two of his songs due out during the summer were "Get Acquainted with the Night," recorded by Johnny Lee, and "Hottest Ex in Texas," recorded by Becky Hobbs. Mary heard from Laurie Burrell who is a hotel concierge in Colorado and Carrie Griscom Nygren who had a baby girl March 21st.

In Nov. '84, Tracy Thompson Bodkin moved into the home she and her husband built. Brian Edward, Jr. was born the next month. Life is busy with the baby and toddler Allison who is almost 3. Carla Kinney married Daniel Reiniger on Feb. 9, '85. She loves her job with I.B.M. and teaches classes throughout the U.S. July '84 found Carla working in Singapore, and Caracas. She also went to England on business last April. When she is home she enjoys decorating their new home complete with swimming pool.

Formerly employed at Showtime/The Movie Channel Cable Television as editor, Wendy Congdon Stanton is currently a freelance copywriter/editor and mother of son John, born June, 1983. Jean Romanske Jones was commissioned a Federal Agent in Nov. '84 and was assigned to Harrisburg, PA for her 1st two-to-four year duty. She says there is plenty of fun and travel and she meets nice people and interesting criminals all the time.

Jeff and Kathy Roantree Renken are doing well in Minnesota. They have spent the last year working on their house and are looking forward to enjoying their deck and patio this summer. They now have a cat and two dogs to keep them company. Carla Kinney has been the only SBC guest they have had so Kathy wants to tell everyone that Minnesota summers are great and to come see her.

Rebecca Mayer Gutierrez and family have moved to Riverwind Farm, Shelburne Falls, MA from Arizona. George Allen was born in April '84 in Amarillo, TX. Becky decided that 150 miles was too far to go to the hospital so they moved to MA. Her husband made snow at a local ski resort and planned to start construction work last spring. They are planning to build a house.

Anne Marshall was married in Dec. '84 to Doug Ross and moved to CA where he had recently gotten a job. They are living in Davis in the Sacramento Valley where Anne enjoys being temporarily unemployed. Before marrying, Ann worked for 3½ years with the Florida Extension Service as a Marine Advisory Agent in the Ft. Myers area.

Debbie Koss McCarthy was written up in the Durham Morning Herald as a participant in the new musical group, St. Stephen's Quintet, which performed for the Church's May fair.

In Dallas, Becky Frost Good has retired as VP of Merrill Lynch Private Capital to be a full-time mom with two-year-old Beverly. Becky fills her spare time with League work, teaching cooking classes at my cooking school, taking swimming lessons with Beverly, and keeping up their pool and yard. Steve had business in San Francisco in May, so Becky got to go along. They also planned a trip to Bermuda in June. We saw Renee Hanson Crowder when she was in Dallas during the Republican convention in Aug. '84. We also see Kathy McDonald who works for a real estate company in Plano, a Dallas suburb.

As for me, things are moving right along. My cooking school for children is going strong and we've branched out to offer cooking parties. The parties have been featured recently in the Dallas/Ft. Worth Home and Garden magazine, and the local newspaper is featuring a group of our 5- & 6-year-old students for an article on kids and cooking. Rex and I have our own future student on the way due in July. Becky had a baby shower for me in her gorgeous back yard in May and we had a nice group of SBC friends there, Kathy McDonald, Lisa Wray Longino '78, and Janet Baldwin McColloch '79.

Unfortunately, we have some sad news to report. Barb Bernick Martin's husband Wayne died March 26 of cancer. Our thoughts are with her.

Thanks to all who wrote and thanks to the Alumnae Association staff for publishing the annual class newsletter. The magazine newsletter is a great way to keep us up-to-date on our classmates. It would really be great to have 100% response. Keep those cards, letters and pictures coming!

1981

Class Secretary

Helen Masters Durham (Mrs. Lucian A., III), 786 Clayville Road, Powhatan, VA 23139

Fund Agent

Holly Craig, 19 Highland Avenue, Darien, CT 06820

My apologies to those of you who don't see their names here, but numerous cards came in with plenty of information, but no name. Keep me posted!

Theresa Blane Lange is now working on Capitol Hill for Congressman Broyhill as a legislative correspondent. Mary Boehling completed her master's at Virginia Commonwealth University and is now working at Virginia Power as an associate economist. Another of our post grads is Charla Ann Borchers, who graduated as outstanding student from University of Texas at Austin's Graduate School of Business. She has been convention coordinator for the Republican Party of Texas.

Cammie Bethay is in her last year of Med. school and is engaged to a fellow classmate.

Julie Brooke is finally out of school and is an associate with Smith & Halsey in Jacksonville, FL practicing general business and corporate law.

Barbara Bush is currently employed with the Department of Health and Human Services, in Legislative Affairs, in D.C.

Stirling Cassidy is in the Big Apple working for Equitable Life and loving it! Olivia Chaplin is going to Europe this summer and law school this fall.

Holly Craig accepted a job with Playboy magazine in their sales division. Sophie Chrysler Hart and her husband Ford were, at their last writing, enjoying China while she works on her doctoral research on "The Reversion to China in 1997." She'd love to see any SBC'ers traveling through Southeast Asia.

Windsor Cleveland has relocated to Los Angeles where she's modeling and making T.V. commercials — watch out Joan London, here comes Windsor! Lynn Croft is now living in Winter Park, FL where she teaches kindergarten. Letha Dameron Zakowsky was married June 9, 1984 in Sweet Briar's chapel. K. Hagan and Helen Masters Durham were in the wedding party. Letha is employed at Dean Witter Reynolds in Norfolk, VA and her husband Scott is a surgical intern at Portsmouth Regional Naval Medical Center. Virginia Donald is living in Birmingham, AL where she works in the public relations department at a private hospital.

In May, '85, Quinne Fokes completed her Master of Fine Arts in painting at the Maryland Institute. She's conquering the "starving artist syndrome" by waiting tables and bartending. She also ran the Baltimore "Mean" Marathon in December of 1984.

Lelee Frank is a "traveling school teacher," teaching computer programs to FAA employees across the country. When she has time, she is renovating her condominium apartment in D.C. Anne Grosvenor Evrard entertained the SBC Jr. Year Abroad students at a Christmas Tea at her home next door to the chateau in Versailles, France. She has 2 daughters, Anne-Marie (3) and Helene (1½), who occupy most of her time, but she also has her own business selling French lithographs in the States. K. Hagan is living in Statesboro, GA and working as a Hall Director at Georgia Southern. Carol Hays Hunley is an international credit analyst at Pittsburgh National Bank. She was married in August 1984 to Tom Hunley.

Lori Jons Westmoreland graduated from The University of Texas of the Permian Basin in '81 with a major in Political Science and a minor in business. She married Fred in August 1982. He is a stockbroker and in the oil and gas business. Karol Ann Lawson is a Ph.D. candidate in Art History at UVA. During 1985, she will be a pre-doctoral fellow at the Smithsonian Institution's National Museum of American Art.

Susan Lettler Creasy and her husband Mike had a 9 lb., 4 oz. baby girl, 9/10/84 named Jade Laurel Creasy. Leslie MacNeil graduated from the University of Wisconsin-Madison with a B.A. in Political Science. She now lives in Milwaukee where she is the corporate business and membership development director at the Milwaukee Athletic Club. Last January, Boo Major became trainer and general manager of Hickory Top Riding School at Woodcreek Farm's stables in Pontiac, S.C. and Hickory Top Farm in Eastover, S.C. She graduated in '81 from Univ. of S.C. Sarah Martin received a promotion in the advertising/pr firm of Ruder, Finn & Rotman.

Claire McDonnell says, "To the nice people of my senior year, I got my braces off in Dec., 1982 and everything is just fine. Thanks for your patience." She is now working for General Nutrition Corporation in label design and production in addition to doing free-lance artwork and drawings. At last writing, Sharon McGrath Gardner and her husband Buddy were expecting a baby in March of '85.

She was working at Cancer Care as the assistant director of development, but was planning for part-time work late summer. Sarane McHugh has been working at a boatyard in Oxford, MD for the past 2½ years and loves the peace and quiet of the Eastern Shore. Margaret M. Medlock is an advertising sales representative for the Economist magazine in Port Washington. Debra J. Middleton is working in Chicago as an arbitrage dealer in the investment department of Harris Bank. Angie Odom has been living for 2 years in Alexandria with Olivia Chaplin and Molly Rogers but is now living in Old Town, VA, in a 150-year-old home. She is a regional sales manager for Four Seasons Hotels, Ltd. and loves the traveling.

Chris O'Leary-Rose has been at John Carroll University in Cleveland, Ohio working on her M.A. in English. She was working as assistant supervisor in accounting for Wright Airlines. In June, 1982, she married Ken and on Thanksgiving, 1984 they had a beautiful baby boy, Jeffrey Earl Rose. Dana Painter Parkey and her husband Bob bought a home in July, 1984. She has been teaching first grade in Houston which she says is satisfying her maternal instincts for now. Susan Pinkard is back in Roanoke, VA, working for the Ground Round restaurant and for a new commuter airline. She spent 3 months in the summer of '84 in South America working for the Peace Corps. Stephanie Rinaldi Charlip married Steve in May, '84. They're living in New York City where she works for an investment management firm and Steve is in law school. She and Olivia Chaplin were in Susan Graham's wedding party last December. Allison Joy

Roberts has been traveling about visiting SBC'ers. Last fall she saw Jane Terry Lee and Scott in their home in Rock Hill, then she saw Nan Dabbs Loftin and her husband in Charlotte. Nan was expecting — in February, Nan? Then she went to D.C. to visit Theresa Blane Lange and her husband Bob in their new condo in Falls Church. Also in that area, Molly Rogers just bought a condo.

Susan Rowat is no longer working as a paralegal as she is hoping to finish her MBA by 1986. Betsy Simpson has been promoted to traffic/production coordinator in Lewis, Gilman & Kynett's Collateral Services Department in Berwyn, PA. Hedley Sipe Smith, who, may I add, is gorgeous and thin, is now residing in Richmond with her new husband Joe. They were married in May, 1984 and spent their honeymoon in Italy. Kim Wood, '80, was one of the bridesmaids. Hedley is working here in nursing after getting her nursing degree, also in May '84, from UVA. She is pursuing a new facet of nursing — reviewing in order to contain costs and monitor quality of care. Stephanie Stitt spent 1984 traveling to Berlin and Helsinki. She works in the Registrar Department at the Guggenheim where she arranges shipping for artworks and helps manage the collection as well as exhibitions.

Tania Voss Ryan was married in August 1983 to Stephen. They live in Old Town, where she teaches and acts as director of development at Alexandria County Day School. Jane Ward Moore married Max 9/84. Max is an account executive with Globe Communications and Jane is assistant director of residence at Highland Farms retirement community in Asheville, NC.

Nancy Y. Webb lives in Boston, MA and is working for a marketing consulting firm in their travel department. Nancy Weinberg is still working at E.F. Hutton in New York City where she was promoted to AVP in the ERISA services tax strategy department. Pamela Wood Davis is living in San Jose, CA, where her husband, Glenn took a new job. She is an executive secretary for Ataua Corporation and does fashion modeling part-time.

A few latecomers: Elaine L. Arozarena is a marketing division manager for Dun & Bradstreet International and will be working for another few months on a special project in their Mexico City office.

Cammie Bethea was married in April to William Luther Mills. Both Cammie and her husband received their M.D. degrees from the Univ. of S.C. School of Medicine in Columbia, this May. Cammie is starting a 3-year residency program in internal medicine and William a 5-year residency in orthopaedic surgery at Richland Memorial Hospital in Columbia.

Mary Davis Garone married John Garone, an assistant treasurer with the Bank of New York, in April. Mary is promotion coordinator for The Runner magazine in NYC. Her sister, Sally Davis Daniels, '82 and Cornelia Kennedy '81 were members of the wedding party. The Garones are living in Hoboken, NJ — a few blocks from Stephanie Rinaldi Sharlip and her husband Steve.

Tracy Drake is working as a receptionist in Fort Lauderdale while awaiting acceptance to graduate school to get her master's degree in occupational therapy. Kathryn Levi Hoover loves Richmond, VA, her job as a programmer for Southern States Coop, and her volunteer job as admissions rep. for the SB Alumnae Club. She and Michael are still working on their house and yard, but they're almost there.

Harriet Harrison Leavett has just finished her second year of law school. Whitney enjoys being a stockbroker with Merrill Lynch. They spend weekends racing sailboats on Galveston Bay.

Anne-Marie McAndrews, who is a stockbroker in the institutional sales department of Stifel, Nicolaus & Co. in NYC, is planning to marry John Michael Pagli, Jr. in August. He is an investment banker at First Boston Corp., NYC. Elizabeth Britton Purdy married Arthur Thorsey in June and they are living in Reston, VA. Elizabeth is an account executive for Aramis Inc. of New York, in Washington, D.C., and her husband is a member of the law firm of Gilbert W. Davis Associates in Fairfax.

As for myself, Helen Masters Durham, I continue to work as a marketing assistant with Dominion Bank in Richmond, VA while I chase Arch, my two-year-old pride and joy, around in my "free" time. Buck received his Ph.D. in Biochemistry last year and now has almost completed his first year of medical school at MCV. We've almost completed the remodeling of our 150-year-old farmhouse, only to put it on the market so we can move closer into town. I think about you all often and ask you to keep in touch. My thanks to those of you who not only told me what you were doing, but other SBC 'B'ers also. Look forward to hearing about you all again SOON!

In the Sweet Briar Tradition

Sweet Briar has just completed the most successful capital campaign in the College's history with over $15.2 million in annual and capital support. On behalf of the Boards of Directors and Overseers and the members of the Planned Giving Committee, I want to say how grateful we are for the bequests and life-income gifts that have helped make this possible. Over $1.6 million has been received through this creative approach to giving.

Sweet Briar's need for generous support will continue to grow as the College meets the challenge of maintaining high academic standards in the coming years. We must look to the creative planning and generous commitment of many alumnae to make this possible. It is the hope of all of us on the Planned Giving Committee that those who wish to express their gratitude for all that Sweet Briar has meant in their lives in a tangible way, while protecting their financial position, will look into the possibilities offered by life-income gifts to the College. These irrevocable gifts are invested to provide income for a donor during her life, and possibly the life of another, before coming to Sweet Briar.

If you:

- 1) have stocks, land or other assets which have grown significantly in value;
- 2) would like to increase your spendable investment income;
- 3) would like to avoid potential capital gains tax on the transfer of assets;
- 4) would like to reduce your estate now thus saving potential estate taxes and probate costs;
- 5) would benefit from claiming a charitable deduction for your gift now;

and most importantly, if you would like to have the personal satisfaction of making an important capital gift to Sweet Briar during your lifetime, please contact the College to discuss whether a life-income gift would be right for you.

There are so many creative ways to make Sweet Briar part of your investment planning that I hope you will consider taking advantage of this form of giving as the end of the 1985 year approaches.

If you would like further information about including the College in your will or making a life-income gift, please contact F. Mark Whittaker, Director of Development, Box G, Sweet Briar College, Sweet Briar, Virginia 24595 (804/381-6161). All of us on the Planned Giving Committee are grateful for the interest and commitment of many alumnae, parents, and friends who are making the College part of their long-range estate plans in a creative and thoughtful way.

A Barrel Set and Other Stories

Campus Archaeology at Sweet Briar

By Ann Marshall Whitley '47
Director, Sweet Briar Museum

The Sweet Briar Museum is a fact. The square footage in the lower level of Boxwood Inn is filled with memorabilia of the College and items from the days of the plantation before the College was born. The only remaining slave cabin, behind Sweet Briar House, has over 200 farm tools from the early days of the College and the late 19th century. Sweet Briar House has many pieces of furniture and decorative items that were a legacy to the College from the Fletcher and Williams founding families. One day recently I was asked, "Well, you turned up a treasure trove but where do you go from here?"

I was bemused by the question but not confounded. I know the tip of the iceberg has been breached but there has to be a great deal more to be sleuthed out. Where, but in and on the ground, under the briars and brambles, down the old wells and privies? In the woods, what do the roots of ancient trees hug and hide? We have 3000 rolling acres of woods, fields, manicured lawns, old wagon roads, briar patches, gullies, streambeds and lakes at Sweet Briar. What lies beneath such a diverse and sizable acreage?

I am neither a certified historian nor a trained archaeologist but over the many years working in the field of art history I have developed an interest in what people worldwide are digging out of both archives and ground. Why couldn't Sweet Briar do the same?

Our neighboring colleges are having great success with trowels, brushes, and carefully constructed grids. Thomas Jefferson's Monticello and James Monroe's Ashlawn near Charlottesville are being dug with great rewards by the University of Virginia and the College of William and Mary respectively. Washington and Lee has done an outstanding job in locating artifacts from their soil to compliment their superb new collection of Chinese export porcelain. Would it not be possible for Sweet Briar students to join the ranks of collegiate diggers?

What couldn't we find if we looked around for clues to the past under our very feet? Sweet Briar has been (and still is) a working plantation for 215 years. Lots of living, dying and learning has taken place over many years here. Certainly many things must be left that tell a tale — albeit well hidden from the neophyte eye.

A number of heads gathered and decided to play sleuth. Where to start? The Sociology-Anthropology department determined to find the location of long-gone plantation outbuildings. One area would be selected, then investigated scientifically, to introduce Sweet Briar students to archaeological procedures. All artifacts would be correctly excavated, correlated and interpreted. In turn they would be analyzed and conclusions drawn.

Claudia Chang, the assistant professor of Anthropology and her husband Perry Tourtelotte, an archaeologist with the state of Virginia, investigated the identified sites in order to select one for the first on-campus dig. Some experimental holes were dug in the rolling pasture behind Sweet Briar House in an area where five servants' cabins were known to have existed in the nineteenth century. With the exception of some square nails, the site revealed nothing. Undoubtedly, when the cabins were razed every fragment of their existence was removed, the ground scraped clean, and the area turned into pasture. Dry holes are as disappointing to the archaeologist as they are to oil wildcatters.

In the spring of 1984 a deep pit under a deodar cedar behind Sweet Briar House was selected as a starting point. After several weeks of digging, it was concluded that the pit was the site of the plantation ice house. The assorted scientifically-dug artifacts that turned up were disappointingly few and the students registered a certain amount of disgust at the pieces of brick, square nails, bits of glass and charred wood. One student said, "It had to have been the ice house because ice surely wouldn't leave much trace after 100 years and we found a lot of nothing, like melted ice."

The collective heads bent together again. The 1985 dig should give tangible evidence of active life on Sweet Briar. Maybe it would be better to concentrate on more contemporary 20th century archaeology. As much can be learned from digging up the recent past as the ancient past. The heads decided the students could learn a great deal from objects of their grandmother's and great-grandmother's days. Where did the College dump its trash for the first 50 years? There were certainly no trash pickups until after World War II, so where did the College disposables go from 1906 to about 1960?

Dr. Ernest Edwards, of the Biology department, knows where every blade of grass grows on Sweet Briar land. He obliged us by providing a grand topographical map of the campus neatly marked with nine red X's. "Those red X's are trash dumps and some are quite extensive," he said. How right he was!

The site selected for investigation this time is in the woods just off Woodland Road. It will take years to investigate it thoroughly and properly but the students have made quite a dent in many of the mounds and are entranced with antiques such as milk glass liners from old zinc mason jar lids, clear glass light bulbs with little spikes on top, soda pop bottles from long extinct manufacturing companies. There is old Refectory crockery, turn-of-the-century flint glass pitchers and tumblers. They have found earthenware salt glaze egg crocks, the fender from a Model T Ford, 1920s and '30s nail polish bottles, art deco perfume containers and the complete history of Phillips Milk of Magnesia bottles from no color to cobalt blue. There are medicine, extract, fruit juice and old glass milk bottles, but so far no plastic items, no liquor containers, and nothing later than the 1930s.

The students have learned that in order to locate such treasures they have to wear heavy-soled shoes, cover their legs and arms, swat black gnats, avoid the prolific poison ivy and give up on their finger nails. They now have more than a nodding acquaintance with leaf mold, white grubs, earth worms, beetles and unidentified things that creep and crawl. The diggers are a staunch crew and the things they are digging up are as alien to them as computers are to me.

They marvel over 75-year-old octagonal pickle jars, milk glass cold cream containers and ink bottles. Their milk comes in cartons and nearly everything else comes in plastic. One student bemoaned the fact that her grandchildren would never have any fun digging because "by then everything will be biodegradable." Another girl held up an old tooth powder container. When told what it was she asked, "What on earth was tooth powder?"

They find it hard to believe that medicine came in bottles with simple cork stoppers. "Why, any baby could pull out the stopper and drink the stuff!" They can't conceive of the time before Ralph Nader, the Pure Food and Drug Law, and recent safety regulations.

The students had not comprehended the extent of our world trade before World War II. Mud encrusted porcelain shards have manufacturers' marks from Spain, England, Italy, Austria, Mexico and Canada as well as from all over the U.S. The girls are captivated by the lovely patterns, now extinct, on old teacups, plates and platters.

Other items are surfacing: a classic marble urn of the mid-19th century. It probably cracked and was broken during a cold winter in the 1930s. No doubt it was a Fletcher piece and was in the Sweet Briar House garden. Pieces from a broken mug belonging to the Fletcher Chinese rose medallion porcelain dresser set of 1850 are turning up. The rest of the set is in the Museum. A servant probably dropped the mug in the '20s or '30s and threw it out. There are old enamel buckets and washpans, oyster shell buttons, and canning jars.

A new and tangible world is opening up right under the students' hands and feet, and they ask so many questions it is hard to field them all. There is a constant murmur of, "What's this?" or "Wasn't this stuff buried when we were on the gold standard?" and even, "Do you suppose there was any silver buried around here during the Civil War?" Could it be that our promising archaeologists see more in the digging than scientific endeavor?

I, too, am learning. One can teach old dogs new tricks! I have just learned what a "barrel set" is. It sounded like a square dance figure to me, but I was told it was a type of archaeological site. A campus employee and a confirmed treasure hunter dropped by the Museum to tell me that he had discovered a barrel set in the woods behind the greenhouse while hunting for mushrooms. "What in the world is a barrel set?" I asked him.

"Well," he said, "way back, a family would fill a wood barrel with trash. They'd load it on a wagon and take it to a place in a thicket or woods and set the barrel out of sight. That's a barrel set."

I immediately went out to investigate the "barrel set." Naturally, the barrel was long rotted away but the remnants of the metal hoops were still there. The contents were in a very small area and most covered over with a thick layer of leaf mold. A small cache like this is only a lucky find. There was a perfect old ink bottle, an extract bottle; probably it had held vanilla or wintergreen. There was an old milk glass cold cream jar, broken pieces of an old green and white sandwiched glass student lamp shade and other assorted pieces of porcelain, glass, metal and pottery.

My treasure hunting friend told me the barrel was set out there between 1915 and 1917. The extract bottle and the inkwell told the story. The extract bottle was made in a single mold which placed it in the time frame after 1903. It was unmarked as to fluid capacity which placed it before 1918. At about the end of World War I a federal law was passed that containers must be marked with their fluid capacity. The ink bottle was dated by my friend at about 1915. Ink bottles are his hobby and he owns dozens of them. From those two items it was deduced that the barrel was set out just prior to our involvement in World War I. There are probably dozens of such sites on Sweet Briar land but this was my introduction to a "barrel set."

I now begin to wonder what happened to the hundreds of bottles of vintage wine that were found in the Sweet Briar House cellar at the founding of the College. An article in the March 1955 Alumnae Magazine written by Professor Dee Long mentions this liquid bottled bonanza. She learned about it from an old Williams family retainer whom she interviewed for the article. Did the founding fathers have a big party to dispose of the wine and then perhaps write into the rules the "no drinking on campus" policy? We might learn more if we find a huge cache of 19th century wine bottles somewhere — someday.

Where did all those people who lived on the Sweet Briar Plantation dump their rubbish? The earliest bottles that we have found date back only to the 1880s. Of course, we have barely tapped the surface, but then we are only just launching the great archaeological project. Some people laugh at our enthusiasm over what they call "old junk," but one man's trash is another man's treasure. Everything has a story to tell and as Ivor Noel Hume, the Williamsburg archaeologist, states in his book All the Best Rubbish, "An archeologist labors with broken pots and the historian deals with half truths and between them they rewrite history." Who knows what we will be able to write in another year or two!

This year the Sweet Briar students are reveling in a new antiquarian world of objects quite alien to them. Even though the varied objects come from my world, my mother's world and her mother's before her, they are new and different to the students in the Classes of 1985, '86, and '87. But, that is the whole case in point — the discovery of any part of the past is knowledge for the future, and our girls are going after it with bare hands, trowels and, of course, plastic bags to put the history in.

Digging up Sweet Briar's past has become a research and fieldwork component of my course, Introduction to Anthropological Archaeology, taught every spring semester.

In 1982 I designed a class exercise that would help my students develop technical and research skills in archaeology and relate textbook concepts to actual research concerns. For example, anthropologists use archaeology as a means for reconstructing the past cultures of prehistoric and historic people. From the material remains of things that show what people did in everyday life — such as their house plans, their refuse dumps, their artifacts — the anthropological archaeologist wants to explain how cultures change, develop, and in some cases collapse.

Archaeology is more than an activity of collecting potsherds, cataloging museum pieces, digging into our dusty past. It is the process and discipline of explaining how and why cultures functioned under certain environmental and social conditions.

To convince students that there really is the "Native American behind the Arrowhead," that social and cultural context exists behind all material objects, I began a project in the historical archaeology of Sweet Briar Plantation. From materials collected by Ann Whitley, Curator of the Sweet Briar Museum, we learned that the original plantation consisted of servant and slave quarters, the plantation office, out-buildings, and the main house. Here our goal was to reconstruct the culture of a southern plantation from the material remains and historical documentation of the Fletchers' estate during the nineteenth century.

In 1983 I undertook limited test excavations of the historic components of the Sweet Briar Plantation. On the north side of the old road bed that went to Amherst, behind the platform tennis courts, we tested areas for outlines of the old slave quarters. In Elijah Fletcher's diary, there had been mention of a row of slave cabins along this road. The excavations consisted of five one-meter square units excavated to about 30 centimeters in depth. The areas with culturally disturbed deposits of ash and charcoal contained broken glass, nineteenth century pottery shards, nails and metal scraps. However, there were no definite outlines of the cabins due to the reversed stratigraphic levels of the cultural deposits. Plowing and resurfacing of the campus grounds probably had destroyed some of the old house or cabin footings.

In 1984 the class excavated a large depression associated with Sweet Briar House. This sunken depression, about 24 feet in diameter, has been identified as an ice-house and will be reported on in this issue by Kathryn Repetto.

Then last spring, as a departure from digging up the remains of Sweet Briar Plantation, we began four test trenches in one of the five reported historic dumps at Sweet Briar. This dump behind Woodland Road has historic surface collections of bottles, tin cans, and other artifacts that date from 1910 to about 1930. Although this refuse dump does not appear associated with the plantation era, some of the items found in the dump came from the main house. Material from the dump ranges from dining hall china service to face cream and shampoo bottles and food containers. From the china fragments, we have a record of discarded patterns from the early history of Sweet Briar.

Although results from our tests are still preliminary, several educational goals have been met. First of all my students have had the opportunity to participate in archaeological fieldwork. From this experience, they begin to understand the research process. For example, I show them the principles of soil deposition and stratigraphy. During class sessions we constantly discuss what is happening at each of the test units. The students have learned how to draw soil profiles, record numbers and quantities of artifacts, and to determine chronology and sequences of material. Furthermore, I encourage the students to ask for explanations of these material remains. For example, what kind of cultural landscape did a southern plantation such as Sweet Briar occupy? What does the material of a refuse dump tell us about the everyday lives of past Sweet Briar students?

Archaeology can now be understood as both a scientific and humanistic discipline that provides methods and theories for reconstructing and explaining the past. This process of research leads us to other paths of self-discovery. In Vance Packard's terms, the throw-away culture of America is a reflection of our cultural values and obvious preoccupation with the material world. The trash we throw away today is tomorrow's archaeology. And in many senses, this insight is no less startling than the clues that broken nails, glass, china, and old bottles from a nineteenth century southern plantation or a twentieth century refuse dump of a women's college give about the historical material culture of our recent past. □

Historical Archaeology at Sweet Briar College: A Student's View

By Kathryn P. Repetto '86

"In Celebration of Virginia Women: Their Cultural Heritage" was the title of a symposium held last winter at Sweet Briar and Randolph-Macon Woman's College as part of a statewide celebration initiated by Linda Johnson Robb, wife of Virginia's governor.

Associate Dean Elizabeth R. Baer served as moderator of the first session, "College Communities and Visible Leaders: Their Contributions to Virginia Women's Education."

Gerald M. Berg, associate professor of History, and Claudia Chang, assistant professor of Anthropology, introduced their students who made presentations. There were also videotapes, including recollections of Meta Glass, president of Sweet Briar from 1925 to 1946, by her secretary, Lois Ballenger, and Martha von Briesen '31, former director of public relations.

Tours of Sweet Briar House and the Sweet Briar Museum, conducted by Ann Marshall Whitley '47, curator, were followed by a reception in the Refectory Art Gallery, which was displaying a special exhibit by contemporary women. In the evening the keynote address, "Ladies of the Club: Unlikely Revolutionaries," was given by Anne Firor Scott, W.K. Boyd Professor of History at Duke University.

The program continued at Randolph-Macon the next day and opened with a panel, "Virginia Women Writers," moderated by Elizabeth Johnston Lipscomb '59, associate professor of English, Randolph-Macon Woman's College.

Last February, I was fortunate to participate in a two-day symposium, "In Celebration of Virginia Women: Their Cultural Heritage," held at Sweet Briar College and Randolph-Macon Woman's College, respectively. My speech, titled "Historical Archaeology at Sweet Briar College: A Student's View," focused on my participation in the Sweet Briar Dig which was undertaken as part of an archaeology course in the spring of 1984. My speech was accompanied by 20 colored slides ranging from a Confederate army map of the plantation to artifacts we found through several years of excavation.

Sweet Briar College was established in 1901, on the Fletcher Plantation, Sweet Briar. Sweet Briar Plantation was one of the most progressive and largest in Amherst County. I excavated some of the historic remains of the plantation which in 1825, had a six-room house and other outside structures. My class project concentrated upon an ice house. Through the historic documentation of Elijah Fletcher's diary, we were able to learn about the existence of an outside kitchen, a privy, a washhouse, slave quarters, tobacco sheds, a weaving house and a smoke house. You can imagine our excitement in being the first class to participate in digging up some of Sweet Briar's past!

Let me describe some of the slides I presented. The Gilmore map made by the Confederate army was detailed for this area at that time of 1864. The Fletcher monument was marked as the family cemetery, where "our" Daisy is buried.

Sweet Briar House in 1825 was a six-room house. Our class project was located behind the house where a depression existed. The class was seen in the slides — yes, we were knee-deep in dirt but that never decreased our enthusiasm. We divided up in teams of two. Each team worked on one square, 3 ft. by 3 ft. (1 meter/1 meter). The trench ran straight through the depression which was approximately 24 feet in length. Every other square was worked on.

You might ask yourself what we were hoping to find or uncover. Believe it or not, we were hoping to find historic trash and the outline of the ice pit. I am proud to report to you that we did find the outline of the ice pit! How do we know? The differentiation of soil color outlined the ice pit in its exact location. We also found pieces of brick, slate, glass, nails and pottery. The nails can be dated within the 18th and 19th centuries. Because of their square heads, we know that these nails were machine cut. The pottery we found was all pearl ware. Pearl ware pottery is all-white pottery manufactured in 1825. The glass pieces were both clear and greenglass. The clear was used for medicine bottles while the greenglass was used for wine bottles. The brick and slate fragments are difficult to date specifically. We know that the brick is historic and that the slate was used as roofing material for the outside features on the plantation.

Though these artifacts of historic trash may not sound that interesting, each piece adds to the quest for "our" ancestry of Sweet Briar. For us students, this "hands-on" approach was a valuable educational experience. By studying 17th to 19th century artifacts, we gain the ability to reconstruct historic sites like Colonial Williamsburg, Thomas Jefferson's home in Charlottesville, Liberty Hall at Washington and Lee — and now the Sweet Briar Plantation. I should stress the importance of an activity like this. We have just begun to uncover our historic past and in doing so, we learn more about our own cultural heritage. □

Women at Sweet Briar in the 1920s

By Whitney W. Machnik '85

Winter Term at Sweet Briar affords students a wide variety of options, ranging from travel (see "Winter Term in Vienna" by Julia Sadler de Coligny '34 in the summer issue of this publication) to internships in a chosen field. It constitutes a month of intense work, usually culminating in a treatise reporting the results and findings of this special experience.

Professor Gerald Berg of the Department of History offers a January Term project called "Doing Sweet Briar's History."

The purpose of the course, says Gerry Berg, is to teach students how to "do history"...not by reading the works of other historians, but by delving into the original sources.

Learning how to discover and explore the actual records of an earlier time, wherever they may be, and then drawing conclusions from that information, is valuable for any historian.

At Sweet Briar, the archives of the Mary Helen Cochran Library provide a rich lode of material. Last winter's students found collections of College Bulletins, the Briar Patch, the Sweet Briar Magazine, faculty minutes, the Sweet Briar News, The Lynchburg News, The Story of Sweet Briar College by Martha Lou Lemmon Stohman, as well as boxes and scrapbooks of clippings and letters which have been collected and filed (some on micro-film) by staff members and interested volunteers.

Professor Berg, after an introductory period of learning the techniques of historical method, allows each student to choose her own topic for research. The results are impressive, as these excerpts from some of his students' accounts attest.

Why a Sweet Briar Degree

A college education increases personal powers and capacities. Today as never before the world demands of its leaders, both men and women, an understanding of present complex conditions based on the experience of the race. A college education is not sufficient for an understanding.

II. A college education increases earning power.

Once a grammar-school education was a sufficient training for the woman who desired to become self-supporting. The teacher of an earlier day was considered adequately equipped if she had a grounding in the three R's. Now a college degree is demanded of the high-school instructor, and is a distinct advantage in securing a position as a grade teacher. A generation ago charity or philanthropy depended largely upon a kindly heart and a well-filled purse. Today it depends upon a trained social worker, who must have a college education supplemented by technical training. A nurse in early years of her husband's management of his sons and daughters.

IV. A college education forms the basis for all higher specialization. College graduates today are working in many fields never before available to women, such as:

We urge upon every Sweet Briar student to consider the points made above. This year may be for you a crucial period. One or two years of college work is today negligible. Trained women need college degrees. Without such a degree positions that you desire will be closed to you; colleges and societies will be closed to you.

Throughout the 1920s, colleges everywhere saw increased enrollment, smaller, single-sex colleges especially. Sweet Briar College, itself small and single-sex, was there with all the others. In 1919, the entire student body consisted of 276 students, 19 of them seniors, 110 of them freshmen. By 1924, the student body had increased to 366 students, with 37 seniors and 135 freshmen, a difference of almost a hundred students in only five years. The College at this point had five dorms with another on the way. Why were women choosing to go to college? Most especially, why were they choosing Sweet Briar?

To answer the first question, says Dr. H. Melish in a 1923 Commencement speech, "This glorious age of freedom calls for women of self-reliance and moral worth. College women are the salt of society, the light of their generation... Our college women are chosen spirits, and before them open rich opportunities of influence and service." People were beginning to realize the importance of an education and what it could offer. Lois Peterson '26 wrote an essay in her freshman year on why she chose Sweet Briar. She describes the modern views of women: "...girls should be interested in politics and government and the newspapers and keep up with the times." She further states that "the day is gone when a girl sits at home sewing and embroidering. A girl of today must have action..." Though this is the view of just one person, it does give us an indication of how women felt in the early 1920s. But still, why choose Sweet Briar over other schools in the country?

In addition to having a large campus, a small number of students, and strict regulations, Sweet Briar had what was considered a wide variety of courses. In 1915 there were majors in English, Modern Language, Ancient Language, History and Economics, Mathematics and Physics, and Science. By 1923, a student could also major in Philosophy, Psychology and Social Science. Psychology was added in 1920 with the proviso that the department come up with enough courses for the major; Social Science was considered in January of 1920, after it was learned that it formed the heart of the new curriculum of the Southern Association of Colleges. It was accepted formally as a major in February of 1920, and by 1922, eleven out of thirty-two seniors were Social Science majors, though by the next year that lead had fallen to English. In addition to courses in these majors, there were others, some required, some not. One requirement was two hours of hygiene, which included first aid and the general laws of personal hygiene. Another section was Home Economics. This included Foods, Dietetics, and Household Management. This department is described in a 1925 Sweet Briar Bulletin as being "not based primarily on cooking, and not including textiles of any kind, but dealing with budgeting, interior decoration and advanced forms of cooking." It was decided that courses such as Home Economics, Music and Art be part of the regular college instead of separate since home economics is part of "almost every woman's life" and since the history of art and music appreciation are "a vital part of the great body of cultural knowledge." It was also noted in the bulletin that Sweet Briar was the first college in the south to offer music courses as full-credit courses.

Besides being chosen for its curriculum, Sweet Briar was probably chosen as a secure place, with strict rules and ideals; maybe not chosen by the students, but by parents. Though the 1920s was a time for jazz, smoking and bobbed hair, students at Sweet Briar were expected to be ladies in every situation; at all times they represented the College. For this reason, the Student Government Association covered all facets of student life. In 1923, parties of students going into Amherst had to be comprised of four or more girls, one of whom had to be a senior. In Lynchburg, students had to remain dignified at all times, there could be no dates after 7:30 p.m., and no one could go in on Sunday without permission. While on campus, the regulations were just as rigid. No one could walk outside campus limits in groups of less than three; girls could not entertain men on campus during the week; and everyone was required to attend chapel Sunday morning and Thursday night.

Three examples from the Faculty Minutes are especially noted: In 1920, Dr. Harley noticed that many students were complaining of eyestrain and a nervous condition. It was thus decided that students be in bed by 10:30 each night with absolute silence after that time. A second example concerned Article XIII of the SGA By-laws, which stated that riding unchaperoned in cars with young men is never allowed. On 8 May, 1922, two students were expelled from Sweet Briar for just that, as there was incontrovertible evidence that "they had several times been seen in Amherst in company with two men whose reputation is so bad that they are not permitted to come to Sweet Briar." What was even worse was that they had driven for two hours in a closed automobile without a chaperone; the motion to expel them was passed unanimously. The third example is less an example than a whole concept; that of smoking. In the 1923 SGA By-laws it is stated that "smoking is a flagrant offense against the rules of Student Government. Any student enrolled at Sweet Briar found guilty of smoking in any place during the college session shall be recommended to the faculty for expulsion. This rule shall apply to the college buildings, campus and vicinity, neighboring towns, trains from and returning to Sweet Briar." While smoking was being tried all over the country, at Sweet Briar it was not. One student had begun smoking during the summer and found it impossible to quit once back at college. The immediate punishment was expulsion but, because she and fellow students felt that she could stop if necessary, this was changed to suspension. Two years after this, in 1925, it was decided that the penalty for smoking in each case would be left up to the Executive Committee of the Student Government. This was a large step for Sweet Briar students since the lesser penalty was now parole and a period of "campus" in place of suspension. A further revision occurred in February, 1926, when the By-laws were revised to state, "Smoking is not countenanced at Sweet Briar, on Sweet Briar property, or in public places such as roads, stations, stores, hotels, or anywhere in Amherst, Lynchburg or at neighboring institutions except in private homes in which a student is a guest." Though some of these regulations may have appeared strict, they were mostly designed for the protection of the student. Remember that these were the 1920s and female students had to be protected from danger as well as from a bad reputation.

With all of this, though, there were many privileges given to the students. A major responsibility was the Student Government Association, designed to maintain the College standards. This association, run by students, governed promptness at collegiate exercises and quiet and order in places not controlled by the faculty. It was also noted that in 1919 many of the requested privileges were referred to the Student Government Association for the student leaders to decide on.

Another privilege was with the social life. President McVea, in her 1925 bulletin, says that social activities are important: "Sweet Briar believes that proper social activities have a large place in the life of a normal human being." Though such activities as dances were restricted to a specific number, a big deal was made of them. The dances especially were a large part of the students' social activities.

While these activities were taking place at Sweet Briar, wilder and more exuberant things were occurring outside, in both the United States and Europe. Compared to these events, Sweet Briar appeared almost placid. Though changes did occur along the way, they occurred slowly and Sweet Briar remained quite stable. But one must remember that the college was still young, just into its twenties, and things that appear to some as change are possibly parts of the college not yet formed. To say that the added majors were changes in the curriculum may actually be to say that they were additions to a curriculum not yet completed. The important changes that did occur seem instead to be in privileges given to the students. But were these changes just for appearance? Were they used for the benefit of the students or were they used to attract a higher number or caliber of new students? There is no doubt that most of these changes were requested by the students, but for the administration and faculty to approve them there must have been a stronger motive.

Throughout all of this, with the high ideals for women and the great vocational options open, women were still expected to continue with the traditional roles presented. Dr. Meta Glass, president of Sweet Briar from 1925-1946, exemplified this in a speech made in 1927, when she said: "Higher education of women in no way interferes with matrimony and homemaking...Our graduates marry in large numbers...They are sound in all the essentials and marvelously capable; and are the best mothers the world has ever seen..."

Amherst County Day

AT

Sweet Briar College SATURDAY, MAY 19, 1928

10:30 A. M. TO 5:00 P. M.

(In Case of Rain, May 28)

Sweet Briar extends a neighborly invitation to you to come to a community gathering. Under the auspices of the College and the Sweet Briar Branch of The American Association of University Women.

Sports, Games, Literary and Musical Contests, Etc. Bring picnic lunch, a cup and spoon. Coffee and milk served by the college.

Governor Byrd will speak on the Constitutional Amendments.

SCHEDULE OF EVENTS

10:30—Athletic Events	1:30—Address by Governor Byrd
12:30—Luncheon	2:15—Prizes
3:00—Pageant and Parade of Five-Point Children

CONTESTS

Prizes are offered by individuals and departments at Sweet Briar as follows:

By President Glass:

A prize to the school sending the largest proportional representation of pupils, teachers, and grown people.

Each visitor is asked to register at the Registration Booth.

By Mrs. Wallis:

A prize of $2.00 for the best composition on the topic: "What has the League done for Our Community?"

By Miss Robinson:

A prize of $2.00 offered to the High School student in First Year Latin who shows the greatest proficiency in Latin vocabulary and English derivatives. A statement will be sent to teachers explaining the nature of the test to be given.

By the Department of Botany:

A prize of $2.00 for the best paper presenting: "A Plea for the Preservation of Wild Flowers in Amherst County."

By the Department of Economics and Sociology:

A prize of $2.00 for the best essay on the topic: "How We Increased the Income from Our Farm."

By the Department of English:

1. A prize of $2.00 for the best composition by a High School or Grad School student on the topic: "In a Country Store."
2. A prize of $2.00 for the best composition by a High School or Grad

By the Department of History:

1. A prize of $2.00 for the best composition on the topic: "The Value of a Five-Point Child."
2. A prize of $2.00 for the best composition on the topic: "An Old Landmark of Amherst County."

By the Department of Home Economics:

A prize of $2.00 for the best paper on the 4-H Club.

By the Department of Music:

A prize of a picture to the school that sends the best chorus of ten or more voices.

By the Department of Physics:

A prize of $2.00 for the best composition on the topic: "Why Should We Keep Our Yards and School-Grounds Clean, and How Can it be Done?"

3. A prize of $2.00 for the best composition by a High School or Grad School student on the topic: "Amherst County One Hundred Years from Now."

By the Department of History:

1. A prize of $2.00 for the best composition on the topic: "The Value of a Five-Point Child."
2. A prize of $2.00 for the best composition on the topic: "An Old Landmark of Amherst County."

By the Department of Home Economics:

A prize of $2.00 for the best paper on the 4-H Club.

By the Department of Music:

A prize of a picture to the school that sends the best chorus of ten or more voices.

By the Department of Physics:

A prize of $2.00 for the best composition on the topic: "Why Should We Keep Our Yards and School-Grounds Clean, and How Can it be Done?"

By the Department of Zoology:

A prize of a copy of Reed's "Land Birds", for the best essay on "Some Bird Activities Observed this Year."

ALL COMPOSITIONS, ETC., MUST BE SENT BY MAY 14 TO THE PRESIDENT OF SWEET BRIAR COLLEGE, SWEET BRIAR, VIRGINIA. NO COMPOSITIONS WILL BE RETURNED.

The Athletic Association offers a prize to the school playing the best group game. At least ten must take part.

Better-Baby Contest. Details will be given later.

ATHLETIC EVENTS

Lake. Because so few contestants have entered in other years, there will be no competition in swimming and boating. However, competent life-savers will be in charge and there will be a morning and afternoon swimming period for those who wish to go in. The boats also may be used.

Track and Field Events. These events will be open to all school children of Amherst County within the age limits of each group. As many entries from each school as possible are urged to come and participate.

The Meet Will Start at 10:30 A. M. Any contestant who fails to arrive a time for his event will not be given a chance to enter.

EVENTS

Boys Under Fourteen Years

- |                       |                      |
|-----------------------|----------------------|
| 1. 50-yard dash       | 2. Running high jump |
| 3. Running broad jump |                      |

Boys Fourteen Years and Over

- |                      |                       |
|----------------------|-----------------------|
| 1. 75-yard dash      | 3. Pole vault*        |
| 2. Running high jump | 4. Running broad jump |

Girls Under Fourteen Years

Competition will be entirely team competition. Six girls constitute a team. A school may send more than one team and is urged to allow every girl to enter who is interested. Each team should elect a captain who should arrive earlier than the others and bring with her a list of her group.

- |                        |                      |
|------------------------|----------------------|
| 1. Relay race          | 3. Potato race       |
| 2. Standing broad jump | 4. Running high jump |

Girls Over Fourteen Years

Competition arranged as for the younger group except that four girls constitute a team. Events will be the same, except that a basketball throw for distance will be substituted for the standing broad jump.

Sweet Briar- Amherst Relations from 1918-1929

By Nancy Finley '85

Colleges do not exist as separate entities; therefore, they must establish relationships with the town, city or county in which they are located. Each college chooses the type of relation desired and has the power to change these relations over time.

Sweet Briar College found itself on the site of an old plantation in Amherst County, with a population scattered over many miles. The college community noticed that the county was lacking in health care and education. Although it might have tried to remain secluded, the college set about helping the county almost from the very start.

Three associations formed and active in the years 1918-1929 are examples of this type of helping relationship: the Association of American University Women, the Young Women's Christian Association and the Amherst County Health Association, all of which were composed partly or entirely of Sweet Briar students, alumnae or faculty. The information about these associations found in the Sweet Briar archives is strictly from the "helpers" point of view, the voices from those "helped" remain unheard.

In December, 1930, Professor Caroline Sparrow of Sweet Briar wrote a letter to Mr. Sandberg of the Associations of American Colleges about the involvement of Sweet Briar in the health affairs of Amherst County. At the end of World War I the students of Sweet Briar had $500 they had intended to donate to the war effort, but at the suggestion of the faculty they gave the money to Amherst County to help pay for the salary of a nurse. Amherst County, they believed, needed their assistance because it was so "backward" and poor. In order to raise further money the Amherst County Health Association was formed with an executive committee of some women from Amherst and a few Sweet Briar faculty members.

After 1919 a nurse worked steadily in Amherst County. This was made possible by the efforts of interested students and faculty at Sweet Briar and the residents of Amherst County. Most of all it seemed possible because of the attention the committee created, so much so that the county supervisor began appropriating $1,000 toward the salary of the nurse and the school board paying $300. Sweet Briar continued to donate about $300 annually. Miss Sparrow believed the enterprise worked because Sweet Briar insisted the leaders of the Association be from Amherst; the members from Sweet Briar were only helping.

Also in the letter to Sandberg, Miss Sparrow noted the incredible effect the nurse had on the health of Amherst County. Upon the nurse's original examination, 90% of all children were found to be under par in some way. At the time of the letter the percentage had dropped to 30-40%. This drop also had something to do with the state's instigation of awarding a certificate to children with good vision, teeth, nose, throat and hearing and normal weight. With this incentive to become a "5-point" child, many children were persuaded to be examined by the nurse, so that between the years of 1926 and 1931 the number of "5-point" children rose from 118 to 745. Also because of the efforts of the A.C.H.A. tuberculosis nearly disappeared, typhoid disappeared and the welfare of babies improved with the onset of trained midwives and instruction for expectant mothers. Concluding, Miss Sparrow noted that this was an example of Sweet Briar going out into the community and being of service. Mr. Palmer wrote back to Miss Sparrow stating that the involvement of Sweet Briar in the health of Amherst was "indeed a very striking example of the contribution a college can make to its local community."

The A.C.H.A. was originally affiliated with the Red Cross but they broke away so they could deal with their problems close at hand. An editorial in the Sweet Briar News in 1929 deals with the choice of the individual donation to either the Red Cross or the A.C.H.A. The editor felt that the students, in deciding, should consider themselves citizens of Amherst County before citizens of the U.S.A. The former duty is more pressing, people are in dire need in Amherst County and the state does not realize this. The welfare of the county, then, is in "the hands of its more fortunate friends." Sweet Briar is in a perfect position to help greatly, therefore students should donate to A.C.H.A. The Red Cross will be glad that Sweet Briar has helped. This editorial is an excellent example of student concern for the welfare of Amherst County residents. But the question is, were the students really concerned about individuals in Amherst or was donating money seen as some sort of responsibility due to their status in society?

Shortly after Sweet Briar became involved in the A.C.H.A., the Sweet Briar chapter of the American Association of University Women suggested another way Sweet Briar could become involved with the community. In 1921, when Emilie Watts McVea was president of the College and of the A.A.U.W. chapter, the idea of an Amherst County Day was suggested. Plans were made and committees formed for the first Amherst County Day to be held May 13, 1922. In a pamphlet advertising the Day, the purpose of the gathering was stated by Dr. McVea: "Sweet Briar wants to know all of you better and Sweet Briar wants you to know the College better so that every year you will love it more and be prouder of it in every way." Because of the success of the first Day it was decided that Amherst County Day become a once a year event.

Amherst County Day was a day when all citizens of Amherst County were allowed to roam around the campus. Events were planned for the benefit of the guests; the children were entertained by track events, games and swimming in the lake supervised by Sweet Briar students. In these early days the most popular events seemed to be the "Better Baby Clinic and Contest" and the "5-point parade." Both of these events were created, as was the A.C.H.A., to improve the health of the people of Amherst County. Babies brought to the "Better Baby Clinic" were examined by Sweet Briar's Dr. Harley. Advice and instructions were given to the mothers on more effective ways to raise their children. An award was given to the mother who had taken the best care of her baby since the previous Amherst County Day. The 5-point parade was a parade of all the children in the county who had received their 5-point certificate from the state. Being able to participate in this parade was another incentive to be examined by the nurse.

Other events were demonstrations of farm equipment, home demonstrations, the Sweet Briar farm tour, and speakers on various subjects such as Dr. T.K. Wolfe, editor of The Southern Planter, talking on innovations in agriculture. Amherst County Day also provided a forum for politicians; many came to help their campaigns because they could discuss matters with many of the voters in the county all at once. For the children there were essay contests sponsored by almost every department of the College, spelling bees and dancing. In looking at the type of activities planned it would seem that Amherst County Day was instituted, as stated in the March 6, 1929 issue of the Sweet Briar News, to "promote friendly relations to the end that the college might hold a place in the county as an educative influence." The last two words in that quote imply that the relations formed are highly unequal. Sweet Briar, being in a higher educational position, is an influence on the rest of the county.

Faculty members seemed to be more intimately involved, especially Dr. McVea. It was she who instituted Amherst County Day in the beginning, along with other opportunities allowing Sweet Briar to help, such as providing the premises where the Agricultural and Home Economics Club of Amherst could meet to hold a short course. They learned about poultry culling, raised and quick breads, canning and sewing. Dr. McVea welcomed the club and expressed the hope that they come back.

Dr. McVea's interest in the community is also evident in local newspaper articles which appeared after her death in 1928. In one, she was praised because she was interested "not only in educational matters, but in the community as well and had many friends in Amherst County and in Lynchburg.” They almost seem surprised that she could actually have friends in the county. It was her example of Sweet Briar’s role to help that was followed in years after her death. In a student editorial on Amherst County Day in 1929 the editor believes that the tradition of hospitality at Sweet Briar should continue in memory of Dr. McVea. The Day was seen as an example of southern hospitality. The campus becomes the estate, the faculty and others are the hosts and hostesses. The lawn party is the one true trait of southern hospitality left, with the picnic lunches and games. Therefore, it appears that Dr. McVea had a great influence in creating the image of Sweet Briar as part of the Amherst community and because of that position insisting that the college be hospitable and help the people of Amherst.

Another example of Sweet Briar’s involvement with Amherst county during this period is seen in the student organization, the Young Womens Christian Association. An extension committee of the YWCA worked at the Indian Mission, among “a race scorned by the white and scorning the Negro, a people with the mental, moral and physical weaknesses of all three races...” This quote is extremely enlightening in that it allows a glimpse at what these women actually thought they were doing. They were Christian, justifying their attempts at “civilizing” these Indians who were so unlike themselves. Not that all this was conscious on their part; they did have their social and religious position to uphold and helping their Indians performed this function.

For the YWCA at this time the Indians were a responsibility of Amherst and Sweet Briar was a part of Amherst. In 1919-20 much had been done. A church was built by Mr. Arthur Gray and a two-room schoolhouse and mission house erected. Sweet Briar provided funds for those buildings and the YWCA supplied a kitchen and a workroom. The ultimate goal of the YWCA was to establish an industrial school where the girls could live, sew, garden, raise poultry and learn academics. The boys could learn farming, basic carpentry and stock raising. It would be a place where the entire community could gather.

As of 1920 the Mission had a full time teacher supported half the year by the Episcopal Church in Amherst and the Sweet Briar YWCA. Students hiked up there to organize parties for the children and fill stockings at Christmas. This pitch appeared in the Sweet Briar Handbook through the 1920s, with the Extension Committee of the YWCA adding more activities such as the collection of books for the Amherst library, a health campaign at a local school and sending magazines and provisions to the county poorhouse. Their aim was to make people “warm, well, and happy.”

A member of the YWCA, Elizabeth Egleston, wrote an article in the Sweet Briar Magazine in 1917-18 entitled “Our Indian Neighbors” in which she describes the problems of the Indians. The students must realize the “squalor and the utter hopelessness of the people at the Indian Mission.” “Students can help their condition if they stop being slack and walk to the Mission and help teach. If they cannot give of themselves, then give money or old clothes — everything helps. It is all up to the students.” Calling on their sense of responsibility, their duty as Christians, must have been extremely effective in rallying student support.

In looking at these examples of the A.C.H.A., Amherst County Day and the YWCA one is able to determine fairly accurately Sweet Briar’s role in the community and the reasoning behind its involvement. Both students and faculty were involved in the affairs of the county beginning soon after the founding of the college, under the direction and influence of President McVea.

In each case Amherst County, or the people selected, are described as “backward,” “ignorant,” “poor,” and in “dire need.” Amherst County was one big charity case and Sweet Briar established itself above the county, maintaining its position as the plantation once did before them. Remembering the actual condition of Amherst and the ideas that the people of Sweet Briar had about the mentality and physical conditions of their neighbors, the only type of relations possible at this time were exactly those created. Amherst, according to this information, was not on the same level as Sweet Briar. Therefore, Sweet Briar created these associations not really to relate to the people of Amherst but to uphold their perceived duty as members of the community, being people of better material and religious standing.

Therefore, in the years 1918-1929 Sweet Briar did assert its position as a member of Amherst County by helping the people of the community. They were helping, however, according to their notions of improvement. Unfortunately we do not know how the people of the county took to being aided in this fashion, or whether they had even wished to be helped — especially in the case of the Indians. □

Awakening a Collective Consciousness: The Effects of World War II

By Stephanie John Sage
Wilt '86

Despite its isolated location and sheltered atmosphere, Sweet Briar College and its community did not remain unaffected by World War II. It underwent profound changes between 1940 and 1945.

In the years prior to the United States' entry into the war, Sweet Briar had turned its attention toward the international crisis; in December of 1940, for instance, a branch of Bundles for Britain, Inc. was established at Sweet Briar. Activities such as supervised knitting for British armies and clothing drives called for the cooperation of the entire community, and from January 13-18, 1941, an intensified drive resulted in the raising of $528.90 for the cause. Sweet Briar students kept abreast of the war's progress through a regular column in the Sweet Briar News entitled "World News."

As the international crisis worsened, however, the College began to examine its policies more closely, recognizing the possibility of U.S. intervention. At a meeting of the faculty on October 2, 1940, it was suggested by Miss Harriet Rogers that the school study local relief activities and organizations, consult government officials as to how the school could best utilize its facilities in an emergency, explore the ways in which young women could contribute to national service and form a special committee to "consider ways and means whereby Sweet Briar can corporately make a contribution [to the war effort.]"

It was Miss Rogers's fourth suggestion that gave rise to the formation of one of Sweet Briar's most important war-time innovations, the Committee on Emergency Service. Under the guidance of Miss Rogers, the committee took shape and on November 6, 1940, she reported to the faculty on its progress. Besides calling for a survey to determine what causes should solicit college funds and the possibility of students performing service outside Sweet Briar College, Miss Rogers urged that the College community maintain a "responsible and cooperative attitude toward health, work, and general life." It was also on November 6 that Professor Beard spoke of the need for vocational guidance among the students, and reported that she had received requests for a placement bureau on campus. It is interesting to note that even before the U.S. became a belligerent in the war, Sweet Briar students displayed an interest in vocational training. This is one of the earliest indications of the way in which the awareness of Sweet Briar students was changed by the war — they, like women all over the country, were becoming aware of their potential and the contributions they had to make to national service.

The new year was ushered in at Sweet Briar with a convocation on January 15, 1941, at which President Meta Glass discussed national service needs. In her speech she stressed the need for "living a life as normal as possible," adding that the Sweet Briar community should begin its contribution to national defense and service by disciplining itself in "readiness for any emergency" that might arise. Nearly a month later, at a meeting of the faculty on February 5, 1941, the President circulated a letter introducing a new course entitled "Studies in the Present Crisis." Offered by a number of faculty members to juniors and seniors and incorporating several different departments, the course was offered in 1941-42 and again in 1942-43. Another innovation in early 1941 was the introduction of the Student Defenders of Democracy (SDD) at Sweet Briar. In the February 26 issue of the News, an article was published describing the SDD and encouraging Sweet Briar students to become involved, followed by a letter written by Patricia Clements on March 19, 1941 telling how students could become individual members. (Miss Clements was the Field Secretary of the SDD at this time.)

While life on campus at Sweet Briar was gradually affected by the war, so were the College's foreign exchange programs. In May, 1941, when it became apparent that those students selected to spend their junior year in France would have to stay on campus, the French embassy in Washington remedied their loss by awarding three competitive prizes on the basis of achievement in the French language.

With the advent of the 1941-42 academic year, the Sweet Briar News published an article fully describing the activities of the Committee on Emergency Service as a "joint committee of faculty, students, and members of the Sweet Briar community...set up...to explore the ways in which we could become and keep aware of the problems which the World War is bringing to the world as a whole and to each and every individual."

The Committee had by this time greatly expanded and included such sub-committees as Relief, Health and Physical Education, and two more concerned with the discussion of general problems arising from the world crisis. The general committee greatly influenced campus life, serving to constantly remind Sweet Briar students of the world situation and encouraging them to be actively involved in the fund raisers, volunteer projects, and discussions of current problems sponsored by the sub-committees.

But what exactly was the student attitude regarding the war at this time? The results of a Gallup poll taken at Sweet Briar were published in the News on October 29, 1941, showing these results: the majority of Sweet Briar students favored U.S. intervention — of the 290 polled, 67.5% favored intervention, 17.2% were isolationists, and 15.1% were pacifists. Interestingly, these results differed greatly from those of a poll of the American public; 21% voted for intervention, while 79% favored isolation.

Although Sweet Briar opinion seemed to differ from that of the rest of the nation, November 12 saw a joining of Sweet Briar with other Americans in Civilian Defense Week. From November 11-16, 1941, civilians all over the nation waged a "war against waste," which at Sweet Briar incorporated the following: conserving electricity by switching off appliances, saving water, giving generously to relief funds, buying Defense Bonds and Saving Stamps, not wasting food, saving old clothing, and seeking training in practical skills. The article ended with an appeal to the Sweet Briar community to maintain a cheerful, positive attitude:

"To be effective, our conviction must be sincere, our efforts continuous."

The "War Against Waste" was a topic that resurfaced a few weeks later, on November 29, when the Committee on Emergency Service held a meeting discussing the various aspects of the subject. It was stressed that a greater effort to conserve manpower and energy was needed, and ideas were suggested such as collecting old periodicals to fill the need for paper pulp, collecting old clothes, and turning out the lights in rooms not in use.

As the nation was thrust into war in early December, 1941, however, Sweet Briar's activities concerning preparedness in the event of national emergency became part of its full-fledged involvement in the war effort. An editorial in the News entitled "Business as Usual" on December 10, 1941, called for "calmness and determination" in the face of this new crisis:

"'Business as Usual' will mean in our case carrying on our college work as normally as possible...Let us keep our patriotism within the bounds of reason. We are a thinking community and as such we should have a clear-eyed view of the situation...In the years to come education is to count a great deal. The leaders of tomorrow will be the college undergraduates of today...So let our motto be, as is England's, 'Business as Usual.'"

This editorial demonstrated an ever-increasing sensitivity to the worsening world situation, as well as the students' acute sense of responsibility and their special role in the midst of war.

1942 and the nation's full involvement in the war brought still more changes to Sweet Briar life. The Committee on Emergency Service began considering measures for defense in air raids, deciding to consider black-out methods, as well. The college catalogue was affected at this time, too; at the January 13 meeting of the faculty, it was suggested that during the war years it might be appropriate to include in the catalogue a special reference to all academic courses and extra-curricular offerings made by the college to serve the present emergency. (This section was eventually entitled "War-Time Adjustments" and appeared in the catalogues for three years). At the same faculty meeting, dismay was expressed at the students' lack of concern for health and physical fitness, as the faculty believed that both things were very important in war-time. This concern was so great, in fact, that it caused the College to re-examine the importance of physical education and in 1942, physical education became a requirement for the B.A. degree. It was also suggested that in the second semester of the 1941-42 academic year new courses with a vocational emphasis be offered; students had expressed interest in secretarial training, automotive training, and courses in decoding, to name a few. The students themselves proposed to discontinue certain extra-curricular activities in order to have time to participate in such courses. By February 4, 1942, five new courses had been established by a special faculty committee, including shorthand and typing, mechanical and engineering drawing, first aid, home nursing, and elementary lab technique. Students were so enthusiastic about taking the extra-curricular courses that they did so at their own expense, on their own time, and without receiving academic credit.

War-time changes extended into all areas of campus life; as prices rose all over the country for such items as coffee, bread, and milk, the Boxwood Inn was forced to raise its prices. The Inn, a popular student gathering place, raised many of its prices by two or three cents in the first week of January, 1942, much to the chagrin of the students. In May, students experienced rationing when the Inn was forced to limit each girl to purchasing one Coke each, as the Coca-Cola supply had been drastically reduced. Editorials asking students for their cooperation and patience began appearing in the News, as well as bold, full page ads for Defense Stamps and War Bonds.

On February 11, 1942, a new feature called the "Defense Column" appeared in the News, relaying the projects of the Committee on War Service. (When the U.S. became a belligerent, the Committee on Emergency Service had changed its name.) Also, slogans such as "Sleep for Sanity!" and "Exercise for Health!" began appearing above the masthead of the paper on January 21, 1942, reflecting the College's concern for good health and well-being.

On February 25, 1942, a proposal for a conference on war-time topics and priorities was presented at the faculty meeting. The purpose of such a conference was to stress "the seriousness of the situation [and] the great importance of understanding principles of the problems proposed for study." The conference was named the Institute on National Needs and Resources and took place the weekend of April 12, 1942. The Institute focused on topics such as mobilization of resources and national needs, industry and the war, the social aspects of the war emergency, and the role of the church in the present and post-war period. The Institute involved the entire student body, and met with success.

Perhaps its greatest triumph was the further awakening of the collective student consciousness to the graphic reality of the war. This letter to the editor from a sophomore was published in the April 22 issue of the News:

"It is wonderful to live in a dreamland, but we must face reality and we must prepare to do it now. Let's not lose those vivid discussions, that group spirit, and that broader outlook that we had last weekend. Stay awake, Sweet Briar!"

In May of 1943, the College published a booklet entitled Sweet Briar College: A Report on the Development, Activities, and Present Status of the College. President Glass assembled the information for the publication, describing many of the innovations that had taken place on campus in the years since the nation's intervention in the war. An interesting feature of the booklet is the way it records how the students' aspirations and interests were affected. For example:

"Fewer students concentrate in science and mathematics, although the registration in 1942-43 has doubled in mathematics, chemistry, and physics, due doubtless to the present need for scientific training."

And, regarding marriage and post-college plans:

"As in other colleges, the students have been facing the questions of marriage, jobs, and service in the armed forces during the last two years...On the whole, completing their education seems important to the students, and their plans for service in the many places where women are greatly needed reflect their intention to prepare adequately for jobs...

Two major curriculum changes that surfaced in 1942-43 were the reorganizing of the International Affairs major and the combining of courses for special training programs. The International Affairs major was re-oriented to "(a) give basic training to a selected group of students for cooperation in post-war reconstruction...and (b) to create such an understanding...as will enable students to assist in the formation of an enlightened public opinion..." The latter innovation, the course groupings, was done as a method of guiding students toward study that was particularly useful as foundation for professions in demand at that time. One example of such a course combination was that for future nurses: a combination of zoology, chemistry and a variety of psychology courses.

The end of the '42-43 school year brought a shortage of dining room staff, and the College decided to enlist the aid of students in serving meals. At first, this change was met with great student protest, but the words of President Glass soon silenced all complaints. According to the President:

"...my reply was that Sweet Briar was a woman's college, and that if we had food and could not get it on the table, I hoped we would starve. I then asked the students if they wished to discuss the matter and they said no."

The war effort continued full force throughout the 1943-44 school year; the Funds Committee continued its many charity drives and in order to conserve money, the staff of the yearbook, The Briar Patch, greatly simplified the 1944 volume. Photography was handled by the students and the amount of copy was greatly reduced. In the pages of the annual, the staff wrote of their turning "to the potentialities of campus life" while putting their publication together. Once again, in the face of the international crisis, the students had looked to themselves and recognized their own strengths and abilities.

The 1944-45 year saw the early glimmerings of the dawn of post-war recovery. Although charity drives and other activities of the War Service Committee continued, mention of the Committee itself in the faculty minutes ended by April, 1945.

The following academic year was filled with post-war readjustments and changes. At a faculty meeting on October 3, 1945, the Committee on Advanced Standing decided to discontinue the war measure of counting quality points from other institutions in the Sweet Briar credit ration. The question of restoring the pre-war vacation dates was raised, with all the complications of changing vacation and exam time. (Vacation dates had been changed so as not to conflict with the travel of servicemen.) Also proposed at this meeting was the possibility of the College sponsoring an Institute on Reconstruction similar to the Institute on National Needs and Resources held in 1942. Two weeks later, the vacations were restored to their pre-war dates, and on November 7 the chairman of the Catalogue Committee announced that it wasn't necessary that year to restrict the size of the catalogue for economic purposes.

The new year brought still more changes; the Institute was scheduled for March 14-16, with lectures and panel discussions involving the entire Sweet Briar community.

Sweet Briar social life swung back into gear in the early post-war days. A greater number of male visitors than ever before was entertained — so great that a "Date House" was constructed on campus to accommodate male guests. Sweet Briar girls enjoyed more freedom, as well, for during the war the chaperone system had been dropped and was never resumed. The absence of gasoline rationing and the multitudes of veterans greatly enriched the Sweet Briar social scene in 1945 and 1946.

Thus ended half a decade of one of the most important eras in Sweet Briar history. The conflicts of World War II, while tearing nations apart all over the world and claiming hundreds of thousands of lives, actually served to liberate Sweet Briar in areas that sorely needed enlightenment. Sweet Briar fell quickly and easily in step with the rest of the nation as men went off to war and women suddenly recognized their own strengths and abilities outside the confines of their homes. Students at Sweet Briar from 1940 to 1945 became aware of their roles as citizens and new aspirations were awakened within them — they clamored for and were offered new opportunities in vocational training, and cultivated new strengths that they might never have discovered had it not been for the emergency situation presented by World War II. □

The Integration of Sweet Briar

By Katherine A. Hearn '85

Throughout the mid-1960s, Sweet Briar College was involved in legal action that would change its face forever. During this time, the Civil Rights movement was at full steam, and the question of racial equality was of major importance all over the country.

At Sweet Briar, it wasn't simply a question, it was a problem. The college was restricted to whites, and it took nearly four years in court to eliminate that restriction.

The founding of Sweet Briar was due to two people — James Henry Williams and his wife Indiana Fletcher Williams. In 1885, four years before his death, James Williams drew his will, which said:

It is my wish that my wife should by deed or will, secure the ultimate appropriation of my estate, in trust for the foundation and maintenance of a school or seminary...as a memorial of our deceased daughter Daisy Williams. This wish however is to be regarded simply as an expression of my desire and not as a binding direction...

At the death of her husband in 1889, Indiana Fletcher Williams had her own will drawn, which stated:

I give and devise all my plantation and tract of land known as Sweet Briar plantation, situated in said Amherst County, Virginia...and various other tracts of land, to four trustees. I direct the said trustees forthwith after my decease to procure the incorporation in the state of Virginia of a corporation to be called 'The Sweet Briar Institute' — The said corporation shall with suitable dispatch establish, and shall maintain and carry on upon the said plantation, a school or seminary to be known as the 'Sweet Briar Institute', for the education of white girls and young women.

One year later, in 1900, Indiana Williams died, and left her plantation under the direction of the four trustees. In the fall of 1906, Sweet Briar College opened its doors to the first of its students.

During the 1950s, the United States began to undergo a series of changes, the most prominent of which concerned the problem of racial equality. Sweet Briar felt these changes, but due to the restrictive clause in Indiana Williams' will — 'for the education of white girls and young women' — the college was unable to legally keep up with the rest of America. Officially, the decision to contest the will was made by the Board of Overseers on November 2, 1963, but the idea had already taken root in many students' and faculty members' minds at least as early as April the same year. On April 26, 1963, 124 students signed a petition stating that any qualified applicant, regardless of race, should be considered for admittance to Sweet Briar. On October 8, 1963, 59 faculty members expressed their desire for an open admissions policy in a letter to Anne Gary Pannell, president of the College at the time. The views expressed by the students and faculty were in concurrence with the administration and the Board. All involved believed that the quality of education would decline if the college were not to eliminate its restrictions. It was felt that quality professors would not want to teach at Sweet Briar, and that students would not receive a sound education — an education for reality.

On August 17, 1964, after much deliberation by the Board of Directors and Overseers, as well as the administration, Sweet Briar filed suit in Amherst Circuit Court asking for the right to accept anyone with the proper qualifications.

Frank G. Davidson, Jr., and Thomas S. Currier, the legal counsel representing Sweet Briar throughout the case, felt that the original intent of Indiana Williams' will was not to bar blacks from entrance to the college but merely, as the law required at the time, to specify one race or the other. The main argument for Sweet Briar's case was a sentence in Indiana's will that both the Board and the legal counsel thought was the single most important sentiment expressed in the will.

The general scope and object of the school shall be to impart to its students such education in sound learning, and such physical, moral and religious training as shall, in the judgment of the directors, best fit them to be useful members of society.

It was that idea, that the directors should give the students the best education the college could offer, which Mr. Davidson and Mr. Currier could only be carried out if any qualified person were to be admitted, regardless of race. The second option that Sweet Briar would have accepted was to eliminate the word 'white' from the will altogether. Since neither alternative had been accepted by the attorney general, Sweet Briar went back to court.

In December, 1964, full arguments were presented to Judge C.G. Quesenbery in the District Court of Virginia. He took the case under advisement and six months later, on June 3, 1965, returned a verdict — Sweet Briar could not admit black students to the college because Indiana Williams had specified white in her will. Judge Quesenbery seemed to think that Sweet Briar was acting on the will at that time simply because of the emotions of the 1960s. "The spirit of the times, or we might better say the hysteria of the times, has probably generated the thinking of the board in this case..." Once again, Sweet Briar was thwarted in its efforts to eliminate the racial restrictions set up by its founder.

Eight days after Judge Quesenbery's verdict, the Board met and voted, without reservation, to continue with the case until "its ultimate conclusion." The Board had the complete agreement of the faculty who had, in March of 1964, made their feelings known during a special meeting. The faculty stated that their committee endorses without reservation the action taken by the Board of Directors to employ legal counsel 'to take whatever legal action may be necessary to secure a judicial determination...whether we may...admit qualified persons to Sweet Briar College regardless of race'.

The fact that the faculty was in accord with the Board's wishes was an extra benefit that served to help Sweet Briar's case in court immensely.

Not all those associated with the Sweet Briar community felt the same as the faculty. Shortly after Sweet Briar decided to comply with the Civil Rights Act in June of 1965, Mrs. W.L. Lyons Brown, a member of the Board of Overseers for 24 years, decided to resign from her chose to base their case on. However, the attorney general for Virginia did not read the will in the same light. Two weeks after the request was filed, the attorney general returned an answer which said that the wording of the will was clear — the college was founded for the education of white girls and young women.

Since Sweet Briar had not proven that circumstances had changed since the will was originally drawn, the attorney general could not grant the College either of the alternatives that it had wanted. The first option has already been mentioned — that the objective of Indiana Williams position in protest. She stated that To violate the trust which we assumed when we became members of the board of overseers...particularly just one week after the court of our own selection had ruled on the matter, and to disregard a decision of the court without seeking a review of that decision, in order to secure federal funds... is to me unthinkable.

It was the idea that Sweet Briar seemed to have so blatantly disregarded the court in complying with the 1964 Civil Rights Act that offended Mrs. Brown and many like her. It should be noted though that Mrs. Brown did not attend the Board meeting when the decision was made concerning the Civil Rights Act.

From June of 1965 to April of 1966, the attorney general for Amherst County went to court trying to have Judge Quesenbery dismiss Sweet Briar's case. His argument was that "Sweet Briar did not come into court with clean hands or good faith." He felt that the college was simply out for federal money, and not just action on its presumed morals. The case for dismissal was denied by Judge Quesenbery, but the sentiments expressed by the attorney general were similar to those expressed often by others throughout the area. An editorial printed in the Lynchburg News on May 8, 1966, voiced the same general opinion. It said Sweet Briar was trying to change the will simply at the whim of the Directors, without any real thought for the original desire of Indiana Williams. This idea was frequently repeated throughout the case by those in and around the Sweet Briar community, as well as by those arguing against the case.

On April 25, 1966, Sweet Briar took its case to the United States District Court and immediately received a temporary injunction which kept the attorney general of Virginia from enforcing the racial restriction in Indiana Williams' will. On the advice of its legal counsel, Sweet Briar made a statement which was the first of its kind in the school's history. On May 28, 1966, the college stated "that a policy of admissions...unrestricted as to race, creed or color...is adopted and confirmed." Sweet Briar then went back to the United States District Court in July to have the temporary injunction previously given them made permanent. The three-judge panel took five months to come to a decision, and when they were done, they had decided nothing. The judges had abstained from making a decision so, in effect, they had sent Sweet Briar's case back to the state court.

During the five month period while the District Court judges were trying to come to a decision, Sweet Briar decided it was time to act on the temporary injunction previously given to them. On August 31, 1966, the College admitted its first black student. Marshalyn Yeargin, a junior transfer from Bennett College, was accepted for admittance to Sweet Briar. Apparently, Miss Yeargin knew of the legal action being taken by the college at the time, but not the extent to which it was being taken. In an interview printed in the Washington Post on September 3, 1966, Miss Yeargin said that she "didn't figure there was going to be any big fuss" and that "knowing I would be the first Negro accepted...I feel a little more excited about going there now." Many people voiced their opinions on the decision, but primarily all, according to the college, were favorable.

Marshalyn Yeargin

In January of 1967, Sweet Briar took its final step in its case to admit blacks to the college. The college's legal counsel appealed the previously handed down decision of the state court to the United States Supreme Court. On May 29, the Supreme Court reversed the decision of the District Court, requiring it to come to a decision, instead of abstaining as it had done earlier. Immediately, a verdict was handed down. The District Court of Virginia ruled that Sweet Briar must be allowed to admit blacks, even though Indiana Williams' will had specified "white", because the state cannot require compliance with the racial restriction as it would constitute state action barred by the Fourteenth Amendment. So, on July 17, 1967, the three-judge panel of the United States District Court of Virginia by unanimous decision permanently enjoined the Attorney General of Virginia, the Commonwealth's Attorney of Amherst County, and their successors in office, from seeking to enforce the racial restriction on Sweet Briar.

Finally, after nearly four years of deliberation both in and out of court, Sweet Briar College accomplished what it had set out to do. The first black student had entered its doors legally, setting a precedent for others to follow. The will of Indiana Fletcher Williams had remained intact, and the College's Board of Directors had done what they felt Indiana intended when she left her plantation to the four original trustees. Sweet Briar was still an outstanding women's college, and the original purpose of James and Indiana Williams' will was still being adhered to:

It shall be the general scope and object of the school to impart to its students such an education in sound learning, and such physical, moral and religious training as shall, in the judgement of the Directors, best fit them to be useful members of society. □

Movement and Stasis: The Value of the Liberal Arts in the 1980s

By Robin Bowers, Dean of the College
Convocation Address, 1985.

I have been thinking very much recently about the problems of moving. Like you, I have moved a large distance to be at Sweet Briar, and have experienced all the upheavals that go along with that change.

My wife, Joan, I, and our children, Heather and Adrian, have sorted out seemingly tons of household goods, throwing away much (as the moving companies always advise) and packing the rest with difficulty in boxes which become more and more obstinately square as each one is filled.

We hope we have kept the significant and useful belongings and discarded the trivial and useless, but as the packing process went on, it became more and more difficult to distinguish with confidence between the two. When moving, one relives a lifetime: almost everything one has done means something, and almost everything one had acquired along the way takes on some symbolic value. Should one throw away that first camera, bought when one was most keenly interested in the intricacies of photography as a teenager, or that wedding gift of so many years ago, given, alas, by that dear couple now so long divorced? There is indeed something quite undignified in reducing one's life to packing boxes, even though we seem to take it for granted in our fast-paced, quickly mobile society.

Moving, then, is not merely physical but also intellectual. I and a few of you here, I expect, have come recently from Nebraska. (Before you jump to conclusions, however, I hasten to add that I have never lived as close to a cornfield as I do here at Sweet Briar!) We have done the reverse of what Willa Cather did many years before, when she moved from Virginia to the wide-open prairies of Red Cloud, Nebraska. Nobody was more aware of the underlying significance of spatial and geographical movement than Willa Cather. My Antonia, for example, opens with Jim Burden's train journey across America — a journey which not only transports Jim across the country, but which also becomes a symbol of the journey through life. Here, however, the symbol dignifies, as the packing boxes do not, and the static, eternal quality of a novel such as My Antonia provides the philosophic insight which gives meaning to the geographical movement across time and space.

I want to talk briefly today, then, of the seemingly paradoxical aspects of moving while standing still — or movement in stasis — and of standing still while moving — or stasis in movement. Movement and stasis are the proper concerns of the individual within society — not the individual as distinct from society. We do not move and stand by ourselves, for if we do, our downfall is inevitable.

If we concentrate for a few moments on movement, in what ways do we learn? First, we might consider the learning by physical movement of the body. Such learning is slow and sometimes painful. If you have ever watched an eight-month old baby try to struggle to her feet to walk, only to fall with bumps and bruises, you will realize that bodily movement and ultimate skill come with difficulty. Gross and fine motor skills come slowly, but they are essential to our enjoyment and appreciation of the world around us.

While we learn by moving parts of our bodies, we also learn by moving our bodies from place to place. This geographical movement enables us to explore new vistas of all kinds, from the homes of friends, to strange cities and countries, and even into outer space. Our physical transplanting from one place to another forces us to learn new ways, and to confront the beliefs and customs of other individuals, ethnic groups, and political entities. We learn to adjust our own behavior, adapt to new ways of doing things (perhaps after we thought our own way was the only way), and develop new perspectives on our existence. I think I learned more about England and the problems of England in the twentieth century after I had spent several years in the United States. I learned more about the United States after working in Canada and getting to know the views of Canadian friends. And now I expect to learn more about Nebraska by being in Virginia. For those of you who have just left Nebraska (or any state west of the Blue Ridge) such learning may come in the form of traumatic shocks. But, rest assured, after many years of such learning, the shocks become routine, and the learning is easier.

Moving geographically is one example of what I call horizontal learning by moving through space and time. Another form of horizontal learning is that accomplished by moving intellectually through space and time, especially by means of history, science, and the imagination. Instead of moving to another country to learn a different language, we can move back through time to learn the language — the modes of communication and understanding — of an earlier society. Only through historical study can we find out where we have been, so that we have a point of reference from which to assess the present. I have recently taught students who have no knowledge of the Vietnam War, who are ignorant of the relationship of oil crises in the Middle East to theological beliefs in those areas, and who claim no interest in the history of racial and sexual discrimination in this and many other countries. But how can we know what we have achieved, or what we should achieve, if we have no idea where we came from?

In similar fashion, moving intellectually through the present requires study of the sciences. Science, or scientia (meaning knowledge), which has perhaps been wrongly restricted in the modern world to a limited number of disciplines, moves us through the physical universe, teaching us about the many facets of our physical environment and about our role in that environment. Meticulous observation, scrupulous classification and experimentation, and rigorous theorizing are hallmarks of excellence to the scientist who educates herself and others in the fine points of current phenomena.

Third is intellectual movement through the future by uses of the imagination. To use effectively our knowledge gained through history and science requires active employment of the imagination. How can we recreate ourselves, while we create new societies? In which directions could we be going? How can we get there? And most important why should we be going there? It is easy to reduce the uses of imagination to the lacklustre terms of "program planning and development," but there can be no such planning if we do not imagine what our lives should be like in the future. What should we be doing, how should we go about it, and what should we feel about our future lives? We desperately need to use our imagination to solve what Mortimer Adler recently identified as the major problems of humanity: the threat of nuclear holocaust, the problem of overpopulation, pollution of the environment, and the dwindling sources of energy. In the last case, we can envision our return to solar energy, but can we adequately imagine a nuclear holocaust, when members of our own government tell us that a shovel in the car trunk (to dig our own graves, perhaps?) will solve any slight inconvenience of a nuclear war?

Our imagination, then, needs careful nurturing, and a major role in this area is played by the arts. Our imagination of the ways in which human beings have viewed their world in the past is educated by the great classics of our heritage — by visual art of many centuries, by both oriental and occidental music of the past, and by historical dramas and novels written in more recent times. Imagination concerning societies of the present is encouraged by means of study of a wide geographic range of cultural phenomena, from literature to art, film, and the theatre; and finally our imagination of the future must go beyond economic predictions to include the study of avant-garde and future-oriented works of art, film, and fiction. We must not allow only politicians to mold our future, for if we do, we may find that expediency, tyranny, and elimination of basic human rights are the inevitable results.

All of this movement in various study areas should lead us as educated people to a stability in stasis, a confident and mature serenity. This does not mean that one should become fossilized by age forty (or thirty, or twenty), but that one is able to see and practice one's areas of special interest and expertise in the context of a basic understanding of the problems and possibilities of human knowledge.

In the physical area, stasis involves the development of control and discipline. Learning about different riding or swimming styles, developing the ability to practice several different styles, and choosing a certain style in which to develop one's own proficiency, will enable the individual sportswoman to discipline herself with confidence; and the achievement of such confidence is a form of stasis.

Likewise, intellectual stasis is achieved by working through many areas of study to develop special expertise in an area of choice. The relationships of many subject areas must be studied before one should choose a narrower area. Discipline in several areas leads to more profound study of a specialty and the confident stasis of excellence, with its clear view from the top of the mountain unhindered by the ground mists below.

In all this, as you move through your college experiences at Sweet Briar to possible graduate study and professional practice in years to come, your liberal arts education here should provide the contexts by means of which you can go beyond professionalism. Knowledge is of no ultimate value unless we use it with sensitivity for the purpose of developing wisdom.

Sensitivity really requires us to educate our emotions — to be aware of our emotions, to discipline them, and to use them positively for the benefit of ourselves and those around us. My study of Shakespeare is teaching me how aware he was of, and how carefully he developed, the many human emotions in his works. A case in point is Shakespeare's interest in the concept and use of pity in works spanning his entire career. For example, one of his last plays, the relatively unknown Henry VIII, focuses on the downfall of Katherine of Aragon, who commands our pity even as we admire her strength and endurance. Likewise, in another late play, The Tempest, teen-age daughter of the all-powerful Prospero, Miranda, urges her father to take pity on his enemies, who have now come under his spell on the desert island as a result of shipwreck.

This influence of the emotions on the uses of power brings me to my final thoughts about the importance of wisdom, because wisdom entails the proper control of knowledge for the purpose of positive, rather than negative, ends. Power of strength and power of knowledge — physical and intellectual power, that is — should always come under the influence of wisdom: how can we use the energies of strength and knowledge wisely? Raw power is frequently very impressive, from that which hurls a spaceship into orbit to the power of splitting the atom.

In all cases, however, there remains the final necessity to control that power with extreme care. We have the medical power to alter our physical state and mental condition, but how, when, where, and why should we do these things? We have the power to split the atom for nuclear destruction, but should we do this? We have the political power to pressure other peoples and nations to bend their way of life to ours, but should we demand this? In these and many other areas, the only possible solutions, if we are to preserve life and civilization, depend upon our choosing wisely — that is, using the criterion of controlling our power for purposes which go beyond individual freedom to the preservation of all. Shakespeare once again is an apt teacher in the pursuit of wisdom. Once more, his Tempest yields knowledge leading from the raw power of the storm to the calm waters of forgiveness, civility, and community. While Prospero may not have taken full notice of his daughter's advice to take pity on his enemies, he does finally respond to the urgings of his spirit, Ariel (a spirit made physical in this play), who reminds him that his pity must be revived: to Ariel he concludes about these enemies:

Hast thou, which art but air, a touch, a feeling
Of their afflictions, and shall not myself,
One of their kind, that relish
all as sharply
Passion as they, be kindlier moved than thou art?
Though with their high wrongs
I am struck to th'quick,
Yet with my nobler reason
'gainst my fury
Do I take part. The rarer action is
In virtue than in vengeance.

We must learn, then, to integrate our studies with our lives, to progress patiently and with perseverance, through movement and stasis, to the personal and public life of wisdom. For now, you have been held in the condition of stasis for long enough. Let us move — physically, intellectually, and spiritually! The faculty welcomes all of you to Sweet Briar for what we trust will be another growing, moving year. We wish you all the best! □

The Dedication of the Anne Gary Pannell Center

The first weekend of October was one of celebration at Sweet Briar. It marked the successful conclusion of the Generations Campaign which raised a total of $15,200,000 of a $12,100,000 goal. Close to 500 alumnae and friends were on campus for part or all of the program.

The program started on Friday morning with guests attending classes, visiting faculty and staff as well as places of interest on campus. The focus of the afternoon was the dedication of the Refectory as the Anne Gary Pannell Center which houses the long-awaited art gallery and the art library as well as the studio art department and additional faculty offices. That night Boxwood Circle, Presidents Circle and Fletcher Associates members gathered for a black tie dinner in Prothro Dining Room.

Following a panel by students and faculty members on Saturday morning, the group set out for Charlottesville. They visited Oakencroft wineries at the invitation of Felicia and John Rogan, then proceeded to Monticello, famous home of Thomas Jefferson, for a private tour.

Part of the group went from Monticello to the University of Virginia football game, but the majority continued to Verulam for a cocktail party as the guests of Kitchie Roseberry Ewald Tolleson and her

Sunday morning the group visited Poplar Forest, a small home designed and built by Mr. Jefferson as a summer retreat.

This home is located outside Lynchburg and is in the process of being restored.

The weekend was declared a tremendous success by all who attended.

Julia de Coligny Honored by Alumnae

Julia de Coligny '34

Julia Sadler de Coligny has been honored by the Sweet Briar College Alumnae Association as the recipient of its 1985 Outstanding Alumna Award. The presentation was made by Mary K. McDonald, president of the Alumnae Association, at Sweet Briar's Founders' Day Convocation. The award is given annually to a graduate in recognition of outstanding volunteer service to the College.

Mrs. de Coligny, who graduated from the College in 1934, is a former member of the Sweet Briar Board of Overseers and the Board of the Alumnae Association, and the first alumna ever asked to deliver the College's commencement address, which she did in 1972, proving to be one of the most popular speakers ever.

She has also been an avid supporter of the Friends of the Library and editor of the Library Gazette. She worked diligently to get the Virginia Center for the Creative Arts to locate at Mt. San Angelo, a nearby property owned by the College.

After graduating from Sweet Briar, where she was president of the Student Government Association, Mrs. de Coligny earned a master's degree in comparative literature from Columbia University. She served as assistant dean and director of vocational guidance at Sweet Briar from 1959 to 1961. She later returned to the College as director of Estate Planning, a post she held from 1973 until her retirement in 1979.

Mrs. de Coligny organized and was first headmistress of St. Michael's School in Bon Air and before that taught at St. Catherine's School in Richmond. She also has held administrative and teaching positions at Georgia College and Stratford College, and has served as executive director of Richmond Child-Care Centers, Inc.,

A former educational consultant and columnist, Mrs. de Coligny contributed articles to the Virginia Journal of Education and is the author of Your College Decision, a book which was distributed by the Bank of Virginia and the Exchange Bank of Tampa, Fla.

In making the presentation, Mrs. McDonald said of Mrs. de Coligny: "She has never gotten over her love affair with Sweet Briar, and has often said what an important part of her life it has been and how her experiences here have truly shaped her life. She is very vocal in her desire that the College guard and maintain its reputation for academic excellence as well as instill in its students the importance of integrity in all aspects of their lives."

Mrs. de Coligny is the widow of Calvert G. de Coligny and the mother of four children: two daughters, Amanda de Coligny and Anne de Coligny Davis, who live in Amherst, and two sons, William G. de Coligny of Ocean Pines, Md., and Calvert G. de Coligny, Jr., of Baltimore. She has seven grandchildren.

The Editor's Room

When Catharine Fitzgerald Booker, my predecessor as editor of the Alumnae Magazine, wrote her swan song in the winter issue of 1981, she recounted some of the history of this publication.

In 1931, Kay recounted, the first editor's room was the Slave Cabin. The first editor was Vivienne Barkalow Hornbeck '18. She did the whole job except the printing, and she would have done that if she'd had a linotype. She edited, typed, wrote copy and class notes, did pasteups and solicited ads.

In the '40s the editor's room moved to the east end of Fletcher. Helen McMahan '23 succeeded Vivienne as executive secretary of the Alumnae Association, and Helen Mac and Martha von Briesen '31 edited the magazine from the alumnae office in Fletcher. Margaret Cornwall Schmidt '37 was editor from 1950-1955, when Elizabeth Bond Wood '34 became editor and Director of Alumnae Affairs.

In a few years the editor's room moved across the road into the Book Shop, which later became Alumnae House. Here, EBW and Nancy St. Clair Talley '56 turned out the magazine through the 1960s, cutting galleys and doing pasteups and winning awards from CASE even though the editors didn't have enough money for color photos or professional designers.

In the 1970s the editor's room moved to Ohio and into Kay Booker's very capable and talented hands. Incidentally, Kay edited the Sweet Briar News when I was just a "cub"...I learned a lot from her and from our advisor, Martha von Briesen, from her successor, Mary Moore Pancake, and from Maddin Lupton who edited the News the year before I did. I also remember with affection Mr. Mac, our Amherst printer, who let me actually set type on that monstrous linotype machine and get myself grimy in printer's ink!

A year or so later, when I found myself working for McFadden Publications in NYC (assistant editor, no less, for a magazine called True Experiences), I found Kay Booker, no less, working for Glamour Magazine! She again took me under her wing and introduced me to life in the upper echelons of New York City publishing.

Now, another page turns, and the editor's room moves again...back to Virginia. Nancy Godwin Baldwin '57, who lives in Monroe, has agreed to be the editor of the Alumnae Magazine and has already set up her own editor's room in her home there. Nancy is well known in the Sweet Briar community, having served as Director of Admissions from 1966 to 1980, and before that as Assistant Director from 1958. She holds a Bachelor of Arts degree in Drama from Sweet Briar and has completed course work toward a Master of Arts in Speech and Theatre from Bowling Green State University. She has written and published both drama and poetry and has represented Sweet Briar, both as a participant and a speaker, at many off-campus programs.

I'm sure Nancy will have the same sort of support and encouragement that I have had from everyone on campus and off who have been so generous with their time and efforts to make the magazine successful. I won't start naming names (the list would be endless), but each of you has my gratitude and affection.

Have fun, Nancy!

Administrative Promotions

F. Mark Whittaker has been appointed Vice President for College Relations.

The offices held by Alice Love and Ann Morrison Reams (Admissions and Alumnae) have been designated as parts of the senior staff (Executive Council) of the College. The Executive Council thus is composed of the two Deans, the two Vice Presidents and the two Directors.

The organization is a usual one in a modern college with the exception of the inclusion of the Alumnae Director as a member of the senior staff. President Fry stated, "I believe that such 'exception' is clearly logical for Sweet Briar and recognizes the realities of our character as a college for women." Members of the senior staff attend meetings of the Boards of Overseers and Directors as well as meet weekly to make administrative decisions.

Nominee for the Board of Overseers

The Executive Board of the Sweet Briar Alumnae Association submits the name of Elaine Schuster '58 to the members of the Association as a candidate for election to the Board of Overseers of Sweet Briar College.

Elaine is a lawyer with her own law company, Jones, Schuster and Flaughner, in Oklahoma City. After graduating with an A.B. in Drama from Sweet Briar, she earned an M.A. in Economics and a J.D. from the University of Oklahoma. She has won many professional honors, has volunteered in many Oklahoma City community organizations and has worked for the AAUW on the state, national and local levels. As a student at Sweet Briar she worked on the Briar Patch, was treasurer and president of Paint and Patches, technical director of Oratorio and a member of the Inter-Club Council and the Auditorium Fund Committee. An active alumna too, she has made the class reunion scrapbooks, served as a Sweet Briar representative at functions in Oklahoma and participated in President Fry's inauguration festivities at Sweet Briar in October 1983.

Other names may be added to the ballot if they are sent to the Director of the Alumnae Association, Sweet Briar, Va 24595, accompanied by 15 signatures of 15 alumnae and written consent of the nominees within two weeks after publication of this name as the nominee. If no additional nominations are made, the Director of the Alumnae Association is instructed to cast a ballot to elect the proposed slate. The elected candidate's name will be submitted to the Board of Directors as the nominee from the Association for election at the spring meeting of the Board.

1985 Bulb Report

This year 49 clubs, Solos and the Alumnae Office sold 2,481 bulb orders for a total of $109,258.64. To summarize: The top-selling clubs were:

Washington, DC.....	$8,550.10
Greensboro.....	7,451.73
Atlanta.....	6,887.67
Richmond.....	6,444.06
Solo.....	5,036.69
Fairfield County.....	4,516.29

A total of 41 sellers were bonus winners this past year. Eighteen sold between $500 and $749, nine sold between $750 and $999, and there are now 14 Bloomin' Alumnae (those with sales over $1,000). They are:

Kathleen Bryan Edwards '49,
Greensboro.....	$3,631.93
Irene Mitchell Moore '42,
Greensboro.....	1,989.95
Genevieve Marsh Fisher '38,
Washington, DC.....	1,905.22
Elizabeth Gockley McLellan '40,
Long Island.....	1,553.00
Sara Callison Jamison '29,
Indianapolis.....	1,512.20
Virginia Squibb Flynn '32,
Fairfield County.....	1,457.82
Nancy Keen Butterworth Palmer '51,
Nashville.....	1,438.56
Chloe Lansdale Pitard '61,
Philadelphia.....	1,318.79
Mary Swift Calhoun '31,
Solo.....	1,207.08
Margaret Stuart Wilson Dickey '41,
Texarkana.....	1,178.10
Lydia Goodwyn Lorentzen '34,
Richmond.....	1,147.83
Alice Benton '79, Atlanta.....	1,100.00
Julie Whitehurst MacKinlay '66,
Tidewater.....	1,097.80
Nancy Haskins Elliot '40,
So. California.....	1,033.65

Kathleen Bryan Edwards '49, and Elizabeth Gockley McLellan '40, are our trip winners this year and will be rewarded for their efforts with a trip to Holland in the spring of '86. Congratulations to them, and to all the sellers, clubs and Solos who worked so hard. Sweet Briar and her students appreciate it!!!!

As you know, the purpose of buying and selling bulbs is to provide scholarship funds for Sweet Briar students. This year for the first time the income earned from endowed club scholarships was over $100,000. This constituted 10.6% of the overall budget. This is an incredible accomplishment, and one you should be very proud of. As the cost of a Sweet Briar education continues to rise, the Bulb Project is more important than ever before to ensure that we have funds to bring qualified students to Sweet Briar. Just think what we alumnae could do if each one of us bought or sold bulbs. Let's all work-together in 1986 to make the Bulb Project an even greater success!

Report of Alumnae Council 1985 from Winnie Leigh Hamlin '58, Director of Clubs

Returning to the lovely Sweet Briar campus in the autumn for alumnae council is an exhilarating experience! It is such fun to renew friendships and gain new ideas and enthusiasm for S.B.C., its clubs and admissions programs. Most of all, it is fascinating to see the College today and hear the present students, faculty members and administrators.

I am particularly excited about . . .

. . . the new dean. A Robin Bowers, the first ever male Dean of the College. From England, he received his M.A. and Ph.D. from Princeton University. Both faculty and students say, "He listens."

. . . the admissions picture. Applications are up. SAT scores improved. The yield of accepted students who chose SBC is up. Also, two new founders scholarships have been added.

. . . the students. The attractive, articulate panel of student leaders who spoke to us should make a VCR to go to every SB club and prospective student. Here's what they say they love about Sweet Briar:

"the closeness between faculty and students friends not being a number
an individual does count and can be heard opportunity to develop to greatest potential opportunities to hold offices and play varsity sports traditions like step singing and wearing robes the beautiful campus"

. . . the new video cassette of president Nenah Fry presenting the College. This will make an excellent program for any Sweet Briar Club.

. . . the Alumnae Award at Founders' Day. Julia Sadler DeColigny '34 was surprised and said, "I wasn't going to be moved by anything today and, my Lord, I'm a wreck."

. . . the student award to a faculty member given to Milan Hapala with a standing ovation and loud cheers from the students.

. . . the alumnae. Sweet Briar must have the most loyal alumnae in the nation. One hundred fifty-four were present for council. Alumnae contributed eight million dollars to the Generations Campaign and $1,122,000 to this year's Alumnae Fund.

The only sad note is that Peter Daniel, Vice President and Treasurer, will retire after thirty-two years. He has guided the College well and kept it in excellent financial condition. (The present endowment of $34,000,000 is more than triple that of ten years ago. Thanks to this increase, a student in 1984-85 was billed for $10,500, which was 52% of the actual $20,150 cost to Sweet Briar of her education; ten years ago, a student's fees of $4,250 had to cover 59% of the actual, $7,250 cost.) Fortunately, Mr. Daniel will retire near the College and return, we hope, for alumnae functions. He is truly grateful to the alumnae and we, to him.

Visiting the Sweet Briar family on the magnificent campus is such a delightful experience. Please return as soon as you can and, if possible, bring a prospective student with you.

SBC Staff Service Award Recipients Honored

Ten Sweet Briar employees who have worked at the College for ten years or more received Staff Recognition Service Awards at the Founders Day program in Babcock Auditorium.

Those honored were: Geraldine Branham, Food Service (Bistro), 10 years; Raymond Cuthbert, Food Service (Dining Hall), 20 years; Alma Dawson, Food Service, 10 years; Janice Grooms, Halls of Residence and Library, 10 years; Marion Grooms, Halls of Residence, 30 years; Ellen Hutchinson, Student Affairs, 30 years; Helen Lewis, Director of Special Events, 10 years; T. Randolph Payne, Food Service (Dining Hall), 20 years; Jean Schaar, Financial Aid, 10 years; and Tully Staton, Buildings, 20 years.

Recent Deaths

Lucile Umbreit Dies

Lucile Umbreit, 73, of Amherst, who was professor of music at Sweet Briar College from 1937 until her retirement in 1977, died October 7 in Lynchburg.

Miss Umbreit was born in Kobe, Japan, the daughter of Samuel John and Amanda Bauernfeind Umbreit. She received her A.B. degree from Radcliffe College in 1933 and A.M. from Vassar College in 1936, and the following year completed course work for a doctoral degree in musicology at Harvard University as holder of the Wellesley College Barrett Fellowship in Music. She later studied for a year in the Ph.D. Seminar in Music at Columbia University.

Miss Umbreit taught at Sweet Briar longer than any other professor — a record forty years. She was for a long time chairman of the Music Department and for 18 years served as chairman of the Concerts Committee. During that time she brought many fine musicians to Sweet Briar for concerts.

During the summer of 1939, Miss Umbreit studied in London with Tobias Matthay, learning his teaching method, and she later became director of the American Matthay Association. She also studied viola with Fritz Neumann for five years and piano with Richard McClanahan for 20 years. She spent a number of summers in Vermont as either an auditor or a sponsor of the Marlboro Music Festival.

Miss Umbreit is survived by a cousin, Wayne Umbreit of Flemington, N.J.

A private graveside service was held on Friday, October 11. A memorial concert will be held on the campus at a later date.

Nancy Burton Dies

Nancy Dowd Burton '46 of Glendale, Ohio, died suddenly on September 12.

Sweet Briar President Nenah E. Fry, in a message to Directors, Overseers and The Alumnae Board of the College, referred to Mrs. Burton as an "alumna, overseer and friend whose gifts to the College are incalculable...the legacy of her devotion will continue far into the future."

A Memorial Service conducted by Sweet Briar's Chaplain, The Rev. Susan C. Lehman, at Christ Church, Glendale, was attended by President Fry, Ann Morrison Reams, Mark Whittaker and other members of the College community. Messages of condolence may be sent to Nancy's husband Mr. Robert M. Burton, 145 E. Fountain Avenue, Cincinnati, Ohio 45246.

Nancy was honored with the Alumnae Award in recognition of outstanding volunteer service to the College at Founders' Day ceremonies in 1984. She was a member of the Board of Overseers since 1983 and for many years served as a member of the Executive Board of the Alumnae Association. During her 40 years of service to the College, she made outstanding contributions to the field of fund raising. In particular, she was influential in the establishment of recognition clubs for major donors and of expanded alumnae reunion giving.

Alumnae who knew Nancy during her college years remember her enthusiasm as an outstanding goalie on the hockey team, president of the Athletic Association, member of Chung Mung, Bum Chums, Aints and Asses, Orientation and the News. After receiving her degree in psychology from Sweet Briar she earned a master's in school psychology from Ohio State University.

She was a member of the board of directors of Planned Parenthood of Cincinnati, as well as its treasurer and head of the public affairs committee; vice president of the Planned Parenthood Association of Ohio, a past president of the Freedom of Choice Coalition and past coordinator of the Encore program of the YWCA.

Nancy is survived by her husband, three sons and a daughter.

Class Notes

1918

Jane Pratt Betts is very happy in her own home in Avon Park, FL. She gets away for a month or so in the summer but loves her own surroundings and activities, drives her own car, and is grateful that she is in very good health.

1922

Aline Morton Burt's family keeps increasing: 14 grandchildren and 3 great-grands, with another on the way. The family has suffered losses too. Aline's daughter died of cancer last year, and a grandson in Texas was killed by an elderly driver in October '84. In 1969, another of Aline's grandsons was killed in a road accident in Illinois — that time involving a too-young driver.

Aline is still very busy in several heritage organizations, gives talks, does church work and drives hither and yon.

Julia Benner Moss keeps busy with volunteer work and visits her son and daughter-in-law in Carmel, CA every June and Christmas. She walks a lot, and advises others to do the same.

Jane Dunlap Pettit keeps house for her unmarried son in the same home that they have had for many years in Pittsburgh. She is corresponding secretary of the Jane Holmes Residence (a home for older people), a member of the women's Auxiliary of the Kingsley Association (a neighborhood house that also has a camp), and a member of the board of directors of the Pittsburgh Opera. Jane also holds a minor church office. She recently met Betty Reil '35 who is working at the Carnegie Institute.

Ruth Abell Bear and Cub celebrated their 55th wedding anniversary on April 5th with their daughter Andrena and her two girls, Elizabeth (15) and Johanna (11) and their son Burnett at their favorite restaurant. Cub is busy raising vegetables and flowers, and Ruth enjoys bridge.

Frances McCamish McNeel's son, Albert, writes that Frances would enjoy a card from her friends. Her address is: Sarah Roberts French Home, 1315 Texas Ave., San Antonio, TX 78201.

Margaret (Peg) Krider Ivey writes from England that she is jogging along in a pleasant routine, and had a holiday in Jersey (in the Channel Islands) with her son Henry and his wife. Peg drives locally, plays bridge and helps with Inner Wheel.

Gertrude Collins Calnan reports that her family is in good health and that she and Eric had two very pleasant trips last summer — one to a wedding and large family reunion in Duluth. After the reunion, Gertrude and Eric set off for Europe and visited many of the places where they used to live: Anselonia, where they spent 13 years of retirement, Milan, where they lived for 17 years, and Paris, where they lived for 11 years. Lots of nostalgia! Then on to visit their son Allen and family in Belgium where grandson, David, (18) is in his first year at the Univ. of Louvain and granddaughter, Katy (14) shows horses.

During the winter, Gertrude and Eric spent 3 weeks in Tucson with Gertrude's sister. They returned in May to buy a townhouse and are planning to move there in September. In May, they also took their second trip to Ireland, where they were joined by Eric's brother and wife. Gertrude sends affectionate regards to all 26'ers.

Beth Moore Rusk had two great trips this year. In September, she travelled with their minister to Germany, Austria and Italy, and saw the passion play, which was outstanding. In May, she took a Sweet Briar College trip to Scandinavia with Mary Rich Ewing '46, Orissa Holden Perry '36 and Mary Churchill Van de Water '44 and their husbands — "a fabulous trip and beautifully handled." Betty has also visited her sister in Florida, her son Whit in Houston, and has seen Peg Reinhold Mitchell and Mary Shepherd. She plans to open her camp in Maine for the summer, and spurs us all on to make our 60th reunion in May, 1986. LET'S ALL BE THERE! Edna Lee Gilchrist reports that her children and grandchildren (ages 3, 2½ and 15) are thriving. Edna had a super trip to the Orient last spring.

Her main interest is still Seven Hills School in Lynchburg, VA, and she is still on its board.

The Denver Alumnae Club enjoyed a delightful visit in October '84 from Sweet Briar Director of Admissions Terry Scarborough. Hearing her talk of the exciting things going on and planned for Sweet Briar was great — so stimulating. In May '85 we had a luncheon at the Polo Club for Claudia Chang, assistant professor of Anthropology at Sweet Briar. Miss Chang was wonderful — we all loved her and her fascinating presentation.

Ellen Newell Bryan sends thanks to the great class of '26 who have so literally answered her call for gifts for the Sweet Briar Alumnae Fund. We 26'ers say thanks to Ellen for the terrific job she has done for us as our fund agent.

Ellen had a great visit with Rebecca Ashcraft Taylor in Atlanta, and saw Anne Maybank Cain at a wedding in Columbia, SC. She and Wright attended Girl Scout conferences in Mexico in February and in Tarrytown, NY, in April. Ellen's daughter, Ellen Newell Bryan Tozzer '55, went to SBC for her 30th reunion, and her granddaughter, Ellen Tozzer, will be a junior at SBC this year. Some of the family attended the Yale graduation of David Sullivan, son of Ellen's daughter, Mary Lane Bryan Sullivan '58.

Sarah Merrick Houriet has lost track of many friends because of moving around so much when Paul was travelling for Goodyear Tire and Rubber Co. They lived in Norfolk near Sarah's sister, Grace, for 10 years and then returned to Cleveland. They had three children. Their son, Paul, was killed in an air crash while on a business trip, leaving a wife and three children. Sarah keeps in close touch with Grace, who now lives in Florida.

We are still filled with sadness to hear of the death of Anne Barrett Allaire on May 8, '85, in Bristol, CT. Anne brought so much joy to all of us at SBC. Anne was a Life member of First Congregational Church and a member of the Ladies Guild and Triangle Club of the Church; she was also a member of Chippabee Golf Club and the Cello Reading Club.

Francis Dunlop Heiskell writes that Washington's July temperatures are not conducive to much activity. She thoroughly enjoyed meeting President Nenah Fry at a Washington alumnae meeting in the spring. Francis keeps in touch with Mary Shepherd and they have great fun.

Lois (Loey) Peterson Wilson traveled a lot in 1985. In July, she spent a week with Margaret Peterson in her summer home right on Lake Superior where they could watch the steel ore boats (2 football fields long) pass by. From Michigan, Loey flew to Cape Cod. She always has a very special feeling when she reaches New England. Then on to Oregon for a 1400-mile motor trip which included lunch with Harry and David in Medford and dinner at The Top of the Needle in Seattle. In November, Loey was housebound with bronchitis but felt how lucky she was to have seen so much of our beautiful country and to have met so many good friends.

Katherine (Kitty) Blount Anderson celebrated her 80th birthday this year with a 2-week celebration put on by the eastern and Minnesota branches of her family. She has had a rewarding year pursuing her interests in gardening and her reading club and enjoying her grandchildren and great-grands. Kitty exercises on a stationary bike "to keep the creaks away," and is looking forward to our 1986 reunion.

Dorothy Keller Iliif promises that you all will be deluged with letters encouraging you to come to our 60th Reunion on May 25, 1986, and telling you about the plans for 3 wonderful days at SBC. She urges you to keep those dates free and start saving your pennies for the trip and for our Reunion Gift.

Dot has been grounded several times this year — first with a foot operation in December and then with a broken leg in the spring, but she bounced back in time to take a grand 2-week Caribbean cruise with her daughter, Bambi, in March, and attend a convention in New Orleans. This summer, she took a 10-day motor trip with some house guests through New Mexico.

Dot worked with a committee from the Iliif School of Theology to relurnish the school's chapel and vestry, using the gifts that were sent in memory of her husband, Seward. A room was dedicated in Seward's memory and the ceremony was followed by a dinner for the Board and close friends — it was a very special occasion. Another special event which Dot attended was the meeting of the Sweet Briar Boards of Overseers and Directors in Dallas last fall. The days were filled with the most beautiful parties, a city tour which included a visit to a lovely home, luncheon at the Art Museum, and reunions with many old friends.

Class members were saddened to learn of the death of Ruth Johnston Bowen's' husband, Hascall in June.

My interests this year have been my garden, and the three charity boards on which I sit. I give a special thanks to Dot Iliff, co-author of this letter. With all her activities, she is always so generous with her time and advice. Special thanks to each of you, whose good letters make this column possible. It's great fun keeping in touch and following all your interests. Thanks, 26'ers!

Reunion was a very rewarding experience. Thirteen of us were on campus at some time and we missed all of you who could not come. Carolyn Martindale Blouin spoke for our class. Her words brought down the house and she received a standing ovation. Gladys Wester Horton reported that our reunion gift totaled $25,621,000. 71% of the class participated.

Thank you — thank you to all who responded to my June card. Elizabeth Saunders Ramsay is president of E.C.W., The Diocese of West Tennessee. She will be a delegate to Triennial at Anaheim, Ca. in Sept.

Ruth Keeler continues to volunteer at the North Salem, N.Y. Free Library which she helped to found fifty years ago. Teresa Atkinson Greenfield has had another hip operation. Mary Bruce Daily Dawson is painting portraits. She and Lewis live in Sun City, AZ. Sims Massey Rand volunteers at a hospital.

Last year she had a great trip through the Panama Canal and the Caribbean. Sophie Street Anderson has suffered two strokes. She has moved to a new condo at Etowah, N.C. Carolyn and Maury Blouin drove around France in June. No doubt Carolyn found friends to greet. Betsy Williams Gilmore gave a full report on reunion to Ruth Hasson Smith who was not able to attend. Ruth has rarely missed a reunion. Dougie Lyon Stedman lost her husband in Feb. She will be in Ocean Reef, Fl. this winter and would welcome any classmates. Mary Moss Sutfitt and Bob live in a retirement apartment in McLean, Va. They are expecting their first great grandchild. Evaline Edmands Thoma is living in Englewood, Fl. She would like to make contact with some Sweet Briar Alumnae. Mona Stone Green writes that her granddaughter, Sarah Stone, will be a freshman at SBC this fall — another third generation alum on the way. Most of the Green family expected to celebrate Thornton's eightieth birthday in Aug. Scottie Gorsline and I spent a night with Agnes Sproul Bush before driving to reunion. Pig cannot leave Ned. Scootie sees Louise Nelson Redd frequently during the summer. Louise spends the winter at Key West, FL. Lucy Shirley Otis phoned Scootie in June to hear all about our reunion.

Virginia Bell moved to Seal Cove, ME, in 1983 after the death of her husband, Stan. She would love to see any SB alums who get up that way. Her 2 daughters, 7 grandchildren and 2 great-grands all live within 50 miles of her. She has her own home and enjoys reading, knitting and gardening. Eunice Coolbaugh and Dick spent the month of March in Cape Coral, FL, next door to Eunice's brother. They planned to celebrate their 50th wedding anniversary in August, with an open house for their children and 5 grandchildren. Winogene Springer Yost has been elected vice-president of the Arkansas Federation of Garden Clubs.

Please continue to send me word of you and yours. Gwen's act is a hard one to follow. I live in an elegant old folks home and love it. My days of good deeds are over. I've recently taken up bowling, play golf two or three times a week and spend every winter in Arizona where I ride slowly through the mountains and contemplate the scenery.

For our fifty-first year out of Sweet Briar we seem to be doing well, keeping busy at home and traveling abroad.

Rosemary Fry Rogers is busy with volunteer work for the Tennessee Antiquities Preservation Association. She also is a substitute high school teacher, works in her garden, and takes care of her eight dogs.

Mary Ann Page Guyol retired from Southeastern University in Washington two years ago and now is helping a friend finish a history of the League of Woman Voters. Mary Ann met the League for the first time at Sweet Briar.

Mary Walton McCandlish Livingston got away from her full time job at the National Archives in Washington to spend two weeks with her daughters' families at Nantucket Island.

Ruth Myers Pleasants and her sister Dorothy Myers Morehead SBC '42 are busy planning a huge celebration for their husbands' 75th birthdays. Her daughter Emily Pleasants Smith SBC '65 wrote the clever invitations.

Helen Closson Hendricks missed reunion last year because she was on campus the week before for her granddaughter's graduation.

Speaking of granddaughters, Abigail Donohue Jensen's granddaughter, Rebecca Foute of Denver, will enter SBC in Sept. 1985.

Marjorie Lasar Hurd is enjoying her great-grandson, Michael Charles Brady, born July 9, 1984. She is retired but finds her days full.

Nancy Russell Carter stays busy with skiing and therapeutic riding with the handicapped. Her thirteen-year-old grandson is living with them to try and solve his problems with school.

Mary Lee Ryan Strother had some surgery in Dec. and Jan. I hope she is well now.

Mitzi Hanifen Fried and her husband have not been well. They had their 50th wedding anniversary in July and expected their sons, Edward and Billy, and their daughter Linda with her ophthalmologist husband, for the great occasion.

We are saddened to learn of the death of Helen Hanson Bamford's husband in July. Betty Spray Henson also lost her husband last year. Our deepest sympathy to them both.

Lou Dryer Bradley's husband sold their place in Conn. after Lou's death and now lives in Carmel near their daughter and Lou's brother.

Eleanor Alcott Bromley misses the constant contact with so many of our class. After Reunion she felt it would have been nice to have had a little free time while at SBC to wander and reminisce. Tennis and the Council on World Affairs keep her busy winter and summer. This fall she plans a trip to the Orient (while she can still walk strongly). Japan, Taiwan, Hong Kong, Bangkok, Penang, and Singapore are on her itinerary.

Though she missed Reunion last year Dorothy Turno Gardner had a visit with Betty Briscoe while vacationing in Hilton Head.

Lib Scheuer Maxwell also saw the Briscoes in the spring. She now lives in Charleston, S.C. In Feb., Lib went up to Macon to see Cecil Birdsey Fuessle and Marion Gwaltney Hall. Lib's son John is managing director and part owner of two restaurants in Toronto with international branches.

Betty Suttle Briscoe received my card while in the mountains of Pennsylvania celebrating with her husband their 45th wedding anniversary and enjoying a reunion with their children and spouses and seven of their eight grandchildren. At present Betty is practicing French conversation before she departs for a barge trip in Sept. from Lyons to Dijon and on to Paris and Tours.

There was a reunion in San Francisco last winter for Kitty Means Neely, Cecil Birdsey Fuessle, Betty Bryce Reed and her husband Walter. Kitty spent the winter in San Francisco in a ground floor apartment with patio and garden. In late fall she will sail off to Yugoslavia from Montreal by freighter.

Mary Pringle continues her busy life at Sherwood Oaks Retirement Community. She sold her Chataqua cottage last season and misses it. A trip to the Canadian Northwest and a theatre tour to New York, plus more travel plans keep her occupied.

England was the vacation spot for Eleanor Cooke Esterly and Dan. Late in the summer they took their two grandsons to Hawaii.

"Happy to report a year of great pleasure and good health," wrote Margaret Ross Elice. She and Dorothy Barnum Venter '35 toured Australia and New Zealand. Margaret's first granddaughter Aubrey Adam will be joining the granddaughters entering Sweet Briar this fall.

Another traveler Lydia Goodwyn Lorentzen went to Switzerland in May and makes a three week tour of England and Scotland in Sept. and Oct.

Jane Morrison Moore and husband Jim had a wonderful cruise around the Italian boot from Nice to Venice, via Portofino, Sardinia, Capri, Tunis, Sicily, Corfu, and Dubrovnik. "Best of all were four days in London with our daughter, Allison '62 and son-in-law, Tom Garrott of Memphis." After their return they had visits from eleven grandchildren ranging from collegians at Vanderbilt and Davidson to a one-year-old from Baltimore.

The highlight of 1985 for Bonnie Wood Stokey was a trip to Pakistan with their youngest son, an architect in Cambridge, to visit their middle son and his family now residing in Pakistan. "Fine travel, fine family reunion."

Martha Lou Lemon Stohlman writes in her inimitable style, "As plane from Rome passed over Cape Cod, I looked down on where I thought Bonnie lived. Closest I've been to a classmate since our 50th. Was returning from an ex. 3 wks. in Rome at the American Summer Inst., housed in the Waldensian Seminary, on Piazza Cavour. We heard priests, ministers, and Jews & had a good encounter with the Pope. Am feeling especially ecumenical. Also a quick trip to Etruscan sites near Viterbo with P'ton friend who is helping produce Etruscan Guide Bk."

The year was traveling time for Betsy Strode Lee too. She took a trip to France and Italy in July and was joined by her daughter Brownie for the last four days. Off to Maine in August to visit her husband's brother and join sons Aubrey and Saint for their vacation at the Lee summer home. At Thanksgiving she will visit daughter Eleanor in Florida and in January 1986 go to Niger, Africa to visit Brownie who teaches there.

Was delighted to have news from Charlotte Lee Fishburn. Juni is still practicing law. In June they had a wonderfully unplanned reunion of all of his children and most of his grandchildren and most of her children and grandchildren. In August they looked after a friend's flat in Paris "What a chore!!"

Connie Burwell White and Bill had a glorious three weeks — four days in London to renew old friendships of 1945 — then a 12 day cruise to Amsterdam, Leningrad, Stockholm, and Copenhagen. Connie felt that the morning spent in the Hermitage Museum was almost worth the whole trip, with the added dividend of the Glyptoteck and the Staatens Museum in Copenhagen.

I hope you all read Julia Sadler de Coligny's exciting article, Winter Term in Vienna, in the Summer 1985 Sweet Briar Alumnae Magazine. The marvellous opportunity she had to visit the museums, attend concerts and opera, be entertained in the Viennese homes was only what Julie deserves. Reading about it gave me a thrill. Now she has finished a story on The History of the Friends of the Library. No longer editor of the Library Gazette from which she resigned, Julia has bought a word processor to do more with her own writing. She goes back and forth from Amherst, where her two daughters work in a shop, S'Amanda's, which sells everything from sandwiches to saris, to Richmond to be with old friends.

What a surprise for the returning Sweet Briar Vienna group to find Elizabeth Mayfield Chapman on their flight from New York. Smut had just deplaned from TWA flight 847 from Rome!! But it was January and Rome was cold. Smut had gone with her son Bo and daughter-in-law Mary Ann and learned a great deal about Renaissance literature. Mary Ann received an M.A. from Hollins in May. In July Smut visited son Georgie and family in Brookline, MA. She was planning a trip to Greece in Sept.

This has been a traveling year for me too, thanks to Eastern Airlines Senior Passport. I visited daughter Roberta, a banker in Atlanta, in Jan., daughter Suzanne, SBC '68, in Albuquerque in March and daughter Louise in Knoxville in May, when Melissa, my granddaughter, graduated from high school. Melissa enters the University of Tennessee in Sept. For Thanksgiving, I expect to fly to Houston to visit Suzanne and her doctor husband. They moved to Houston in May. Robert teaches anesthesiology at Baylor Medical Center. Soon I leave for two months in France. During Sept. I will share a house with three other widows, outside Grasse. In Oct. I go for a course at the Institut de Francais in Villefranche-sur-Mer for four weeks. I hope to improve both my painting which is my great therapy and my French.

Have a good year and keep me posted on all your news for next year's installment.

Isabelle Franke De Graaf has joined the retirees in Florida — sort of. She is currently an Elder in the First Presbyterian Church and an active folk dancer and bridge player. Last summer she vacationed with Leland III and his family in the Black Hills of South Dakota.

Chesapeake Bay sailing in summer, 5 grandchildren and Grit's law practice fill happy days for Molly Talcott Dodson.

From Richmond, Ida Todman Pierce recommends travelling to England, Scotland and Ireland as they did. They dined at Ardsheal House in Glencoe, Scotland — an old manor inn run by Irene Deering Taylor (class of '54) and husband Bob. Alex Anderson Young and Charlie stopped for a visit with Ida while driving to Florida in February.

Now that husband Arthur is retired, Babbie Derr Chenoweth and he stay 4 to 5 months in their cottage in the Smokey Mountains of North Carolina. Of 6 grandchildren, one is age 2 and 2 are in college. Babbie reports she sees only Birmingham Briarites but may come to Texas as their oldest son Chip is in Fort Worth.

It was good to hear from Ethlyn Swayze who lost her husband in June — we extend our sympathy. Do look her up if you are near Yazoo City, MS.

Carolyn Ogilvie is ready for our reunion #50. Aren't we all? She's raising funds for the Shreveport Opera Season while keeping up with 8 Texas grandchildren. Bob is not retired — both Carolyn and he are very active in their Presbyterian Church. He handles scholarships and she is on the Christian Education Committee. Let's plot a Dallas gathering, Carolyn.

Howell Lykes Colton is also an opera buff and has chosen San Francisco for a summer home so that she can enjoy the opera there and her 2 daughters and 3 grands. She spends Christmas there also and the rest of the year in Florida.

Dorothy Tison Campbell spent 5 exciting weeks in Germany, Switzerland and France with her oldest son and his wife. Arrived home to prepare for fall reunion at the Campbell Homestead for descendants of Dr. Claude M. Campbell. After Christmas until May first, look for Dottie in Florida.

From Toledo, Ohio, Dorothy Gipe Clement says John has had surgery and is giving directions from the passenger seat until he can drive again and return to his rowing and running and she to her garden.

Kay Gardner Stevenson lost her husband in January, we are sad to hear. Both her sons and their families live nearby in Quincy. She has been to London with one son and his family, is playing golf and plans to travel until old age says "halt."

Brownie Snider is on the move as usual. No room to record all. She chaired the Pen Women's National Short Story contest and is in charge of collecting clothing and toys for the Center Against Spouse Abuse (CASA). Plans to attend "A Celebration of the Generations Campaign" at Sweet Briar, Oct. 4-6, and travel a bit in Virginia.

Heard from Pauline Womack Swan. She and George celebrated their 48th wedding anniversary in August at their home on Higgins Lake in Northern Michigan. Three married daughters and 7 grandchildren live in Michigan. Winters find the Swans in Lost Tree Village in North Palm Beach, FL. Their bachelor son is in Florida. George must be retired for Pauline speaks of their enjoying golf, swimming, bridge and walking.

Looks like we should have a class reunion in Florida. Claire Handerson Chapin has retired to the Florida Keys (Duck Key) and is enamored of blue skies, water and sunshine. Has become relatively proficient in sailing, fishing, dispensing sun tan lotion and scuba diving. Two of their 7 grands are in college and out of the remaining 5, two are interested in SBC. Hooray!

Fergie had a lovely summer last year with grandchildren on Cape Cod. In October they went to the Orient and then spent Christmas in London before returning to Florida.

Kay Hoyt had an exciting head-whirling trip to Britain — saw the queen twice in one morning in Edinburgh! She loves retirement and her volunteer work in tutoring the foreign-born and with hospitals and Meals-on-Wheels.

Jo Sutton McCandlish and Nancy McCandlish Prichard are still nextdoor neighbors in Fairfax. Jo's Bob was honored with other lawyers in Virginia for 50 years of practice. This was at Virginia Beach where Jo and Molly Talcott Dodson shared a two-hour chatting breakfast. Time makes no difference, says Jo. She visits Ida Todman Pierce in Richmond when she goes there to visit her mother who turned 100 last year.

Rose Hyde Fales is very involved with writing and with her grandchildren in Cambridge, MA and Sweden.

Pollyanna Shotwell Holloway and Bob had a joyous family reunion with children, grandchildren and two great-grands in Bermuda! Best news is they'll be in Dallas, TX in January and we can plan another Grammar Reunion!

Carolyn Potter Ryburn and Frank flew to London last September with Blair and me. We shared an apartment on Berkeley Square and toured Wales and parts of southern England. They tooted on to France and we spent a week in Woodstock — loved every day.

Come and see us in Dallas!

It's been a good year on the whole for '42 but, sad to say, some of your messages will not be included here because the post office, rather than forwarding our mail to Sea Island as we requested, "returned it to sender." So, apologies if this happened to you.

One faithful gal sent a card from Halifax, VA with no signature, but some clues. She has a daughter named Lucy who was working at Nag's Head; could it be "Lamb Hodges"? She also has a married daughter in Charlotte and a son in the restaurant business in Richmond. Another son is in medical school and still another is already practicing surgery with his father. This busy mother has a master's from UVA herself and is teaching.

Doris Ogden Mount is still involved with horses and giving riding lessons, she says, keeps her in touch with young people, since none of her four adult children has given her any grandchildren. She is also writing a book while caring for an invalid husband who has heart trouble and Parkinsons.

Janet Eichacker lives in a beautiful spot on the north shore of Long Island with a view of the Sound. She's enjoying a book discussion group and is the historian for her Presbyterian Church's 325th anniversary celebration. They have 3 daughters and one 4th-generation-physician son, 7 grandchildren whom they visit up and down the eastern seaboard and, in addition to all this, two 94-year-old mothers.

Chookie (Julia Groves) Martin and husband Bob are busy grandparents with 4 of their 5 children and 7 of their 10 grandchildren now living in Savannah.

Di Green Hilfrich had a busy year travelling: she visited her youngest son and his family in Melbourne, FL in February; in May, she drove to Denver, CO with Hope (#1 child) for her granddaughter's high school graduation, then to Wyoming to a friend's ranch, then back to Maryland. After a 5-day rest, she was off to Martha's Vineyard for the summer.

Betty Duffield Fajans is living in a self-designed, 5-bedroom home in Wilmington, VT. The day she wrote in June, she had just had 10 large loads of manure delivered for her vegetable garden, and had just returned from a few days in Maine with her 17-month-old grandson who lives in Seattle, where she goes for Christmas.

Army (Lucy Case) sent love to everyone from Kansas. She's doing lots of travelling as a panel member in workshops and regional conferences. Her daughter Heather and 3-year-old Derek were coming for a Swim Club reunion.

Toppin Wheat Crowell is studying and playing the French horn.

Mimi Galloway Duncan and husband Russell have been living in Palm Beach, FL for the last 14 years since he moved his business HQ there. Mimi is president of Norton Gallery and School of Art, a very fine art museum in West Palm Beach.

Gloria Sanderson Sartor's daughter Sally graduated from medical school in May and is starting a residency in ear, nose and throat. Gloria is furnishings chairman for Glen Retirement Village — a non-profit "independent to dependent" facility opening in 1986 in Shreveport.

Three of Grace Lanier Brewers four daughters are married and all four are living in the south — one in Franklin, VA, one in Chester, SC, one in Birmingham, AL and one in Memphis. She has 6 grandchildren. Did you know we have a genuine maniac in our class? (I thought we had several!)

Jeanne Sawyer Stanwood says living in Maine all year round qualifies her. She was looking forward to seeing Barbara Ripley Furniss and Si Walke Rogers this summer. Si really gets around. Grace Lanier Brewer reported that she spent two nights with her last May in Clarksville, TN, and they had great fun. In June, Si was leaving for Venice, and going thence to London for Wimbledon on the Orient Express. On to Scotland, and after that she planned to babysit in Boston while daughter and husband go to Stockholm and Helsinki. Si also reported running into Sally Jackson in that most glamorous and exciting spot of all, Kroger's parking lot (in Charlottesville, I assume). In Hawaii, Si saw Page Ruth and Tookie Kniskern '43. Some of Si's travels are no doubt associated with an organization she helped start — a group of parents of autistic children and adults.

Anyone who is having mother-in-law trouble, head for India! "Rut" (Mary Ruth Jacquot) Tempest has found they have lots of clout there. She and husband Rone visited their son, Southeast Asia bureau chief for the L.A. Times, and his wife in India for a month, and were pampered and treated royally. They travelled from the Arabian Sea to a houseboat in Kashmir, and, on their return home, were greeted by news of a new granddaughter in Houston named for Rut — Ruth Frances.

Margie Troutman Harbin is travelling around the U.S.A. visiting sons, all five of whom are doctors; in July she planned to visit Frank and Anne's parents at Travers City in northern Michigan; in August Henry and his family in West Virginia; in the fall, San Francisco, and then Albuquerque where Frank will be spending his inter-year in clinical psychology. Margie has taken to raised gardening, which she finds easier than conventional, and is still bicycling, exercising and working on a nature preserve in Rome, GA.

Another gardener is Cynthia Abbott Dougherty. Besides digging in the garden, she's treating herself to piano lessons. She reported a delightful day in New York with Ruth Hensley Camblos last November. Wouldn't it be nice if those two could work up a program for us for our 45th? Cynthia's husband Dick is still consulting for the museum and is hard at work on a mystery set there.

"Once was enough," says Rene Mitchell Moore of her visit to East Berlin and checkpoint Charlie. But she loved the rest of Germany.

Eloise English Davis and husband took their married children and grandchildren to St. Martens in January, and planned to return in July to their time-share villa there. In August they were to cruise the Mediterranean from Venice to Nice, and were hoping to take the Orient Express from Venice to London. In November, they're off to China for an American Helicopter Society seminar, then to Bangkok and Japan.

Just back from a wonderful 3 weeks in England and Scotland in July was Jean Hedley Currie. She was heading to New England in August to welcome a new grandson born July 5 to son Douglas and his wife. Jean loves her new home in Ocala, FL, but will spend Christmas with daughter Candie and family in Avon, CT.

Marion Robbins Alexander writes from Houston, where she has two daughters established in successful careers: Robin Parish is a speech pathologist and headmistress of the Parish School for children with language difficulties, and Betsy Parish is in public relations. Her son Ford Alexander married Leslie Grimes, SBC '73 in '83. Marion and her husband Hugh are spending a lot of time travelling, since Hugh's retirement.

Betty Hanger Lippincott and Schuyler travelled to Egypt in February and then on to Rome to visit daughter Betsey who was teaching there in a girls' school for a year. Betty's former roommate, Gege

Moomaw Hall and husband Bill chose the Pacific northwest for their travels and liked it so much they might do it again. Their daughter Betty lives in Charlotte with her husband Bob Powell and 2 daughters; son Billy, with wife and 2 children, lives in Greensboro; son Hugh was job-hunting in Richmond.

Betsy Gilmer Tremain and Mike were planning a family get-together at Tripp Island in July, with 15 offspring. And on that subject, Jeff (Eliot Jelfords) and Harold Townsend report the birth of their first grandchild — a blessed granddaughter — in March. Jeff said it made her so happy that her golf handicap immediately fell to 15. They had a wonderful trip to Italy in the summer of '84 and a rail trip west to Canada in July '85.

Another happy grandmother is Pattie Rose Early Trippet, who has a granddaughter Betsey in Waco, TX. Her husband Harry acquired a pacemaker in '84 but they were able to go to Spain with friends in September. Harry is semi-retired; Pattie is selling real estate and playing golf and bridge.

Polly Peyton Turner's husband spent last year recovering from a heart attack. One of their joys is their flourishing church and wonderful reactor.

Eddie Syska Peltier's husband Paul had his second successful lung cancer operation in 11 years, and they enjoyed a 37th anniversary cruise and a Thanksgiving family reunion.

Eleanor Ringer Linn says she enjoys travelling vicariously with all of you since she was just bringing her husband home from a 3-week stay in the hospital when she wrote.

Florence Gillem Pressly and husband James have just built a smaller home in Greenville, SC and their son, Dr. Jennings Pressly, who practices with his father, has moved into their family home of 26 years with his wife and 3 little girls. Florence and James enjoy a mountain home in Banner Elk, NC, too.

Jane Taylor Lowell and husband Bob divide their time between a condo in Cape Coral, FL and Indiana. Jane does volunteer work in both places in nursing homes and women's church study groups. They went to Charleston, SC to see their son, father of 4, assume a Navy command.

Bill and I and clan will be in Charleston in August for the marriage of our son Clark. We were in Philadelphia in June for the marriage of his cousin, Roger Jones, Betty Hanger Lippincott's son; Eugie Burnett Affel and husband Herman were at the beautiful rehearsal dinner Betty and Schuyler gave at their home.

Florence Bagley Witt is president of Hospice of Chattanooga; a newspaper picture made her look all of 16 years old.

Frances Meek Temple Rowe had an extremely busy year, what with her portraits, the Opera Guild, and the presidency of the Drummers, a supporting arm of the Symphony. Ramsey's son has completed his first year at Annapolis. Frances took trips to China and Africa and found the beauty of South Africa awe-inspiring.

Helen Sanford is always trying a new experience. This year it's to be a pack trip on horseback and fly fishing in Colorado. Her really big thing though is the job of National Reunion Gifts chairman for the Alumnae Association. This puts her in touch with people in those classes which will reunite in 1986. "They're such nice people," says Helen. I know that's true of '42.

First of all, our 40th Reunion! Don't forget, May 23-25, 1986. Jean Love Albert writes that the kick-off will be a picnic at their farm (Ed's note — the last one in '81 was outstanding!) on Friday evening. It will start early for those who would like to play tennis, badminton, croquet or cards, or have a hayride. Details and schedules will be forthcoming. For those who can, a special reunion gift will be much appreciated. Mainly, y'all come!

Also on the subject of reunion, Cholly Jones Bendall visited us for a few lovely days this summer and we discussed Louise Wilbourn Collier's book, Pilgrimage, A Tale of Old Natchez. Cholly suggested that we might have a discussion session with Louise — and that we might extend this to other creative members of our class. These would include Ellen Robbins Red, who is writing a book, Woman of Independent Means, based on letters written by her grandmother while she was a student at Hollins, Marjorie Selvage Stone, who is co-author of Getting to Know Athens County, Ohio and Julia Bristow, whose paintings have received critical acclaim. And who else? There are probably others, of whose works I am not aware. Cholly's mother died this spring. It was my privilege to have known her — whenever I hear the word "sprite," I think of her and of how lovely and loved she was. Cholly is enjoying her sons, their wives, and her grandchildren. Hunter and Cathy are in Richmond with young Hunter, Gordon and Louise are in Yanceyville near Cholly and Bro, and Bobby and Wendy are in L.A.

Jeanne Parham Coors and George have moved to a condo from their big old house and will still be within minutes of their four daughters and grandchildren. George, after heart bypass operations, is working hard and fishing, golfing and hunting with his grandchildren. Jeanne and George spend a lot of time in their apartment in Destin, FL. Their new address in Memphis is 2975 Gardens Way, Memphis, TN 38111.

Margot Sibly Lewis and her now retired husband are travelling, golfing, doing volunteer work, and enjoying their children and grandchildren.

Carroll Cone Saxton has two grandsons and granddaughters. Her niece, Christine Kirkpatrick, graduates in May from SBC and Carroll hopes to be there.

From Ellie Clement Littleton comes the news that they are leaving Bucks County, PA to move to Martha's Vineyard. Ellie has just had her 13th grandchild!

I see Ariana Jones Wittke occasionally at Pennington Market. She had her first "Texas-boy" grandchild in December '84. He was in the Princeton Parade with mother and father ('78) this year. Arie says the SB bulbs are great, and we all agree.

From Greensboro, Betsy Simmons Lynch writes that her husband Jack has retired and that when the money runs out, she will leave! They are having a ball. John III is in commercial real estate. Loga, their daughter, is in residential real estate in Charlotte; Tom, recently married, is selling lumber in NC and Va., and Sallie is working for Jessie Helms in D.C.

Eleanor Myers Cole had a good visit with Catherine Smart Grier and Louise Crawford Mansfield and husband in Garden City, SC recently.

Hallie Tom Nixon will be in Pittsburgh for the Annual Garden Club of America Meeting four days prior to reunion. She is G.C.A. Zone IX chairman, and this involves several trips every year. (Come on, Hallie Tom, you can do it!)

The first grandchild has just appeared for Betsy Bowman Townsend — Townsend Collins, born in March, '85. Son, Bowman, was married to a girl from Virginia.

Ellen Thackery Wilson reports that her husband is not president, her children have no gold medals, and that they are very happy. Daughter Elizabeth is in Australia — an interior designer — while Mary is working on her M.A. and Mark is in the family firm. She and her husband spend their summers in Canada in their log cabin. Alas, no grandchildren.

Legare Robertson Hinds was born in December '84, is beautiful, and is living in Greenville, NC, writes her happy grandmother Legare Thompson Robertson.

Anne Hill Edwards is teaching piano and her husband has retired. He recently attended Elderhostel at SBC.

Helen Murchison Lane's father, age 86, remarried on June 15. His bride, Althea, is 83. The twenty-two children had dinner at Murch and Ed's following the ceremony. Murch says that their four children are happy and prospering and that "for the most part, life has been more than good to us."

Marilyn Hannah Crocker is way ahead of us all! Ashley Dilly Betzendahl, daughter of Coni Crocker Betzendahl '75 and Richard Betzendahl, was born on March 17, '85, and is registered at Sweet Briar for the class of 2007. Marilyn now has three granddaughters registered at SBC. She and Ken are chartering a trawler on the Chesapeake. They were in Mexico and Spain last year and in Bermuda in May for her 60th birthday.

Dea Dingwell Loos continues as director of her primary day school in D.C. — a 12-month job. Their youngest child is now at Dartmouth and they are finding "life at home with no children a very happy change."

Edwina Young Call and Wheats are completely renovating their house on the James which is 8 miles wide at that point. At least another 8 months to go. Son #2 was married last year in Seal Beach. Wheats went to Israel in October and to Montreal this summer. Edwina sees Anne Dickson Jordan '45 and Polly Vandeventer Saunders frequently. P.V.'s son was married in April in Atlanta.

Charlotte Dinsmoor Olin is going ballooning in Burgundy this summer (my idea of the dream trip), returning for daughter #4's wedding in October. She has a grandson born in February in Nashville. They hosted the Cliburn Piano Competition this spring; they put up a lovely redhead from New Zealand and hope to visit her there.

Caroline Rudolph Sellers is having a great summer in Florida, checking children and grandchildren in and out. She is helping Dowd with reunion and will be active in the alumnae lund drive. "It will be a lot of fun and a good chance for all of us to organize a special treat for SBC. (Yes and yes!)"

Leila Fellner Lenagh is busy with calligraphy and goes to the Scripps campus for the annual conference. She is involved with her community group theater, church and choir. Daughter Maddi still lives in Holland and is working for the government and studying law. Kim (R.N.) is a flight attendant for Western airlines. Tod is finishing his doctoral dissertation in mineral economics, and Jessie, who has been working in Germany, is going to Johns Hopkins SAIS in Bologna.

Betty Anne Bass Norris was at SBC for her niece's graduation. "As beautiful as ever" was Sweet Briar. She saw Lucile Umbreit, her favorite prof. (Ed's note: "She taught me more in one year of musical appreciation than I'll ever be able to thank her for properly.) Bass's daughter Neil and son-in-law Lee continue working on their old house and have been to France and on a camera safari in Kenya. Neil has a practice in counseling, primarily death-related, and Lee manages the BMW Nissan agency. David is in commercial real estate on Wall Street and son George is working fulltime at the Sheltered Workshop of Greenwich. Bass is still in real estate there. Her mother and father both died recently, aged 89 and 87 respectively and in good health to the last.

Lee Stevens Gravely discovered a ceramic factory on the Amalli coast. She has a company, Vietri, Inc., in Chapel Hill which imports its dinnerware in very attractive patterns. The business is a great success and Lee loves it.

Shields Jones Harris has expanded her Odyssey Travel Company by leaps and bounds and is loving it.

Jean Pollard Kline and Bob have finished their house at Sandbridge and have also built a new house in Richmond. Son, Mac, lives in Arlington; John in Oregon. Doug is at Roanoke College and Jeannie received her MBA. Jean and Bob enjoy Mary's three children who live nearby. Cholly and Bro and Vange and I will be visiting them in October.

Mary Louise Holton Effler spent the winter in Pompano, Christmas in Michigan and a month in Mexico. She had a fabulous 16-day SBC trip to Tunisia, and visited Caroline Rankin Mapother '48 on the return trip.

Joan Berend Gordon lost her second husband, whom we all remember from our 35th, in April. Joan is settled in Pittsburgh but is spending the summer at their house in the Berkshires (Canaan, NY). She is winding up the details of her husband's book, Expressionism: Art and Idea, which is being published by Yale in 1986. I'm sure Joan knows that we all share her grief in this second tragedy.

Palmour Holmes McIntyre is enjoying having her older daughter and two granddaughters living right there in Atlanta. Her younger daughter is an attorney, like her father. Palmour put her volunteer work on hold when her widowed mother had several strokes in '78 and Palmour was needed to run her household and nurse around the clock for six years. Now she and Pope are travelling and spending as much time as possible in their house in western North Carolina.

Catherine Smart Grier, Joe and son Robin spent a fascinating time in the USSR last summer with other lawyers and their families on a legal study trip. Joe is resigning from his law firm of 30 lawyers to start a new law firm with Joe III in the brand new Independence Center on the Square. Catherine's first grandson was born recently to their daughter, Susan Phillips. Eleanor Myers Cole came for a visit; Eleanor and Wat have just built a new house.

Adeline Jones Voorhees is at last, a grandmother. Her four children are scattered from Kansas to Maine (three are married) and gathered recently for a great family reunion for her husband's 65th birthday. She visited Polly Kent Page and Bob this year in their home overlooking Mt. Bromley.

Dorothy Corcoran Hartzler says this has been a banner year for her. (Husband Joe, though still not well, is doing better.) She saw two of her three roommates: Jessie Strickland Elcock and Walter in Big Canoe and Dorothy Sue Caldwell Crowell and Bob when they came to visit. She hopes to see her other roommate, Bea Dingwell Loos when she is in Washington for her niece's wedding in September. Tody's older son, Jeff, is moving to Albuquerque.

Three generations of Louisa B. Lolyd's family were able to have a reunion at Cape Cod this summer.

Ann Farr Lewis and Bob spent the winter in Palm Desert, CA and were happy to be near their son who is head of the neurology dept. at U. Cal. in San Diego.

Robin Evand Stroud writes that she and 23 other gals from California left husbands and homes and departed for an antique-buying and art tour of London, Normandy and Paris. What a marvellous trip! John is still practicing medicine and Robin has a small design business. They plan to be in Miami in September for the birth of their 4th grandchild. Daughter Sally has two little girls and their son, who works for American President Lines in the Bay area, has a year-old daughter. Daughter Elizabeth recently married Bob Fisher and lives in SF.

I am currently doing volunteer work for Doylestown Hospital, PA. It is the only hospital in the U.S. owned and operated by a federated women's club, the Village Improvement Association founded in 1895. The excellent quality of the care must be due, in large part, to this management by women. There are 800 volunteers and 300 candy strippers in the hospital.

Vange is well, and just back from a business trip to Santa Domingo. Jacques and Shelley will have a baby in March and I will be a grandmother at last! Shelley's most recent movie productions, alter the Natural and Desperately Seeking Susan are Death of a Salesman for PBS (same cast as Broadway), and a life of St. Gauden filmed in NY and NH. Daughter Carey is director of merchandise development for Duty Free Shoppers, Inc., in S.F. She is also studying intensively for a career in opera.

I hope that we will come to SBC to this important 40th reunion and give whatever we can, both by our presence and financially, to our college.

Addendum:

Many of you have heard the sad news of the death of Nancy Dowd Burton on Sept. 12. Caroline Rudolph Sellers wrote on Sept. 16: "It is with great sadness that I write to tell you of the unexpected death of our dear classmate, Nancy Dowd Burton. On Thursday morning, Sept. 12, she suffered a massive heart attack and died within minutes. The memorial service is being held today in Glendale, OH. Dowd was greatly loved by all who knew her and, as we all know, Sweet Briar was one of the greatest joys of her life. For those of us gathering at Sweet Briar this weekend for our Reunion Workshop during Alumnae Council, our return to campus will be all the more meaningful and poignant."

A memorial service was held during the Alumnae Council for all alumnae who died during the past year.

We extend our love and sympathy to Dowd's family and limitless friends, and find it impossible to imagine Sweet Briar without her. We know how much she gave to Sweet Briar, and how much she loved it, but, oh, how much we loved her.

Rave reviews of reunion are circulating! Our congratulations and thanks to Dolly Clark Rasmussen, Lola Steele Shepherd and Louise Moore for their leadership in making our 35th reunion an outstanding occasion.

Special thanks are due to our classmate who telephoned her pledge at 11:00 p.m. Friday night allowing us to meet our goal of $50,000. What excitement and joy that call generated!

Sally Bianchi Foster presented our class report. She pointed out that "the class of 1950 was somewhat different, special, unusual and unique... you see, we were Martha B's girls. We have all felt her influence throughout our lives as we recall her deep commitment to world peace and her endeavors for world understanding."

One of the weekend highlights was a visit to the new art gallery where Stokie Kyle Kimpel had an exhibition of her color photographs with the theme: water.

Following 22 years abroad, living in Italy and Switzerland, Pat Halloran Salvadori attended reunion and was elected Class President. Jo Gulick Grant had also lived in Italy and they compared experiences.

It looked like a Wimbledon warm-up on the tennis courts with Lola Steele

Class of 1950

Shepherd, Debbie Freeman Cooper, Ann McNeer Blanken, Dolly Clark Rasmussen, Rita Murray Gourd, Sally Bianchi Foster and Peachey Lillard Manning all playing excellent post-graduate tennis.

We felt at home at the Saturday reception on the lawn because there were professors and staff who still knew us by name. We were glad to see Martha von Briesen, Dan Boone, Helen Mac, Milan Hapala and Carolyn Bates.

When Mary Waller Berkeley Ferguson talks everyone listens. It was 4:00 a.m. when her audience retired. Mary Waller's topic was Southern weddings.

Margaret Lewis Furse spent one night on her return from a visit to London. She first stopped in NYC to see her married daughter Janie and her 23 year old single son John who is an aspiring actor. Margaret is still teaching religion and ethics in the American Studies Program at the U of TX in Austin.

Classmates attending reunion included: Anne McNeer Blanken, Mary Dame Stubbs Broad, Deborah Freeman Cooper, Barbara Austin Doss, Mary Waller Berkeley Ferguson, Sally Bianchi Foster, Margaret Lewis Furse, Jo Gulick Grant, Emma Kyle Kimpel, Betty Todd Landen, Margaret Gee Lawes, Peachey Lillard Manning, Louise Moore, Rita Murray Gourd, Pat Halloran Salvadori, Kay Leroy Wing. The following classmates came with their husbands: Anne Belser Asher, Ackie Easter Henderson, Lola Steele Shepherd, Dolly Clark Rasmussen, Edie Brooke Robertson.

Mim Wyse Linsky missed the SBC reunion to attend her husband Link's 35th reunion at Northeastern held in Boston. Mim is Advertising Manager for KMart in Fitchburg, MA. Mim has three sons and a daughter. She is an enthusiastic tennis player.

Henrietta Hill Hubbard and Charles attended reunion at Wand L. They now have four grandchildren to enjoy. Their youngest son Lister has just become a partner in his law firm. Henrietta serves on the State and National Boards of the Mental Health Association. She is chairman of the Altar Guild in her Episcopal Church.

Garland Hunter Davies spent the summer in Kunming, Peoples Republic of China, teaching English teachers how English is taught to foreign students in America. Garland is director of the English as a Second Language Program at GA State U. in Atlanta; the program has a faculty of 16 and some 300 students. Nick and Garland were in China on a medical trip 2 years ago. Since then they have had visitors from China in Atlanta. One of these, a physician at the Kunming Medical College, invited Garland to Kunming to help the English teachers.

Ann Preston Vick reports that for the first time her gifted 13 year old twins are separated. John is at Woodberry Forest School in VA. Tal remains in Deland, FL with Ann. Ann manages to find time for a daily workout at a Nautilus gym.

It comes as no great surprise to learn that the children of Rodney and Judy Campbell Campbell are creative and talented. Holly is an advertising copywriter with Saatchi and Saatchi in London. Her work has won an award. Duncan is writing a movie entitled Suburban Wars. Collin attends college in CA and is interested in photography. Judy's mother is living with her in La Jolla, CA.

Jean Yanick Snyder has seven children and seven grandchildren. She is a Special Education Consultant for a 9 county area in Rockford, Iowa. She now works three days and plays four days. Her activities include downhill and cross country skiing, golfing, and training labrador retrievers.

Last March in Boston Bonnie Loyd Crane opened her own art gallery featuring 19th century American paintings. The Crane Gallery is a must for all who visit Boston. Melinda Crane married Jurgen Engle, a German architect, on Sept. 7. Matthew is a graduate student at UVA. Amanda graduated from Stanford in June and is working in CA.

Mary Dame Stubbs Broad reports a lot of family travel this year. She and Doug went skiing in Canada last March, visited Europe in September and Bermuda in November. They are now back home in Hampton, VA "pooped and broke." Daughter Susan is married to branch pilot Bill Cofer. She teaches 6th grade in VA Beach. Son Doug is apprenticing in Architecture in Rocky Mt., NC with Glueak and Associates. He teaches Architecture, drafting and computer design at Nash. Tech., NC.

Todie Probeck Wiant is busy running her own non-profit corporation, One Plus One Associates, Inc., a Reading and Learning Center. The program includes tutoring and teacher in-service workshops. Todie recently acquired a Principal's Certificate. She has 4 grown children — 3 are married.

Anne Peyton Cooper works part-time as public information coordinator for the Summit NJ public schools. She does volunteer work through the Board of Nursing Scholarships, Junior League and Calvary Church. Anne, husband Jim and Nancy vacationed last August at their home on Eleuthera Island in the Bahamas. Nancy is a student at Madeira School and Jim is a sophomore at Kenyon College.

Marilyn Ackerson Barker has three grandchildren. Her daughter Molly is a Fulbright Scholar at the Institute of Classical Studies in Greece. Daughter Margaret is a reporter-announcer for WGST radio in Atlanta and does business reports for Public TV. Marilyn continues to enjoy her job as reference librarian at the Public Library in Knoxville, TN. She and Hank took time out this year to travel to England.

Moe Gamble Booth travelled to Italy to help her daughter, who is married to a carrier-based Navy jet pilot, set up an import business. Anyone interested in sophisticated Italian ceramics should contact Moe in Lynchburg. Moe reports twin son #1 is working in Richmond and twin son #2 works in Roanoke and married in August. Moe continues with her singing. Her husband is retired.

Eddie Brooke Robertson is active in her community, Norfolk, VA. She is a sponsor of Parents Anonymous — a group concerned with child abuse. She is on the board of The Chrysler Museum. Her church activities include teaching Sunday School and helping start a day care center. Eddie exercises three times a week.

Meredith Moore Lynn lives in Needham, Ma and for 19 years has worked for an insurance agency handling commercial accounts. Merry accompanied her husband Jim to Korea last summer where he was on assignment with GTE International Systems.

Debby Freeman Cooper has four children and two grandchildren and volunteers in Wallingford, Pa. She works at the library and teaches an Ecology Course in 4th grade. Debby also plays tennis and takes piano lessons.

Stokie Kyle Kimpel and Helmut moved to Albuquerque NM last summer. They built a small house with easy maintenance, minimum yard care, and a swimming pool in the back yard. It sounds like the perfect vacation spot for the 3 Air Force pilots in the family — 2 sons who are captains and a recently acquired son-in-law who is a lieutenant.

Kay Lang Gibson and Gib have moved from a large colonial house in Larchmont NY to a new home on Skidaway Island, GA, some 15 miles downtown from Savannah and 5 miles up river from the ocean. Kay is executive secretary and assistant to the president of the Savannah College of Art and Design.

Fan Lewis Jackson's son Joe is a design engineer in Palo Alto CA. Mary Fanchon works with youth with a non-denominational Christian mission group in Powhatan, VA. Margaret Lewis co-edits a real estate magazine and is a part-time college student. Fan is a board member of Bible in the Schools program. Her major involvement is with the Episcopal Church in Corpus Christi TX.

Ginger Luscombe Rogers is a preservationist in Hudson, OH. She is involved in moving, preserving and restoring an 1846 Greek Revival farm house. She volunteers at the Akron Art Museum. Ginger plays golf and tennis and rides her horse. Daughter Sarah Thomas is a freelance commercial artist. Ann is a gourmet chef in Badgastein, Austria, and Justin is a senior at St. Laurence U.

Sally Webb Lent continues her public school teaching in Hyattsville, MD. She will travel to CA in Dec. to greet her first grandchild.

B.G. Elmore Gilleland and husband Guy drove around the French countryside for a month last summer. They stayed in homes as often as possible including farms and manor houses. A highlight of the trip was hot air ballooning over Burgundy.

Bill Bailey Fritzing farms in Weston, VT and sells "primeur" vegetables locally. She raises sheep, pigs, chickens and ducks. Bill is secretary-treasurer for her husband's business and secretary of the Weston Community Club. She is also assistant town clerk and treasurer.

Dotty Barney Hoover has moved to Wilton CT from Darien CT. She works part time in a designer consignment shop. She does volunteer work with the Junior League and Children's Aid Charity sale. Dotty's hobbies include gardening and needlepoint. She has four children and three grandchildren.

Nancy Storey White and Edward attended summer school for three weeks in Oxford, England under the Oxford/Berkeley program. Sally Davis Spencer SBC '48 and husband Kyle, from Nancy's former home town, Columbus GA, were in the program also. Nancy and Ed spent another week taking a course at St. Andrews U, Scotland. They are now back home in Sarasota FL where Ed directs the Literacy Volunteer program.

Frindy Burden Gronen has a new home in Dubuque, IA with three extra beds. She is a good cook too!

Mary Ellen Davis Gettel is in her 12th year of teaching at Marquette U. Her son Jim graduated from U of IL in May with a law degree and MA in business. Her daughter Jane Ellen is married and works as a legal secretary with a Milwaukee firm. Mary Sarah is a Jr. at U. of Wisconsin and is majoring in Art History.

Dorothy Montague Cholnoky has three sons and a grandson. She has been president of the Greenfingers Garden Club in Greenwich, CT this year. The club sponsored the 25th annual New England Flower show and contributed the proceeds to the Greenwich Youth Conservation program which provides summer jobs for local teenagers. The club sponsors pocket parks, maintains a garden at the local Nursing Home and works to make Greenwich a beautiful town.

Pat Owens Purvis's daughter Lisanne SBC '78, an attorney, received her MFA from NYU in drama last June. Pat has another daughter, Pamela Ross, a homemaker, and a son Tom III who is married and is a real estate agent. Pat is interested in interior design, travel, history and archaeology.

Anne Green Nicolson lives in York PA and is an insurance agent. She is going through the divorce process and is concerned with sex discrimination by the judiciary in regard to property rights. Perhaps she discussed this with Judge Patricia Denning Hunt whom she visited in Chapel Hill, NC last May.

Elaine Adams Harrison moved to Fort Pierce FL, where she is living on the family cattle ranch with horses and cattle. She has four sons in the area. Elaine is still working with general aviation, traveling and instruction. She is also active with the Outward Bound Organization. Last spring Elaine went on a two week horseback ride in the mountains of Hungary. Her sympathy to Elaine on the death of her husband Nat in April.

Carolyn Tynes Cowan missed reunion to be with her first grandson Carl Hunter Bolton and to attend the graduation of her youngest son Tynes from Birmingham Southern College. I regret to report the death of Carolyn's husband Curly last February.

Elizabeth Hutchens McCaleb's daughter Martha, SBC '80, married Steven Cosentino in Richmond, VA. Hot enjoyed a reunion with wedding guests Mary Waller Ferguson and Russell.

Julia Freels Chwalik had an uneasy five weeks this summer while her daughter Cindy saw Europe by the back-pack route leaving no itinerary with mom. Susan is the last one out of the nest and has started Mercer College.

Cora Morningstar Spiller reports that her oldest daughter has moved to Singapore and her second child was transferred to TX. Cora and her husband will be restoring an old house in Bowling Green, KY.

Elizabeth Coryell Feldman is owner of The Willow Tree Shop in Petoskey, MI.

Ginny Page Love and husband Bill moved last January from Kansas City to Los Angeles. They live in a small house with a swimming pool and great views. They love the CA weather. Their family includes eight children and six grandchildren who are scattered all over.

Veda Brooks Norfolk has a full service travel agency — Norfolk Tours in Baton Rouge, LA. Veda's daughter is travel consultant and manager.

Patricia Denning Stanford Hunt, who transferred from Sweet Briar to UNC Chapel Hill, is now a district court judge in Statesville, NC. She has been a member of the NC House of Representatives and has served on many governmental advisory boards, including the Advisory Committee on Teacher Education, the Governor's Task Force on Energy, and the Commission on Juvenile Justice. Patricia is also the author of North Carolina History, Geography and Government, a junior high school state textbook.

I was homebound reunion weekend and decided I too was going to have some reunion fun. I studied the class list and found Marianne Delacourt Holland a few miles away. We met for lunch and I enjoyed the mini-reunion so much I plan to reach out to San Veach Brooks in New Haven, CT and Lacy Skinner Eckardt in Rye, NY. I will send you a class list with the recommendation that you too reach out by phone, letter, or visit to a classmate.

My thanks for your cards and for the encouragement of former class secretaries Sally Bianchi Foster and Lola Steele Shepherd.

Lots of people have new places to live. Joy Parker and Charles Eldredge are now in the Villa Regina section of Miami. Their recent trips include a visit to England, a Caribbean cruise, a Royal Viking cruise from Southampton, and the trip home from a visit to Switzerland on the QE II — their aim is to travel around the world next year on ground points!

Cindy Sinclair and Bill Rutherford are in a new place in Wichita and planned a month long school-connected study tour in England and France this past summer. Joan Peck and Roy Sherbahn have moved to Worcester, MA. Betty Gene Orr Atkinson has a new home in Memphis, as does Janet McKallor Bates in Binghamton, NY. Bill and I are about to build out in the country — a few acres on a tidal creek south of Charleston. We are ready for less house and more nature around us.

Bev Smith and Bill Bragg had a wonderful trip to Nepal, India, and Sri Lanka. Bev has been studying and writing about Virginian colonial history. Ruth Saunders and Norman Smith had a trip to Israel; they go often to West Palm Beach to get a respite from NJ.

Mag Andrews Polt has been studying finance and banking to help with her new position on the business reporting staff of the Roanoke paper. They had trips to France, Kenya, London and Berlin. Vicky Taof Johnson was also in France leading a "total immersion" student group from her high school where she is foreign language department head. I was in north Germany for a week with Bill on one of his recent trips. Jerry Dreisbach and John Ludeke are still among the busiest people I hear from. They rest by backpacking in the wilderness. They plan to spend Christmas in Costa Rico where their son is an economic advisor with the Peace Corps. Lamar Ellis and Richard Oglesby saw Sissy Morris Long and Peaches Davis Roane and families while they were in Memphis for son, John's wedding. Their son Rich is on Vanderbilt's swimming team as was

Ann Henry Lake's son, Steve. There was a mini-reunion with Anne White Connell at Vaughan Inge and Taylor Morrisette's daughter's wedding. Another mini-reunion took place on sailboats in the Virgin Islands in February and was arranged by Ruthie Frye and Hugo Deaton. It included the Joneses (Paul and Dilly Johnson), the Teachouts (Bill and Ann Collins), and the Webbers (Temple and Barbara Chase). The Morrisettes were to join them.

The Teachouts' daughter Kathy and her husband are preparing to be Presbyterian missionaries to Japan. He has just graduated from Seminary and they have a one year old daughter — the first grandchild. Daughter Julie is a travel agent in Santa Barbara and Ann Collins is "having fun and learning a lot" as a real estate investor.

Jean Gillespie and George Walker have spent most of their time at Sea Island waiting for their new townhouse to be finished in Bluefield.

Joan Potter Bichel reports Henry won an award for a portrait he entered in an art show. My art "work" includes teaching water color classes at a local gallery, and a lot more custom paints. I've added the stables to the tours I give of Middleton Place House and Gardens. Our Middleton Guides' winter trip this year took us to Annapolis, DC and Mt. Vernon. Bill and I had a wonderful day with Ann Thomas and Tom Donahue. They took us to all their favorite tourist sites and then Tom prepared us a fabulous gourmet dinner. Ann retired from the government this spring and they plan to travel.

Caroline Chobot Garner writes that Tom is now director of The Houston Antique Museum (decorative arts) in Tennessee and "Kobo" is into child and geriatric care.

Harriet Robinson Taylor is writing for the Berkshire Eagle in East Canaan, CT.

Lynn Carlton and Mike McCaffree are living in Okinawa although Mike's "beat" includes Japan, the Philippines, Korea, Thailand, etc. As he is the only Navy flag officer on the island they have a lot of social and protocol responsibilities. Lynn is very involved with the gift shops run by the navy wives (the profits go 50/50 to Japanese and U.S. charities on Okinawa) and works with Amerasian children. She has visited Penang, Malaysia, Singapore and Hong Kong and hopes to get to mainland China. She is enjoying poinsettias as tall as the house!

Vaughan Inge Morrisette has been selected as a vice regent of the Mount Vernon Ladies Association, a group of preservation-minded women who own and manage the home of George Washington. There are 31 vice-regents, each from a different state, who oversee the 500 acre estate, its eight million dollar budget, and its annual million visitors. These women are all outstanding leaders in their communities. The group purchased Mount Vernon 126 years ago and has just endowed it through a successful 10 million dollar capital fund-raising campaign. (They do not seek any government money.) One of Vaughan's qualifications for selection was her participation in Sweet Briar alumnae affairs. Congratulations, Vaughan!

Can anyone give us a current address for Mary Braswell Rawls?

Edie Knapp Clark is still teaching science at Catlin Gabel School in Portland, OR; her husband Roger also works at CG with elementary age children in the learning center. Their son Jim, 24, is pursuing a career in technical theater in both Tuscon, AZ, and Ashland, OR; son Andy, 23, will enter Univ. of Oregon Law School this fall. Edie is spending this summer teaching Introduction to Science workshops to teachers, as she did last summer.

Along with a quick note from Mary Taylor Swing came a clipping from The Episcopalian about Bill Swing playing golf in the 44th Bing Crosby National Pro-Am Tournament at Pebble Beach, CA, in January. This is the second time that "Bishop Bill", as he is fondly called, has been invited to play by Kathy Crosby. The event raises half-a-million dollars for charity each year. Bill and Mary are travelling this summer. They will spend a week in Siena, for fun, then go on to Jerusalem for 3 weeks where Bill will teach a course at St. George's College; Mary will be working with a video crew preparing a pilot for a series using the Holy Land as a background to the Lectionary. Mary sees Patty Sykes Treadwell occasionally; Patty is finishing her term as 1st V.P. of the Alumnae Assn. Tibby Moore Gardner's husband Bill had a visit with the Swings in June.

Joan Black Davidson, Palos Verdes, CA, is spending her first summer without any children at home. Dianne graduated from Stanford and works for Xerox; Cathie, who graduated from U. of Calif., Davis, is married; Suzanne, a junior at Univ. of Colo. is working at a Christian camp in northern California. Joan and Keith just returned from a marvelous trip to Banff, Lake Louise and Jasper.

In March, Betty Gallo Skladal went on a cruise to Mexico with 22 other Alaskans. Betty teaches at Bayshore Elementary School in Anchorage, AK; her husband George is an attorney. Their older son Wayne, who will be married in Portland, OR, in August, is in engineering geology; he graduated from Texas A&M as did George. Younger son Joe is also at Texas A&M, majoring in both engineering geology and civil engineering.

Betsy Pender Trundle participated in a panel on the Governor's Awards in the Arts in Virginia on the Public Television station in Richmond, VA, in May.

Another travelling classmate is Joan Nelson Bargamin; Joan plans her family's trips herself — does all the research and makes her own reservations. The Bargamins were in Greece, Turkey and Italy in October and in Egypt in February.

Patty Williams Twohy will have two daughters in college this year. Patricia will be in her fourth year at UVA and will share a house with Audrey Trundle, daughter of Betsy Pender Trundle and Mary Heyward, daughter of Flo Buchanan Heyward. The girls are also friends of Jeff Hamlin, son of Winnie Leigh Hamlin. They all found each other without prompting from their mothers! Patty's daughter Elizabeth will be at St. Mary's College, Raleigh, NC, with Molly Archer Payne's daughter Archer. Elizabeth, who models locally in Richmond, VA, has done several commercials. Patty and Edward hope to spend more time at their vacation home in Vero Beach, FL. Edward owns his own investment real estate company.

Also living in Richmond, VA, is Louise Dunham Williams; she works part-time at the Diet Center as well as volunteering at Retreat Hospital and the Historic Richmond Foundation. Louise's husband Harold is with the Southern Bank; her daughter Elizabeth is married and works for a doctor; Harold III, a 1984 UVA graduate, is employed by Trust Co. of Georgia in Atlanta. Louise and Joan Bargamin live near each other and attend Museum plays together.

Julie Booth Perry's son Armistead was married in May in Alexandria, VA; Betsy McCutcheon Williams and her family came from Columbia, SC, to enjoy the festivities. Julie still does public relations and writes a restaurant column for a local daily newspaper.

After 19 years in Europe, Peggy Fossett Lodeesen and her family are back in this country, living in Bethesda, MD. Her husband Jon is Director of U.S. Operations for Radio Liberty. Their son David is 12 and will be in junior high school. Peggy is having fun re-discovering the joys of the States and campaigning actively for the Republican party.

Betty Rae Sivalis Davis says that they haven't done anything earth-shattering but they "sure are having fun" in Midland, TX.

Mary Kay Pollard Bullard, Edmund, OK, writes that she has lived there for 8 years and was president of the SBC Alumnae Club for 2 years; she was also president of the Oklahoma City Moms' Club in '83-'84 and became president of the State Moms' Club in 1984. Her husband John owns John Bullard Designs where Mary Kay works as a bookkeeper. Their son John II, 26, is a manager, buyer and designer for the family business. Laura, 22, just graduated from U. of Okla. with a BA in architecture. Laura, a member of Oklahoma Alpha, was historian and house manager for that organization.

Camilla Mueller Parker is working for Jones-King Realtors in San Antonio as a sales associate.

Windy Winter Cocke says that Lynn Crosby Gammill and Stewart spent Fiesta Week with them. Camilla and Bill's daughter Camilla (SBC grad) was a "most gracious" Queen of Fiesta. Lynn Morris Barnett's daughter Kathleen was a Symphony Belle. Martha Cocke, 16, attended Andover Summer Session. Bart, 21, will be a senior at Dartmouth and is co-captain of the swim team. Reagan, 22, will begin graduate study in architecture at U. of Penn.

Ruth Carpenter Pitts's daughter Berrie (SBC '82) was married in November '84, in Birmingham, AL. Woody Coggeshall Nock attended and "looked just like she did 27 years ago — great!" Woody teaches school in S.C. The Pitts' son Charlie will go to business school this year after graduating from W.&L. with a major in Japanese culture and language; Charlie spent one semester at a university in Japan. Bill Pitts, an '84 graduate of Sewanee, is in a bank management program in Birmingham.

Both of Nancy Hawbaker Gilbert's sons are in college majoring in electrical engineering. Steve is a junior at Carnegie-Mellon and John is a senior at Va. Tech. They spent the summer working in Chicago for Motorola in the field of secure communications. The Gilberts, who live in Gainesville, FL., had a cross-country skiing expedition to the Laurentians in Jan., and a visit to Scottsdale, AZ., and Sante Fe, NM, in April.

Dorothy "Pogie" Wyatt Shields has just gotten her MA in Religious Studies from UVA and, at the same time, finished her graduate studies in counseling. She would like to work as a school counselor in Greenwood, DE, where she is building a "wonderful little house". Sarah, 22, is at UVA; Carter, 20, is a Tulane student; Julie, 18, works at Yellowstone Park; and Wyatt, at home, is entering the 11th grade. Pogie, while in New Orleans, had dinner at Antoine's with Harvey and Annie Laurie Lanier Samuels, who drove all the way from Shreveport to see her.

Peggy Mōzur Grossman has moved from NYC, where she worked for 3 years for NYC Board of Education as a special education teacher, to Wilmington, DE. She is the Director of the Beechwood School for learning disabled students. Peggy has her doctorate in the field. Daughter Lauren, 16, was a camp counselor this summer and will enter college in the fall; Michael, 15, is a junior at Tatnall.

Springfield, NJ, is home for Dick and Alex Carpenter Cole. Their older son David graduated as salutatorian of his high school class and lettered in football, basketball and track. David enters U. of Penn. in the fall on the Honors Program; he will study engineering and applied sciences and play freshman football. Brian, 16, a high school junior, also a good student and excellent athlete, is an avid fisherman. Dick is a professor of mechanical engineering at Stevens Institute of Technology. Alex is a busy volunteer for her church, the school and the League of Women Voters. The Coles attended Berrie Pitt's wedding (her niece) and enjoyed seeing not only Woody Coggeshall Nock but also Marion Thorington Conover. Huntsville, AL, and Lettie Hurlburt North, Birmingham, AL.

Gis Benecke Odell's daughter Whitney will enter SBC this fall. Gis enjoyed a campus visit in the spring but was amazed at all the changes! The Odells have a married daughter living in Hawaii and a son who is a lawyer in NYC. They divide their time between vacationing at the Jersey shore and their home in Bernardsville, NJ.

To celebrate the graduation of her daughters — Rebecca from UVA and Molly from the Buffalo (NY) City Honors High School — June Berguido James took them and her mother, Marion Jayne Berguido, '28, to England for a two weeks trip in August. They spent 4 days in Cornwall with Alice Morris Gaskell, '59, husband Ronald and children Lucy and Graham; the Gaskells live in St. Just, Penzance. June loves her job as a drug counselor.

The Goodyear blimp "Enterprise" had Ruth Frame Salzburg as a passenger when it made a visit to Hartford, CT. Ruth continues to fly hot air balloons and also has flight time on thermal airships, hang balloons and ultra-light balloons. She tried sky-diving but gave it up in deference to her husband Bob's wishes. The Salzburgs' son Tom is a senior at U. Conn. and their daughter will be a freshman at Boston U. Ruth has taken some time out to write and she and Bob had a 25th anniversary trip to Colorado this summer.

Adele Scatt Caruthers attended her niece's wedding in Arlington, VA, in May, where she saw Susan Ragland Lewis, '57; she went on to Lynchburg to visit her parents. Adele works 3 days a week as an occupational therapist in the rehab department of Emerson Hospital in Wellesley, MA, and on Saturdays at the New England Rehab. Hospital. Her children are Susanna, 17, and Bruce, 16.

From Hingham, MA, Eleanor Humphrey Schnabel dashed off: "All the usual — sailing 'High Cotton', running gallery, Hank travelling, Ellie going to Paris on Hollins Abroad, and Liza entering Colby-Sawyer in New London, NH."

Betsy Robinson Taylor sent me a program of her one-woman show entitled "Snow White in the Enchanted Forest". It was presented at the Sheraton Russell Hotel in NYC. It felt like a "new beginning" to Betsy.

I have in hand a news release from Seventeen announcing the appointment of Joan Lamparter Downs as Managing Editor of the magazine. Her impressive credits include editorships, over the years, of Connoisseur Magazine, The Dial (a PBS publication), Self, and Time. She began her career as a reporter for Life in 1963. Joan is also co-author of the book The Tenors. In addition to her professional duties, Joan is a Literacy Volunteer, teaching illiterate adults to read and write.

Karen Mercner, daughter of Carol McClave Mercner, was married Dec. 29, 1984; daughter Barbara will be married Aug. 10, 1985. Carol, who lives in Westchester, PA, attended a Farm Credit Systems Communications Conference in Nashville, TN, in July.

From Columbus, OH, a brief note from Judy Kingman Driskell says:

"Tom and I spent September backpacking in the French, Italian and Swiss Alps."

Armistead and Ethel Ogden Burwell's daughters Ethel (SBC '82) and Lisa (SBC '84) both live in the D.C. area; Ethel works full-time on the staff of Young Life and part-time as a paralegal; Lisa is with IBM. Armistead III, a freshman in high school, is a good student and athlete. Ethel is involved in student recruitment and admissions for the local independent school in Grosse Pointe, MI; she is also busy with many community boards and church work.

It has been a very eventful year for the Kuntzes. Our daughter Martha married Donald Schenck on Dec. 29, 1984; they live in Arlington, VA. Martha is office manager for a public relations firm in Washington, DC, and Don is a security agent for the State Dept. Our other twin daughter Lee will marry Bob Eckerman on Sept. 28. Bob is with the Tennessee State Highway Patrol in Clarksville, TN, where they will live. Lee has been a supervisor in customer service for a division of NCR. All four are 1983 graduates of Albion College. Our youngest daughter Anne graduated from St. Mary's (Jr.) College in Raleigh, NC, in May; she will continue her degree at Meredith College in Raleigh this fall. Anne stayed in Raleigh for the summer and worked for a veterinarian. I have a marvelous April through October job as events coordinator at Carillon Park, a private historical park in Dayton. When I am not planning my daughters' weddings I do find time for outside activities: I sing in the choir, am a member of the Altar Guild and serve on the Worship and Arts Comm. at St. Paul's Episcopal Church; I just completed my 2nd year as program chairman for the Garden Club of Dayton and am still active in the Jr. League sustainers group. I have taken up bridge again and still enjoy a good game of tennis doubles. Eddie, a commercial realtor, and I hope to have time to travel this year, especially to visit our daughters who are scattered around the south. Don't be surprised if you get a call from us!

I continue to be grateful for the response from all of you to my plea for class news and am unceasingly amazed at the breadth and variety of experiences and abilities of the Class of '58. Bravo to each and every one of you and many thanks!

Nancy Fleshman Bowles (Mrs.

Bowlman T., Jr.), 11 Amphill Rd., Richmond, VA 23226

Millie Anderson Stuckey (Mrs. George C.), 4201 Oxford Circle East, Richmond, VA 23221

Many thanks to all you wonderful alums for sending news! The Reed family is enjoying being back in the U.S.A. after a six-month sabbatical in New Zealand. Brad affiliated with a law firm in Auckland and Louise, 12, and Brad, 17, attended New Zealand schools. Elizabeth, 21, was in France for her junior year and will return to Davidson this fall to be a senior. We drove over most of New Zealand's North and South Island, hiked the Milford Track, visited Australia and Tahiti and had just a great adventure!

I have loved hearing from all of you. Congratulations to JUDGE Lydia Taylor of the General District Court of Norfolk, Virginia. She is Norfolk's first female judge and follows a long legal tradition in her family. She will be using the oak bench of Judge J. Hume Taylor, her father. Her daughters Cecilia, 10, and Francesca, 9, are as proud of her as her SBC classmates!

Allison Moore Garrett (to whom I am most grateful for writing this column last year) is working in the Masters Program in psychology at Memphis State. Murray Garrett joins his sister, Brandon, at Vanderbilt this fall on a tennis scholarship. Sally Sharrett Perryman and Paul are back in Hagerstown, Md. having moved from Jacksonville for Paul to take over Mr. Sharrett's automobile dealership. With sons Tad and Will, they went to France and England in '84 and also had a "super" visit with Lou Durham Purvis in Scotland. Then Lou's daughter, Emily, visited in Jacksonville.

I haven't heard from Marcia Armstrong Scholl but notice her address has changed to Paris, France — sounds exciting! Brooke Hamilton Cressall writes from Columbus, Georgia that their son, Hunter, is producing and directing the "ultimate" movie this summer and will be a freshman at Sewanee in the fall. Brooke teaches math and reading to grades 3-6. In Schenectady, Mary Steketee McDonald is busy with children 15 and 14. As a volunteer she works with an environmental group and is also data processing for the local public television auction. They have recently traveled to Canada and St. Croix.

Kim Patmore Cool writes from University Heights, Ohio that she has been "curling" 5 times a week. Nashville having no curling that I know of, I will just say that Kim defines it as "the rocks on ice sport." Last year she won a curling Bonspiels (competition) and the lady's club championship. She travels as a skating competition judge and has seen Judy Whitacre Snider and Betsy Shure Gross. Daughter Heidi graduated from Colby College (wearing Kim's SBC graduation robe with madras pockets) as a national merit scholar and philosophy major, with her own "new wave" rock radio show.

Lots of news from Jo Wheatley Overy — she graduated in May from RMWC with a major in economics and is working as a real estate appraiser. She and Hutch have built a new house on a farm outside Rustburg which she describes as "blissful." Their oldest daughter graduated from U.Va. last year and is working toward her MBA; their youngest daughter has attended Williams and plans to work in Boston for a year. Dru McEachern Martin and Bill have a son who is a sophomore at Woodberry Forest and a daughter at Foxcroft. Bill is in real estate and Dru is a secretary at Charleston Day School. Linda Emery Miller was on her way to Myrtle Beach with Clark and Jocelyn when she wrote Jocelyn's godmother, Mary Hannah, visited with them in Des Moines and entertained Jocelyn and friends in her official role as Bravo the clown. Linda has recently been on a panel to review research papers on the subject of "Diagnosis and Education of Emotionally Disturbed Children." Besides playing Bravo, Mary Hannah directs the School Psychology Program of the University of Detroit. She has recently received a National Association of School Psychologists grant to study the mental health of siblings of the retarded.

Tolise Gathings Norwood lives in Burke, Virginia, has 2 children, Robin, 9, and John, 7, and works as a management analyst at the Government Printing Office in Washington, D.C. Jean Gant Nazum works securing adoptive homes for foster care children and hopes to teach social case work in the fall. This summer she and her family traveled with a French family through France and Henry, 9, and Christine, 11, learned to speak French. Barbara Pearsall Muir and family have moved from Cleveland to Fredericksburg, VA.

Adele Vogel Harrell and Parker have been at Princeton Reunion where they saw Ann Ritchey Baruch and Winifred Storey Davis ('61). Adele's daughter, Glenn, worked for American Express in London this summer and will be a junior at Princeton in the fall. Her other daughter, Logan, will go to Northwestern. Adele is still working in statistics and also for the Institute for Social Analysis. Anne Johnston Henderson says she's doing just the "regular routine" but that includes passing the CPA exam and working for a local accounting firm. Her four children are "almost grown" — Anne, 23, graduated from N.C. State, and Perrin, Jr., 20, is there studying electrical engineering and computer science. William, 19, is at UNC, Chapel Hill and Sally, 16, is at Myers Park High in Charlotte.

Barby Ross Goode and David are looking for a smaller house since their children are growing up — Anne is 21 and going to the School of Design at Virginia Commonwealth University in Richmond. Amy, 16, will be a junior at Charlotte Latin School; she is playing basketball and enjoying the new freedom of driving.

In Nashville Macon Winfree Hilton and Bob's daughter, Betsy, will be a sophomore at Princeton and son, Rob, a junior at MBA where he plays on the varsity golf team. American Health Corp., the company Bob Hilton started, has just opened a center for adolescents in Nashville. Macon enjoys tennis, symphony work and commuting to their farm in Bath County, Va.

Beth Johnson Phillips and Jim live in the Hampton Roads, Va. and describe the area as historic and beautiful. Their daughters Angela and Eleanor Anne are 17 and 15 and are interested in architecture and fine arts. Sandy, their 7th grader, fancies law and 6 year old Jimmy likes transformers! Beth does volunteer work and drives 500-600 miles a week!

Eve Pringle Boyd writes of a great weekend on the Cowpasture River with Mina Walker Wood and Robin, Ray Hendley Thompson and Mike, and Alice Allen Smyth and Ross. Congratulations to Eve and Bill's oldest child, William, who will attend the University of North Carolina on a Morehead Scholarship. Their daughter, Margaret is in the eleventh grade and younger son, John, in the seventh. May Belle Scott Rauch and her family vacationed at Caesar's Head, North Carolina and their oldest son, Teddy, will be a freshman at U.Va. this fall. May Belle visited Chloe Ford Lenderman in Bath where Chloe took a house for the month of May — a just reward, Chloe says, for finishing two years work toward her English masters at Vanderbilt. They saw Anne Allen Symonds and Patsy Cox Kendall who were in London for Y.P.O. Chloe had a jaunt to Scotland for a lovely visit with Loulie Durham Purvis and John. Loulie runs Prison Fellowship Scotland, a Christian-oriented support group for prisoners and ex-offenders in St. Andrews, Fife. Anne was in Nashville recently for the dedication of a chair at the Vanderbilt Law School to the memory of her brother, David, and was responsible for the fund raising involved in this project. She will be attending business school in Houston this fall. Nancy Hudler Keuffel and Gerd were with Anne and Taft at their twentieth reunion at Harvard Business School. The Keuffel's oldest son will be a junior at Exeter this fall.

Juliette Anthony is considering moving back to the east from Los Angeles where she has lived for the past 10 years. Gracia Walker Slater has just been promoted to Director of the Living Endowment (annual fund) at Davidson College and invites all SBC alums, especially class of '62 to stop by her office for a visit. She and John have 2 children, Shannon, 16, who is studying violin at the Governor's School in Winston-Salem this summer, and Dickson, 14, who is enjoying his third summer at Falling Creek Camp. Having completed her MBA in accounting at Cal State, Mary Cornelius is involved in a new career as an internal auditor with Chevron USA, Inc. Julia Shields teaches twelfth grade English at Charlottesville High School and supervises student teachers at U.Va. She was awarded a fellowship from the National Endowment for the Humanities to study English literary biographies and has traveled in England for the last two summers.

Janice Smith Stearns is located in Palm Beach where she manages condominiums and apartments; she found time to vacation in Hong Kong and California. Mary Louise Kelly Moore finds having oldest son, Mark, at W&L brings back many happy Sweet Briar memories. Elizabeth Farmer Owen writes that she and Doug have had a grand trip to England and that en route they visited Millie Anderson Stuckey and saw Penny Powell Carmody as well.

It was wonderful to hear from Sally Scherer who along with raising three "neat adolescents" (What?!) is happily involved practicing law with Crumpler and Scherer in Raleigh, NC. She is particularly dedicated to helping women overcome "demoralizing, demeaning and destructive" situations. I can't think of a more worthwhile endeavor. I know all join me in sending congratulations and best wishes to Laura Connerat and Spencer Lawson who were married in December, 1984. Laura also received her masters degree in science education from the University of North Carolina.

Margaret deLashmitt Newlyn and her husband Tom have returned to the U.S. to live in Seattle after eleven years in Australia. Tom is a psychiatrist and they attended the adolescent psychiatry conference in Paris this summer. The past few years have been busy for Barbara Sublett Guthery and her family. Their daughter, Katie, graduated from Duke and works with an advertising agency in New York City. Her husband's company, Seagate Associates, has been quite successful in the outplacement field. Barbara finds her career as a CFP very fulfilling and is also managing several million in pension monies.

Peggy Johnson Curtis writes from Chattanooga that she works with an interior design firm and has two girls at Duke and one in Atlanta. Chris Christie Cruger's business, J. Christie, Inc. Public Relations/Writing Services won an award for the most outstanding business and industry public relations program in Virginia in 1984. Her son Daniel, 19, is in his second year at U.Va. School of Architecture. Peter, 18, excels in soccer and his band, "Flipside" is busy playing for parties, benefits and nightspots in Richmond. Her daughter, Laura, graduated from The American University with numerous awards and honors including one for "a senior who exemplifies the best in womanhood while contributing significantly to university life!"

Ann Percy is now full curator of Drawings at the Philadelphia Museum of Art and has recently co-organized an exhibition of paintings by the artist who was the subject of her masters thesis, Barnard Cavalliao. She is now working on an exhibition of a contemporary Italian artist Francesco Clemente. In the spring she attended the W&L graduation of Edward Griffin, son of Betsy Pearson Griffin who is now working at First City Bank in Houston. Betsy and Buzzy have recently had a vacation in Holland where they stayed in the country house of the Dutch Consul. Betsy's job at the Houston Protocol Alliance is to extend the hospitality of the city to ambassadors, ministers and heads of state of foreign governments who come on official business. Of the 34 such visits last year the highlight was that of Rajiv Gandhi of India escorted by V.P. Bush. Betsy expresses extreme gratitude to Miss Muncy for her thorough course in the history of India and also for the discipline she taught! Fran Early is currently in California organizing seminars for Prudential.

Mary Jane Schroder Oliver describes life at SBC as "lovely as always." She has had a successful year in national and regional painting and drawing contests and they look forward to Loren's sabbatical in the spring. Their son, Jasper, 15, is a wonderful violinist, and in the fall, Mary Jane will sing and he will play in a joint concert at Sweet Briar! In Sante Fe, Andrea Denson Wechsler is having great success with handwoven, handknit designer clothing. Some "ANDREA-Designer Clothing" pieces were displayed in a national, juried competition in Albuquerque. Her husband Jack now helps with the weaving so they have a "loom in every room." Anne Dunlap Youmans is still enjoying the travel business and has visited Kenya on a photographic safari. Her family is fine: George, Jr. graduated from W&L in '84 and works in Atlanta; daughter, Cleveland, will enter Mt. Holyoke this fall and daughter, Brooks, 12, keeps all "on the right track."

Everyone joins in grieving with Jocelyn Palmer Connors and her family over the tragic death of their son, Tim. And our deepest sympathy also to Fontaine Hutter over the death of her husband, Malcolm McKenney.

Thank you again for all your communications. The class of '62 is fantastic!

P.S. Think toward our 25th in '87!

1966

President
Gracie Butler Johnson (Mrs. Jotham V), P.O. Box 12, Blawenburg, NJ 08504

Secretary
Ms. Lin Campbell, 219 Warren St. #1, Brooklyn, NY 11201

Fund Agent
Nancy Conkle Swann (Mrs. David C.), 800 Raintree Court, Winston-Salem, NC 27106

Cherry Brown Peters is the manager of people who maintain computer software at Reynolds Aluminum in Richmond. She has just become a sustainer, after 19 years in the Jr. League. Trey, 10, likes to program his own computer games and Charles is the Dir. of City Planning for Richmond.

Susan Brown Barry wrote a happy note describing a major change — a move from Houston to California (she doesn't say where). She moved 3 months before writing and has made friends easily. She has added a bookmark company to her stationery enterprise, and is looking for another job, to boot. Daughter Brice is a freshman at Fay School in Boston, and Drew is a senior at Hill.

Kathy Carroll Mathewson also has begun a new business — she and Dave have started an international marketing consulting firm, which she is enjoying. She is the V.P. for marketing, and offices are at home and in Italy. Kathy just completed 2 years as Jr. League pres. Heather and Carrie, 15 and 12, also help in the new business.

Vicki Chainski Verity went to China to celebrate being 40 — "It helped."

Nancy Conkle Swann reports that Chris enjoyed his first year at Woodberry Forest, and that while 7-year-old Andrew was off at summer camp, David, Chris and Nancy were to go to Bermuda.

Cynthia Craig Bliss, daughter, 13, son, 2, and husband from Jacksonville, FL, had a Disneyland rendezvous in January with Mariana Oeschle Rubini and husband, their daughter and 3 sons (who live in Switzerland).

Makanah (Nancy) Elizabeth Dunham Morriss writes that her ministry at the Unitarian church in Richmond is busy. She was elected to the Unitarian Ministers' Assn. Exec. Board, and is the first minister of religious education to serve thereon. She designs curriculae for all age groups, lobbies the Va. legislature primarily for liberal causes, and works for the Richmond Crop Hunger Walk. Bob is a busy licensed counselor, and Jeff (10) and Sara (8) are fun and energetic.

Evie Day Butler, from Memphis, wrote upon the eve of their first college tour for Geoffrey (17), expressing hope for survival of the car-enforced month's togetherness with the entire group — Geoff, Sr., Lee (14) and William (8). They planned to pick up El Griggs Diemar's #2 son, Jack, on the way from New England to Williamsburg, following which they will "do" D.C. She hopes to stop at UVa and SBC. She, too, added a new career — she taught drama and directed 3 7th-grade productions last year.

Deanie Finch Hampton says they (Tom, Tom 17, and Julie, 14) are still in Dallas. They celebrated their 20th wedding anniversary with a trip to Jamaica. "In the throes of mid-life crisis, I bought a new RED convertible — took 20 years off my life!"

Ellie Gilmore Massie is still living in Darien, Ct. She retired for a term from volunteer work and now can't decide whether leisure pleases or bores her. Adrian, 8, and Billy, 6, both will be in school all day in Sept., which gives Ellie notions of a return to Wall St., but she is undecided about — "how to market a brain that has been in mothballs for 8 years? I look forward to our 20th reunion. Wild horses couldn't keep me away."

Vi Graveure Patek says their news from the Orient remains the same, except that Emily is taking Japanese harp (koto) lessons — "the music is in Chinese characters & reads right to left, top to bottom." (I'm glad Vi is not taking those lessons, because I would be green over her mental flexibility!)

Delia Harrison Ward wrote for the first time in 20 years. Her 8-year-old son is at camp in Tallahassee, and 18-year-old son is working in Nags Head, NC, prior to entering UVa in Sept. She writes that her personal plans are in the air, following her recent separation, and that she is enjoying the solitary interlude.

Ann Kerr Praeus also has started a new venture (is this your 2nd Ann?) — "The Mexican Connection, Ltd." It's not like the Bolivian and French ones, she assures us; it's made of clothes, sterling jewelry, and handicrafts. She goes to the source twice yearly and has 2 sales per year. David (15) finished his first year at Lawrenceville, and the girls, 13 and 11, are growing up fast. She and Gene went to London for the Am. Bar Assn. last summer, then on to Italy.

Lee MacKubin Miller, in Atlanta, reports that Anne Lacy (2) starts nursery school in the mornings in Sept. Patrick starts high school, and Macon, 4th grade. Rick's executive recruiting business prospers, but he's too busy.

Martha Madden Swanson is finishing accounting studies, and began a job as Asst. Dir. of Student Activities at Georgetown Univ., D.C. in July. She handles all the finances of the 90+ student groups and enjoys the liveness of the school. Dave is the Finance Officer for the Dean of Students, and the family supports the basketball team. Michael starts high school in the fall, and Sarah, a 5th grader, enjoys soccer, dance and track, in which she placed 3rd nationally in the 50 yard dash.

Cindi Michel Blakely writes cheerily from Houston that Colin, having had orthodonture and now being 12, no longer is gap-toothed. Ian, 8, on the other hand, needs no such liability insurance, because he has no teeth. She says she quite understands how Texas women had such difficulty leaving the native land.

Randi Miles Long has returned to graduate school to complete requirements for a CA teaching certificate, but she's doing this on a part-time basis. Kurt and Melissa's jr. high and high schools demand that she keep hopping as a volunteer, and she has other community responsibilities. She sees Penn Willits Mullin frequently.

Kathy Mockett, from Boston, writes that she and John have finished 95% of the restoration on their 150-year-old house. John has started a new graphics business (making one picture at the rate of 1,000,000 droplets per second!). Kathy's oldest daughter, Alyson, spent a month in France this spring with her mother's old flame from JYF days. Kathy and John went to Sweden at Christmas. And Kathy remains busy as a computer consultant, yet finds vestry duties a tougher lot.

Susan Moseley Helm says things are perkling in Louisville. "Pen (15), Ted (10) and Nelson being very satisfactory sons and husband, respectively." Nelson is on the local Planned Parenthood Board. Susie says she is already dieting in preparation for the 20th reunion.

Susan Parker Morrison wrote that since earning an M.B.A. in 1977, she has worked in the contracts and pricing area at McDonnell Douglas. Her daughter, Caroline, is entering her sophomore year at Tulane U. This spring, Susie married Jim, an international marketing manager at McDonnell. They moved into a great condo "without all that lawn mowing and unending yardwork."

Diana Rediker Slaughter took up karate. Her friends may laugh, she says, but the big men she meets in the dojo don't. She's 6/10ths of the way to a black belt. "I have 2 wonderful boys, a busy husband, and am a partner in a writing and editorial consulting firm" (all in Birmingham, Ala).

Nathalie Roberts Sherriff writes from Columbia, MD, that she has "a lovely time visiting with Jean Campbell and her adorable children." Also, Nathalie is driving to the Grand Canyon with nieces and nephews this summer. She and Steve are both working hard and having fun.

Courtenay Sands Wilson has big news for the second year in a row. They are pleased to announced the adoption of Stuart Robinson Wilson, born June 2nd. Things are a bit busy with 2 under 2...Courtenay also sits on the Alumane Board and has enjoyed attending the reunions of our contiguous classes. She hopes our classmates have begun to attend the 20th.

Nancy Schmidt Bishop is also a first contributor to the Notes this year! She lives in Lafayette, CA, and works for the Western Farm Service as Mgr. of Health, Safety and Environment. Husband, Bob, is owner/editor of a financial newsletter. Sons are Justin, 8, and Timothy, 5.

Di Simrill Savory lives a "fairly" tranquil and rural life in Goshen, CT. She is an assistant in a class for 6-9 year-olds in a Montessori school her girls attend. She also teaches Latin to 19 14-year-olds. Phillip is editor of the Torrington newspaper. They went to see her old home, the mountains and the Pacific in CA this summer.

Penny Steketee Sidor, also, was preparing a CA trip. She reports having been tied up in Boy Scouts and volunteering over the past year. She is the new Secretary of the Parents' Club.

Sidney Turner says she lives the old-woman-in-the-shoe syndrome, but it's dogs, not kids — 15 adults, 8 puppies. She and her husband breed, train and show Brittanies in their spare time. Husband is a lawyer (just won the first U.S. male DES case), and Sid is using her law degree in work in the legislative office of the Social Security Administration.

Rab Willis Finlay says that her family continues with little change, except that they moved almost 2 years ago onto her grandmother's place. "We enjoy the sensation of living in the country, although actually in the city of Columbia, SC where Kurt is Mayor." Kirkman started Groton School last year. Rab is busy with research and teaching. They all have been doing a good deal of riding, even hunting in VA a few times.

Penn Willits Mullin reports life continues at its busy pace with Lucy, 4, Hadley, 10, and Brennan, 13. She enjoys freelance editing and writing short novels for teens with reading difficulties. She hopes to find a part-time job in a publishing house and to continue writing children's books. She sees Randi Long, Jane Nelson, and Keenan Colton Kelsey, and is Bay Area Alum Rep for SBC.

Judy Nelson Grant says all is well, if hectic, with 4 young'uns, in Denver. Margaret is 8, and the only female on her baseball team. Will is 6, Newell 4, and Caroline 2, and they have 2 rabbits, a frog, and a cat. She stays busy with St. Anne's Episcopal School and is chair of its spring auction. "Newell continues to develop large shopping centers."

Susan Wilson Ashcom reports that they have bought a 123-year-old horse and cattle farm in Tryon, NC, which she enjoys redecorating. Their Tryon hounds have won many championships, and she has lured some wonderful ex-Masters of foxhounds into buying property there, which has led to the resurgence of horse popularity in that area of the Blue Ridge.

Gracie Butler Johnson writes, "For our mid-life celebration we decided to pretend we were 20-years younger: Jo commuted to Harvard Grad. School all year while keeping his full-time job as Director of Development and Public Affairs at Recording for the Blind in Princeton, and we went back into the baby business, producing Sarah Tucker last Dec. 12. Sarah just attended Fall Alumnae Council and loves Sweet Briar. She's a great joy to all of us. I'm running Sunday School and a Board for the Adult Mentally Retarded. Come visit! See you at Reunion."

Margery Moses Montlack was divorced from Daniel Phillips and remarried to Kenneth Montlack, an attorney with 2 children. After 5 years of experience as a legal assistant specializing in litigation, she has begun her own freelance business as a legal assistant. Her first-born, Chip Phillips, is going to Middlebury College in the fall of '85, and daughter Betsy Phillips, 16, is going on a summer music tour of Europe with her clarinet.

Peggy Henning Minnick is teaching Latin to 6-9th graders — "It's fun working fulltime again and I am still managing to keep up with my 3 children and household."

Marilyn Garabrant Morris and her family are in Taiwan and she writes that after one year, they are all becoming immersed in "things Chinese." Their children, Blair (5) and Anthony (3½) attend a local Montessori school that is 85% Chinese. They are both learning to speak Mandarin and Blair can write a few characters. Marilyn's Mandarin is improving slowly, but she finds it a very difficult language to master. She is involved with a group of expatriate women who study Chinese history, culture and art. She also loves taking Chinese cooking classes — "the Chinese food in Taipei must be the best in the world." David finds doing business in Taiwan a real challenge.

I am leaving for a 2-week visit to London in a few hours. As soon as I return from my trip, I embark upon my second year of this graduate program. I played tour guide to Sandy Hatten Hartwell and her family in June and loved every minute of it. Planned Parenthood bombings seem to have lessened a bit for a while, thank goodness. The rest of my life seems to be in a bit of a turmoil, since I think I bought a coop this afternoon, am leaving for two weeks, and start school and move in 6 weeks. I think I'm very strange.

Addendum: The Alumnae Office has just received the sad news that Joanna Sabalauskas Lehane died in her sleep on Sept. 19 at her home in Crofton, MD. Joanna was a lawyer who specialized in international law. She had recently joined a law firm in Towson after maintaining a practice in her home since 1981; before that, she had served as the senior assistant attorney general for the Motor Vehicle Administration in Washington. Joanna was also active as a volunteer, drawing wills and doing estate planning for the elderly.

President

Katherine A. Schleich, 1538 Mount Eagle Place, Alexandria, VA 22302

Secretary

Nia Eldridge Eaton (Mrs. Gilbert J.), 461 Rittenhouse Blvd., Jeffersonville, PA 19401

Fund Agent

Stuart Davenport Simrill (Mrs. Spenser), 1380 S. 6 Street, Louisville, KY 40208

This year, we'll report alphabetically by maiden name so you scanners can jump immediately to points of interest. If we can hold you all to your paper promises, Reunion '90 should be well populated by '70.

Margaret Arnold Jackson, Jim, James (6), and Meg (11), are thriving in Macon GA. Jim has a commercial real estate business and Margaret is teaching children with behavior and learning disorders in the nation's largest high school. Kathy Barnes Hendricks announces the birth of a second son, Seafon Grantland. Kathy is also busy running her cooking school in Atlanta and their farm. Lyn Barr Hoyt is living in Villanova PA and has added a second son, Tyler (1) to Foster (6). Reed is Assoc. Prof at Penn in Exercise Physiology and is on the lookout for a permanent position. Lyn is doing some writing. Irrepressible Sarah Becker has made it to print with OFF YOUR DUFFS AND UP THE ASSET$S, Common Sense for Non-Profit Managers. Sarah is living in Alexandria when not on the lecture circuit. Keith Brown Oehlert teaches aerobic dancing to counterbalance her life as a CPA. Emily Jane (6) and cardiologist husband, Bud, round out her life. Candace Buker Chang has returned to Boston after 2+ years in Oregon to become program manager for the MA Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children. Daughters Jeanne (11) and Sonia (7) joined us for Reunion and since then, they have added a 7-year-old foster daughter to the household.

Sally Campbell Carroll lives with her daughters in Cape Elizabeth ME where she works as communications director for the Episcopal diocese. Carey Cleveland announces 2 major changes in '85. She just married Michael Swan, a Houston attorney, and has joined a new law firm as partner specializing in banking and commercial law.

We were all delighted to see Stuart Davenport Simrill and husband, Spenser at Reunion. Stuart is director of the child care center at the University of Louisville and has spent the summer exploring the wonders of boats and fish with her children. Anything you want to know about DC and Atlanta's airports, ask Debrah Denmark. Northern Telecom promoted Debrah to manager of marketing operations in Atlanta after she completed a successful stint in the Federal Systems Div. in DC. Peter and Lainie Deshler Marshall live in Milwaukee with their 2 poodles. Lainie is treasurer of Marshall Accounting Systems and plays golf. Frances Dornette and husband Tom Schafer came to reunion from their home in Alexandria VA. Both work for the IRS, but we liked them anyway!

Betsy Edwards Anderson writes from Charlotte that 3-yr.-old Caroline's chicken pox interfered with her reunion plans. Charlie (10) and Claire (8) make sure Betsy is on the run. Terri Eoff Walsh who was 8/9 pregnant as you Reunioners will recall, gave birth to Nicholas in June. He joins Andrew and Heather and father, David, who is Commonwealth Attorney for Harrisonburg, VA.

RoseAnne Feldman is a public defender in St. Louis and her friend, Mark, won the gratitude of all at reunion when he mastered 15 different cameras and tirelessly took everybody's group pictures. Claudia Forman Ostrander has joined Sovran Bank as vice president in the real estate finance office in Northern Va. She has also been elected to the board of directors of the Mortgage Bankers Assoc. Bill is VP for a Northern Va land developer, and preppy son Ross, 5½, is helping Claudia tend her Sweet Briar bulbs.

Ann Gateley writes in her best prescription scrawl about a busy life on the faculty of the University of Texas Medical School in Houston. Gateley co-chairs their residency program and runs (obviously) and finds time to back-pack. Betty Glass Smith prevailed upon husband, Bill, to entertain sons Ran (3) and Corbin (2), so she could return to the Patch for Reunion. Aside from full-time family duties, Betty is a VP of Operations for Sovran Bank in Richmond and Bill is still with VEPCO. From Richmond Emily Gooch Crenshaw reports that painting and needlework fill the time not dedicated to Bob, Robert (10), Anne (7) and Marcia (3).

Jane Gott married Ron Tant and has settled in Fairfax VA where she is still involved with pharmaceuticals. Her other interests include aerobic dancing and church charities.

Schuyler Gott Herbert is lending her creative energies to numerous charities in St. Louis. Along with the United Way and Planned Parenthood, Schuyler has just finished her second term as VP of the Junior League. Mercantile Bank tapped her to head up the Trust dept of a new bank in Clayton. Frances Gravely Frankstone is an importer of Italian ceramics in Chapel Hill, a perilous profession around Susan (6) and Leigh (3). Ann Grice is running a little antique business in Winter Park Fla and being run by Laura (7), and Tully III (6). Tully practices internal medicine and Av welcomes all Disneyworld-bound friends to give her a call. If you want something done, ask a busy person and Sweet Briar has asked Fran Griffith Laserson to represent us on the Board of Overseers! Fran is still on the Board of the NY Junior League, editor and creative force behind SBC's New York Directory, and undertakes numerous other volunteer activities. Mary Jane Hipp Brock and Pat Swinney Kauffman have children who play with Fran's girls, Tenley (5) and Galen (1) — another generation of friends.

Mary Beth Halligan Griffin has been celebrating those wonderful water rituals of summer with daughter Lindsay and son Garrett. She visited her sister in Montreal and brought nieces and nephews to explore Vermont.

Sandy Hamilton Bentley teaches in Portland and tends to Andrew (6) and Matthew (3). Katie Harris is still in CA working for the LA Times and expecting her first child this summer. Karen Hartnett is VP of Republic Bank Corp in Dallas and manages human resource activity for their 38 affiliate banks. Karen thrives on the challenge and loves the Dallas lifestyle. Connie Haskell breaks her silence of 2 years to announce a career switch. She is an Instructional Designer for Digital Equipment Corp. She loves Boston but misses those summer vacations she enjoyed as a teacher. Connie plans a month-long trip to India in Dec. Louise Hayman lives in Annapolis and is corporate affairs officer at USF&G Insurance in Baltimore. She reports daughter Kessler, a junior in Oldfields, has "defied the myths about the horrors of teenagers".

Joanne Hicks Robblee is moving to Springfield VA in July. Clay is 12 and Jessica is 8. Jony is giving workshops on self-awareness. Mary Jane Hipp Brock lives in NYC with Charles and William (4) and Suzanna (1). Mary Jane is involved in a myriad of charitable activities including being VP of the Junior League.

Susan Holbrook Daly is moving from DC, her home for the last 3½ years, to Montgomery AL where Skip has been selected for the Air War College. It is the longest Susan has ever lived in one place! She has 4 weeks to wind down her real estate business and get Andrea (13) and Stephanie (10) packed and moved. Baird Hunter Campbell and children Neal (4½), Clayton (2½), and Parker, 9 mo. have spent the summer shuttling between Annapolis and the beach. Fall brings the carpools, Junior League and other volunteer activities. Husband Bill enjoyed the camaraderie of other men of '70 at reunion! Janet Hutchison Karpowicz moved from Chicago to Portland, Oregon where she discovered her old SBC roomie, Sandy Hamilton Bentley. Janet's daughter, Cynthia Diane, joined brother Steven, 3, this February.

Adelaide Johnston Skoglund and John split their time between Florida and Minnesota. Debbie Jones has married and moved to Chicago to pursue her career in the medical field.

Elsa Jones Forter left Rodman, Alex (7) and Roddy (5) home in Beverly MA while she came to reunion. Elsa works as a cardiac ultrasound technician and is active in the League of Women Voters.

Corbin Kendig Rankin and Tom have moved to Richmond where Corbin has devoted much of her time to her new son. The Dew smoker resounded with the familiar snap of cards as the Rankins and the Lasersons played into the night. Page Kjellstrom is protocol officer for Chemical Bank of New York and, bless her Bic, sent me a lot of news which is alphabetically interspersed throughout these notes. Kathie Kraemer Quayle came from Texas to Reunion and shared her business venture, Discovery Toys, with us. She field tests these toys on Patrick (7), Lisa (5) and Jeffrey (2).

Barbara LaLance Kelly is kept extremely busy by her two daughters, ages 8 and 5. She does find time to edit for the New York Board of Education and is quite active in the Junior League. Louise Lambert Kale administers the Art Library at William & Mary and her daughter, Ann-Evan, runs about everything else. Jane Lewis Seaks had a baby girl, Elizabeth Neville, in November and reports that Robert, 7, has "relinquished his 'only child' status without too much fuss". Terry is Economics professor at UNC. Lucy Lombardi Evans had her first child, Elizabeth, in June. Lucy is also organizing a Denver Children's Theatre to perform children's plays in elementary schools. Christy Love is in Sheridan, Wyoming and Allen Lybrook is a nurse in Thomasville.

Quite a year for babies! Diane McCabe Reid had her first child, Britany Mills. Diane is VP of Institutional Equity Sales for Drexel Burnham Lambert and her husband Brandon is an investment advisor with Brundage Story. Jean McKee Carmichael did a terrific job of our class scrapbook. Jean is fitness director at the Charlottesville YMCA so she is in really good shape to chase after her active sons Ian (11) and Ross (7). Norman travels extensively with his wine business. Betty McKee Werlinich is with Estee Lauder International as regional director for Australia and the Pacific. However, she does live in New York. Susan McGrath Moses is a financial planner for IDS/American Express Financial Services. Susan and her 13-year-old daughter, Garnet, are surviving adolescence in VA Beach. Becky Mitchell Keister had a great excuse for missing Reunion. Their first child, Kitty, was born May 13th.

Becky works for the regional brokerage firm of Johnson Lane.

Kim Mitchell Bethea can be found in Madison, Middlebury or Moscow! David is an Associate Professor at the University of Wisconsin and Director of the Middlebury (VT) College Russian School. Kim is working on her PhD in Curriculum & Instruction/Computer Science and has just taken a 3 yr part-time leave from her job as management information specialist to spend time with Emily (1). Mimi Moore Johnson had a busy summer. Mimi and Roger moved their farm and stables plus Mimi gave birth to her first child, Daphne Moore, Aug 26. Emmy Moravec Holt has her hands full in Greenville with Will (9), Elizabeth (7), and Emily (4). Emmy took advantage of an Alumnae College program at Converse and has even taken up the violin again!

Barbara D'Ull Mathieson teaches Western Culture at Stanford University and commented on the inherent difficulties of balancing the two essential parts of her life: family and work. Barbara and Tom have 2 children, Anna Rose (8) and Skyie (4). Kay Parham Picha, David, Mandy (9) and Tom (8) are living in Jamestown NC. Mary Jo Petree Murphy is a domestic engineer and full-time volunteer. Children Mary Elizabeth (2), Jay (7) and Will (10) are thriving. Jo Prevost Browning and Jim have moved to Tokyo and announce the birth of a son, Winfield Staten (Win).

Betty Rau Schewel is involved in skads of volunteer activities revolving around David (9), Sarah (7) and Matthew (3), Temple, community and Sweet Briar. Mardane Rebenitsch McLemore took a weekend off from mothering to come to reunion. Mardane is in waste management and supervises a lot of men with tatoos! Jane Richley Ratal and Marshall live in Morristown NJ with their 5 children, 1, 3, 6, 10, and 15. They are actively involved in ballet and try to get to Europe as much as is possible "and practical". London and Denmark are on the calendar for fall. Tracy Savage is Assistant Head and Dean of Faculty at Foxcroft.

We are really lucky to have Kate Schleich as president, friend and collaborator on these notes. In her tireless pursuit of the white collar criminal Kate moved from Atlanta to DC as an attorney with the Department of Justice's Antitrust Division. Kate has taken up skiing which just proves we aren't getting older, just more foolhardy! Margaret Sharp Howell, Bill and Ruth (6) and Lorene (3) are moving back home to Nashville TN where Bill accepted a position with an architectural firm. Pat Swinney Kaufman is a college counsellor for the Spence School in NY and has a 5 year old, Lilly.

Sally Taylor has so many addresses the SBC computer is going to shortout from overload! She is international correspondent for wine magazines in the US and UK, and does articles for PC World and her cycle series. She lives 3-6 months in Hong Kong, 2-3 in Europe, and 3-6 in USA. Anyone "breaking away"? Sally needs cyclists for Australia, Spain and Italy. Look for her "best of" Guide to Hong Kong and a Publishers Guide to Printing in Asia. Whew!!! A braidless Annie Tedards is doing freelance singing in Vienna. Heather Tully Click has settled in Peachtree City near Atlanta and spent the summer swimming with the kids and embarking on "a 5-yr landscaping plan".

Tauna Urban Durand has 8-year-old twins, Bobby and Teddy. Tauna is taking a correspondence course at the Children's Institute for Literature and looks forward to publishing a manuscript in the next few years. She is also pursuing a "semi-career" of giving children's birthday parties. Doug teaches at the Univ. of Colorado in Denver.

Debbie Warren Rommel is thoroughly immersed in the activities of Emily (8), Andy (6), and Sarah Elizabeth (3) as well as a lot of volunteer work. Katie Lou Warren is in Winston-Salem teaching 7th & 9th grade social studies. Wallis Wickham took to the campaign trail and was elected to the Town Council of Brookline MA. Anne Adare Wood has drawn on her background in real estate and law to become Top Producer, Top Lister, and Tops in Sales for Q1 1985 for the McLean office of Shannon & Luchs.

Johanna Yapple Zeltner has moved to PA where she works as project coordinator for Merck Sharp and Dohme. Suzy Yates and Robert Cahill are living in Newton MA where Suzy is Ass't to the President for Special Events at Brandeis University.

I am Eastern Regional Manager for Computer Devices, which means I may pop up anywhere, so Beware! I am board member and newsletter editor for the National Association of Professional Saleswomen, Phila. chap. Gil is tech support manager for 6 Computerland stores. Keep your news and ideas coming; we may do an interim letter.

1974

President

Elizabeth (Betsy) Redwine Garner (Mrs. Ralph Edward), 433 Roslyn Rd., Winston-Salem, NC 27104

Secretary

Elinor Plowden Boyd (Mrs. Douglas P.) 1110 Inverness Cliffs, Birmingham, AL 35243

Fund Agents

Margaret Myers Sullivan (Mrs. John J.) 7741 N. Sherman Dr., Indianapolis, IN 46268

Mary F. Witt, MD 1450 North Crossing Dr., Atlanta, GA 30329

Elizabeth Andrews Watts and her family have moved to Midlothian, Virginia near Richmond. Rob (5) and Betsy (3) are busy with kindergarten and preschool.

All is fine in Fritch, Texas with Barbara Ashton Schiller (Scott), Christopher (4) and Benjamin (1). Barbara, president of her Beta Sigma Phi Chapter and Sunday School teacher, took time with Scott to visit Colorado in May and Disneyworld in September.

Ellen Bass Brady (Charles J., III) is having fun chasing her three boys (3, 5, and 7) and contemplates a limited career in Portsmouth, Virginia in real estate, an interest she and Chuck have dabbled in for the 10 years of their marriage. Ellen says Christine Cummings Bass may not have time to write from Anchorage, Alaska because she and Wayne just had a baby girl in June (3rd child).

Betsy Biggar Hellmuth just had the best time in Cleveland with Janie Reeb Chadwick (Chicago) and Jeannie Manning Schmidley as she and Ted celebrated their 10th. Janie and Betsy are in cahoots promoting a line of clothes from Betsy's house (a'la Doncaster?) four times a year. Betsy likes being a little employed without having to leave Katie (8), Teddy (6) and Kimberly (2). Jeannie's little Max (2) and Kimberly get along well.

Nancy Blackwell Marion now has 2 babies, a big one and a little one. Fritz is 2½ and Lucy is 9 mos and Nancy doesn't know what she would do without daycare. She is still with The Design Group in Lynchburg designing magazines etc. — including the SB Alumnae Magazine.

Kathy Bonis Pearson (Michael), Jenny (7) and Jeff (6) traveled far (Austria/Germany) without the children and wide (Georgia, South Carolina, Tennessee and the Bahamas) with the children enjoying these trips as a travel counselor should. Kathy arranges travel on a part-time basis, volunteers at two schools, carpools to guitar lessons, horseback riding and T-ball, while husband Michael handles United Media Enterprises Southeast Region.

Marcia Brandenburg Martinson and Terry have recently returned from leading a twelve-day trip to England and Scotland with 48 members of their congregaton. Andrew (7) and Eric (3) stayed with their grandparents.

Lucy Bryan Ballard married Robert Gordon Ballard of Virginia Beach on June 1st. Lucy and Bob honeymooned in Hatteras Island, North Carolina and returned to Virginia Beach, where Lucy is a graphic artist for Military Newspapers of Virginia and Bob works with Talbot and Associates, an architectural surveying firm.

Joan Buckley Saunders and Robert announce the arrival of their first child, Nicholas Lawrence, born July 20 in Andover, Michigan new teaching position at Newark High this year — part-time high school French after substitute teaching in five schools. She is vice-president of a local college club in Geneva, New York. Grant (3) goes to nursery school.

Mary Bush Norwood my "kissing cousin" in Atlanta and Felton plan a 2nd anniversary trip to England in October. Mary, still with Rounsaville and Associates, became president of the National Association of Media Brokers last April for the '85-'86 term. Congrats Mary!! She spent June in Washington, D.C. on association matters. She and Felton attended the Greater Atlanta Pediatric Society party and ran into Mary Witt who just moved to Atlanta.

In Philadelphia, Robin Christian Ryan announces the birth of Alexander Stuart on June 23rd. Stuart and older brother Christian (4) keep the Ryans busy, but Robin still works full-time and was recently promoted to Assistant Vice President at the Philadelphia National Bank where she is in operations management in the International Division. Most of her friends think she is crazy (who are we to argue) because she's also active in the Junior League and has a small personal stationery business. Last but not least, she and Laurie Krecker Stulb chair the SBC Philadelphia Club.

Bonnie Chrowowski Brophy (Jim) writes from Summit, New Jersey that she's busy with aerobic dancing, Junior League and a bit of tennis. Last Easter, she and Chris (now 7) had fun in Williamsburg, Virginia checking out the digs of their ancestors. She and Jim spent 10 days alone in Nantucket last summer. Early in '86 they are anticipating a new arrival.

Living in New York City and loving it, is Pam Cogghill. Pam gets to some great SBC spots on business, visiting Cotty Mathison Wallace in California and Libby Stough Rush in Louisville. Come fall, she will visit London and Cannes.

Two years ago Mary Combs missed the reunion due to a house-raising in the wilds of Kentucky. On July 1, 1984, she became a travel agent and considers this her calling. Going to "suburbia" to work, playing tennis every day after work, going by her folks' for dinner, then home and to bed... "going nowhere fast, but loving it." She's getting back into Kentucky after Texas, and picking up with friends she grew up with but hadn't seen since Junior High.

Cindy Craighill married Tom Archer in Washington, D.C. Pam Hughes Ganse, Taffy Moffett Litz, Kathy Vuicich Schinas, Elizabeth Nicholson Lewis, Ceci Kirby, Karen Fennell Holley and Winton Smoot Holladay attended the wedding. The next reunion for this group will likely be in Hilton Head, South Carolina where Cindy and Tom will settle. Congratulations!!

Wanda Cronin recently bought a home in Griffin, Georgia (my old home town) and as assistant manager of Cronin Chevrolet-Nissan-Pontiac, she's in charge of advertising and training for the dealership. Come fall, she's to attend GM and Nissan dealer training. She says she is relying on her teaching experience to help in developing training/motivational workshops and materials. To keep fit and beat the heat down there in Griffin, she's hitting the tennis courts and studying ballet/tap.

Colleen Dee Butterick says Domino's Pizza is growing by leaps and bounds. She was elected as National Director of Franchise Concerns for Domino's Pizza, Inc. and she's traveling a lot and has new responsibilities. She and Merle own two stores in Janesville, Michigan, one in Whitewater, and a new one in Beloit, Wisconsin.

Laura Lou Elkins and John Robbins announce the birth of John Allbriton Elkins Robbins, who was born at home in New York City on November 8, 1984. Laura and John took Allbriton to Arizona for a July 4th celebration. Laura says no one in New York City knows who Giotto is so as an artist/architect she has difficulty explaining herself. John's work on the Statue of Liberty is more straightforward.

Karen Fennell Holley and Don are renovating their turn-of-the-century farmhouse bought last year in Lake Forest, Illinois. Meghan (2) keeps Karen hoppin' while Don manages the East Bank Club in Chicago.

Ty, Katherine (2½) and Susie Fitzgerald Dahl are finally settled in their new house in Winston-Salem. Their second baby is on the way. Ty is a trial lawyer in North Carolina's largest firm.

Andria Francis Haruda and Fred announce the birth of their baby girl Ashleigh Francis Haruda on April 21, 1985. Andria plans to return to her job at CTB/McGraw-Hill fulltime although she claims "Ashleigh is the center of our lives now and is a fulltime job herself!" Fred has a busy medical practice but takes time out for vegetable gardening and paid a visit to Lake Tahoe in June. Look for Andria in the 20th Edition of Who's Who in the West due out late '85.

Debbie Griffin Tanner, Allen, Courtney and Trip (5 mos.) are in Newport News, Virginia where Allen practices law and Debbie is a school psychologist. In her spare time, Debbie heads a project on teen pregnancy for the Junior League and is a member of the local Investment Club and Bar Auxiliary.

Nancy Hardt Winter and Paul announce the birth of their second child William "Will" Paul on March 20, 1985. Katie is now 2. Bill and Nancy are both Assistant Professors at the University of Florida. Bill is in Pathology (although his training is in pediatrics) and Nancy is in Ob-Gyn. She has a small private practice of high risk OB patients but spends most of her time teaching, conducting clinical research and training OB and radiology residents in ultrasound techniques, as she is also director of the Reproductive Ultrasound Lab. Nancy says "fun job, but I can't find time to get my laundry done."

Cyndi Hardy McCabe (David C.) started her own business last year — CHM MONDGRASS — gifts by mail (clothing, accessories, home furnishings). Her catalog ($3, refundable) is available via R.D. 3, Box 24-A, Newport, PA 17074. David is pastor of the United Presbyterian Church there, but they're looking to relocate so Cindi can finish seminary. Tiffany (3½) and Brian (7) are doing great and the family just returned home from two weeks vacation in Seattle. Cindi, originally part of the Class of '75, went to the '75 reunion and enjoyed being the only '74 there.

Debbie Hart Eiserle spent a restful summer visiting family and friends. Come fall Dave will be working on an MBA and Debbie will be involved with Newcomers and church groups in Hopkinsville, Kentucky. Jeannie (4), will enter nursery school and "20 month old David will be eating us out of house and home!"

Mimi Hill Wilk is busy with Bean (2½) and Elizabeth born November 20, 1984. This is also the birthdate of Elizabeth's godmother Mary Killorin (Mimi's roommate at SBC). The family holidayed in their new house at Lac Laronge this summer. Mimi is still involved with aerobics and league activities in Regina, (Saskatchewan), Canada.

Returning from two weeks in Hawaii Debbie Hooker Sauers was inspired to add a sunroom and deck to the family's new home in Silver Springs, Maryland. Debbie and Cindy Conroy are getting together often and Drea Peacock Bender, Mark and Christopher spent a week with Debbie during the summer. A trip to St. Thomas is in the offing for the Sauers this winter.

Maureen Hynes Binder, Jeff, Allison (3½) and Meghan (2) are now firmly established in Ridgefield, Connecticut after a move from Boston last year. Jeff is a regulatory attorney for NYNEX Corporation in White Plains, New York and Maureen is busy with the girls, publicity work for Newcomers and the League of Women Voters. Maureen recently reminisced with Pam Cogghill and Sue Castle Rolewich at Pam's apartment in NYC. Sarah Clement '75 spent July 4th with the Binders in Connecticut.

After months of training, Sarah Johnson Knoblauch ran the Cleveland Revco Marathon in May. She teaches an art program for elementary school children in her basement studio. She and Betsy Bigger Helmuth attended their high school reunion in May and the Knoblauchs just returned from a great vacation in Cape Cod for Sarah's brother Doug's wedding.

Kathleen Kavanagh has turned in her green blazer after seven years with the Madeira School's (my alma mater) Development program. In Baltimore, Kathy will be director of Development and Communications for the Walters Art Gallery. She purchased a 100-year-old row house in town, and comments, "I am finding out how spoiled I was having campus housing all those years." She will continue to work with Madeira as a consultant and also serves as chairman of the CASE Summer Institute for newcomers in development.

Penny Lagakos Turak and George moved to Wynnewood on the Philadelphia mainline and have opened an art gallery on Rittenhouse Square specializing in 19th and early 20th century paintings. George specialized in locating and selling art for dealers for ten years prior to opening the gallery with Penny. It has been a tough year for Penny with the loss of her mother and the launching of a new enterprise coupled with a move, but she sounds especially chipper and optimistic. Best of luck Penny and George!

Karin L. Lawson will be returning to Geneva Switzerland this year to fulfill her duties as Legal Advisor to the US-USSR Standing Consultative Commission of the U.S. Arms Control and Disarmament Agency.

Nancy Lea Houghton, Hoot, Casey Lea (4½) and Blake Woodburn (1) journeyed to Hilton Head, South Carolina and Danville, Virginia from Albuquerque, New Mexico for a 5-week family vacation. Hoot practices law and Nancy keeps up with the boys and a new house. Nancy's mother will keep the boys in September and October while Nancy and Hoot tour England and Scotland. Apart from travel, Nancy enjoys volunteering with the Junior League, jogging, aerobics, tennis and skiing and hopes to hop back on a horse one of these days.

Missy Leib Veghte, Bob and Rox (6) recently bought a 1740's brick house in New Jersey and are restoring and adding on. Missy teaches P.E. and 8th grade composition at an independent school nearby. Nan Stuart visited in late May. Eleanor Magruder Harris is kept busy with her two boys, Greg (6½) and Ned (2). She also finds time for volunteer work in Norfolk.

Jeannie Manning Schmidley, James and Max (3) moved to Cleveland last June from San Francisco. James is on the neurology faculty at Case Western Reserve University Hospital and Jeannie works two days a week for a regional bank, Ameritrust, in the Legal Department. Their second child is due at the end of January.

Marilyn Marshall Livingston reports that Bill started a company to develop and produce a local area networking data communications product in Falls Church, Virginia. As a result, she says "we haven't been on any exciting trips. We did add to our family by buying Will (5) and Marshall (3) an Airedale puppy."

I am putting Ann Stuart McKie up for the cushiest lifestyle/employment award for '85: as the toy buyer for Neiman-Marcus's (with N-M for nine years, toy buyer for three) she says she loves her job more and more. Little wonder! In February she went to Paris to prepare for N-M's French "Fortnight" in October, in addition to her "usual" trip to London and Nuremberg. For five days she visited her parents at Chateau d'Dex, Switzerland, near G'staad. After the opening of Neiman-Marcus's newest store in Palo Alto, California, she'll spend a few days in Southampton, New York with Cindy Sorenson Sutherland, Dwight and their two children, then a few days in Westport, MA on the water.

Edie McRea Whiteman, Mac and Jamie have settled into the Fan area of Richmond where Edie is director of the Virginia Association of Museums, a small non-profit service organization providing training and advocacy for museum professionals throughout Virginia. Working for a board of directors, Edie says she's fairly independent and loves being paid to visit museums. The family plans to visit Mac's parents for a few weeks in Martha's Vineyard.

Mouse Myers Sullivan and her second child Patrick Myers Sullivan (born July 19, 1985) are doing fine. Husband John has been appointed to a three-member commission which "owns" the Hoosier Dome in Indianapolis, Indiana. Last year daughter Katie was interviewed at the Democratic National Convention in San Francisco as the youngest delegate at 8 months. Mouse and John took a vacation to Grand Cayman, British West Indies in March.

Elizabeth Nicholson Lewis, Bill and Carrington (4) adopted a second baby boy, Charles Nicholson Lewis, born November 4, 1984 in Richmond, Virginia.

Nancy Nunnelley Foster and Gilbert will wrap anything from a cup and saucer to an 8-foot armoire and send it off packing for you at their new store WRAPS in Nashville, Tennessee. In his spare time, Gilbert manages the local Bombay Company store. Although it seems they're working all the time, Nancy notes the definite "sense of satisfaction that comes from having your own business."

Drea Peacock Bender and Mark expect a second child to keep Christopher (7) and Mark's 94-year-old grandmother (who is staying with the Benders) company. Drea completed an early childhood education course in preparation for a MA in Speech Pathology but, due to the impending birth, will put those plans on hold for a while. Christopher has enjoyed having grandmother close by and being active in soccer and little league baseball. One of Mark's W&L buddies married recently and provided a good excuse for Drea, Debbie Hooker Sauer and Linda Kemp to meet.

Noni Petrovits Viehman and John left their 200+ year-old Cape in West Rockport, ME at mid-renovation when John decided to accept a new position with Rodale Press in Emmaus, PA as executive editor of New Shelter magazine. The renovation schedule was accelerated to put the house back together in a few months. All the while, Noni and John flew back and forth to PA to search for a new place. They found "Hillstone" complete with stone barn and 10 acres of pastures. Once again, they will be renovating the 100+ year-old stone and log home while the furniture is stored in the hayloft. They have 2 horses, cats and a Newfoundland puppy. Noni is farm manager and artist in residence.

Marsha Phillips Smith retired a bit early from her duties as production controller of Shaw Plastics, Shasta Division, for the birth of Emily Elizabeth, 11 weeks premature in March, '85. Emily weighed 3 lbs. and 4 ozs. at birth. When she left the hospital four and a half weeks later, she was up to 4 lbs. and 3 ozs. and doing fine. Marsha passed her fifth year as bulb chairman for Northern New Jersey and continues to work with SBC's admissions on referrals. Husband Jim is a partner in a company which handles sales to the plastics industry for Van Dorn Molding Machinery and Conair Drying Systems. Ceci Kirby visited in August.

Jane Piper halted on the jet set trail long enough to pass on her news: she spent two weeks touring in Scotland from Turnberry to Inverness in September; she continues as President of Campbell House Foundation; volunteers for the Junior League and St. Louis Art Museum; and hopes to be in Switzerland for Christmas. Jane when are you coming South so I can return this job to its rightful writer/editor?

Doug and I (Elinor Plowden Boyd) have settled comfortably in the "mountains" of Birmingham, AL. Doug, as a chemical engineer with the Linde Division of Union Carbide, travels hither and yon to interest steel heat treaters, food freezers, electronic component producers, etc. in the benefits of using Linde air products. I have a new job as assistant jeweler in a small neighborhood shop in Homewood, where I spend the week creating new jewelry from wax and gold or putting old pieces together again, breathing new life into those pieces which usually sit rotting in the old jewelry box. I am also conducting my own business at home. We usually head for tennis courts or golf course on Saturday or Sunday, or travel to Georgia. Next weekend, we're burning up some of Doug's thousands of Delta points for a two-week vacation in France. If I can drag Doug out of the Lido, we plan to tour the country by car...

Rossie Ray Spell and Penn took advantage of an SBC trip to Holland in May won by selling many, many bulbs. They extended the trip to include Germany, Austria and Switzerland. It snowed on them three times, but they had a wonderful time anyway. They're enjoying their new home in Atlanta, Georgia and hosted Tricia Barnett Greenberg and Phil last February.

Janie Reeb Chadwick and Mike have both changed jobs and are based in Chicago, Illinois. Janie is with a retailer, Mark Shale (men's and women's clothing) and Mike is with VMS, a real estate investment firm, managing their hotel asset portfolio. They took a weekend trip recently to Cleveland (see Biggar, above).

Mary Ann Reese Rosenberg and Bern are planning their first "real" vacation since Rebecca (18 months) arrived. She is still "Momma's best helper!" and takes a few naps allowing Mary Ann to edit their congregation's newsletter in Conroe, Texas but it sounds like Mary Ann's ready for their upcoming weekend of whitewater rafting in Big Bend National Park.

Jan Renne graduated in April as Valedictorian of her class with a three-year degree in interior design, won on scholarship. (Where Jan, where?) As a graduation present she took off for Maui and is back now freelancing and having a great time. Last year she bought a town house and has slowly redone the interiors. She has a dog named Ginger and, I quote, "I'm beating the men off with a stick (love it!)." That's in Costa Mesa, California for all you single '74 grads...

At Cindy Craighill's nuptials last May, Debbie Ryan Cairns and family enjoyed seeing Kathy and Garry Schinasi and their new baby boy Jack, born in April.

Claire Sandifer Tuttle sent an anonymous card all the way from France. She, Ty and Solange are proud to announce the arrival, in Paris, of Jean Philippe Tyler on April 2, 1985. Michelin's Tourism Department has allowed her maternity leave and the summer was spent with her parents in the Bordeaux region.

In Charleston, South Carolina, Colleen Shannon Robertson is looking forward to a yearly visit from Sally Rebutisch Randolph and John when they visit Pauley's Island. Colleen is enjoying the challenge of her recent promotion to director of Recreation and Parks for Charleston County. Dwight has left private family practice to teach and serve as Medical Director for Whittaker Health Services H.M.D. According to his grandparents, two-year-old son Drew is gorgeous.

Well, it really looks like California is the place for single SBC'ers Julie A. Shuer and Steven Davis will be married on September 28, 1985 in Los Angeles. Stephen caught Julie's eye at the '84 Olympics. He is an entertainment attorney representing such luminaries as Johnny Carson and John Travolta (or "Carson and Travolta," as Julie says). They met on the volunteers carpool in Beverly Hills, as they were picked up at their homes which happen to be around the corner from each other! Julie, what's the going rate for a date with J.T.?

After living only two years in Louisville, Donna Singerland Callery and family (three daughters) moved to Kernersville, North Carolina, one and a half hours from SBC.

Sherrie Snead McLeRoy and Bill moved on July 1 to Sherman, Texas, where Bill is director of marketing at a local hospital. Sherrie was nominated to the Council of the Texas Association of Museums and hopes to work with the museum in Sherman. Her third book went to the publisher in New York in June — a historical and statistical study of the Amherst County free black population. Mrs. Seaman served as her reader. She has also published two historical articles in national magazines in the past year. She hopes to see Jane Piper in the fall. She reports that her sister, Debbie Snead Shrader '78, received a promotion in the SBC Development Office this year.

Susan Stephens Geyer now has three children: Mark Stewart (4½), Julia Hunter (2½) and Edward Thomas (1). They all keep her busy. Susan continues her volunteer work in the children's area of the Dallas Museum of Art. Last May she was an arts and crafts instructor at a camp for children with cystic fibrosis, and found it one of the most memorable and meaningful experiences of her life.

In the Boston area, Jesse Stuart continues to work for the W. R. Grace Company, with new duties as manager of professional staffing. Send her your resumes — she welcomes them.

Sandra Taylor Craighead and Billy are doing great in Richmond, Virginia. She's looking forward to seeing more of Elizabeth Andrews Watts in Midlothian, Virginia. She is otherwise busy entertaining and visiting with her family.

Susan Stubbs Brown says everything's fine in Atlanta, Georgia. She just returned from Los Angeles where she spent some time with Kelly Borrowman Slobodian, Paul and their two-year-old son. Kelly is expecting a second child in October. She later visited with Cotty Matheson Wallace who expects her first baby on "Labor Day"! She made the trip "sans husband and kids" and says she could live in Southern California with lots more money.

Kathy Teller Johnson and her husband had an eventful year with the birth of their first child, a girl, Courtenay Elizabeth Johnson, and the renovation of a house they purchased last spring. She spent Thanksgiving with Mac Cuthbert Langley and her brood.

Liz Thomas Camp wins the prize (a year's supply of pink and green paint) for the most news items to be sent in by any one graduate! From Newnan, Georgia, Liz reminded me of her role as matron of honor and only attendant in our otherwise family-only wedding in December of 1984. It was wonderful to have Liz and Jack close by for our happiest day. Liz and Jack kicked off '85 by attending President Reagan's inaugural festivities in Washington, D.C. They had a chance to visit with Emory Furniss Maxwell and Charles in Severna Park, while Harry (3), Furniss and Christian had fun playing. The Crowder House, built in 1880 by Jack's great grandfather, is to be named to the National Register of Historic places. Andrea Niles '73 wrote the nomination up for the Georgia Department of Natural Resources. Liz reports that the Spring Atlanta SBC cocktail party was a success and she visited at length with Rossie Ray Spell and Blanchette Chap-pell Holland '73. Blanchette has opened her own law firm in Newnan, after practicing with a number of firms in New York City and Georgia. During the summer months, Liz coordinated the Newnan Presbyterian Church's Vacation Bible School and won her first local elected office as Deacon. She is still coordinating all of Congressman Newt Gingrich's home offices and in September she and Jack took R&R in Pawley's Island, South Carolina.

Helen W. Travis is traveling a long way from Woodside, New York to Yugoslavia, Austria and Italy August 3-17 for Bach's 300th birthday celebration. The trip is sponsored in part by the Yugoslavian government. Helen spent her junior year in Beirut and, like many of us who were abroad, maintains friendly ties — she plans to visit an Italian boyfriend whom she met in Beirut, Maruizio Brusini, during her upcoming trip. He lives in Trieste. Her sister still lives in "war torn" Beirut, but is at the moment visiting the U.S. with her family. She flew out while the U.S. hostages were still on the runway. The Traverses haven't been able to convince her to stay here. Helen still loves personnel work at Doyle Dane Bernbach (an advertising firm) and it sounds like she's "going for the gold watch" there.

After seven years in Mobile, Marv and Gabrielle Urbanowitz Wehl have moved to Huntsville, Alabama where Marv took a position with the UAW Legal Services. They had three weeks to sell their house and relocate but all went well. Gabrielle also found a position practicing law with Bell, Richardson, Harrington, Sparkman and Shepard, PA. She's hoping that by the time she reads the class notes, she'll be reading them in her house (apartment living is not for her.)

Cheryl Viar Upchurch, Birmingham, Alabama has had a hectic summer living in a rental house with Sam and three daughters during the remodeling of their home. They hope to return to the house prior to the opening of school. Sam has become associate general counsel of Torchmark Corporation.

Lynn Watson Philpott has been promoted to manager of the computer services division of American Family Life Insurance Company in Columbus, Georgia. She has a son, Drew (2½) and a new daughter Kate born May 13, 1985. She is also active with the Junior League.

Cathy Weiss Thompson is enjoying life in the northern Virginia countryside watching the cattle grow fat on their plantation complete with renovated farmhouse in Berryville. A sibling for Suzanne (19 months) is due soon. Cathy recently attended a zoo conference in Boston and stayed with her sister, Wendy W. Smith '71.

Chris Weiss Pfiel and Dave are enjoying working together at the Cleveland Museum of Natural History where Dave is an architect and Chris is with the Education Division. They are alternating sailboat racing with lawn mowing at their first home, and are pleased with the bumper crop of flowering SBC bulbs that came up this past spring.

Lou Weston Rainey called from Anderson, South Carolina to announce the birth of Robert Clarke Rainey born April 27, 1984. She wasn't able to make it to the reunion because Robert, but enjoyed a mini-reunion later with Mimi Hill, Penny Lagakos and Mary Killorin. Husband Robert is a consulting environmental engineer.

Lee Wilkinson Warren says that after 12 years of marriage and two children life is full and happy but it all sounds boring when you have to boil it down to a 4"x5" card — "and it isn't." (We believe you, Lee.) She spent the summer teaching Anne Paige (4) to read, swim and dive off the high dive. Cain is 8 this summer and she's been working with him on a summer study program to keep him away from the T.V. She is involved in a couple of Bible studies and has returned to golf after a nine-year hiatus to find that her game is better than ever. Wish you were here Lee — I have not met one female to play golf with in Birmingham.

Ruthie Willingham Lentz is great in Memphis, Tennessee and called to say she's launching a sales career with the Busines Equipment Center in computers. She took time out this summer to visit family and friends in Miami, the Gulf Coast and Mississippi.

Wendy A. White is practicing business and commercial real estate law with Shaw, Pittman, Potts and Trowbridge in Washington, D.C. She traveled in France and England last year in the fall and may do the same in '85.

Mary Witt, our MD in Atlanta, Georgia has discovered that life on the faculty of Emory University is "exciting, challenging and rewarding." Mary was hired to start up a diabetes program (pediatric, diabetology and endocrinology) for children at Grady and Egleston Hospitals. She sees her own patients, teaches residents and med students, and is involved in conferences and clinical research projects — "busy but fun". Mary will be combining business and pleasure in a trip to Greece and Spain in September for the International Diabetes Meeting.

1978

President

Becky Dane, 2827 28th Street NW, Apt. 14, Washington, D.C. 20008

Secretaries

Suzanne Stryker Ullrich (Mrs. Rick), 325 Fuente Drive, Green Valley, Henderson, NV 89015

Cannie Cryster Shafer (Mrs. Edwin H.), 12 Shirley road, Narberth, PA 19072

Fund Agent

Lu Litton, (P.O. Box 458, Valdese, NC 28690

It's late July and 100-plus degrees outside. It was great to hear from so many of you during this heat wave at my new address in Nevada. So far it has gotten up to 122 degrees, with August still ahead. Being in this part of the country certainly gives me a new perspective on the meaning of HOT!

Leslie Anderson Battle wrote from Miami that she and Mike were expecting a baby in mid-Oct. '85 (hope all went well!). Earlier in the year, however, Leslie was able to fit in a ski trip to CO before she outgrew her ski clothes! Mari Monahan was down for a visit in June and they all had a great time. Leslie also keeps in touch with Anne Baldwin Mann, who was also expecting a child, and Ann Ramsey Hill.

Dean Witter Reynolds Company in NYC has a Vice President from SBC — Diane Ball Brendel. On the side, Diane and husband, Joe, are busy working on their house in Rye, NY, and on their new boat. Diane sees a lot of Toni Santangelo Archibald '80 and Marilyn Moran '76 (who had a 3-week vacation in France last summer) and was thrilled that Bob and Mary Page Stewart were moving to NJ.

Jean Beard Barden wrote that she spent part of last summer on a vacation in VT, without Bob, but they later hooked up on Nantucket with cronies Lauren Place Young and Marianne Hutton Felch '79 for a Fourth of July weekend. Lauren had a lobster feast for all, taking a little time out from renovating Chris' and her house and her work with Denby Real Estate on Nantucket.

Barbara Behrens had a lot of news. She left NYC and her job of seven years in design to move out to Seattle, WA in May. Her fiance, Jeff Peck (they were planning a wedding for Sept. 14 in Salisbury, CT) was asked to set up an office for his NY based textile company in Seattle. At the time of this writing, Barbara was loving "a completely different northwest coast lifestyle" but missed NYC and all her friends there. While sending her resume around, Barbara was busy with some freelance work for a designer in Seattle. She was enjoying her view of Lake Washington and the mountains and the outdoor sports and activities ("I'm becoming quite a decent windsurfer....Can't wait to try the skiing, which is only 1½ hours away instead of the 5 to Vermont!"). Barbara also writes, "Is there anyone else from SBC living out here?" P.S. Barbara also had a great trip to Greece for two weeks in May with Mari Monahan ("just missed being hijacked by one week!").

In Oct. '84, Paula Brown switched from residential real estate to commercial real estate with an Alexandria based builder/developer/realtor. She started out in a marketing/advertising position but was promoted to a sales/leasing position in Fall '85.

"The Washington area is booming in commercial development." Over Memorial Day, Paula saw Carey Johnson Fleming and Dave, Janet Rakoczy Hudson and John, and Michelle Youree Hostler and Bobby at a party at her family's home. On a trip to Boston, Paula also saw Jamie Murray and Leigh MacDonald Forrester.

Lee Carollo Pforsich is still living in "Silicon Valley," teaching Honors Chemistry at Oak Grove High School in San Jose, CA. Her little boy is now 3 and has a new puppy. Lee and Tricia Mason got together around Easter and also in July when Tricia was traveling up the coast from L.A. to San Francisco. Lee was also excited about seeing some of her friends from her year at St. Andrews on their trip to CA in Aug. She also keeps busy with ballroom dancing and horseback riding.

Toni Christian Brown stayed home from teaching in Sept. '84, to be with her baby girl, Claibourne, who was born on "Labor Day", Sept. 3rd. "Jim and I have found that we no longer run our lives. She does it for us!" Toni and Jim went into the video business in Nov. '84 and report that business is going great guns and keeps them both extremely busy. Toni has seen Pam Jefferson who is living in Wilmington, NC and has an exciting new job and an apartment in the historic district. Dianne Torn Duffy and Mike visited the Browns shortly after Claibourne arrived. Toni also gets to see Carrington Brown Wise '76, who is living in Lexington, Va where husband Alex is at law school.

Carol Cordell has finished her second year of law school at the University of Oklahoma and spent last summer clerking for an Oklahoma City law firm. In July, she had a fabulous weekend in LaJolla, CA and was planning to travel to Washington, D.C. for an American Bar Association/Law Student Division meeting. Carol was also excited about her younger brother having the good sense to marry a Sweet Briar girl, Martha Louise Tisdale '82 (Tulane Law '85) on Aug. 31st in Monroe, LA. Carol would like to get a newsletter going for our class — "anyone else interested?"

Monte Costa's father reported in Jan. '85 that she had graduated from Barnard in '78 and was successful as a freelance photographer in Honolulu.

Cannie Crysler Shafer is still busy with her coaching and teaching at Episcopal Academy outside Philadelphia but managed to squeeze in a few ski trips when she and Win chaperoned 10 Jrs. and Srs. to Sun Valley, ID (they all stayed at Win's aunt and uncle's condo) and a few trips to Killington, VT. Cannie is surviving the rigors of grad school — but seems relieved to be half-way through! Her Girls Varsity Lacrosse team won in their league, the first title for the girls teams at Episcopal.

'85-'86 school year promised to be equally busy with Cannie teaching, coaching, and playing administrator for the 4th and 5th grades, as a director, disciplinarian (what?) and in admissions. Sounds crazy to me, too, Cannie!

Deb Davison Weidner (lucky I know who you pal around with — you forgot to put your name or address on your card) is busy with Bo, now 1½, but also finds time to go riding with Mary Goodwin and partying with Maria Rixey Gamber. She also enjoys visits with Mary Page Stewart and Mimi Borst Quillman when they happen to be traveling through Baltimore. Deb and Doug went up to RI to see Robin Jones Eddy and Tack 'plus one' (more on that from Robin!) last July.

Cathy Finley Onder enjoyed seeing Paula Brown, Suzanne Stryker Ulrich and Michelle Youree Hostler at her shower given by Michelle in April, just before Sean was born on May 31st. Just before Sean's arrival, Cathy and Tuna moved from Va. Beach, back to Richmond.

Lucy Darby married Stephen Cole from Tunbridge Wells, England, last Jan. 5th in Jacksonville, FL. Lots of SBCers were there, including Janet Smalley Todd, who was her matron of honor; Karen Kuhlman, a bridesmaid; Ceci Garcia-Tunon with her fiance; Barbara Mendelssohn Price; Ann Thrash Jones and husband; Lu Litton; and Anne Baldwin Mann and Randall. Lucy and Steve went to Univ. of GA together, but really didn't get together until they started working for the same company. The two of them moved to Chicago in May, only to end up in Annie Stelle Sadler's building.

Laura Lee Farmer Gebhardt has been busy with a new career as an agent with Northwestern Mutual Life, training her new horse, a Hungarian warmblood, and keeping up with her 3½-year-old, Trevor. Her husband

John, has been busy putting some songs on tape in the recording studio. She says that their new house is beginning to feel like a home, now that the landscaping is in.

A note on Gayle Gorman Tapia — Her husband Joseph gave a piano concert at R-MWC on Mar. 31st, 1985. He is a pianist for the Washington Ballet and accompanist at the Levine Conservatory in Washington, D.C. Gayle is teaching aerobics at two spas in the D.C. area, where she, Joe and son Matthew live. Last fall she started teaching music at the National Cathedral Elementary School and was planning to re-start piano lessons at the Univ. of MD in Jan. '86.

Mary Gearhart continues to work part-time as company manager for the Mimi Garrard Dance Company in NYC, but has also been doing free-lance photography and designing flyers for the dance company. For Winter Term '85, Mary enjoyed having Valerie Brandon '86 do an internship with the dance company. During the past few summers, Mary has been managing and cooking for a family retreat in the Adirondack Mts. in NY.

Jack, Sue Guinn Webb's husband, accepted a job in NYC which meant a move from TN to Greenwich, CT. Sue had to fix up a new house and get ready for a new baby at the same time. Whitney Evans Webb was born last May 31st and Sue and Jack are having a great time with her, especially during the summer since they are only two miles from the Long Island Sound. Sue also gets to see Allison Egbert in NYC.

Susie Heitmiller is still working for the Virginia Alcohol Safety Action Program in Richmond. She also keeps in touch with the D.C. crew. "We're all looking forward to Ann Maricle and Ceci Garcia-Tunon's weddings in September and November." (Well, Ann and Ceci?????)

Kim Hershey Hatcher and George Jr. were happy to report the birth of their second child, George A. Hatcher III, last Mar. 15th. "Mary Anne (3) adores him and asks everyday if he's big enough to play yet." Kim feels fortunate to be with them during the day, while George Jr. is still with Fairchild Industries working as an electrical engineer.

Last Jan. Eelen Humphrey Gora and family moved from Santa Cruz to San Diego, CA to be with both of their families, and she is enjoying being back in the town where she grew up. While Al works for Kapro Computers in Solana Beach as an electrical drafter, "learning the stabilities and strengths of the computer field," Ee and their two girls, Het (6) and Sarah (2½) get help reorienting from lots of aunts and cousins. Last fall Ee was going to start work as an instructional aide in the city schools 3X a week while the girls are in kindergarten and preschool.

Suse Hudson Fitzgerald and Rusty bought a house in Richmond in Sept. '85 after Rusty finished law school in May '85, and have been working on it while enjoying the view overlooking the James River. She stopped working in June '84 in order to spend more time with Ryan (5) who started school this past fall. Suse has also been quite busy since Feb. 27th, '85, when Van Thomas was born; she says she is strictly a homemaker now and "it's wonderful."

Gary and Eve Jackson Landon celebrated the birth of a son, Mitchell Landon, on July 13th, '85. "Gary is convinced that he'll be a point guard for Carolina's basketball team!"

Kathy Jackson Howe reports that things are just fine and that Khaki, born Jan. 31st, '85, is a saint compared to Trey. Jemima, their black lab, was pregnant last summer and Kathy expected her back yard and garden to "be in awful shape by fall." Root is Chief of General Surgery and they were going to Charlotte, NC for 2½ more years of training. Kathy also reported that Suzanne Collins looked great when they saw each other last June and that Briar Patch Designs is booming.

David and Carey Johnson Fleming, along with one-year-old David III, moved to Vienna, WV during the summer so that David could be closer to his business in Parkersburg. "Not much else to report except that baby is growing like a weed and I'm thinking of going back to work."

Robin Jones Eddy had some crazy news — she spent her 10th high school reunion with Lynn Spillman last Christmas "right before Lynn tied the knot!" (When? Who? Where?) Robin had gone down to Richmond for some "pampering at it's best" and to have Stelson Blackwell Eddy, born Dec. 3rd, '84. Tack flew down and made it 1 hour before "Stets" arrived. "Motherhood is great, but it was great to escape to Bermuda" where she and Tack ran into Bubba and Missy Powell Adams right in their hotel. Mary Page Stewart and Bob visited in June and Deb Davison Weidner and Doug were up in July for Stet's christening. Deb's his god-mother — Heaven help that child!

Nancyellen Keane has been quite busy since she started her latest job in Nov. '84 as assistant attorney general for the Commonwealth of Virginia. (Congratulations!) She is also still renovating old houses in Richmond and saw Julia Sutherland and Becky Trulove '79 at an SBC dinner.

Ann Key Lucas is still working for Knight's Ltd. as merchandise inventory control manager in St. Louis. She was down at Sawgrass over the Fourth of July and was then off to Michigan for two weeks. Peggy Stryker Horne and Ann still get together.

Brian and Lizabeth Lambert Bowden bought a house last Mar., and moved in in June, in Portland, OR and are really enjoying the Northwest. In June, Lizabeth went to Knoxville, TN for Emily Dick's wedding. She saw Helen Bauer Bruckmann, Audrey Townsend, Michelle Tarride Frazier and Missy Powell Adams, and had a great weekend.

Maggie Laurent and crew have bought a house in St. Augustine, FL, complete with pool, which they love. Maggie is also working part-time in a bookstore. She was due to finish school in Dec. and hit the job market in Jan. in the computer programming field. Susan Negaard Mendel came for an all-too-short visit last Feb., and Maggie saw Leigh Ramsey in Dec. '84, when Leigh was home from Belgium where she is working for Grey Advertising. Maggie also talks to Betsy Wood in C'ville every so often. Meg, Maggie's two year old, entered the "terrible twos" early, just in time "to drive me EXTRA crazy!"

Tricia Mason has been in LA for two years but left her job with a large ceramic tile importer to go back to her previous job with the Italian Trade Commission. She took the place of another SBC graduate, Candy Casey '76, who opted to pursue an MBA at the Thunderbird School in Phoenix, AZ. Tricia is learning how to windsurf and spends many weekends visiting her parents in San Diego. During the summer, Tricia took a vacation going up the coast and stopped off for a visit with Lee Carollo Pforsich, her old roomie. Currently, Tricia is seeing an anti-trust lawyer, "but how I wish the trials were shorter so we could spend more time together."

Leigh McDonald Forrester is Treasurer of the Harvard Business School Partners Association while John entered his second year at Harvard Business School. They were planning a summer vacation in Maine and Florida. Leigh also got a chance to visit with Paula Brown when she (Paula) was on her way home from the Cape.

Mellow (Cathy Mellow Goltermann) is still running around, traveling like crazy, selling clothes at The Acorn Shop, and being tennis activities coordinator at the Westchester Tennis Club in St. Louis. This past year Cathy and Chris went to a "dude ranch," Lost Valley Ranch in Deckers, CO, for ten days and made a short stop at Pike's Peak. They were also looking for a house and, as usual, Cathy was working on her tan!

Barbara Mendelssohn Price and Wesley are still living in their "honey-moon house" in Chevy Chase, MD. Wes says "he wants four years notice on the planning of any children!" His new medical practice in plastic and reconstructive surgery is getting off to a slow but steady start and Barbara's work with Wang Computers is going well. She is selling systems to the State Department. Barbara saw Monica Shaffer with her new beau, Rick last July. (Monica keeps in touch with Martha Glover and says that all is well with her and her new husband.)

"Monica looks terrific, still running in the NY Marathon each year, and plans to run in the Marine Corps Marathon in DC this year." Barbara's summer travels included the Delaware seashore, San Francisco (for a Wang Sales Achievement trip) and Monte Carlo in Sept.

Katherine Nesbit is living in Upper-ville, VA sharing a house with her grandmother "who spends 2/3 of the year in CA with Mom." During the summer, they were redecorating the 150-year-old house. She has taken up riding again and still works for Computer Sciences Corp. as a Systems Analyst; in July she was working on a project for the Saudi Arabian Air Force. Katherine was also planning on returning to school at George Mason Univ. this past Sept.

Mary Page Stewart wrote that Bob graduated from Wake Forest Business School in May, and on June 17 started a new job with Irving Trust on Wall Street in the Mergers and Acquisition Dept. in Corporate Financing. Along with the new job came a new address — Chatham, NJ. But Mary's big news was that she was expecting a baby on Oct. 24. After six years, "It's about time." Hope all went well.

Julie Plautz Bodenstab announced that Phillip, now three, will become a brother come Mar. '86. Julie has also started her provisional work with the Jr. League and, combined with her other volunteer commitments, expected a very busy fall. After completely redecorating their house in Cleveland, Julie and Mark were going to sit back and ENJOY! They also managed a week in Stone Harbor last summer.

Sally Polson Slocum married Bill in Aug. '84 and shortly thereafter, Bill left for Africa for four months. Sally says that was reason enough for a second honeymoon in Paris last Christmas. Bill is stateside now, has his own company that contracts out to USAID, and only travels occasionally to Third World nations. But as of Aug., Sally and Bill were going to live separate lives. Sally will be working in Washington, D.C. as a director of Project Helping Hand, working in Juvenile Justice Projects she is developing in 8 states for the Dept. of Justice. Bill will be working on his MBA at UVA. "Two years a student's wife...."

Hallie Powell Horton had a relaxing summer in Bermuda with husband, Wilmot, and other close friends. She then took the presidency of the Junior Helping Hand Society, a home for abused and neglected children from central Texas.

Missy Powell Adams and her husband are both still working hard in Pittsburgh, but spent a weekend in Knoxville to attend Emily Dick's wedding. Lots of SBC buddies were there and everybody looked "exactly the same — even Helen Bauer Bruckmann, who had just delivered twins!" Missy sees Donna Kipp often and said that Donna was getting married this past Oct.

Lisanne Purvis graduated with an MFA in Acting from NYU in May '85 and did summer stock in NJ last summer.

Anne Taylor Quarles Beveridge had good and bad news. The bad was that she and Mark were divorced last July. The good was that Taylor (3) was going to be moving to a "wonderful developmental center. Her health is good; her growth and development nominal if anything at all." Anne Taylor was doing some freelance work at home in the graphic arts and some writing; she hoped to have it all work into something full-time by the time Betsy, 20 mos., is 2½-3. (New address: 4487 Post Pl. #146, Nash., TN 37205.)

Katie Renaud Baldwin married Cary Scott Baldwin in Nov. '84, (Martha Miller was her maid of honor; Joan Lightfoot, a bridesmaid) and has been happy in Alaska since they returned from a Bahama- "moon". During the summer months when the salmon are running, Katie runs a crew at the Petersburg Fisheries. "They catch one million salmon in one day so the hours are 16-17 a day." Katie has also been substitute teaching and hopes to get her certificate for AK soon. When Katie isn't working, she and Cary work on their house or go fishing, and at the time of this writing, they had "37 king salmon, 9 red snappers and 2 fifty-pound halibut." Katie and Cary were planning to spend this past Christmas in OR, where Cary's family lives, and Katie was hoping to see Liz Lambert there.

Sounds like Nancy Robinson Lindberg will soon have two doctors in the family. Nancy finished up her first year of med-school and was going to start on her second in Aug. after an all-too-short summer break. Mike is in his final year of residency as Chief Medical Resident. Nancy will have a particularly rough time juggling their schedules beginning mid-Sept. That's when she and Mike were expecting their first child. Last summer, Nancy was busy trying to "learn what you do with a kid once they arrive."

Lisa Romano was marrying Kevin George Johnson last Sept., and would like to know what happened to Alden Corrigan and Ellen Shea Leslie.

Carrie Ruda Clark has been trying to continue with volunteer work but admits that parenting takes most of her energies. Jack is now assoc. gen. counsel for Stewart Investment and really enjoys being "in-house" after leaving private practice. Carrie also wanted to tell us (especially "Tones," who had many lunches at the Ruda's on their way to Yale) that her mother died.

Last January, Monica Shatter left Benton & Bowles advertising agency in NYC after six years, and joined with four other people to start their own ad agency. She is now senior vice president and director of media at Biederman & Co. Monica saw Barbara

Mendelssohn Price in DC and lives in the same building as Leith Colton.

Monica also bought a vacation/weekend home in Rhinebeck, NY and has been busy decorating it.

Lucy Smith Rogers wrote about the birth of their daughter, Katherine Margaret Rogers, (Kate) on June 15, '85. "There's a lot more to being a mother than meets the eye."

Debbie Snead Shrader and Tom are still living in Amherst. Debbie works as the Assistant Director of the Annual Fund at Sweet Briar (responsible for all those requests for money you get!) and Tom has recently gone into private practice — a real hometown lawyer! No children yet, but after six years of marriage, Debbie and Tom have finally adopted a stray dog, named Happy.

Julia K. Sutherland, who has been deputy press secretary to Governor Charles Robb of Virginia since 1983, was appointed by Robb to the State Library Board in July.

Annie Stelle Sadler is now with the Institutional Equity Dept., managing the Restricted Stock department for Morgan Stanley. Her husband, Roger, is with the National Boulevard Bank in Chicago managing a commercial lending division. The two of them were excited about the completion of their house in the country last spring, and said they could sleep 10!

Michelle Tarride Frazier and Warren have been busy working on the house they bought last June. Michelle has also been running around giving private voice lessons at Lamar High School, Houston Community College, and at a private music conservatory in Houston. She was also doing some performing in an outreach program, sponsored by Houston Community College, taking scaled-down opera productions to local schools.

Catherine Taylor Moore and Bob left Augusta, GA for Winter Park, FL last year. Bob accepted a job with Freedom Savings in Orlando to start up a Commercial Credit Administration area. Catherine had been conducting a job search but took time out to spend July 4th at Sea Island and Labor Day at the Breakers in Palm Beach.

Dianne Torn Duffy and her husband moved into a house they had built last May outside Ft. Lauderdale and then celebrated their second anniversary on June 25th. She is no longer working, "just enjoying being home, taking care of our four horses, four cats and three dogs!"

Cindy Whitley is Deputy Finance Director, raising money for the Republican Governors' Association in D.C. A few weekend trips took "Whitless" to Stamford, CT to stay with Jean Beard Barden and Bob, and to NYC to play with Louise Law. During "another long, hot summer in our nation's capital," Cindy put her 3-dog family (2 dachshunds and a German shepherd) in the kennel, while she and her sister took off for their family's summer home in Michigan for 2 weeks.

Betsy Wood decided to spend Thanksgiving '84 'English-style', and went over to London to have lamb instead of turkey with Leigh Ramsey who came over from Brussels. Betsy is still enjoying her work with hearing-impaired preschoolers but reports that working for the state (UVa) has its frustrations. She also went down to SBC for the Bach, Handel and Scarlatti symposium last Feb. "The music was nice but seeing folks was wonderful." Others there were Debbie Koss McCarthy '77, Marian Dolan '76, Carrington Brown Wise '76, and Miss Sprague who said to say hello to everyone.

Lisa Wray Longino has been busy with her two boys. They all split their summer between their house in Dallas (which they've sold for a newer one), and the house at the lake. Lisa is also a board member of the Dallas Symphony, and continues to do volunteer work at the Children's Medical Center. George was promoted to 1st Vice President at Smith Barney. Lisa also reports that Ellen Sellars McDowell '77 had a baby girl July 22.

As for me, the past year has been a little crazy. In October, Rick and I spent 10 days traveling up through New England, up to Montreal and Quebec, then down along the Maine Coast. We got back to Delaware just in time for Rick to fall off the 3rd floor roof just two hours before I was to leave for an Alum Weekend at SBC. He fractured his pelvis in 3 places so the next 4 months were filled with hospitals, (complete with a case of pneumonia) crutches, and recuperation. It was really interesting going to my 10th high school reunion on Long Island and to Karen Bowers Lazar's wedding, both in Nov. '84, with Rick on crutches. By Jan. Rick could walk enough for us to get away for a winter weekend — snow and sub-zero temps. — in Salisbury, CT.

In Feb. Rick was offered a position as Superintendent of Manufacturing Technology at one of Stauffer Chemical Company's plants, so we moved out here to Henderson, (just outside Las Vegas) NV just after Memorial Day and have been trying to get used to the sweltering heat ever since. We all look forward to the cooler months so we can start seeing some of the national parks out here.

In June, we all flew back for a family wedding in Annapolis, MD, and were able to spend some time with Marianne Hutton Felch '79, Bob and the kids in Baltimore. In August, we went to L.A. (just 4 hrs.) to see Lauren MacMannis Huyett and family before they all head back to the east coast where Bill had accepted a new job.

Alex (4½) and Andrew (2) continue to fill my heart while driving me crazy at the same time. I've been working on my provisional requirements after having my Jr. League membership transferred from Wilmington, DE to Las Vegas. It's a great help in meeting new friends.

Did you all get your list of addresses last winter? I know a lot of addresses have changed already, but do hope it brought some of you closer. I'll work on getting an updated list out later, via the alumnae office.

Anyone interested in hitting the casinos??? The shows are wild, too! All are welcome.

Amoret Gates Thissell is an Account Executive with Merrill Lynch in San Francisco where she specializes in California municipal bonds. She was recently in Washington as a page at the Daughters of the American Revolution's Continental Congress. While she was there, she caught up with lots of old SBC friends.

Martha Tisdale has just graduated from Tulane Law School in New Orleans, LA. She will marry long-time sweetheart David Cordell (Washington & Lee '82) in August. They will be moving to Tulsa, Okla. where David will be with a law firm and Martha will be working for the Bank of Oklahoma in their trust division.

Grace Tredwell Southall and Tom are both working for The American University in Washington, DC. Grace is the Assistant Director of Admissions, recruiting in Long Island, the south and Texas — lots of travel! Tom works in the Academic Computer Services office. They have just bought a townhouse in Germantown that the cats are tearing up while they are at work. They went to Anne Edmunds Hansen's wedding in June and also saw Alice Dixon, Ethel Burwell and Sarah Edmonds (Class of '83).

Nancy Trimble has moved to Arlington, VA and her new address is: 1121 Arlington Boulevard, #943 River Place North, Arlington, VA 22209. Nancy is now working for Xerox as an contract administrator, processing all the contract agreements for the DC, Charlotte and Greensboro, NC branches. She keeps up with Liz Kauffmann who is at William & Mary pursuing her law degree and writing screen plays and theatre pieces in her spare time. Nancy hopes to get down to SBC this fall for a visit.

Lee Watson is finishing her masters in sociology at the University of Georgia and will then be job hunting. This April, she and Camille Taylor were bridesmaids in Lucile Redmond's wedding to Tom Flournoy in Columbus, GA. Lots of SBC friends were also there, including Jill Steenhuis Ruffato (Class of '80).

Lezlee Westine has just received her MBA from UCLA's Graduate School of Management and will be starting law school at Georgetown University in Washington, DC.

Patricia Whelan has been living in Madrid, Spain since graduation. Trish is Vice President of the International Division of Whelan Astec Inc., acting as coordinator and marketing director for the firm.

Ann Morton Young is living in Alexandria, VA and working as an actuarial assistant in Washington.

Lisa Zuke is living in Clifton, VA, working as a Sales Account Rep for SAAB-Fairchild and traveling a lot. In her spare time, she is showing horses, and has a very successful group of students under her tutelage. This summer, she is spending her vacation in Cape Cod with Ashton Nesbit. She keeps in touch with Leslie Bergman and Bobin Bryant.

A Letter From Harold Whiteman

I know that I can speak for all those who gathered at the College during the first weekend in October in expressing our immense gratitude, mixed with reasonable measure of pride, to President Fry and all her associates who made the victory celebration of the Generations Campaign so happy and so memorable. Truly, it can be said that Thanksgiving came early to Sweet Briar this year and that it spread to all reaches of the Sweet Briar community.

Reflecting upon the most joyful events on the campus and in Charlottesville, I was struck that the basic cause for our Thanksgiving falls into three areas: people, achievements, spirit and meaning.

First, we must be eternally thankful to and for all those who supported the Campaign in numerous, different ways — all important. I start with the faculty, staff, and the Directors and Overseers who conceived and launched an obviously sound plan, in the wisdom of hindsight, at the first Boar's Head meeting in 1980. Then, there were those skeptics who doubted our ability to succeed and who thereby both angered us and made us work all the harder to prove them wrong. That work fell, of course, largely on the capable shoulders and unquenchable optimism of Mark Whittaker and his most capable, indefatigable ladies in the Development Office.

Then, thousands of alumnae across the land both gave and helped get. So did other thousands of "adopted" alumnae — Sweet Briar spouses and parents. But no one matched the non-stop, far-ranging persuasiveness of the Chairman of the Development Committee, Joe Davenport. He was our one-man task force! Next, there were friends in government and foundation offices who listened so carefully to our story and who were so generously willing to share in our responsibilities and our capabilities. I think especially of all those kind people who direct the National Endowment for the Humanities, the National Science Foundation, the duPont Fund, the Dana, Kresge and Booth Ferris Foundations, the Pew Memorial Trust, and — closer to home — the Easley Foundation, the Cabell Fund, and the Virginia Foundation for Independent Colleges. The latter, of course, under the successive leadership of Lea Booth and Sam Spencer represented most, although not all, of our friends in the corporate world of business and finance. Finally, and here truly our last becomes first, there were Elizabeth and Charles Prothro who provided that magnificent base for the Campaign pyramid — the essential first step so central to the thinking of every development officer.

The achievements were also numerous. The impressive, happy dedication of the Pannell Center on Friday symbolized the "bricks and mortar" part of these, and also reminded us of the special support of the Friends of Art, a group successfully revived a few years ago by my wife, Deedie. Then, there was the Prothro Commons, the Computer Center, and the rescue of the Chapel basement from creeping oblivion.

In other areas, the enhancement of resources underlying faculty salaries and faculty research and study opportunities was key to the total success of the Campaign; so, too, the additional resources for student financial support and academic program development.

In fact, only one goal was not reached — the somewhat nebulous "campus enrichment" fund. And, here I must share a secret. I knew from the beginning that this particular project was doomed. A Board member put a hex on it when he telephoned me after Charlottesville to ask why we wanted a "campus in Richmond" when we already had a pretty good one in Amherst County!

Finally, the spirit and meaning of the Generations Campaign: it brought out the very best in all the wonderful people who are Sweet Briar. They reexperienced the renaissance of the old truth, "give and ye shall receive." They also reemphasized another truth, "receive and ye shall be committed." Here, to be sure, there is a danger. Commitment can be to any one of a wide variety of causes, some good, others not so good. But, I have no doubt that under President Fry's leadership our commitment will remain what it has long been: commitment to vitality in Sweet Briar's life of learning, which rests upon the old while constantly reaching for the new; commitment to the vitality of Sweet Briar's student life in all its many aspects, including its wonderful athletic opportunities; commitment to the vitality of its graduates, so apparent to all wherever they are to be found. This vitality looks to the future with hope, with faith, and with the confidence of giving hearts. That is what this Campaign was all about.

Sweet Briar, I congratulate you!

Bulbs for Scholarships

The comprehensive fee for 1985-86 at Sweet Briar is $11,300. Predictably this will rise for 1986-87. Although Sweet Briar's fee is a "bargain" compared to costs at some of the north-eastern independent colleges, it is a sum notable enough to require every effort alumnae can make to raise funds for scholarships to assure that no young woman who desires and would profit from a Sweet Briar education must turn down her place for lack of sufficient available aid.

Alumnae already are doing an outstanding job, according to Financial Aid Director Ann Aiken, who reported at Fall Council meetings that alumnae clubs contributed \$100,587 for '85-'86, the first time the total amount has topped \$100,000. Her overall grant budget for this year is \$946,000, which means that alumnae income equalled 10.6% of the budget and that of the 213 students receiving aid from the College, at least 50 ( $\pm 25\%$ ) were assisted with income generated by alumnae bulb sellers. "Incredible!" said Ann.

Incredible indeed...but we must and we can do more. The costs of college education do not go down; neither must our bulb sales (fewer orders were received this year compared to last year). If every alumna (10,144) bought or sold the minimum order ($10) of bulbs next year, the yield would be $101,440 added to the total input of the clubs. If each alumna bought and sold a minimum order, the amount would be plus $202,880. Now that would be truly incredible.

Selling Season is here again. Please: THINK BULBS FOR SCHOLARSHIPS and follow through. In other words, "Keep those order blanks for scholarships coming!"

Revisited

By Garland Hunter Davies '50, Chairman of the Department of English as a Second Language, Georgia State University

My first visit to the People's Republic of China occurred in September 1983 when I was an "accompanying spouse" on a delegation of health educators sponsored by People-to-People. I did all the things such a visitor to this fascinating country must do on a whirlwind eighteen-day tour of four cities (Beijing, Chengdu, Kunming and Guangzhou): I climbed the Great Wall, marveled at the artifacts in the Ming Tombs, gazed in amazement at the vast acres in the Forbidden City and at the expanses of lake and parklands at the Summer Palace. Sandwiched between sightseeing excursions in each city were visits to medical facilities ranging from village clinics run by "barefoot" doctors to commune hospitals and large city teaching institutions. On several occasions I managed to pursue my own interest, the teaching of English as a second language, which led indirectly to my return visit in 1985.

Our favorite stop was Kunming, the City of Eternal Spring, which lies almost in the middle of Yunnan Province in the southwest. Located on a plateau over 6,000 feet high, the city enjoys a delightful mild climate year-round and is noted for its many trees and beautiful flowers. Those who remember World War II in Asia will recall that Kunming was at one end of the Burma Road and served as an air base for Allied pilots flying "the Hump."

Formal lectures and discussions were squeezed into an already busy program, but I managed to slip away for a few hours with a guide/interpreter to visit an English class at Yunnan University. I was reminded of my own college education, of plowing through selections in Old and Middle French and questioning their relevance for me: at the University fourth year English majors were gamely tackling the Prologue to Chaucer's Canterbury Tales word by word. I wondered at the relevance of this exercise for Chinese students born in the post-liberation era, whose education had been disastrously interrupted during the so-called "Cultural Revolution," and who were desperately trying to catch up to the twentieth century.

My husband and I returned to Georgia exhausted but enthusiastic and determined to return to China

“one day.” We were typical instant experts, having been there all of three weeks, and having enjoyed the usual tourist’s bird’s-eye view of the cities we visited. We had spoken with Chinese doctors and nurses (often through interpreters); we had seen a number of the one billion people, either riding bicycles or walking on the streets and highways; we had experienced the unique sights, sounds and smells of China! Little did we think in the fall of 1983 that for one of us that vague “one day” in the future would become a reality on June 29, 1985.

While in Kunming we learned that our host, Dr. Kuang Xian, was coming to the United States in December for further study in anesthesiology at a hospital in St. Louis. The following summer (1984) he visited us in Atlanta. One item on his agenda was a day in the Department of English as a Second Language, during which he attended classes at Georgia State University. He was impressed with the quality of the program and our teaching methods and suggested that I might like to teach English the next summer at Kunming Medical College. My husband urged me to accept and I did.

The wheels of Chinese bureaucracy at all levels grind exceedingly slowly and the postal service to and from the provinces moves at a snail’s pace. It was not until May, after the exchange of many letters and telephone calls, that I received my “official” invitation written in Chinese, signed by the president of the college and stamped with its seal. In the meantime, my own institution had granted me leave to be away for the summer. The last hurdles were getting an airline ticket from Hong Kong to Kunming and a visa permitting me to work. I found that it was impossible to book individual passage on CAAC (the Chinese National Airline) from anywhere overseas. My frustration increased when the Consular Office in Houston denied my request for a visa on the grounds that the school was not authorized by the higher authorities (whoever they were) to request the kind of visa I needed. Despite the fact that I had been assured by my host of being able to get the proper sort at the airport in Kunming, I had no intention of getting halfway around the world only to be turned back by a bureaucratic snafu. However, the remarkable Chinese network sprang into action and my problems were solved by an expatriate American dental professor at the University of Hong Kong! I boarded the plane and began my solo Chinese adventure.

As the plane arrived in Kunming and I crossed the tarmac, I was both happy and relieved to see Lao Kuang smiling and waving from behind the barricade. After clearing immigration and customs we drove some thirty minutes to the medical college. There I was welcomed by my doctor friend, the head of the foreign relations division, the education officer, the head of the foreign language department, my assigned interpreter and the designated liaison with the students; they all accompanied me to the faculty guest quarters and escorted me to my third-floor room. We had the first of many ceremonial teas, made in glasses with hot water from the everpresent thermoses. We discussed the make-up of the classes, how many hours I would teach, when I would start, where I would eat, what I would eat and a multitude of other items until my head was spinning. I was informed that the president of the college would host a welcoming banquet for me early in the week, that there would be a dance for the postgraduate students the following weekend, a banquet for the graduating medical students and a French movie dubbed in Chinese starring Catherine Deneuve!

Finally I had a chance to inspect my room and look out my window across acres of vegetable fields and rice paddies to the Western Hills in the distance. There was a magnificent sunset, which I looked upon as a good omen. I huffed and puffed down the stairs of my dormitory, walked some 50 yards to my assigned VIP dining hall (third floor again), which easily could seat 200-300 people, and ate my first meal in solitary splendor. Since solitary dining was the norm, I got a lot of reading done during those hours and became adept at holding a book in one hand and managing chopsticks with the other.

The next morning began with a strenuous excursion to Dragon Gate, a temple complex built on the side of a mountain overlooking Kunming Lake. We drove part way, parked, then climbed steep steps cut into the rock some 1,000 feet above the level of the lake. I thought my years of smoking finally had caught up with me; it was not until several days later that I realized I was suffering from the extremely high altitude of the city, having just arrived the day before from Hong Kong.

My contract stated that I was to teach oral skills and conversation 10 hours per week, or two hours a day Monday through Friday. When I saw the class list, I was appalled: 23 doctors and basic science teachers, a medical physics teacher from a medical school 2,000 miles away and 12 teachers of English, not to mention 10 or more “informal” students or auditors. Since it was impossible to accomplish what I expected with a class this size, I elected to teach a double load, the hospital and medical school personnel in the mornings and the teachers of English in the afternoons. This system worked well for two weeks, until the English teachers’ attendance fell off for a variety of reasons. Three teachers were stalwarts and made outstanding progress over the summer. In contrast to the language teachers, the medical people, who had been granted release time from their regular duties to attend classes, were eager, hardworking and rarely missed a class. After the authorities decided that I was working too hard, I reduced my teaching schedule to the original 10 hours but compromised by offering voluntary classes two afternoons a week. These informal sessions, held in the garden when weather permitted, often were attended by as many as six or eight students. On free afternoons I attempted unsuccessfully to learn Chinese.

The students' oral proficiency in English was as expected, ranging from low intermediate to advanced.

Although they depended on often inaccurate bilingual dictionaries, most had a basic reading knowledge of English, but few had had much opportunity to use the language. Observation of English classes bore out what I previously had heard: most older teachers relied on the grammar-translation method. The student would stand to read a sentence in English from the text, then explain it in Chinese. No dialogue was carried on in English, nor did a student volunteer a response or ask a question spontaneously. It took me several weeks to break through this cultural barrier and to create an atmosphere in the classroom encouraging active participation on the part of the students.

To justify my title, "China Revisited," I must describe some of the differences I noted between my first and second visits. On the first I was a tourist, albeit a member of an official delegation sponsored in China by the Chinese Association of Science and Technology. I saw a lot of people and tourist attractions but had little chance to interact or talk seriously with many individuals. The second time I was living and working among the people, which is an experience vastly different from spending three days in comfortable hotels in each of four cities and being shepherded throughout by competent guides and interpreters. In 1985 I lived like the Chinese, though a privileged visiting professor, and spent my weekend leisure time as they did, doing domestic chores and visiting nearby temples, parks and other places of local interest. Rarely did I see western faces except in the tourist hotels and only once during the nine weeks did I talk at length with any Americans. I was a curiosity almost everywhere I went, but at no time did I feel that I was under any kind of surveillance other than having to register at the local police station the day after my arrival. I could move about as freely as my lack of Chinese allowed, for a car and driver and interpreter were available to me on request.

As a result of the recent drastic reduction in the size of the army, I noted fewer uniformed soldiers on my last visit. On the other hand, more motorcycles and other motorized vehicles were apparent, contributing additional hazards to the already chaotic traffic. Extensive free markets covering several city blocks and dealing in both foodstuffs and clothing were doing a thriving business, especially on Sundays. Many persons, young and old, mostly female, openly practiced religion in the temples. Much to my surprise, I learned that Buddhist priests and monks were paid by the government just like other workers.

Western style dancing, particularly disco, was a favorite form of entertainment. I attended two dances, where I was squired by both faculty and students; these parties were in marked contrast to the occasion only two years before when our guide was asked to leave a dance floor because he was dancing with a member of our group. Although the dancing was enthusiastic, it was far from expert. Not only were boys dancing with girls, girls danced with girls and boys with boys. An enterprising Arthur Murray franchise operator could make a fortune there.

I noticed a strong desire on the part of my students to learn about the world beyond China and an eagerness to share their life and culture with me. In one student's home I learned to make traditional stuffed steamed dumplings, under the expert tutelage of a young British teacher of English, a Cambridge University graduate who was completing his second year of teaching at the medical college. I even had a most unexpected pleasure near the end of my stay: sharing in the marriage celebration of a young couple. She was a Han or ethnic Chinese, he a Muslim and classed as a minority. I met parents and grandchildren and found myself placed with the family as an honored foreign guest at the wedding feast. For this elaborate seated dinner for over 100 people, the bride's father, a mechanic, had rented the college dining hall and had hired two chefs, at the cost of thirty yuan each, to prepare the meal. This amount, exclusive of the cost of food and drink, is the monthly salary of a beginning university teacher.

Initially, adjusting to a very different culture and way of life was difficult. Like many foreign students with whom I deal on a daily basis, I often felt frustrated and lonely. One of the hardest adjustments was to the food — a story which I have heard many times from foreign students in the United States. Not being an avid tea drinker and realizing from previous experience that Chinese breakfasts of noodles and chili pepper sauce held little appeal for me, I requested "Western" breakfasts and noted that I liked two cups of coffee in the morning. These I received every morning, exactly as I had ordered: two cups of coffee and one of hot milk. I finally convinced the server to put tops on the cups to keep the coffee at least warm, but I was never able to explain the principle of refills.

Teaching for a summer in China was an unforgettable experience. I made many lifelong friends; it took a minibus rather than the van which had met me to get these friends to the airport to see me off, and quite a few tears were shed by them and by me as I headed to the plane. Perhaps another "one day" will give me the opportunity to return to teach and renew old friendships. □

18 Months at the American Consulate

By Sophia Crysler Hart '81

---

In December 1983 I began what I hope will be two lifelong relationships — one with my husband, Ford, and the other with the People's Republic of China. At that time, we both had completed the masters program at UVA's Department of Government and Foreign Affairs, Ford with a concentration in Soviet Studies and I with one in Asian Studies. The Foreign Service picked up Ford in April '83 and during the summer he received his first overseas assignment: Guangzhou, China. I was delighted, anticipating the continuation of my doctoral research, and arranged to shift what had been the focus of my work, Japanese defense policy, to a more suitable China topic. The location of our destination provided the necessary guidance. Since Guangzhou (more widely known in the West as Canton) is 90 miles from the Crown Colony of Hong Kong, I decided a project on the upcoming reversion in 1997 from Britain to China would qualify as a feasible piece of research and offer an excellent reason to visit and learn a great deal about Hong Kong.

Ford and I married in December and set out for China the following February. The two months prior to our journey consisted of one long packing session, worst of all the dreaded "pack-out" which precedes all overseas assignments. The prospect of 18 months away from home in addition to the acquisition of a spouse and the completion of formal coursework took the edge off the first excitement of our trip, but once officially on the road, things looked brighter.

Consultations for Ford at INS (Immigration and Naturalization Service) in San Francisco and a delayed honeymoon detour to Kauai, Hawaii broke the lengthy trip. We arrived in Hong Kong on February 16, had additional consultations and reached our final destination the 22nd. In order to appreciate fully the differences between where we were coming from and where we were going, we took the Kowloon-Canton train, the pride of the PRC in southern China and a very pleasant, relaxing way to make the transition from the crazed modernity of Hong Kong to the rural slowness of Guangzhou.

Jack Z., the NIV (Non-Immigrant Visa) officer and a first tour vice-consul like Ford, was riding the train also and prepared us for some of the things we could expect "up river." He explained that a weekly diplomatic courier run to Hong Kong gave Consulate officers a change of scene at least every three months. The diplomatic pouch was not nearly as romantic as might be imagined; Ford and I were amused to see that it was just a bright orange canvas bag on the rack above Jack's head. Swinging it down, he suggested we seek the dining car for our first local cuisine. The various dishes of fish, fried rice and a vegetable called "Guangzhou greens" were tasty and we managed our chopsticks without too much fuss. The two cold drinks "qi shui" (orange soda) and beer washed it down and were the only reliable alternatives to water.

We enjoyed the passing countryside; as far as we could see there were rice paddies, the young shoots giving an emerald green cast to the cultivated areas. Now and then we saw very small village groupings of brick dwellings and several of the numerous tributaries of the Pearl River delta which give such a distinctive look to southern Guangdong Province. The boat people, known as Tanka, surround these outlets in little wooden boats whose style has remained unchanged for centuries, while the Hakka (literally "guest people" from the north, but a couple of centuries ago!) work the paddies, identified by their round bamboo hats shaded with black cloth attached to the brim. Muddy ponds and lakes supplied a haven for flocks of geese and wallowing water buffalo and the entire scene had a certain charming quality hard to put into words.

As we approached Guangzhou the brick dwellings became more frequent and an occasional road was apparent. During the last half hour we began to see small factories and a few smoke stacks. Passing a railroad crossing, I was surprised to see no cars but dozens of bicycles waiting for the train to go by. A huge television tower signalled arrival in the city and we pulled into the station with our curiosity at fever pitch.

Greeting us at the station was Ford's control officer, Charlie R., a retired Army major who had begun a second career in the Foreign Service. He helped through the various checkpoints and took us to our new home: the Dong Fang Hotel. The Dong Fang is a state-run, "Western quality" hotel and despite its rather sparse amenities (by international standards) has an excellent location, directly across the street from the Canton Trade Fair. Every spring and fall the Trade Fair brings thousands of foreign visitors to a city which is normally only a transit point for travellers. We had heard a lot about the Dong Fang, none of it good: supposedly there were gargantuan rats running rampant, cat fights in the ceiling, horrendous food and floor staff prowling our rooms unannounced. One listed "advantage" was that the floor staff provided hot and cold boiled water; this was indeed an advantage because the local water supplies as in all of China are undrinkable.

Driving through the entrance in a misting rain, we saw a Soviet-style grey lump with not a speck of paint, surrounded by piles of construction materials. After pulling up as close as possible (halfway down the driveway), we hauled in our load of suitcases. In spite of our mental preparation, the lobby caught us off-guard. Four mirrored pillars were banked by two pairs of immense vases, the first pair of black porcelain with a turquoise background highlighting a large crane and the second pair of multi-colored enamelware with huge handles on either side. All were over five feet tall. Directly ahead a long hallway was flanked by gilt wooden panels depicting merchants along the Silk Route, while to the left there was a dimly lit, red carpeted cafe and to the right another long hallway lined with shops. A dozen wall clocks with the names of major international cities and corresponding gold etched scenes (the Eiffel Tower, the Statue of Liberty, St. Basil's) spread across the tops of two walls. Even more intriguing than this incredibly gaudy display were the dozens and dozens of Chinese crowding in to see it, take pictures, stand, eat and stare at foreigners.

Charlie hustled us upstairs to see our rooms before a grand tour of the hotel and the Consulate General. He explained that there were two wings, old (built by the Soviets in the late '50s) and new (built by the Chinese in the early '70s) and that all Consulate personnel lived in the hotel. The Consulate was located on the 1st floor of the new wing and the two buildings connected in an "H" shape. Our rooms were in the old wing on the 3rd floor. As we got off the elevator Charlie veered off to a dismal little counter to introduce us to the Floor Staff so that we would be allowed to go on the floor by ourselves, and we proceeded down a long dark hall with more red carpet and dark wooden doors with gold numbers. We were at the very end and, as a couple with no children, entitled to three rooms. Rooms in the old wing had nice high ceilings and doors cut between them so that they adjoined. The styles were a bit mismatched with dark blue draperies and green/black/white striped chairs, but the overall effect wasn't bad and, search as I might, there wasn't a rat in sight. A balcony opened from the middle room, overlooking the front of the hotel and the Trade Fair building. Also in view was the China Hotel, a newly-opened joint venture between Hong Kong and China; this became one of our most frequented oases.

Going downstairs for dinner, we found a handful of Dong Fang restaurants plus a small room set aside for the diplomatic personnel of Guangzhou's two foreign missions, the American and the Japanese. Dubbed "8-0-New" for reasons both obscure and best kept that way, it held three small square tables and one large round one, and had orange and blue walls, gold wood carvings and the inevitable red rug. A mini refrigerator cooled Qingdao beer and qi shui. As the waitress brought Qingdao and warm peanuts, Charlie commented that you could tell how long someone had been on post by how many peanuts he could pick up with chopsticks; Charlie could manage four across but admitted that it was more a tribute to the extended waiting periods for meals than extraordinary dexterity.

After dinner we found the Recreation Room (two hotel rooms with Nautilus equipment in one and a dart board and video recorder in the other). Two large bookshelves filled with paperbacks lined one wall. I was beginning to feel comfortable, listening to Charlie's description of Happy Hours and dart tournaments when I caught sight of the largest cockroach I had ever seen. It was easily 4 inches long including antennae. Charlie laughingly shooed him away, telling us not to worry: the roaches stayed in the walls and the rats in the ceilings the majority of the time except for the rat in 8-0-New. Each week the Consulate member with the best "sighting" was honored in the post newspaper with the "Cagney Award." Ford and I would have the pleasure of winning this twice.

While Ford worked at the Consulate, I decided I would not take a job but would concentrate on my dissertation and on learning Chinese. Ford had studied Cantonese, the dialect of southern China, but I opted for the national language, Mandarin, thinking we might come back one day to another China post and it would prove useful. My teacher, Mrs. Zhang, spoke no English, was 48 years old and lived in three rooms with her husband, his parents, their two daughters and the eldest daughter's husband. She was a charming woman, very much a northern Chinese. Originally she came from Wuhan but married a Guangdong man who brought her to Guangzhou in 1964. At first we had extreme communication problems. She presented me with a grammar book in Chinese characters, pinyin and English and gestured to me to get going. She was so sure that even if I couldn't speak Chinese I must be able to read it! After much struggling we began to make progress (I graduated to an easier book — disappointing to her but a relief to me — which helped immediately). I can't say I learned to "speak" Mandarin, but by the end of our tour I could communicate fairly effectively at a basic level.

In addition to Mandarin, I hoped to continue studying Japanese, which I had begun in graduate school. I had heard there was a significant Japanese business community in Guangzhou and that the wives of many business and diplomatic personnel, eager to learn English, might exchange Japanese lessons for English classes. One of the diplomatic wives set up a tea to discuss classes for "English chatting." Japanese high schools offer foreign language study similar to that in the United States, approximately three years of grammar. Rather than French or Spanish, most Japanese have an introduction to English and can read and write but not speak it. We began a weekly class; the first weeks were painful. As I was not familiar with the hierarchical social structure demanded by Japanese protocol, I didn't realize that the business wives would not speak out as long as the Consul General's wife attended. When she dropped out due to an overburdened schedule, our classes assumed a more normal pattern. The group covered a wide range of personalities, from the very traditional to the surprisingly unconventional. Two of the women were devoted to the traditional means of Japanese food preparation and spent most of the day feeding their husbands. Another, who had grown up in the countryside and was a little older saw nothing wrong with waving goodbye to her husband as she scooted off to evening tai qi and aerobics classes. All were extremely curious about life in the U.S., our politics, views of Japan, and social and educational traditions and were bold in their questions often to the point of embarrassment. They were a delightful group of women.

Two American friends, wives of other officers, had grown up outside the United States in Vietnam and Korea and were well-acquainted with the philosophy of shopping and coping in Asia. They accompanied me on many treks, to the down coat factory, the jade carving and porcelain shops, the antique warehouses and, best of all, the notorious Qing Ping Lu. It is difficult to do justice to Qing Ping Lu. It consists of a two-three block lane ("lu") where local merchants can rent a stall, sell their goods and retain the profits. Still relatively new, this has proved a great success; it is the thin edge of capitalism creeping in.

Qing Ping Lu is not for the squeamish, as I learned on my initial excursion there. First we came to stalls with Chinese medicines, vegetables and fruits; there were baskets full of carrots, potatoes, star fruit and others. Next were the intricately carved bamboo bird cages with all the accessories — delicate porcelain water and food dishes. Antiques and plants followed and we saw the beautiful blue and white porcelains famous in southern China, old coins, Taoist amulets, porcelain stools and lovely flowers. Finally we came to the meat section. The Cantonese are particular about the freshness of their food; they like it very fresh. Every type of animal including cats, deer, badgers, owls, was caged and ready to go. Chickens and pigs were being butchered and "drained" into the street. Fish were chosen from a water tank, tied around the gills with a piece of straw and carried home or cut up live for smaller portions. There was a great lack of hygiene; piles of meat lay on the ground to be trampled or ridden over by bicycles.

We shipped many things from

Hong Kong. What was unavailable from Qing Ping Lu was unavailable all over town: detergent, paper products, sugar, spices (except garlic and ginger), all dairy products and soft drinks. Items easily purchased — fruits and vegetables — were seasonal and some strange to our Western palates. Squash and watermelon were the same size but different colors. Small summer squash resembled zucchini but were hairy. Eggplants looked like cucumbers and were purple or green. Green beans were often 24 inches long. Pineapples were the size of apples, peaches the size of walnuts and lychee nuts were not nuts at all but a grapelike fruit covered with protective brownish-red skin.

The people of Guangzhou were the real delight and constant source of interest for both of us. There is, in fact, an elite in the People's Republic: the young college-educated intellectuals who only now have begun to recover from the ravages of the Cultural Revolution. That these people comprise a tiny percentage of the Chinese population — perhaps as little as 1% — is readily apparent from the moment one enters China. Peasants, rural and recently urbanized, are the overwhelming majority and give the large cities a timeless feeling, not modern yet not quite the level of the Third World. In Guangzhou many people wear loose-fitting cotton tops and pants, plastic sandals and carry some sort of shoulder-borne burden. Others have reached a middle ground while a third group has developed a fashion sense which is basically, if not completely, modern. I cannot help but think of the men I saw carrying women's clutch purses and wearing high-heeled sandals or women wearing see-through skirts with a modest pair of shorts underneath.

Bicycles far outnumber any other form of transportation since there are still no private cars (I really do not count the first peasant auto purchase by an egg seller from northern China). The constant low level tinkling of little bells one hears in traffic is a testament to the market leadership of the bike. However, Guangzhou has numbers of taxi fleets and is the only city in China where one can hail a cab directly on the street. Trucks, vans and three-wheeled "people's taxis," which double for hauling goods and people make up the bulk of local traffic. Motorcycles are growing in popularity, particularly in the south.

Ford and I were continually surprised at how easily people would talk to you if you could speak Chinese. There is wholesale interest these days in all things American. Many of the Cantonese were familiar with San Francisco; almost everyone wanted to go somewhere in the United States. Taxi rides were never boring because the drivers were relatively young and usually had heard something they wanted to know more about. Many thought they'd strike it rich in the States, some were fans of Michael Jackson or Brooke Shields, some thought all Americans carry automatic weapons. Our travel to other parts of China, Beijing, Guilin, Shanghai, Xi'an, revealed few differences in most peoples' ideas. The desire to "changeamoney" was universal and got to be a joke. Everyone asked for dollars or Hong Kong currency — anything with a convertible value to buy foreign-made goods at the local Friendship stores or to speculate for usurious profits from those wanting to do so. Subtlety went down the tubes as most people stepped directly up to you and, if they knew any English besides "hello," it was "changeamoney." Others wrote their best rate of exchange on their palms, looked you in the eye and rolled hand over hand.

A favorite way to peoplewatch was to go to the public parks. In Guangzhou, Renmin (People's) Park was the site of the largest bird market, which carried every imaginable kind of paraphernalia for bird owners, including cages, ornaments, live crickets, porcelain food dishes, brass hooks for hanging and the birds themselves. As a social meeting place, the bird market was unrivalled. All the little old men, who seem to be the greatest bird fanciers, "walk" their birds to the park for an airing and compare cages with their friends. They have a choice of hanging their birds from bamboo poles placed between the trees or setting them in the grass for the morning and afternoon. Someone usually is doing tai gi (shadow boxing) or gi gong (getting energy from trees), but there are very few women in the parks, mostly men and young children.

The park was also a site for travelling shows and spectacles. One show we managed to miss was a snake act during which live snakes did tricks, were sung to, and were eaten. Although it sounded gruesome, it was very popular, perhaps for its shock value — the Cantonese truly enjoy a scene, the more noise and excitement, the better. We became accustomed to the almost daily ritual of workers tying garlands of firecrackers to trees at the entrance to the Dong Fang and setting them off at quitting time. The noise was fearful, clouds of smoke filled the air and everyone loved it. After our initial stupefaction, we did too.

The Canton Trade Fair is an awesomely noisy occasion with much celebration and furious negotiations. I was able to watch the opening festivities from our balcony at the Dong Fang. As the official hour approached, hundreds of people swarmed the front door, loud-speakers boomed out a welcome ("Huanying! Huanying!") to this gala event and long red streamers proclaiming China's economic progress and political vigor fluttered overhead from a dozen helium balloons. Fifteen minutes before the doors opened, a large crane bearing a four-storey strand of firecrackers swung out from the top of the building and a tremendous racket ensued as it was lit. Fireworks were shot off as well and each burst of color became a small parachute. A flock of birds was turned loose in the middle of it all and flew back and forth in a frenzy until their leader figured out a way to escape from the noise. I don't know how the people at the door stood the combined sounds, but after it stopped and the enormous cloud of smoke cleared, all had bolted inside. I stood in astonishment with my morning coffee and laughed.

In April 1985 the Consulate moved across town to new housing at the Garden Hotel, another joint Chinese-Hong Kong venture managed by the Peninsula. We were sorry to leave the Dong Fang; there was something comforting about its very decrepitness. However, our quarters at the Gardens were a vast improvement and I was happy with our new view of Baiyun ("White Cloud") Mountain and the Baiyun Hotel, which produced a fresh source of interest with its frequent political posters proclaiming the birth of the People's Liberation Army, International Women's Day and a host of other Chinese holidays.

Things had changed since our arrival. Better foods and quality consumer products such as clothes and toiletries were increasingly available. People looked better and had stylish haircuts and clothing. Motorcycles were in evidence and several hotels had opened. The three large Western hotels (the White Swan, the China and the Garden) had contributed by bringing a lot of Hong Kong money and jobs for locals. Employees were taught how to dress, how to speak English, how to use makeup and many things they had not been exposed to previously. More and more local Chinese were learning about modern living. Like their Hong Kong cousins, the Cantonese are innovative merchants at heart and are very "quick studies."

Our last months passed quickly. The end of our tour, scheduled for August, came much too fast. We packed once again — sea freight, air freight and baggage — and sadly made our goodbyes to China. Neither of us had realized how much we would want to stay. The prospect of seeing our families and friends and of enjoying the comforts and conveniences of the United States helped lift our spirits, as did the knowledge that, with our shared love of China, we certainly will return.

Through the Eyes of an Emigrant

By Anna Chao Pai '57, Professor of Biology, Montclair State College

Top: The Great Wall.

Editor's note: The following excerpts are taken from one section of Dr. Pai's trip diary, upon which she is basing a full-length book.

A year ago my husband, David, and I decided that we would arrange a trip to the People's Republic of China. For the past two years overtures by representatives of the PRC to the overseas Chinese community had increased in frequency and intensity. We had met a number of counterparts in our respective fields, he in engineering and I in genetics. It seemed from conversations with these visitors that conditions were more favorable for a trip to our homeland than they had been since the Bamboo Curtain descended in 1950.

I received a sabbatical leave from my teaching post at Montclair State College in New Jersey. Coincidentally, the People to People Citizen Ambassador Program contacted David to invite him to be leader of a delegation of mechanical engineers on a trip to the PRC. The Chinese Mechanical Engineering Society had requested that a delegation be sent for technical exchange. David was recommended by the American Society of Mechanical Engineers for his work in the Pressure Vessel and Piping Division of the ASME.

As assistant delegation leader, I served as liaison between our Chinese hosts and the wives in the group. There were 25 engineers and 11 wives. Most of the men are in industry and their companies have joined the scramble for the China market. One billion consumers represents a lot of business!

I also was eager to learn about the system of higher education, both because of my position as a professor and because the education system there had been all but dismantled during the Cultural Revolution. I wondered how much progress had been made in the past five years and if there were a possibility of establishing educational exchange between institutions there and the two American colleges with which I am closely involved, Sweet Briar and Montclair State. I arranged to visit four colleges and a research institute in Beijing and Shanghai.

It is unlikely that our delegation's reactions to our visit to the PRC are shared by all who have made similar trips. First of all, we were blessed with a very compatible group of delegates, willing to help, eager to learn. They did not go with the attitude that because the PRC is a developing nation it is inferior to ours. They tolerated often exasperating bureaucratic mixups with good humor. They were there as (paying) guests and showed respect for and appreciation of China's history and culture. They could not have made me more proud; they were superlative citizen ambassadors.

Another reason our trip was likely to be a unique experience involved relatives on both sides of the family. My uncle, Chang Hsueh Liang and David's father, Pai Chung Hsi played prominent roles during the tumultuous years of the Chinese civil war in the 1930s and in the war against the Japanese. Although they actually were opponents of the Communist movement, their roles in leading the fight against the Japanese invasion have caused them both to be given positions of honor in modern Chinese history.

Chinese culture traditionally emphasizes the importance of family ties: relatives of honored persons are accorded honor. We had heard recently that my uncle, also known as the Young Marshal, has taken on the dimensions of a folk hero, with movies and TV programs based on his life. I suspect that the treatment we personally received and that of our delegation was somewhat special. Interestingly, none of the high government officials who received David and me mentioned either of our celebrity relatives, although it was clear to us by comments of others that this was known to all — the inscrutable East!

Arriving in Beijing, we were greeted by Dr. Mao, a professor at QingHua University; Dr. Mao had spent a year at Foster Wheeler, where David works. He introduced us to Miss Chang, Mr. Wen and Miss Chao. Miss Chang and Miss Chao would travel the entire way with us; Mr. Wen joined the escort only for Beijing.

EDUCATIONAL SYSTEM

□QingHua University: We were greeted by dignitaries of the University on our arrival. The Vice Director of the Foreign Office of the University, a woman, ushered us into a large welcoming room. David and I sat on the center sofa with the Vice Director and other senior staff members. The rest of our delegation were asked to sit in armchairs flanking the sofa, and we all sat across from the lesser staff members of the university who were seated at a long table against the far wall. So much for equal status!

A faculty member in the Engineering Department gave us a summary in English of the program, and introduced all the staff that was assembled. After David introduced our delegation, I was invited by a biologist to visit the Biology Department, as the men were led off to visit the Engineering Department. The new Biology Department was housed in a building we would not consider impressive. Their equipment, however, was impressive.

Apparently China's institutes of higher education, the more prestigious ones, just received a large World Bank Loan for the purpose of updating their instrumentation. As biotechnology holds the promise of helping in the development of new crops and domestic animals, this is the thrust of research in biology in China. They had very sophisticated pieces of machinery — DNA synthesizers, ultracentrifuges and scintillation counters.

In discussing their program, I found that they face many of the problems I face as a faculty member in a state college. Most of the problems stem from inadequate funding, and the control of funding by the government whose people are not necessarily scientists, and do not always understand the needs of scientific programs. There is not adequate support for purchasing supplies, for example, and without reagents, no amount of instrumentation will result in any research. Still, the expertise of faculty, many of whom have spent years as Visiting Scientists at some of our most prestigious institutions in the States, is impressive. They need to continue to send even more to get training, however. Biology is moving too fast in the development of new technology.

David later told me that they had the same impression of the Engineering Department. The potential to do good work is there, but lack of money is an impediment. This is true for the country as a whole in all areas, I suspect. The men saw remnants of attempts by the Red Guard during the Cultural Revolution to destroy the engineering building. When they could not tear down some of the machinery, they tried to blow the place up. There are still pieces of wreckage strewn about. Most of the faculty suffered during this period of insanity, which was every bit as horrific as the Holocaust.

□Beijing University: Mr. Wen (escort) and I were greeted by a senior faculty member, Professor Wu. Professor Wu gave me a briefing on the curriculum for biology students. BU is a very well-known academic institution, with a long tradition of excellence.

There are many required core courses for biology majors, leaving little room for electives. By the junior year, there is a branching off into specific areas of biology, such as biochemistry or genetics. Each student undertakes a senior project which is presented as a thesis. The biochemistry undergraduate program is five years, and the biology program is four.

“A student of mine...and his family were sent to the country to raise pigs. His father was guilty of having received a master’s degree at NYU; it did not matter that he had returned to China...to help the country recover from the Revolution.”

Professor Wu typified the classic scholar, gentle in speech, dignified in manner. He took me on a campus tour. Actually, the part of the university we were in was formerly Yenching University, which some years ago was incorporated into Beijing U. The buildings are in the classic architectural style, with tiled, curved roofs. There is a lake surrounded by graceful willows, and the whole atmosphere was one of tranquility and studiousness. If I were to teach in the PRC, I would want to teach at Beijing University.

As we walked the grounds, we passed an academic building which had a high brick wall in the rear. Professor Wu mentioned it had been used for other purposes during the Cultural Revolution; he said it in such a manner that it invited the question, what purposes? He said with a laugh, “To jail bad people — like me!” The scars left by the Cultural Revolution on its surviving victims are still quite apparent. I shudder to think of scholars like Professor Wu having to demean themselves before the hordes of young thugs.

Mr. Wen was quite typical of a generation whose education was delayed or destroyed by the Red Guards of the Cultural Revolution.

He is now near 30, and only recently graduated from college as an engineer. During the Cultural Revolution, he was assigned to work in coal mines, and as a maintenance worker in a train station. A student of mine at Montclair State who emigrated from the PRC was of the same generation. My student and his family were sent to the country to raise pigs. His father was guilty of having received a master’s degree at NYU; it did not matter that he had returned to China in 1950 to help the country recover from the Revolution.

Mr. Wen has ambitions to study in the U.S., but needs to apply for a visa to do so. All government supported students must take exams to qualify for overseas study. This is why those we receive in American institutions are so capable; they are the cream of a very large crop! Mr. Wen felt that young people were really not that interested in politics anymore. Interestingly, when I recounted this to some of the ladies later, Miss Chao overheard, and disagreed. She said that at Beijing University, nonparty members were ostracized by most students. It is clear that Miss Chao is much more party oriented than Mr. Wen. The existence of disagreement was to me a good sign in itself. I suspect the willingness to express oneself is a recent luxury in the PRC.

We were conducted on a tour of the biology laboratories, and saw again the new instrumentation purchased with the World Bank loan. The complaints on the part of the staff were much the same as at QuingHua. Not enough time, not enough supplies, not enough promotions. Both Beijing and QuingHua get the best of the students who take the nationwide college admissions exam, as these two institutions are the ones in most demand by the young people. All applicants list about 5 colleges in order of preference, and the higher the grade received on the exam, the more likely the student will be placed in his or her top choice. Students are almost wholly subsidized by the government. They pay no tuition, room or board; many receive a stipend in addition.

□Beijing Teacher’s College: I spoke with the chairman of the Biology Department, a broad-faced northerner, Professor Wu. BTC has more of a liberal arts curriculum for its students than the other universities I have visited. The reason is that their graduates become instructors at provincial teachers’ colleges, and so are given a broader curriculum. In addition to their required major courses, each student must take one course in education, one in psychology, and one in teaching methodology. They student-teach for four weeks.

The curriculum is heavily weighted in academic subjects, and less emphasis is given to education courses per se. Beijing Teacher’s College has a very good reputation academically, and there is much competition for admission. Unlike the prevailing attitude in the United States toward teacher education programs, which is less than respectful (often for good reason in my opinion), a degree from Beijing Teacher’s College is coveted. Also unlike the attitude in the United States, teaching as a profession is held in high esteem in China; some of the brightest students opt to become educators. This is one of the reasons I believe the PRC eventually will become a strong power, and its position as a powerful nation will endure. Those of us in higher education in the States have known for the past 10 years that our best students stay away from careers in teaching. There is neither money nor prestige to attract the best and brightest to the most important profession of all.

The problems I heard at BTC are similar to those at other universities I visited, and to our own in the U.S.: no promotions since the Cultural Revolution, students too grade conscious, too many student projects to supervise, pay too low, and not enough support or time for their own research.

□Academia Sinica: The Academia Sinica of Beijing is a research institution. I had met one of the staff members, Dr. Yan, in L.A., at an August meeting of the International Societies for Developmental Biology.

We were met by a Dr. Chen, as Dr. Yan was at another meeting and would join us later. We chatted briefly about the institution in the reception room over hot tea. From what I could gather, there are some 200 staff members and assistants in all, and in the developmental group there are at present 55. As at QuingHua, there have been recent acquisitions of equipment as a result of the World Bank loan and there are problems regarding training for staff to operate all the sophisticated instrumentation, and the need for supplies and reagents.

We dropped in on Dr. M.C. Niu, a retired professor from Temple University, whom I had met 20 years ago as a graduate student at a meeting in Oak Ridge, Tennessee. I had last seen him at a Developmental Biology Society meeting in California. I had heard that he was spending considerable time in the PRC helping in molecular techniques. Now retired from Temple, he spends half the year in Beijing, and half in the U.S.

He spoke to me about the need for overseas Chinese in the sciences to share our training with the scientists of the PRC. He realized that work done there may not receive the recognition work done in the U.S. might, but feels that it is necessary to help anyway. I appreciated his sentiments, but the difficulties faced by researchers in the PRC are immense.

Even with funding there is the problem of accessibility of supplies. Shipments of reagents come from the U.S. or other countries once a month only. If the shipment is for some reason insufficient or the chemicals are inactive, they must wait another month to continue research. Sometimes they must request supplies a year ahead, and research is not that predictable. By the time a year is over, the direction of the research may have taken an entirely different turn.

We were joined by Dr. Yan, who showed me through the Institute. They accept some graduate students, and occasionally teach short courses, but their primary function is research. Much of their research involves the transfer of genes into eggs of different species to influence their development. This was to be the thrust of most of the research in genetic engineering that I encountered in the PRC. It is applied research, taking established techniques and using them for a practical purpose. In the PRC, it is to produce new crops and new animals for food. They are not in a position to afford the luxury of basic research.

American looking at rock formation; Chinese street sweeper looking at American.

IMPRESSIONS OF THE PEOPLE AND LIFE IN BEIJING

□As we walked (at Beijing U.), classes changed, and the hustle and bustle of students riding or walking to class was very like that on any U.S. campus. One difference was that exercise music was played loudly on speakers. It was explained to me that this was to encourage the students to do calisthenics between classes, or during their free periods.

The Chinese are very health conscious; they do not mind riding their bicycles to and from work, even if they must ride for an hour or so. I suppose it is better than pushing a gas pedal, and there are few fat or even pudgy Chinese. I am sure that the average Chinese would beat the average American in any endurance contest. Every morning, no matter how early, people are participating in calisthenics or TaiChiChuan all along the roads. Elderly men and women exercise by swinging their arms as vigorously as they can while they stroll.

□Fruit and food and clothing stands lined the roads in the city. Nowhere did we see long lines of people waiting to buy food or other consumer goods, as one frequently sees in pictures from Russia. Produce is in abundance, now that farmers are allowed to sell the excess for their own profit. Every farmer has a quota he must produce for the government, but now, if he produces more, he can keep the proceeds from his own sales. Miss Chang told us of one woman who had made so much money she had three cars of her own, but this is unusual. What is true now is that the peasants are both the richest and the poorest people in China. Those who live in the cities have no goods of their own to sell, so they live on their set incomes. They are the equivalent of our white collar workers, and blue collar workers, and form what is essentially a middle class.

□Since Beijing is a fairly cosmopolitan city, and the numbers of foreign visitors have increased lately,

East meets West

the people are relatively blasé about Westerners they encounter. Those who are curious are very open with their curiosity. One day, as I was standing with some of the men on the sidewalk waiting for the others to finish their session, a stroller carrying his two-year-old son approached our group. He put his child close to one of our American engineers for a good look. Then he turned to me and said with a smile, "They really do have big noses, don't they!"

□As we passed a young man with a trained falcon sitting on a stick, he laughed, pointed to one of the men in our delegation, and said in Chinese, he has the same nose my bird does!

□Our young escorts were very eager to practice what they knew, and to learn new terms. One day Miss Chao asked me if I could define a word she had seen, but could not find in the dictionary. I told her to spell it for me: "y-u-p-p-i-e-s", she said. Try defining yuppie to someone from a communist country!

□David and I stopped in a clothing store to buy our son a Mao hat. The salesgirl showed clearly she was not pleased to be selling to us. She threw a hat that was too small for an adult head on the counter and when we asked for a larger size, she curtly responded that they were all one size. I wonder if her attitude was born of resentment that we wanted a part of their national costume as a souvenir. It is possible that she exemplified a problem that several of our hosts had deplored about workers in the PRC. Since all are guaranteed their jobs for life, there is no incentive for them to do their best. This is compounded by the fact that the communist policy did not offer the promise of promotion, either.

On one of my visits to the colleges in the PRC, I asked the naive question of a professor, do you have a tenure system in China? He smiled and said, everyone, not just professors, has tenure automatically. The Chinese call this policy the Iron Rice Bowl. The guarantee of a job for life allows the kind of performance the salesgirl felt free to give. In recent times, however, policy makers have recognized the low productivity that results from the Iron Rice Bowl. There are now reports that unproductive workers have been fired from comfortable jobs, and given less desirable work. Also, incentives in the form of awards have been instituted in some cases.

□We passed bicyclists all along the route, some laden with enormous bales of hay on the back of their bikes. Others seemed to be students. There were horse-drawn carts and mule-drawn carts slowly making their way among the bicycles and few motor vehicles. The country roads, which were two-lane, seemed narrow for two-way traffic. The bus driver constantly beeped his horn to warn of our approach.

Clearly, the lack of adequate roads outside the city is a problem here. As the PRC modernizes its means of transporting people and goods, it faces an enormous expenditure in upgrading the roads for more cars, buses and trucks. I cannot imagine the country ever being as motorized as the Western nations, not when there are a billion people. How could they afford the fuel; where could there be space for all the cars; how could you manage the resulting pollution and noise? The problems weigh me down thinking about them, and they aren't even mine.

□A national holiday accounted for multitudes of flowerpots lining the streets of Beijing, and the many floral sculptures, such as peacocks and elephants made of flowers and ivy. These are lit at night and add much color to what is otherwise a rather colorless city (the new multi-story buildings are all in white or cement colors). Only with surplus manpower can this kind of floral display be managed. There were tens of thousands of flowerpots lining the main roads.

□One disadvantage of riding in the front of a tour bus is to watch in incredulity and fear the audacity of bicyclists in challenging motor vehicles for the right of way. They cut in front, turn across the lane, and when the bus strays over to the wrong side of a two-lane road to pass unyielding pedestrians and carts, oncoming cyclists wait to the last second before avoiding collision. If two vehicles heading in opposite directions happen to be in the same lane, there is a nerve-racking game of Chicken, with a lot of tongue-clucking by the driver after one or the other has moved aside. The cyclists in the PRC have to be among the most skilled in the world. At rush hour, they are six deep on either side of the road.

□ Being on foot is even more of a challenge: during a shopping spree, one of the wives saw a department store across the street with children's clothing in the window. We had not been to a local store and decided to sample the wares and prices available to local people. The one problem was to cross the street. It was rush hour; cyclists were six deep and bumper-to-bumper on both sides of the street. We were in a carefree mood! Eight of us decided to brave the tide of bicycles. Since we were her charges, Miss Chao joined us in this foolhardy temptation of fate. To minimize exposure to oncoming bicycles, we joined arms, and sallied forth. I don't know who was more concerned, we or the cyclists. Somehow we managed to cross through the near crush of vehicles, but were not so lucky getting to the sidewalk on the far side of the street.

We made the mistake of hesitating in the middle and about five feet from the curb were totally surrounded with bicycles wobbling around us. No one was about to stop and let us go. In truth, if they had, they probably would have caused a pile-up of monumental proportions! There we stood, trying to encourage each other to take the next step. Fortunately, an army truck turned the corner a few feet from where we were marooned. Seeing the situation, the driver pulled his truck near us at an angle, blocking the oncoming traffic, forcing them to go around the truck and us. We blew the grinning driver grateful kisses, and scurried onto the sidewalk.

□ Both on our sojourn across the street and in the department store, passers-by stopped to gawk and jostle. Chinese are inveterate gawkers, unabashed in showing their curiosity about anything out of the ordinary. I have seen a group of perhaps two dozen people gathered about two men having an argument. The onlookers press so closely they force the two arguers to come practically nose-to-nose. It doesn't seem to bother the arguers, as they continue to harangue and gesticulate to the extent that their audience allows.

□ As we neared the hotel, the putrid smell of "night soil" penetrated my fatigue. Night soil is quite simply raw sewage that Chinese farmers use as fertilizer. I wondered if any of our group knew what the odor was, and thought how ironic that we should be driving through this to reach the Fragrant Hills Hotel!

□ There were multitudes of people swarming over the park of the Summer Palace. As we were being buffeted by typical Chinese elbowing and persistent forward movement regardless of bodies in the way, Miss Chang and Miss Chao told us this was a pretty light day. Hard to imagine what a crowded day must be like! That is something I am not sure I could ever become tolerant to: everywhere there are crowds. Wherever you wish to visit there are long lines; whatever you want to see, there are people four and five deep in front.

□ It is easy to criticize the one child family policy that is now in effect in the PRC, until one is exposed to the crowds there. One must experience the crowds firsthand to appreciate the staggering problems that a billion people generate. Without such a policy, the nation could not survive, and if it did, eventually famines equal to the horrors in Africa today would be inevitable. To walk along the sidewalks in the city or in recreational areas is to feel the suffocating press of bodies.

Yet we couldn't help noticing how happy the people are. No one looked as if he or she was even hungry, much less starving. Couples with children obviously doted on them.

It appeared that all the children, especially the little girls, were dressed as if they were going to parties, rather than just for a walk in the park on their parents' day off. They were dressed in bright colors and had makeup on their faces. Little boys were dressed in military uniform, or gaily colored knitted sweaters and shirts. Many had athletic warm-up suits and jogging shoes on.

Our Chinese escorts commented on how spoiled this generation will grow up to be. Each child, they said, is the center of affection for six grown-ups — the two sets of grandparents and the parents. This will be a serious problem in the future, when each child as an adult will have all these older people to support. What this will do to the national economy is difficult to gauge. Everyone shot as many pictures of the children as they could. The children were absolutely appealing, especially the babies and toddlers with their "open air" pants. These are very practical items of apparel, as no diapers are used. When the time comes, the babies have a convenient opening in the seat of their pants for relief. One of the funniest sights is to see a tall American tourist squatting and running after a toddler, with his camera aimed at the child's behind!

□ They are obviously trying to get every bit of information from our delegation that they can squeeze out each day we are here. Miss Chang is constantly involved in trying to insure enough space for each day's presentation. The demand by students and working engineers to attend the sessions is great. I can't blame them. I feel the same way when a well-known biologist is giving a talk in our area at home. Thirst for knowledge can become compulsive.

The Founders' Scholars

By Mary Molyneux

We all meet people who have been acquainted with Sweet Briar through the daughter or spouse of a friend or relative. At parties they come up to us and say, "So you went to Sweet Briar. My friend Chuck's wife Betsy went there. She's about your age. Do you know her? Her maiden name begins with a T. They live in Atlanta now but she's from some place like Michigan, I think."

In most cases I draw a blank. The point is, for a brief moment in someone's imagination, Sweet Briar, Ms. Betsy T_____ and I are psychically connected, almost interchangeable entities. I was pondering the nature of these fleeting triangular associations as I prepared to interview the two freshmen recipients of the new $6,000 Founders' Scholarships.

This renewable award (a value of $24,000 over four years) comes with some tough strings attached. A candidate must have a combined SAT score of approximately 1200, a grade point average of 3.75 and rank in the top 5% of her class.

Looks good on paper, I thought, but are these students really me? Do I someday want to be confused with an Eden Rue or a Monica Mahoney?

The answer is yes! Somebody mistake me, please.

Monica Mahoney '89
Louisville, Kentucky

"Mrs. W. L. Lyons Brown told me about coming back for a reunion. It was a beautiful day and a beautiful night but very hot in the dorms. They all took blankets and slept outside in the courtyard. I just loved that story. It seemed to me — and it's true — there is a certain spirit here, a sense of creativity. Whatever you want to make of Sweet Briar, you can. It's flexible!"

I caught up with Monica near the end of the final examination period, between her Art History and Physics exams. Although she placed out of French, she is continuing to take courses to polish her conversational skills. She plans to major in Art Studio and was delighted to be able to study graphics exclusively during Winter Term.

We talked in a quiet spot she finds ideal for studying (I will not reveal the location). It was a fairly difficult semester, she admitted, but playing sports helped her get through it. "The hardest part was getting to know people...I played field hockey and the team got along beautifully. We got close quickly and stayed that way. We still have a great time together."

When I asked her about the added pressure of maintaining her grade point average she replied, "Sure there's pressure but it's personal pressure; you put it on yourself... What I really like about the school is not so much the downplay of competition, but the individual and supportive atmosphere. I don't feel that I've got to beat someone else. I find there are always people willing to help me if I need it and that I can help other people."

Eden Rue '89
Northfield, Minnesota

Midway through the fall semester Eden was investigating programs which would enable her to combine an interest in the sciences with her love of Spanish — perhaps a winter term at a university in Mexico. Meantime, she decided to do something totally different this January, electing to take four solid weeks of opera.

Eden wanted to attend a small, preferably southern woman's college. She applied to several but Sweet Briar was the only institution that didn't make her feel "like a piece of merchandise." She was determined to find an environment where she could be her own person and test her abilities to the greatest extent possible. As she puts it, "Some women are more passive if there are men around and it's time we got in the driver's seat. You can be treated as a number and be with male counterparts in graduate school."

Asked about the negative aspects of being a Founders' Scholar, Eden laughed and recounted her experience at the Convocation exercises in September. "The Founders' Scholars, Monica and I, were asked to stand. I just sort of bobbed up and sat down again quickly because at that point we were all strangers and I was afraid my classmates would back away. Even now I think only my best friends know about it. Otherwise it hasn't hindered me at all. I find it keeps me going, keeps me from slacking off."

Interact began the fall term by baking cookies for the faculty; "welcome back" notes attached to the goodies asked faculty members to call on Interact for any help needed with special events on campus during the year.

This student group, organized in 1977 under the sponsorship of the Development Office, moved to the Alumnae Office in 1984. Its original purpose (to devise and implement programs and activities to foster, develop and improve channels of communication, cooperation and mutual support among the Sweet Briar community and friends of the College) has been expanded this year to include increasing student awareness of the importance of the Alumnae Association. Meetings are held in the Alumnae House lounge and Interact members assist with alumnae events as well as other college functions.

Under the leadership of President Alyson Carey '86, Vice President Stacey Lee '87, Secretary Erica Hennig '88 and Treasurer Whitney

Bolt '88, an active group of twenty had a busy and rewarding fall. During Alumnae Council in September and the Generations Celebration in October, members acted as guides and hostesses for alumnae and guests. For Halloween they sold candy-filled pumpkins to raise money for Christmas gifts for local underprivileged children. Their "Letters Abroad" project has become an annual one: Christmas letters with campus news are sent to Sweet Briar students and alumnae overseas. The students receive lists of alumnae living nearby and alumnae are told of students with the hope of Peter Vivian Daniel was a young man fresh from the world of big city banks when he arrived at Sweet Briar College in August of 1954. Not very long before that he had been very unfamiliar with Sweet Briar: he explains that as a married graduate student at UVA he never visited the campus. Therefore when President Anne Pannell telephoned him to ask if he might be interested in the position of Assistant to the President and Treasurer of the College, he "really didn't know." About to depart for a stint of National Guard duty at summer camp, he promised to think about it.

Mrs. Pannell telephoned again, saying that she would like to come to Richmond to see him. Not sure where exactly Sweet Briar was located, he suggested that she be in his office at the State Planters Bank (now United Bank of Virginia) at 9:00 the following morning. In those days Richmond was a 2½ hour drive, but she was there at the hour's strike and Peter remembers being "absolutely intrigued by this person, her philosophies and goals for the College." The more he listened, the more interested he became in Sweet Briar.

Thirty-two years, two grown sons and much water over the dam later, he recalls that first autumn of his arrival on campus and his first two BIG problems as a new administrator. Problem #1 was that no water was going over the dam: Central Virginia was suffering a major drought. The College depended entirely then on one large lake for its water supply (the second lake was not filled until 1960). When the students came in mid-September, the water level was extremely low and dropping by the day. By October the question he faced was whether or not the students would have to be sent home and the College closed.

As the drought continued he prepared to have water trucked in to keep the College open.

The first view most of the students had of him was at a required convocation, called to apprise the community of the desperate situation. An incredulous student body listened to Peter's unbelievable admonishments: there would be no drinking water at meals, taps were not to be left on while we brushed our teeth, we must rinse only (to this day I am unable to let the water run!) and finally the real blow — showers/baths could be taken either Friday or Saturday but not both days. Each student was to be allowed only three such indulgences a week "for the duration." He suggested bathless Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays but left it to us to devise our own schedules. I remember this period vividly because it occurred during the only six weeks of my life when I have been closer to a horse than a field away. I was taking riding that fall to fulfill a physical education requirement. You may be interested to know that there is not enough Arpege in the world to counteract the aroma of the stable; people blanched and drifted away when they sensed riders approaching.

The class of 1957 honored him at fall Stepsinging with a song to the tune of the old round "Frère Jacques." It began "Bad News Peter, Bad News Peter, Said no baths, Said no baths" and ended "Then came Hazel." In a few hours' time in mid-October, hurricane Hazel filled the lake, downed some 800 trees and gave Peter his second big problem: making the Refectory safe since Hazel had weakened it structurally. He must have felt the irony of leaving the pressures of city life for the tranquility of a college in the country.

Peter's staff in 1954 consisted of himself, Assistant Treasurer Mabel Chipley and the late Rebecca Carroll, who ran Sweet Briar's bank window until her retirement in 1974. His office equipment included a hand-cranked bookkeeping machine and Rebecca's "money-making machine" with which she entertained students and faculty by demonstrating in periods when there wasn't a run on the bank. She would insert a dollar bill into the "machine," turn the handle and withdraw a five-dollar bill.

This delighted all comers until a faculty wife mentioned in Lynchburg that Sweet Briar "made" its own money, she had witnessed it! Peter had no choice but to confiscate Rebecca's toy to avoid a confrontation with the FBI.

"Bad News Peter" is not the only soubriquet he has been blessed by. Well known for the great care with which he handles Sweet Briar's money, he is a terror to anyone whose departmental budget is over-expended by any amount. On one occasion the state of the admissions budget exceeded all expectations in expenditures. When this came to his attention, Peter reached for the telephone, not that he needed it that day to be heard a floor away. Mrs. Eddie White, admissions office manager probably for longer than Peter had been alive at that point, and somewhat a character herself, was ready for him. To his "THE ADMISSIONS OFFICE BUDGET IS IN TROUBLE!", she replied softly, "Why, Cary, hello." (Silence on Peter's end of the line). "Have I ever told you that you remind me of Cary Grant? You do, you know." Neither the principals in this incident nor any other residents of Fletcher at that time have ever forgotten. For a while, some of the budgetary memos were addressed to Cary Grant, Vice President and Treasurer.

Besides being a devotée of fiscal responsibility, Peter is a veteran of many fund-raising efforts. He oversaw the programming, planning and construction of Dew, Babcock, the Chapel, the Rogers Riding Center, Guion, Meta Glass, the Wailes Center, the Prothro Natatorium, the Book Shop, Prothro Commons and the Dana Wing of the Mary Helen Cochran Library, as well as the renovations of Benedict, the "Music Box," the nursery school building, the dairy, Fletcher and the Refectory. Reid Dining Room became The Pit. The old lake was drained so that the leaking dam could be repaired (the 1904 mortar gave way and the dam was shored up with pipes until it could be fixed, causing it to look, in Peter's words, "like a toothless wonder"). A second lake was added to supplement the water supply. Mount San Angelo was reacquired through a gift/purchase arrangement and became the home of the Virginia Center for the Creative Arts. When fire razed the mansion in 1979, new quarters for the VCCA were built on the land. The road system through the campus was redirected and parking lots constructed as increasing numbers of students brought cars to college.

Survivor of countless negotiations in aid of all this progress, he remembers particularly Charles Dana's visit to Sweet Briar. Mr. Dana wished to see the College before offering a grant. President Pannell asked Martha von Briesen (then Director of Public Relations) to present the library wing project and Peter was to speak for an administration building. When Mr. Dana arrived, everyone was seated around a table to discuss various uses to which a grant might be put. Peter was "about four sentences" into his presentation when Mr. Dana broke in. He was sorry to interrupt, he said, but he couldn't care less about an administration building. For all he cared, he continued, the administration could work in the basement! Peter sat down. The Dana Foundation made a grant for the library wing.

Many gifts have been presented to the College during Peter's tenure. Two unusual ones stand out to him as especially memorable: a pair of peacocks and the Southern Railroad station. The peacocks began strolling the grounds during a summer in the '60s, in the quieter days before Dennis Van der Meer's tennis enthusiasts and other groups were in residence for a full schedule of summer programs. After the first surprised sightings, they became less of a curiosity — their strolls were commonplace. Fall came, the students returned and the peacocks, perhaps stimulated by more activity, began breaking their evening naps in the trees surrounding Sweet Briar House by calling to each other. A peacock's high shriek sounds rather like a human's cry for "HELP! HELP!" The startled reactions of overnight guests at Sweet Briar House were matched in intensity by those of the night watchmen; all were sure every time a peacock gave voice that some student was in terrible trouble out there somewhere. Peter had to farm out the fowls.

The Sweet Briar Station was the gift of the Southern Railroad when the train stop was discontinued. Southern kindly offered to move it to the campus. Unfortunately the move took place while the ground was soft from fall rains. The station spent a long winter mired in mud in the field below the dairy, another curiosity for visitors and a daily reminder to Peter that nothing is ever easy.

Peter's reminiscences suggest that a major requirement of his job was that he be ready for anything:

- calming a college president whose youngest son and a pilot have just disrupted a hockey game by landing their disabled airplane in a cornfield adjacent to the hockey field;

- reassuring a future president of the

- United States (Richard Nixon) who, on disembarking from the train at Sweet Briar Station with his wife and daughter, Tricia, spies a station wagon sporting a full gun rack...three days after President John F. Kennedy was shot in November of 1963;

- coaching a very successful Sweet Briar diving team;

- preparing for the College's "day in court" in the 1965 law suit;

- sponsoring two classes (1962 and 1966)

- helping to set up a new Junior Year Abroad program with the University of Seville.

- operating a beauty parlor in the gymnasium.

- acting as Fire Chief of Sweet Briar, rendering "fireside chats" to the students and conducting fire drills.

In the fall of 1979, the Sweet Briar Board of Directors and Overseers proclaimed "Peter Daniel Day" in celebration of 25 years of his being ready for anything in his service to Sweet Briar. The Board acknowledged that day that Peter also has made the College "ready for anything": his money management, of course, is legendary. For 32 years Sweet Briar College has operated in the black, perhaps the only educational institution in the northern hemisphere to do so continuously. Peter would not allow the College to be in the red — he doesn't believe in it! President Harold Whiteman lauded him at some length at a faculty meeting for his skillful wielding of college funds. The next day Mme. Sommerville, Professor of French, crossed paths with Peter's wife, Lydia at the post office. "So wonderful," Mme. Sommerville said smilingly, "that Peter has kept us in the dark!"

Annual Report of the Vice-President and Treasurer

By Peter V. Daniel

With very mixed emotions I am writing my last financial report to the alumnae and friends of Sweet Briar College. After 32 years of service to this wonderful College I will be retiring at the end of the academic year. Quite frankly, this is difficult for me to believe, because it seems like only yesterday when I arrived with hurricane Hazel in 1954. The years have been filled with high expectations for the College and happily many of these have come to fulfillment. Such expectations and progress can be expressed in many ways, and one is certainly through financial statements. So, at the end of this report the current fiscal condition of Sweet Briar is compared to the previous year and 31 years ago.

First, however, let us look at the progress made during the last fiscal year. The total assets on June 30, 1985 were $62,820,000, an increase of $5,906,000 over the previous year. Over half of this increase ($3,153,000) was in the book value of the Endowment Fund, while most of the balance of the increase is in Investment in Plant.

Since my last report the major development for the physical plant has been the construction of a new road system behind the Alumnae House/Book Shop complex and a new parking lot for students and staff that accommodates 194 automobiles.

Operationally we experienced a healthy increase in enrollment, and are continuing our efforts of trying to reach and stabilize the student body at the maximum level.

Sweet Briar has experienced excellent growth both financially and educationally. This could not be achieved without the loyalty and support of the alumnae, parents, and the many friends of the College. While, after June, I shall personally miss my official contact with all the constituencies of the College, Lydia and I will continue to live on our farm, McLivian, and will always look forward to seeing and welcoming you back.

Exercises in an Abundant Life

By Cornelia Perkins Zinsser '52

In her fine little book Witness to the Truth, American classicist Edith Hamilton describes how the early Christians shared their possessions and distributed to all according to their need. She quotes the result, in Luke's words, "that they gave witness with great power to the resurrection of the Lord Jesus." Hamilton sums up the strength and credibility of Jesus' followers in these words, "Those who so deal with the things that are seen are apt to be believed when they speak of things not seen."

This is a clear statement of the way in which a woman priest, specifically Susan C. Lehman, Sweet Briar's chaplain, lives in order that she may be believed. Her involvement with the particular, the concrete and the tangible things in human life manifests her concern with the things not seen. A case in point was the day last August shortly after Susan's arrival, when I had minor in-and-out surgery. Susan called me that evening and announced that she would be over the next day and that she was bringing lunch. When she arrived bearing a basket containing not just the edibles but everything that might be needed, down to the salt and pepper, napkins and silver, I said, "You shouldn't be doing all this. You're supposed to work at the spiritual end and let others do the catering." Susan answered, "But you don't understand about women priests. This is where it's at."

Knowing Susan the past few months I've learned a bit about women priests and so have many others. In this person we have seen how the special capabilities which women have for compassion, creativity, nurturing and domesticity are used in a way that shows forth the Christian life. Susan's generosity as a person is part and parcel of her work as a priest. Another example of the twinning of person and priest took place on an autumn morning when those who had been at Morning Prayer (which Susan leads daily at 7:30) went down to the lake for a breakfast picnic. There was an abundance of everything — eggs, bacon, fried potatoes, blueberry muffins, juice and coffee perked on the fire. I said, "Susan, there's so much food! I'm not used to such abundance." She confronted me: "Neela, when you follow someone who said 'I came that you might have life and have it more abundantly', I think you'd better be abundant."

One of the hallmarks of Susan's life at Sweet Briar is her hospitality. She and her husband, John Dalzell, have welcomed all kinds of groups to Lancaster House: the cast and crew of Top Girls, the fall theatre production, who were entertained at an after-theatre supper, the English Department who came for dinner with visiting writer Paule Marshall, and the vegetable choppers and soup chefs who prepared the meal which followed the campuswide fast for Oxfam are just a few of these. The weekly tea and open house for students and faculty on Monday afternoons is a firmly established event that has brought many people together and enhanced the sense of community on campus.

Hospitality, generosity and warmth, all are integral to the personal relationships which Susan has built in the short time she has been at Sweet Briar. She sees a college chaplain as one who makes connections — between persons, between persons and God, and between the instincts for caring, which abound in young people, and today's issues of justice, mercy and peace. In making these connections Susan's involvement is complete, whether she is working with the Church and Chapel Committee on the flood relief project, helping an individual to see her spiritual concerns clearly, or seeking to meet other needs of the young women on campus. Susan finds that campus ministry differs from parish ministry primarily in the intensity which college-age women bring to the crucial issues of love and work. She feels that as a group students are under considerable pressure to resolve these issues during the years of their college education. Susan's high energy welcomes this intensity, and her skills as a communicator and the richness of her responses make encounters on any of the important issues in student life fulfilling and positive. Susan will press for clarity with whomever she engages in conversation and she often challenges another person's argument. The result is the strengthening and enriching of perceptions on both sides. She seeks to honor the integrity, the convictions and particularly the piety of students, and by her presence at meetings and group discussions supports student efforts to achieve clear thinking and to articulate their position effectively.

Nothing could be more appropriate than a female chaplain at a college like Sweet Briar. Susan's recent three years of advanced study at the University of Chicago have brought the student experience close to her and she identifies comfortably with the young women here. The identification also works the other way; students can identify with Susan and image from her what a career in church-related work might be for them. Whether or not that is likely for an individual student, she has in the chaplain the example of a woman who is well prepared for her job, totally committed to her work and highly successful in what she does.

Pastoral responsibility which encompasses all these relationships and which is integral to Susan's ministry is only part of the chaplain's job. Another area is teaching, which she tends to bracket since she is not actually offering a course. Susan admits to being a teacher at heart and because she is so richly prepared in the fields of history (her first discipline), literature and theology, encounters with her on academic questions, as on personal concerns, are solid and informative.

The program of the Church and Chapel Committee is a third area with which the chaplain is concerned. This committee has a student chairperson and is organized into subcommittees for reflection and spiritual growth, community service and worship. Susan works with these young women to shape the year's program in all these categories and from their collaboration a broad range of activities has taken shape this fall and winter. Service projects have included the collection of bedding and other necessities for flood victims and student participation in and contributions to agencies in Amherst and Lynchburg which work with underprivileged children, senior citizens and battered women. The annual Oxfam Fast for a World Harvest involved about 300 campus participants and produced a substantial donation to both the overseas program and to hungry people right here in Amherst County.

The reflective concerns of students who have met with the chaplain to explore spiritual issues have led to a special series of discussions held in Winter Term. Susan has provided the college community with opportunities for intercessory prayer on behalf of others and has given its members a chance to explore and witness to the discipline of the religious life, with daily Morning Prayer, a weekly Eucharist and the Sunday evening college vesper services.

It is in this area of worship that Sweet Briar can rejoice especially in Susan's talents. As the "architect" of the services, she chooses skillfully from the rich resources of The Book of Common Prayer, the great treasure of her Episcopal tradition, and also writes her own prayers, responses and other portions of the service to reflect the ecumenical nature of worship at Sweet Briar. She succeeds in bringing together the various parts of the liturgy to create a seamless structure, an order of service which moves with dignity and meaning from the first hymn to the final blessing. Outstanding fall services included a Choral Evensong focused on peace and justice, another which gave us a look at the life and faith of Native Americans through the eyes of a pair of clergy who serve on a reservation in Canada, and an Advent "extravaganza" which brought together the themes of that season in words and music. Week after week those who attend vespers leave the chapel feeling the power of the liturgy.

Finally, of course, a chaplain has to preach. Susan brings to her preaching a close attention to the text which grows out of her love of words and stories, and there can be no better foundation for good sermons. Where the Scripture passage with which she is working and the reality of our lives intersect, Susan develops thoughtful and challenging concepts which deeply involve her congregation. She strives to make relevant the familiar teachings of the faith in ways that are fresh and especially applicable to women. She brings intellectual acuity, creativity and concern, and years of experience as both lay minister and ordained priest to the task of reaching those who hear her, and like the early Christians in Acts, she gives "witness with great power" in her preaching.

In an era when the ordination of women is still a difficult issue for some, perhaps one way to deal with it is to look at the qualifications of an individual for the rigors of the ordained ministry without regard to gender. By temperament, by experience in both her personal and professional life, and in the academic and ecclesiastical preparation for ordination, Susan is eminently qualified to be both priest and campus minister. She was meant to be what she is, to do what she is doing, and her confidence springs from her knowledge that this is true. We at Sweet Briar, who are so fortunate to have her in our midst, share in the enthusiasm with which she embraces her vocation and rejoice at the seamliness of this woman in this work, and in the warmth, the dignity, intelligence and grace which endow her as our chaplain.

Why Not Sweet Briar?

By Cora L. Snyder '77
Admissions Counselor

When I was asked to write an article on encouraging alumnae daughters to enroll at Sweet Briar, I panicked. Sure, I work in admissions and yes, I am an alumna daughter (Audrey Siebert Snyder '39), but how much do I know about this very delicate subject? With a deadline to meet, I decided to make a few hot line calls; some were to mothers (including my own) and some to daughters, sisters and nieces. Others were to current students who have alumnae connections. All reached the same conclusion: arrange a campus visit for your loved one and don't push her!

My first "How-did-you-get-your-daughters-to-enroll" cry for help was to Ethel Ogden Burwell '58, who calmly replied, "I don't know, Cora, it just sort of happened." She laughed and I relaxed. "Of course my husband and I had talked fondly of Sweet Briar while the girls were growing up — I met him while I was there, you know. Ethel (junior) knew since she was 10 or 11 that Sweet Briar was where she wanted to go but Lisa looked harder. I'd be interested to know what they would have to say about it." Good suggestion!

Elizabeth (Lisa) Burwell '84 was a Psychology/Education major, a Sweet Briar Scholar and a member of Tau Phi. "My sister and I heard a lot about Sweet Briar," she told me. "People from admissions came to stay at our house and some of them became like family. We really used to look forward to their visits. It was great! Here were these people who went to the same school as my mother and they came to stay with us. Also, Liggett (the University-Liggett School in Grosse Pointe, Michigan) has a very good college placement program. We had conferences at the school with many visiting admissions people. I remember that I had been particularly impressed by the woman from Smith. But then I knew that Sweet Briar had just as much to offer and it was in the south. That was important to me because my family had come from the south for generations, even though we now live in Michigan. So I went to look at Sweet Briar and the neighboring colleges; I found the people especially friendly at Sweet Briar. I felt 'at home' there. The campus is beautiful. Right after my interview with Nancy Church (Associate Director of Admissions), I walked out and said to Mom: 'How soon can I apply Early Decision?' "

Enthusiastic about the article by this time, I dialed Ethel Hunter Ogden Burwell '82. Ethel was a Sweet Briar Scholar, a Manson Memorial Alumna Scholar and a Biology major. She had known that she would apply to Sweet Briar ever since elementary school. "Riding was a factor for me but not for Lisa," she said. "But both of us were very much aware of the traditions that my mother enjoyed." Although Ethel was definitely leaning toward Sweet Briar in high school, "My counselor made me look through other catalogs and I even visited some campuses. But I decided that I would always wonder if I would have been happier at Sweet Briar after all. In 10th or 11th grade I went down to visit. I'd always wanted to see where Dad rowed my Mom around the lake (laugh). And those weekend deals, you know, when you stay overnight in the dorms? Well, I had such a good time and everyone was so friendly that I knew I had made the right choice." To sum up how to encourage enrollment at Sweet Briar, Ethel feels that the campus visit is the clincher.

Cecily Schulz '85 was a Sweet Briar Scholar and an Alumna Daughter Scholar; currently she is a law student at the University of Virginia. Her mother is Judy Greer Schulz '61. On encouraging daughters to enroll, Judy admits: "I have absolutely no formula! What really sold my daughter was the overnight visit." Cecily went on the SBC Junior Year in France program and the Oxford Summer in England program. "The College is academically sound, no doubt about that," says Mrs. Schulz. She feels that Sweet Briar prepared Cecily for study at some of the most competitive universities in the world. "When Cecily returned from her summer at Oxford, she said to me: 'Mom, the teachers here are brilliant!'"

"Throughout the early years," says Penelope Spurr Marshall of Smith College in her article on persuading daughters to go to Smith, "make sure your daughters are aware of how much you learned..."* Many Sweet Briar alumnae children, like me, have been impressed by the quality of learning their relatives garnered from the College. My mother, a speech therapist, was a rarity in the '50s and early '60s: she was a working mom! I was proud of her career and must own up to occasional bragging.

Talking to the Burwells and others, I found that people are eager to discuss why they chose Sweet Briar. Most had heard about the College from the time they could understand speech. Each one had enjoyed a special experience which convinced her that SBC was the right choice for her. Many of these experiences revolved around the campus visit.

But then I remembered that I had never arranged for a campus visit when I was a prospective student. I'd never seen the campus and I'd never met a Sweet Briar student or faculty member until my first day freshman year! That must seem an appalling admission, and it could be, except for the fact that my mother, who has a flair for the dramatic, painted a vivid picture of her halcyon days at SBC. Ever since I can remember she shared with me tales of the apple orchard (still extant in the '30s), life in the dormitories, the strawberries and cream served in the dining halls and those hallowed Golden Stairs. She could make even the incident of falling off her horse and breaking an arm sound enticing. I was sold! When I did arrive, I certainly was not disappointed — except maybe to find that the senior stairs were not made of gold after all. No matter, it still was love at first sight.

A current student, M. Anne

Powell, of Johnson City, Tennessee, in addition to having alumnae connections, is a Pannell Scholar, is on the Dean's List and received Freshman Honors last year. She agrees with the Burwells: "They always roll out the red carpet for you at Sweet Briar. The first time I came to visit, I was in the eighth grade. My sister was a student then and I spent the night in her room. Everyone was so nice!" Anne's sister, Florence A. Powell '80, was a Government/Economics major, a Mary Kendrick Benedict Scholar and a member of Phi Beta Kappa. "When Flo was still in high school," says Anne, "she went to see my great aunt in the nursing home." The Powell sisters' great aunt Annie ("Nan") Powell Hodges was a graduate in Sweet Briar's first class of 1910! "Aunt Nan really wanted my sister to consider Sweet Briar," Anne explains. "She told her how much she had enjoyed it and suggested that Flo visit. My sister did visit and told us afterward: 'I definitely want to go there!' Unfortunately Aunt Nan passed away before Florence entered in 1976 but we are certainly grateful to her for her foresight in posing the question 'Why not Sweet Briar?'"

Some alumnae, eager to share their relatives, have sent the Admissions Office applications in the child's name. I am no exception; my niece, Sarah Elizabeth Snyder, has an application all filled out, courtesy of her zealous Aunt Cora. Sarah is four years old. She will not be entering college until the year 2000.

Sarah is not alone in the long-term files: Carey Crocker Wodehouse, projected class of 2003 and her cousin, Lindsay Hannah Betzendahl (class of 2004) also have admissions files. Lindsay's mother, Connie Crocker Betzendahl is Sweet Briar '75 and her aunt Camilla Crocker Wodehouse '71, is Carey's mother. Marilyn Hannah Crocker '46 is the mother of Connie and Camilla, and she is Lindsay's and Carey's grandmother. Got it?

Caitlin Ford Henningsen is three years old. It is likely that she will be hearing many tales of bygone Sweet Briar days while she is growing up. Her grandmother is Mayde Ludington Henningsen '48, her great-grandmother is the late Mary Harris Ludington AC, her aunt is Mary Henningsen Collins '75 and her cousins are Leslie Ludington Orendorf '72, Mary Felice Ludington '76 and Ellen Ludington Weld Tilt '77. And we have just heard of another "baby hopeful" for the class of 2006 — Mayde Ludington Collins, daughter of Mary Henningsen Collins '75. Her application is on its way!

Ask me in 15 years whether or not this method of encouragement is effective. Aunt Cora will have to remember that being too insistent can backfire, as Jane Black Clark '56 found out. "I think that the pressure and overselling made me lose my oldest (to another woman's college)", she told me. "I was so anxious for her to go to Sweet Briar." However, two of her three daughters did attend SBC: Jane Clark Morrison '79 and Ashby Taylor Clark '85. "With the other two...I left them alone — always showing that Sweet Briar meant a lot to me but I didn't want the responsibility for their choice. They looked elsewhere and liked Sweet Briar best. They also saw my Sweet Briar friends as being special people."

As most of us know, it is impossible to predict what will be the best choice for a granddaughter, daughter, niece or sister. What is important is to allow her to make the ultimate decision when the time comes. As Lisa Burwell put it: "Ethel and I knew all about 'Why a woman's college' from Mom and the admissions people at Sweet Briar. My mother made sure that we saw and considered other choices." Ethel agrees: "Mom and the guidance counselors at Liggett encouraged me to consider other colleges too. But I knew that Sweet Briar was the one for me."

Why NOT Sweet Briar? # UPDATE ON FINANCIAL AID

By Ann Aiken, Director of Financial Aid

Recently I received a letter from my alma mater (not Sweet Briar) asking for my contribution to the Annual Fund. Usually I answer this appeal quickly but there have been occasions when checks for Nikes, football games and school-solicited pizza came first. This time I answered immediately, for the appeal was called "The Year of the Scholarship." The letter went on to say that this year marked the first time funds were available for upperclassmen previously denied aid, that last year the freshman class was 10% smaller because the College was unable to offer qualified students aid, and that without "the support of dedicated alumnae/i, parents and friends" the College would not be able to offer places to students who needed aid.

An English friend of ours who was working in Washington one summer told his friends that he was coming to Sweet Briar for the weekend. The response was direct: "That's where the rich girls go."

Are these two accounts unrelated? Not really. We all have heard the view that Sweet Briar is for "rich girls" (no mention of "women" in this context), but those who know Sweet Briar accurately know that this is not so, and that it is the financial aid program, built up through the generosity of alumnae, parents and friends, that insures that both girls and women who are not from rich families will be able to get an education here.

Virtually all awards are based on demonstrated financial need as shown by a review of the information on the Financial Aid Form or the Family Financial Statement. Financial need is defined as the difference between the student budget and the amount that a family can be expected to contribute to the cost of attending Sweet Briar. If the expected family contribution equals or exceeds the student budget, the family is not eligible for aid; if it is less, the student is eligible.

Four major factors are used in determining a family's ability to pay for college: income, assets, family size and the number of persons in college. All applicants are expected to contribute a minimum of $900 from a summer job toward their college expenses.

Sweet Briar meets 100% of each student's demonstrated need, something which is becoming rare in American colleges. We have been able to help almost all those who apply for aid, although some applicants from outside the United States cannot be funded because they need travel allowances which unfortunately are beyond the budget.

The financial aid package consists of a grant offer, a loan offer and a campus job offer. As long as need is demonstrated and as long as the student shows satisfactory academic progress (a 2.0 GPA), aid can be expected, although the components of the package may change somewhat as the student progresses from one grade level to another.

Sweet Briar's financial aid program has changed drastically in the past seven years. When I first came into this office in 1978, the number of students on aid represented 16% (110) of the student body and the College's goal was to raise this to 25% in order to continue to attract a qualified and diversified student body.

In 1978-79 grants offered (and accepted) totalled $299,650. This year over $960,000 has been accepted by 220 qualified students — double the number of recipients but over three times the amount of money. Grant money comes from College appropriations, endowed scholarship funds, gifts and grants, federal and state grants and from the endowed alumnae club scholarships. This year for the first time the money from the clubs surpassed $100,000. Personally I think that this is incredible, especially as it represents about one-tenth of the total financial aid budget.

Loans have become important in both family planning and in the college financial aid package. The loan not only spreads the cost of education over 10 years but also allows a student a choice of colleges. As J.M. Cronin, President of the Massachusetts Higher Education Assistance Corporation said, "Loans will never be as popular as outright grants. But attending college on credit is respectable."

As the comprehensive fee rises, the grant and loan component of the financial aid package also rises. We try to keep loans under $2,000 per year, which can be considered manageable; primarily we have been able to do this because of the growing size of endowed funds for grants. The College itself has two loan funds and makes use of the federally-funded National Direct Student Loan Program as well. Although the newspapers tell us that times are not as bad as they were, it continues to be the middle income family that is caught by the current needs analysis system. Therefore, the Sweet Briar College Student Loan Fund, for use by parents regardless of income, was started three years ago and is proving quite popular.

This year over half the student body has a campus job. Students work in almost every administrative office and department; they are teaching assistants, tutors, computer experts, tack cleaners, librarians. We try to place students in positions that are related to their major interest (there are over 250 job slots on campus), but some of the more enterprising find their own jobs. My favorite example is the student who knew that she wanted to be a chef. She persuaded the Refectory to let her work in the baking section; that was a wonderful year of breakfast brioches, croissants, popovers and braided breads. You can imagine how we all felt when she left!

The College's goal of 25% was reached in 1981-82. This year 34% of the freshman class and 30% of the student body is on aid directly from the College, and over 74% of the entire student body is receiving some form of aid. The latter include those students who receive state grants and Guaranteed Student Loans and those who have campus jobs.

A diversified student body remains a top priority. This year we have nine young women from seven foreign countries on campus. Four of these are exchange students from universities connected with Sweet Briar through Junior Year Abroad programs, two came through international organizations and three are from Sri Lanka, a small island that produces superior students. None of these would be here without some help.

Another change results from the adult student program (Turning Point). Now in its seventh year, it has brought 38 TPs to campus in '85-'86. Most are full-time students and full-time mothers. They admit that they first were attracted to Sweet Briar because of its generous aid program, for they have mortgages to meet, hamburger to buy and the inevitable taxes, but they now are fervent supporters of the College. These women are a marvelous addition to the campus and are much admired by faculty and other students. There are seven Pannell Scholars in this group and others have been tapped by Bum Chums, Tau Phi and Aints and Asses. They are particularly aware of the value of a Sweet Briar education and have a fine give-and-take with students in the classroom, outside the classroom or in a one-to-one confrontation (during which the discussion can center on "Why am I here" or "What to get Baby Brother for his birthday").

A recent graduate told me that when she was a freshman, it must have been obvious that she was receiving aid: she was minority and she worked in the Refectory at least 10 hours a week. By her Commencement she felt the picture had changed. By then more than half of the students had jobs for the full year, not just when the telephone bill came, there were a larger number of minority students and since everyone wore blue jeans, no one knew who had the designer jeans and who the pirated ones.

As federal funding becomes less a certainty, the Sweet Briar extended community has become more dedicated in its commitment to financial aid. The latest Capital Campaign had a goal of 1.7 million targeted for the aid program; 2.2 million was raised. The alumnae sold more bulbs and parents and friends made larger gifts (very welcome these days when inflation runs ahead of investments).

Sweet Briar's financial aid program has provided an opportunity for higher education to those young women who might otherwise consider it an impossibility. In the current student jargon, aid is "in", but it needs the support of all who do not want to see Sweet Briar a college for "rich girls."

Jimps Blackwell Dies

Alumnae and former employees who were at Sweet Briar from the mid-20's to the mid-30's will be saddened to learn of the sudden death of James Hancock (Jimps) Blackwell of Stony Brook, New York, on February 6, 1986.

Jimps was the younger son of Wilmer Carter Blackwell, Sweet Briar farm manager, and Pauline Carter Blackwell. He had a lifelong interest in riding and often participated in student riding events while at Sweet Briar.

Jimps was the brother-in-law of Mary Hughes Blackwell who worked in the Alumnae Office for 32 years.

Maw elected to Phi Beta Kappa

Robin Cutler Maw '66 has been elected as an alumna member to Phi Beta Kappa by the Theta Chapter of Virginia at Sweet Briar College. She has received a letter from the chapter congratulating her on her many achievements since her graduation.

Bed and Breakfast

If you have started a bed and breakfast venture and would like travelling alumnae to know about it, please send your name and address to Editor, c/o Alumnae Office. Locations will be listed under "Notices" in the Summer '86 magazine. Deadline: April 21.

Dian Fossey Killed

Dian Fossey, 1981 participant in Sweet Briar's Ewald Scholars Symposium series, was found murdered at her camp in the Virunga Mountains in Africa in early January, 1986. She was buried in the gorilla graveyard she had laid out on a hillside in Rwanda, Africa, where she was continuing to study mountain gorillas.

Urgent Request to All Alumnae

Please complete and return the Alumnae Survey on Volunteering and Community Service that appeared in the Fall 1985 issue of the Alumnae Magazine as soon as possible. Thank you.

Alumna Resident Program Begins

Through the Penelope Lane Czarra Fund, established by Mr. and Mrs. Edgar F. Czarra, Jr., parents of "Penny" '75, each year a young alumna who is succeeding in a non-traditional career field will return to campus to share her ideas, advice and expertise with the Sweet Briar community. On November 3 and 4, 1985 Katherine Powell Heller '78 visited campus as the first Alumna Resident. Katherine, a medical illustrator, is Manager of Medical Illustration in the Educational Media Department of Case Western Reserve University in Cleveland. She met with students, faculty and staff members in a variety of settings. After speaking informally with students in the Office of Career Planning, she visited Loren Oliver's Studio Art class and Margaret Simpson's Morphology Lab. During Studio Art she showed a videotape on medical illustration as a career and discussed her own career path since graduation. In Morphology Lab, Katherine demonstrated her techniques as an illustrator, using the class's specimen cats, sharks and frogs. She was surrounded by interested students and faculty at every meal and her final public address, entitled "Rendering the Body with the Mind" was well attended despite torrential rains and impending floods in the wake of hurricane Juan.

LIFETIMES Update

The LIFETIMES Center, offering a comprehensive program of career planning services to all Sweet Briar alumnae, is housed in the Office of Career Planning, lower level chapel which is open daily from 8:30 AM - 5:00 PM. The telephone number of the office is (804) 381-6151. To date the most widely requested services through the LIFETIMES Center have been:

- Computer-assisted alumnae network information

Did you know that you can call or write to the LIFETIMES Center for help in locating alumnae who are pursuing careers in a certain field in a particular geographical area?

Did you know that you can volunteer to assist both students and alumnae with information, internships or employment?

- Strong Campbell Interest Inventory

A normed instrument through which you can compare your occupational interests to the interests of people already working in a number of different fields.

- Personal "crisis" counseling and referrals

Available on campus or by letter, telephone or through staff contacts with professionals in your locality through the CATALYST national network of women's resource centers.

- Monthly career planning newsletter

Describes services and programs available throughout the year, plus articles and issues of interest to women. $3.00 per year (8 issues)

- General and specific career-change counseling

You do not have to wait until your next visit to campus to participate in the LIFETIMES Center. Call or write us today! We also welcome your ideas and suggestions.

- Are you responsible for the care of an aging parent or relative? Would you like to talk with an alumna who is an expert in Gerontology and who specializes in working with women who must take care of an older person? Call LIFETIMES for immediate referral.

Kudos Due

---

In the midst of derogatory comments and condemnations of habits and actions of college students nationally, especially in their non-classroom life, it is a pleasure to note a very positive and special contribution being made by a group of Sweet Briar student volunteers. Sweet Briar College students in December completed the ninth semester of volunteer tutoring in the five elementary schools of Amherst County (Temperance, Amelon, Central, Pleasant View and Amherst Elementary). This project is sponsored by the Church and Chapel Committee with Robert H. Barlow, Dean of Student Affairs, as the coordinator and is open to anyone who has the desire and aptitude for helping young children to get a firmer footing in their education.

In order for the undertaking to be successful, there must be coordination of efforts between school principals, classroom teachers, and the Student Affairs Office and, most of all, the pupils and college students themselves. This is one project from which it is difficult to know who derives the greatest benefits: the teachers are eager to cooperate, the pupils blossom with the individual attention, the tutors gain a sense of real worth and the administrators are extremely grateful.

When the program first began in September 1981 there were only eight timid but courageous volunteers. In the last four years the average number has been between 25 and 32. Schedules are worked out at the beginning of each semester (Winter Term excluded); tutors make an eight-week commitment to go to a certain school for two hours a week. Once the schedule is set, it is sacrosanct and cannot be varied; tutors must be faithful to their commitments. Most often they go in groups of six in a college van, but some work it into their schedules better using their own cars.

After choosing the school and the time, tutors check in with their principals for an orientation session. Next they meet the classroom teachers who provide a list of pupils who need help in a given area. Sometimes they work in the classroom with the whole class; other times the tutor and the individual pupil or small group of children work in chairs in the hall at the classroom door. I thought this sounded a little awkward but after seeing the method in action, I realized that it kept the tutor in easy access of the classroom and was accepted quite naturally and unself-consciously.

The greatest cause for apprehension on the part of the classroom teacher is fear of a lack of dependability in the tutors. Understandably it is difficult for a college student to commit herself to a regular two-hour period, such as 8:30 to 10:30 or 12:15 to 2:15 on a specific day each week in her college schedule, with all the freedom of choice in class attendance, trips off campus and pressure of deadlines for papers and projects, but it is equally understandable that a teacher fears the detrimental effect of disappointing a child who has become accustomed to expecting special help and to depending upon a growing relationship.

The good news is that it is working, and working well. Dean Barlow stated in his memo to the volunteers at the end of the fall program: "I have been well impressed with your reliability (18 of 31 had perfect attendance and 5 others missed only once), and your sense of responsibility has brought nothing but praise from teachers and principals."

Kelly Dean, a junior from Opelika, Alabama, let me go with her for her last meeting with a section of the 3rd grade at Central Elementary. That day pupils needed extra drilling in telling time. Kelly handled it like a pro, strengthening each child's confidence and having them notify the next one when their time was up. At the end of the period as the class lined up for lunch, each one thanked Kelly for her help. She loves to work with children, which she has been doing since before entering college. At this point she plans to go to grad school for training in marketing, but who knows what may happen to change her plans! Good will come of her efforts, no matter what.

Each tutor was anxious to tell of her experiences; I sat with a group of them and let some of their enthusiasm bubble over. Lee Ann Conard, a sophomore from Troy, Ohio helps with the 2nd grade at Temperance. This is her third semester and she plans to teach in the Amherst County High School during Winter Term. Pauline Hanson, a freshman from Newport Beach, California has just started tutoring and plans to continue, perhaps into a career. She helps with math and science in the 3rd grade at Pleasant View. Senior Michelle Miller from Austin, Texas helps with the 1st grade at Amelon. She works with the children using flash cards for words and numbers. Sophomore Cecilia Moore from Danville, Virginia enjoys teaching beginning Spanish to 4th graders. No two students had similar projects, all were in different grades in different schools, but they all lit up with the joy of their experiences and plan to keep tutoring through college.

Lydia Daniel (Mrs. Peter V. Daniel), Joan Bowers (Mrs. A. Robin Bowers) and Martha Schroder, mother of Mary Jane Schroder Oliver '62, are three other dedicated tutors who work in a small group sponsored by the Amherst County P.T.A. Recently Lydia organized a beneficial reading workshop headed by Dr. Edmund Henderson of the MacGuffey Reading Clinic in Charlottesville. All student tutors were invited to attend and to participate as much as their schedules permitted.

It is exciting to see these efforts of involvement in county education being skillfully maneuvered between college and school administrations and to offer kudos instead of criticism to "this college generation."

Class Notes

1915

Anne Schutte Nolt, who has been Class Agent for the last 20 years, writes that she and Frances Pennypacker are still alive and well, in their nineties.

Anna Wills Reed is now in a nursing home. Correspondence should go to her daughter's home: c/o Mrs. Josiah F. Reed, 150 Winfield Drive, Camp Hill, PA 17011.

1919

From Norfolk, VA, Jane Henry writes that she is pretty well and busy — but very slow.

1923

Lorna Weber Dowling's first great grandson, Robert Jordan Dowling, was born in February, '85.

From Columbus, OH, Helen Gaus sends best wishes to all her class, especially Helen McMahon. She is delighted at the success of the Generations Campaign and proud to be a graduate of Sweet Briar College.

1927

President

Emily Jones Hodge (Mrs. Hanson H.), 112 Alapocas Drive, Wilmington, DE 19803

Secretary

Mildred (Kitty) Wilson Garnett (Mrs. Theodore S.), 1411 Claremont Ave., Norfolk, VA 23507

Fund Agent

Jeannette (Dan) Boone, P.O. Box BB, Sweet Briar, VA 24595

October 29, 1985: Since writing the column last fall, I have had two visits to Sweet Briar, the first for our granddaughter's graduation in May, and the second for Alumnae Council and Founders' Day in September. I wish you could all be there to see how splendid our alma mater continues to be. If the new dean, a gentleman, is half as grand as Nenah Fry we shall be most fortunate. My husband thinks the latter is the greatest because she can talk baseball with him like a pro and still talk like Aristotle.

A grand letter from M. Brown telling of their recent move from the farm to a retirement village. Mac has just had one hip replacement and will have the other eventually. Wouldn't it be nice to sit on Randolph wall or down in the boxwood gardens and listen to her and her guitar. Lately I've been a little wistful feeling about my friends and our past joys at SBC. I saw Ruth Aunspaugh's funeral in a Norfolk paper last week, which really shook me — she and Tinka Johnson Brehme and I went through school all the way, ending with Sweet Briar. We all enrolled with Virginia Wilson Robbins from Cape Charles and went off to Sweet Briar in September of 1923.

A letter from Alice Eskesen Ganzel makes even me ashamed. She still plays tennis and bridge, goes to dance classes, volunteers with Meals-On-Wheels and Planned Parenthood — and I thought I was busy in a boys' camp where I tend the farm, take the boys on daytime hikes or canoe trips when the river is up, and volunteer in a school during winter. At least it keeps us busy and straight.

Connie Van Ness says she and Compy are keeping up their old family homes. She watches her lovely old trees, lest they receive storm damage. They missed the last one, but on Virginia's Eastern Shore, where we have our dear little solar home built three years ago, the destruction in our daughter's woods is enormous. None around our Norfolk home in which we just change our clothes from summer (camp) to winter (Eastern Shore) things.

Hilda Harpster writes that she has seen Lois Peterson Wilson '26 at parties recently and she corresponds with Ruth Lowrance who is a proud grandmother. Hilda took an exercise class last winter. She had lun. If you can get out and about at our age it is fun. "The" is already eighty, and I will be in April of '86.

Emily Jones Hodge brags of three great-grandchildren with good reason. We still have one grandchild with two years to go in high school. Babe Albers' birthday party to celebrate her 80th was a slam-bang affair given by her two sons and their wives. I'm close behind you, Babe — next April. Jerry Reynolds Dreisbach is the travelling member of us all. Her family had a reunion "down under" with members from Papua, New Guinea to Auckland, NI. She always touches base with her Charlottesville daughter, Georgia Dreisbach Kegley '51 and family around Christmastime. They will spend Christmas in Costa Rica and Guatemala where Jerry's '54 son is in the Peace Corps.

Kelly Vizard Kelley has sold her New Hampshire place and will go to Connecticut to be near her boys for the summers and to Naples for winters as usual. Lib Wood McMullan lives near Margaret Moncure in Richmond and she reports that Rosa Heath Bridges moved from Virginia Beach to Columbia S.C. Mary Lib Turner Baker met Camilla Alsop Hyde in Delray Beach for the first time since 1923 when we were freshmen and says that Camilla is as lovely as ever.

Martha Ambrose Nunnally must be an angel — she writes of being busy with sewing for friends; I wish Memphis were closer to Norfolk and Belle Haven. I used to sew for us girls, daughter, daughter-in-law, and granddaughters, but never for friends.

Libbo Matthews had a darling granddaughter at Camp Alleghany, Liza Wallace, who has come to Camp Greenbrier for a Play Day for a couple of summers. She is a darling and reminds me of Libbo as a girl. The letter says that she and Harry still swim two or three times a day.

Marion Thayer's "one line" that I begged you all for is that she is loving and profiting from tutoring in the inner city — i.e. it benefits both tutor and tutored.

I talked to Tinka Johnson Brehme in Lacanada. She had just been to a football game to see twin grandsons play. Although they are fifteen, she still can't tell them apart. They help her by eating all her scraps. Helen Smyser Talbot, in South Denis, Maine, has a platoon of children and their progeny that sound delightful.

Eisetta Gilchrist Barnes is looking forward to a big reunion in '87 — "Imagine — it is our 60th!" Nineteen eighty-five was not the best year for them but they are both fine now, with Dick back on the golf course.

If only I could see each of you for a few days to catch up. We are, as are Helen and Don, most fortunate with better than the average abilities to get about. At eighty, The drove us nonstop from West Virginia last week. We eat anything that doesn't eat us and, take a few pills, I run a camp and farm and organize day-time hikes, he does a number of hammer and saw jobs, and we manage to get about pretty well. Keep moving! And be sure to keep writing me.

President

Virginia Quintard Bond (Mrs. Edward L.), 62 Channing Road, Dedham, MA 02026

Secretary

Elizabeth MacRae Goddard (Mrs. Stephen J.), 4115 Kendall Street, San Diego, CA 92109

Fund Agent

Charlotte Kent Pinckney (Mrs. Thomas), 51 Westham Green, Richmond, VA 23229

Orla Washabaugh Shenk enjoyed meeting our SB President, Nenah Fry at the Tampa, FL Alumnae Luncheon. Quinnie Quintard Bond, about to leave for Italy when she wrote, says she's running out of steam; loves her newest granddaughter. Helen Sim Mellen was enjoying the foliage in NH and Maine. She enjoyed her grandchildren, even though they made her think she was too old to be a grandmother.

Cynthia Vaughn Price's best news was that her husband was fine after a serious illness the year before. They had just returned from a tour of Nova Scotia; Jessie Hall Myers was in the group. Jean Countryman Presba's 12 yr. old granddaughter spent time with her during the summer. On their way to Florida Jean and Bill spent a night with Perry Whittaker Scott and Bob.

Nancy Worthington is such a good person about writing and passing on news! One bit of news was a Marion, OH News Star write-up, complete with a jolly picture of Virginia Cooke Rea's pediatrician husband at home after a busy 48 years! They treated themselves to a Danube River trip from Istanbul to Vienna. Nancy also told of Ella Williams Fauber's having bought a copy of Polly Swift Calhoun's "Guide of Cornwall, CT," now in its 2nd printing! Violet Anderson Groll wrote that she was feeling a bit disoriented from finally resigning after 42 years!

Eda Bainbridge Kolbe wrote that she had finally taken the step and moved into a Life-Care Community in Naples, FL. Harriet Wilson Tarbert writes that she and her husband are both happy with their families! Libba Stribling Bell has been doing a lot of travelling, twice to St. Louis then to Paris and Normandy and the Loire Valley, flying home just after the first high-jacking! Perry Whittaker Scott and husband really celebrated this year: oldest granddaughter married; their own 50th anniversary, renewing their vows; daughter married; expecting 1st great-grandchild in Feb!!

Elen Eskridge Sanders' daughter Beth is expecting a third child in Jan. and son Grayson in California adopted a third son in Sept. She'll tell us all about this at our 55th! Another classmate and husband celebrating their 50th is Elise Jester Meadows. Their daughter Lisa's son graduates from Princeton Theological Seminary in the spring; their daughter Susan's husband has been appointed to the Federal Reserve Bank Board. Susan's daughter, Claire Lowden, completed studies at S.M.U. and plans to enter graduate school; her brother, James Lowden graduates this next May from Vassar! Elise had a beautiful trip to Scotland where her niece's husband is rector of the Holy Cross Episcopal Church in Edinburgh.

Frances Whitehead Gooch in Portsmouth, VA gave a stirring account of "the storm that was different" — referring to the wild storm of Sept. 28th. She remarked that they had always before prepared for trouble, "but now the powers-that-be emphasize our age. Our independence is being eroded under police orders!! Well, live and learn!!" Katherine Lumbar Kurtis has broken her hip and will be making her home with her sister, Elizabeth L. Taylor.

Jean Cole Anderson had a delightful trip to Princeton with her daughter Lovaf and son-in-law John for Johnny's Sophomore Parents' weekend; her son David is building in the woods next to her — a real joy having him and Nancy seven miles closer to her home! She told us that Helen Lawrence Vander Horst and her sister Mary Sessions (SB '30) hosted a Lawrence Family reunion.

Charlotte Kenf Pinckney, now living in Richmond, VA hopes to make our 55th reunion! She sees Mary Leigh Marston now and then. Martha McBroom Shipman's notes are such fun to get! — fun to sort out all the "children" and grandchildren! Ruth Schott Benner believes she was the first great grandmother in our class! She and her husband Earl's travels had to be curtailed for 7 months because of her having to have two major surgeries at Mayo Clinic, but she is looking forward to our 55th!

Martha Von Briesen spent three weeks with family and friends in Wisconsin — first since 1982. She was a "happy spectator" at the Great Circus Parade which featured refurbished old, ornate circus wagons drawn by beautiful draft horses — then back to SBC for Alumnae Council and Founders Day.

Martha McCowen Burnet is having a lot of eye problems but keeps reading and writing as much as possible. She writes a column for the local newspaper; the subject of one of her recent stories was romance in the supermarket!

Evelyn Day Mullen has been chairman of The Friends of the Library at Sweet Briar since 1983. That organization is marking its 20th anniversary this year and Evelyn's goal is to drum up 20 new Life Members to celebrate the occasion.

Remember to bring snapshots for our reunion scrapbook in May!

1935

Honorary President

Jacquelyn Strickland Dwelle (Mrs. Edward C. Jr.) 2970 St. Johns Ave., Apt. 3A, Jacksonville, FL. 32205

Co-Chairmen

Frances (Poody) Morrison Ruddell (Mrs. Warren T.) 500 Pine Dr., Indianapolis, IN 46260. Cary Burwell Carter (Mrs. Francis E. Jr.) 433 Royal Oaks, Nashville, TN 37205

Secretary

Mary Marks, 3800 N. Fairfax Dr. #305, Arlington, VA 22203

Fund Agent

Lucy Hoblitzell, 8811 Victory Lane, Potomac, MD 20854

Helen Wolcott and I were touring Portugal and Spain in late Sept. and Oct. so you can imagine the relief when I found postcard greetings from many of you awaiting me. Helen's dessert cookbook project for the Presbyterian Home, PRESBYTERI-YUMS, is a gem. We expect Sue Strassburger Anderson to be in our area soon visiting daughter, Val, who is back from Germany now that her husband has been reassigned to the Pentagon.

We missed Jackie Strickland Dwelle at reunion. She writes that she is now on radiation. Her son is married to a Lutheran minister and lives in Munich. Daughter, Susan is active in her husband's parish in Owings Mills, MD. but another daughter is nearby.

Poody Morrison Ruddell and Warren got in some "birding" on campus when she could leave our class business. Our champion fund raisers, Judy Halliburton Davis and Lucy Hoblitzell shared their "how to" knowledge at Alumnae Council in October. After a tour of the British Isles with her granddaughter Judy has frozen and canned their garden produce and has helped her author husband Burke do research in South Carolina on his new book. Lucy enjoyed the calliope music of the Mississippi Queen when it docked at Marietta, OH.

Adelaide "Pat" Whitford Allen and Nick had their second experience as parents of the bride, daughter, Susanne. They were at Sweet Briar for reunion — like old times when Nick was courting. Julia Petarkin loved seeing her "good-looking classmates". Alice McCloskey Schlandorf flew in in spite of the airlines strike and drove over from Parkersburg with Julia. Julia is a phone friend for latch-key kids (an AAUW project) and a worker at an emergency food closet for her church.

Becky Young Fraser and Natalae Strickland Waters came together from Atlanta where their community service work consumes rewarding hours. Becky has a picture of granddaughter, Jamie, washing dishes with her. Mary Whipple Clark, beautifully tanned and svelte, spent much of the summer as "kitchen help" for Meals on Wheels. She also attended Tanglewood and Saratoga races and performing arts and cruised off the New England coast. She's back in Naples, FL for the winter.

It was like old times seeing Beverly Hill Furniss and Cary Burwell Carter rooming together. Bev may move to Severna Park, MD where her daughter and grandchildren live. She and Cary went to the Navy Air Force game together. Cary's three grandsons attend Montgomery Bell Academy where she taught ancient history for over 23 years and their grandfather was headmaster until his death.

Jan Lawder had a 19-day tour of China in the fall. I wonder if she and Sue Wilson Rutherford crossed paths at the Great Wall. Sue's children had a copper beech planted at the Chicago Botanic Garden in her honor. Both Jane and Sue remarked about the unaltered beauty of Sweet Briar.

Blandina Jones Skilton's hurried departure from Cuba and resettling in Florida in the 60's meant starting over quite literally. Her statement, "We have three sons, three wonderful daughters and six grandchildren and what more could we ask?" reflects the happy serenity she felt as she told us about finding work and raising the family. One son is now in Santo Domingo at Epiphany Church.

Received a card this morning from Mary Templeton who is just back from China — she met Jane Lawder by chance in Shanghai. Another of our travellers is Hester Kraemer Avery who went with a landscape design critics group to study gardens in Spain and Morocco. She's now planning a March trip to the Eastern Mediterranean.

Also at reunion were: Marian Walker Alcaro who has fulfilled all course requirements for her doctorate at Drew University and is now doing research for her dissertation in the field of American literature; Janet Kimball Miller who put together our class scrapbook and passed the class secretary job on to me; she spent the summer in Atlantamont, NY and is being tempted to move to St. Simons, GA where her son lives; Lavaletta Dillon Wintzer and Fritz who forsook Delaware for three months in Wisconsin during the summer months.

Haven't heard recently from Alma Simmons Rountrey, who left reunion early in order to supervise Vacation Bible School for her church; or from Janet "Jean" Imbria Frey who didn't let difficulty walking keep her from reunion events.

Sad news was received from Katherine James Hall of the death of Isabel Anderson Comer in August. Isabel was a member of our reunion gifts committee and just last spring the Sylacauga, AL museum was renamed in her honor. Katherine and John are in St. Louis briefly after a stay in the desert at Boulders in Carefree, AR and go to John's Island, FL after Thanksgiving until mid-May.

One of our Californians, Virginia Cunningham Brookes and Val partook of a fabulous banquet at Blenheim Palace during their summer trip to England and Scotland plus France. She still volunteers at the Children's Hospital, enjoys opera and theatre and even college football games, and keeps up with five grandchildren. Another visitor to England was Jeanne DeLamarer Halverson, who with her Hawaii-based daughter drove around the countryside. Jeanne will be in Honolulu for Thanksgiving and then spend some time with son, Chris in San Francisco. She's expecting son, Pete to be with her for Christmas '85 in Winter Park, FL.

When Helen Carruthers Hackwell wrote that they had made their 19th trip to England and had an elegant dinner at Leeds Castle I began to think that 1935 needs a travel coordinator! Their trip followed an April visit in Charlottesville to see Emily Brown Carnan. Helen's days are filled with raising a grandson, playing tennis, and working at their church and the local Hospice group.

Roberta Cope Gerlach got in a cruise of the Greek Islands and visits to St. Augustine and the American Virgin Islands before hip replacement surgery last July. She and her husband do book talks and slide shows of their travels and have had to add a room to their house for storage and work. Barbara Benzinger Lindsley favors a less mobile way to travel — a month in Scottsdale, AR and five summer weeks in the mountains above Colorado Springs. She's a trustee for her church and does a lot of grandmothing for their daughter's girls who live just a block away. Her doctor son is doing research into arthritis, and her youngest was married in October.

We have a traditional rug hooker in our class, Marie Schroeder Packard who is hooking rugs for her children's homes. Her husband's health keeps them at home but they "do" the newsletter for their condo and play a lot of bridge. Also she's taking painting lessons. Another American crafter is Grace Langeler Irvine who is an accomplished (juried candidate) quilter. Seven grandchildren spent most of the summer with her and Vess in Ogunquit, ME.

Catharine Taylor Manning and Mary Templeton have had telephone conversations with Ruth Billman Lewis who is at home after two stays in intensive care. Catharine's camera work resulted in the sale of a 11 x 14 blow-up of her photo, Ogunquit Beach.

Our apologies are due Dorothy Young Patneau — we've spelled her married name incorrectly for years.

Dorothy Barnum Venter spent a month in New Zealand and Australia before returning for her granddaughter's college graduation and departure for a Peace Corps stint in Africa. Alison Dunne Harrison rejoices in being back in California, but is a bit wistful at giving up riding. She and Hunt were at Dartmouth for his 50th so couldn't be at SBC.

Frances Spiller Scott has retired from bank officer work; she and Mary Wynn Talbot live in the same Fort Worth, TX apartment complex. Genevieve Howell Gist was in Houston in the fall visiting her daughter, Carolyn, one of her five children. While there she saw Harriet Taylor Leo, her long-time friend who shared with her the tribulations of being away from her Kansas City home as a college freshman. Since Gen's husband's death she keeps busy doing volunteer work at the children's hospital and keeping track of their 15 grandchildren.

Martha Jane Gipe Earle wanted to be at reunion but her doctor said no. Her two living sons are on opposite coasts but one of the three grandchildren is also in Michigan. Betty Fox Moon missed reunion in favor of her 50th wedding anniversary trip to Spain. She and Warren lived in Saudi Arabia for four years ending in 1981. They were happy to get back home to Tucson and to see their "three great kids and five lovely grandchildren".

Mary Dodds Honeywell and Jim had a big 50th wedding anniversary bash, thrown by their three children, last summer; in October, the real date, Jim threw another, smaller party in Sarasota. Last March Mary went to London and Paris with their daughter and one daughter-in-law. Mary and Jim are very busy with their church, library, civic association, golf and bridge.

I'm still singing in our choir and pulling altar guild duty every two weeks. In between there is FISH, Meals on Wheels, DAR, and condominium business to be taken care of. Please put my address on a label and carry it with you as you travel, visit or stamp envelopes. I'm hoping there'll be news enough to put together a spring newsletter.

1939

President

Augusta Saul Farrier (Mrs. Frank F. Jr.), 1315 Lakewood Drive SW, Roanoke, VA 24015

Secretary

Elizabeth (Betsy) Campbell Gawthrop (Mrs. Robert S., Jr.), 800 Scnolltown Rd., West Chester, PA 19380

Fund Agent

Elizabeth (Betty) Barnes Bird (Mrs. Elizabeth B.), 3512 Sterling Ave., Alexandria, VA 22304

I am beginning to feel maternal toward each one of you. Such a peripatetic group I have never known!

Yvonne Leggett Dyer just called to say that she and Danny are to be off to Singapore "tomorrow", October 16, to see their 2 week old, third grandson.

She, Julie Gray Saunders Michaux and Betty Frazier Rinehart wonder if some of us, all of us, would put aside three social security checks towards our 50th. Invest it, whatever, it would be a good nest egg. Take it from there, Betty Barnes Bird.

Julie had a wonderful weekend at Sweet Briar to celebrate the successful conclusion of the Generations Campaign. The guests numbered 250 strong, including our classmates Anne Dearstyne Cornwell, Lee Montague Watts, Augusta Saul Ferrier and Sarah Belk Gambrell. Feel sure this will be written up elsewhere in this issue, but she so enjoyed meeting our new Dean, and seeing the Sweet Briar art collection in the now dedicated Anne Gary Pannell Center (the old refectory).

Ginger Wellford Farwell and husband, Sumner, celebrated their 38th anniversary with a grand tour of Europe ending in London where a son-in-law is head of Thames Broadcasting. They started in Amsterdam, then a boat trip up the Rhine for a day in Dusseldorf, then Basle, Florence and Rome. She says that Julie Worthington is ill.

Janet Thorpe's travels have not been far and wide, but she's covered the eastern seaboard. She is now taking French lessons so that may lead her farther.

From Long Beach, Washington, Marguerite Myers Glenn reports a dry season that almost ruined Ocean Spray cranberries, but they came through red and beautiful. She will go to the annual meeting of same in Florida. She has seven grandchildren.

There are those who are blessed and don't fully realize it. Snookie Robinson McGuire is one who does and her joyfulness is contagious. They have four grown children and eight grandchildren, the youngest being twins.

Boot Vanderbilt Crampton saw the Becker Nystrom match at Wimbledon before the great family reunion of only 14 of this year at Squam. Her daughter, Allison, is a Reverend and Julie, mother of 2, is working towards her PhD in social work. Though the Gulf at Naples, Florida ever beckons, as does the tennis court, she does give time to church, Youth Haven and Garden Club.

Ethel Hauber Crowe rented a flat in London for two weeks, and says that's the way to do it. Then Maine and Williamsburg. Her grandson is now at U. Va. Medical School, working hard, but enjoying it.

Mardie Hedill Smith and husband had a houseful of family most of the summer. A week of golf and R & R at New Springs, Virginia was welcome. They are hoping to take their two oldest grandchildren to Hawaii in June.

Kay Richards Belancey went camping with their young neighbors — reminiscent of her years as camper and councilor at Aloha. She and Bob also went to a reunion of his army group in Dallas. Come spring, they'll be off to England.

Tredy and granddaughter had a wonderful tour of Scotland and England this summer. With a daughter and family in Seattle, they criss-cross the country frequently. Stays in touch with Yvonne.

Audrey Siebert Snyder had an article in the November issue of Friends Journal, telling of the efforts of her cohorts to build a Quaker Meeting House.

Leila Bond Preston enjoys visiting her children and grandchildren in various California spots. Will reunite again with Marguerite Myers Glenn in Naples this February. Don't you all forget to look up Boot Vanderbilt Crampton.

As class secretary, Julie Ridgely Howe attended her 50th reunion at Bryn Mawr School in Baltimore. She has lost 22 pounds through Weight Watchers, and she's still at it. Her church, that needed people, has merged with a Youth Chapel Fellowship that needed a building, and the pews are filled. Now the singing re-sounds, accompanied by 3 guitarists and a pianist. She still writes her column for the weekly county newspaper and is secretary for the local Historical Society and 3 citizen groups. Her mother, 93½, died in June.

J. O. Sartor has her share of grandmothing, but continues her painting. She had a one-man show in Fort Worth, Texas, in October, numerous group exhibits and a three-man show in Shreveport; she has painted some tropical fish, and admits pride in a water color of the Grand Tetons in Wyoming where, obviously, they visited. Good-for you, J. O.

Nancy Beard Dix broke a vertebra and had a to wear a brace all summer. She and Parker have a new condominium in Bel Air, where they moved to be nearer their daughter, Anne, and family. And she is quite recovered.

Lottie Lewis Woollen, Gracey Luckett Bradley and Henri Mines Hart, the three graces, had their annual meeting this year in Colorado Springs and Santa Fe. Lottie is purring over her first grandchild.

Henri loved their coming to Colorado, where she lives, as do 2 sons. Her daughter, Jane, is in Minnesota. She is skipping to Vienna for New Year's. She plans to come to our 50th.

Lillian Neely Willis joined them before meeting husband, Pete, and they travelled on to Alaska, a country she considers fabulous. They plan to attend Pete's 50th at VMI, and she will be at ours — "The Lord willing and if the creek doesn't rise!"

Connie Wallace Price and Sam have been busy with tennis and the visiting of children. Jim and his family are in Flagstaff, Arizona.

Betty Barnes Bird's daughter was married in August.

Sweet Briar had a Bach, Handel, Scarlatti tercentenary for 3½ days, and Mary Jeff Willes Pearson revelled in it. She helped with 4H camp in August, and in October went visiting in Colorado Springs. She and Augusta Saul Farrier have been conferring on our class skit to wow our Sweet Briar sisters in '89. The two of them also went on a "Great Performance Tour" to NYC to hear 4 operas.

Augusta went to the dedication of the Anne Gary Pannell Center. She went with her brother and sister-in-law to Spain in June and melted to the charms of Madrid. Her oldest grandchild is 2nd year at Princeton.

Lee Montague Watts attended Sweet Briar festivities in October. I am impressed with how many of us do return. Do plan on that biggie in '89. The Watts have been building additions to their house for almost two years, so particularly enjoyed widespread visits to family.

Another visitor to Sweet Briar was Anne Benedict Swain to see Chips. Helen Mac gave them a lovely tour of the Sweet Briar Museum in the Boxwood Inn. They now have 2 grandsons and like it! They had a busy summer with a mini trip to Boston where they caught up with Anne's god-daughter, Ellie George Frampton's youngest. See how tightly knit our Sweet Briar family is.

Jane Holden Walker moved October 22 from Palo Alto, California to their condominium at Kaha Lani, #208, 4460 Nehe Road, Lihue, Kawai, Hawaii. Sounds mighty good to me.

Jean McKenney Stoddard in Madison, Connecticut got socked by Hurricane Gloria, but realizes that it could have been worse. They were in Italy for three months last winter and also spent a few weeks in London.

Still painting, showing, and selling is Eleanor Claffin Williams. What with 11 grandchildren, 7 in Massachusetts and 4 in Maine, time does not hang on her hands. She also belongs to a stimulating Discussion Club in Cohasset.

Among the travelers is Bennett Wilcox Bartlett who just returned from Bermuda. Anne Dearstyne Cornwell was in Washington, D.C. visiting her children, plus DAR activities, and they had a long chat.

Bettina Bell Emmons, writing from Pocasset, Massachusetts sadly reports the death of her second husband, Guy Emmons, of Philadelphia, after only one year together. He lived in Naples, Florida, and she will be returning there. Her three daughters live in New England, and she lives on the Cape in the summer. She has four new stepchildren, who have been wonderfully supportive.

Patricia Balz Vincent and her husband were in England May and June to see family, including his 90-year-old mother.

Because Kitty Lawder Stephenson was busy getting ready for their younger daughter's house wedding and reception, her husband celebrated his 70th birthday hosting 70 friends at a restaurant. The daughter will live in L.A. Three other daughters, son and daughter-in-law, with 5 children among them, are still in Greenville. Lucky you.

Bitsy Gordon Jeffers saw Ann Parks Lu Martin and Margaret Ballard Whitehurst while in Virginia Beach in July. Bitsy and Bill visited Lake George and had a tour of the state parks in September.

Betty Frazier Rinehart's son, Andy, thought hamburgers would sell well in Denver for there was no competition. But he hadn't reckoned on the bad winters where no one goes out. He is now doing well in the mortgage world, and has proudly presented 3 grandchildren for Betty.

And from Ruth MacFarlane Debevoise comes the word of no more sailing on the Chesapeake, but continued tennis, sewing and winters at Vero Beach. Their two daughters live in Washington, one a free-lance writer, the other, mother of 2.

Katharine Bonsall Strong had a family reunion at their summer home in Noank, CT, last summer; all 4 of their kids came, including Bonnie and her 2 sons who are living in Johannesburg, South Africa. Katharine had a superb 33-day European opera trip in the fall and will be spending part of the winter in Noank.

I don't do anything very well, but certainly have fun trying. How sweet is to be still able to play golf, tennis, bridge, be considered sane enough to serve on a few committees. We had a trip to Morocco, with a night under the brilliant stars on the desert. A foot to Martha's Vineyard, and Nag's Head, and spent the night with Ann Parks, indomitable, and resourceful as ever after her bad fall from a ladder two years ago. She had a fine time in Egypt with her sister last year. Ann is treasurer of her church, and agronomist extraordinaire. Also, like Bitsy, I supped with Lee Martin and Margaret Ballard Whitehurst. There was no math major when we were at SBC, but Lee took as many related courses as she could, and has been in the world of math with delight ever since. Margaret has 4 sisters and one daughter, and that daughter has 5 daughters.

Very best wishes to you all.

Thank you for responding to the post cards so promptly. It made my job much easier to be able to write most of the "Notes" before leaving for Italy and Switzerland. Thanks to what I remembered of Art Appreciation and Renaissance Painting at SBC, I fully enjoyed Venice, Ravenna, Assisi, Siena and Florence. God, however, made his own cathedral when he created Switzerland. I am still doing church work, teaching environmental awareness to inner city children and playing with my dogs.

Sarah Adams Bush is excited about the coming marriage of their son Stuart to a lovely lady from Chattanooga. The wedding will be in Dallas in Nov. Ouja and Bob were with their daughter Jeannette and her little girl, Sarah, when Sarah celebrated her first birthday. They also see a lot of daughter Louise's boy, Rob.

Brooks Barnes went to Scandinavia in July, and especially enjoyed the beauty of the mountains and fiords in Norway. Her mother broke her hip, but is walking again, and, as Brooks says, "Thank goodness! She is cooking again." Louise Woodruff Angst (Weezie) has been hospitable and helpful to Brooks's two nephews, who are setting up business in St. Louis. Brooks's brother and his wife visited Fayette and Buddy Willott in their beautiful house filled with antiques in Louisville.

One of Dorothy Campbell Maher's daughters has moved to Germany with her Air Force husband, and "Dottie's" first granddaughter has just entered Mt. Holyoke.

Delores Cheatham Jones met Primrose Craven (Primmy) last summer on a plane from Pittsburgh to Boston. Dodie was going on vacation to their favorite spot, Maine. Harry had to have surgery in Sept., but is fine now. She still works at her painting and has had some very successful showings.

Mary Christian Mulligan returned from a wonderful trip to Israel and Egypt to find her 92-year-old mother had broken her hip. So instead of spending five months working at the Chalfonte Hotel in Cape May, N.J., Diddi could only be there five weeks. Diddi is now living in WV.

Katherine Doar Jones has just returned from playing golf with three friends. They shared one half set of rented clubs on the links on the Island of Lewis in the Outer Hebrides. It was a fabulous trip to Scotland. Kitty has a new grandbaby, Sara Dabney Tisdale, born March 26th. Daughter Kathy (SBC '71) has gone into the private practice of psychology in Petersburg, VA.

Janice Fitzgerald Wellons recently returned from a cruise on the Royal Odyssey, which included several days in London, then on to Scandinavia, Finland and Russia. Last year Janice and Jimmy cruised from Spain around the northern Mediterranean to Athens, Greece, then on around the eastern Mediterranean, ending in Egypt. Janice still teaches some piano, especially to her three grandsons who all seem to have an ear for music. Elizabeth is a dancer. Daughter Bennett was married a year ago. Jimmy still practices law and does all the yardwork.

Elizabeth Dichman Smith has given up her demanding job at Rutgers; finds it strange to be on her own time. For October, however, she plans to vacation in Italy. Warren, Beth's third son, has finished four years in the Navy and is now back at Yale for his final graduate year of architecture. Her daughter is in Paris looking for a teaching job in English.

Dorothy Friday volunteers every Friday at the wonderful St. Louis Zoo in the Friend's Office, telling people how they can become a "Friend" or adopt an animal (pay for feeding and care). She is going to Spain and Portugal with three widow friends for 24 days in October.

Elizabeth Hall Schwartz visited Sally Bryan Allen in May, and Sally returned the visit in the fall to Tish's Texas coast home at Rockport. So far Tish and Sy have flown to Puerto Rico, N.C., Florida, Toronto, Montreal, Quebec, California and Maine, between business trips.

Marguerite Hume had planned a trip to Greece last summer, but had to call it off because of the hijacking at the Athens airport. She enjoyed Rockport, MA.

Ann Jacobs Pakradooni has created "Floating Fantasy Tours." These are a series of tours, some barge trips through France and England, others cruises down the Danube and trips through the Virgin Islands and the Colonial South, and some even to Africa and the Far East. These tours feature specially planned events along the way, and congenial people, so that they become like delightful house parties.

Nancy Jameson Glass writes that she and Bob spent 5 weeks driving from western New York all the way to California, up the west coast and back home. It was the first time either had been to California. Both sons live nearby, and Nancy sees her three grandchildren often. Another is arriving shortly.

Esther Jett Holland has confined her travels this year to VA Beach to visit her sons, to Newport News to reminisce with Brac (Betty Braxton Preston) and to SBC for the Oct. dedication of the Anne Gary Pannell Center. She and Hugh did make it to Michigan to visit daughter Martha, whose two little girls will be spending Sept. with the Hollands. Later, daughter Jett's son and daughter will be coming for a weekend.

Now that the summer crowds have dispersed, Primrose Johnston Craven.

is enjoying long walks on the Cape Cod beaches with her half dachshund and half beagle puppy. Last summer her grandchildren were with her for six weeks, and she taught them to swim. Prim is still president of the Cape Cod A.A.U.W. The membership keeps growing, 290 members at present.

Prentiss Jones Hale goes to the Cape each summer. Son Simon lives only a half hour away in Higganum. Tom has bought a business in Amherst, MA. Sam is in Los Angeles designing and decorating. Prentiss's mother, age 86, lives nearby and still is in great shape. Prentiss continues to be heavily involved in church work and Recording for the Blind.

Bonitee Key Garrett had a short trip to visit friends in Carefree, AZ, but mostly she and Gavin have stayed near home to welcome the arrival of a new granddaughter and to await the arrival of another grandchild, making a total of eleven grandchildren.

Anne McJunkin Briber reports that Frank is completely retired, but still makes an occasional trip to the Far East. They spend eight months a year at Amelia Is. and four months in Milwaukee, where Junk and Frank enjoy two grandchildren and the children's parents.

Caroline Miller McClintock thankfully reports a quiet and very satisfying year. Her mother at 87 is very well. Gales and Caroline, their children and their families are happy, busy and well.

Ann Noyes Autrey is enthusiastic about going to SBC for the Dedication of the Pannell Center and the celebration of the conclusion of the Generations campaign. She is looking forward to seeing the second floor of Monticello and the Jefferson house outside Lynchburg. Ann is treasurer of her local SBC Club and her Colonial Dames Group. She and Ray plan a trip to New England in Oct. and another to Nashville for Thanksgiving with their daughter and three granddaughters.

Nancy Pingree Drake and Em are off on a three day fishing trip, and then at the end of Oct., they will be going to London for pure pleasure. Ping's tenth grandchild is due to arrive in three weeks. Peter, no. 2 son, is starting as Headmaster of Bemont School in Deerfield, MA.

Roselia Hazard Potter had a delightful time visiting family for five weeks in Rhode Island. She talked with Judy Snow ("a gallant lady") while there. Posy says that hurricane Elena caused damage to trees, shrubs and beach, but all in all they were very lucky.

Harriet Pullen Phillips and husband are enjoying retirement, volunteering at church and the hospital. They took a three-week bike tour in Europe and especially enjoyed Holland and the Mosel Valley and the cathedrals.

Sally Walker Rogers (SBC '42) spent several days with Page Ruth Foster and Jim on her way to Australia. They all attended a gala cocktail party given to Tookie (Karen Kniskern White) and Bob in celebration of the White's 40th wedding anniversary. Page's second grandson arrived in April.

Byrd Smith Hunter has just returned from a delightful cruise around Nova Scotia and the islands off the Gaspé Peninsula, up the St. Lawrence and the Saguenay R. and then on to Quebec and Montreal. Last spring she met with Esther Jett Holland at Brac Preston's in Newport News for a delicious lunch and good conversation.

Judith Snow Benoit writes that her youngest son, James, is getting married to a lovely girl, Jamie. Judy has moved to a condominium, where she doesn't have to worry about lawn mowing and snow shovelling. Her new address is: 14 Applegate Lane, Falmouth, ME 04105.

Dorothy Stauber McCarthy will be taking a cruise in Oct. from Ft. Lauderdale to Bermuda, the Azores, Madeira and Malaga, and then on to Naples to meet their daughter, Bonnie Anderson, an NBC News correspondent in Rome. Last year they visited Bonnie in Beirut and left the day of the US Embassy bombing. Earlier this year Dot and Joseph took another cruise with friends through the Panama Canal and up to Los Angeles.

Margaret Swindell Dickerman is busy with her work at the newspaper and civic duties. She was recently named to the board of trustees of St. Mary's College in Raleigh. After a pleasant summer, she had a good trip to England in late August with the NC Museum of History Associates.

Louise Woodruff Angst has been enjoying watching her two grandchildren cavort like fish in their pool. This summer Weezie loved being involved with flower shows. John has retired and they moved to a condo apartment on the beach in Delray Beach, FL.

Charlotte Garber Rudolph and John spent 5 weeks in Spain last spring. They alternate living in their house in Birmingham and their house on the Gulf Beach. Jim, MD, youngest, is practicing anesthesiology in Birmingham. Frances, daughter, lives in New York. Charlotte would love to see some SBC classmates when she visits Frances.

Catharine Bracher Leggett is complaining about having, for the first time, the worst trouble deciding what to pack for a trip. Skip will be flying to Athens, boarding a cruise ship to cross the Black Sea and then on up to Russia.

Irene Mitchell Moore had a wonderful trip to Paris and London in the summer. Clare Eager Mathai continues to serve on three hospital boards. She has added cross-country skiing to her sports interests, and is taking bridge lessons and babysitting for her daughter.

Bravo! Your response has been wonderful. Funny too: as, for example this from Linda McKay Stewart:

"I live in a loft in the Chelsea area of NYC all week and down in the swamps of the Shrewsbury River in Rumson, N.J. on weekends. EXCEPT, when I'm travelling which is often and usually far since I work full-time as a travel writer, selling my pieces throughout the U.S. and Canada to Metropolitan dailies. Husband is still with the N.Y. Times, our youngest at Columbia. We have five children between us and six grandchildren. When I can I take a grandchild, solo. With one 8-year-old I camped on the streets of London overnight for Di and Charles's wedding. Had a great view of it all and neither 8-year old nor I will ever forget it..."

Also from New York came a newsy letter with photo-clippings from Margaret-Ellen White van Buren, whose mother's family, the Mores, made the NY Times when they gathered 200 strong with bagpipes and sackraces in Rosbury, NY. In July "Birdhead's" family also had a bicentennial celebration in Walton, NY, her hometown. She included articles showing Jennebelle Bechtel Whyte's husband, William Hollingsworth Whyte, as a 'Keen City watcher' whose observations and strategies on urban social life are of interest to city planners, particularly those planning to rebuild Times Square, and JBW's daughter Alexandra, a student at Barnard, modeling one of her mother's original costumes created of rare museum fabrics. The article, which featured Jennebelle, was in last spring's Times.

In late September I attended my first Alumnae Council meeting and found it most rewarding. There's beauty all around, still, and of particular interest is the old rectory newly converted to the Anne Gary Pannell Center. Ann Marshall Whitley plans to add a sculpture garden to the Museum she and Helen Mac run on the lower level of old Boxwood Inn; the garden will include archeological findings from SBC digs. In addition, Ann finds time to assist in the restoration of Sweet Briar House (she's found rare cabinets and furnishings all over the campus), and to speak to Alumnae clubs from New York to Winston Salem about Sweet Briar's Treasures.

Kay Fitzgerald Booker described her October visit to SBC with husband Lewis for the four-day Generations Celebration as a "mini-reunion", having encountered Jean Old (Norfolk), Kay Weisiger Osborne (Salisbury, N.C.), Judy Burnett Halsey and John (Richmond), Eleanor Bosworth Shannon (Charlottesville), Ann Marshall Whitley (from Amherst) and her mother, Edith (SBC '21), and Frankie Gardner Curtis. Among those attending the dedication of the Anne Gary Pannell Center were Martha VonBriesen, "Dan" Boone, Helen Mac, and Lois Ballenger. Kay and Lewis then drove to Raleigh, N.C. to visit son Fritz who is working on his PhD in Botany at N.C. State. Their daughter, Mary Ames (SBC '82) is working for a Masters in History at the University of Delaware and also a certificate in Museum Studies.

Judy Burnett Halsey phoned from Richmond to tell me of the approaching (December) marriage of her (SBC '74) daughter, Mary Shaw Halsey, and the exciting new job of other daughter, Eugenia. Having been with a TV station in Roanoke, Va., Eugenia will be chief correspondent for Cable Network News in Chicago.

From Singapore Martha Ann ("Mopsy") Frances Burrows wrote: "Sage and I are beginning our fifth year in...this small Island country...he manages the southeast Asian area for Brown and Root, Inc...We enjoy the year-round summer and have lots of visitors who want to experience this exciting part of the world..."

Sara Ann McMullen Lindsey spent April in China, had lunch with Ann Colston Leonard at her house in Martha's Vineyard in July and was in England with Doug in August, where she ran into ABC's Jackie Wood. She found "Colston" to be "a serious painter, selling lots of things." Sara Ann worked on the Garden Club of Virginia and North American Lily Society shows and is on the Society's Board.

Does Martha Budd Shelnett have to remind me that "this is the year of the big 60"? She spent her birthday in July in Mexico, where her parents live. "Mother was 80", she wrote, "so we celebrated with a joint party with my four daughters, Ann Barry, from N.Y., Jane Ambrose, Seattle, Barbara Trabka, Olympia, Wash., Sarah, and three grandchildren and other friends and relatives..."

Maria Gregory Tabb continues as president of "a general insurance agency, Grinnan, Harris, Tabb and Co., Inc., which has more than 25 employees and two small branch offices. New board positions are on Museum of the Confederacy, and Prestwold Foundation in Mecklenburg Co.; Maria is also furnishings chairman for Wilton, and program chairman for the Antiquarian Society of Richmond..."

Among the new generation of natural scientists are Nan Hart Stone's son, Sheridan, and GINNA WALKER Christian's daughter, Virginia Christian Beach. GINNA visited Virginia in Charleston, S.C. where she has started a company called "Charleston Wildlife Watch", which leads natural history tours of the Barrier Islands and plantations in that area. Sheridan Stone, a National Fisheries Service biologist, has spent 6 winters in the Antarctic doing chilly research on the Leopard Seal and at this moment (Oct.) has been called in to direct local, state, and federal efforts to save Humphrey the misdirected and much publicized Whale. When last heard from, both Humphrey and Sheridan were in/at Shag Slough where the whale was resisting any attempts to coax him back to the Pacific.

Julia Holt Coyle and George were about to leave Charleston, W.Va. for their other home in Venice, Florida, when she wrote. This past summer they visited their son, Clay, and his wife in Vermont. Their daughter Lucy (SBC '71) is now assistant manager of Citibank, N.A. in NYC. Julia's precocious year-old granddaughter, Kinsley Holt Gilkeson, is the joy of her two Sweet Briar grand/great-grandmothers.

New grad (Masters, Spanish) Aimee DesPland McGirt is happy to be over her comprehensives after seven summers — 3 in Spain, 4 in the U.S. — spent on course work.

Alex Marcoglou Tully spent five glorious weeks in Greece — three on an island with her 86-years-young and active mother — and found that fewer Americans were visiting there since the hijacking situation.

Several classmates and/or husbands are taking early retirement and enjoying its benefits. Pat Hassler Schuber and Jack are catching up on travel. They visited the Yucatan last year (wonderful time) and hope to see more ancient ruins in Egypt on a North African tour now in the planning-stage. They spend a lot of time in the mountains of N.C. where they have a small house, a convenient drive from their Charlotte home. She and Bob spent three weeks in September visiting National Parks out West. Pat sees her sister-in-law Emily Schuber Carr and Irving Brenizer Johnston often.

Both Jackie Stilwell Clarke and David are enjoying retirement, he from law, she from teaching English and History in both public and private schools. She also developed Afro-Asian studies programs, then was a special ed. administrator for county day care centers and infant development programs. She has written and directed three musical dramas and/or comedies for New Hope Pa. Art Center. Of her three children, two are in grad school and the eldest is a designer and builder of fine furniture near Amherst, MA.

Katherine Weisiger Osborne thinks classmates keep getting better and better at each return visit to SBC; loved her Oct. Generations Celeb. weekend. She and Bob spent three weeks in September visiting National Parks out West. She often sees Saravette Royster Trotter in Salisbury. Saravette's daughter, Olivette, was married in May, '85.

Maria Tucker Bowerfind's nest is not empty yet, but they're off and flying: two are back in residence — the eldest son working, Jane preparing for Med school — and the youngest son, a high school senior, is looking at colleges. The other son, Tucker, a teacher of the learning disabled, lives nearby. Maria will see Mary Stuart McGuire Gilliam and Eleanor Bosworth Shannon in Charlottesville in October, Joan McCoy Edmonds, Sarah Bryan Glascock and Evie White Spearman in Birmingham, and Liz Ripley Davey in November.

Both Bazzie and Liz are experiencing the joy of a new grandchild. Bazzie's first, Caroline Shannon Salem, was born in September. Also in September — Liz's (first) grandson, Christopher Davey Mellinger, was born to daughter Betsy in Ft. Wayne, Ind. where Liz spent a week happily babysitting. Her middle daughter has moved to Florida where she is with American Friends Service for a year, in Indiantown (near Palm Beach); Liz's youngest, Anne, is a sophomore at Vanderbilt. While visiting her, Liz and Bud had lunch with Katherine Street Sharp, who showed them around Nashville and her lovely home there. Liz and Bud took their whole family to Hawaii in June, where their 10-day vacation was extended to 2 weeks, courtesy of an airline strike.

Katie Street Sharp and her friend Mary Henderson (SBC '49) have a ceramic business together, making custom lamps, vases, casseroles, etc. Katherine wrote from her daughter's home in Oklahoma City where she was visiting. Her son Tam married an English girl with two small children last year and they live in Nashville. Elder son, Alf and his family (3 grandchildren) live about 50 miles away. He has gained quite a reputation as a furniture maker, mostly reproductions. Katie looks forward to building a smaller house in the country someday, and is planning a trip to England with friends in December.

Talented Barbara Golden Pound combines painting and traveling, filling her sketchbook along the way. Right now her star subject is new grandson — child of youngest son Jim, an engineer on the Gulf, married to a Mobile girl and living in LA. Middle son, Ted, a lawyer, married a Macan, GA girl last year and they are now expecting grandchild #2; oldest son, Garry received his doctorate in Comparative Arts at Ohio U. in Athens, GA and is a portraitist. Barbara enjoys her painting friends and their painting-houseparties, one in N.C., one in Rhode Island, and a third to be held in a castle in Italy come Spring!

Ginger Barron Summer wrote telling of a beach party she's having in November in Ponte Vedra: Jean Old, Jacquie Murray Sanner, Shirley Levis Johnson, Ann Marshall Whitley, Eleanor Crumrine Stewart, Ann Brinson Nelson, and — she hopes — Margaret Redfern and Kay Munter Derr (Irish), are coming. Ginger and Lloyd are both looking forward to his retirement, but he'll still be with his bank as chairman of the board. He continues with the Board of Regents of the University System of GA. They spend their leisure time trout fishing in the North GA mountains or on their boat on the Tennessee River. Next year if they get to the Fair in Van-couver, they hope to see Meg Dawson Hellyer, who lives on the coast of Washington State, travels and enjoys sailing with her husband, retired.

Due to early retirement of Anne Burkhart Block's husband, Frank, they are returning to Atlanta. She was happy to report their first grandchild, Frank E. Block III, born in September.

Mac and I took a Danube River-countries cruise (Russian ship and crew) from Vienna to the Black Sea and Istanbul, with The Johns Hopkins Alums in June, followed by a family reunion with our five children, four spouses-in-law and six grandchildren in West Virginia. I am now back in the classroom at Goucher College, my third semester — very challenging. We just bought a boat — our third — in Palm Beach and are making plans to bring it up the Intra-Coastal Water-way as far as GA or maybe S.C. in January, the rest of the way in March. Will accept any safe-harbor offer!

Elisabeth Brawner Bingham (Mrs. William), 811 NW 3rd Ave., Delray Beach, FL 33444

I love you all! I had about 40 responses to my plea for news. Remember, we will celebrate our 35th (shh! Don't say it too loudly) Reunion on Memorial Day Weekend. It promises to be fun, so come and renew old friendships...and make some new ones!

Toddy Barton called long distance to say that she was alive and well in Chicago. She is director of the midwest office of the Shakespeare Globe Center, a nonprofit international organization devoted to promoting the appreciation and performance of Shakespeare's plays. Toddy raises funds, does PR, and plans special programs for schools. Ultimate goal of the group: to reconstruct the Globe Theatre on the original site in London. Toddy recently attended the 30th anniversary party of Sue Ostrander Hood and husband Lloyd.

Carol Rolston Toulmin writes from the Circle T that the soybean crop was good. When not overseeing the acres, Carol has been traveling: a summer cruise to Alaska, a trip to Boston in the fall, the Virgin Islands in the winter, London in the spring. Carol derives great satisfaction from volunteer work at the senior citizens' residence in Montgomery. She often sees her niece (by marriage) Nedra Greer Stimpson, who lives in Mobile. Nedra and husband Ben have recently built a country house on the banks of the Alabama River, where they go to hunt. Daughter Nedra is working on her degree in educational media at U. of Ala.; Ben, Jr. graduated from U. of Ala. and is now working in his father's lumber business; Mary and Greer are both undergraduates at U. of Ala. and that leaves John, a senior in high school. Nedra says she is "happy and content" — and busy, too! Ruth Magee Peterson sums it up for all of us when she writes, "I feel as if I must be getting older, but really didn't notice exactly when." Ruth's husband Walt is considering early retirement from Monsanto. Youngest daughter, Diane will graduate from Purdue this year with a degree in Industrial Engineering. Ruth works as a high-school librarian in the audio-visual dept. and does volunteer work at the St. Louis Zoo.

Mary Emery Barnhill writes from Cazenovia, N.Y. that it was the best thing she ever did for herself when she got a master's in rehabilitation counseling in 1978. She is the director of a state-funded project for Planned Parenthood, and supervises difficult cases in her town's social service agency. Mary and husband, Dick will be in London from Dec. '86-May '87. They bought a home in Florida and plan to winter there. The four Barnhill children are scattered from San Francisco to Syracuse.

Seymour Laughon Rennolds sent news of her daughter's accomplishments: oldest, Caroline Rennolds Millbank, has a new book, Couture, a bonus selection of the Literary Guild; middle daughter Amie is an architect in N.Y.; and youngest, Margaret, is an assistant editor at art-book publisher, Harry Abrams. Seymour says when she goes to N.Y., she takes them all shopping at Bloom-inghamdale's.

Most of us have two cars in the garage, but only Lynne McCullough Gush can boast two Steinways in the living room. Lynne teaches piano and chamber music when not practicing or performing herself. Her husband, Gerry, has been a public practitioner of Christian Science for five years and has had two articles published by the Board in Boston. Lynne also plays tennis and attends ballet class three times a week.

Ann Yellot (also a SB alumna) sent news of her mother, Ann Benet Yellot, "who never fills out things." "Ben" may be described, literally and figuratively, as "The Galloping Grandmother." She has been successfully showing her thoroughbred horse in both horse trials and dressage, and also keeps "tight rein" on two grandchildren. In addition, Ben devotes time to Riding for the Handicapped and a number of environmental-conservation concerns. Mother and daughter ride together every day.

Etta Craig Dick Shurley and husband Harry have three daughters, two sons-in-law and three grandchildren. They share family activities in Rock Hill, SC. The Shurleys are planning a trip to London this year.

Ann Red Barstow announces that she has made the move from big house to smaller townhouse and has redecorated with all those things she could never have when children were underfoot — ie. white carpeting! Ann plays in two tennis leagues, has five grandchildren and finds life "beautiful."

Nan Snoke Garret and Bob moved to Princeton, NJ a year ago where Bob has a securities trading business. Their oldest son Bob is married, lives in Seattle, and works for Drexel-Burnham; married daughter, Tracy, lives in Needham, MA, and has one child and another on the way; son John graduated from SMU last year and is living at home while job hunting. Nan and Bob traveled to the Greek Islands last year. Nan has her real-estate license, and keeps busy with tennis, interior design and family.

From faraway Seattle, Marcy Staley Marks writes that she will not be able to get to reunion — if all goes well, she and husband, John, will be spending six months in Italy on sabbatical leave.

Margie Works Gibbs has two grandchildren and keeps busy with a part-time job and volunteer work as a library trustee and a church elder in her hometown, Youngstown, OH. Last summer, she spent a week visiting Margery Davidson Rucker in Newport News.

Dot Brown Smith lives in SC. Widowed five years ago, she is busy with travel, church and club work and bridge. The last of her three sons was married recently.

Sue Bauman Gill lives near Roanoke where husband, Bill, is vice-president of a printing plant. Sue shows and raises Labrador retrievers. Three days a week, she does medical transcription for a rheumatologist. Son Paul is a pediatrician. The Gills have three grandchildren and two more are expected.

From Richmond comes news that Mary Pease Fleming, Anne Sheldon Taylor and Seymour Laughon Rennolds regularly walk together — both for exercise and gossip. Pease and Rives have a granddaughter who lives in Charleston and two college-age children: a son at UVA and a daughter at RMWC.

Susan Taylor Hubbard's daughter Caty graduated from SBC last year; her other daughter, Jane, attends Kenyon, and son, Cliff, is at Clemson.

Janet Broman Dingle spent a busy summer before and after her daughter Sue's marriage. Bromo visited her sister, Joan Wright, SBC '56, and her parents, in Florida last summer.

Ruth Oddy Meyer and husband, Ed, went to England on the QEII for some deserved vacation last fall, after the takeover battle for TWA. Both of their sons are married, and Ruth is able to accompany Ed on his many worldwide trips.

Our class president, Jean Randolph Bruns urges us all to come back to reunion. Randle has started her own real-estate business in Bath Co. (VA), as well as continuing to open her home in Warm Springs for "Bed & Breakfast." Her son, Bryan, is in Thailand doing doctoral research, and daughter, Mary, lives in C'ville with her two children while taking graduate courses at UVA. Randle enjoyed a month-long European trip last summer.

Happy news from Pauline Nichols, who, after 19 years of divorced life, remarried last fall. She is now Mrs. Darrell Holmes and lives in CA. Pauline has three children, three step-children, and assorted grandchildren.

Peg Seaman Bentley, gave up volunteer work and "reformatted" herself. She works for General Electric Consulting Services as a programmer/analyst and technical writer. Peg went back to school to earn a second B.A. in computer science. The Bentley household has one college-age child, one high-school student, and a daughter who is a special education teacher...and a grandchild is expected soon.

Katherine Phinzy Mackie visited her children in Washington, DC and also had a reunion with Mary Staley Marks. They both hoped to find Cindy Wyman Richardson.

"Sis" Hayden DeWolfe's husband, Jim, retired from DuPont and is now in his second career with a retirement village corporation. Their daughter, Thelma, graduated from Sewanee last year and is teaching English in Smithfield, VA. Younger daughter, Elizabeth, is a theatre major at Eckerd College. Sis is active in church and community affairs in Wilmington.

Betty Browder Nibley began a new job as a reference librarian at George Washington U. in DC. last fall. She met Nancy Pesek Rasenberger at their "lush new A & P." (We frequent only the best places!) Betty corresponds with Mary Kraus Pierson who is a librarian in the California school system.

Jo Williams Fraser and Bob sold their big house with all its lawn, and moved to a mountaintop with a view. Jo is busy with work at the Spain Rehabilitation Center (for spinal-cord injuries) and takes painting classes at the Birmingham Museum. Other activities include "a bit of medical illustration and a lot of golf!" Bob and she have eight grandchildren — all under the age of five!

As Scheduling Secretary for Governor Dukmejian of California, Sue Lockley Glad is responsible for screening and recommending all public appearances for the governor, and coordinating all the logistics. Sue still has time for husband, Ned, who practices law in Los Angeles. Their daughter Tessy lives in Arkansas; daughter Amy is special assistant to the Secretary of Environmental Affairs for California, and son, Bill, attends Stanford.

Betty Brawner Bingham attended the American Society of Travel Agents convention in Rome last fall, then went on to Spain, Austria and Hungary. Betty runs travel agencies and manages several office buildings in West Palm Beach. Her oldest son has two masters degrees and is a biochemical engineer; another son is an engineer in New Orleans and the youngest is an undergraduate. As our class fund agent, Betty urges us all to "give what we can...but see if we can have 100% participation."

Monna Simpson MacLellan lives in Bronxville, NY and has been married for over 32 years. She met husband, George, in summer stock on Nantucket. George has retired from the NY state public schools and now freelances as a theatrical technical director. They are both active in community theatre projects. Monna worked at the Museum of Natural History for 11 years helping to prepare The Hall of the Peoples of Asia. She is currently the assistant to the National Coordinator of Youth Ministries of the Episcopal Church. Son, Scott lives in Texas; daughter Laurie teaches ballet in Florida, and youngest, George, is attending college.

As for Joan Hess Michel — daughter, Jennifer, is completing her master's in Early Childhood Education, and two sons are attending college.

Patty Lynas Ford continues her work at Stanford Medical Center in cancer epidemiology. Her husband, Dick, has been part-time interim rector at St. Mark's in Palo Alto, CA, as well as continuing work with his Hospice Ministry which trains volunteers to care for the chronically and terminally ill. Patty and Dick suffered a great loss when their eldest son Dick died suddenly last year. Our loving thoughts and prayers are with them.

Another sad note. Terry Faulkner Phillips, daughter of Terry Faulkner Phillips, died last September after a fifteen-year battle with anorexia nervosa. All of us share Terry's loss and send our deepest sympathy and prayers.

Reunion was wonderful again. Most of my information is gleaned from your excellent responses in the scrapbook. For me, the greatest excitement was just being with all of my roommates again after 30 years. Our morning hike to the Monument and thence to "the top of the world," made 1955 seem like last week! Dianne Verney Greenway was back for her first reunion and promised to make 1990. She is living in Greenwich, CT, where she owns and operates a bookkeeping and financial counseling service. She is also involved in volunteer alcoholism counseling. Her daughters are nearby — Virginia in Brighton, MA, working as an occupational therapist at Mass. General Hospital School and Anna, a bank loan officer in Marblehead. Son Jim is a landscape gardener in Maui. Didi Stoddard is living in Carlisle, MA, and keeps busy traveling, gardening, golfing, cooking, playing tennis and teaching math. On a full time basis, she caters to a menagerie of cats and basset hounds! Barbara McLamb Lindemann is still doing her thing on the west coast. She and Paul own and operate a Document Delivery service in L.A. Once a year Paul springs her for two or three weeks so that I'll have a traveling companion. We are still fairly compatible roommates!

Other roommates returning after a long absence included Nancy Anderson Shepard and Charlotte Taylor Miller, and Nancy Clapp Cudlip and Betsy Stevens Sutton. Nancy Shepard is a real estate Sales Associate in Philadelphia and spends her spare time gardening and dreaming of fabulous trips like the one she and Paul took to Italy a year ago. Their children are both in college — John at Drexel U. and Mary at Colby in Waterville, ME. Charlotte is living in Round Hill, VA, and, after 25 years in NYC, is enjoying country life, gardening, church and civic affairs and is staying active as a fund-raising consultant. Her children are scattered now. Helen is married and working as a family counselor in Jackson, TN, and Keene is in Atlanta working in commercial real estate. Charlotte and Nancy had a super roommate reunion with Ginger Finch-Packham in September, 1984, at the Shepards'. They told us that since they saw her, Ginger has retired (from CSIRO, an Australian Scientific Organization), married (Angus Packham), and built a new home

(in Wildwood, near South Grafton, NSW, Australia)! Nancy Cudlip has embarked on a new career in Westport, CT. She passed the state CPA examination in March and is working as an accountant at Walter C. King Associates, P.C. Betsy is still busy with hospital auxiliary work and she and John planned to spend the summer waiting for daughter, Anne, to present them with their first grandchild.

We had to visit fast with Betty Sanford Molster, Peggy West Valentine and Emily Hunter Slingluff who drove from Richmond just for the picnic with their respective husbands, Chuck, Henry and Craig, a truly handsome group. I suspect Chuck Molster planned it that way so he wouldn't miss the results of the anonymous questionnaire and once again, we enjoyed his comments! Betty stays busy with volunteer work, tennis, gardening and daughter, Jane, the lone fledgling still in the nest. Peggy and Henry have almost finished educating their brood — only Ned is still at UVA — and have more time for travel, tennis and dancing. Emily and Craig are doing plenty of traveling too, now that Molly and Craig Jr. have both graduated from UVA. Craig Jr. also graduated from UVA Medical School and is an academic general surgery resident at Duke Hospital. Molly is managing an interior decorating shop at Virginia Beach.

The scrapbook also brought news from several people who weren't at reunion and from whom we haven't heard in a long time. Susanna Bernard Odence writes that although her own family is grown (Robin is in Arlington, MA, working in physical therapy, Philip is with Teradyne Systems Dynamics in Boston), she still enjoys working with young children at Headstart, day care centers and school libraries. Larry is in foreign sales with Freeport MacMoran in New York and Sue loves being free to travel with him all over the world. She also keeps up her art work, piano and writing.

Jere Campbell Robertson describes herself as a professional volunteer and is active with Planned Parenthood, Women's Haven, Food Bank and the Jewel Charity Ball. On top of that she finds time for tennis, skiing, jogging, knitting and reading. Both boys are grown and on their own — Billy at Columbia Graduate School and Douglas in Ft. Worth.

Cary Fox Fisher is working for Dell Publishing Co. as an administrative assistant to the editors of Books for Young Readers. She and Peter live in Oyster Bay, NY, and have one child (Elizabeth) left in school (UVA '88). Diane and Julian both graduated from UVA and Diane's husband, Bruce Johnson, was receiving his Ph.D. from that institution while we were missing Cary at reunion.

Sue Godfrey Gregory wrote from Falmouth, MA, where she has been a real estate broker for nine years. She and Wes have four children. Wes III and Susan are married to a sister and brother — Wes has a beautiful daughter and Susan has twins — so Sue is enjoying grandchildren aplenty. Daughter Betsy is regional manager for Drackett Corp. and Sarah is at Simmons College.

Ann Jeffers Hogarty is also a real estate broker and a busy volunteer, working with the League of Women Voters, Social Justice Council and Marblehead Arts Festival. She is also a needlepoint designer and water safety instructor and still finds time for tennis and skiing. Their children are in such scattered places as Mali, Africa, (Peggy), Hawaii (Michael and Ann), and Boston (Susan and Peter) which must promote some super vacations. Only Timothy, a student at Skidmore, is still at home.

Jeanette Kennedy Hancock and James were on a canoe trip with Frances Bell Shepherd and Jimmy and several other couples, which conflicted with reunion. Jeanette is very active with the Audubon Society and was administrative director for their three-day workshop at Camp Alpine last spring. Their daughter, Katherine is working in Birmingham, Jim graduated from Auburn and headed for Law School, and Will is at Sewanee.

Music is still an important interest for Nancy McCray Brisson and Jim, with activities at church and with the Oratorio Society. When Nancy wrote, Jim was applying for admission to seminary in preparation for ministry in the Presbyterian Church. Except for the youngest, Jackie, their children (Lynda, Cindi, Jim, Jeff and Juli) have all received their college degrees and, among them, presented Nancy and Jim with five grandchildren, all "truly precious."

Liz Rector Keener wrote from Chatham, VA, where Ross is rector of Emmanuel Church and Trinity Church in Gretna, VA. She stays busy with various church activities and is a member of the Embroiderer's Guild of America and the American Needlepoint Guild. She combines these interests by designing and making needlepoint embellished ecclesiastical vestments. Their son, Ross III, is a student at Ferrum College and engaged to be married in the spring.

A wonderful photo of Gay Reddig Mayl and Jack accompanied her note. Gay is Vice President for Insurance and Employee Benefits at White Engines Inc. She is interested in old houses and is a trustee for Old Sturbridge Village. She shares Jack's interest in classic cars and travels with him to meets and tours, and also finds time for swimming, gardening and vacations in Europe.

Renis Siner Paton is a personal property appraiser and started her own appraisal and estate sale business four years ago in Winter Park. She is taking courses through Indiana U. to earn a Certified Appraiser of Personal Property degree. Renie and Bill finally have little boys to dote on. Two of their five daughters (Renee and Elizabeth) are married and each has given them a grandson! Mary is at SBC while the two youngest (Katherine and Sarah) are 10th graders at Chatham Hall.

Gene Smith Smith wrote that although she takes occasional courses at Washington U., she hasn't been brave enough to go after her M.L.A. yet. Tom is retired and Gene goes along on his golfing trips all over the world. Daughter Sally lives in St. Louis in her own apartment and is working on her M.A. in social work at Washington U.

Grandchildren are keeping Sue Starkey Ragland on her toes. She had three when she wrote — all boys and described respectively as active, brilliant and adorable. By now she has two more — maybe a little girl? Both their sons are in the insurance business — Cruger, Jr. in Kilmarnock, VA, and Scott in Dallas with his father. Jan was expecting her first child and working at Park Cities Savings which she helped open. Sue and Cruger enjoy lots of travel in connection with his work with the Texas Assoc. of Independent Insurance Agents (past president) and on vacation.

Another mother with children and/or stepchildren scattered in fascinating places (China, Austria, New Jersey!) is Mickey Thune Parker. She and Riggs have lived on Martha's Vineyard since 1974. He is retired from his law practice and is now a photographer. They spent a terrific year cruising down to the Dry Tortugas ("a glorious place") with their three youngest children and one schnauzer dog!

Connie Hill Hall has written a book, Incest in Faulkner: A Metaphor for the Fall, which was to be published at the end of 1985 by UMI Research Press.

Jane Feltus Welch spent so much of last year pursuing her acting career that she was afraid her family wouldn't recognize her if she didn't stay home for a while. In the fall she played Amanda in a workshop production of The Glass Menagerie in New York and from Dec. 18th to Mar. 29th she played Birdie in The Little Foxes at the Asolo Theatre in Sarasota, FL. She's loving it.

This is getting long but I do want to mention the faithful who came to reunion and brought long-suffering husbands, who really added spice to dorm life on 3rd floor Reid! (We really must get down to a more reasonable level next time — at our age, who can look lovely, lively and cool after puffing up three flights of stairs?); Gretchen Armstrong Redmond and Dan (who is much too cheerful in the morning!); Kathleen Button Ginn and L.H. (who appeared, incredibly, to be interested in all our babbling!); Anne Kilby Gilhuly and Bob (who demonstrated the patience of Job in the shower line!); Patsy Smith Ticer and Jack (who was resourceful enough to find an alternative to the shower line!); Mary Boyd Murray Trussell and George (who was everywhere with his camera!); Camille Williams Yow and Lawson (who, with Mary Boyd, entertained us royally at the piano!); and, of course, Shirley Suttiff Cooper and Tom (who kept track of and took care of us all!).

And a quick word about others in attendance — there were 29 of us, a great looking group: Sandy Rhodes Berglund came from her new home in Amherst, MA, and did some riding while she was there; Betty Byrne Gill took time out from her environmental, conservation and civic activities to join us; Nancy Douthat Goss and Anne Williams Manchester brought the results of the anonymous questionnaire, a monumental task of compilation; Phyllis Joyner displayed evidence of her career change by hanging an excellent selection of her paintings in the new gallery (old Refectory); Bexie Faxon Knowles was able to get away from her very successful real estate career to join us; Sue Lawton Mobley and Newell Bryan Tozzer reported on current conditions at SBC from the students' point of view as both Ann Mobley and Ellen Tozzer are members of the class of '87; Pam Compton Ware, looking relaxed and happy, brought pictures of her three youngest, handsome young men indeed; and Ann Lynn Harrell Welsh avoided the shower line altogether by staying off campus, but managed to keep up with us all the way. After that exhausting weekend, Barbara Lindemann and I drove to New Jersey for a visit with her mother and spent a lovely, laughter-filled afternoon with Ethel Green Banta, who promised to come next time.

In the "good excuses" department, Marty Hedeman Buckingham had hoped to be there but Dick had to have hernia surgery in May and their son, Steve, graduated from Denison U. the first of June. May 25th was wedding day for Dede Harrison Austin's son, Larry, in Savannah and Susan Hayward Collins's daughter, Lisa, in Greenville, SC. Diane Johnson DeCamp was entertaining guests from London, while Gail Davidson Bazarre was preparing to explore that city with her two daughters. Patty McClay Boggs was dutifully smiling through the Indy 500 with Flip. Joan Gualtieri Roman's daughter, Mary, graduated from Hamilton College on May 26th. Lee Fiducia Hartmann had to stay home to supervise the builders who were to start construction on their new home in May. Catherine Cage Bruns's son, Michael, graduated from college in June and she is working full time with Texas First Brokerage Services. Honey Addington Passano was getting ready for the wedding of their youngest daughter, Joanne. Petsy Gautier Mezey and Cliff were in Miami celebrating with her father on his 79th birthday. Lydia Plamp Plattenburg's first grandchild was due in May so, of course, she couldn't travel! Kay Roberts McHaney was in Prides Crossing, MA, for son, Scott's graduation from Landmark. Evelyn Sanders Haugen was entertaining pre-nuptially for son, George. Mitzi Streit Halla was escorting a tour group in China (her third!), and Ginger Chamblin Greene and Art were BritRailing around England.

I'll summarize by saying that we all love to travel to "far away places with strange sounding names"; we all have incredibly talented and accomplished children and beautiful grandchildren; and most of us are looking forward to, or just embarking on retirement careers! Please keep writing to me and please, please respond promptly to Sue Mobley's fund letter. Gretchen, Shirley and I promised her it was an easy job!

The class of '59 has been travelling all over the globe. Ginny Ramsey Crawford spent 2 weeks in Israel. Of her 5 daughters 3 are now married and Debbie, the oldest, gave birth to a boy on September 22nd. Alice Morris Gaskell has been living in England for the past 20 years and moved to Cape Cornwall 3 years ago when husband Ronald retired from the English Department of Bristol University. Alice has a small pottery business and has spent a great deal of time working for the Campaign for Nuclear Disarmament. She saw June Berguido James and Mimi Garrard Seawright (both '58) this past summer and looks forward to seeing Gale Young Walker ('60) at Christmas time. Di Dascher Spurdle travelled to Australia and Hong Kong during the summer and Ann Pegram Harris to London and Paris in the fall. Pat Davis Sutker and husband Marshall spent 3 weeks in Greece. Pat is in her 14th year of working with early childhood programs. Son Steve, 24, is working for Citicorp and daughter Cindy graduated from Miami of Ohio last December.

Jana Bekins Anderson went to India in February. She left Bombay in April and travelled by boat up the Red Sea through the Suez Canal and home along the North African Coast. Jana has 2 daughters, 1 working in Chicago and the other in Italy. Her son is a senior in high school. Polly Space Dunn and family went to Ireland and London in June and will make their usual trip west for skiing this winter. Polly reports seeing Tabb Thornton and Blair Farinholt briefly at the UVa — Ga. Tech. game. Barbara Sampson Borsch and Fred spent nearly 4 months of Fred's sabbatical in Cuernavaca, Mexico and June in Israel at St. George's College, Jerusalem. Their eldest son married in June and twins Stuart and Matthew will graduate from Annapolis and Johns Hopkins next May.

Back in the USA, Fortunata Azores was married to John K. Gunter in July '85. Jane Winje Ruedi recently moved to Blue Springs, MO. Daughter Jennifer is attending Blue Springs Jr. College and Susan will be married in mid-October. Jane is a psychologist for an alcohol program and also has a private practice. Judy Nevins LeHardy has moved again, this time from Fredericksburg to Fort Carson, CO due to husband Ward's promotion to Brigadier General. They have enjoyed white water rafting and climbing Pike's Peak and look forward to skiing this winter. Susan Taylor Montague reports this has been a terrific year for her selling real estate in Alexandria. Susan spent a week in Kiawah, SC. While there she spent an evening with Polly Space Dunn and her husband at their mid-19th century house in the historic section of Savannah. In December, Susan will travel to Telluride, CO to spend Christmas with daughter Ashley.

Judy Franklin Campbell and Bill recently purchased an 18th century farmhouse near Kennett Square, PA. which they have furnished with 18th and 19th century American pieces from their antique business. Judy and Bill also operate a bed and breakfast.

Rachel Bok Goldman and Allen will be moving from Philadelphia to Chicago in December. Allen has accepted a job as Director of the Center for Craniofacial Anomalies at the University of Chicago School of Medicine. Rachel is busy as usual and I'm sure it won't take her long to discover more projects once the move is complete.

Elaine Allison McHaffey reports that husband Don retired from teaching and they spent 6 months wandering around Indonesia, Malaysia, Thailand and Hong Kong. They are now back in CA building a home in Gualala.

Judy Welton Sargent is busy working with the Delaware Art Museum travel program planning trips and taking them. Daughter Susan is a sophomore at Vanderbilt and Mary Catherine is a freshman at Rice University.

Connie Fitzgerald Lange launched a new career. From September '84 to January '85 Connie interned for the Director of Financial Development at the American Red Cross. She then ran a special benefit performance for them which was a big success. As of last August, Connie is on a 1-year grant as volunteer coordinator at the American Swedish Museum.

Linda Knickerbocker Ford was in Italy this fall attending cooking classes. I'm sure she brought back some great ideas for her restaurant and gourmet catering shop in Grosse Pointe, MI. Daughters Kathy and Dede have graduated from U. of Richmond and U. of New Hampshire (respectively) and son Gordon is at Westminster School. Linda and Jane Jamison Messer got together in Harbor springs, MI last summer for their annual summer fling.

Jane's son Scott entered Purdue in pre-med; Sarah, 22, is a dental assistant and Jamie, 24, is working in the family printing business. Jane, Snowdon Durham and Chuck Kisner were together in June for many laughs and good times. Snowdon is tutoring a Korean lady through Literacy Volunteers and working for Meals on Wheels and the church bazaar. Snowdon and Chuck agreed to be coordinators, in their spare time, of Charlestown's Bi-Centennial Celebration in June '86. Maybe we should all show up for it.

Mary Chen Gutmann is Associate Director of Behavioral Medicine and Associate Professor of Medicine and Psychiatry at Mt. Sinai Medical Center in Milwaukee. Daughter Lily is graduating from the University of Wisconsin and planning for graduate school. Son Dan is a sophomore in high school and grew 6 inches this year! Mary spends her spare time riding their horse.

Suzanne Hafer Hambrick has a new job as a consultant for Carlisle Collection Ltd. of New York selling top-quality ladies clothing from her home. Daughter Margaret is a freshman at St. Mary's College in Raleigh, NC Life is very active for Jane Moore Banks as owner-administrator of a Domiciliary Care Facility. Son John works for her, daughter Eleanor runs the student union at Washington College and Jane's oldest daughter, Bunny, is an R.N. working in the post-surgical intensive care unit at Johns Hopkins Hospital.

Erna Arnold Westwig has a new job as senior high guidance director for Addison Central School. Her daughter Karen entered Indiana University this fall.

Mary Todd Singh and family have enjoyed trips to Mexico, Spain, India and Greece in the past few years. Mary is a social worker-therapist in one of the state's children's hospitals and her husband is an industrial hygiene consultant with Clayton Environmental. Mary has a son and daughter both in high school.

Missed Cay Ramey Howard at reunion and it was great to hear from her. Cay retired from teaching pre-school last year, but is still busy as V.P. of Episcopal Church Women of St. James's and a docent at the Virginia Museum in Richmond. Daughter Cay, a Va. Tech graduate is married to Todd Mannix and living in Raleigh, NC. Son Louis, Jr. plays attack for the lacrosse team at Radford University where he is a business major. Husband Louis is still a busy banker.

Betsy Colwill Wiegers is attending art school full-time and loving every minute of it. She and George went skiing in France last March and spent most of August at their ranch in Colorado.

Both of Ali Wood Thompson's children have graduated and are out in the "real world". As Ali puts it, it's like receiving a nice pay raise! Ali has been doing lots of volunteer work taking care of 2 elderly people and plays hockey for Seattle.

Penny Fisher Crowell and Bill are now in Elyris, OH where Bill is Athletic Director of Lake Ridge Academy. Penny was director of a girl scout camp last summer and thoroughly enjoyed it.

A long note from Gay Hart Gaines who spent July and August in France with her 16-year-old daughter and 2 friends. The Gaines moved in October from Chicago to a country house complete with deer and 15 acres in Princeton, NJ. Gay's first grandchild, Alexandria, was born May 30th in Minneapolis where Gay spent 5 delightful weeks playing "Gramma Gay"

Oede Ulf Mayer is pursuing counseling courses in Erie, PA. Her son, Hank, is a freshman at W & L.

Dottie Moore Lawson and Sally Mayfield Schreiner spent some time together in August when both were vacationing at Nags Head, NC. Dottie is establishing a private practice in speech pathology at home.

Ann Young Bloom is very involved with student programs at the Philadelphia Orchestra and church choir where she sees Mary Cooke Carle and other Sweet Briarites.

Alice Cary Farmer Brown attended Alumnae Council in September as did Barbara Sampson Borsch and Anne Pegram Harris. Reports are Sweet Briar is in fantastic shape. Alice Cary also attended the Generations Celebration in October. Elizabeth Liscomb came from Lynchburg. Judy Sorley Chalmers sent me a wonderful report of the weekend and the dedication of the old refectory, now the Anne Gary Pannell Center. Judy is working on an MA, helping to found a community music school and doing some programming at a local V.A. hospital.

Thanks for all the news. It's always great to hear from everyone. I've been in San Diego for a year and it's turned out to be a wonderful move. I spent 3 months telemarketing gold and silver options — a terrific training experience. Now with a San Diego based brokerage firm. My daughter Elinor is selling advertising space for San Diego Woman magazine. Still haven't seen Suzy Perry Farmer, but we've talked on the phone. Suzy is busy with a new house in Del Mar.

There must be something universal about the trauma of moving. I mentioned I was in the throes thereof in my postcard to you and received far more sympathy than I ever expected. Thank you!

Julie Arnold Morey moved in June, down three flights, but said it might as well have been to China. She is now having fun acquiring antiques and redecorating. Katharine Blackford Collins traveled east from Wyoming this fall to see family in North Carolina and Alabama. She heard Barbara Noojin Walthall present a paper on ballet to her literary club in Birmingham. Katharine chairs the Democratic party in her county doing a great deal of traveling and fundraising.

May Bowers Morris continues to enjoy living in the low country of South Carolina where Don is rector of two Episcopal churches. Her son David is in the 8th grade and daughter Tina is a junior. Leslie Buchman Richardson finished her M.A. in Italian and spent seven weeks in Italy at a Fulbright seminar for teachers of Italian. She is the only member of Sewanee's Italian Department. Laura Lee Brown Deters had a busy summer hosting over 300 guests at their family camp in Canada. She also was in Italy, as well as England and Scotland in the fall and chaired a Louisville Museum Collector's group tour to Los Angeles and San Francisco.

Lynn Carol Blau is busier than ever as president of the Connecticut Opera guild. Her daughter is a freshman at Georgetown. Anne Carter Brothers' Jay is a freshman at Centre College in Kentucky. Carter, a high school senior, is a Merit semi-finalist and Cary is in 7th grade. Anne and the two youngest boys are all taking piano lessons. Guess who is the worst about practicing! She and John are planning a two-week sail around the Greek isles in April.

Ginger Cates Mitchell had a sailing trip in the Virgin Islands, a family trip to Bermuda and a wonderful mini-reunion trip to Mary Groetzinger Heard's in Massachusetts. Also there were Lyn Clark Pegg and new bride Prue Gay Stuhr. Lyn and her family are moving in January to Duluth, Minnesota where John will be minister of a United Church of Christ. Prue and Ed, whom those of us at our 20th reunion met and loved, are living in an old house in Marlborough. Back to Ginger: her Jennifer is a freshman at Florida State, Mandy is 16 and Edward is 11. Ginger stays busy doing volunteer work for schools and the church in Atlanta.

The fall of '85 left Pat Calkins Wilder minus two sons. Chris is a freshman at Wake Forest and Alan is a freshman at the Marvelwood School in Connecticut. Daughter Kelley is a 9th grader at home. Pat is beginning photography school and will now have to squeeze studying in between all her volunteer work and farm "chores."

Nancy Dixon Brown still teaches mentally handicapped students in Atlanta. Her Katherine is 7 and Elizabeth an active one-year-old. Betsy Flanders Spencer had a visit from Susan Terjen Bernard and Alfred when they visited daughter Suzannah who is a freshman at UVA. Betsy's Elizabeth is a junior at UVA and has the best of both worlds since the Spencers moved to Charlottesville. William, Betsy's son, is a junior at St. Anne's-Belfield and is very active in football and lacrosse.

Ann Funkhouser Strite has stayed on the road in conjunction with her needlework. She has taught seminars in Boston, San Antonio and several here in Virginia where she drove through the campus in all its spring glory. Ann had a visit with Jack and Elizabeth Randolph Lewis and also Missy Lohr Berge. Missy and her new husband, Ed, are building a new house in the country and, Ann reports, had their hands full with a new rottweiler puppy. Ann is beginning work on her first book on embroidery — the subject is diaper patterns!

Jane Goodridge is a systems engineer with IBM — a quasi-technical position with a good deal of marketing thrown in. Jane lives in Cabin John, a suburb of Bethesda. Her country phase, she says. Also in a country phase is Betsy Beale Gunther whom Jane sees regularly. Betsy lives in Crozier, Virginia. Judy Gutches Needham's daughter Jill is an SBC freshman. Judy has two younger sons, is a paralegal in litigation and enjoys trying civil lawsuits. She also volunteers time to United Way, a local food bank and a children's home, and has traveled as part-time secretary with a friend who heads the USGA Women's Committee. Judy has had knee surgery twice and neck surgery once this year which limits her own golf and tennis. Katherine Haskell Subramanian and her sister Connie (SBC '70) are planning a month-long trip to India. Katherine was so excited it was all she wrote about.

Joan Johnston Ambrose is still in real estate in New York where her husband is an investment broker and their son is a junior at Columbia. She says they are a real city family although they spend summer weekends in New Hampshire and some winter ones in Florida. Joan sees Randy Kendig Young when she is in New York. Randy wrote that she and Ron took both daughters to London last summer. Margaret is a senior at UVA majoring in History of Art. Anne is 12 and growing up quickly.

Ann Knickerbocker McCulloch's husband Bill has just been appointed judge of the new probate court in Houston. It will handle half of the mental health docket in Harris County. Ann is involved in the Juvenile Probation Detention Center as a volunteer. Their daughter Mary is at Baylor and their son Cam is a high school senior. Lee Kucewicz Parham's son Carter is a freshman at Mercer. Rob is 16 and has taken up the electric guitar so the Parham household is very lively. Lee saw Allie Stemmons Simon and Keitt Matheson Wood while in Dallas buying for her Christmas Shop. Keitt and Frank are enjoying the empty nest phase. Their Helen is a sophomore at SMU and Gordon is a freshman at Tulane.

Anne Leavell Reynolds is teaching high school math full time again. Her daughter Nancy is at Princeton with Chenault McClure Conway's Cici. Anne's older son is a high school junior and younger one is in the 7th grade, so she "still has to car pool to all the activities and stay up for teenage drivers." Nancy McDowell Fairbanks has changed jobs. After almost ten years in school social work, she is senior clinician in a community mental health agency and coordinates the school contacts with small towns in NE Connecticut. Her son Ted is a sophomore at Occidental College. Son Andy is a high school senior spending the fall semester in Marburg, Germany. His twin sister Kathy is captain of her swim team and proud driver of a new car. Nancy has a small private counseling practice as well as her new job.

Lucy Otis Anderson and family have moved back to Charlotte after a two-year sojourn in Tampa. I know Charlotte is delighted and Lucy has jumped right back into volunteer jobs — fundraising for one child's school and serving on a board dealing with teenage pregnancy. Betsy Parker McColl has had a successful tennis season again, winning the Southern 40-and-over championships in Memphis. She reported a good visit with Penny Pamplin Reeves who is head of development for Ashley Hall. Betsy, Jim and Eliza (age 8) had a wonderful time celebrating her father's 90th birthday last June and had their usual good time in August in Blowing Rock.

Irene Pschorr Belknap has gone back to school at the San Francisco Art Institute. She also helps run her husband's medical office. Their three children range from fifth grade to high school junior. Irene said that her mother, for those who remember her, is alive and well in Switzerland, writing her life story. Harriet Reese Jensen reports that she and Jorgen are all alone on their Danish farm this year. Marianne, who was at Sweet Briar last year, has transferred to Dickinson College, their older son is doing his military service in the Royal Guard and their younger son is in Granby, Missouri as a high school exchange student. Leslie Smith Elger is still in Milwaukee and loves it except for the winters. Leslie is a medical secretary at a regional eye care center. Her two oldest daughters are in college and she and the youngest daughter are at home with several pets including a new horse.

Betty Stanly Cates and Alvin are in Vero Beach. Betty loves being back in Florida and was delighted to meet up with Nancy Cadwell Brigg who also lives there. Although they have been traveling a great deal, Betty reported happily that she has begun working as an outside sales agent at a local travel agency. Tish Skinner Dace is Dean of Arts and Sciences at South-eastern Mass. U. and has just taken over as chair of a committee on costume and lighting design awards in New York. Her older son is a film editor in Scotland and her younger son is a sophomore at U. of Kansas.

Allie Stemmons Simon represents us well on the SB Board of Overseers. And, as you know from her letter last fall, is already beginning to plan towards our 25th reunion. She has completed a hectic time of computerizing her travel agency which almost undid her! Heinz "dashes between his three clubs...where it is fun to see SB people surface now and then." The Simons had a grand trip to Germany and England last year complete with a crossing on the QE2. Both girls are well and fairly nearby. They will go back to Germany in January for Heinz mother's 80th birthday. Barbara Sullivan Wanamaker has recently moved to a condominium and loves it. Her children are 16, 14 and 23. Barbara wrote of a good visit with Carol Crawley Karm and Bill in Los Angeles.

Mary Trabue Meyers is a librarian at a branch of the Nashville Public Library. She lives in a town house three blocks away and has a log house in the mountains 100 miles away where she loves to escape. Mary's children are Molly, a 7th grader at Harpeth Hall, and Will, a junior at MBA. Ann Brothers said that Will is a star running back on the football team.

When Nerissa von Baur Roehrs's post card came, I remembered why I enjoy being your class secretary. While I love hearing from each of you, and everyone is very literate, Nerissa has a certain touch that lifts me above the daily. I quote: "Have learned how to bone a blue trout; crack a soft-boiled egg three different ways; and have my hand kissed without appearin' real gawky. Am now in the process of learning how to be absolutely deep...Das Babylein will be three in February and continues to delight us in two languages."

Polly Wirtzman Craighill has had a busy year. One daughter was married, one had a baby and the last is finally off to college. Polly finished her Masters of Law in Taxation and is now working for the Legislative Counsel at the U.S. Senate. Nancy Wood is still living in the country and working at Southwestern (VA) State Hospital. Her springer spaniel had just had six puppies. Sallie Yon Williams has another book, American Feasts, which came out in the fall, and she is already working on the next one. Her Whit is in the 10th grade and Courtney is 10 years old.

I still enjoy my work at the Lynchburg Fine Arts Center, even more so now that I drive only five minutes each way. Pete and I miss being at Sweet Briar but adore being back in town. We also adore our empty nest. Reed is a sophomore at Bridgewater and Elizabeth is a blissful freshman at Davidson, where I understand Laurinda King deBeck's daughter is also, but I haven't bumped into them yet.

I want to close by sharing part of a lovely, sad note from Karen Gill Meyers reporting on the death of her son, Randy, a super-achieving 16-year-old, who had struggled hard to overcome anorexia and the resulting heart damage. Karen wrote, "He had a wonderful summer, was recovering, even finished a book, a poetry magazine and the manual for the hospital on eating disorders, when we were in a serious boating accident which put me in the trauma unit in San Diego and Randy went into a tailspin. A week later, after completing one day of his senior year, he died of heart failure." Karen's address is 6200 East Redwing, Paradise Valley, AZ 85253. The Alumnae Office, by the way, keeps me up-to-date on all addresses. So if I can ever help you locate a classmate, let me know.

Fund Agent

Lindsay Smith Newsom (Mrs. Major C. III), 1501 Carr St., Raleigh, NC 27608

It was great to get such response to my card and I thank you all. Happy Birthday to all, like myself, who hit the big one! Does it seem possible to be out of SBC 19 years!!!

Margaret Mapp Young wrote that her 3 sons are all on different football teams and as a result she is an expert cheerleader. She visited with Carroll Randolph Barr in Powhatan and Carroll looked so good that Margaret felt younger too. Carroll wrote of a mini reunion of House 3ers at Sea Island, Georgia in April to celebrate thirteen 40ths. The Barrs have been traveling to Michigan, Nags Head and Steamboat Springs and are loving every minute of it all. Kay Trogdon Hightower, who also had a ball at Sea Island, has just been asked by the Governor's Office to serve on the Georgia Council for the Arts to represent the 3rd district. Kay sees Sue Tucker and Diane Mann Lankford quite often.

Patricia Neithold Hertzberg is working as a stock analyst and is managing investments for an insurance company. She sees Mellie Hickey Nelson and Judy Powell Martin regularly and both were at Mike's surprise party for Pat's 40th. The party was called the "Rites of Passage" and had Mellie and Judy holding white and black candles.

Linda Fite (Herbe Trimpe & Co.) writes that she has lost a lot of weight and is now Fit-Fite-At-Forty, not Fatty Fite. Linda and family went to Cornwall England, Scotland, the Bahamas and down to dear ole Dixie in '84-'85.

Peggy Minis reported her marriage to Peter Trethewey in February of 1985. Peter is an Australian and he and Peggy divide their time between Sydney and San Francisco and enjoy the best of both worlds. Peggy has inherited a family of 5 children ages 16-26, and rests up for her commute of 8,000 miles.

Sue Tucker helped inaugurate the new direct air service between Atlanta and Paris with the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce. She took a 3 week vacation this summer in Provence and Normandy. Her business, Tucker & Associates, continues to grow steadily and was listed as one of Atlanta's Top 20 agencies.

Hallie Darby Smith is busy plugging away at her toy business and watching her two children grow up so fast. Daughter Allison, 13, talks about going to SBC someday. Hallie and Al bought a cottage in Deltaville, Va., their getaway spot.

From Dallas, Peggy Pittman Patterson writes that she graduated magna cum laude from Perkins School of Theology with a Masters of Divinity. She has applied to become an Episcopal priest. Peggy is currently teaching religion at the Episcopal School of Dallas. Also in Dallas lives Jane Hansford Bronson with husband, John, and 2 daughters, Cory, 6 and Alexandria, 3 months.

Lynn Frazier Gas and Francois are on the move again. After one year in New Jersey, they are living in Houston and Lynn hopes that Janie Willingham Glass is still there. (She still is.)

Not only was Pam Ford Kelley in Yankee magazine, but articles also appeared in Vogue and Savvy. We're real proud of you Pam.

Also traveling this summer were Jane Stephenson Wilson, Bob and their two sons ages 8 & 5. Their trip included California, Washington and Oregon and they enjoyed every minute except that they found no '67ers.

Mary Bell Timberlake and Wayt are entering the college scene with Wayt IV and looking at college catalogues. Their daughter Julie age 13 is the first Timberlake in the school marching band.

Glory McRae Brown and family have just moved to Mountain Lakes, N.J. and are expecting their 3rd child, a boy, in December.

Speaking of babies, Gene King Leyden is still a practicing midwife in Oregon. The Leyden's traveled to England and Spain this summer.

Eleanor Kidd Crossley and Jim celebrated their 30th anniversary this summer. Eleanor is working as an interior designer for a large furniture store in Pittsburgh and also performs with a singing group that does 2 Gilbert and Sullivan productions a year. Their 2 oldest children are married and their "baby" is in 10th grade.

Beverly Bradshaw Blake and Kendall are still redoing their 20's vintage home in Jackson, Ms. While Kendall practices orthopaedic surgery Beverly teaches 8th grade English. It was 20 years ago that they met in Paris on their Junior Year Abroad programs and they are planning a trip to Paris this fall to celebrate.

Jo Wiens MacMichael has just received her MBA at GWU. Husband Skip just was promoted to Captain and son John is a sophomore at VMI. Jo reports that his tales bring back 20-year-old memories.

I heard from all 3 of my senior roommates and here's their news: Gracey Stoddard Slotterbeck, Pres and their 2 sons ages 11 and 9 commute every weekend to their home in Weston, Vt. from NYC. Gracey is membership chairman for the NY Jr. League and volunteers at her sons' schools and their church. In Birmingham, AL., Barbie Tillman Kelley and husband Carlton threw themselves a great 40th birthday and rented an entire skating rink for 3 hrs., with food and drink and skates aplenty. Barbie graduated with her Ed S. in Early Childhood Education and says she is busy with all the usual mother stuff. Bonnie Blew Pierie may be moving from Mass. to Ct. so I get to join her in their househunting. Tim is with Bethlehem Steel and commutes between Hartford and Grafton on a regular basis. It's hard to find a home that accommodates 3 adults, 2 children, 3 horses and some sheep.

Sally Haskell Hulcher is knee deep in volunteer jobs as usual and lists her job status as Hulcher Enterprises, Inc. The family has discovered camping this summer and they love it. Sally has mastered the art of applying mascara in the middle of nowhere and will give lessons if needed.

Maria Wigglesworth Hemmings writes that for her birthday, her husband surprised her with a trip to Brittany. She sees Gretchen Bullard Barber often and saw Stephanie Lucas Harrison this summer when she came east from Texas. Gretchen and family traveled to the Jersey Shore, Vermont and North Carolina this summer. Gretchen enclosed a great picture of her 4 who are darling (7, 5 and twins 2½), and is staggering music lessons, gym, Brownies and art. Gretchen saw Caroline Mueller whom she had not seen since 1963 and she looked great.

Baird Shinberger Bell is the chairman of the Science Dept. at St.

Agnes' School. Her boys (12 & 10) are learning circus skills and both are accomplished unicyclists and jugglers.

Gina Dunlap Cogswell works as the director of the Committee to Combat Drugged and Drunken Drivers and even gets to ride in police cars at midnight picking up DWI's. Taking her daughter to camp this summer she ran into Lindsay Smith Newsom and Carol Risher Brouha. Carol is married to a park ranger and lives in Missoula, Montana. Grace Gould Hobbs and Ralph live in Selma, Al. with their 12 yr. old daughter and Grace teaches English.

Carol MacMillan Stanley and C.R. are just celebrating their 19th anniversary. This fall they went stag hunting in England for two weeks. Carol has had a very busy law practice for the past 15 years.

Lindsay Smith Newsom's husband Mac is a landscape architect. As usual she is over committed but plans to thud out in her garden and get something done. She sees Lynn Lyle who is now living in Raleigh, and also Sue Morck Perrin and reports that Page Munroe Renger had a nice trip to Europe this summer.

We heard from Dolly Caballero Garcia that she and Julio sold their wholesale drug business in Puerto Rico and have bought 3 Subway Sandwich franchises. We hope that daughter Dolly will be a freshman at SB next year.

Marion MacRae has enjoyed a leave from her law practice for the last year but is now back into private practice and keeping busy with other ventures. She urges all to attend our 20th!!!

Lynn Gullett Strazini reports that her husband Ed has been promoted to Lt. Col. in the Army. Lynn will be working with the Federal Aviation Administration as a Human Resource Development Specialist. They have traveled 2 yrs. in a row to Germany, Austria and Switzerland.

Lisa Harvey Morton and John admit that having a 20 month old is supposed to keep you young but they feel they are aging faster. They helped celebrate Stephanie Ewalt Ayer's 40th and plan on all attending the Virginia Navy football game.

Pamela Rutledge Ausley reports that their first child, Jeffrey Francis Land o' Cotton Ausley, was born in Feb., '85.

Barbara Annan is enrolled at Boston College for the 2nd year and is working towards a Masters in Pastoral Ministry; her concentration is Spirituality. Barbara has 4 sheep on her farm in N.H. and she spins, dyes and knits the wool.

Clay Blackwell Wooldridge reports her marriage to Terry in 1982. She acts as a surrogate mom to teenage girls at a residential treatment home in Lynchburg. She and Terry are in the midst of remodeling.

Mary Cary Ambler Finley and John and children visited at the Tides Inn again this summer and were at Sea Island in the Spring. Mary Cary is finishing a two-year term as head of the Parents' Association of Riverdale Country School. Jaquelin, age 3, attends the Early Childhood Program at Sarah Lawrence College.

Greetings from Ahwatukee (just outside Phoenix) came from Leilani Green Gordon. Husband Ron is V.P. at the Arizona Bank and son (9) is in 4th grade. Leilani keeps busy with volunteer work and crafts and came in first in a show with her crocheted bedspreads.

Jill Berguido Gill, otherwise known as Jill Gill, is still working as Director of Reading and Testing at Montgomery School. Husband Bruce has been the project manager for the restoration of the steeple of Old Christ Church in Philadelphia (circa 1695) and climbs a 200-ft ladder daily to check on the work. Jill is afraid of heights but Bruce assures her the view from the top is "exhilarating".

Your secretary is busy to her eyeballs. I am the president of the Newcomers Club of Madison with 250 members and president of the Women's Club with 90 members. So between coffees, lunches and meetings I find time to put my feet up and sigh. Two other Clubs have approached me but I think I'll wait for 1600 Pennsylvania Ave. Will be a grandmother again by the time you read this and I love being "Mamie." John is great and looking forward to our 20th but he would like his own private bath. Don't think I have any pull.

Please mark off May 1987 for our 20th reunion. It would be such fun to see you all again and to swap stories of the past and present. See you there!!!

Claire Kinett Tate (Mrs. John A. III), 1431 Biltmore Drive, Charlotte, NC 28207

Beverly Van Zandt Steele (Mrs. Robert E.), 3627 Newcastle, Houston, TX 77027

By the time you all read this, our 15th Reunion will be upon us. Read on for tips as to whom you may expect to rendezvous with, but let me take a moment to make a plea for news of the whereabouts of Saly Henshaw and Linda ("Trixie") Hatten, of whom we appear to have lost track. Send word to me or the Alumnae Office, please. And now, on to our serpentine geographic odyssey, starting way up north in Maine. Karen Murphy Parkman wrote from there to say that she was very excited to be moving back to North Carolina with her son Jonathan, and was definitely planning on coming to Reunion. "Twelve years is enough for New England," quoth she. "I'm headed home!"

Still in New England is Judy Wilson Martin, who lives in Barnard, VT, on a beautiful farm with her husband Bill and children Oliver (10) and Jessa (7). She and Bill are involved in various investment partnerships ranging from real estate to Christmas trees. Judy is also in the process of establishing an interior design business in Woodstock, VT. Liz Mumford writes from Hyannis Port, MA, where she's living with her two dogs, that she's painting all the time. (Well, maybe not ALL the time...she's the proud half-owner of a Beetle Cat, which is a 12-foot wooden gaff-rigged cat boat, and at least has time away from the easel to sail it!) She notes she had another good show this summer.

Journeying down to New York State, Kay Brown Grala writes from the Big Apple that son Bronislaw ("Broni," 4) and Meg (2½) have taught her more about Masters of the Universe, Smurfs and Rainbow Brite than she really wants to know. In the real world, she's VP and deputy general counsel in the Legal Division of The Bowery Savings Bank, where she's in her eighth year. She also does volunteer work for Play Schools Association, a nonprofit group that provides after-school, summer, and other play programs for NYC kids. Another NYC resident, Sioux Greenwald enjoyed visits from Wendy Weiss Smith and Gil, Jill Minnema Worth and Larry, and Dee Kysor Smith-Crafts and George. She spent a weekend with the Smiths in Littleton, MA last July, and was hoping to see Robi Randolph Hearing in Virginia last fall. She says she'll see the rest of us at Reunion!

Nesi Wisell Gustafson notes she's now "on her own" in Utica, and is completing credentials for certification and her Master's degree in reading while teaching full-time. She and 8-year old son made their "maiden" European trip (Spain and England) in the summer of '85. She's planning another such for next summer, but will squeeze Reunion in first. From Syracuse we hear from Maggie Mather Feldmeier, who is still juggling several paid and volunteer jobs; on the unpaid side, she's a planning and allocations panel member for the United Way and Administrative Vice-President of the Syracuse Junior League (and will be president in 1986-87). As if that weren't enough, she's redecorating a new house.

Lite in Montclair, NJ is busy but fairly ordinary for Jeannette Bush

Miller, and new daughter Sarah (1 last July). Jeannette is working full-time, doing legal assistant work for a law firm, but is hoping to make a career change one of these days. She talks often to Marilyn Boyd Silar, whose card from Lancaster, PA, advised me I mistakenly named her "Mimi" in our last edition. She's got another name anyway, having married Vaughan Gordon Silar on October 12, 1985. The two honeymooned in Hong Kong. Marilyn, too, will be returning for Reunion.

Pam Henery Aray is enjoying life in Annapolis, MD, with a family she loves. John (1) keeps her hopping; Molly (6), Anne (12), and Lindsay (13) also do their share. Pam is also a Girl Scout Leader for two troops (Cadettes and Juniors) and has become a certified camper! She's still active in the Junior League of Annapolis, and also serves on a community board that oversees the loan of car seats to low income families. She'll be coming to Reunion, too!

Also in Annapolis is Barbara Brand, who has kept her own name following her Sept. 22, 1984 marriage to Michael Kinney O'Heeron, a systems analyst. Barb implies that though Michael shares her many interests (great architecture, competitive swimming, and playing the dulcimer), being able to move in with her in the wing of the Hammond Harwood House (the national historical landmark of which Barb is administrator) may have really clinched the proposal! She spends much of her time writing and lecturing about H-H House and its famous architect, William Buckland, and much of the rest swimming. She holds the National Record for the 2-mile swim for women 35-39. However, she promises to dry off long enough to come for Reunion!

In Baltimore, Molly Clark Ruzicka and husband Glen are still enjoying life. Molly does freelance editing and Glen is a rare book conservator at the Library of Congress. They sent along the happy news that they were expecting a baby the end of January.

Melissa McDowell Stevens and Shelby, with their two sons, Brian (9) and Sean (4) are down around the Beltway a bit in Alexandria, VA, while Shelby does a tour at the Pentagon. However, they'll relocate this summer, possibly to Ft. Bragg, NC. Melissa is still teaching at the Potomac School in McLean (algebra, geometry and computer science), and was due to add "a third little Stevens" on New Year's Day. She (and brood?) will see us at Reunion. Her former roommate, Alice Meyer Hughson, lives nearby. Alice says she's in the midst of a career change: she's just gotten her real estate license with Mt. Vernon Real Estate in Old Towne Alexandria; she urges classmates relocating to the D.C. area to give her a call.

Another member of the Capitol Contingent, Becky Randolph Boyers, reports that she is project manager with a federal data processing contract firm and manages about 40 DP professionals assigned to a Department of Labor contract. Husband Scott is VP of operations in a high tech electronics firm. They see Jeannette Bush Miller and Phil as often as they can. Gina Mancusi Wills and Ashley are in Vienna, VA; Gina has returned for her Master's in psychology, and her family joins her in wishing she could just slow down a bit. And Laura Mink penned a sad note to say that she had lost her father to cancer just the week before she wrote. She's still working for the National Geographic in Washington.

From Crozet, VA, we hear from Barbara Payne and husband Jim. She takes time off from tending children Allie (4) and Evan (1) to send an urgent plea that correspondents remedy the recent loss of her address book! Elodie Taylor Thompson laments she doesn't know which makes her feel older — 15th Reunion or having her youngest go off to school! Kathy Garcia Pegues and John are both still at Fauquier H.S., where Kathy teaches English and John is assistant principal and wrestling coach. They also wear other hats: Kathy's doing birthday parties and shows as Blast-off! the Clown, and John is selling real estate with Merrill-Lynch. Kathy raised $10,000 last year for famine relief. Other interests include brain theory, the S.P.C.A. and church activities, plus the kids, now 5 and 7. Kathy is also planning on coming to Reunion.

One of the Richmond contingent, Wendy Norton Brown, returned to teaching last fall for the second year since taking a break from raising Christopher (6) and David (9). She teaches 3-year-olds five days a week and then spends weekends ferrying David around the soccer circuit. Plans include a trip to Canada for a soccer tournament, plus several closer to home. She hopes to make Reunion, but there's a soccer game in Philadelphia that may conflict, so... C'mon, Wendy, we only do this every five years! In Petersburg, Amanda Megargee Sutton and family, including son Jamie (now 2) just moved into a new house. She's still enjoying teaching.

Dee Kysor Smith-Crafts is in Charlottesville, where she and husband George Crafts are weathering Dee's third year of vet school (she'll come for Reunion if she doesn't have to miss classes). Her daughter Jenny just started first grade.

From Charlotte, NC, Frances Woltz Fennebresque writes that husband John is practicing law, and they both are running around after four children, ages 14 to 2! Neighbor Claire Kinnett Tate says a whole new world of activity surrounds daughter Bright's entry into kindergarten. Son Austin (2½) is in a two-day nursery school. Husband John is still banking and serving on several civic boards; Claire is still mothering and volunteering.

Karen Webber Foster checked in from Louisville, KY, for the first time since leaving Sweet Briar. She's been married for 14 years, and has been working for the Xerox Corporation for the last seven. In the intervening period, she attended the University of Louisville's law school for three years. She'll also be attending Reunion.

Louise Archer Slafar writes from Memphis, TN, of her chef d'oeuvre for the year: she and coworkers from the Junior League transformed the city's renowned Peabody Hotel (where the Mississippi Delta begins) into "an enchanted palace for the League's Cinderella Ball. We employed a golden carriage, a 30-foot pumpkin (which took 6 weeks to build), and a twinkling castle with cascades of flowers and ribbons everywhere." Husband John and the children were patient and helpful. No wonder she's looking forward to Reunion!

Linda Whitlow Knight and Dick had a great time at the 1985 meeting of the American Bar Assoc. in London, where they attended the "Pump Boys & Dinettes" concert, starring Chad and Jeremy. (Yes, I remember them.) Dick says he'll accompany Linda to Reunion, but only if we invite Marianne Faithful. Funny guy.

A bit futher south in Atlanta, GA, Kathy Wilson Lamb describes life as hectic. Daughter Marie (10) is in 5th grade, and is playing tennis and the piano after school. Katie is in 1st grade, and plays soccer and tennis after school. This means that Mom is driving all over creation after school! She also (presumably during school) works for the Eggleston Children's Hospital Festival of Trees, and serves as president of the parents' association of her daughters' school. She tries to fit tennis and exercise classes into what time remains. From Huntsville, Amanda Thrasher Segrest reports she and Mike are still happily married, and have three children: Jordan Elizabeth (8), Ellen (5), and Clay (2). She enjoys being an alumnae rep for SBC, and volunteering with the PTA, Junior League, and local Panoply of the Arts festival.

In Montgomery, AL, Frances Barnes Kenamer and Seabie greeted their long-tried for baby Helen Craig Kenamer on May 24, 1985. Frances also reports that Martha Roton Terry's daughter Ann Davison was born May 15, 1985. The two babies are already spending time together in hopes they'll "grow up to be friends and SBC roomies" like Martha and Frances. Frances, who took the summer off but returned to work in September, is godmother to both of Martha's children, Ann and Caldwell.

Mim Washabaugh Meglan graduated from Tulane last spring with an MBA in accounting, in the top third of her class, and was elected into the Beta Alpha Psi honor society. She's now working in New Orleans with Martin Marietta Aerospace as a financial analyst, and taking a couple of "clean up" courses to qualify to sit for the CPA exam. She has also taken up running to work off the weight she gained "munching her way to her MBA."

Safety Harbor, FL, is now home for Denise Beardsworth Costa and John. Denise is news editor of The Tampa Tribune, and John is the managing editor of The Evening Independent, published by the St. Petersburg Times Co. Their sons, Anthony and Timothy are now six and almost five, respectively.

Kristi Bettendorf Swartz writes from Miami that decorating their new house is her #1 priority in her so-called spare time. She's going on her eighth year in the State Attorney's Office, but she has gotten out of prosecution and is now the "training officer" for newly hired attorneys and is responsible for continuing the legal education of the 175 lawyers in the office. She finds it a pleasant change and thinks she "may be a teacher at heart." Last November she also became chief of Felony Intake (you can ask her what that is at Reunion). Their son, Steve (2½), started "school" and plans are in the works for his sister (she hopes).

From West Palm Beach comes word of Barbara Gracey Backer, the happy mom of new son John Gracey Backer. She's relishing some time off from work to be with him. Daddy Ron and she are settling into the change in lifestyle that only a baby can bring, but will try to make Reunion.

Cami Crocker Wodehouse is still teaching high school chemistry and physical science and living in Jacksonville Beach, FL. She and Chuck had a long visit with Robin Richardson Edwards and Ralph last year at the Elmo reunion. Robin has a business called "Balloonatic" and delivers her bouquets of balloons in a clown suit! Cami also sees Kathy Burns from time to time.

Kate Worobec Story checked in from Tampa, where she's a stockbroker with Merrill Lynch. She is continuing her professional education and hopes to begin law school at Stetson at night this fall and pursue a J.D. and an L.L.M. in tax law while brokering for Merrill. Son Stephen is now 6 and attends the gifted program at the University of South Florida. Kate says life as a single parent is a challenge but very happy and hopeful, and she hopes to see us all at Reunion (between finals!).

We'll head north again now. Honey Hammer wrote from Ohio and was all het up for our reunion when she wrote; she's still working in the information industry as sales training manager for Mead Data Central. She had a chance to travel to London for 10 days to do some seminars for the company's international division, and had a great time. Rhoda Allen Brooks, in Cincinnati, was still shoveling out from under the debris of a move amidst carpenters, plumbers, etc. when she wrote. She managed to get away for three weeks in Michigan, and hopes to see us at Reunion.

Barb Wuehrman and new husband Jim Palazzolo have been married just over a year now, and both have been busy with work. Barb is about to join a different practice but still will be in Grand Rapids, where Jim was promoted this year to director of his department at Rapistan. The two took time out to go skiing for a week in Colorado with Jim's sons in the winter '84-'85, and were hoping to do the same again this past winter. Nancy Wood Ambrosino and Drake send from Grosse Pointe the happy news of the birth of son Coert Logan on July 19.

Linda Lewis Brauer is still doing dentistry in Sheboygan, WI; she has built her own building and has another female dentist associate. Husband Warren is still a family physician and, says Linda, "sees everyone else's family more than ours!" Their twin boys are in 2nd grade in two separate schools, and their daughter is in kindergarten, so Linda spends lots of time running around — she'll make Reunion one of her stops.

Terry Helm reports from Evansville, IN, that she is fund-raising director for the Southwestern Indiana Easter Seal Society, and is also involved in the Board of Leadership for the Evansville United Way, the Special Olympics (as area coordinator), the Junior League of Evansville (as past president), and public TV, as major gifts chairman for the auction. Some of us saw Terry's picture and bio in the May 1985 100th Anniversary edition of Good Housekeeping magazine. She was listed as one of "100 Young Women of Promise."

Jennifer Slade Belovsky and Gary, for the 8th year, spent half the year in Montana doing research on National Bison Range. The other half of the year they spend in Ann Arbor, where Gary teaches at the Univ. of Michigan. They took a trip in the fall to Norway and England where Gary worked and Jennifer went sightseeing. Jennifer keeps in touch with roomies Ellen Weintraub in Chicago and Katie Horan in Philadelphia.

Just as this was going to press, I got the very sad news that Janet Faulkner Farnsworth had died last Sept. 10 in Chicago, the victim of a hit and run driver. All of us who remember Janet fondly will think of her especially at Reunion.

Anne Sniffen Cates reports from Fort Scott, KS, that daughter Katherine started kindergarten the day Anne penned her reply. Also in Kansas, Terry Liroy Faulkner is managing editor of Westport Publishers/Test Corporation, which puts out psychology, education, and business reference books. She also serves on several theater boards. Daughter Elizabeth (12) dances with the Kansas Ballet; and Anthony (10) has won some Tae Kwon Do trophies. Husband Clark still manages an insurance agency.

Liz Glassman is aghast that it's "15 years already!" She's still operating her consulting firm, doing large art projects for corporations. Her latest is a big project for Continental Airlines: photography from every country the airline flies to. "So naturally," she writes, "I'll have to go to Japan, Australia, New Zealand, Mexico, England and Micronesia (!) to pick it out." Some of us really have it tough.

Alixa Yust Rowe humbly notes from Houston that she has "not too much news" and then says she's trying to get a novel published! This is in addition to mothering Meredith (9) and Alison (8), working with juvenile probation through the Junior League, helping with the Brownies, etc. She and Richard are trying to lower their golf handicaps, though Alison says hers isn't cooperating.

Also from Houston, Bev Van Zandt Steele writes that new daughter Beverly constantly amazes and confounds her. But she'll tear herself away (or maybe tote Beverly along) long enough to make Reunion. Neighbor Betty M. Duson is finding settling into marriage at the "stodgy age of 36" a challenge. Husband Al has joined her private practice part time, as have two other psychologists making a total of five (West Loop Psychological Services).

Fellow Houstonian Brooke Thomas Dold has gotten her daughter off to kindergarten and son off to preschool three days a week. She's also singing with a ladies' chorus and in the church choir, doing aerobics 3-4 times a week, and teaching music to preschoolers once a week. She sends word of Pat Connor Bland's new son, David Harrison.

To wrap up the Texas contingent is ex-Wyoming resident Linda Barbeck Becker, who recently moved to Midland with husband Allan, who will be working for Chevron, USA. Linda keeps busy doing housewife and mother things for son Brian (5 and a very active kindergartener). Another move next year may be in the offing, this time to California.

I got a long note from Dayton Lawson Miller, who "came out of the woodwork" (her words) to catch us up. She married Ray Miller, the guy she had been dating in Annapolis, in July of 1971. They moved around from Virginia to Hawaii for about seven years before settling in Idaho in 1978. Dayton and Ray have three sons: Todd (12), Benjamin (7) and Timothy (5), who was born at home, by choice, with a midwife. They built their own home in Boise, where Dayton does some volunteer and church work, and is now starting to teach the boys at home. She'll try to make Reunion but concedes that helping her mother move at that time may interfere.

Mary Bell Parks is coming all the way from Denver, Colorado to make our 15th. Her suggestion of a 5K race has been incorporated in our Reunion activities schedule in the form of a 1-mile fun run/walk. She mentions cryptically that her real life, in which she'll be substitute teaching and volunteering at her daughter's school and her son's preschool, is not as exciting as her fantasy life.

Susan O'Malley wrote from Issaquah, WA, to say that she just celebrated her first wedding anniversary. She married Jim Fetridge, whom she met through a common interest in running. (She will retain her own name.) Susan is in her 3rd year as the program coordinator for the Physical Therapist Assistant Program at Green River Community College, and they will be moving into their "first own" house in Seattle as this goes to press.

Anne Wiglesworth Munoz and Milton's daughter Aliria was born on Jan. 31, 1985. Anne says it was the coldest night of the year there in Utah, and they barely got to the hospital in time! They made a trip to Kentucky last August, and returned just in time for Milton to start back teaching 5th grade. Anne squeezes her artwork in while caring for Maya (4) and baby Aliria.

From Topanga, CA, comes word from Cinny Riddle, who is still working as an assistant director in Hollywood. She's now starting to move into the book area, focusing for the moment on non-fiction and hoping to create her own "cottage industry" publishing business.

That brings us at last to the Sprinsky family. Bill and I have been "Aggies" now for a year, and I decided to go back to school. I started the MBA program in September, and while it's now only November, so far, so good. (Remember, that's what the guy who jumped off the top of a 40-story building said as he passed the 30th floor.) I'm carrying a 9 hour load and working 20 hours a week coordinating business plan formulation for an innovations development agency. Matthew (6) is currently terrorizing the kindergarten set with his Transformer imitations. Husband Bill is swotting away, teaching two courses in surveying at Texas A&M and doing some consulting for a Washington, DC, defense contracting firm that's working on a special video disk mapping project for the White House. Daughter Judith (19) has graduated from high school and is taking time off to experience the real world before entering art school next fall. I've taken up singing in the choir (a poor substitute for Sweet Tones but the best I can do right now!).

Thanks again for another wonderful year as your secretary: it's a marvelous way to keep in touch with all of you fabulous women. And seeing you all at Reunion will certainly help me turn back the hands of time, so I heartily urge you all to make plans to join us!

Fund Agent

Ellen Harrison Saunders (Mrs. Whitney G.), 515 Darden, Suffolk, VA 23434

Many thanks for all your cards and news. Many of you wrote about how much you enjoyed Reunion, and seeing all your classmates again. I attended Alumnae Council in September. It was wonderful to see Ellen Harrison Saunders and Martha French Roberts, but I wished more of you had been there with us. The campus was as beautiful as ever.

Randy Anderson Trainor writes that she has very little spare time. When she isn't caring for 4-month-old Cary or chasing after 2-year-old Cliff, she is busy preparing a Christmas crop of 10,000 poinsettias, making jams & jellies to sell or figuring the bookkeeping for the business she and her husband run together.

Joanna Arias has just completed 5 years of training in general surgery and has moved to Rochester, New York where she is pursuing a residency in plastic surgery.

From Tennessee, Bet Bashinsky White writes that their tranquil farm days are limited since GM's new Saturn plant may locate 8 miles from their doorstep. She and her 2-year-old son Case had a nice visit last summer with Gail Ann Farwell Winkler (class of '76).

Carol Brewer Evans has a full schedule with 4-year-old Catherine and 1-year-old Carey. I've seen both girls and they are precious. Carol is very excited about the drawing lessons she is taking from a local Franklin artist.

Also in Franklin, Va. Betsy Brooks Jones stays incredibly busy with volunteer work. After a summer at Nags Head, Brownrigg will be in the 2nd grade and Thomas in nursery school. Betsy also said how much she enjoyed having Patty O'Malley Brunger and Pam Myre Turner visit in Franklin before Reunion.

Linda Carroll Matthews began volunteer work at N.C. Baptist Hospital in Sept. Since her husband accepted a staff position at Bowman Gray School of Medicine she is looking forward to traveling with him to meetings and conferences. Her son Creighton began 1st grade this year.

Besides caring for Cameron (3½) and Clark (18 mo.), Cece Clark Turner stays busy working in the real estate dept. of the Hop-In Food Stores.

Carol Clement Pavia and Frank are new parents. Their first child was born on April 6, 1985 — Louis Clement Pavia.

Anne Cogwell Burris and Lon spent a much needed vacation last August in Eleuthra "sans children!!" On the homelront, she has begun a new part-time job as an exercise instructor. She's thrilled they're paying her to exercise, instead of her paying them! Construction began in the fall to convert their garage into a poolhouse.

Jean Connor Churchill is enjoying her new part-time job as a social worker at Catholic Charities in Arlington, Va. She also stays very busy with 2-year-old Paul.

Writing from Naples, Florida, Marybeth Conner Hamlin and husband Bob are still enjoying the wonderful climate. M.B. has a job teaching high school English which is her first love.

Catherine Cranston Whitham still enjoys recruiting for Thalhimers, especially sitting on the other side of the desk when she visits Sweet Briar. She had quite a full summer — a visit from Randy Anderson Trainor and Libby Whitley and a trip to her parents' mountain home in N.C. (near Camp Merrie-Woode for all you old Captains). She also stays busy with the League, her 2 children and a garden.

From S. Lake Tahoe, Nan Cunningham Watson is still enjoying her job as Senior State Humane Officer for the Humane Society. Although her undercover work is a tad dangerous, it is also very exciting. Nan wrote how sad she was that 12 year old Hailey (golden retriever) didn't make it back to SBC. She died 1½ weeks before Reunion.

After a 4-year leave of absence, Bonnie Lee Damianos Rampone has returned to teaching the 2nd grade. Last summer her family enjoyed a trip to Hershey, PA, Sesame Place and Nantucket. She and her husband are building a new house. They are grateful for more space, as Chuckie is 5 now, and Christopher 3.

Stephanie Dewey Hoffman writes that she and her husband Ron are busy at work designing a trade show booth for a Chicago Housewares Show. They exhibit houseware gadgets which he invents. In their spare time, they enjoy trout fishing in the Ozarks. Louisa Dixon went with a committee from the Blue Ridge Presbytery to Haiti last spring to meet with the Episcopal Bishop of Haiti and talk about an exchange program. Louisa is still working for a company in Charlottesville that administers on-the-job training programs.

Joan Douglas Murray was sorry to miss our 10th Reunion. She and her husband Chris are living in Bethesda now, but will move abroad in 3 years since he is in the Foreign Service.

Mary Dubuque Desloge wrote about how much her husband Chris enjoyed our Reunion. We were glad to have him there. After some time spent at Lake Michigan last summer, Mary is preparing for the birth of her 2nd child in late October. If he's anything like his brother William, he'll arrive in time to see the St. Louis Cardinals win the 85 World Series.

Class of 1975

Besides working as a consultant to a nuclear power plant, Jeannette Egli Stamm is celebrating her 10th year in the Air National Guard. She is single these days, and enjoying her dog, aerobics and roller skating.

Linda Frazier Keith writes that she and Jules are happy to be back in the U.S. after 3 years of living in the Philippines. They're living in Rockville, Md. outside D.C. where Jules is a fellow in Neonatology. Linda enjoys caring for 8-yr.-old Catherine and 5-yr.-old Chris. While living in the Philippines, they traveled to Hawaii, Japan, Hong Kong, Korea and Red China.

From Texas, Martha French Roberts has a busy year ahead planning for the stork to come on April 15th. Her time is divided between remodeling her home, renovating the farm, and doing volunteer work. She has a visit planned to New York to see Carol Leslie St. John and Kathie Shirk Gonick.

Debbie Goiten Hodge and her husband Angus enjoyed a nice vacation in Scotland and England. They also enjoyed seeing Lisa Long (class of 75) on a trip to Texas last summer. Debbie is still teaching science, and enjoying riding in her spare time.

Staying at home with both children, Melissa Greenwood Reimer can hardly believe 5-year-old Emily is a real live kindergartener and that Katherine is already 2. She and Jell enjoyed a trip to Bermuda last summer.

Nancy Hall Haight is leaving teaching after 11 years to work for her father who has both a wine and textile-printing business.

From Suffolk, Va. Ellen Harrison

Saunders writes that she and Whitney have just moved into a new house which will accommodate their growing family. They are expecting their second baby in December. [Eds. note: It's a girl! Mary-Carson Brewer Saunders, born Dec. 17] Ellen still enjoys her involvement with the Chamber of Commerce and with Sweet Briar.

Ann Henderson Stamets writes to say that she, Jay and Jon are still in Spain, and will not return to the U.S. until May 1986. At Christmas, they traveled to Germany to be with family. They also have trips planned to Scandinavia and Great Britain.

Mary Henningsen Collins obtained her Master's in Spanish Literature from NYU Abroad in Madrid, and is working as a second vice president for aviation for an insurance broker in NYC.

Anna Ho Mah writes from N.C. to say that she is vice president of Computer Images & Graphics, Inc. She and her husband Gary have 2 children, Austing, 8, and Sterling, 6.

In Arizona, Helen Hodges Richards is busy with 2 children. Sarah begins school this year, and 3-year-old James is very active. The family took a camping trip to northern Arizona and enjoyed seeing the Grand Canyon, Indian ruins and Sunset Crater (the remnants of an old volcano).

Last fall Chris Hoefer Myers celebrated her 10th year with the South Carolina ETV Network. She is coordinating air fundraising, and has a goal of $2,000,000! In Sept., she and Jim visited Lesley Vincent in San Francisco. From Ca., Jim flew to China to gather more information on his upcoming book on the Catholic Church in China. On the homefront, Chris, Jim and their daughter Aidan (2½) work very hard in their garden. Chris says it's wonderful therapy.

Ginny Holden had a recent trip to Europe. She visited Paris, Switzerland and London, but especially enjoyed revisiting the Alps.

Susan Ivey Jones writes that she and her husband Charlie are still in Atlanta. He has been in medical practice for 6 years now. Susan stays busy caring for their 2 boys, ages 7 and 4, and also does volunteer work. She had planned to return to Reunion, so was sorry she had to cancel at the last minute.

Beth Jones Elkins and Steve still love living in Newtown, Connecticut. Beth wrote that 17-month-old Merdith has been such a joy to her parents that they decided to try for a second — and will be so blessed on March 22, 1986. In the meantime, Steve is busy in the legal department at Union Carbide, and Beth is benefits manager of an electrical contracting firm.

Christine Kjellstrom Douglas has moved to Syracuse, N.Y. from Hong Kong. She and Sandy spend their summer weekends in the Adirondacks. Christine has a job teaching at the Cazenovia College Nursery School and Sandy remains with the Marine Midland Bank.

From Texas, JoEllen Lenoir writes that she and Martha French Roberts, as president and vice president of the SBC Alum Club, are busy working on exciting plans for their club. JoEllen recently had trips to Winter Harbor, Maine and to Bermuda. She also had a visit from Jennifer Jones, who is about to finish her MBA at Wharton and hopes to move back to Houston to work.

Carol Leslie St. John writes that she stays busy with her interior design firm, as she now does commercial design in addition to residential. Last summer she had a good visit with her sister Diane (class of 73) when she was home from London. Carol's boys, Bryan and Kevin, are 4½ and 2.

This has been a big year for Dot Lyons Heffner. She moved from Florida to Washington, D.C. to marry her honey from Cleveland, Glenn Heffner. (Gwen Taggart Banter was in the wedding — pregnancy and all!) Dot and Glenn have built a new house in Columbia, Maryland, and Dot has joined a neurology practice.

Claire Martin Avegno wrote two days after arriving home from the hospital with little Caroline Gray Avegno. Martin (2½) loved summer camp, and is excited about preschool in the fall. Claire's husband Tommy began a new job in October with an insurance company.

From Massachusetts, Diana Martin Gordon wrote that she has a new job as a faculty member of Eaglebrook School, teaching and accompanying full time. Diana has been performing chamber music regularly for the past 2 years, as well as giving an occasional solo concert. In her spare time, she takes riding lessons from London Gray (class of 71).

Those of us who live in Richmond were sorry to see Polly Mason Dunn leave the Richmond area for Greenville, N.C. Polly and Worth have built a house there where Worth's family and home office are. Polly says they're working on settling down, but she misses all of her Richmond buddies!

Shari Mendelson Gallery and her husband Phil are in the midst of several changes. They have just moved into a new house in West Virginia which they literally built themselves. It's on 20 acres, where they'll grow Christmas trees. Shari will also run her own publishing and marketing consulting business for D.C. clients. She and Phil trade off half days working and caring for their 2 sons, Matthew and Nathan.

Denise Montgomery wrote that she received a big raise last July and has plans to travel to Indianapolis and Louisville.

From Richmond, Holly Morrisett Emison writes that life is great! She now owns Snelling & Snelling — says they're very successful so far and that she's learning a lot. Her 2½-year-old, Graham, jumps, climbs and runs into everything.

Lynn Norris Pfeiffer gave birth to her second child (John Barry) in January 1985. She says that her 2-year-old, Chris, keeps her busy when she's not occupied with the baby.

Patty O'Malley Brunger writes that she stays busy keeping up with her 2 boys, John (3) and Philip (20 mo.). The family recently took a trip to Michigan to visit Mark's family.

From Geneva, Chicago, Kathy Sue Orr writes that she and Roger are enjoying fixing up their house. Kathy Sue stays busy with her Communications Consulting business and the Junior League. She's chairman of the Public Relations Committee, and has enjoyed having Mary Beth Hamlin (class of 76) serve on the committee.

Patricia V. Parker has recently changed jobs and has a long and impressive title. She is an Assistant Vice President, Cash Management Product Development/Operations Manager for the Bank of New England-West. She and her daughter Sarah (2) live in Simsbury, CT.

Jane Perry Bean had a baby boy, Perry Bishop Bean. His siblings, Jet-trey (5) and Emily (2½) think he's a wonderful new toy. Jane is also involved with the opening of the Atlanta International School. She is on the Board of Trustees and her son Jeffrey will attend kindergarten in the bilingual (English/French) program.

Ashley Randle Averell was married to Bill Averell on June 30, 1985 at her parents' new farm in Versailles, Ky. Janice O'Donnell was a houseguest. They honeymooned in Charleston, S.C. — loved it so much, they plan to return. Bill works as a Senior Planner with the Ky. Division of Water. Ashley works from the home office of The E. Randle Co.

Celia Robertson is still working for the American Heart Association in Columbia, S.C. She was sorry to miss Reunion.

From Charlottesville, Va. Anne Ross Shipe writes that little Ross turned a year old in July.

The big news from Sara Ruhle Kyle and Ted is that Richard Milling Kyle was born on Sept. 29, 1985. I saw him at 2 weeks, and he is a precious baby. Sara also wrote that another highlight for her was presenting a paper at the Ewald Symposium at Sweet Briar in April.

From Charlotte, N.C. Sallie Scarborough writes that she still enjoys working with her tather and older brother. Her "nice boss" gives her plenty of time off to travel. Sallie enjoyed a week fishing in April at Chub Cay, a week in June in Bermuda and in September a Mediterranean cruise and visit with friends in Italy.

Delores Scott Arias and her husband still enjoy Boston. They are both in the field of social work. In her spare time, Delores enjoys making bread dough ornaments, batik and other arts and crafts projects.

Janet Shéppard Kelleher is expecting a third child in March, 1986. David is 8 and Sarah is 4. Her husband still works with his computer business and she does volunteer work with the church and school.

Polly Shriver Kochan and her husband Jeff are finishing their residency in diagnostic radiology and will begin their fellowships in July 1986. In their spare time, they enjoy the "horse" events in the Philadelphia area, and stay busy with Michael (2½). They hope to buy a house and doberman soon.

Libby Stough Rush and Noel had their second child, William Stough

Rush, on March 28, 1985. She was sorry to miss Reunion.

Barbie Tafel Thomas is excited about the new house her family will move into in January. She is also busy organizing a Junior League project to get a Children's Discovery Room added to their Science Museum.

On March 28, 1985 Gwynne Taggart Barter gave birth to Adrienne Spencer Barter. Gwynne says she has kept her quite busy. In her free time, she's helping her husband with his network marketing business, playing tennis and relaxing in the Maine sunshine.

Gray Thomas Avery has had quite a busy year. She has begun a part-time job at a Children's Hospital in a pediatric recovery room. She and Rusty vacationed last March with Ann Wesley Ramsey and Rick in Eleuthera Bahamas; in June they went to Bermuda with Rusty's stepsons and in-laws. Last Sept. they moved into town to enjoy some city life after 6 years of country living. Gray stays busy chasing after Catherine (18 months), and says the best job of all is being a Mom!

Leslie Thornton is in public relations with Grey and Co. in Washington D.C.

Marcia Thomas Hornor and her family are still living and working at the Stony Brook School in New York state. They're enjoying living in a Victorian house located near the water with their 4 daughters — Anne (9), Katie (7), Lizzie (4) and Virginia (9 mo). Marcia recently illustrated a book of poems for a poet in the mid-west.

From Worster, Ohio Dorsey Tillett Northrup writes that she stays busy with her 2 boys. Tom began first grade last fall; John (3½) is learning to swim, so they spend a lot of time at the pool. She is also chairing the tollies this fall.

Rose Anne Toppin says that Foster, their 2-year-old, keeps them very busy swimming and running — after a week at the beach last summer, she was exhausted!

Jennifer Turner Joiner is still doing freelance art work. She has begun her own sign company, specializing in sandblasted redwood signs for apartments, shops, etc. She also rides and shows American Saddlebred horses, and cares for her son, Nathaniel (5). Her husband Dan works with F & W Management Corp.

Betty Walton stays "on the go." Her job keeps her in and out of town a lot; she enjoyed a week's cruise last September and a trip to Hilton Head in October, and visits her family in Jacksonville whenever she can.

I talked to Ann Wesley Ramsey on the phone recently. She said Stephen Garrett (they're calling him Garrett) was born on June 5, 1985. The new baby and building a barn keeps them quite busy.

Libby Whitley has received recognition in "Who's Who in American Women" — 1985-1986.

Ashton Williams is also in Richmond. She says that right now her lifestyle is crazy — between business travel, friends and a serious boyfriend.

Worden Willis Galasso and Dale keep up quite a rigorous schedule in Boston. They swim 3 mornings a week at 6 AM. On the weekends they head up to York, Maine to their summer place with their English sheep dog, Bert.

Kathy Wilson Orton has just recently been elected Chairman of the Board of Texas Commerce Bank — Del Oro. She says her life is chaotic, between her job, caring for Chatsy (3) and Virginia (1), and slipping away on weekends to Galveston. They traveled to Aspen last fall. John continues to practice law.

Nancy Wilson Tucker had her third child last spring. Mary Eleanor Tucker was born on June 17, 1985. Nancy said that Betsy Brooks Jones and Brownrigg came to play recently, and they had a good time together.

Sue West Best completed her Ph.D. in Nuclear Engineering from MIT in August 1985. She is now working in College Station, Texas.

And now, my news. First, I want to thank all of you for writing — I enjoyed hearing from every one of you. Keep it up! Also, I want to let you know that our tinal contribution to the school was $14,091. Thanks to everyone for helping us make this generous gift. I'm still in Richmond, and enjoying my job at Sovran as a technical trainer. It's a good combination of "teaching and business" and suits me very well. I also am enjoying dating several people. I managed to make it to the beach twice last summer, and 3 times to the mountains. This year I'm extremely busy with Junior League work — am teaching a Facilitator Workshop with three other women. I'll look forward to hearing from you next fall, if not sooner.

Thank you to all who responded to my request for news. To those who didn't — write next time!! The class of 1979 is spread out across the country; I begin with Alabama: Tucker McGowin spent the summer on a rafting expedition on Idaho's Salmon River; she has had a renewed appreciation of Mother Nature. Tricia

Patterson has been doing some heavy partying since receiving her Masters in Public Health, but has had time to develop a program to aid head injury victims for Hospital Corp. of America. Laurie Bowen Carmichael is doing lots of volunteer work for the Dothan Service League, the local symphony guild and United Way and is on the Board of Parents Anonymous. Little Rock, AR, is still the home of Bunny Brown Bomar and husband Bobby. Bunny is a broker for Dean Witter. She finds time to work in behind-the-scenes community theatre and caring for Toggger and Tosha (their dogs!). Annette Teng Chueng is working in Silicon Valley (that's in California for all you non-computer types!) as a failure analyst for a semiconductor firm. She enjoys working with her MacIntosh, taking care of her rose garden and beating husband Steve at word games. Peggy Girard Thompson is in Connecticut working as an international sales application engineer at Ray Proof which is a world leader in the design, manufacture and installation of enclosures and anechoic chambers which control and shield electromagnetic interference. (Would someone please translate?) Anne Harrison was married in May to UVA grad Eduard Armstrong. Michelle Farley Canning has begun her own Estate Sales business in Fairfield County and leaves the commuting to Rob while she cares for their new baby. She writes that Deborah Parker Gibbs is expecting her first child in April. Shari Sellars continues to fly her plane and in between flights works as a medical technologist for an infertility specialist.

There is an abundance of news from our nation's capital. Saralee Cowles is working for Sen. Mattingly preparing for his re-election bid and still has time to work with Washington's street people as a Jr. League volunteer. She says D.C. General Hospital reminds her of the SAE House at UVA! She sees a lot of Anne Garrity Spees who has a new job in Congressional Affairs for the State Department Security Coordinator. As a result, Anne accompanied President Reagan on his Bonn Economic Summit Trip. Lauren MacMannis Huyett, husband Bill and their two children have moved from California to Washington where Bill is working with the Sterling Institute. Kate Evans Van Hecke has been managing the Greeff Fabrics showroom at the Washington Design Center and she and Chuck have made two recent purchases: a new house and a puppy! Martha Miller is Director of Projects for Columbia Institute, a political consulting firm. Lynn Westine Leyton and husband Roberto have two daughters and she still finds time to work on her master's in Engineering Administration at G.W. University. From the sunshine state comes news of Pam Ramsdell Mitchell. Husband John is in his last year of law school while Pam cares for their daughter and has started up a business making children's bibs. Piper Allen is in Orlando working as a lawyer in the real property department of a large general practice law firm. She would love visits from anyone who won't mind folding themselves into her studio apartment!

Lots of news from our Georgia Crackers: Alison Mitchell graduated from GA State University with a B.S. in Nursing and is currently working in the area of pediatric oncology at Eggleston Hospital for Children in Atlanta. She attended Holly Butler Prather's wedding where she saw Carol Zimmerman and Wendy Worthen. Wendy is working for an engraving company in sales/customer service. Prue Saunders is the editor of a new publication, The Georgia Thoroughbred and is riding and working part-time in a dressage barn. Karen Jaffa McGoldrick is a contributing writer to the magazine which highlights the sport horse industry in Georgia. She also works as a veterinarian's assistant and competes in dressage shows. From Savannah comes news of Bridget Wray Gardner who with husband Jim took a wonderful trip to San Francisco and the Hawaiian Islands. The Land of Lincoln brings news of Susan Andrews Cruess who is in Chicago working for Citibank and caring for their new baby. Debbie Kocik Benton juggles a law practice out of her home, chasing after her 16-month-old-daughter and active involvement with the Junior Women's Club. Anne Mainous Whiteside was married in September to Dr. Hayes Whiteside and they are living in New Orleans, LA, while he finishes his residency in urology. She is still flying for Delta and enjoying it. Hannah Craighill Moorehead and Chip are working hard on fixing up their "new" old house in Baltimore but found time to get away this fall to visit with Sally Colhoun Engram and Mary Harris. Beth Timken Diehl finds life awfully full coordinating for Maryland National Banks automated teller and platform information delivery systems, obtaining a graduate degree in Information Technology at Johns Hopkins University, windsurfing and visiting Kate Hardin. Sally Byron Labarre is doing a lot of travelling in her job with Monumental Life and is also on the board of the American Heart Association. For those of you in the Lynchburg area who watched the Jerry Lewis Labor Day Telethon and wondered who produced the local cuts, the credit goes to Amy Smith Modrick. She and Mike took a well-deserved vacation from work in Maryland and went white-water rafting on the Colorado River. Connor Kelly is in Boston, back at work as the supervisor of dance/movement/therapy interns after travelling all over the eastern seaboard. New Jersey sends news of Aimee Kass who is a founding member of the Humanists of North Jersey, a progressive chapter of the American Humanist Association.

She was very busy this winter planning a folk festival as well as designing and producing pink and green hand-knit sweaters, sizes newborn — 3 years. They're available from the SBC Bookshop.

There are a plethora of 79'ers in NYC doing a variety of things. The newest arrivals are Betsy Byrne Utterback, husband Jim and their two boys. Jim is working for Revlon Health Care and they are expecting their third child in April. Jenny Kelsey Breining is still married and loving it! She continues to work at the American Museum of Natural History in the educational department but is still able to see Joanie Dearborn Choremi and Laura Evans in between social engagements. Joanie and Michael have been working on their house all winter, chasing after their two-year-old and painting. Kelly McBride and Lynne Einsel stayed with them last spring. Laura is in Sotheby's Works of Art Program in American Art and soon may be the foremost expert in American Decorative and Fine Art. Laura Tucker Camp is an assistant vice president with National Bank of Canada in the Corporate Lending Group and has seen Nancy White Bryant. Nancy and GB have bought a house overlooking the Hudson River but she still travels to NYC to work in advertising and fulfill her duties as Alumnae Club President. By the time you read this, Caroline Curme will have added Angelica to her name and taken time off from her job at the Bank of New York for a honeymoon! She is mixing business with pleasure by marrying a co-worker! Sarah Skaggs-Storm is touring and dancing with a modern dance company and has choreographed a new dance which will be produced this spring. Ashley Wilson Edwards sends news from Rocky Mount, NC, that she was married in Feb. 1985. She is now working with the county department of social services as an eligibility specialist. Kathy Pittman Garrett attended Ashley's wedding but left the twins at home! She had a successful showing of her hand-painted children's clothes and decorator pillows and is active in the Wilson Junior Womens Club, the Arts Council and Crisis Center. Lydia Wardwell Zimmerman had a very busy summer: a new daughter, a new town — Pepper Pike, OH — and a return to her job as Branch Manager and Mortgage Loan Officer for Trans Ohio Savings Bank. Mary South Gaab had two big changes this past year: a baby girl and a move from Pittsburgh to Fremont, OH. Terry is working as Assistant Controller for H.J. Heinz. We've got lots of friends in Pennsylvania: Betsy Schick is in Philadelphia having completed her Nursing Masters Degree in Perinatology. Another Philadelphian involved in medicine is Cathy Harold who is associate editor of a medical magazine. More medicine: Gay Goraccia Sliimak has begun an Internal medicine residency alongside her husband at Thomas Jefferson University Hospital. Sally Ann Sells travels to California quite a lot for her job with Mellon Bank but would love visitors who step through Pittsburgh! Sherri Manson has made a drastic career move from banking to construction, specializing in electrical contracting. When she's not working, she aids unwed mothers and does a lot of overseas traveling. While in Baltimore, she stayed with Mary Anne Hutton Felch who has since moved to Chatham Twp, NJ. Vicki Wingate is living and working in Columbia, SC, as the Assistant Deputy Commissioner, Fiscal Affairs, of the SC Department of Mental Retardation. Janet Baldwin McColloch and husband Mike are both practicing law in Dallas, she as a probate and estate planning lawyer and he as a criminal defense attorney. They must be sleeping at the office because at this writing they didn't have any furniture in their new home! Louise Cook has lots of company at her home in Rockport, TX; three horses, four dogs, fish and a rabbit. She keeps very busy! If you ever need to see a 79 face you could just about go all over the state of Virginia and find one! In Roanoke, Page Breakell Beeler has the first signed-up member of '97, her daughter! She and Ben went to Italy and Switzerland last winter to "get away from it all." In Richmond Becky Trulove Symons is staying busy with remodeling and decorating their new house, her Jr. League work and as club president of the Richmond Alumnae Club. Patti Snowden Cloetingh is working as a claims manager for Allstate Insurance Co. Judy Williams Carpenter and Ray presented her mother with her 10th grandchild a year ago! They travelled to Spain last fall. Susan Anthony Lineberry is with the Newport News Parks and Recreation Department as Art and Public Relations Coordinator. She was able to introduce her son to Cindi Little Townsend's daughter before Cindi and Tom moved to Fairfax where he is Senior V.P. of a local bank. Susan Lord writes that all is well in Fredericksburg where she's working for a defense contractor. Phyllis Shelton Higgenbotham no longer has the long haul from Altavista to Amherst; she is now with a law firm in Altavista just one mile from her home! Leslie Forbert Miller has an 18-month-old daughter who keeps her and Jesse busy but in between baby watching and security at SBC they have begun a video production company. She saw Beth Bogdan Tetrault when in Richmond last summer.

We also have representatives overseas: In Australia Jeanette Rowe Cadwallender had a baby in January 1985. Irene Rothschild de Dorfzann is an associate in a representations agency for foreign products in Ecuador. I received a very funny letter from Jane Hubbard Sams who is in Abu Dhabi. "I have been working at a British school...everytime I say something it seems to be interpreted as being dirty...our American English is very different from British English...when I told the headmistress that I would teach her to 'shag,' she turned white — to shag in the British sense means the horizontal rumba..." On that note I close with news from Palm Beach. I plod along as the mother, horse, race car, etc. of a 3-year-old gremlin disguised as a boy and a six-week-old angel — also a boy! I'm still teaching Sunday School, playing on a tennis team, doing a lot of acting and directing and working with Planned Parenthood and the Jr. League. Thank you so much for writing. Keep it up!

Ellen Clare Gillespie is still in NYC and sees Heather Riegel who is working as assistant to the fashion editor of Self Magazine.

As for myself, this has been an exciting year. On Aug. 3, 1985 I married Herb Bennett. Ann Goldmann was maid of honour, Kathy Barrett, Mary Ware Gibson and Sarah Bennett '81 were bridesmaids. We now live in Oak Hill, WV where Herb is the manager of a branch bank and I work part-time at Leggett's. The rest of my time is spent setting up our home, learning how to cook and enjoying marriage. Once again, many thanks to those of you who wrote — next year let's hear from everyone! Health and happiness during the coming year!!!

In the Sweet Briar Tradition

Eliza opened the linen press in Daisy's room to get fresh sheets and a small wicker basket rolled out; as it hit the floor the lid fell back and an envelope slipped out. Eliza picked it up and read 'Last will and testament of Indiana Fletcher Williams.'

With bated breath she carried it into the next room where four or five people were talking in respectfully subdued tones. She handed it to the Reverend Gray who carefully unfolded it and read it aloud.

In this way the wish of James Henry Williams and his wife Indiana, that a school be established at Sweet Briar, became a reality. Indiana Fletcher Williams' bequest carried with it the request that the school "impart to its students such education in sound learning, and such physical, moral, and religious training as shall, in the judgment of the directors, best fit them to be useful members of society." Over the years the resources which Indiana Fletcher Williams provided have been managed well, and today Sweet Briar College stands as a fitting memorial to a beloved, only daughter.

Sweet Briar continues to benefit from the thoughtful support of alumnae, parents, and friends who have included the College in their wills. Over the last year and one half, Sweet Briar has received bequests valued at over $325,000. They have come from alumnae, from friends, and from former faculty and have ranged from $2,000 to $175,000. Each is valued and appreciated and carries with it a commitment to the influence of academic excellence in the lives of future generations of Sweet Briar students.

If you would like further information about including the College in your will or making a life income gift, please contact Lyn Dillard Grones '45, Planned Giving Chairman, or F. Mark Whittaker, Vice President for College Relations, Box G, Sweet Briar College, Sweet Briar, Virginia 24595, (804) 381-6161. Information about estate planning is a service of the Planned Giving Committee. All undesignated bequests become part of the College's permanent endowment and are a valuable source of financial strength upon which the College will continue to depend in the coming years.

ALUMNAE MAGAZINE SUMMER 1986

Association Perspectives

Mark your calendars, pack your bags and make your travel plans: the place to be September 28-30, 1986 is Sweet Briar!

This is truly the “get away” you have been waiting for — Alumnae Council and Founders’ Day. Alumnae Council is the main time that those of us who volunteer for Sweet Briar can have the opportunity to catch up on the latest campus activities, meet with students and faculty, hear plans for the year from the administrators, improve our skills and learn new techniques for attracting qualified students and providing funds for scholarships. It is also a time for class members to make plans for their Reunion activities.

Another very special part of the Alumnae Council is the Alumnae Memorial Service for all alumnae who have died during the past year.

Founders’ Day gives us an opportunity to remember our “roots” as well as to acknowledge our “stars” — the recipient(s) of the Alumnae Award for Outstanding Service to the College in a Volunteer Capacity. In addition the College honors the employees who have given 10 or more years of service; this is always a favorite part of the program with the students.

I urge those of you who are giving so generously of your time to Sweet Briar to give yourself a real TREAT and come to Council in September. We have saved a place for you — don’t disappoint us!

Ruth Frame Salzberg '58 in the sky above Farmington flying her rainbow balloon, "Archangel."

English and a good start in my chosen career as a writer. I was working at The Saturday Evening Post when a UVA man I had met at SBC tracked me down and whisked me away into marriage and the freelance life.

One magic afternoon when our son, Tom, was nine and our daughter, Anne, six, we took the children to a balloon festival. There, tethered by ropes, huge balloons rose and fell, making the air resound with the periodic deep roar of their burners — the sound of dragons breathing. I felt as if I had been tied in a knot for years and was becoming permanently unravelled. Nothing I had experienced before had prepared me for this.

"Do you think I could get a ride in one?" I whispered. My husband looked at me. Then he smiled and said, "Go find out how to fly one!" Thus began my love affair with ballooning.

The requirements for a pilot's license with a free balloon rating included passing a four hour written FAA exam, 10 hours of flight instruction, a solo, and a flight test. The fee for flight instruction was a whopping $1,000. Since Bob was temporarily unemployed, I decided to take the free exam first and headed for the library, only to discover there was no written material at all on hot-air balloons. The sport was still in its infancy.

In lighter-than-air flight I had found a whole new frontier waiting to be explored. In the next few years, I would find myself contributing to basic instruction manuals on the art of aerostation, helping to develop pilot proficiency programs, and even teaching in-flight emergency procedures. I knew I was

Romancing the Wind

By Ruth Frame Salzberg '58

My father, who is 87 years old, used to tell me stories about the old barnstorming smoke balloonists. Last year we took our balloon to Lynchburg, where he now lives at Westminster-Canterbury, to give tether rides to all his friends there. It was the first time my father had seen my balloon, but he wasn't impressed. "Tether rides are too tame," he grumbled, and thumped the basket with his cane. "Cut her loose and let's go flying!"

For some, the lure of danger beckons at any age. They are the challengers, the risk takers. In them we recognize our own hunger to test ourselves, to find our limits. This spirit of adventure calls as strongly to some women as it does to some men.

As a child, I too jumped from high places with umbrellas, romancing the wind with kites and gliders, dreaming always of flight. Later, airplanes became linked in my mind with the military and with war. I stopped pretending to be Amelia Earhart.

When I graduated from Sweet Briar in 1958, I had a degree in Ruth Salzberg was an executive secretary at Aetna Life and Casualty but switched to part-time work to have more time to write and fly. She has served as a director of the Balloon Federation of America and is an FAA safety counselor for the state of Connecticut. She has won a number of trophies, including the Adirondack Sportsman's Award, and her balloon, "Aladdin", has appeared on posters, jigsaw puzzles and TV commercials.

taking off on a great adventure, but had no idea how high I would be lifted out of myself, or that I would be carried to levels of achievement of which I had never dreamed myself capable.

To keep the wolf from our door while Bob looked for a job, I worked as a word processor for a lab. To earn the money for my pilot's license, I began cranking out magazine articles and selling everything I owned of any value. Little red stickers began appearing on furniture and possessions Bob wanted to keep.

My husband is a most extraordinary man. That summer of 1974 he cheerfully babysat for weekends at a time, while I took the bus from White Plains, New York to Massachusetts for flight training. We do things differently these days, but at that time the philosophy of most balloon instructors was simply to push the baby bird out of the nest. I will always be thankful for the generosity of a young man named Rick Behr, who not only let me inflate his balloon several times, but who insisted I do so under high wind conditions.

The day I came home with my new pilot's license, Bob bought another batch of red stickers. This time it took me four years to save enough money to buy my very own aerostat, a beautiful AX-6 rainbow balloon I named "Aladdin". Shortly afterward, Bob got a job as Industrial Fabrics Manager for a New England textile mill and we moved to Connecticut where we had the whole Farmington Valley to fly in.

We have been very much a ballooning family. Our son, Tom, now a senior at UConn, once tackled an electric fence to grab my drop line. Anne, now a freshman at Boston University, appeared in several magazines and was filmed for a television show going up on top of the balloon, a stunt she first tried as a special treat for her 12th birthday.

Bob never wanted to learn to fly. In fact, he has been up with me only two or three times, but he loves driving the chase car. The only time he gets at all anxious about me is when I am flying unusual or experimental aircraft. Last year I found myself in Montreal as one of a three-person crew flying a Class D-38 Hygrade thermal airship owned by Star Balloons. During my solo flight the jack shaft on the airship broke, shattering the propeller and turning the engine into shrapnel. We call that a white knuckle flight. (I tried sky diving too, but that really made Bob crazy, so I promised to stick to ballooning. The thrill lasts longer, anyway.)

I also had the unforgettable opportunity to fly the Goodyear Airship "Enterprize" on a brief orientation flight. My legs are so short I could hardly reach the rudder pedals; I'm afraid I flew like Captain Yo-yo. Airships are exciting but they lack the freedom of a balloon. Ballooning, after all, is the only form of travel in which the journey means more than the destination.

Our most adventuresome flights have been several high altitude ones to over 11,000 feet AGL (above ground level), crossings of Long Island Sound, and numerous rooftop promotions for nightclubs. Most memorable of all was flying for the Opening Ceremonies of the 1980 Winter Olympics at Lake Placid.

I have tried airships and gliders. I have flown tiny AX-4 balloons with no basket, just a harness that lets you tiptoe on rooftops and sit on chimneys. Rick Behr, who now flies the Boar's Head Inn Balloon out of Charlottesville, has let me fly his AX-10, a gigantic balloon capable of carrying a dozen people. Most recently I have flown a U.S. Army (1940 vintage) hydrogen gas balloon. It costs over $2,000 to fill a gas balloon for one flight and opportunities to fly one on the East Coast are rare.

Because ballooning is expensive (about $90/hour), I must fly commercially in order to afford my hobby. When "Aladdin" became old and tired, I replaced it with an AX-7 envelope of the same horizontal rainbow design and named the new balloon "Archangel". We earn between $600 and $1,000 for a two hour promotion, flying for parties, grand openings and media events. Lectures and slide shows are also profitable fun.

Ballooning has changed a lot in the last decade. We used to fly for fun and frolic and all the pilots knew each other. Every flight was one of discovery, pushing the boundaries of the frontier higher. Today in parts of the country like Albuquerque, it isn't unusual to have a balloon festival featuring a mass ascension of 400 balloons. The Balloon Federation of America has a membership of over 3,000 pilots. However, for reasons which baffle me, there are less than 300 women pilots.

As individuals, women today hold world balloon records for distance, duration and altitude. Women fly commercially, own and operate repair stations, build balloons and sit on boards of national and international balloon organizations. However, women as a group do not seem to be aware of the many possibilities open to them in lighter-than-air flight.

Before I discovered ballooning, I had no real identity apart from being a wife or mother. Until I soloed,

I never knew what it meant to take responsibility for my life in my own hands. Ballooning is a relatively safe sport, but it takes concentration, assertiveness and control. A room full of younger, thinner women used to turn my knees to jelly. Now I just imagine I am flying my balloon and float on in.

Some people pass their lives in waiting, never finding the spark that will ignite their light within. They sleep, never knowing that they dream. I have been doubly blessed, having found in my husband a love to last a lifetime, and in ballooning a way to make that life full and exciting for both of us.

I wish I could tell you what it is really like to fly in a balloon, but you will have to experience the art of aerostation for yourself. Every flight is different. Some are high wind, white knuckle basket benders, while most are lyrical, almost a religious experience. The balloons lift off at dawn, drifting like the rainbow fragments of a myth. Their burners flicker like starlight in a jar. Below, people still in their pajamas run out of their houses to wave and shout, "Good morning!" Dogs bark. We call down to the children, "Are we in Kansas yet?" and "Have you seen Toto?"

"Where are you going?" they call back. We neither know nor care. Every breeze brings adventure when you live by romancing the wind. □

Briar Patch Designs — Unlimited!

By Julia Sadler de Coligny '34

If you're into planning the best possible wardrobe for the new season and you have in mind basic black with some knockout accessories — a lace jabot, a ribbon belt, a woven bag or a combination of all three, do we have good news for you! Suzanne Collins '78 is president of her own thriving company, which is busy with designers, cutters, stitchers, packers, bookkeepers and shipping clerks. In fact, every step is covered from start to finish in the six-year old Briar Patch Designs, Inc., which has gone home to Greenville, South Carolina in the last year and a half.

Suzanne, having graduated from Sweet Briar with a major in Psychology, had elected to work toward a master's degree at the University of Virginia and had settled into an apartment in Charlottesville. As a graduate assistant she had a job doing psychological testing. She was working hard and doing well, but realized that she was always doing something with her hands in spare moments. Almost unconsciously, colorful little creations would emerge in the form of something to wear. These attracted attention; her friends paid her so many compliments, urging her to show her designs in local shops that she succumbed and walked boldly into a boutique to try her luck. Immediately she got an order for five ribbon belts a week. Soon after, a second shop saw them and ordered 25 a week. She suddenly had to face the fact that her hobby was pushing her "career" into second place and that she could not meet the demands alone. By the time her mother came for a visit in the fall of 1980, she was already in the process of learning from her grandfather how to incorporate. (This was being done through secret correspondence between Greenville and Charlottesville.)

Perhaps Suzanne was one of the luckiest novice entrepreneurs alive: not only was her grandfather a knowledgeable, experienced businessman anxious to advise her in her "secret" endeavors, but her mother found a wish fulfillment of her own. "Mother" is Susan Hayward Collins, Sweet Briar '55, who was no stranger to Suzanne's undertakings. She spent her early married life in Memphis with six children demanding the extras she dreamed of marketing. She thoroughly enjoyed sewing, design and merchandizing, but that was in the fifties, when a woman with small children didn't "go out to business." Even so, Susan had a considerable career in fashion coordination and sewing design. Suzanne developed her eye for color and design from watching her mother sew for the Women's Exchange in Memphis. They enjoy working together. Susan is now vice president of Briar Patch Designs and runs the retail outlet which occupies the storefront shop of the factory on space rented in a shopping center in Greenville. The retail outlet serves as a place where they can sell production overruns at the end of the season or the experimental samples that they test for saleability before putting into full production.

Still another way in which Sweet Briar has blessed this business venture is a little piece of networking which is well worth reporting: it seems that Mary Ann Mellen Root '53 was living in Wilton, Connecticut and working for Talbot's. She and Susan were good friends in college, and when Mary Ann heard about Suzanne's new business in Charlottesville, she was able to place some Briar Patch Designs in the Talbot's catalogue, which was helpful. Now the scene changes and Mary Ann's husband is transferred to Atlanta briefly and then on to Greenville, where old friends are reunited. Result: Mary Ann joins Briar Patch Designs as chief of merchandizing.

Another example of networking had surfaced just as Suzanne was being interviewed for this article. She told us that her mother (Susan) had left for a trip to China. Prior to departure, she stopped in Atlanta to look for information on locating China silks and laces for their most glamorous accessories — and guess what she found: Peggy Sheffield Martin's (SB '48) daughter-in-law, Stella Wright Martin '77, owns a shop (Hong Kong Shoppers) in Hong Kong! This should convince us all of the efficacy of networking.

At last report, Briar Patch Designs are shipped as far away as Alaska and stocked in 1000 stores nationwide. Suzanne did indeed let her hobby get the upper hand, but in the long run perhaps it will enable her to afford to do psychological testing as a hobby!

Rome, 1985

By William Smart
Director, Virginia Center for the Creative Arts and Professor of English,
Sweet Briar College

Rome's a very crowded and noisy place, full of people and cars and motorbikes and buses. But when occasionally it's still — in the middle of the night or for an overwhelming moment in the afternoon sometimes — the sound you're most likely to hear is the splashing of water. I think of Bernini's Fountain of the Four Rivers in the Piazza Navona, and a marvelous huge fountain at the top of the Janiculum near the Porta San Pancrazio, and the two fountains like marble water-troughs inside the entrance to the American Academy. The strange thing about Roman fountains is that sporadically, unpredictably, they are turned off, and suddenly you notice their silence, and the absence saddens you.

The other sound that's equally ubiquitous in Rome is the sound of sirens and of helicopters chop-chop-chopping overhead. In my room at the Academy, three or four times a day I'd hear the choppers and look out the window — my room faced into the courtyard — and hope to see those ugly grasshoppers going over. Once I heard a whirring, buttery sound, like a little motorboat, and went up on the roof and was amazed and delighted to see the Goodyear Blimp. It hovered over Rome the whole last month I was there and after a while I stopped even looking up.

One night there was a tremendous rainstorm with thunder and lightning that crashed and exploded like nothing I'd ever heard before: Mt. San Angelo had nothing on the Janiculum. I lay in bed thinking we'd be blown apart, but the next day was as clear and bright as if I'd dreamed it.

The colors of Italy are burnt sienna and dark umber. In the parks the paths are brown gravel. From the roof of the Academy you can see all of Rome, brown and dark red, except for the spectacular whiteness of St. Peter's and that gaudy wedding cake, the monument to Victor Emmanuel. The other color is the dark green of the plastic under the scaffolding that hides so many of the great arches and columns you would like to see. And the shiny blue POLIZIA cars, always zooming in and out of traffic, their sirens whooping.

One Sunday afternoon a friend and I went to a soccer match between Roma and Firenze at the Olympic Stadium. There were machine guns mounted on tripods on top of vans, and we had to hold up our arms and be searched before entering the stadium (much tighter security than at Leonardo da Vinci airport!) Having bought our tickets from a waiter at the Academy, we were in the cheapest section, among Roma's most fanatic fans. Even though we arrived an hour and a half before the game, there were no seats left and we had to stand against a wall at the top of the stadium. We decided not to speak because our American voices would give us away and if there was a riot we just might be tossed over the wall. Even though our section was jam-packed, the rest of the stadium was empty and didn't fill up until just before the game started. At our end there were tall chain-link fences topped with barbed wire to prevent fans from getting onto the field or into any of the other sections. A long, corrugated steel tunnel protruded out onto the playing field, and just before the game, soldiers with German shepherds on leashes came out of the tunnel and took positions around the field. Then a huge roar went up when the Roma players came out of the tunnel, strolling languidly. The crowd booed when the Firenze team appeared, walking in pairs. Along a parapet halfway down our section of the stands, thirty-odd men in red and yellow shirts sat on a wall with long, red and yellow drums between their legs and beat rhythmically in unison while the fans sang "Roma, Roma, Roma" to the tune of "Yellow Submarine." When Roma scored its first goal, everyone in our section roared and gave Sieg Heil salutes. When the Firenze goalie was accidentally kicked in the groin and lay writhing on the ground, the fans went crazy, cheering and laughing, heaving red and yellow smoke bombs against the chain-link fence.

How different this exuberant, violent world from the quiet decorum of the Academy. The Academy is located at the top of the Janiculum Hill, in an area of huge houses that are now occupied by foreign embassies and religious orders. The Republic of Ireland has its embassy a block away, the Russian Embassy is two blocks away. The American Ambassador to the Holy See lives across the street, in a house owned by the Academy. In front of it two carabinieri sat in a car parked halfway on the sidewalk, chain-smoking and reading racing magazines twenty-four hours a day. They held machine guns on their laps; the year before one of them had shot the other in the foot accidentally. When the Ambassador came home there'd be POLIZIA cars in front and in back of his car, and Secret Service cars in front and in back of the POLIZIA. Just like in the movies, men in dark suits, wearing sunglasses, would get out and stand in the street looking both ways while the gates to the Ambassador's house were opened and his car backed in. Those moments when the gates were briefly opened we could see German shepherds prowling the grounds inside. We could see all this from the Billiard Room and sometimes at night we would look out the window when we saw the flashing blue lights because it meant the Ambassador was arriving home. The curtains in his house were always closed and floodlights lit up the outside all night.

The main building at the Academy is a huge palazzo built around an open courtyard. From the street you enter the grounds of the Academy through tall, wrought iron gates. When I first arrived, the gates stood ajar during the day, but after the “Achille Lauro” incident (when Leon Klinghofer was shot and thrown overboard in his wheelchair by the Palestinian hijackers), they were kept shut and you had to be known or have a pass to get by the gate-keeper. Inside the gates is a wide gravel walkway bordered by flowering bushes and hedges. A wide flight of steps leads up to a stone terrace, then a second flight of steps leads to the door into the building. Inside you come into a very high foyer that contains Roman statuary and broken pieces of columns and the water-trough fountains to each side. A third flight of steps leads up to the arcade that surrounds the courtyard. Inside the courtyard are four tall cypresses and, in the center, a small fountain of a man wrestling with a snake, designed by the sculptor Paul Manship who did the famous bas-reliefs at Rockefeller Center in New York. The ground of the courtyard is covered with small brown gravel and bisected into paths by low hedges.

You can look at the pictures of the Academy, but what’s almost impossible to grasp is the scale. On the ground floor the ceilings are almost thirty feet high, the windows at least fifteen. Even up on the second floor the ceilings are about eighteen feet high; I wished my room could be turned sideways. Then there were two other floors above that. The painters’ and sculptors’ and architects’ studios were so big you could’ve set my square, two-story house inside any of them. From the roof one could see all of Rome; leaning out over the stone balustrade, the drop to the ground was equivalent to at least a six- or seven-story building in America.

There are well over a hundred rooms in the main building; I had room #88, and I was only on the second floor. There were approximately sixty scholars and artists in residence during the two months I was there, and most of them had two rooms — a bedroom and a study or a studio. All the rooms faced either inside onto the courtyard, or outward onto the grounds. Number 88 looked down into the courtyard, and the most lasting impression I have is of the umbrellas of the scholars who came during the day to work in the Academy’s library or fototeca: on rainy days (I didn’t know it rained so much in Italy) I’d see 10 or 15 umbrellas leaning sideways, open, on the walkway that runs beneath the arcade, like little black sailboats when the tide’s out.

Of the sixty of us in residence, over half were scholars — mainly classicists and art historians — and the rest were architects or artists. There were two sculptors, three painters, two composers, and three writers (of whom I was euphemistically one). Half were on Prix de Rome fellowships and would stay a year, and the rest of us were either Visiting Artists or Visiting Scholars and only there for a couple of months.

The heyday of the American Academy was between the two world wars, back before Fulbright, Guggenheim, and National Endowment for the Arts and Humanities fellowships came into being. The Academy was pretty much a male enclave then, a kind of Roman outpost of the Harvard Club.

There’s a bar on the ground floor behind the Billiard Room, and on the wall behind it are hung perhaps a hundred small oil portraits of former Fellows. There are a few famous people there — Roger Sessions and Samuel Barber — but mainly they all look like Bill Tilden or Charles Lindbergh — that look not only of intelligence, but also of money and charm. (Back in those days, I heard, the small studios were for the Fellows’ valets.) Among those hundred portraits there’s only one woman, and that’s a very recent addition, a feminist with a sense of humor I suppose.

Nowadays of course, all that’s changed. Half the residents are women, and none of us had valets. (If I’d known . . .) Most of the furniture needs upholstering, the drapes are yellow, there are holes in the tennis net, helicopters go over, blue lights flash in the windows at night, the painters don’t paint good-likeness portraits of the composers, and the composers love Elvis Costello and The Rolling Stones. Still, it’s a wonderful place, where you can walk down zigzag steps past discarded hypodermic needles and come into the narrow, winding, laundry-strung streets of Trastevere, cross the Tiber, and be standing in the Piazza Navona, eating an ice cream cone, in just fifteen minutes from when you left the Academy.

A little girl named Daisy playing on the steps of Sweet Briar House and running in the Boxwood Gardens is an image easily conjured up by anyone familiar with Sweet Briar history. This year for the first time, six little girls, all known as Daisy, play hide and seek in Daisy's Garden, claiming it as their own, and talk with the black iron animals on the porch of Sweet Briar House.

This bunch of Daisies, Daisy Girl Scout Troop 1002, is the newest addition to the more well-known levels of Girl Scouting for older girls. Although a long-established program in other parts of the country, Daisy Girl Scouts is new to the Amherst-Sweet Briar area, and provides a one-year scouting experience for five-year-olds. This Daisy Troop feels especially comfortable at Sweet Briar because of its unusual ties to the College. Troop sponsorship is held by the Alumnae Office of Sweet Briar with the special interest and support of Ann Morrison Reams '42, Director of the Alumnae Association. Well-trained troop leadership is provided by alumnae Sandra Stella Horwege ('74), leader, and Elodie Taylor Thompson ('71), assistant leader.

The troop membership includes three alumnae daughters: Monika Horwege (Sandra Stella Horwege, '74), Jessie Smart (Juliana Frosch Smart, '78), Meredith Thompson (Elodie Taylor Thompson, '71); other members are Emily Hunter, Anne Reddy and Cindy Rowe. Three of the Daisies are Sweet Briar alumnae in their own right, having attended Sweet Briar nursery school, and two are preparing to graduate from Sweet Briar kindergarten this spring. And finally, two of the girls are faculty daughters.

The special ties with Sweet Briar would be complete had the name "Daisy" been borrowed from Daisy Fletcher Williams, but that is not the case. Girl Scouting in the United States was founded in 1912 by Juliette "Daisy" Gordon Low of Savannah, Georgia: our modern Daisies are her namesake. Juliette Gordon Low brought Girl Scouting to the United States from England. There she had known Lord Baden-Powell, founder of Boy Scouting, and his sister Agnes, who had started a similar movement for girls, calling it Girl Guides. In 1912, Juliette Low had the first American Girl Guide meeting at her home in Savannah, and in 1913 changed the name of the movement to Girl Scouts.

Our little Daisies participate in many of the activities common to all levels of Girl Scouting. They have uniforms, Daisy pins, special patches and enjoy games, songs, crafts, hikes and field trips. Sweet Briar provides an unlimited resource for many of these activities, with two museums, the dairy, the riding center, the lakes and hiking paths. In all honesty, the most popular activity seems to be picnicking and tombstone-climbing on Monument Hill. The advent of spring has brought a renewed interest in anything that creeps, crawls, flies or flowers, and again Sweet Briar will be a wonderful place to investigate.

When fall comes, these little Daisies will have bridged up to Brownies, and this special one-year association with Sweet Briar will have ended. But both leaders agree that it has been a busy and fun-filled year together, with Sweet Briar adding a special dimension to our activities.

And who knows, maybe we've laid some groundwork for the Class of 2002!

Thoughts on Sweet Briar's Turning Point Students

By Cornelia Perkins Zinsser '52

In 1982 Caroline Bloy, then an admissions counselor heading up Sweet Briar's newly named Turning Point Program, wrote an article describing the two-year-old phenomenon which at that time included 13 students. Nearly four years later the program has 38 students for the '85-'86 academic year and has become an integral part of life at Sweet Briar College.

Through conversations which have helped me get to know the Turning Point students I have been impressed with the enthusiasm and loyalty to the College which these women manifest. I have not heard a lukewarm response. Even in the tough early days of their new venture, their words are completely positive: "I love the program," "Sweet Briar is wonderful!", "I'm so glad to be here." These reactions indicate that the nontraditional students (who are either 26 or older or at least four years out of an educational institution) are recipients of an educational experience similar to the one which all Sweet Briar alumnae share in memory and which enriches the years of each new freshman starting up. It is good to know that as times change and "new occasions teach new duties", women who choose college for reasons new and different from those of the traditional student are as enlivened by the atmosphere of this campus as they are informed by their studies here. It is also important to realize that Turning Point students are launched on a course which leads to the B.A. degree.

The Turning Point students bring to Sweet Briar an enthusiasm for education and an intensity about their academic work which delights their professors and inspires their fellow students. When asked what quality best characterizes the group, TP student LuAnn Hunt of Amherst, who plans to be an elementary school teacher, said ringingly, "Determination!" The commitment of these older women (once called Mature Returning Students — largely for the acronym) bears out LuAnn's remark. The relationship between the Turning Point students and the College is a mutual back-scratching one. What the students bring to the educational process contributes to the very atmosphere with which they are so pleased.

Where does this chicken-or-the-egg phenomenon begin? Probably no amount of constructing or promoting of a new academic program for returning students would be effective if there were not women in the surrounding community recognizing new needs in their lives. In the prospective student there must be a spark, a realization that she has arrived at a turning point in her life. It is this first essential to which the College responded in 1980, as Caroline Bloy said, "with encouragement, advice and warm welcome". In her administration of the program Mrs. Bloy truly embodied that response: she is always mentioned with gratitude by students and others who worked with her in the early days of Turning Point. From the merging of student and College interests the program evolved with enthusiastic support: the whole College community — faculty, staff and students — shows great interest in it, and according to Brenda Payne, a TP Sociology major from Amherst who has worked at the Development Office during reunions, returning alumnae often inquire about the program and the women in it.

The women choosing Turning Point have been motivated by many different concerns arising from the changes in women's lives in the past few decades. The economic realities of raising even a small family in the latter half of the twentieth century have required a switch from housewife to co-breadwinner for numbers of women. Many who chose Turning Point did so in recognition that a B.A. degree would enhance both their job chances and their earning power. Specific career interests often prompt the decision to go for a degree. Joyce Coleman, a magna cum laude TP graduate of the Class of 1985, has just completed her first year at the Washington and Lee University Law School. Having hoped for a long time to join a law firm, Joyce is well on the way to attaining her goal.

For some women the more deeply personal concern for improving their self-esteem has been a motivating factor. A college committed to top quality education for women is the likely place for those who seek to improve their confidence. As one student noted, "I needed to be able to form an opinion, and to be able to express it and to have it respected." For her needs a small woman's college is the obvious answer since it provides a learning environment which is self-challenging rather than competitive and which removes the threat of the male put-down which several women commented had been part of their experience in previous work and learning situations. The TP women seem to have homed in to the ideal situation at Sweet Briar, where each can be an individual within a supportive community. Barbara Jastrebsky of Lynchburg, who had been out of school for 25 years before beginning at Sweet Briar, says, "I learned that I could compete here." The needs, concerns and goals of the women enrolled in the Turning Point Program seem to represent a microcosm of the whole wider realm of women's issues, which may account for similar programs in a number of women's colleges, such as Wellesley, Mt. Holyoke and Agnes Scott.

The bond between the college and the local community, which programs like Turning Point tend to strengthen, is one reason for their success. The institution offers the content of a liberal arts program, training in the skills needed to best interpret subject matter, and the intangibles of welcome and support. The student recipient carries these back to the family with whom she lives and to the community where she works. The TP students who are preparing for teaching careers evince a commitment to service in the community as part of the responsibility they are undertaking. Several students are involved in practice teaching in the Amherst school system where they are fortunate to be able to work with several coordinating teachers with Sweet Briar educations behind them. Some TP women will work in Amherst, but Susan Leonard, a 1984 Phi Beta Kappa graduate from Amherst with a Math-Econ major, is now teaching at Lynchburg's E.C. Glass High School. Barbara Rose Page, who graduated with distinction in 1983 lives in Piney River, Nelson County, and teaches kindergarten at Schuyler Elementary School. As partial fulfillment of the requirements for her SB degree with a Music in Culture major, Barbara wrote an extensive thesis on Othello R. Wilson, black educator and musician, and his influence on the education and the lives of blacks in rural Nelson County during the nineteen-thirties. This past February, Barbara's thesis was featured in newspaper coverage honoring Black History Month and currently is being used as text material for a social studies course at Schuyler Elementary School.

Others are looking toward careers which are not automatically categorized as women's work and hope with their degrees to be able to compete for responsible jobs in local businesses. As Professor George Lenz of the Physics Department commented, "At whatever stage we pick up these women, younger or older, we can prepare them to compete effectively in the fields of business and industry or in later graduate study." Obviously the TP students are being prepared to assume the "privileges and responsibilities of the community of educated men and women" mentioned in the graduation ceremony.

Whenever new responsibilities are undertaken there are bound to be trials, and the Turning Point experience is not all ease and success. There are problems within families when the wife/mother takes up the commitment of academic work, often on top of a full or part-time job. Brenda Payne described the excitement and pride of her family when she started at Sweet Briar, but reported that these were followed by gripes and complaints when the homemade pizza failed to materialize and the family athletic outings were reduced dramatically in number. There are problems also in a woman's social life when she must drop out of community activities, women's groups or even the get-togethers which regularly renew a one-on-one friendship. Her commitment to her college work may set a woman apart from her peers and open her to some degree of resentment and criticism.

Another stressful aspect of entering college late is the fear which haunts the student that she may be unable to do the work, that she may let herself down, that she may fail in the eyes of family and friends. To help in coping with these painful and anxiety-provoking feelings, the TP students are fortunate to have each other. They can understand each other's needs when it is hard to justify them to "outsiders". Toni Dean, who has worked with Byrd Stone at the Sweet Briar Nursery School and who hopes to graduate in 1988, says that the feeling of sisterhood within the group is "fantastic!" The strong sense which the TP students have of themselves as a group arises from shared experience and is fostered further by the College, which provides opportunities for the TPs to be together, whether in the Day Students' Lounge in Reid, at monthly luncheon meetings in Prothro or in small groups which meet with John Boyd, a psychiatrist who helps unravel some of the complexities which occur in the lives of students who carry multiple responsibilities along with their academic programs.

Out of concern for just such complexities, an alumna asked me a pair of potent questions which she felt would be on other people's minds regarding Turning Point: Why are these women going back to college?, and How? We've touched on the reasons why a late college career with a degree as the goal seems the right alternative for women beyond the usual college age, but only a personal in-depth interview could fill in all the details around an individual's choice in this area. As for the How question, the mechanics of the Turning Point program are handled by the Admissions Office under the watchful eye of Marjorie Southworth-Purdy, who processes applications and helps with the transfer of previous credits as well as course selection. All Turning Point students also come to know Ann Aiken, the Director of Financial Aid, since she works with each one on her individual tuition package. Turning Point students pay one half of the normal tuition for each course credit, and about 90% of them need some financial assistance through state grants, federal low interest loans, scholarship help or campus employment, in order to meet the cost of their education. Beyond the immediate concerns of admissions and financial aid, Turning Point students find assistance in many departments of the College. Career Planning helps in setting long-range goals for students and provides many special programs featuring recent alumnae in various job fields. The Academic Resource Center helps with study skills, and the Student Affairs Office arranges and facilitates many their college experience as a second opportunity. This point of view helps the other students to see that grades are not everything. The women in Turning Point measure themselves on more than just the academic scale." Judy sees the perspective and objectivity which older students gain from their experience outside the classroom as parallel to the benefit which traditional students derive from off-campus internships. Turning Point students are well-integrated into whatever classes they take and temper the learning process with maturity as they take a broad view of their work.

The advantage of having older students in a peer relationship with younger women is evident from any conversation with faculty members who have had TPs in class. Furthermore the College benefits from their presence in practical ways. Where due to demographic changes there has been a decline in the size of the pool from which Sweet Briar students are selected, the Turning Point students provide an alternative source of high quality applicants. In accepting them, the College meets a community need to train women who will be local leaders, and improves Sweet Briar's image in the immediate area and in the consideration of other institutions of learning. A strong program for alternative students is a feather in Sweet Briar's cap and is economically feasible since as nonresidents the Turning Point students do not take dormitory space from qualified younger women.

Only in the past academic year of 1985-86 has this generality been challenged; four women from beyond Sweet Briar's geographic area have been resident students. Jessica Steinhice of Chattanooga was at Sweet Briar in 1974-75 and has returned to do a Music major and will also take an Arts Management certificate. Allen Huszti of the Music Department has enjoyed working with Jessica, since in her late twenties her voice has had qualities as yet undeveloped in the voices of college-age students. Jessica's roommate Christine Furlong is a twenty-seven year old from Newfoundland who read some Sweet Briar literature while she was visiting in the South last spring. She wanted to continue her education beyond the business degree she received from a state university at home and she found that the Sweet Briar material offered everything she wanted. That promise was fulfilled in her campus visit and subsequent enrollment and Christine is very happy in her Government-Econ major. The value of what Sweet Briar offers is evident, as Christine's story tells, to a person with no prior knowledge of the place, and the benefits are there to be discovered by students who differ in geographic origin, in age, in their position as singles, wives or mothers, or in their experience in the work force. The varied stories of Sweet Briar's Turning Point students bear witness to the College's wide-reaching appeal as a place of higher education for women.

There isn't room here for all the wonderful Turning Point stories, but a few will convey the message. Louanne Woody of Hurt, Virginia, had previously studied at Virginia Tech. She is the recipient of a two-year grant from the state which is designed to improve high school teaching in science and math, and Louanne will graduate to a teaching job this June. Linda Thoma has spent her last undergraduate term in Grey Dormitory as a Resident Coordinator and will return to her husband and three teenage sons in Germany where she plans to work for an American company following graduation. Anne Marie Liddell comes down from Scottsville to work as a Studio Art major and will have a one-woman show this spring. Meredith Meers and Shela Silberman have demanding full-time jobs at the Lynchburg Training School and also manage their family responsibilities, as well as carrying full academic loads. It is stories like these which bring in new Turning Point students each fall and which inspire younger students in their academic work, and in which the whole College community can rejoice. All the stories call forth good wishes and strong hopes for the continuing success of this remarkable program.

meetings and activities. Gwen Bombay, a junior from Elon with a baby under a year, an older child and a husband who is out of the state with the U.S. Army, described the way she feels about what the College does for her: "I feel as if I had a nine-hundred-person support group behind me." LuAnn Hunt says, "The place feels like home — it never seemed like an institution." Obviously every student, faculty or staff person has become an ambassador of good will toward the Turning Point students. The unique opportunities which the College extends to these students and their families represent a real bonus which they say they have not found in other educational settings. Lake, pool, gym, weight room, par course and tennis courts, the Commons, library and computer facilities, and the lectures, films and performing arts events are all utilized or attended and are much appreciated by the whole Turning Point family. Bea Wright, a senior Phi Beta Kappa Math and Computer major, with a husband and two school-age children, says that she arranges her computer hours so that the children can work out in the gym while she puts in a couple of hours of quiet work.

There is no question that Sweet Briar offers a great deal to the Turning Point women, as has been the case with all previous generations of students, but it is important to recognize the reciprocal gifts which the nontraditional students bring the College. In the words of Judy Elkins, Professor of Mathematics and advisor to many TPs: "These are among our best students. They are highly motivated and bring enthusiasm and interest to their classes. Where traditional students sometimes feel that college is just 'what you do', the Turning Points see Frequently people ask, "Why are you going to law school (pausing to clear their throats before adding) at your age?" Apparently they expect one definitive answer to this question, when in fact the reasons go on and on. A compilation of answers would look something like a shopping list — children leaving home, mid-life crisis, need for self-actualization, search for self — all those good everyday clichés that cover a multitude of feelings. Tucked away somewhere in the list is a sort of Hound-of-Heaven compulsion. I am driven to do this by a network of personal goals.

The "Superwoman Syndrome" is a contagious disease among most adult female students: we want to do it all. My dream was to have a law career, and it seemed so simple. Wrong! In order to have a law career, one first must go to law school. Getting into law school resembles the Labours of Hercules — passing day-long tests, hyperventilating over your GPA, filling out forms, wearing the right suit to the interviews — then camping out by the mailbox, hoping for just one acceptance. Staying in law school once you are accepted is an even more staggering task, and commuting over a narrow, mountainous road for two hours each day gives one plenty of time to have serious thoughts about the soundness of one's cerebrum.

Shall I tell you the good and the bad? Let me speak first to the nightmare of law school to me: the Socratic method of teaching. Some professors have a gentle Socratic approach. Others are memorable for their Socratic techniques designed to terrorize. I suppose that every law school has its version of Godzilla. Our Professor Godzilla was my introduction to law school, my first day, my first class at 8:00 a.m. Some classmates refer to him as "God", but I think Godzilla more fitting. They abuse old ladies in law school! When Godzilla called on me the third week, there was not even enough time to turn up my pace-maker or to slip some blackmarket digitalis under my tongue (I keep some on hand for just such an occasion). "What is the Montana felony-murder rule, Mrs. Coleman?" Mrs. Coleman was silent. With a wide swing of his arm, Godzilla drew a huge question mark in the air with his finger. "Question, Mrs. Coleman, I asked you a question!" Meekly, I replied, "Sir, I prepared the felony-murder laws of Pennsylvania and Michigan for today." "Yes, but, Mrs. Coleman, I mentioned the Montana law in class two weeks ago. Weren't you listening?" I not only failed to remember two weeks ago, at that moment I barely remembered my name. Godzilla thundered, "It is obvious that you people are not preparing for class! How do you ever expect to be lawyers?" I will never forget that day as my personal introduction to the Socratic method. I do not love Socrates or 8:00 a.m. classes.

Law school isn't all bad: in the Friday legal writing class, when students are given an assignment for a memo or a mini-brief which will require 20-25 hours of reading and writing, they are granted the whole weekend to complete it. Goodbye, family, goodbye to another Saturday and Sunday. By now, clean laundry is only a memory and my sons return to college in order to get a home-cooked meal.

I am told that the law school regime will build character and discipline, but what I really need to build is more red blood to give me the strength to survive. Here I am, 48 years old, overwhelmed by sparkling minds, side-by-side with articulate young people who call me their "Den Mother". When called on in class it is a struggle to explain coherently the logic of Supreme Court judges (I learned early that you never volunteer). I call myself "Super Wimp", part in jest, part because I feel a need to justify the stammering that I generously term my "classroom participation".

I promised to mention some of the good things about law school, but give me a minute, I have to work up to that. Let me tell another war story about the classroom. A good defense mechanism in undergraduate school can be to ask a provocative question of the professor in the hope of being let off the hook. What I learned very quickly in law school is that the provocative question by the student is followed immediately by the professor's own well-thought-out question: "What do you think?" So much for classroom defense measures.

Beyond the classroom arena the

Turning Point Plus One

By Joyce Alcox Coleman '85

Joyce Coleman received the Walker Family Award at her 1985 Sweet Briar Commencement. A Phi Beta Kappa magna cum laude graduate, she was a Turning Point student, a Sweet Briar Scholar and a member of Tau Phi, Pi Gamma Mu and Aints and Asses during her undergraduate years. As a first year law student at W&L, she attests that she is the only grandmother in the class and that the decorations in her study carrell are unique in this group — pictures of her children and her grandson, Matthew, and an enlarged photograph of the Aints and Asses in full regalia. The Aints and Asses photo is "more than just a carrell decoration...it represents some of my sweetest SB memories. Initiation Day I was required to wear a gremlin outfit all day and had an appointment to meet a dean from a law school I had applied to...visualize a 158 pound gremlin in need of a visit from Lady Clair!" The dean "seemed distracted at first...but promised to remember me the rest of his life." She was accepted at that law school also but wonders "if it was my credentials or my gremlin outfit that swayed him."

peak of humiliating experiences is the Moot Court argument. The judges stare down at you, challenging your every (brilliant) argument; the stage lights are glaring; the whirl of the video recording machine is saving for posterity every feeble move and terrified expression.

Watching the re-run on the VCR is not mandatory, but it is just too hard to resist — is my make-up on right, is blue my best color, how low is the double chin swinging these days, was the Judge really laughing at my last magnificent argument? The Socratic method and Moot Court constitute a lethal twosome for first-year law students.

Does law school extract a pound of flesh? Yes. Is it difficult? Yes. Is it demanding beyond belief? Yes. Would I be doing anything else? No! And that is the good part I promised to write about. I am doing what I have dreamed of doing for years. A dream is being transformed into life, even 'though the division between longing for an accomplishment and the pain of accomplishing is very fragile. The dream was mine alone. In agency terms I was the sole proprietor. It rested with me whether my dream would be lifted out of the realm of "what if" or "why not" or "maybe". As the transformation takes place, some degree of isolation also takes place because some — many — do not understand this kind of dream. When I get lonely, my closest companion is the fear of failing myself and others. That may translate as a negative force, yet it is a remarkably effective prod.

They do abuse old ladies in law school, but they do it for the reason that they are not just teaching potential lawyers, they are trying to create good lawyers. So I will drive over the mountain for as many tomorrows as it takes, waiting apprehensively for the agonizing moment when Godzilla leans forward over the podium, scans the quivering bodies before him and says, "Mrs. Coleman, can you tell me...?"

FURTHER UPDATE ON FINANCIAL AID

Dear Nancy:

Thank you for asking me to describe Sweet Briar's financial aid program.* As a direct result of the article, the Admissions Office has sent out applications to alumnae daughters who thought they might not be able to afford Sweet Briar.

You remember that you and I discussed the uncertainty of future Federal funding. Well, it is not that uncertain. I have just received my tentative funding levels for 1986-87 and, because of the Gramm-Rudman bill, we have lost over $21,000 in Federal funding. I have also received tentative funding from the State and here we have lost another $3,900. What will 1987-88 bring?

Thanks again.

Challenging the Job Market

By Carter Hunter Hopkins '68

AP release, October 1985: "Seniors in small or medium-sized colleges outside metropolitan areas often find problems when it comes to landing their first job because employment recruiters frequently ignore their isolated campuses."

Since the mid-1970s, business recruiters have been in short supply on Sweet Briar's campus. Although there has been a return of interest in hiring liberal arts graduates over the last two years, visiting small rural campuses still is not seen as cost-effective, particularly as personnel offices receive hundreds of unsolicited resumes weekly. Faced with this fact and realizing the continuing need for Sweet Briar students to sharpen their interviewing skills before graduation, the career planning staff in 1977 began to urge counterparts at nine area institutions to seek ways to attract more recruiters to Central Virginia.

On November 13, 1985 at the Radisson Hotel in Lynchburg over 480 students and 76 business and government representatives met for a day-long career fair for liberal arts seniors — CHALLENGE '86. For the third successive year this award-winning program* has been produced by Hampden-Sydney, Hollins, Longwood, Lynchburg, Mary Baldwin, Randolph-Macon Woman's and Sweet Briar Colleges and Virginia Military Institute and Washington and Lee University.

Senior Mary Holland takes advantage of the day-long career fair at the Radisson Hotel in Lynchburg.

The purpose of CHALLENGE is twofold: to bring our students to the attention of as many national and regional recruiters as possible and to encourage seniors to begin their job search early. The results of the CHALLENGE program have been innumerable and invaluable. Students benefit directly from actual resume prescreening, on-site interviews, firsthand information gathering with company representatives, concurrent workshops on specific job search techniques and requests for second interviews. The indirect benefits for students include the opportunity to experiment with certain job search tactics and to receive immediate response from recruiters, the chance to initiate the interview process with a company of interest before recruiting season gets into full swing and a rare glimpse of "the competition" in action.

Judging from the employer evaluations and the number of recruiters who return every year, it is obvious that businesses are impressed with the quality of students who participate. In addition several recruiters, including Guest Quarters and AT&T, have returned in the spring to recruit on selected campuses (Sweet Briar among them) because they have identified so many promising candidates at CHALLENGE.

CHALLENGE is, in the words of members of the Class of 1986, "exciting", "awesome", "very helpful", "unbelievable", "tiring" and "a good idea". CHALLENGE '87 is now in the planning stages. If your company would like to be a part of this highly successful program, please contact the Career Planning Office (804-381-6151) for details.

Club News

By Ann Morrison Reams '42
Director of Alumnae
Association

There has been an increase in the number of club functions this year. Some meetings and get-togethers have had a slightly different twist and have been rewarded with greater attendance.

Washington and Atlanta were very enthusiastic about their first Career Days with Sweet Briar seniors. Carter Hunter Hopkins '68, director of career planning, introduced the idea to the clubs and worked with Ann Yauger '78, Atlanta's club president, and Kim Johnson-Smith '69, Washington's president, to set up a workable schedule. Carter drove a van to both cities, taking nine students to Washington and seven to Atlanta. The basic format was for alumnae in various careers to set aside time in their offices to talk with students about their jobs. Seniors determined with whom they would visit. Ten alumnae met with students in Atlanta and eight in Washington. The Washington group was entertained at a reception given by Rosemary Dunaway Tribble '71 and husband

At the Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta, March 1986: Patty Glick '86, Mary Cole '86, Suzanne Craft '86, Elizabeth Haynie '86, Susan Finn '86, Allison Kohlhepp '86, Penny Yeargin Allsopp '68.

Paul, one of Virginia's senators. In Atlanta a prospective student party was held at the home of Don and Jane Potts Sutherland '73. Both of the clubs, pleased with the programs, plan to repeat them next year. Both clubs have networking directories which they shared with the students.

In addition, Atlanta alumnae held the annual bulb meeting at "High Tea" in early April, and at the end of the month hosted their first annual Sweet Briar champagne and dancing gala with husbands and dates. The Washington club also had an interesting way to kick off the bulb-selling season: alumnae met for dinner and a business session at the home of Gretchen Armstrong Redmond '55, at which time instructions and ideas for selling were discussed and materials given out.

The Richmond club has taken on a new personality. When the resource directory was ready, a wine and cheese party was held late in the afternoon and alumnae stopped off for a brief social gathering when they picked up their directories. As networking chairman, Alice Dixon '82 is making the project fun for everybody. She arranged four lectures by four professional alumnae who discussed their careers. The sessions were held in different alumnae homes in the late afternoon, usually at 6:30 so that people stopped off on their way from work or came after getting the children settled. Alice and club president Becky Trulove Symons '79 also put together a newsletter which nobody could ignore: a vivid pink, it carried a variety of "news items".

When the executive committee of the Alumnae Board met in Richmond in February, alumnae from the classes of 1959 backwards were invited to a buffet supper at the home of Mary K. Lee McDonald '65, association president. This was declared a big success.

Several clubs have had receptions to introduce President Fry to alumnae and parents. Peggy Davis Molander '69, president of the Baltimore club, and Margie McGraw McDonald '60 planned a November cocktail buffet in Margie's home. Mark Whittaker and Ann Reams were included and Mark showed the VCR tape of the College in an adjacent room where those interested could view it.

The Houston Club celebrated Sweet Briar Day with an early December party at the home of Carl and Kit Newman Dearing '76. The house was decorated for Christmas with the biggest tree imaginable. JoEllen Lenoir '75, club president, made the arrangements and saw to it that the three visitors, President Fry, Mark Whittaker and Ann Reams were well cared for. A tour of Bayou Bend, a most impressive museum home, was arranged for the next morning.

The Lynchburg club postponed its Sweet Briar Day celebration until mid-January so that President Fry could attend. Debbie Marks Bryant '77, club president, arranged a wine and cheese party at the Piedmont Club, which is located at the top of Lynchburg's tallest bank building.

New Orleans alumnae have had a full schedule. They followed the December Sweet Briar Day observance with a January reception for President Fry when she was in town for a professional meeting. Deborah Ziegler Hopkins '73, club president, was in charge of arrangements for the reception, held at the home of Charles and Anne Christovich Gay Rosemary Dunaway Tribble '70 and Suzanne Craft '86 at D.C. Reception on Capitol Hill.

'73. In March a few New Orleans alumnae were invited for lunch with visiting Sweet Briar alumnae who were spending a few days in the city after enjoying the College-sponsored Delta Queen Cruise. A networking directory is under way for New Orleans.

President Fry was the honor guest at Chicago's Sweet Briar Day luncheon held at the Lake Point Tower Club. Karen Kuhlman '78 is club president, and Lucy Daly Cole '78 is networking chairman. Lucy is busy working on the update for their resource directory.

The President enjoyed a luncheon in Norfolk when she was there on business for the VFIC (Virginia Foundation for Independent Colleges). The Tidewater club celebrated Sweet Briar Day in Portsmouth this year at the Maupin House with Sara Elizabeth Smith Freeman '75 as chairman and hostess. The spring bulb luncheon was held in Suffolk at the home of Esther Jett Holland '43. Anne Cooke Gilliam '40 of Virginia Beach is president of this spread-out club.

The Roanoke club welcomed President Fry with a Sunday night supper party in early April. It was held at the home of Ware and Belle Williams Smith '65, on one of the city's mountains. Mark Whittaker and Ann Reams also attended this affair. Earlier, Roanoke had a very successful Sweet Briar Day celebration, focusing on student recruitment; Alice Love, the new director of admissions, was the guest speaker. The luncheon was held at the home of Edie Page Gill Breakell '45. Molly Talcott Dodson '38 is president of the club.

The Charlottesville club was delighted with its Sweet Briar Day luncheon at the home of Mary Hill Noble Caperton '54. The speaker was Anne Marie Liddell, a Turning Point student. An art major, she impressed everyone with her talent as well as with her poise and enthusiasm. Later Anne was invited to exhibit her art at a Scottsville show, to which she invited the Charlottesville alumnae. Betsy Williams Gilmore '30 is the key alumnae in this area.

The Amherst and Nelson Counties club held its regular planning meeting in the fall and its Sweet Briar Day luncheon at Winton Country Club. In the spring, some of the younger alumnae thought it would be fun to get together for a social event. Alumnae in the classes between 1970 and 1985 were invited to a St. Patrick's Day party at the home of Scott and Louise Swiecki Zingaro '80 at #10 Faculty Row. Cathy Cash Mays '84 and husband Neal were co-hosts. It was a fine event enjoyed by all who attended. Sandra Stella Horwege '74 is president of the club.

In October the Denver club entertained Martha Shorter Lanier '85, most recent counselor in the Admissions Office, at the home of Lew and Jane Merkle Borden '65. In January they were involved with the very popular and successful College for a Day program. Peggy Haley Sheehan '77 stayed busy with details of their networking directory and Meg Sheilds Duke '76 worked hard to encourage bulb sales. A big family picnic was held at the Arapahoe Tennis Club in June. Lizzie Miller Green '68 is the club president.

The New York club is always on the ball, meeting almost every month. In September, the organizational and planning meeting took place at the home of Anne Bowen Broadus '44. At the October meeting, held at the home of Joan Johnston Ambrose '63, Ann Marshall Whitley '47, director of the Sweet Briar museum, spoke on "Historic Treasures of Sweet Briar". A buffet supper, to which Sweet Briar riding students were invited, was held at the home of Pinkey Walkley Giannini '71 prior to the November Horse Show in Madison Square Garden. Carrie Maynard '81 planned the December Sweet Briar Day observance with cocktails at the Williams Club. In January, students in New York on intern programs for the January Term were invited to a 5:30 gathering and career panel composed of six alumnae. This was at the home of Bill and Sarah Porter Boehmler '65. The New York club entertains Sweet Briar's interns each year, and looks forward to getting to know these students. The spring fund raiser was held in the Soho Loft of the Mimi Garrard Dance Company. Tony Santangelo Archibald '80 was in charge of this event and was helped by Mary Gearhart '78, manager of the dance company. Meantime, Claire Dennison Griffith '80 worked diligently to update the networking directory.

"Old Dominion Days" or "Commonwealth Days" were celebrated by Sweet Briar clubs in conjunction with alumnae/i groups from other Virginia institutions in Columbia, South Carolina, Detroit, Cincinnati, San Diego, Oklahoma City, Toledo, Boston and Baltimore.

Quite a few additional clubs held routine meetings or Sweet Briar Day celebrations. These include Birmingham, Charleston, West Virginia, Northern New Jersey, San Francisco, Princeton, Jacksonville, Toledo, Dallas, Detroit, and Columbia, South Carolina.

The Sweet Briar Archives

By Anne Vaughan Richards '84

As a student at Sweet Briar, I spent most of my study hours in the Browsing Room of the library. I had a chair that I always sat in; most people knew where to look if they wanted to find me (of course, I could have been in class or home playing the roles of mother, wife and cleaning woman). I found the atmosphere enjoyable, quiet, friendly (the staff was always willing to help) and conducive to concentrated study. I did not know then that my attachment to this building would lead to a "life after graduation" when I would establish myself in another part of the library.

Last May John Jaffe, the librarian, asked me if I would like to work for the library for a couple of weeks: I am still "working" a year later. I put the word in quotation marks because to me my job isn't work. Instead, it is an interesting and challenging assignment. After I finished in May John invited me to look at the archives to see if I might be interested in working there. One of John's specialties in Library Science is archival work. When he came to Sweet Briar in 1979, he took over what Lydia Newland had been doing with Sweet Briar documents and artifacts. However, with all the work a librarian has to do, John found he couldn't spend the hours necessary to go through boxes and boxes of papers and memorabilia that had accumulated since 1900.

This was the beginning of my job as Assistant Sweet Briar Archivist. Working six hours or more a week, I have spent nine months in a fascinating combination of treasure hunt and spring cleaning. One of my first tasks was to put the boxes (often old and falling apart) of old papers and folders into some type of order in filing cabinets. Off the Rare Book Room there are three rooms that have been used to store various items connected with the history of Sweet Briar. However, there did not seem to be a system, just a bit of this and that in each room. It was evident that something needed to be done so that the files would be accessible to the College community.

Since the library archives consist mostly of papers (the Sweet Briar Museum under Ann Whitley receives most of the artifacts), filing cabinets and folders became my main tools. Of the three rooms, one has been turned into my office with two walls of filing cabinets. The cabinets are divided into groups. Old documents from past administrations and library files are kept in one cabinet. College programs going back to 1909 are in a second, weekly calendars back to 1928 in another, and Sweet Briar's autograph collection in another. There is one section for faculty files, with the minutes of faculty meetings and most of the meetings of the Instruction and Executive Committees going back to the inception of each. It is extraordinarily interesting to read the minutes of early faculty meetings. From these comes a clear picture of the evolution of the College. What especially stands out is the amount of time and dedication that have been given to this institution by so many people. When Sweet Briar had mostly single people on its faculty, professors seemed to give most of their waking hours to the students and their activities.

When discussion came up this year about the 4-1-4 plan, the faculty files in the archives were used to find minutes of both the meetings of the Instruction Committee, the source of the plan, and the faculty meeting in which it was discussed at length before being adopted. This is in line with the goal of the archives: to be useful not only to those who want to know about the history of Sweet Briar but to those who are dealing with current issues. Memoranda sent to faculty and staff, faculty and staff handbooks, career planning notices, master course lists and documents that are distributed within the College also are found in these files.

As might be expected, the general files take up the largest amount of space. These files, in alphabetical order, contain documents on subjects ranging from Amherst County Day to Winter Term, as well as copies of the manuscripts of the several histories of Sweet Briar. In addition there are copies of original documents and papers belonging to the Fletchers, founders of the College. There is a folder on each of the College's six presidents (there are boxes in another of the archive rooms that contain pictures, articles, speeches and artifacts connected with each president). In the general files are folders relating to the everyday life of the College. We have copies of "The Sweet Briar Free Press", folders on alumnae events, lists of alumnae publications, old copies of the Sweet Briar News and hundreds of other items all relating to the life and times of Sweet Briar.

As I file these many treasures, I try to read at least the first page of all items. Well, all right, I confess. If it looks interesting, I read the entire thing. One particularly noteworthy letter I read was from a professor who, in 1909, went by horseback up to a camp on Tobacco Mountain. It tells of the rough terrain and the fact that it took all day for him and his guide to ride from Sweet Briar to Hog Camp. He spent several nights in the rustic fishing camp, returning to campus with many tales. Today it would take a person maybe 15 minutes to get there by car; even by horseback it wouldn't take more than a couple of hours. Poems, lectures, readings, stories, newspaper clippings, manuscripts, all these and so much more occupy the space in the archives — treasures which need to be kept and preserved so that anyone who wants them might have them readily available.

The Fanny B. Fletcher Room, adjacent to the Rare Book Room, contains complete sets of The Briar Patch, handbooks, course books, freshman picture books, picture files, boxes of papers pertaining to the presidents, alumnae magazines and publications distributed from the College. In fact, this room contains so much of SWEET BRIAR that it is impossible to begin to list its contents fully.

I would not have a job or the materials to work with if it hadn't been for the people who were equally interested in saving Sweet Briar history. Particular thanks are due to the many persons who have been instrumental in gathering together the collection which makes up the archives. Among these are Lydia Newland, Martha von Briesen, Ann Whitley, Helen and Mildred Edgemon, Helen McMahon and the hundreds of alumnae who have given of their time and have donated material. This room has many of the original documents of the Fletcher family, including Daisy's diary and copies of Indiana Fletcher Williams' will, which established the College. Hanging on the walls are pictures of people important to our past. The shelves are full of old books, scrapbooks that have been given by alumnae, seminar papers, scrapbooks of newspaper clippings (originally these were posted on the bulletin board in Fletcher) and even a full set of The Brambler. These pictures and words tell so much. This room is air-conditioned, kept at a temperature conducive to preserving the paper and the pictures.

The third room off the Rare Book Room is a storage area for audio tapes, among other priceless things. Another function of the archives is to record and keep copies available to students and faculty of the lectures and symposia that are held at the College. This service has been sporadic in the past but now the library records all major talks given on campus. This room has many original manuscripts given to the College. Old blueprints and drawings of the layout of the College and many large maps and drawings that friends and alumnae have given over the years are kept there; these are used for special displays throughout the campus. In one box there are stone masks dating back to the eighth century, products of a dig in Mexico in which Belle Boone Beard participated. These have been on display in both the library and Guion.

Gerry Berg, associate professor in the Department of History, has taught Winter Term courses on historical methods using primary materials; the students did research in the archives on their papers. This past Winter Term, Barbara Brasted, Class of 1986, an Art History major, did her senior project on the history of Sweet Briar's architecture. Often outsiders write to inquire about Sweet Briar and its founders. Faculty are encouraged to use the files. Many of the pictures that are used in articles for the Sweet Briar Alumnae Magazine come from the files kept in the archives.

My favorite "find" is the file of autographs. Not many people realize that over the years Sweet Briar has amassed a very nice collection of autographs, both of the famous and the not so famous. This collection has become of such interest to me that I plan to expand it. I have asked all the administrative offices to save letters received from people who play a role in the history of the world and I have appealed to outsiders to consider giving the College letters or documents they might have with signatures of well-known people. The real value in the autograph is not only the signature but the document on which the signature appears. We have Willa Cather, Booker T. Washington, the Rockefellers, President Eisenhower and many others. If you would like to contribute an autograph please send it to the library collection.

My job is made easier by the many connections that I have with Sweet Briar. My grandparents retired to Amherst County in the early thirties, buying a piece of land adjoining Mt. San Angelo. My mother's first job after graduation from her college was working in the Sweet Briar library, so I grew up hearing about Sweet Briar and almost applied to come as a freshman, but it seemed just too far away to someone living, as I did, in Oklahoma. Twenty years ago, when my husband Michael was looking for a teaching position, Sweet Briar seemed an obvious choice. Not only did it have a good academic reputation, it was also the home of my aunt, Mary Hughes Blackwell and her family. The many stories that I have heard about the College and its surroundings have made this job even more exciting for me. Often I can place a person in a certain period. This helps greatly because I am always finding papers and articles without dates. As an alumna with family ties to the College, I very much want all Sweet Briar history to be saved for generations yet to come.

Sweet Briar Wins National Riding Championship

Sweet Briar College surged ahead of the University of Virginia to win the National Intercollegiate Riding Championships recently held in Pinehurst, N.C. Taking the top place in this annual event sponsored by the National Riding Commission were Sweet Briar (1st, 151 pts.), UVA (2nd, 147.16 pts.), and St. Andrew's Presbyterian College (3rd, 146.16 pts.).

Sweet Briar Freshman Pam Ward from Mechanicsville, Va., riding "Swiss Watch," took the NRC Individual Intercollegiate Championship, winning the stadium jumping competition (judged on her riding skill), placing second in dressage, and placing fourth over the cross country course. Ward's "Swiss Watch" has won working hunter competitions at Sweet Briar twice this year and once at Hollins College.

Ward takes her win in stride. "I just sat down and decided I was going to ride the best I could and leave the rest up to the work we had been doing all semester and to my horse," she said.

Sweet Briar Junior Georgiana Conger from Aiken, S.C., rode Sweet Briar's "Beethoven," to bring home the reserve (second place) championship. Conger placed first in the demanding cross country phase and fifth in dressage. "The work we put in all semester came together this weekend and we peaked," Conger said.

And what about that work all semester? Is it just riding and more riding? No: it is quite a bit more. Paul Cronin, Sweet Briar's director of riding, believes in thinking and riding. That is, thinking about your riding. And out of five intercollegiate teams he has coached and sent to the Nationals since 1978, four of them walked away with the national championship.

Pamela Ann Ward, a Sweet Briar Freshman, proudly leads "Swiss Watch" back to his stall after her National Riding Championship victory in Pinehurst, NC. Pam was the individual overall champion.

Some call it sports psychology. Cronin calls it "Butterflies are Beautiful." In other words, getting uptight before an athletic performance is energy that can be used to the athlete's advantage, making the performance better than it could possibly be in practice.

This time, the Sweet Briar team's vibes were good enough to defeat some of the best collegiate riders in the country. In addition to UVA and St. Andrews, the colleges and universities competing were the University of Maryland (4th), Virginia Polytechnic Institute (5th), and the Universities of Georgia and South Carolina (tied for 6th and 7th). Also, William and Mary, Midway College, Radford University, and Averett.

The seemingly mismatched rivals, Sweet Briar (750 women) and UVA (17,000 coed), have been trading first and second places ever since the first NRC championships were held at Sweet Briar in 1978. For the first three years, Sweet Briar took first place and then (though unwillingly) handed the torch to Virginia, which won for the next four years.

The Sweet Briar women were Reserve Champions, 1981-84, and then last year yielded second place to VPI, making this year's comeback particularly sweet.

The National Riding Commission's Intercollegiate Championship is sponsored by the American Alliance for Health, Physical Education, Recreation and Dance in conjunction with the American Horse Shows Association. The competition consists of three individually weighted phases. The hunter seat equitation over a cross country course accounts for 40 percent of the rider's score; the dressage sportif phase, 35 percent; and the stadium jumping, the remaining 25 percent.

Alumnae Sports Reunion on Campus

By Jane Dure '82

The third annual Sports Reunion Weekend was held May 3-4. The Alumnae Office treated the alumnae, who stayed at the Garden Cottage both nights, to a brunch at the tennis courts on Saturday morning before the tennis match against the Varsity netters. Stacy Zackowski '85 won a tough match, 7-5, but the Varsity team avenged last year's loss by taking the next six matches from Jane Dure '82, Molly Johnson '82, Alice Dixon '82 and Dorinda Davis '82. The Sweet Briar team finished third this year in the Old Dominion Athletic Conference.

Saturday afternoon Katie Hearn '85, who was voted the reunion's most valuable alumna, won three goals for the Alumnae lacrosse team. Brianna Boswell Brown '82, Alice Dixon, Debbie Blair '84, Jean Vonschrader '82 and Jane Dure assisted on attack. Lisa Church '82 made over a dozen saves with the help of Molly Finney '82, Ethel Burwell '82, Carla Pellegrino '84, Nancy Watt '83, and Nancy "Dirt" Daughtery Davidson '82. Lacrosse coach Jennifer Crispin joined the alumnae in the final minutes of the three-quarter game. However, the Varsity team, which was ranked eighth in the National Collegiate Athletic Association at the beginning of the season, outlasted the Alumnae 11-3. Nancy Webb '81, who again partially funded the refreshments, was sorely missed as was Robin Behm '79. After the game, the alumnae hosted the Varsity team at the Bell Tower for a Kentucky Derby party.

Sunday morning Alice Dixon hit a solo home run for the alumnae in a softball game against Sweet Briar's Club team. On the mound, Molly Finney allowed only 11 hits in five innings and the alumnae batters earned four runs. Alice Dixon, Jean Vonschrader, Katie Hearn, and Brianna Boswell Brown made some fine catches, but the Sweet Briar team's good pitching and consistent hitting decided the 11-4 game which was called early on account of the ceremony to dedicate a special "Overview" to the memory of Myron B. Bloy, Jr. Mr. Bloy was chaplain at Sweet Briar from 1979-1985 and was a great friend and teacher to the returning alumnae. El Warner '85 and Beth Conner '86, president of the SGA, spoke at the dedication. The Overview, located behind Prothro Commons, offers a spectacular view of Daisy's monument and the fields.

Alumnae fans on hand for the weekend to cheer the teams on were Kim Knox '85, Marie Engel '82, Linda Barron '82 and Cheryl Gorman '84. Their participation was greatly appreciated as was the graciousness of the Varsity teams and coaches.

Next year's reunion is planned for May 1-3, 1987.

Lucile Umbreit's Memorial Concert

By Judith Greer Schulz '61

The music of Ravel and Dvořák spoke as eloquently for Lucile Umbreit as for itself in the memorial concert given through her bequest in the Sweet Briar Chapel on March 2, 1986. Thoughtfully chosen and exquisitely played by the Garth Newel Trio, the melodies of even Dvořák's "Dumka" danced to the joy of living, evoking the essence of one whose forty years of dedicated teaching at Sweet Briar is a College record.

Beyond its beauty as a concert, the musical memorial was a perfect tribute to Lucile, who had taken such pleasure in bringing fine programs to Sweet Briar during her years on the Concerts Committee. Her remarkable ability to spot musical genius before it was widely recognized enabled Sweet Briar to host such distinguished performers as Alfred Brendel, Leontyne Price and the entire National Symphony Orchestra. Her choice of the Garth Newel Trio for this final concert is testimony to her lifelong encouragement and support of musical talent wherever it appeared.

Lucile's heart attack in 1976 gave notice that her days of conducting student tours of Vienna were over. Now she would be restricted to the New York musical scene, which had sustained her for years. Gradually even that outlet proved too strenuous and she became a Kennedy Center fan, subscribing to a series of concerts each winter.

Meanwhile, this resourceful musical scout had discovered fine music even closer to home — in the hills of Virginia at Hot Springs. By resting and saving her strength all week she could manage the two-hour drive over winding mountain roads to hear the Garth Newel Trio play on Sunday afternoons in a renovated farm shed. Not only would this outing satisfy her passion for chamber music, but the pastoral setting, with its wild flowers and the chirping of birds, appealed to her love of beauty in every form. Above all, she could contribute to the growth of a promising new musical ensemble. Only the fortunate friends who accepted her invitation to ride along could appreciate the excitement and enthusiasm with which she promoted these excursions.

Students and colleagues were not as surprised as was cellist Luca DiCecco that Lucile was familiar with the Ravel Trio and requested its performance at her memorial. She had taught this work at Sweet Briar for years. With an extensive and firsthand knowledge of musical repertoire of all periods, she had a particular affinity for that of the twentieth century and was successful in cultivating its appreciation in her students. Contemporary sounds, so strange to most collegiate ears, seemed much less stark when taught, not in a bare classroom, but over a cup of tea in her lovely rock home. How magical to study Schoenberg's Pierrot Lunaire with sunlight streaming through her living room windows, much as it did through the chapel windows on the day of the memorial concert.

Lucile's gift of this musical afternoon brings to mind those who, on their own birthdays, bestow gifts on others. She taught her final lesson, not through the words of a eulogy, but by sharing the exhilaration and meaning which music brought to her life.

Sue Reid Slaughter Events 1985-86

The Festival on India, held during the month of October and sponsored by the Lectures Committee, was supported in part by a grant from the Sue Reid Slaughter Fund.

The Writers Series brings distinguished writers to campus to read from their works. This year's writers included Ellen Bryant Voigt, Paule Marshall, Nikki Giovanni (in connection with Black History Month), Stanley Elkins and Stephen Dabyns.

For the Winter Term Film Series, eleven films were shown during January as part of the Winter Term program.

A Diving Clinic was conducted with Randolph-Macon Woman's College February 2-5. Divers and coaches at both schools participated.

To celebrate Black History Month, Nikki Giovanni, writer, poet, consultant, recording artist, journalist and lecturer came to campus February 6th to read her poetry.

The Ewald Symposium — "Women in Public Leadership" — was funded in part by this fund. The three speakers and their topics were: Isabel Allende, "An Evening in the House of the Spirits", Maureen Reagan, "Women and Public Leadership", and Shirley Chisholm, "Of Course, Women Dare".

In An Evening with Jerome Hines, the Metropolitan Opera star, accompanied by a 28-piece orchestra, sang a repertoire of operatic arias in Lynchburg on April 15th. The Sue Reid Slaughter Fund supported this in connection with the VCCA and the Lynchburg Bicentennial events.

The Mimi Garrard Dance Company, which performed on campus on April 23, is nationally known as one of the most important and innovative dance companies in the United States.

The fund helped to bring the Angelic Choraleers, a group of 35 singers, to campus May 3-4 for a Saturday evening concert and special Chapel service on Sunday morning.

Civilizations of Mesoamerica: Winter Term 1985

By Catherine H.C. Seaman, Professor of Anthropology and Sociology

Centuries before Columbus reached the shores of the New World, the Indians of Mesoamerica built great stone cities and ceremonial centers, including the largest pyramid in the world, without the use of domesticated pack animals or the wheel or, until quite late in their history, the use of metal tools. Some of the centers lasted many hundreds of years before being abandoned; others were still flourishing at the time of the Spanish invasion. The remains of these sites are a continuing source of mystery, wonder and challenge. A recent Winter Term spent in Mexico allowed Sweet Briar students to visit several of these ancient sites.

In the Yucatan, the students studied stone structures of the Mayan ceremonial centers of Uxmal, Chichen Itza, Coba and the walled town of Tulum above the Caribbean. In the highland basin of Mexico, they studied the remains of the Aztec city of Tenochtitlan, upon which Mexico City is built, artifacts from all over Mesoamerica in the magnificent Museum of Anthropology, and the ancient stone cities of Teotihuacan and Tula, which stood not far from Mexico City. The following brief summary of the sites of Teotihuacan, Tula and Tenochtitlan can only hint at the impressive majesty of what the students saw in the highlands of Mexico.

□ Tenochtitlan (1344 - August 13, 1521), the last great precolonial stone city of Mesoamerica, is no more. Its remains lie buried beneath the buildings and streets of present day Mexico City. Its lakes are drained and its gods are remembered only when an earthquake or volcano stirs the land and brings to memory the Aztec prediction that we are living in the days of the fifth and final sun. However, the magnificence of the city when the soldiers of Cortez first saw it is described by Diaz in his famous memoirs: "8th November 1519...During the morning, we arrived at a broad causeway and continued our march...and when we saw so many cities and villages built in the water and other great towns on dry land and that straight and level Causeway going towards Mexico, we were amazed and said that it was like enchantments they tell of in the legend of Amadis, on account of the great towers and cues (temples) and buildings rising from the water, and all built of masonry...and some of our soldiers asked whether the things that we saw were not a dream...Then Montezuma took Cortes by the hand and told him to look at this great city and all other cities that were standing in the water and the many other towns and the land around the lake...and we saw in those cities, cues and oratories like towers and fortresses and all gleaming white, and it was a wonderful thing to behold!" (Berna, Diaz del Castillo, reprinted 1968).

The ancestors of Moctezuma were latecomers to the Basin of Mexico, led there in the twelfth century by their god, Hummingbird-on-the-Left, who gave them a sign: they would build their city where they found the eagle nesting on the prickly pear cactus, devouring a snake. From this place they would fight as guardians of the sun, who each night battled the stars in order to rise again. The symbol of the eagle, the cactus and the serpent appear on the flag of Mexico today.

The Aztecs, or Mexica as they also were called, built their capital city, Tenochtitlan, on an island in the marshy lake of Texcoco not far from an older city, Tlatelolco, which they took by force in 1473. Tenochtitlan, measuring about four and one-half square miles, was both the largest and the chief of adjacent island communities. Within its heart, the Aztecs built great ceremonial precincts including a series of contiguous plazas around which were constructed some 25 pyramids, adjacent priests' quarters, skullracks, ball courts, arsenals and shops. Eight major canals ran through the city, six from north to south and two from east to west, with numerous intersecting canals. The Aztecs connected the large population of the island city with the mainland by three major causeways.

The Aztecs believed that several worlds — four suns — existed before their own, each being destroyed in turn. They believed that the fifth sun, and the contemporary world, would itself be destroyed unless they were able to prevent it. To maintain the fifth sun, complex religious ceremonies and human sacrifice were necessary. Yet in spite of fanatic religious observations to maintain their world, Moctezuma II, one of the tragic rulers of history, was deeply disturbed by omens of disaster: a bird with a mirror in its head was brought to the emperor, who saw reflected on its surface starry constellations and men on horses; a great comet was reported in the sky and ancient traditions were recounted that the god-priest Quetzalcoatl ("feathered serpent") who had been driven from Mexico would return to reclaim his patrimony. The very year Quetzalcoatl was predicted to return to Mexico from the east, Cortez (wearing a feathered hat) arrived. Tragically for the Aztecs, Moctezuma at first believed Cortez to be Quetzalcoatl and willingly put himself in the hands of the Spaniard. Cortez took full advantage of both the legends and the initial fear the Indians had of men on horseback, and with a handful of mounted, armed soldiers, defeated and dismantled the great city of Tenochtitlan in 1521. The Indian civilization of Mexico was at an end.

It is only recently that excavations have begun to uncover a pyramid of Tenochtitlan buried near the Zocalo, the main plaza of Mexico City. In addition, the construction of the Metro beneath the city has led to the discovery of a number of artifacts, many of which may be seen standing in the spot where they were originally placed by the Aztecs. However, the Aztec culture is studied best in the Museum of Anthropology where the Aztec hall contains numerous artifacts including the great sun stone, which is 13 feet in diameter, and the powerful eight-foot statue of Coatlicue, "Mother of the Gods". Terrible to Western eye, Coatlicue's head is comprised of twin snake heads facing one another; her hands, belt and skirt are stylized snakes. Her feet are monster claws and her necklace is formed of human hands, hearts and skulls. The numerous Aztec artifacts, models of Tenochtitlan and the great market of the Aztecs are helpful in visualizing what once was and is no more.

Above: The great pyramid of Cholula viewed from a distance. A large Colonial church and courtyard sits atop the giant pyramid.

the north. On the east side of the avenue lay the great Pyramid of the Sun. An east-west avenue intersected the Avenue of the Dead at the Citadel, forming the major administrative, religious and market center of the city.

The enormous stone structures of Teotihuacan reflect a complex social system which was able to call on the labor of countless persons for their construction. The Pyramid of the Sun, measuring 689 feet by 689 feet at the base and 210 feet in height, is estimated to have required the labor of 10,000 persons for 20 years.

The gods of Teotihuacan include Quetzalcoatl, the feathered serpent, who figures so prominently and mysteriously in subsequent events in Mesoamerica. A pyramid honoring Quetzalcoatl in Teotihuacan was found partially buried under a later pyramid on the eastern side of the Citadel. Sculptured "feathered serpents" alternate with the heads of another god, variously called the corn god, or the rain god.

Also sacred to the god Quetzalcoatl was the Great Pyramid of Cholula on the plains of Puebla, built by people closely related to the inhabitants of Teotihuacan. This enormous pyramid, already in ruins when the Spaniards first arrived, today appears to be a very large hill which supports a colonial church on its crest. It is almost unbelievable to realize that the hill is in fact the largest ancient pyramid in the world — some 181 feet high and covering forty acres of land (Wolf, 1959: 95). Today the pyramid is greatly eroded and neglected — a road which winds upward to the church on top is cut through the pyramid itself, providing a view of the deteriorating sun-baked bricks used in the construction of the pyramid's core.

□ Tula (c. A.D. 900 - A.D. 1168): the city of the Toltecs. Sometime after the fall of Teotihuacan, a group called the Toltecs settled 40 miles to the northwest of the destroyed city. Led by a high priest of the god Quetzalcoatl, they established a ceremonial center and residential area above the Tula River.

Tula, which contained 40,000 to 50,000 persons, lies on the southern end of a ridge with artificially terraced slopes. Like Teotihuacan, the temple-pyramid group is oriented 15½ degrees east of north. The center is comprised of an enormous courtyard surrounded by stone temples and palaces, including the Pyramid or Temple of Quetzalcoatl in his form as the morning star. On one side of this pyramid are the remains of a great hall of pillars called the "burned palace".

Atop the pyramid of Quetzalcoatl are hallmarks of the Toltec culture — the Atlantean figures and the Chac-Mool. The Atlantean figures, so-called because of their weight-bearing function, are gigantic stone □ Teotihuacan (600 B.C. - 750 A.D.), the great preindustrial city of Mesoamerica which is called the most important site in all of Mexico, is located in a side pocket of the Valley of Mexico, some 32 miles north of what was to become Tenochtitlan. Teotihuacan was abandoned long before the Aztecs arrived, but continued to exert an influence on subsequent civilizations for centuries. The Aztecs believed it was at Teotihuacan that the gods sacrificed themselves for humankind, throwing themselves into flames to bring forth the fifth sun to light up the dark world: "...there at Teotihuacan...in time past, when yet there was darkness, there all the gods gathered themselves together, and they debated who would bear the burden, who would become the sun" (Sahagun, Book 3:1)

Teotihuacan was one of the few true preindustrial cities in the aboriginal New World. It dominated not only the Basin of Mexico, but a large part of the entire Mesoamerican area as well. However, for reasons that are not entirely clear, Teotihuacan began to decline about A.D. 650, and was burned and deserted by A.D. 750.

Teotihuacan was a planned city, laid out in a grid pattern. The population at its height numbered about 200,000 persons. The major axis of the city, called the Avenue of the Dead by the Aztecs, extended in a straight line from a great stone complex called the Citadel in the south to the Pyramid of the Moon in statues of Toltec warriors which formerly held up the flat roof of a temple on top of the pyramid. The "Chac-Mool", thought to be a messenger to the gods, is a reclining but energy-charged stone human figure depicted as gazing anxiously into the distance, and holding offerings to the gods. Other structures typical of the Toltecs include an altar or dance platform in the middle of the main plaza, and a large ball court nearby. Overlooking the city, on a hill called Coatepetl or "Snake Hill", is a relief carved into rock depicting the priest of the feathered serpent, Quetzalcoatl, together with the date corresponding to A.D. 980. Quetzalcoatl is depicted as a priest-god who loves peace, and eschews human sacrifice: "This only god, Quetzalcoatl is his name, Demands nothing but serpents, butterflies that you must offer up to him, that you must sacrifice to him...He prayed, to his god, to something in the inner reaches of the sky, to her with the petticoat of stars, to him who make things shine: lady of our flesh, lord of our flesh..." (from the Spanish of Miguel Leon-Portilla, quoted by Demetrio Sodi M. 1980:98).

About A.D. 999, the high priest and followers of Quetzalcoatl fled or were expelled from Tula by the bloodthirsty priests of Tezcatlipoca who demanded human sacrifice. According to native historians, Quetzalcoatl traveled to the northern Maya area, where he superimposed a Toltec culture on the more ancient civilizations found at Chichen Itza in the Yucatan.

Many of the features of the architecture at Tula were present at Teotihuacan, and some of the features are found in Aztec Tenochtitlan at the time of the Conquest. Tula collapsed about A.D. 1156. It was savagely destroyed, perhaps by a combination of insiders and invaders. After its destruction, the surviving people drifted farther south into the Basin of Mexico and then throughout Mesoamerica, where they were revered as noble ancestors.

The civilizations of Mesoamerica represent an attempt by humankind to solve the universal problems of existence. Some of the proposed solutions are lost in time, other elements survive to the present. Anthropologists of today still find flowers a believer has laid before the altars of the ancient gods. The solutions that failed to deal with human problems successfully are often more complex and difficult to understand. Mesoamerican civilizations, like other civilizations throughout the world, rose only to fall, and then to be replaced. Perhaps one lesson to be learned is that fallen civilizations of the past could be replaced — their demise did not mean the legacy of an environment in which humankind could not survive.

Above: a major goddess of the Aztecs comprised of stylized serpents, monster parts, with a necklace of human hands and skull, a statue shocking to Western eyes but well understood by the Aztecs who lived close to nature and human sacrifice.

Slate for Board of the Alumnae Association

The slate shall be approved by the Board at its spring meeting and upon approval will be published in the Alumnae Magazine. If there are no further nominations within four weeks, the slate shall be considered elected by consent. If additional names are received, the decision for the selection of the candidate will rest with the executive Committee of the Alumnae Association.

Article X, section 3 of the By-laws of the Alumnae Association

Request from Nominating Committee

The Nominating Committee is always looking for alumnae who would be interested in serving the College on the Alumnae Board. If you know someone, including yourself, whose talents you feel would be suited to any of the following positions, please submit her name to the Alumnae Office:

Treasurer/Finance Committee Chairman; Secretary; ten Regional Chairmen (liaisons to local clubs and Key Alumnae in their areas); Chairmen of Continuing Education, Career Planning, Financial Aid, Alumnae Fund, Bulb Project, Admissions Representatives; Alumnae Association Representative to the Board of Overseers.

The Nominating Committee reviews all names each year and seeks a balance of age and geographic representation on the Board. Although it is impossible to ask everyone to serve in any given year, we are most appreciative of your help in finding those individuals whose qualifications and love of Sweet Briar make them excellent candidates.

Ethel Ogden Burwell '58
Chairman, Nominating Committee

PRESIDENT

Mrs. Stephen Schulz (Judith Greer '61), Lynchburg, VA

Alumnae Association: Member of the Alumnae Board since 1981, first as Continuing Education chairman then, since July '85, as Second Vice-President and Chairman of Reunion and Council Planning; member of the Winter Forums committee and former Lynchburg bulb-co-chairman.

Career and community: Graduated in Music, did graduate work in Musicology at American University and teaches piano at Sweet Briar as well as to private pupils in Lynchburg; performs locally as solo pianist and accompanist; directs senior choir at Holy Trinity Lutheran Church in Lynchburg where husband, Stephen is pastor; member of the Board of Directors of the Virginia House Furniture Corporation; publicity chairman for the Va. Music Teachers' Association; member of the Performing Arts Board of the Lynchburg Fine Arts Center and co-chairman of the center's piano competition; and member of the League of Women Voters. Daughter Cecily graduated from Sweet Briar in May '85; she and Stephen also have a son, Garth, a student at Washington & Lee University.

SECOND VICE PRESIDENT

Mrs. Daniel G. Van Clief, Jr. (Trish Neale '72), Lexington, KY

Alumnae Association: member of the Alumnae Board and Secretary since 1984; Reunion Gift co-chairman.

Career and community: Majored in English Literature and worked in the Sweet Briar Alumnae Office upon graduation. Now the mother of 2 children, Danny and Helen. Serves on the Baby Health Service Board (provides medical care for poor families); activities chairman for the Lexington High Hope Steeplechase Association (which runs a major steeplechase event the proceeds of which go towards children's cancer research at the Univ. of Kentucky); she and her husband, who is the director of Breeder's Cup Ltd., serve as co-chairmen of the Equine Division of the Lexington Fund for the Arts; member of the Board of her children's school, The Lexington School.

SBC Caps, Gowns and Hoods Needed

The Alumnae Office would be very grateful for donations of caps, gowns and hoods, which are used to send out on loan for alumnae to wear when representing Sweet Briar at inauguration events at other colleges. Please send to: Alumnae House, Sweet Briar, Virginia 24595. Thank you!

Faith Parker Dies

In 1968 a petite and lovely lady joined the Sweet Briar staff as Resident Counselor of Meta Glass and assistant to the dean of students. She was Faith Catagoni Parker who died February 16, 1986 in Lynchburg where she made her retirement home at Westminster-Canterbury. Through her experiences of a longtime working relationship with teenage girls at St. Catherine's School in Richmond and with her own daughter, two granddaughters and a grandson, Mrs. Parker understood young people. She was interested in them; she cared about them and was ever-ready to befriend them. She stood by willingly for those who needed a sympathetic ear: helpfulness was part of her thinking. In making the lives of "her girls" easier, Mrs. Parker was especially beloved and appreciated by Sweet Briar students.

WINTER TERM IN VIENNA 1986

Under the watchful eye of Emperor Franz Josef of Austria stand Sweet Briar Winter Term '86 students with their escorts. They are on the marble staircase of the Musikverein awaiting the start of the Philharmonische Balles, highlight of the pre-Lenten social season in Vienna. Such occasions sandwiched with operas, concerts, choral masses, art exhibits, tours of cathedrals and palaces of the Hapsburgs filled almost every minute of the month of January for 19 students and 5 adults under the direction of Dr. Diane Moran of the Art History Department. Four Austrian professors prepared the group for scheduled events.

1920

Mary V. Crabbs, sends greetings to all from Crawfordsville, IN, and regrets that she will not be able to come east for her 66th, as she will be attending her 70th High School reunion in Crawfordsville at that time.

1924

President and Acting Secretary
Mary Rich Robertson (Mrs. Robert E., Jr.) 1406 Bolton Street, Baltimore, MD 21217
Fund Agent
Jean Grant Taylor (Mrs. W. Randolph), 785 Arlington Blvd., Ann Arbor, MI 48104

News seems to dwindle as the years since graduation in 1924 roll by; but here goes for a few:

First of all it saddens me to report that "Shiney" Bodine Mountcastle died last late summer. She was an inspiration to all of us who were fortunate to know her. Caroly Flynn seems happy and well; enjoying her family and the Shop in Fort Lauderdale. El Harned Arp is in her home in Naples, Fla. for the winter months, is very active; she keeps in touch with Josephine Von Maur Crampton, her home town pal. Esther Jack Arnold is now able to be about again after months in hospitals due to an unusual broken hip problem. Clara King Maxwell has also been confined with a broken hip but is well now; she expects to move from her home into a condo in the near future. She now has 3 great grandsons. The last word from Rebecca Snyder Garrison was of travelling far and wide. Janet Schureman Wilson is living in Illinois near her son; her daughter and hubby prefer the sunny South, the Virgin Isles and charter trips on their sailboat. Jean Grant Taylor and Randolph were at their second home, Woods Hole, for a late summer stay; she was not too well but off they went. Muriel MacLeod Searby is now living at Roland Park Place, here in our city; she joined Ann Taylor and me for the reception given for President Nenah Fry last November; she also has a hip problem and gets about seldom; am so pleased that she was able to attend a party last summer, given by one of my bridesmaids, a Baltimorean who moved to Washington fifteen years ago and is now also living at the same retirement home here in our city. Lillian Everett Blake has not been well for some time and is now living at Keswick Home; hope to see her soon as the Home is opposite my usual food shopping center...

Phyllis Millinger Camp and George celebrated their golden wedding anniversary at a reception given by their daughter, Amy C. Marshall, in November '85.

Elizabeth Sparrow Crothers sold her apartment in Vero Beach, FL, and will be spending her winters in her apartment in Cincinnati. One of her grandsons was married recently; also a granddaughter.

Helen D. Grill has been retired from the Tiffin, Ohio, public school system since 1970 — after 8 years of teaching and 33 years as a visiting teacher. Before that, she worked for the Ohio Department of Welfare as a social worker for 5 years. Now she is active in her church, plays a lot of bridge, and enjoys the Alumnae Magazine.

Elizabeth Brewster Tempel and her husband are still enjoying living in a retirement home in Carlsbad, CA.

Betty Guy Tranter is well although her husband, Parke, was in the hospital in January. Their two granddaughters had a trip to California to see their uncle commissioned a Colonel in the Marines.

Bob and I are doing quite well for our ages; slight aches and pains now and then but generally we are hale and hearty and "on the go." Our son, Robbie, is still a bachelor who keeps such a tight schedule that it is amazing to us old folks.

To each and all of 1924 alumnae I wish to remind you that in the spring of 1989 we have another Reunion. Give it serious thought and let's gather for a few days on that beautiful campus, learn the latest about our college, and do a lot of reminiscing ..

Alice "Babbitt" Hackley and James are both active and fit. Alice is still doing volunteer work in the village library. They have a great-granddaughter and are going on a cruise through the Panama Canal in May.

Evelyn Claybrook Bowie and Gordon will celebrate their 50th in Oct. They spent a month in Florida this winter (where they played tennis with Deedee and Harold Whiteman) and 3 weeks in Grenada. Their older granddaughter plans to spend a year in Spain as an exchange student before starting college at Skidmore.

Grace Sollitt's first memory of Sweet Briar is of seeing the Dell (now behind the Chapel) white with daisies when, at the age of 11, she came to her sister's graduation in 1918. She was sorry that the common daisy was not included in Carolyn Bates's article on wildflowers at Sweet Briar in the Spring '85 magazine.

Evaline Thomas reported that Bebe Gilchrist Barnes was quite ill. Bebe lives across the road from Evaline's sister in Cashiers, NC. Evaline was planning to visit California, Arizona and Texas last fall.

Lillian Wood is writing a book about a scene in her mother's life which was made into a play and later a film, "The Crowning Experience," which came out in 12 languages.

Eleanor Wright Conway (Mrs. Theodore J.), 2160 Tanglewood Way N.E., St. Petersburg, FL 33702

Dear Ladies of our club: Many, many thanks to all of you who wrote me your news.

Suzanne Gay Linville tells us that her #1 son is going to Perth as sales advisor to America 11 for the America Cup Races, and her #2 son is General Counsel for N.Y.C. Health and Hospital Corp., and that husband Edwin is fine. Also, she admonishes us not to walk with a cane without first being taught how — she did, and now has tendonitis in her hands! Poor dear, I hope you are rid of it by the time you read this. Eleanor Franke Crawford is selling her house where she has lived for 40 years in New Orleans and moving January 15th to Stanton Manor, a lovely retirement apartment building (my words because I know it!) on St. Charles Ave. in the Garden District. She has a complete apartment, three meals a day when she wants them, and can keep her car there. Sounds good to me. I saw Eleanor last August when I was in Louisiana visiting my sister and we had a grand visit together over lunch. Virginia Squibb Flynn (Squibby) writes that she, Sue Burnett Davis, and Pal (Marian) Malm Fowler plan a mini-reunion in Naples, FL, in March. I'm sure they will see Hazel Slamps Collins while there. Last year she (Squibby) enjoyed seeing Martha McBroom Shipman '31 and Jane Muhlberg Halverstadt '31 in Naples. This is Squibby's final year as regional chairman. She says attending Alumnae Board Meetings has been most gratifying. She has done some traveling this past year, volunteer jobs, and keeping active. Sue Burnett Davis writes also of an active year with interesting travels. Marion (Pat) Malm Fowler enthusiastically reports a great 1985 for them. She and Mac celebrated their fiftieth wedding anniversary with the whole family except for one aviator grandson who had to fly. Their older daughter remarried so that made two occasions for a family reunion. In August they took a Scandinavian cruise followed by 10 days in England, Wales and Scotland. They ran into the Davises and the Sims and they all had dinner together. In January she and Mac are taking their granddaughter, Kim, a paralegal, for a cruise around the Hawaiian Islands, then on to Naples, FL. She is thankful for their good health and good life. After reading her card I feel, vicariously, that I am on the same magic carpet with them!

Eleanor Mallingly Littlepage, now retired from her medical practice since '79, is adjusting to nonmedical life by participating in church work, garden club, etc. which she says are O.K. but not half as much fun as medicine. Eleanor, you are a truly dedicated physician! Elizabeth Layfield Smith's note gave the sad news of the death of her twin sister, Eleanor Layfield Davis, on Sept. 2, 1985 from leukemia. She was very active in the social and civic life of Winston-Salem, N.C. and as an artist was instrumental in encouraging the arts and establishing art galleries in the city. Thank you, Elizabeth, for informing us of this sad news — and please know that you have our love and deepest sympathy.

A most interesting note came from Nell Colgin Miller who was at Sweet Briar only freshman year, transferring to the U. of Texas and graduating there. Is married to a doctor, for 52 years; they have a son and a daughter, two grandchildren, and 2 great-granddaughters. She says she and her husband are great babysitters! She has spent the years in church work (still singing in the choir), Waco, Texas Junior League, the Cotton Palace, Waco Historical Foundation, study club, Garden club and other groups. But at 75 is beginning to slow down a bit; however, they have a new house with large yard and she does all the gardening, reads a lot and gives book reviews, loves to cook and entertain. Nell, that is strength and energy Texas style! Keep going. I saw Peggy Hall in Wilmington, N.C. last May and again in Sept. She was to have a lens transplant in her second eye. Even though retired from her many years as director of St. John's Art Gallery, Peggy is very actively engaged in Colonial Dames projects, and last Fall started training docents for the Dames' Museum house in Wilmington, the N.C. headquarters. A note from Charlotte Magoffin begins "As usual I haven't much news — my sister lives right here in Wayzata so we get together frequently. My two brothers, one in Ca. and the other in Alabama (winters) call me often. Otherwise, I sit in my warm apartment in this freezing, snowy Minnesota, glad I don't have to go out. "And I'm sure your music and books are fulfilling companions, Charlotte. Nancy Wilson Mann says she has had four poems included in the Poetry Society of Virginia's new "Anthology of Poems" by member poets. She says it is a beautiful book and Sweet Briar would know many of the poets. Congratulations, Nancy! One of her seven grandchildren is beginning college in the fall.

Lib Doughtie Bethea writes of an exciting spring and fall of 1985 — London and Edinburgh for 10 days in the spring, then to the Ascot Races! The whole scene there was like something out of 'My Fair Lady' — The Queen, the Queen Mother, Prince Philip, Princess Di all strolled down to look at the Queen's horses, so wonderful views were gotten as they walked close by. In Sept. she moved from her home of 40 years to a condominium in a hi-rise in Memphis — traumatic but she loves it. Margaret Ellen Bell Hare wrote in the midst of packing to spend Christmas in Virginia. Stan has been ill and had surgery but is better now. They are able to go to their Larchmont Yacht Club for recreation, meals, and bridge, and are "trying to grow old gracefully." Ted Clary Treadwell and Ben celebrated their golden wedding anniversary. Their children gave them a wonderful party, and asked all the guests to write them an incident of interest relating to the honorees — so they have a beautiful scrapbook full of memories. Their oldest granddaughter entered the Club where the party took place, wearing Ted's wedding gown — that was a big thrill for Grandmother Ted! The white slipper satin had not yellowed one bit! The final surprise was a return trip given them by Kay and Ben to their honeymoon spot, the Lewisburg, W. Va. Inn. — the same room as 50 years ago. This time they took along another couple as chaperones — or maybe a bridge tour some?

Alice Dabney Parker writes from Franklin, Va. that she and John are finally in their new home. The house is surrounded by "amazingly large" trees which they planted themselves nearly 50 years ago. They celebrated their tithieth anniversary in December. John had a long stint in the hospital, but now is recuperating. Connie Fowler Keeble wrote a note "just to let you know I'm still in the land of the living." She said she loved traveling while she could. Many fascinating places (her older son lives in Germany) including the Bayreuth Festival in '76. She and friends were evacuated from Grenada just before their independence from Great Britain was achieved. Now she is intimidated by the possibility of a hi-jack, and visits with family and friends by telephone. She speaks ruefully but humorously of reaching the "golden years of stainless steel hips, plastic implant lens and dentures." Speaking of that, I had a note and a telephone call from Amalie Frank Kohn telling me she is still hobbling but recovering nicely from her second hip replacement. Hopes she can "show off" at our fifty-fifth reunion next year. Anna (Gussie) Gilbert Davy wrote from California that she and Hugh are completely retired. They moved from their San Francisco flat, and sold their home at Pebble Beach. They now have a small but complete cottage in a retirement community in Carmel Valley. Complete lite care and three meals a day if desired. They love the people and the ease of living. They golf, swim, play bridge and travel. They took a cruise to Florida in December, are going to Baja in February, and plan to drive to Alabama in the spring; trips to China and New Zealand are in the offing. I can see that you two have found the Fountain of Youth!

Eleanor Wright Conway and Ted celebrated their golden wedding anniversary on November 30th with both girls and their families with them in St. Petersburg. El says they had a close call with Hurricane Elena last Sept. She and Ted evacuated to the high school and tried to sleep on the cold, wet, concrete floor — but when they couldn't and nothing seemed to be happening they sneaked home to move furniture and books in case they were flooded. Luckily they weren't and they thanked their lucky stars. Jane Hays Dowler travelled extensively in 1985: N.C. and Pennsylvania in the fall, Arizona for three weeks at Christmas — so she has decided to stay home in 1986 and do a few "homey" things like replacing the carpeting. She lost 15 pounds, went back on thyroid medicine, and feels 20 years younger. Emma Knowlton Lytle, our illustrious artist and sculptress, proclaims 1985 was a good year for her professionally, personally, and spiritually. She exhibited in two shows and one solo. In Feb. '86 another show opens at Delta State U., Shelbyville, Miss. We are really proud of you, Emma! A nice note came from Hallie Orr Barton from Austin, Tx. saying that she and Jim are well and active, and have three young granddaughters, two of whom live there in Austin and one in Houston. They had a beautiful Scandinavian cruise last summer. Dot Smith Berkeley reports that a book she and Edmund wrote jointly, a biography of Moses Ashley Curtis, is being published by a West German firm. Barbara Munter Purdue is still battling the results of her golf cart accident in Aug. 1984. She and Bob are happy over the birth of a granddaughter to their youngest daughter, Beverly, a lawyer married to a lawyer in Washington, D.C. Three of Barbara's children live in Seattle, which has certainly been a comfort during her long convalescence. She and Bob are taking off on Jan. 23rd for their annual month's visit to Hawaii. As always she will see Mildred Larimer and Marge Gubleman Hastert ('31). I was overjoyed to receive a note from Emly Maxwell Littlepage. She spends the winter months in Sarasota, Fl. and the summers in Wayne, Pa. Her big news is the birth of a son to her son and daughter-in-law in Wayne. She says her other grandchildren are in their twenties and this little fellow will probably be confused as to whether they are cousins or aunts and uncles!

Hazel Stamps Collins and two of her friends hosted a large, beautiful, elegant luncheon just before Christmas, co-ed, no less! The Driving Club was elaborately decked in "boughs of holly" and "gay apparel" was everywhere. So festive and great fun — really quite a lot of men still surviving! Hazel still spends her winters in her condo in Naples, Fl. and summers in Atlanta. She is always taking trips to various places, and visits in San Antonio, TX. with daughter Cecil and her family; her younger daughter, Flossie, has an adjoining apartment in the same building with her in Atlanta, and that is a great joy to Hazel. Lib Douglass Foote, as I've said before, lives quite close to me in the same condominium complex, Cross Creek. We see each other every few days, and "motored" together to the mountains last fall to visit a mutual friend and see the leaves. The oldest of Lib's four granddaughters, Elizabeth, a sophomore at Vanderbilt, made her debut this year with the Atlanta Debutante Club and it has been a festive season for grandmother Elizabeth. Her two daughters and granddaughters all live in Atlanta.

Margery (Pat) Ward Cross is still busy as a Winterthur Guide and has been taking courses in photography and Shakespeare — I know Dr. Connor would be pleased! She was in Holland and Belgium last June and plans to go to Egypt in February 1986.

Fran Sencindiver Stewart and Bill are in the process of moving into a townhouse just half a mile away from their former home in Arlington, VA. Henrietta Bryan Alphin spent Nov.-Jan. with her daughter, Bryan Bente '69, in California to greet her new granddaughter, Katharine Lacy Bente. Last July, they had a lovely family reunion at their Goshen camp — hope to do it again this summer.

Marjorie Blaikie (formerly Mrs. James F. Colthup) was remarried in September '84 and is now Mrs. David S.G. Baber. This September they will be moving from Englewood to a new retirement community in Williamsburg, VA.

Marcia Patterson's cousin, Beth Zehnder, wrote the news of Marcia because Marcia has great difficulty writing. She is her usual happy, witty, gentle self and is ensconced comfortably at Westminster Terrace. Sends her love and greetings to all.

Mildred Larimer has truly become a seasoned traveller. Last year, she took an American Express tour of Europe; this year, she's planning another European jaunt on her own — Holland in May to see the flowers, a week in Paris, one in Nice, a journey into Italy and a week in London. Her health is great. She walks four mph and uses dumb bells to make her strong so she can carry the one bag she travels with! She had lunch with Ruth Remon McRae last year when Ruth was in Honolulu.

And now I'm down to me. The highlight of my year was a trip to Winterthur in June; drove with my sister and brother-in-law and daughter, Nancy. We were gone six days — my first visit — and I was utterly transported! It exceeded my wildest imaginings. I'd never known too much about the Du Ponts, other than that they were a rich, influential industrial clan — but now I feel as though I know them personally and admire them greatly. On the way home I suddenly remembered that Pat Ward is a Winterthur Guide. I firmly intend to go again before I fade away and maybe I can see Winterthur through her eyes.

Before I end this epistle I must express a constantly recurring thought I've had while writing. I am impressed by the strength and resilience of our members, and their determination to "hang in there"; the gallant and graceful acceptance of increasing age and a communal sense of humor. Could this have been instilled in us subconsciously by SBC? I think we may have even more classmates at our 55th reunion next year than we had for our 50th. We can manage to assemble at that Garden Spot of Virginia in spite of stainless steel hips and knees, plastic cataract lenses, hearing aids, canes and crutches, wigs and hairpieces, and borrow strength from each other! Please all of you touch base with me.

Addenda: After these notes were written, we heard the sad news of the death of Alice Dabney Parker's husband, John, which occurred in late February, '86. We all send our love and deepest sympathy to Alice and her two daughters.

Katherine (Katie) Niles Parker (Mrs. Franklin P.), 6 Springdale Ave., Wellesley Hills, MA 02181

Writing this newsletter in February, before our 50th reunion in May, when it will not appear until the Summer issue of the Alumnae Magazine is an awkward task; please take that into consideration as you read it. Elizabeth Hartridge has left New York City for a retirement community in Bridgeport, CT. She likes it very much. Also word from Emily Bowen Miller that George has finally fully retired and that they celebrated by taking a long trip to Australia and New Zealand but were back in their Oak Harbor, WA home in January 1985.

Word from "Muggy" Gregory Cukor is that she has been a widow for 9 years. Her only child lives in Baltimore where he is with the Enoch Pratt Library. He and his wife Martha (a lawyer) have one three-year-old child.

Chloe Frierson Fort wrote from Sea Island that she was expecting Lib Morton Hodges and Barney to stop by on their way to Florida and that later Ruth Robinson Marshall, Mary Poindexter Willingham and Jane Shelton Bowers were coming down for an old-fashioned house party.

Martha Horner Maxwell was in the Cayman Islands last spring and hopes to attend reunion last spring. She has two sons, one in Boston, one in her hometown of Clarksburg, W.Va., and three grandchildren.

Sophia Campbell Brown and Edward live on 40 acres on Old Stage Road across from Sweet Briar and Sophie enjoys taking art classes at the College. She got her R.N. diploma from UVA in '37. They travel little, she says, except vicariously through their daughters Becky, Mary and Millie.

Margaret Robertson Densmore Whitney and Al stopped by to see Betty Fesser MacLeay at their retirement apartment in Alexandria last fall. Later they took a cruise from Nice to Venice, then to Switzerland, where they took a 6½-hour walk which Al said would be easy — maybe so 10 years ago! They spent a month in Winter Haven, Florida watching the Red Sox prepare for the 1986 baseball season and Margaret expects to join "Tory" Himes Beddoes at reunion.

Carrie Marshall Young Gilchrist and Peter take trips to the most off-the-beaten-track places! Last October they spent six nights on a boat on the Columbia and Snake Rivers retracing the Lewis and Clark expedition which searched for a route to the Pacific Ocean; they missed the wonderful generations weekend at Sweet Briar. They spent the week after Christmas in the Bahamas along with their two sons, daughter-in-law and two grandsons Peter, 5½, and Marshall, 2½.

Another peripatetic classmate — Peggy Huxley Dick — spent 3 weeks during the Christmas holidays in Europe. In March she plans to go back to Europe with her son to pick up a car, and after reunion she expects to take her youngest grandchild to England and Scotland, since she has already taken the two older ones. In the fall, she and I saw each other twice at Sweet Briar for the Alumnae Council and Generations Weekend — both enjoyable gatherings. Logan Phinizy Johns, Jackie Moore Hoofnagle and Pinkie, Margaret ("Smitty") Thomasson, Mary Hesson Pellyjohn and Lucille Cox Jones were there, too.

Helen Finley Meigs stays very busy with her own real estate company in Los Angeles; one of her granddaughters is associated with her firm. Her husband, Walter, is still writing and publishing accounting books and their son, Dr. Robert Meigs, is co-author now of these books. Her daughter lives near them. The Meigs are celebrating their 50th wedding anniversary this year. Lucille Cox Jones and Robert had planned a trip abroad, but canceled it because they were nervous about terrorism.

Liz Tomlin Jewel is an avid bridge player, golfer and fisherwoman. She has seven grandchildren and is expecting another. They range from 21 to a new baby. Liz and Anne Thomson Smith took a Caribbean cruise in January. Anne goes to Singapore with her sister in April and will cruise for a month from there to Athens with many stops in India, Egypt and other countries. Anne babysits with her three youngest grandchildren, plays bridge, reads and travels.

Betty Cocke Winfree and Peyton live in Roanoke where he does consulting work even though he is officially retired. They have three married children and five grandchildren, three of whom are in college.

A card from Virginia Rutly Young brings the sad news of her husband's sudden death in July 1985. We send her our sympathy. Her grandson graduates from college on our reunion weekend so she cannot be with us, though she hates to miss it. Ginny spends from October to May in Venice, Florida, and plans to be in Rochester, N.Y. the rest of the time. However, in June she will go to England with her daughter, son-in-law and two grandchildren. Ginny plays golf and bridge and is "glad to be mobile and weighing the same as 50 years ago."

Elizabeth ("Pinkie") Scott was at Alumnae Council and worked, as did all of us who were there, on Reunion Plans, and, as you know, is our Class Gift Chairman. She was at home most of the fall after traveling last spring in Egypt and the south of France. Her whole family had a happy reunion week-end at the Homestead this winter.

In November, when I was in Washington with my son attending a meeting, I had a short visit with Fran Baker Lamb and Wilson who were also at the meeting. Fran saw many SB classmates at the Baltimore Sweet Briar Day luncheon. She and Wilson rented a flat in London in October and had a great time visiting museums and pubs. Fran is still an interior decorator and is busy with Junior League sustaining work and work with C.A.R.E. She and Wilson do three antique shows a year. Her younger daughter and her husband and small son live in Rockfish, VA, on the river, "on the way" to Sweet Briar.

Alice Andrews Fackert and Bill winter on Sanibal Island, Florida and she keeps up with her music. She attributes her ability to sight-read to her hard work under Miriam Weaver at Sweet Briar. The Fackerts went to Nova Scotia again and loved seeing Alexander Graham Bell's home on Cape Breton Island.

Marjorie Wing Todd wrote from Eustis, Florida that her daughter

Eleanor and her husband are involved with Special Education duties in New England and that daughter Wing (S.B. '66) teaches in Eustis and her husband is a clinical therapist in Orlando. Son Bill is living with her at present and his 4-year-old son (Wing's oldest grandson) spends a great deal of time with her.

Connie Warner McElhinney moved her real estate office and home to Leesburg, VA. She is now the sole proprietor of "McElhinney Properties" and has remodelled an old house in Leesburg for her new home. She moved into the unfinished house late in October but managed to have her son and his family, from Maine, and her two daughters and their families from Arlington, VA spend Christmas with her. She has two grandchildren — a girl 15 and a 2½-year-old boy.

After having lived in many different cities in the U.S. Lillian Cabell Gay and her husband Jim retired to Lakewood, PA two years ago to be near his family.

Capel Grimes Gerlack says "We're just like all the old retired people — we travel a lot. We've been spending two or three months in Europe each year. Last year Yugoslavia, Romania, Istanbul, Israel and Greece." They live in California but each year they come east to visit their daughters and 7 grandchildren. Last year they visited Winterthur and Longwood Gardens while in the area.

Dorothea McClure Mountain and Bill play a lot of bridge and visit their daughter and two granddaughters in Clemson, S.C.

Katie Niles Parker has worked faithfully as our Class Fund Agent for 10 years and is making a special effort to raise $100,000 for our Class Gift. All of us appreciate her work and will want to thank her at Reunion as well as now.

A nice note came from Peg Lloyd Bush who says that she is disappointed that she cannot attend our reunion as her husband Bill is treasurer of his 50th at Colgate and the dates conflict with ours. Their younger son, who teaches history at the U. of Miami, last year married a lovely graduate student and they are delighted. Peg's granddaughter is a high school junior and is interested in co-ed colleges in the northeast, but Peg hopes that she'll change her mind and want to attend Sweet Briar.

Lib Morton Hodges and Barney (who stopped to see Chloe enroute to Florida) are both avid tennis players and play several times a week. They live at Elk Hill, Forest, VA, where, before he retired, Barney raised cattle and apples. His children now have that responsibility and he and Lib are free to travel and indulge their love of tennis. Lib keeps a small apartment in Lynchburg, which is a few miles from Forest.

Jane Moore Johnson lives in Pittsburgh with her husband, Tom. They have two sons and three grandsons — no girls for Sweet Briar! Jane keeps in touch with SB roommate Phoebe Dunn.

As for me, I took my two daughters and my daughter-in-law on a trip to Russia in February of 1985. It was very cold but we expected that and had a marvelous trip visiting many wonderful museums and churches. We spent several days in Finland en route home and were impressed with that beautiful land and friendly people. In December my fifth granddaughter was born and I'm expecting another grandchild in March. My little girls are 11½, 9¾, 8, 5½ and 7 weeks as of this writing Feb. 1. My only grandson will be three soon. They and their parents live in Raleigh and are the joy of my life. This is my last class letter. I have been class secretary since May 1982 — my second stint as your secretary. I have greatly enjoyed hearing from you and shall miss those cards, but hope you'll write faithfully to the new secretary. I trust that I will have seen many of you at Sweet Briar at our special reunion, and I hope that God will bless you and yours.

Reba Smith Gromel (Mrs. George H.), 1770 Oak View Road, Sarasota, FL 33582

Though it is now summer as you read this, it was January when it was written. It was wonderful to receive cards from almost one-third of our active class-members.

Lisa (Louise) Pugh Worthing writes of summering in Union, ME, where she plays the recorder in an early music ensemble, and of wintering in Cincinnati, OH, where she volunteers and sings in a big city church choir. Lisa traveled the Pacific Ocean islands on the QE2 last year, and daughter, Sharon, was recently hired as a pension lawyer at Time, Inc. in NYC.

Barbara Smith Whitlock winters in Hillside, N.J., where husband, Jim, and sons, Dr. Jim from California, Dave from Brooklyn, NY, and Chet from Ithaca, NY, along with daughter, Nancy from Maine, convened for the Holidays last year. Grandchildren join Barbara and Jim in Mautoloking, NJ, for the summer months at the ocean. Barbara is a board member of the Visiting Nurse and Health Services of (Eastern) Union County.

Anne Conant Weaver loves her life at Grand Lake, CO, where she is finishing two successful years as Regent of the local DAR Chapter. She races a Laser and last year was given the "Good Sportsman Cup" by the Grand Lake Yacht Club. In winter she skis and volunteers at Snow Mt. Nordic Center and is with an Olympic cross country team when in town.

Irene Vongehr Vincent says the highlight of '85 was Reunion and seeing roommate, Helen Taylor, again. The other highlight was finding at long last a replacement for their Yawl, in Sweden, by traveling to the Vindo Boatyard. The new fiberglass 29' sloop that looks like wood should be in the harbor by now near their home on Bainbridge Island, WA. Husband, John, is retired so they can travel to China, where Irene was born, and alternate years, to Europe. Three daughters have given them three granddaughters and two grandsons: one son has an Argentine wife.

Helen W. Taylor, M.D. lives on the opposite coast, where she is a physician, and runs a Family Planning Clinic for the City of Norfolk, VA, full time. Her spare time is spent volunteering for her Episcopal church and birdwatching. Ann Adamson Taylor says her main interest is trying to help the Republican Party in Baltimore, MD, by serving on the City Republican Central Committee. She is also president of the Hopkins Women's Republican Club, keeping the headquarters open and giving tours at City Hall. She and daughter Sally Taylor (SBC '70) went to England last year, returning on the maiden voyage of the QE2 into Baltimore harbor, with welcoming flotilla and all. Ann's apartment in Richmond, VA, allows her to keep in touch with several SBC'ers.

Sarah Mayo Sohn lives in Athens, GA, which she says is a good place to move to when considering retirement places. Estelle F. Sinclair of Jamesburg, NJ, writes articles on art criticism and on antiques for the Princeton Packet Publications, plus for eight other weeklies in central New Jersey. Last September, she 'read' a paper to the Biennial Congress of the International Association for the History of Glass in Madrid/Segoia, Spain — and then gave talks/lectures for the Jones Gallery of Glass and Ceramics in Maine, as well as for other groups, including a series at Princeton Adult School. She owns a condo now, and declares such is the answer to her repair problems as all she has to do now is call maintenance! Estelle often sees Helen Cornwell Jones and Homer in Princeton. The Joneses are really a busy couple, having fun, not only through the local SBC Club, but also with their Presbyterian church activities, and with their family of three sons, who have made them proud by one being a lawyer, a second a banker and a third, a Presbyterian minister. They have also been blessed with two adorable grandchildren.

Jane Furniss Simpson lives with husband, Dell, a retired Air Force officer, in North Palm Beach, FL. She is busy in DAR, Colonial Dames and the Women's Exchange Club. Two recent reunions took them first to Las Vegas for Air Force officers who were in Korea together, and then to Selma, Alabama, for Jane's H.S.'s 50th. Polly Poe Richmond had a great summer last year golfing in Scotland, touring Leningrad, enjoying Copenhagen, then spending two weeks in Hawaii before returning to their home in Seattle, WA. There she plays tennis often with Beth Thomas Mason. Beth writes that she is still happily "chugging along."

C.P. Neel is still living in Atlanta, GA, though she does not stay home often. She attends Weight Watchers in desperation as there is a possibility that her cancer is in the lymphatic system.

Mildred Moon Montague announces from Lookout Mt., TN, the arrival of a third grandson last November. She and husband, Bill, have two other grandsons, the youngest having been taken this spring to Disneyland by Mildred, where they visited Nancy Haskins Elliot in Pasadena, CA. Mildred is still on the boards of the Salvation Army, YMCA, Little Theatre Associates, and Big Brothers/Big Sisters of America. The latter board convened last year in Cleveland and Mildred was able to visit with Ellie Bosworth Badal. It was in Cleveland that her luggage was stolen! Mildred is also an advisor to the Junior League Placement Committee and visits shut-ins for her First Presbyterian church. She says she walks a lot!

Martha Smith McGowan says she is retired from the library world, but still volunteers weekly at the Rialto, CA, library. She takes many short trips around California and spends much time with her children and eight grandchildren. Her oldest daughter, at 38, has quit her job to return to the U of WY, to finish college. Maria (Phoopy) Burroughs Livingston and husband, Henry, live in NYC in the winter, and then summer in Hudson, NY, seeing their family with eight grandchildren and their dogs and cats as often as possible. Maria is interested in historical societies, and is on the board of "Friends of Clermont" as well as being a volunteer at the National Society of Colonial Dames-NY. She is also an amateur genealogist, constantly looking for gravestones.

Charlotte Knox Lane is the Executive Director of Washington (PA) County Tourism and a member of Zonta International. Her seven grandchildren are her other great interest, two being next door while four are in Tennessee and one is in Florida. Historic preservation is of great interest to her.

Connie Chalkeley Kittler and 'Kit' live on the water in Gloucester County, VA, where they "keep going" by being active in the local church where both sing in the choir and K. is a lay leader. He also has a tree farm and cultivates oysters and a flourishing garden. Connie is a board member of a fine local nursing home. Their three children are all married and they have four beautiful grandchildren. The one granddaughter, Sophia, is already so smart and pretty that they think she should be a good SBC prospect! Margaret Dowell Kearney's Christmas card sends her "best to all" from McLean, VA.

Rosemary Borge Johnson's cards from Cross Plains, WI, say that she and husband Dick, a retired Navy officer, usually see their widespread family of children from Denver, Minneapolis, and Philadelphia, where their two grandchildren live, during the Holidays. Rosemary has long been an active volunteer for Brailists, Inc., as well as for St. Dunstan's Episcopal Church and the Middleton Outreach Ministry. Her husband volunteers with SCORE.

Elizabeth (Ivy) Ivins Haskins is still at her same address in Concord, MA, and is still going strong with several volunteer activities and interests.

Georgia Herbert Hart from Columbia, SC, says that ever since her husband, George, attended Reunion last year, he has been referring to the Class of '40 as "our" class! Besides enjoying golfing, Georgia is President of the Junior League Book Club, Program Chairman for the Columbia, SC, Committee of Colonial Dames, and is on the Liaison Committee of the Diocese of Upper South Carolina through their Trinity Cathedral.

Reba Smith Gromel and dentist husband, George, have always enjoyed playing golf but now feel that age has hurt their game! Reba is busy being our Class Treasurer and also doing some church volunteer work in Sarasota, FL. Jane Westphalen Gray could not be at last year's Reunion as she and Everett were in Europe for a super five weeks. Five of their grandchildren live nearby in St. Louis, MO, and so she keeps busy with them, gardening and tennis.

Last year Polly Boze Glascock and Jim had a fabulous trip to the Orient, seeing Nancy Haskins Elliot and David in California before leaving. The Glascock's son, Scott, lives and works in NYC. Clara Call Frazier, our new Class President, and husband, Bill, are seasoned sailors. They left their home in Palm Desert, CA, for a slow boat trip of 10 days from their river place in Virginia to Myrtle Beach, with Bill's sister and her husband. At Myrtle Beach, they were met by former roommate, Betty Hammer Morrell and her husband, Don. Betty and Don are great golf lovers. Clara and Bill still own part of a 'healthy food store' in San Diego and Clara also volunteers at the Living Desert.

an indoor-outdoor desert exhibition.

Joy Carter Forse lives with her cat in San Antonio, TX; is addicted to TV's daily "Jeopardy" show, but is otherwise busy with her family and friends.

Connie Currie Fleming says life since Reunion has been very busy, with Elliot's 50th Reunion at Princeton; then son, Doug, becoming engaged and being married on October 5 to Sally Rossbach in Riverdale, NY. A trip from their home in Chatham, NY, to California was marvelous except for missing Clara and Bill Frazier, who were East, as well as Helen (Hug) Schmid Hardy and Bill, who were in Sacramento for the birth of a grandchild. The Flemings now have a winter address in Stuart, FL.

Nancy Haskins Elliot's husband retired a year ago, and the fall months saw them in Europe. Then home to a complete surprise and smashing 40th wedding anniversary party, given by their children. About 90 friends were there, including their three children, one from Anchorage, another from Victoria, B.C., and the third from Pasadena.

A happy surprise Christmas card arrived from one of my roommates, Mary Sue Kilham Davis, who says she was unable to attend Reunion as she was "babysitting" one of her granddaughters. A daughter and husband live in Connecticut, where Mary Sue visits; otherwise she stays busy around Washington, D.C., living in Alexandria, VA, and on the bay in the summer.

Hortense Powell Cooper is another busy classmate, especially in the Shelbyville, TN, area, where she is still a director of their bank as well as being interested in real estate and farming. As first Vice Regent of the Ladies' Hermitage Association, she does a lot of volunteer work with the management of Andrew Jackson's home, and is now raising money for its renovation. She is also President of the Tennessee Society of the National Society of Colonial Dames in America, with headquarters and museum home in Nashville, 50 miles away from Shelbyville. Her son, Jim, is running this fall for his third term in Congress, using Hortense's house for his Tennessee residence, which makes it a lively place when he is around.

Virginia Leggett Cameron has retired from her nursing career because of many obstacles now confronting the medical world, and lives in Lake Park, FL, where she has loved teaching parapsychology for 13 years in Adult Education classes for the Palm Beach County School Board. Her gardening in Florida presents many obstacles, too, what with excessive sand and sun and a different insect variety for each plant!

Blair Bunting Both still lives in Wilmington, DE, and volunteers with several groups, including a Bible Class. Last fall was spent in France, one week being on a canal barge in Burgundy. Her husband, Rich, still spends much time propagating wildflowers, volunteering in the greenhouse at Winterthur and working on the Philadelphia Flower Show.

Mary Height Black spent last winter in Florida, but otherwise is on the East Coast at Manasquan, NJ, near Barbara Smith Whitlock's summer place.

In Charlotte, NC, Katharine Apperson is enjoying her Sweet Briar bulbs and the "rave reviews" they get each spring. Katharine's daughter, Ellen A. Brown '72, taught German for the fall semester at SBC.

Cynthia Noland Young's first granddaughter, Jill, was born in Houston, TX to daughter Betsy and her husband, Scott. (Nice, after 3 grandsons!) Cynthia and Karl motored south in February; in NJ they saw Tell Sinclair and Helen and Homer Jones. Later, while visiting daughter Lucy (the first female FAA test pilot) in Atlanta, they had a delightful evening with C.P. Neel.

Cynthia reported the sad news that Lida Kepner Short had died in Charlotte, following a massive stroke, just before their February visit. Our class extends its sympathy to Lida's husband and family. We send our sympathy too to Marjorie Lee Clemens whose husband died in Dec. '85. Marjorie is staying busy with her family and a local Heritage Society.

Laurence's and my time flies by at his own company even though we are both retired. But returning home to our one-acre wildflower garden with winding paths, and working with our church and garden club help us relax. We always look forward to visits with our two grandsons and family plus seeing my 94-year-old father in a nursing home out East. I now hope to hear from all of you again, with more updated information of your whereabouts and whatfalls before next year. Just 4 more years now to our 50th!

As I begin these notes it is Super Bowl weekend and the temperature is plunging. I can just imagine what the temperature will be when you are reading this next July!

Catherine Tilt Porter and I started our fall with empty nests for the first time in 38 years. In Aug. Hughes and

I drove Beth, one of our twins, to Nashville where she entered Vanderbilt. Two weeks later we joined Tee and Jimmy Porter in Memphis where our Mary and Russell Porter are enrolled at Rhodes Col. (formerly Southwestern). All three seem to be delighted with their selection.

Tee has supplied me with news of other classmates. Jane Williams Bradley visited them recently with her new husband Harve. Alice Johnson Fessenden wrote that she had had a beautiful trip to Scandinavia last summer and later a week in Toronto. Tee and Jimmy were at SB in Oct. and saw Pete and Alice Lancaster Buck, Bill and Helen Gravatt Watt and Sally Anderson Bowley. The Bucks live on a farm near Marshall, VA, and have one of their daughters and her family next door; their son teaches at Episcopal H.S. and their other daughter is in Miami, where her husband is finishing his last year in oncology. Sally Bowley has retired from the greenhouse at SB and is living in Hillsboro, NH. Gravy and Bill Watt had a terrific six months in Oxford and were near enough to make several visits to London. They also had a bus tour through Italy and five days in Paris.

Paulett Long Taggart sent a copy of the "Taggart Times" which told about their travels and experiences, good times and sad during 1985. The closest she came to SB was a trip to Charlottesville where she saw her niece Lucy, who is also the niece of Lucy Call Oabney '42. Paulette is still very active in the field of drama, teaching it for classroom enrichment and conducting workshops on an elementary school level.

Jinnie Noyes Pillsbury has chosen early retirement from teaching at Milwaukee Area Technical Col. with not a single regret. She had a wonderful 25-day tour of Spain with Laura and Arnold Delgreco as her guides. Her daughter Jeannette '72 has recently been made principal of a grade school in Manassas Park outside Washington; Hannah '74 is in Government Operations at Security Pacific Bank in Los Angeles; and Jackie works in a Milwaukee bank in customer service.

Adeline Taylor Nunez wrote that her time is spent primarily with good books and unsuccessful gardening. Marge Willetts Maiden's husband died of cancer in June of '85. She plans to retire in '86 after 35 years in veterinary medicine. Mildred Faulconer Bryant is still teaching English at the County H.S., but looks forward to as much golf as possible in the summer.

Anne Woods Guzzardi and her husband are thrilled with life in Princeton, although she is still lured to NYC by the presence of new grandson Samuel G. W. Guzzardi and volunteer work with the Citizens Committee for Children of N.Y.

Douglas and Leslie Herrick Danford moved into their house in Prescott, AZ, the last of July and are enjoying the four seasons after 29 years in Miami. Their three daughters are all living on the west coast, so they see them frequently; daughter Anne has two children.

Murrell Rickards Chadsey had a marvelous trip to the British Virgin Islands in Feb. of '85, then a tour of Winterthur and other interesting sites near Wilmington in May. Summer time was spent at their Vermont retreat where she and Chad built stone walls, paths and gardens. Rickey is collecting miniature hardy evergreens and herbs. Her youngest son has just been made manager of the Woodstock Inn, a "Rock Retreat" in Woodstock, VT. Rickey's mother was 98 on Jan. 20th!

Lucille Christmas Brewster still has her "Travel Bug". They had a late spring trip in Central Europe; then she joined Bill to celebrate their 40th anniversary by opening the salmon fishing season in Norway. In the fall of '85 she went to Israel and Jordan; now they are on their way to Christmas Island, Australia and Papua, New Guinea!

In April of '85 Janet Staples Munt took two weeks from her position as director of Maternal and Child Health Services to fly to Paris. Coco retired four years ago, but occasionally acts as a consultant in his field. Janet spends a lot of her free time with her three grandchildren, two girls and a boy.

Libby Vaughan Bishop is still busy with the San Antonio Symphony. She has been fund-raising and conductor searching, which has involved a great deal of travel from coast to coast. She has attended several Garden Club of America meetings where she has seen several SBC alumnae.

Emily Wilkins Mason WON a trip on the Orient Express!! She and Tom had a wonderful time and spent extra days in Paris and Venice. Tom is continuing his acting career; last fall he was in Indianapolis where he had a small but good part in West Side Story. The big flood in Virginia touched their lives; their older daughter Martha and her family had to be evacuated by rescue squad from their place outside Buena Vista in Amherst Co.

Another actor/husband is Albert Cocke, husband of Mary Jarvis. Since his retirement three years ago, he has been in several plays, including playing the lead in A Man for All Seasons. Mary and Albert celebrated their 42nd wedding anniversary in Dec. Four of their five children live in TN; their three sons are lawyers, their older daughter has just undertaken full time motherhood, and their youngest graduated from Barnard, cum laude, in May '85. Mary who taught for a number of years at UTC and GPS, is now writing full time. She has had an article published in Smithsonian and is currently expanding it into a biography. She has also been published in Poetry Miscellany.

Babe Loveland Swanbeck and her husband have built a small house on the hill behind their big old farmhouse. The new house is complete with indoor swimming, solar heat and a beautiful view of the Blue Ridge Mountains. They have sold their cattle and will plant white pines. Their oldest son is a family practitioner; their second son is in business in Houston; Frances, in a caring home in FL; and Ann is an animal biologist with Virgin Island Fish and Wildlife. Their grandson is a freshman at Texas A & M.

Nancy Eagles O'Bannon and her family had some sadness in '85: the death of her lovely mother, her older daughter Kit's major surgery and her younger daughter's pending divorce; however, '86 appears much brighter. When Nancy and her husband returned from their 2600-mile driving trip through Scotland recently, they were met at the plane by Kit and her husband and an adopted baby boy. Now Kit is expecting 10 months later!

Katherine Mensing Teigen is busy two days a week working as an orthoptic technician and doing visual field testing with a Humphrey Computer in her husband Ralph's office. Her daughter is in San Francisco where she has her own design consultant firm specializing in commercial space planning and interior design. Her son Tom and his wife live in Indianapolis where he is with Hewlett-Packard; they expect their first child in June. Rob, the youngest, works for the Boston Herald. Kay and Ralph leave for Kenya in Feb.

Alex and Betty Haverty Smith had a delightful trip to Vancouver and Alaska last July, and returned home in time to welcome their 10th grandchild. John and Pat Whitaker Waters are living in a new house for the first time in their lives. Alice Hepburn Puleston's life centers around her church where she is on the vestry, on the search committee for a new rector and, of course, in the choir (although bronchial trouble has this on hold temporarily). Her son and daughter-in-law with their two children live only 20 minutes away.

Margie Ridgely Keith, who lives in Lancaster, NH, says, "At 65 I now have my first grandchild!" She and her husband spent Christmas in CA viewing little Jamie. Giddy Kinsley Whitehead suffered a stroke in Nov. '84, but she manages to do a few things such as reading. She enjoyed seeing her classmates from '25 when they came to reunion last year. Louise Hesson Shelburne had a rewarding year serving as treasurer of the Asheville Antiques Fair, the proceeds of which go towards civic, charitable and cultural endeavors in Asheville. Her son Robb received his doctorate in economics from Carolina last year and is teaching at Ohio U. Her daughter Anne is a lawyer here in Atlanta.

From Ponte Vedra, FL, came greetings from Helen Crump Cutler. Helen and Jack spend 2/3 of the year in FL and the other 1/3 back in London where they lived so many years. Their third grandchild was born last July 4th to their son John and his wife in Washington.

Rush and Marjorie Woods Williamson are enjoying family and travel since Rush's retirement seven years ago. Snookie and Rush during '85 spent a month in Spain and enjoyed a river boat cruise with the Chicago Art Institute. This year they are looking forward to tulip-time in Holland and an Elderhostel in England this summer. Their two sons live in Rockville, Md, and Ft. Wayne; each has two children.

Jane Rice McPherson had all three of her children visiting her this Christmas. On Dec. 26th they drove her to the Atlanta airport where she boarded a plane for London to enjoy sightseeing and theater. Ellen Boyd Duval Miller has had three eyelid operations during the last year and is facing one more. Her Christmas was brightened by the presence of Dabney home from Philadelphia and Read from Los Angeles.

Betty Williams Gookin topped my ride in the balloon with: "Prince Charles shook my hand!" Richard did some work on the royal visit and they sat one row behind the Prince and Princess in the Cathedral.

Swimnastics keeps Muriel Abrash Shapiro in shape while she is leading a busy life at the library. Mugsie and Irwin had a beautiful trip last August to the Canadian Rockies and Alaska. Her daughter graduated last year from St. Louis U. Law School. She frequently sees her three grandchildren who live in Richmond.

Peggy Gordon Seiler has retired from full-time law practice and is only doing occasional legal projects for her former firm. She is again becoming involved in community activities. She celebrated retirement by visiting her daughter Margaret in NY. She spent a weekend with Sydney Holmes Bales and was honored at a dinner party at Wright and Louise Smith Barry's home. She also saw West and Helen Cantey Woodbridge, their daughter Penny, Louise's daughter Sue and her family and Sydney's two sons and daughter-in-law. Peggy says that over the years the Long Island SB contingent has given them a series of wonderful reunions. Sydney who has lost some weight and is feeling quite svelte and healthy, what with aerobic dancing and all, wishes we could have another SB reunion — quick — before she puts it back on again.

Louise and Wright Barry had an exciting bullet train ride from Paris to Provence last year. She says, "Back home I am slowly becoming 'computer literate' for my library job and even more slowly becoming a golfer". Louise sees Sydney and Helen frequently in Locust Valley when they have time from taxes and real estate; she has continued a 40-year tradition of meeting Pat Patton Odell in NYC for lunch in the winter and at the beach in summer. Pat is a social worker and is involved with a large extended family.

Marian Shanley Jacob's husband Bill, who retired a year ago, acts as her driver as she travels through Iowa to interview clients and to testify in litigated cases. Shanley says that it has been rewarding to rediscover rural Iowa for the first time. Bill keeps busy with volunteer work and "supplying" at area churches on Sunday mornings. They had a nice early Christmas visit with their children and grandchildren in Dallas and are off to Portugal in Feb.

Harry and Marty Falk Vallery had a trip abroad last summer. They are now permanent residents of Florida, and Marty is a very active board member of the Cove Beach Club. They still spend May through Sept. and Christmas in Ohio. Joe and Norma Bradley Arnold had supper with them not too long ago; both are well, their son Doug was married last summer, and a new grandchild is expected this spring.

Mary Jane Brock after 50 years in the family home has swapped with a younger couple who wanted a larger home. She moved two blocks away with the family's accumulation of books, china, furniture, etc., etc. and is having quite a time getting settled, but she is thrilled with her new, smaller home!

Virginia Gowen Brown is still teaching child psychology and parenting and working with programs on aging at Paris Jr. College in Paris, TX. Bob is retired.

My oldest daughter Gwin '72 remarried last summer and we gained a new grandson as well as a new son-in-law. Hughes, Jr., is back in this country after a year in Israel studying Hebrew and Arabic. Anne will probably spend some time in France before completing her doctorate at UNC. My thanks to all of you for your notes and cards. Keep the news coming.

Martha Mansfield Clement (Mrs. Martha M.), P.O. Box G, Sweet Briar, VA 24595

I have enjoyed all the post cards and letters you have sent, and I must say that as a class we continue to be outstanding, upstanding, understanding and most important of all STANDING.

Jane Luke sailed to Italy last April and visited Florence and Venice, then to London via the Orient Express. In October she was at Sweet Briar for the dedication of the Art Gallery. Others who were there, writes Liz Graves Perkinson, were Peggy Sheffield Martin, Martha Mansfield Clement, Jane Johnson Kent, Mayde Ludington Henningsen and herself. Liz also spent a month in France, Italy, and Austria with her son and daughter while her youngest was a student in France. In March, Marguerite Rucker Ellett and husband were off on a Caribbean cruise to see Halley's comet. Marion Bower Harrison and her sister went backpacking (more or less, we carried our own stuff on our backs but did not attempt to climb mountains) in Greece and Crete. Betsy Anderson Gorrell and husband took their "homemade" van to Florida for several weeks. Twink Elliot Sockwell has been to Washington, D. C. to see son Steve and the British Treasures Exhibit and to Sea Island, Georgia and was planning an April trip to Europe.

Harriette Bland Coke wrote that she keeps learning new skills. She is now a certified open water scuba diver and plans to go to Mexico to visit her son and dive. She also had a wonderful walking vacation in Switzerland with her daughter Betsy last summer and this past October was in Maine climbing mountains and exploring the coast.

Jane Miller Wright and Howard are my vote for travelers of the year. They left South Carolina last May on their "55 foot motor sailor" and sailed to Bermuda, the Azores, Gibraltar, French Cote d'Azur, Monaco, Sardinia, Corsica, Minorca and Ibiza. They left the boat at Mallorca and spent Christmas in California with the children and grandchildren. In January they were headed to London, two weeks in southern Spain in February and back to the boat for travel to Greece, Turkey and Yugoslavia. Heaven knows where they are now!

Martha Frye Nye and Bill have spent a busy year keeping up with children, landscaping their yard and traveling to the Orient and Hawaii. She said they traveled on 11 different flights on their trip and never lost a bag. She closes her letter saying she sings in "The Hickory Choral Society and reads Louis L'Amour westerns on airplanes."

Patty Traugott Rouse is spending almost full time in her office at the Enterprise Foundation. They are now involved in 23 cities and working in housing for the very poor. She and Jim had a wonderful trip to Sydney, Australia. Liz Barbour McCrea is Director of the Surveillance Division for the Naval Air Systems Command and if that is not enough, she is also part owner of a facial salon. Liz adds, "I can't think of a better business to grow old in." She was busy with a daughter's wedding and had a wonderful trip to the Paris Air Show in June.

Suzanne Harding Beaufort stays busy working with the Augusta Chapter of "Alzheimer's Disease and Related Diseases" as editor of their newsletter and a member of their speaker's team. She also edits her church newsletter.

Ynes Jova Cline is still a director in Mary Kay Cosmetics and is now planning to go into the antique business with husband Bob. Summers will find them sailing, though, on their new 22-foot sloop. Evy Sharp Vidal is still with the French company, J. G. Durand, and loving all phases of the business of glassware and crystal. She says she uses her French about 60% of the time. Her daughter Victoria graduated from Sweet Briar magna cum laude last May and her son is also a graduate and job hunting. Evy still lives in her historic saltbox house. Mary Louise Lloyd is involved in her school which is thriving and is also very much "into preservation and cultivation of wildflowers."

Caroline Haskell Simpson stays very involved with a group that restores historically significant old houses in the Geneva, IL area. She scrapes paint, plans fund-raisers and sits on the Board of Restoration of Kane County. Mary Colson Comstock has retired from teaching those with learning disabilities, but is now a Kelly Girl, working at AT&T at the moment. She is planning a trip to India in October. Martha Mansfield Clement is in the Development Office at Sweet Briar and writes that she is "content with my job, my children, my grandchildren et al." Can't beat that! Ann Orr Savage stays busy with museum work, garden club, hospital and church, plus babysitting with her grandchildren. She also spent last summer adding on to their home in Vermont with retirement in mind.

Martha Rowan Hyder is always on the go — and doing. She was written up in Town and Country magazine this year as one of "Nine First Ladies of Charity." She is the director of a Fort Worth bank and is on the international committee of the New York City Ballet. She was also this year's chairman for the Albert Schweitzer Award and very involved in decorating and furnishing the University of Texas Law Library in Austin. In the past Martha has been the main force behind the Van Cliburn International Piano Competition and she has generously decorated and donated rooms to Sweet Briar and Texas Christian University.

We have two who are back in school. Wayne Stokes Goodall has been taking Creative Writing courses from Duke Continuing Education for two years...and Connie Conover is a first year graduate student at the University of North Carolina in the department of Dramatic Art. She says "If I survive, I'll get my MFA in May 88"...but it's all fun, she adds.

Kitty Doolin Dickey writes that she and her husband are "the same old stick-in-the-muds" (which none of us believe) "on the farm chasing cows and weeding weeds." Their two daughters are gainfully employed — with the National Defense Council and Salt River Project. Betty Johnson Ragland says life in the golden years is certainly not all peace and quiet. With a newly retired husband, they divide their time between Florida and North Carolina and travel in between. They have 2 grandsons, 3 lawyers in the family — a daughter, son, and son-in-law — and another daughter getting a doctorate in Special Education. Pat Smith Nelson and Tom have moved to Naples Florida, but still keep their home in Charleston. Liz Hooks Richards and Bill also have moved from their home of 25 years to a condominium. Liz says they did "not move easily since I am a saver."

New and very proud grandmothers this year are Caroline Rankin Wells, Ann Thomas Mullen, Vi Whitehead Morse, Martha Frye Nye, Sally Smith Williams who has two, Wayne Stokes Goodall, Pottsie Snodgrass, and Nancy Moses Eubanks. Caroline and Tommy added that they both stay very busy and "out of trouble" with volunteer work. Sally added on a room and a swimming pool this summer...getting ready for those grandbabies, I'm sure. Vi and Walter are hoping this one will go to Sweet Briar. Pottsie's 4 children are scattered — with two in Washington D.C., one in New Orleans, and a daughter and family at home in Virginia Beach.

Closey Faulkner Dickey says she and Whit garden, sail, ski, play tennis and keep up with all of their children who live in Boston, Philadelphia, New York City and Florida; the youngest is at Middlebury College. Nancy Moses Eubanks and I had a wonderful visit with Betty Lou Bruton Lyons and Ed this fall. After deciding we were certainly getting better as we were getting older, we indulged in serious reminiscing. Betty Lou and Ed are longtime residents of Clearwater, Florida with a son and married daughter. Dickie Lile Hartman and Jack have retired to the town of Friday Harbor on San Juan Island and she states they are having the good clean life.

News from Maddin Lupton McCallie is mainly about their youngest son, Freddy, and their fight against his cancer. Peggy Sheffield Martin wrote that their daughter Lisa was diagnosed as having Lupus, last year. So let's all of us remember them in our prayers.

Caroline Simpson claims to have the world's most enchanting grandson! His father, #2 son, has a teaching fellowship and Ph.D. scholarship at the U. of Chicago. Number 1 son will be married in June.

A postcard from Judy Blakey Butler says she stayed busy traveling from Portland to the east coast — and back to Portland — plus a visit to Mexico, a visit with Nancy Vaughn Kelley in New York and several pool swims at Martha Rowan Hyder and Elton's villa in Mexico. She said Martha and Elton were not there, but the villa was lovely and the swims wonderful. From there I got lost but caught such words as "return to weekly yoga classes" "shed 6 pounds," "giving up the 3 esses — Sex, Social life, and Cigarettes" and "happy 1986 to you" — on which note Judy and I will close.

Fund Agent

Peggy Moore Ripley (Mrs. Margaret M.), 18 Old Menham Road, Morristown, NJ 07960

Mary Bailey Izard always thought that grandchildren were highly overrated but now that she has her own she has done a complete turnabout and raves about her daughter Sadie's son, Hank Pariseau. Josephine Bierhaus Barrow has two grandsons. Jo also reports that her daughter, Amanda, lives in Boston and that she visits her there. My daughter, Graham, also lives in Boston and is a nurse at the VA Hospital. Maybe we'll visit at the same time and have a mini-reunion in Boston. Bette Harcourt Drake's daughter, Deborah, had a baby girl, Brittany Lynn Holmes, who should be about a year old this summer. Bette and her husband are both retired now.

Far from retiring, Suzanne

Bassewitz has changed gears and is no longer a deputy county attorney but has gone into practice by herself, concentrating on wills and estates but she will also be a member of the law guardian panel in family court defending juveniles. We all wish you luck, Sue.

As I reported in our last class notes, I had a mid-life change of professions and began a career in real estate. I enjoy the work but it is really full-time. I was named Rookie of the Year in my company and also made the million dollar sales club of our local board of realtors.

Norris and Sallie Anderson Broyles never stay at home. Last year they drove through Brittany, France to celebrate their fifth wedding anniversary. Sallie's daughter, Starr, gave her a second grandchild in February. Sallie is selling Fabulous Fake watches for the Atlanta Botanical Garden to help maintain the new Garden House. Leila Booth Morris reported an upcoming trip to Bermuda and reminisced about a Sweet Briar group that visited Bermuda during Spring Vacation in 1949 with Miss Jester. Patricia Beach Thompson and Calvin attended a banquet at Fishmonger's Hall in London that was sponsored by the Beekeeper Club. "Formal with Medals". It was a most elegant affair with 8 courses and 6 wines (no wonder it is only held once every five years). After the dinner, the men, who are the members of the organization, have a reception in the Tower of London and witness the Ceremony of the Keys. Pat and her husband were also planning a trip to Nepal last November.

Carroll Morgan Legge is still very actively involved in Garrison Forest School — she was president of the Alumnae Association and serves on the Board of Trustees. Carroll also does patient counseling work through the Reach to Recovery project of the American Cancer Society. Her daughter, Alison, is married and living and working in Connecticut. Daughter, Mallory is in college and worked on a ranch in Jackson Hole, Wyoming last summer. Daughter, Jennifer, was a freshman at Skidmore this year. My daughter, Sarah, was a freshman at Wake Forest and my daughter, Nancy, finishes at Sweet Briar in May. She was chairman of the dorm presidents and was one of the 23 SBC girls chosen for Who's Who Among Students in American Universities and Colleges.

Barbara Baker Bird still enjoys her job as director of Welcome House Adoption Services and gets several job-related trips a year to Korea, Hong Kong, the Philippines, India and, recently, central America. Beth, her youngest, is a freshman at Brown. Mike is working on a Ph.D. at Boston U. and Tina a master's in film at San Francisco State.

Frances Street Smith and Gordon are busy with work and civic activities in Chattanooga. Their 3 children are grown and married and they boast 5 grandchildren. Frances keeps up with Mary Ford Gilchrist and looks forward to reunion years as a real refresher.

Katherine Shaw Minton's daughter Leslie (SBC '80) was married to Salvatore Toscano, a journalist and screenwriter from Rome, Italy. They are living in NY where she is manager of merchandising brokerage at Citibank. Katherine's son Robert and his wife had a 2nd child, a girl. Katherine sees Ginger Sheaff Liddell — Ginger is a paralegal and loves it. Ginger's son Bob and daughter Joannie are both married and Joannie has a darling son; daughter Betsy will be marrying in Nov.

Classmates, please start looking forward to our 35th Reunion. It won't be long!

Honestly ladies, can't you do anything right? For 4 years getting news out of you has been like pulling teeth, so just to be different I really do send post cards for this last fling as your secretary, and you all go crazy! Why you can't condense 30 years into a few brief lines is beyond me. After working with young children for 29 years, I could condense "The Gettysburg Address" into 5-word sentences made up of 3-letter words. Now why can't you do that with your lives? In truth, it was fantastic to hear from so many of you and it really took me back more years than I even like to think about. Unfortunately however, the Alumnae Office informs me that there are space limitations — something that never occurred to me or I would have asked you to be extremely excitingly terse rather than just excitingly terse. Therefore, I must shorten each of you into just a couple of lines, which is going to be difficult. However, here goes, and I apologize now for anything I or the class notes editor leave out.

Mary Jane McPherson Oliver

summed her news up nicely. "Teaching in the Humanities Dept. of San Francisco State Univ." Now that's terse! Betty Jo Early Eberwine has 2 grown children and she and husband divide the year between their homes in VA and FL. I assume it's her husband she's dividing the year with. It wasn't quite clear. Mitzie Djerf DeRidder notes that the only exciting thing in her life is her new dishwasher. That's excitement I could definitely use. When not washing dishes, Mitzie is finishing up another book on human service careers for Acro and supervising the education program at Woodbridge Developmental Center in N.J. She also gives workshops around the state on topics such as sensory stimulation and adaptive positioning. My, special education has come a long way! Joyce Lenz Young writes that Hugh is practicing Urology at Mass. General and is affiliated with Harvard Medical School. The Young's older son attends the Berklee College of Music in Boston, the younger is a junior at UVA and their daughter (16) is at the Winsor School in Boston. Since her interests lie in science and medicine, Joyce notes that she may well be the next doctor in the family.

Carolyn Dickinson Tynes and Barney recovered from Christmas by going to the South Pacific for 3 weeks. Their two older boys are happy and productive in the business world. Norman is at Auburn and Cary is a freshman at Rhodes College. The Tynes have 4 grandchildren and are expecting a fifth in July. Carolyn notes that her landscape designer business is going great guns and that she's coming to Reunion. I must run out and throw some fertilizer on the lawn. I told her at our 25th that my lawn would be fantastic by the next time she saw it! At least I can grow dandelions now. For a while I couldn't even do that. Jolly Mayberry Schram is president and founder of a securities company that specializes in oil and gas offerings in Austin. Her son is a geologist looking at prospects in Israel and her daughter is a high school sophomore who plans to check out SBC. Louisa Hunt Coker also wrote a terse card. She's probably afraid I'll insult her landscaping again. She will miss our 30th because her middle son, John, is being married on May 24th. Some people have strange priorities.

Joe and Prince Trimmer Knox's daughter Eliza will graduate from Princeton in June. Peggy Pattillo Beckham has a "baby" graduating from the U. of Texas next year. The Beckhams have married off three of their four children in the last two years, have two grandsons and are eagerly awaiting the birth of a third in June. Mary Field Fite has had 3 grandchildren in the past year which makes a grand total of 4. Boy, am I getting depressed. How come all of you are old enough to have grandchildren and I'm not? Did I tell you I was 13 when I was at SBC? Betty Buxton Diez has a son at Hampden Sydney who has been known to make that arduous trip to SBC as well as RMWC. Her daughter is at St. Mary's College in Raleigh. Betty has her own business, "Reflections", in which she sells folk art, gifts, and antiques. Her husband, Burt Sr., is now in real estate after having travelled for 20 years. I think I'll leave that alone.

Helen Turner Murphy writes that daughter Anne is in the third form at St. Paul's School in New Hampshire and loves it. Tayloe continues to practice law and represents the Northern Neck in the General Assembly. Roger and Alice Guggenheimer MacKay's son Dan will graduate from the U. of Chicago in June and daughter Sue is a sophomore at "that other" women's college in the Lynchburg area. Alice notes that Dan has been trying to educate his elderly parents on the merits of Philip Glass. She promises to bring her Einstein on the Beach tapes to Reunion. I can hardly wait. Is that Glass like in "Meta" or "Steuben"? Nancy St. Clair Talley is working on the Belle Grove Plantation Cookbook, which will be published this summer. It is a fund-raiser for the National Trust property in Middletown, VA, and will be marketed nationally. After you send your contribution to SBC for faculty salaries, etc., save $12.95 for this gourmet's delight! Kitty Harrison writes that she is plugging away at UNC-CH as women's tennis coach and P.E. teacher. She loves the contact with young people (and tennis balls) that the job provides and notes that it keeps her out of trouble. Too bad! Peggy Anne Rogers opened her card with the information that she had no grey hair despite 13 years on the Philadelphia streets as a truant officer. Lady Clairol and I really didn't need to hear that. She "retired" spring 1984, and in 1985 spent the summer house-sitting in London and near Oxford. In October she went to India on a photo-journalism trip for Methodist Missions. She now is working on a private library in center city Philadelphia, and lives in a warehouse with a 60-foot living room and 18-foot ceilings. I hope it comes with heat.

Ann Stevens Allen's big project over the last year was the reconstruction of 3 Appalachian log cabins which were over 125 years old. If I'm reading the card correctly, the cabins were reconstructed into a new dog-trot plan farmhouse in Green Creek, N. C. The authenticity was kept, even to having mountain men build the stone chimneys to look dry-laid in the old style. Ann was looking forward to spring so that she could put the rocking chairs on the porch and sit with her jug and her hound dog jst a rockin' and a drinkin'! Bob and Ann's daughter Damsie is in Denver and son Scott at UCLA. Paul and Meredith Smythe Grider's oldest (Sarah), graduated from Tulane in '85, and is considering law school. Middle child Lisa is in the Interior Design program at U. of Louisville, and their youngest, Meredith is a sophomore at Tulane. Paul is working hard to pay for all this education and Meredith is just growing older. Denny Dolan Henkel writes that her one year (junior) at SBC was memorable and that she still keeps in touch with her Boxwood roommate, Joyce Lenz Young. She and husband Steve took a 750-mile trip covering both the south and north islands of New Zealand. The Henkels have married off 4 daughters! Speaking of 4 daughters, Rose Montgomery Johnston's eldest daughter was married last August, second daughter is graduating from UVA this May, third daughter (who attends Duke) is spending her junior year in Paris on the SBC program, and her youngest daughter is a freshman at Auburn. To top this off, Rose has started a Ph.D. program in counseling psychology at Memphis State and is working part-time at a community mental health center and on the board of Planned Parenthood, Inc. The frosting on the cake is that she got all this on one postcard.

During the past year, aside from teaching art at Roosevelt H.S. in San Antonio, Eleanor Russell has married off a daughter and son, attended an international calligraphers' conference, taken a drawing course, and had 4 pieces of her work selected in the first city-wide San Antonio Art Teachers' Juried Show. She notes that she will miss Reunion because she will travel to Alaska to see her son and his wife who are attending graduate school in Fairbanks. Laura Hailey Bowen's daughter Laurie (SBC '79) has been married almost 5 years, Cary, Vanderbilt '81 is a travel agent, and Charles Jr., GA Tech '84 is a civil engineer working with Charles Sr. The Bowen's and dog "Sundance" all traveled to the Bahamas on their boat, "Great Escape" last summer. And I thought "Great Escapes" were T.V. dinners! Nancie Howe Entenmann's daughter Becky and husband John will move to Puerto Rico and son Dirk has a new Boston job. Nancie and Dirk Sr. will add these ports to their travel schedule for 1986, which includes England, Spain, Canada, Texas and SBC. Weesie Mandeville Grant and John have 3 children, son John living and working in Atlanta, daughter Josephine, who has recently returned to Atlanta from a couple of years with Putnam Press in NYC, and daughter Lochrane, who is a third year medical student at Chapel Hill. Weesie notes that she has enjoyed a "Sweet Briar Living Room Learning" program during the winters in Atlanta.

Linda Learned Whitfield and Fred will be moving to Richmond from Georgia this June. Their oldest son is a captain, flying helicopters at Ft. Campbell. He is married and has a year-old son. The Whitfields second son is in Knoxville with Campbell's (soup?) as a rep and son #3 is with the First National Bank of Atlanta. Their fourth son graduates from high school in June. There are also 2 Whitfield daughters, one graduating from Converse, and one a junior at Vanderbilt. We certainly know what Linda and Fred have been doing these past 30 years, don't we! Marlene Etienne Engdahl is living in Guilford, CT. and is secretary to the principal of the high school in nearby Madison. She is active in labor relations as president of the Educational Association, and also in the community. Marlene has 4 children: twins, now 25 — Suzanne, married and pursuing an MBA at U. of Mich. and Dianne, in real estate; Laurie, 21, a senior at U. Conn. who will enter law school next year, and Richard, 19, a freshman at Union College and a member of a nationally ranked soccer team.

Anne Edgerton Mills and Dick are living in Eckhart, IN. where Dick has been appointed president of Dygert Seating. Son Bradford, 24, is a 1st Lt. in the Marines stationed in Okinawa. He is getting married this summer and will enter Darden School of Business at UVA in 1987. Carey, 22, graduates from Wake Forest in May. Anne is working with the local Hospice foundation and is active in community work. Barbara Bernhard MacLea and Herb's daughter Ginger presented them with their first grandchild last August and Miss Hannah has snowed them completely. Daughter Sally is communications manager for the Bethesda Hyatt Regency. Barbara is the assistant executive director of the Metro-Baltimore office of the American Cancer Society. Paula Purse Pointer has completed 5 years in her own business, Pointer Associates, doing training for businesses and organizations. Paula teaches Assertiveness Training at U. of Ala. at Birmingham. She had Carolyn Dickinson Tynes in her class last fall. Now I really better throw on the fertilizer before Reunion if Carolyn is going to be assertive about it! Paula's husband is chief judge of the Federal Court for the Northern District of Alabama. The Pointers have 2 grown children, one a computer analyst and one an electrical engineer with Hewlett-Packard.

Kay Smith Schauer sent a New Years letter which came after her card. However, I have so much news on cards from everyone that I'm not going to refer to anyone's letters, not even an "olde" roommate. Kay notes that she is involved in trying to make Palo Alto a "Nuclear Freeze Zone," learning to scuba-dive and planning a trip to New Zealand. She also does yoga and goes to a meditation group. An interesting combination of activities! Parksie Carroll Mulholland didn't need to write a letter because she got the equivalent of at least 6 pages on one card. Parksie is very involved in horticultural judging for the Garden Club of America, and will be president of her local club for the next 2 years. Her volunteer time is spent with "Pets on Wheels", which involves taking her dog "Dandelion" to visit a nursing home once a week. Dandelion is a great hit with her 86 to 95-year-old friends and Parksie says the results are fantastic. Parksie and Jack's daughter Randi (my advisee for her 2 years at SBC), graduated from Denison (I failed), and married in August '84. Son David works in D.C. and Jell, their youngest, graduated one semester early from UVA and has been accepted in Med school for fall '86. Jack is Chief of Medicine at Union Memorial, runs the teaching program and practices in internal medicine and infectious disease. I am now blind from reading Parksie's card. I take no responsibility for the rest of what I write.

Betsy Meade Hastings has been working as secretary at the Lovett Preschool and what fun it was to find that she was there, as one of my education students spent the winter term at Lovett. The Hasting's son Don is a Lovett junior and an avid fisherman. Chris, 14, made the Lovett varsity wrestling team and won 4th place in the state tournament at 98 pounds. Hmm. Maybe I ought to take up wrestling 14 year olds. Don Sr. and Betsy are working on a 350-page book on gardening in the south. He writes and she edits. I will definitely be one of their first customers! Jane Black Clark notes that David couldn't think of any other way to spend the summer on the beach so he had major spinal surgery. A tan is nice, but... The Clarks have 2 granddaughters and are expecting "something" from Alden this spring. A poodle, maybe? Actually David is hoping for a grandson to balance the odds. Ashby, SBC '85, is at home after 7 years away at school and is doing advertising for Leggett dept. stores in Tidewater. Karen Steinhart Kirkbride and Dick's son Steven, 19, is a sophomore at U. of Richmond, Kevin, 17, will graduate from St. Stephen's in June and Trevor, 6, is in first grade at Fairfax-Brewster. Karen and Dick continue to work at the Dept. of Defense. Mary Alice Major Duncan continues to be active in the Presbyterian Church as an elder and Presbytery committee member, and enjoys bridge and tennis. Daughter Andrea works in advertising for the local newspaper and the Duncans see their 4-year-old granddaughter often. Their son Bill is an ass't swim coach in CA. and son Rives is a missile launch officer at Malmstrom AFB in Montana. Frances Gilbert Browne has 3 sons, Howard, a lawyer in Raleigh; Gilbert, in NCNB's management training program in Charlotte, and Paul, a sophomore English major at Chapel Hill. Herb and Frances were in Vienna and Budapest last summer, and Frances was at SBC in the fall!

Barbara Darnall Clinton's oldest daughter, Mary Kay, will be getting married and moving to Atlanta in August; 2nd daughter, Laura, graduated from Texas A & M last May, passed her CPA exams and is now working as an auditor for Deloitte, Haskins and Sells; son Charles is a freshman at Texas A&M.

Nancy Salisbury Neill will probably not be attending Reunion as her husband, Bob, is very ill. We will miss her. Their son, David, is now running the business; daughter, Betsy, married a UVA graduate last May and Nancy and Bob will be grandparents in June!

Jane Sigloh's daughter, Sally, graduates with the Sweet Briar class of '86; son Ethan was married in December; son Matt is in the Peace Corps in Guatemala and granddaughter, Kate, a Sewanee graduate, is working at UVA hospital.

I have long letters from Julie Jackson Nichols, Jolly Urner and Leona Chang Crozier, but I am way over my space limit, and shall share them at Reunion. I don't know whether I am looking forward to our 30th or not. Just seeing the group of 8 who arrived in the fall (plus complications from bronchitis), put me in the hospital for 10 days at the beginning of October. No telling what a lull-fledged Reunion will do! At any rate, thanks for your unbelievable response to my postcard. It was marvelous hearing from so many voices from the past as well as from the "regulars", even though I think I may be in a permanent sitting position from typing so long. I don't think my thesis was even this long!

Special thanks to all of you who sent me news. As a first-time class secretary I have a new appreciation for the terrific job Mickey Oliveri Svoboda and our previous class secretaries did — our thanks to each of you!

Our 25th Reunion was a tremendous success! It was very invigorating! To quote Janie Haldeman Hope: "The people in our class are so great. I felt proud to be an alum!" We felt very welcome, even if we hadn't been back to campus since freshman or sophomore years. Let's hope even more of you will be able to come to our future reunions. We had 42 members of our class there! Sixteen husbands came and enjoyed themselves too. Our farthest travellers were Jan Maynard Henderson from England and Gale Young Walker from Vancouver.

We are grateful to all of you who made our reunion such a success. Special thanks go to Lura Coleman Wampler who as our president did so many extra things — like bringing fresh flowers from her garden in Wayne, PA for the class picnic! Ginger Newman Blanchard arranged for a company to donate the wonderful green T-shirts for all of us and hand-screened herself SBC '60 on them. Ginger and her committee did an outstanding job spurring us on to a ten-fold increase in our class gift. Our 25th Reunion Gilt was $60,871.63. We are grateful to the many generous contributors who made this special gift possible. Nina Wilkerson Bugg as our fund agent deserves a lot of credit too for her diligence and personal notes to each of us over the last five years. Becky Towill McNair compiled the fascinating class scrapbook which we all enjoyed reading. Becky also gave us lovely green and white cotton SBC scarves.

Joining us for the festivities were: Carol Barnard, Rhett Ball Thagard, Dottie Barnwell Kerrison, Barbara Beam Denison and George, Nancy Beekman Carringer and Don, Lura Coleman Wampler and Fred, Ann Crowell Lemmon and Fizz, Jane Ellis Covington, Liz Few Penfield, Betty Forsyth Harris and Bill, Anne Gatling Honey and Kim, Maline Gilbert McCalla, Janie Haldeman Hope, Susan Hendricks Slayman and Kelson, Teddy Hill Washer, Janet Holmes Rothard, Louise Jenkins Maybank, Donna Kerkam Grosvenor, Carolyn King Ratcliffe and Clyde, Jan Maynard Henderson, Mollie McDonald Brasfield, Tucky McFall Ziebold and John, Margorie McGraw McDonald and Henry, Margot McKee, Betty Meade Howard, Jean Morris Stevenson, Barbara Murphy Hale and Philip, Ginger Newman Blanchard and Bob, Robin Ould Sabin, Norma Pattenon Mills, Anita Perrin Grymes, Patti Powell Pusey and Bill, Ellen Pringle Read, Anne Rienecke Clarke, Margot Saur Meyer and Bob, Linda Sims Grady and Bob, Gwen Speel Kaplan, Jane Tatman Walker, Becky Towill McNair and Bill, Sally Underhill Viault, Isabel Ware Burch and Bob, Nina Wilkerson Bugg and Bill, and Gale Young Walker.

Barbara Beam Denison and George had an exciting 25th anniversary trip to Germany, Austria, Italy and France in October. Her framing business and art consulting are going great. Her daughter Tracy works in Congress for the leader of the House minority, Congressman Bob Michel. Heather is studying in Paris and Dolly is a freshman at Roanoke Col.

Nancy Beekman Carringer is excited about her daughter Tracy's wedding February 8th. Tracy graduated from the U. of Delaware in 1985 with a major in International Relations.

Betsy Buechner Morris had a surprise when the lottery ticket Santa put in her stocking turned out to be a winner! She decided that called for an "outrageous" celebration and took the family to Key West for New Year's Eve. She's also pleased that her husband has a new architecture degree.

Laura Campbell Walker is enrolled in a master's program in school administration at U. of Miami, working at an Episcopal Elementary School and volunteering. Bill opened his own law firm recently. Their 2 boys play baseball and daughter Lynley tennis so Laura is also busy carpooling.

Liz Few Penfield is busy as chairman of the English Department at the U. of New Orleans. Teddy Hill Washer and Bob visited her in Colorado last summer, and Liz plans to see some of our classmates in New York this spring.

Anne Gatling Honey is enjoying empty nest freedom and spending the winter at her home in Boca Grande, FL. Kim lies in for long weekends. In May they will visit their daughter Jayne who's studying at the U of Paris.

Maline Gilbert McCalla did an art show in December and still enjoys her dancing. She has written an article about the gorilla Koko. "We had a real conversation but fear she is better at sign language than I." I love these postcard surprises.

Janie Haldeman Hope is enjoying her job as a counselor working with family members of chemically dependent people. She's also enjoying her house which she redid this fall. Her son Gerry got to go to Mexico on an Earlham Col. program trip.

Shirley Hayman Sudduth and John had a lovely trip to Europe last June. She started a new job in August as coordinator for an arts-in-the-schools program furnished by the county arts council. She is also thrilled about being a grandmother for the first time with a grandson born in October.

Janet Holmes Rothard is busy with real estate and efforts to get the miniature bull terrier recognized for championship status by the American Kennel Club. She has imported two from England with a third on the way in the spring. She shows them and looks forward to a first litter.

Valerie Hnot-Wolfe is having an exciting year directing the public relations program for Avon's 1986 centennial. In her Avon career she has also been manager of purchasing, director of international purchasing and package development. In 1983 she was general manager of the Avon division satellite headquarters in Rye, NY. Her current job is at Avon's world headquarters in NYC. This news was in a press release sent to the college announcing her election to the board of The Chase Manhattan Bank, N.A., NBW Division. Valerie certainly has an outstanding career!

Mary Laird Silvia is using her time in England to study, teach, and write. She and Peter are also having fun taking side trips in the British Isles, as well as to France, Holland and Belgium. They had a special trip home in October to celebrate her parents' 50th anniversary.

Mollie McDonald Brasfield is busy with her advertising business (loves her new computer) and has also started compiling a cookbook. Mollie's a marvelous cook, so we can look forward to her recipes! Evans, 23, is finishing his student film at U. of Bridgeport, CT. John, 17, is a junior at Virginia Episcopal School in Lynchburg; and Elizabeth, 15, is attending Rocky Mountain Academy in Idaho.

Tucky McFall Ziebold has one daughter at home as a H.S. junior. Buery graduated from Hollins in 1985 and is working for Paine-Webber in Washington, and Molly (SBC '87) is spending her junior year at St. Andrews in Scotland where she sees Barbara Murphy Hale's son Lee, also a student there.

Margie McGraw McDonald had a reception at her home for Nenah Fry in November for the Baltimore SBC Club. She said, "Miss Fry is delightful, impressive, and such fun!" Margie was pleased that Mary Ellen Dohs Acey, Barbara Murphy Hale and Carolyn Moore Taylor were able to attend. Margie is also continuing her work as the Baltimore SBC Club bulb chairman.

Jan Maynard Henderson has moved back to Hawaii after 11½ years in London. She and her husband are back in their former home which they rented while they were abroad. Her new address is: 941 Waiki St., Honolulu 96821.

Katie Mendelson McDonald loved hearing about reunion in Christmas cards. Her children are Courtney, a senior at Exeter, and Eavan, a 10th grader at LeRosey in Switzerland. The family went hunting in Spain over the holidays.

Jean Morris Stevenson was married last summer to Don Stevenson. They are living in Charlotte, NC and busy building a house in the NC mountains near Boone. She and Don, his son, and her daughter Robin, a junior at St. Catherine's, are going skiing spring vacation in Aspen.

Ginger Newman Blanchard enjoys her Doncaster shows and also has been doing some catering with a group of friends. She and Bob are glad to have their daughter Melinda back home and going to Parson's School of Design in NYC. Ginger did such a terrific job in fund-raising with our class that the SBC Alumnae Association has asked her to be chairman-elect of Reunion Giving. She will be chairman next year.

Beverly Schuemann Wirth exhibits her stained glass works of art at museums and church conventions across the country. She is also an illustrator of children's books and bookcovers.

Ann Smith Bretscher has completed her Ph.D. in Higher Education Administration at the U. of Georgia. Her daughter Susan is studying at Sotheby's in London. Christine is at Davidson, and Prentiss is a H.S. junior. Her husband Bob has moved his part-time counselling practice to a log cabin in their backyard, and the family is glad to have him nearby!

Jane Tatman Walker is busy with her job at the Indianapolis Children's Museum doing research for school tours and also taking Spanish lessons in preparation for the 1987 Pan American Games to be held in Indianapolis.

Becky Towill McNair saw Lucy Martin Gianino give an outstanding performance in The Cost of Living last summer in NYC. Becky said the audience was most enthusiastic about Lucy's superb acting. Becky's daughter Harriet, president of the SBC '86 class, received the Alumnae Daughter Award last fall at Convocation. Becky enjoyed talking to Jane Riddle Lancaster last fall at Washington and Lee U. where their sons are fraternity brothers.

Isabel Ware Burch's daughter Margaret graduated from the U. of Vermont and was married to Jeffrey Kingston. Her son Allen is a sophomore at William and Mary and her son Charlie is a 6th grader. She met Margot Saur Meyer, Teddy Hill Washer and Sissy Winslett Richardson for lunch in NYC.

Dottie Westby says both her and her company's health are great! Her company, Windshadow, Inc., is an aircraft buying leasing and selling corporation. Her son Rob, 17, flies now and is a H.S. senior at Tasis, England. Her daughter Kristen is a sophomore at Colorado U. Dottie had a wonderful visit with Cookie Canaday White in Florida last summer.

Nina Wilkerson Bugg's family had a marvelous trip to Israel last June. She and Bill had enjoyed Israel so much the previous year they took their sons, Bill, 21, and Robert, 18, rented a car, and explored on their own without a guide. They were able to go places where tourguides are hesitant to take busloads. Their trip home included a five-day stop in Germany along the Rhine and in the Black Forest.

Ann Dickie Wilson Schiff has moved to Port Washington, Long Island after 17 years in Albany, NY and likes being near the water and NYC. She had fun Thanksgiving visiting her children, Garth, 26, and Kate, 22, who live in California.

Heidi Wood Huddleston has had a full year with two daughters marrying in the fall and a ski trip Christmas to Colorado with her family. She is working full-time as a cardiac clinician, enjoying regular hours and having breakfast and dinner with her family after six years of doing 12 and 15-hour shifts. Her continuing education business, Nurse Development, has been approved by the Kentucky Board of Nursing. She and her partner are co-chairmen of next year's Kentucky Nursing Association annual convention.

Last summer I had a fascinating six-week visit from the 15-year-old daughter of friends in Cologne, Germany, travelling with her and getting a glimpse of life with teenagers. In September Bert and I had a marvelous time at the 25th anniversary party that Carolyn King Ratcliffe and Clyde and Patti Powell Pusey and Bill gave with another couple at the Science Museum of Virginia. It was a great evening! I especially enjoyed talking to Anita Perrin Grymes and Betsy Duke Seaman (SBC '59). Last fall on TV it was fun to see Dinny Muldaur Dozier as president of the Academy of Television Arts and Science give a special Emmy award to Alistair Cooke, and also again in January in an episode of Murder She Wrote.

I look forward to the next batch of class postcards. You made it fun to go to the mailbox!

V.M. Del Greco Galgano (Mrs. Michael J.), 1174 Nelson Drive, Harrisonburg, VA 22801

In alphabetical order, here's what is happening in your lives.

Kathie Arnold Reed is into everything from running an investment program to working with husband Tom in a genetic testing lab and with thoroughbred racehorses, to overseeing her tree farm in Georgia, to remodeling her kitchen out in Santa Fe. Her youngest stepchild is 20. In Pekin, IL, Peggy Aurand Young is teaching English as a Second Language at Culver Military Academy Summer Camp, and will be leading a group of students on a European tour this spring. Her son Dennis is a member of the Lancer's Platoon at Culver. Ashton Barfield was married to dentist Gordon Reiss last November in New York. She continues as financial administrator for the Population Council's Center for Biomedical Research.

Christie Calder Salomon and family spent the holidays in Switzerland with a large group of friends. She still has two children at home in Greenwich, one at Andover and another at Pomfret ready to go off to college next year. Not to be outdone, Nelie Clarke Tucker keeps busy with six (!) children (one boy) ages two to 17. Husband Dave is a Wall Street insurance broker. The Jacksonville, FL, Art Gallery consumes much of Vicky Cox Commander's time and energy. Vicky's daughter Eleanor is at Vanderbilt, sons Charles at Princeton and Christopher at the Bolles School, and husband Charlie practices law. Ginny deBuys reports that Princeton, NJ, is growing almost as fast as her computer software and systems business. She recently completed a long contract technical writing assignment for IBM, and almost, but not quite, bought a house! V.M. Del Greco Galgano and Mike did buy a house, a year and a half ago in Harrisonburg, VA, and are now happily settled in. V.M. raves about hearing the New Christy Minstrels singing "Green Green" in concert recently... I saw them a few years ago while living in TN and loved every minute... As marketing director for Philadelphia's largest contractor, Dootsie Duer Leach writes that "being a woman in this business is a challenge" at times. (Boy, can I relate to that comment!). Doots' daughters, now 12 and 15, are at home and continue to be a great joy. Marilyn Dunlap Laird and Charles moved twice in one year and have landed in Simsbury, CT. Marilyn expects to spend the next several months traveling the 10-year-old New England soccer team circuit. From South Salem, NY, Judy Dunn Spangenberg announces that her 13th children's book has been published. Son Tyler (that "little" boy in a couple of her books) is a senior in high school, frantically checking out colleges. Judy says she is about to join the ranks of singles. Susan Dwelle Taylor and Bill remain at St. Thomas in Owings Mills, MD, along with son Parker, 10, and Lucy, 8. She and Caroline Tate Noojin had a marvelous time at their 25th Chatham Hall reunion, and both vowed to be at SBC in '89. I too attended a weekend-long high school reunion last fall in Naperville, IL — what fun!

Alice Fales Stewart received an NEH fellowship to study Russian history at Harvard last summer. Husband Richard continues to teach at Harvard Law. Vice President for Strategic Planning and Business Development for the Travel Division of American Express Travel Related Services Company is Mary Fitzhugh Miller's new job title. Husband Sam is Senior Vice President and General Counsel of Paine, Webber, Inc. Another 25th high school reunion attendee was Margery Fleigh — this one at Emma Willard, where Lynne Smith Crow and Jane Fonda, class of '55, were also in attendance. Margery has completed decorating a new apartment in Hagerstown, MD, and enjoys watercolor painting and yoga in her free time. Amy Freund Green is trying her hand at real estate in West Palm Beach and has adjusted to Florida after 20 years. She and husband Bob stopped by SBC in November, her first visit since '64. They have two sons at Duke and one in the 7th grade.

Grace Mary Garry Oates and Wally spent much of the past year traveling to New Orleans, Texas, England and Scotland. They're planning a trip to Chili, where Wally's son is in the Peace Corps. Grace Mary reports delightful visits with Sheila Carroll Coopridier and with Tuck Mattern Harvey, Ralph and children Kristin, 17, and Chandler, 14. Also traveling, now that children are away at prep schools, are Nancy Hall Green and Holcombe. In fact, they are both taking French so that they can more than just "get by" on frequent trips to France. Nancy sees Jane Bradley Wheeler, Susan Bronson Croft and Harriet Houston Shaffer all the time. Frances Hanahan, her mother and sister managed to get away from New York to enjoy a wonderful European vacation...complete with ballooning. Fellow New Yorkers Hedi Haug White and Tom spent much of the past year redecorating their apartment. Hedi sees Ashton Barfield regularly and also relished a visit with Marsh Metcalf Seymour and family. Lee Huston was married last November to John Carroll, editor of the Lexington, KY, newspaper. John brings two daughters, ages 18 and 12, to join Lee's Huston, 17, Griggs, 13, and Caroline. 11... That's almost as good as the Brady Bunch! To top it off, Lee is planning on returning to her free time (Ha!) systems programming job at Ashland Oil.

Genie Johnson Sigler continues to teach high school algebra and computer programming in Little Rock. Daughter Beth is 16 and is considering SBC. At last report, Mollie Johnson Nelson and Douglas were planning a trip from the serenity of Lookout Mountain, TN, to the Big Apple for their son Alan, 14. Upon their return, Molly plans to begin training to teach adult illiterates to read. Libby Kopper Schollaert's daughter is a plebe at the Naval Academy...and actually is surviving! Libby and Jim, a Foreign Service officer, also have two sons — one looking at colleges and one in the 8th grade. Linda Lee McAndrew and Robert announce the birth of Kevin Richard on March 13, 1985. Kevin joins Patrick, 5, who attended our last reunion. For the 3rd summer, Linda taught choreography and performance techniques for the Bill Evans Summer Dance Institute in New York. Good grief, here's another one! Nancy Lynch was married to Dr. Roger Hood, reader in criminology at Oxford. The wedding festivities doubled as a housewarming, with friends attending from California, Denver, Charleston and Scotland.

Kate Roy Massie Christian says she is going to spend more time with husband Dixon, having spent the last 2½ summers studying and visiting friends in England, France, Germany and Austria. A trip to Disney World and a cruise to Bermuda kept Bethlehem, PA-based Pemmie Mercur Cleveland, John, and children Kaycee, 9, and Carrie, 5, moving for part of the past year. Remaining time was consumed by the family travel business, ballet guild, tennis, golf and swim team.

For Marsh Metcalf Seymour, teaching art is especially rewarding in Brussels, due to the proximity of so many museums. Eldest son Peter graduated from Kent and is a Merit Scholar at Stanford, while younger brother Randle endures the rigors of 13 subjects (10 academic) plus 4 languages...Wow! The Seymours plan to be on home leave from the Foreign Service this summer. From Alexandria, VA, Jackie Nicholson Wysong writes that she is still married to David and has a great job as office manager of a construction company. Daughter Mary is applying to SBC, son David to Episcopal, and son Matthew, 8, Jackie gets to keep at home for awhile.

Out in Dallas, Donna Jo Pearson Neuhoft has opened an art gallery containing important 18th and 19th century European and American paintings and sculpture. Donna and Joseph have four girls and a boy, the oldest being Laurel, a sophomore at Ole Miss. Farther West, Carolyn Peyton Walker is still teaching English at San Jose State and running her own consulting firm. Her major client is Stanford University, for whom she develops and supervises the teaching of 19 courses each year.

Rosamond Sample Brown is still living and working in international banking in Little Rock. By the time you read this, Elizabeth Scott Porter should be married to dashing British World Bank diplomat, Julian Grestell. In Atlanta Nina Sledge Burke works for the Preservation Center and Stratford Hall Plantation. Husband Frank is a banker, daughter Eleanor graduates from Chatham Hall this year, and son Vernon is a football and soccer-playing 9th grader. Congratulations to Lynne Smith Crow for being chosen her Short Hills, NJ, insurance company's "Associate of the Year". Lynne visited with Carrie Peyton Walker while attending a conference in San Francisco.

Business takes me to Huntsville quite often...on one occasion I had the good fortune of meeting Caroline Tate Noojin's three good-looking men: Frank Jr., Frank III and Tate. Tate, Caroline's baby, is now driving! Susan Thorndike Hunt and Guy are at home in Santa Anna, CA, along with daughters Evelyn, who works in advertising, and Carolyn and Mary Elizabeth, who are graduating from high school and junior high school, respectively. Susan and Guy look forward to being involved in the Billy Graham Crusade this summer. Since Sharon Van Cleve Cipriano last summer accepted a position as vice president of a financial planning group in Scottsdale, AZ, while her husband's computer business keeps him in Los Angeles, they have become "Bi-State". Sharon says they plan their weekends around whether they want to be at the beach or in the desert...sounds good to me!

Penny Writer Theis is putting her botany to use...finally...as horticultural co-chairman of the Garden Club of Cleveland. Penny's oldest, Jeff, is a freshman at Bowling Green; Tim is at Gilmour Academy; and Ginger is in 6th grade. Husband Stu spent nine weeks at M.I.T.'s Sloan School of Management last year. Ninety per cent of Lynne Youngs Johnston's life in upstate New York is spent in her trusty jeep...hauling two teenagers plus friends from football and field-hockey practice to tennis lessons and ski-race training in nearby Vermont. She and Stephen and children spent three weeks in France and England last summer. In Greeley, CO, Mary Green Borg is busy with her 5 boys, ages 17-5, and judge husband. She also sings in a community group which went on tour to Germany and Italy last year, and teaches American history and literature at a community college ("Really rewarding, as they think I'm bright, pretty and young!")

Fund Agent

Emmy Savage Borthwick (Mrs. E. Mark), 3322 Hemlock Drive, Falls Church, VA 22042

Thank you all for your wonderful response to my postcard. You are terrific!

Adaline Allen Shinkle started an "exciting" new job as Director of Admissions for an independent school in Mineapolis. Lorna Allen Foster reports working with Suzanne Little Jones on a networking booklet for Houston.

C'Anne Anderson is taking art classes in Philadelphia after her return from Taiwan.

Barbara Baur Dunlap, recovering after their house burned down, advises all to have replacement insurance. Chas and her five children are her first priority. Martha Bennett Pritchett had twins last year to join Leslie and Hartwell. She understandably has taken a leave of absence from teaching. Lesley Bissell Hoopes continues to give tours in the American and Egyptian wings of the Metropolitan Museum. She and Toby plan a vacation in England in March. Ann Biggs Lewis, now living in London, has completed her second year at George Washington U., working toward a M.A. in Museum Studies.

Stephanie Bredin Speakman won the '85 Maryland Hunt Cup! Kate Buster's life is "full of continual change and I love it." She is a nature guide in Aspen, CO, as well as a professional photographer. This past year she has been living with a "prominent family" in Caracas, Venezuela. Percy Clarke Gwinn and Michael are in Alexandria, VA, where she works in advertising for a weekly newspaper. Kate Condax has opened her own business in NYC, handling public relations for a variety of clients. She books them onto television talk shows, and gets them articles in magazines and newspapers. Kate also has a new horse book coming out.

Brenda Darden Kincaid, chairman of the math department at Nansemond-Suffolk Academy, is thinking of beginning work on a M.A. She says she's "on a constant diet and my hair is turning gray!" Frances deSaussure Meade and David will be transferred from Fort Ord Sept., 1986, for "I don't know where." Pembrake Herbert Kyle reports that Camilla Reid Hazlehurst is "running her life at top speed...balancing her investment business, two children and home with grand style." Pem, Frances Kirven Morse, and Nancy Hickox Wright celebrated Frances's 40th together. Susan Hill remarried and is now Mrs. Robert Glick. Their blended family of four keeps her busy.

Carter Hunter Hopkins continues to work for SBC in Career Planning, now offering this service to alumnae as well. Hunter is in 2nd grade and Courtney is 2. Conover Hunt has returned from Dallas to Hampton, VA, to learn the family oil business. Barbara Johnson Prickett keeps busy chauffeuring her two children and volunteering for and serving on the board of several Atlanta organizations. Bravo to all for getting involved!

Anne Kinsey Dinan and Terry are enjoying life in NYC. Anne is doing "the same old things — PTA, Sunday School, a little tennis, and 'agent' for daughter Ashley's modelling career." Dr. Sherilyn Klaerner Allen operates her own veterinary clinic in Boyertown, PA. Sophie MacKenzie Belouet has a new address outside of Paris. She is busy with two children and a part time job as business manager with the American Cathedral in Paris and as treasurer for the Episcopal Convocation of American Churches in Europe.

Tonia MacNeil teaches art in two Palo Alto schools. She also does publicity for a local art gallery. She travels to Mexico to study art and Spanish. Penny Oliver became Mrs. William Hawkins in July '85. She is about to go sustaining for the Junior League. She has enjoyed seeing alums while traveling for the League as marketing trainer. She loves her new job in commercial lending with Colorado National Bank, but would have "extended my honeymoon in Scotland indefinitely."

Sally Paradise Ingber has been fundraising for her children's schools as well as taking regular French lessons. Ann Peterson Griffin says she has "absolutely no news of consequence to anyone else." But...she and Jerry built a lake house getaway this year, and she continues to enjoy volunteering in an art museum outreach program. Bonnie Pitman Gelles reports an exciting year in which she was chosen to be on the Accreditation Commission for the American Association of Museums. Her work in Seattle goes well as plans go forward to build a new museum. Catherine Porter and James Fuller had their first child, a baby girl on July 6. She continues as Sen. Chafee's tax legislative aide.

Jeanne Preston Jacobs sings with the Milwaukee Symphony when she's not skiing or travelling with her husband, Stephen. She also volunteers with the district Met. Opera Auditions. Coo Prettyman Irvin and Jim have a blended family of four in their home in Kiawah Island. She has shops in interior design, gifts, and an art gallery.

Elizabeth Sanford Willcox and George are restoring (by themselves) a stone farmhouse in the south of France. They have recently worked together in Jordan as archeologists, each in his/her special fields of archeo-botany and restoration of archaeological objects. Lynn Settlemyer Arts is V.P. and Director of Editorial Production for Westview Press, a Boulder-based "scholarly publisher." She also acquires books in the area of rural studies, getting her to some "out-of-the-way places" each year.

Amy Thompson McCandless and Peter are well ensconced in Charleston. She has been granted tenure in her position as Associate Prof. of History at the College of Charleston. She has been to conferences all over the U.S., giving papers on southern women. Peter is on leave while he writes "History of Insanity in South Carolina." Suzanne Torgan Weston has returned from Alaska. She plans to consult in data processing while Steve runs a BMW motorcycle shop. They will be settled by March.

Connie Williams deBordenave and Tad are going to spend July in England, while he is on sabbatical. She stays busy with family and church work. In her spare time, she is learning to be a silversmith. Cecilia Williamson Grinstead and Andy moved to Short Hills last year and love it. Her four children keep her zooming as well as her job as President of Women in her church. They had a wonderful trip to Israel last Aug., and plan to spend time in Florida each summer.

Betsy Wolfe Jacobson writes that the business she bought and runs is now the largest provider of mental health services to the armed forces in northern CA. She and Ed enjoyed skiing in Val d'Isere and St. Anton as guests of the French and Austrian ski patrols. Dr. Marshalyne Yeargin-Allsopp continues as medical epidemiologist in the Birth Defects and Developmental Disabilities Division of the Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta. The Board of Overseers of SBC consumes a lot of her time and energy also.

A busy year for Phoebe Brunner Peacock. She became the Latin Language Cataloger for the Library of Congress — a happy combination of her SBC Latin major and MLS. Her twin girls started kindergarten and husband Bob was appointed an administrative judge to the U.S. Corps of Engineers Board of Contract Appeals. Phoebe continues to show her TB mare and is still recording secretary of the Washington Alumnae Club.

Ellen Wakefield Ottenritter teaches Sunday School, Bible Camp and dog obedience and tries to keep up with her 3 boys: P.J., who is headed for college next year, Chris, who at 15 is very involved in acting and modelling (has been on "Spenser for Hire" and cable TV productions), and Adam, 11 who is "into" art and skiing. Husband Phil is now V.P. in charge of new products at Swing Design, Inc. (wooden outdoor play products).

cabin for an early 19th century house right in the middle of Warrenton. Sons Treville, 15 and Croom, 14 love it; Blair misses the solitude.

Congratulations to everyone on their rewarding and exciting lives as we swing into our 40's. Be happy and well. Love to all and can't wait to see you in '88. Plan on it NOW.

The international news from Stephanie Harmon Simonard is that she and Baudoin have a new home in the suburbs of Paris, built under their design and direction. It is particularly unusual, because it has been built around a 300-year-old oak tree. The girls, Sophie and Vanessa, are now 10 and eight. Stephanie continues as senior manager with Peat, Marwick, Co. and as president of the Association of American Residents Overseas. Jean Chaloux writes from Milan, Italy, that she is happily undergoing an "Italianization," and that she and husband, Marcello, had a son, born March 9, 1985.

Back in the states, Kathy Upchurch Takvorian writes that 1985 has been a "productive" year for her and Ginger. Kathy and Tak gave Sam (21 mo.) a little sister, Kate, now 4 mo. old. Ginger Upchurch Collier and her husband, Tom, added their third daughter, Louisa Samford, on Oct. 15, 1985. Sisters, Ann (4) and Katherine (2½) are thrilled. Kathy says being a mother, teaching and practicing rheumatology part-time keep her busy, but she still takes time for an occasional game of tennis. Tak works as an oncologist in Boston with Hillary Mankin Kerfi's husband, Don. Don and Hillary have two little girls. Ginger writes that Jeanie Mann Hardesty's husband, Ben, and several friends came up from Clarksburg, WV, to Chestertown, MD, to hunt geese on their property. Jeanie and Ben are enjoying their new son Benjamin Ashby, Jr., born Sept. 6, 1985; he joined sisters Margaret (7) and Gray (5). From Boston, my friend and former roommate, Dale Shelly, writes that she and her husband, James Graham, gave each other a new house for Christmas. They plan to move Jan. 31. They had a great 1985 traveling to Japan and Hong Kong last summer and then to Stockholm and Paris in the fall for James' computer business.

Dale says that Eileen Gebrian Barberich, husband, Tim, and baby, Sophia, have moved close by her to Harvard, MA. Pam Drake McCormick also in Massachusetts writes that Tucker (6) is in kindergarten, Tim is four, and another little McCormick is due in early April. Pam and Gardner brought in the new year with David and Kathy Walsh Drake and their three little girls, Elizabeth, Hadley, and Courtney, in Falmouth, ME. Kathy had lunch with Jennie Matheson, who is now an Episcopal minister in Southport, CT. Kathy says Jennie has one son, Zack, is happy and looks terrific!

Holly "Born to Move" Smith is now living in London. Her husband, Neil Osborn, was made editor of Euromoney magazine just a month after they had moved into their new home in Tenafly, NJ. The magazine is based in London so they expect to be there for a few years. Holly is writing for Murdoch's Sunday Times and several American publications and compiling a guide on how to buy London property. She loves London and is enjoying seeing the friends she made the last time she lived in England.

Cynthia Heye Hopkins writes that husband, Steve, continues to practice law in New Jersey, and she is brand manager in marketing with the orthopedics division of Pfizer.

In NYC, Georgie Vaire had a meeting with Chief Justice Burger to get his endorsement for a program at Fordham, where she remains a professor of law. Georgie has published several articles. B.J. Martin, also in New York, started a new job in October organizing the entire sales force for a women's accessory manufacturer. In March, she will have opened their wholesale store, located on 36th St. between Madison and 5th Avenues, called the Accessory Club.

Dropping down the east coast, Kate Williams Cox is happy living in Baltimore with her husband and two children, Kimberly (6) and Christopher (2). Kate writes that in her non-mothering hours she finds time to do volunteer work with the Junior League and to do some freelance writing, specializing in video and film scripts. In nearby Annapolis, MD, Karen Medford Distelhorst, in addition to her tennis, bicycling, and jogging, keeps busy working as a docent in the William Paca Gardens, which are a reproduction of an 18th century garden. Joan Hobbs Spisse reports that with 7 years of single parenthood behind her, everything is going well with her and two daughters, Amy (11) and Alyssa (7). She bought a house in Frederick, MD last year and has been working for the Saik Institute. Daughter, Amy, won 3rd place in creative writing in the Maryland State Fine Arts competition last year!

In Alexandria, Mary Phillips Donohoe, husband, Peter, and son, Peter Phillips, are expecting a new arrival this January. Charlene Sturbitts, after 13 years on Capitol Hill as counsel to the Senate Environment Committee and Senator George Mitchell of Maine, has joined the private sector. Char joined the Washington, D.C. office of the New York law firm of Webster and Sheffield. She specializes in environmental law and legislative activities and loves it. On the lighter side, Char will be in the Virgin Islands on a sailing trip in February. In Reston, VA, Anne Garrett Burfield has bought a sporting goods store and plans to have opened a second store by December of '85. Her children, Evan (9), Alison (7), and Morgan (5), have been lots of help learning to be "little merchants." Anne hopes to start law school this fall and also took a long-dreamed-of trip to Peru last year to see Machu Picchu, the Inca ruins.

Carter Frackellton, our super fund agent, after 13 years of teaching, is now working for her father's block company in Fredericksburg and enjoying the change! She still teaches adults in the G.E.D. math program at night and works some Saturdays in Janet Nelson Gibson's dress shop, Carley's. Carter says she and Mary Heller got together for a fun weekend in D.C. last November. Ginnie B. Payne Sasser and Flip's second daughter, Virginia, was born in January 1985. She caught a cold her first week home from the hospital; then, last summer, Ginnie B. had an allergic reaction to aspirin, but all are now well. Barbara Tessin Derry's son, William, was born March 21, 1985 and has been a delight since he mastered sleeping through the night. In Charlottesville, Dolores Connor Margeson and Dave are expecting their second baby this February 1986, when little Dave will be 20 months old. Dolores continues to work in outreach with the community energy conservation program.

Cissel Gott was married to Brian Collins Nov. 2, '85; they finally took their wedding trip to Costa Rica in Jan. '86! Cissel's 2½-year-old advertising, PR and marketing business is going very well. She had a happy "reunion" this Jan. with Tobey Gilmore Shaw and her twin girls, Marilyn Prichard Harvey and daughter and Susan Norton Allen and her two boys.

Susan Snodgrass Wynne has tried to keep busy while adjusting to losing their 6-year-old son, Lee, last year. They've enjoyed renovating their new house in Va. Beach. John is 10 now and Brad 4.

Jane Powell Gray's second son, Russell Thomas, was born prematurely on March 31, '85; he was very sick at first but is fine now. Jane was promoted to Special Deputy Attorney General. She has been with the NC Dept. of Justice for 6 years now, and loves it.

Down South in Savannah, GA, Dotie Courington McGinley had a second son in September '85. His name is Travis, and he joins his 2 year old brother, Carl. Dottie writes that despite the pandemonium at home, she continues to practice law full-time. Gwin Schroder White sends greetings from Atlanta. She was married last July, 1985 to Terry White. Between them they have three children, all living with them. Bill (12) is an avid chess player. Dan (9) and Sara (6) are both young gymnasts. Terry is the senior economist at Dames and Moore consulting firm, and Gwin works at Emory U. Warren Moore reports from Greensboro, NC, that in December she completed work on a book about the North Carolina mountains and its people. It will consist of photographs, edited portions from oral histories and interviews which she has conducted over the past 5 years. Betty Moricle is in Reidsville, NC. She purchased an SBC directory last fall and promises to write a few letters this year. Betty has two cats and has been reading up on feline leukemia since she lost a previous cat to the disease.

Marty Neill Boney writes from Wilmington, N.C., "One of the highlights of our summer was a trek back into "Sweets" while on our annual journey to Canada. We spotted more wildlife there than Marlin Perkins ever could have dreamed of! It is absolutely more beautiful than ever." Deborah Wilson Hollings says Sade Dabbs Fryer and husband, Bill, visited them in Camden last year for the Carolina Cup Steeplechase. Deborah also took her son, Christopher, to whom she has always spoken French, to the Riviera last summer to see her mother's family. He was so surprised to find everyone spoke French! Deborah is now a full-time mother, and Michael is busy campaigning for his father's 1986 Senate race.

It was exciting to hear from Linda Odum Sweat that she married Ron, July 20, 1985, on the banks of the St. John River in Orange Park, FL, where she had met him 3 years earlier when he pulled her out of the river after she had capsized her Hobie Cat. They took his sailboat, a 37' Hunter, on a honeymoon trip to the Bahamas where they encountered a few of 1985's hurricanes, Henri and Fabian. Ron has a daughter, Robin (15), who lives with them and who, Linda hopes, may some day be an SBC grad.

From the heart of Dixie, Marion Walker writes that she has retired from practicing law to open an office in Birmingham for a Philadelphia firm that consults with companies on employee benefits and personal estate planning. She loves her new job and feels a lot less pressure. Marion has 3 dogs, a broodmare, and a colt! She also sees a lot of Margaret Hayes Brunstad, whose two little girls call her "Auntie Mame"! A new bank has been organized in Birmingham and Margaret's husband, Jim, runs the investment department. Also in Birmingham, Susan Waller Nading and Alex are, as I write, on their annual sailing trip in the Virgin Islands. We had a wonderful visit with them at Thanksgiving and all is well. Eise Webb Neeland's first grader and preschooler keep her running from ballet to gymnastics. She also is active in the Medical Auxiliary and an organization which supports cultural activities for children.

Trish Neale Van Clief and D.G. are still in Lexington, KY. Trish is really enjoying being on the alumnae board and hearing firsthand about Sweet Briar. Her sister, Coco, will be a senior next year. Trish says D.G. and the children, now 7 and 8, are great!

Carol Cody Herder joined Allied Bank of Texas in Houston 3 years ago to start their equipment leasing division. Carol and her husband, Charlie, have one daughter, Sara Elizabeth, born April 6, 1983. They moved to a new home about a year ago, so spent much of last year decorating and landscaping. I loved hearing from Cutler Bellows Crockard that Callie is the self-proclaimed "best" in her kindergarten class, and Bradford is doing well in 2nd grade. Husband, Doug, is now a full-fledged vice president at Merrill Lynch while Cutler is a highly successful wife, mother, car pooler, den leader, librarian and museum docent! Margaret Lyle Jones's summer of '85 started off with a car wreck when another car ran a red light and broadsided her. Her boys were okay, but her neck was broken. Margaret had a summer of neurosurgery, hospital stays, and various braces. She, happily, is almost back to full steam now. She is going to Med. Tech. School for a year and then hopes to return to work. Husband, Michael, enjoys his job at the medical center. Peggy Morrison

Duton is community relations coordinator at a 20th century American art museum, Laguna Gloria, in Austin, TX. The museum is in the midst of a 20 million dollar project, financed by a bond election, to build a new building designed by Robert Venturi. Peggy's children are now ages 7 and 11.

Ross loves soccer and his Australian Shepherd. Katie is a dancer and a poet. Her husband continues to build new houses and remodel older homes.

Betty Works Fuller is part time assistant at St. Mark's Episcopal Church in San Marcos where Frank is rector; he is also Episcopal chaplain to Southwest Texas State. Betty pursues her own ministry of curriculum writing and consulting for Bible school classes. Her daughter, Mary Austin (7½), is in second grade. Sally Blalock Seidel, husband, Chuck, and daughter, Emily Patricia are moving to Sacramento, CA in March '86. Sally has lived in Dallas all her life, but is looking forward to an adventure in a new place. Chuck has a promoted position with Sacramento Machinery.

Katherine Bradi McVey and Mack were married on Feb. 14, 1985. He is an engineer for Ford Aerospace in Palo Alto and his hobbies include skydiving and race car driving. Kathy is considering working on her master's degree in anthropology, but for now is in her 5th year of substitute teaching in the local school district and is manager/bartender of a bed and breakfast, The San Benito House, in Half Moon Bay. In her spare time she enjoys skiing, gardening, reading and chess.

In Alaska, Vivian Finlay is a psychotherapist at a community mental health center that serves the Mat-Su Borough, a rural community near the town of Wasilla located about 50 miles from Anchorage. She has been there 2½ years. She and her husband, Chuck Vancura, have built and continue to work on their own small house. They have met many new people and enjoy cross-country skiing across lakes in their neighborhood in winter and swimming in summer. Her parents and siblings live in England and Ireland and have been there since her parents retired from India in 1977.

As for yours truly, David Stanley Graham was born Mardi Gras night, Feb. 19, 1985. So the legend goes that makes him one of very few "true" Mobilians. My husband, Bill, is loan administration manager for Am South Bank here in Mobile and was recently promoted to senior vice president.

Believe it or not the next time you read these notes will be shortly after our 15th reunion. Gear up now for going back to SBC next spring!

1976

President
Galvin Gentry, 21029 Slab Bridge Rd., Freeland, MD 21053

Secretary
Sally Mott Lawrence (Mrs. Robert Francis), 7103 Georgia St., Chevy Chase, MD 20815

Fund Agent
Lochrane Coleman Smith (Mrs. Mell Gage), 3612 Mountain Lane, Birmingham, AL 35213

By the time you read this news update we will have all already enjoyed our big tenth reunion. This is my last class update as your class secretary and I want you to know I have truly enjoyed hearing from all of you these last five years. May my successor have as much fun!

Catherine Adams Thompson's daughter Sally is now 7 and in the second grade. Catherine now sees Jane DeButts Kates as she has moved back to the Plains. Jane's son Tommy is 6 years old so they are car-pooling as well as doing Nautilus together. Melanie Coyne Cody will be 7 months pregnant with her second child at our reunion — I guess we won't know until '87 the critical weight and gender information! Melanie is job-sharing with another mom doing executive research work for an advertising/marketing placement firm. She also finds time for the Evanston Junior League, and Arts Center, not to mention daughter Caitlin. A sailing trip to the British Virgin Islands was also planned for March.

Rebecca Wilson is living in Richmond and has just been promoted to Vice President/Sales for Haskell Chemical Co. She is also coaching Little League soccer. She saw Nonie Mickley in Richmond over Christmas. Nonie is married now and living in Atlanta. Mary Woodford is still with FMC Corp and is planning a skiing trip to Colorado in February. Nancy Romm Stone, Lecky and their three children are still enjoying life in Charlottesville, where Lecky is practicing law. They are planning a Caribbean cruise for May. Jill Taylor Silberman is living outside Philadelphia with husband David and their two children, Kate (6) and Anne (1½). She is not working, but keeping busy taking care of her family, one horse, two ponies, two dogs, five cats, eight chickens and two guinea hens. Mare Moren vacationed in France last spring and is now senior copywriter for Reader's Digest in New York. She moved into her new condo in the spring.

Ookie Hays Cooper is busy with her job as program officer of the World Wildlife Fund in Washington which involves, among other things, working with migratory birds. Jim & Ookie have settled into a beautiful home on Capitol Hill, and weekends are usually spent working in the districts in Tennessee. Sally Crickenberger is still working for Senator Dole in Washington in the Senate Sergeant at Arms Office. She was married in December to Gordon Brady, an economist at the Department of Energy. Debbie Mutch is still working for Honeywell as writer-editor and doing some record reviews for the St. Petersburg Times. She attended the SBC Jr. Year in France reunion held in D.C. last October and had a wonderful time.

Hilary Speare Hewitt, who left SBC after her freshman year, received her nursing degree at Columbia in New York after completing her BA at Olivet College. She has worked with premature babies and is now with her husband Mike at Case Western while he finishes work on his doctorate. She is working in coronary intensive care there, frequently aiding heart transplant patients.

Tricia Talbott Reed and husband Tom report the birth of Meghan Talbott Reed (Meggie), born October 4, 1985. Meggie is precious and they are enjoying adapting to parenthood.

Lynn Kahler Berg continues to enjoy her work as Registrar of the International Exhibitions Foundation here in Washington, traveling periodically around the country. She and her husband Dennis enjoyed visiting with Nor- ris Judd Ferguson in Houston over the Christmas holidays. Lynn and Dennis plan to tour Italy in May. She has not been there since 74/75 when she spent junior year abroad there. Lynn is also still Chairman of the Friends of the Art at SBC which she is enjoying immensely — especially with the recent dedication of the new gallery. Carol Fiske Platt had her third child in March (no more into available at this time!) and consequently regrets she cannot attend reunions.

Ann Kiley Crenshaw and husband Clarke have settled into their new home in Virginia Beach. Clarke Jr. is two years old. Ann has changed jobs and is now practicing law with McGuire, Woods and Battle in their Norfolk office. They had some great trips this year — Maui, Palm Springs, and a three-week trip to Africa. She still manages to devote some time to Junior League, United Way and Bar Association projects. Meg Shields Duke and Jamie have a new family member to report, Margeurite (Margo), SBC Class of 2007. Caroline Bickel McLoughlin visited the Dukes in Denver in December to be Margo's godmother. Meg has also seen Lisa Nelson Robertson and had lunch with Kit Newman Detering when she was in town.

Tricia Cassidy Higgins, Kate Kelly Smith, Janet Grainer Thompson, Treacy Markey Shaw and Felice Smith Ludington got together for a champagne reunion in New York over Christmas. Felice is engaged, and Tricia says she looks great (she's in love). Tricia is still doing public relations for County Executive D'Rourke and husband Tim is a special agent with the Justice Department's New York office. Their daughter Katie is 7 and attends the Convent of the Sacred Heart in Greenwich. Timothy Jr. is 2 years old. The Higgins see Karl Anderson Shipley every year in Palm Beach. Tricia reports that Kari and John have two beautiful sons Johnny and Walker.

Jennie Bateson Hamby and husband Lou had a little boy, Allan Scott, on May 2, 1985. Jennie is now a full-time mom and Lou is a partner at Alley, Maas attorneys, Palm Beach. Jean Dailey visited Jennie over Thanksgiving. Jennie reports that Jean, armed with MBA, has a great job as sales representative for a pharmaceutical company and looks terrific. Andie Yellott has big news — she is engaged to Ben Gibson, a writer, teacher and wonderful fellow. Andie is the godmother of Sarah Quinn Balderston, daughter of Ann Works Balderston. Andie is still teaching at Bryn Mawr School, still eventing the horse and still writing fiction — and, as of this year, is also a homeowner.

Debbie Massie Thurman and Russ are still in the San Diego area, where Russ is building his network marketing and public relations consulting business. He is also screenwriting for the motion picture and television industry. Debbie assists ably in all areas and loves it. Debbie Vatterott Ruck and husband Tom are enjoying married life. They have traveled to New Orleans, Dallas, and Chicago this year and have also enjoyed redecorating their home. Gail Ann Zarwell Winkler reports a first-born — a girl, Laura Elizabeth. After the birth in the fall of '85, and the first snow in Oshkosh, Gail finished planting her Sweet Briar bulbs. They are off to England in April for a much deserved vacation. Bobbie Hauck Gribble moved in November with her three children — Rusty, Bradley, and Katie — to Virginia Beach. She is still with AT&T and loving it.

Susan Verbridge Paulson, husband Larry and their three children are enjoying rural life in Springfield, Colorado. They do get to Sante Fe, Amarillo, and Denver however to "recharge their batteries." Liz Farmer Jarvis had a baby girl, Judith Farmer Jarvis, born September 26, 1985. Liz is back at work part-time as curator of the Historical Society of Pennsylvania. Laura Lee Bost also reports a first baby, a boy, and is enjoying motherhood immensely while on a year's leave of absence from IBM. Once back at IBM she will resume her work as program support rep in the National Service Division. Caroline Bickel McLoughlin is enjoying renovating their 45-year-old colonial home in which they just put a modern kitchen. After Meg Shields Duke's daughter's christening she and Hollis went to Steamboat and Vail skiing with Meg and Jamie. Chris Dykstra and her husband Michael have moved to North Carolina and bought an old farmhouse with 12 acres outside Raleigh. Daughter Susan just turned 3 and reportedly loves living in the country, but loved Boston also — a very adaptable child.

Kay Ellisor Hopkins reports that her daughters, Sarah and Beth are now 5 and 2½, and this gives Kay a chance to read books other than The Small Red Dog! She has enjoyed being Communications Chairman of Pi Beta Phi Junior Day Group, a member of Dallas Symphony League Innovators, and the DAR, as well as singing in the church choir. Kay sees Beth Bates Locke who is also a member of Dallas Symphony Orchestra Innovators. Beth is still working at Barry Brown Advertising and is expecting her first baby in early summer. Kay has also spoken to Kathy Whichard Poston who retired from stockbrokering to care for son McLean (3) and to prepare for expected second baby that was due to arrive in April.

Libba Gorin is in her eighth year of teaching at Louisville Collegiate School. She is also teaching J.V. Hockey which had an overwhelmingly winning season. Libba also reports that she spends her summers vacationing in Michigan and Wisconsin. Laurie Fitzgerald Nowlan writes that all is well in Villanova. Children

Patrick (4½) and Carly (2½) are happy and healthy. Laurie and husband Pat see Reb and Gina Jackson Speare who are expecting their second child in June. Jim and Missy Briscoe McNatt had a little girl May 1, 1985, Marisa Briscoe McNatt. Son Cameron is in nursery school, and Missy is teaching part-time at Maryvale Prep in Baltimore.

Demetra Georgis Bowles, husband Henry and son Henry IV are busy and happy and still in San Francisco. They spent their fall duck and pheasant hunting, and in the winter go to Sugar Bowl as much as possible to ski. Demetra is still working on her Ph.D. in English literature and is now in the writing stage (chapter 1 at this writing). Last September they left the baby in good hands while they had a month's travel in Italy. Robin Rodger Heller continues working in marketing for General Motors. The job has kept her traveling — San Francisco, Dallas, Kansas City, Toronto, and Phoenix. She and Bill are busy decorating their home. Robin also finds time for Junior League of Detroit, Michigan Metro Girl Scouts and other local charities.

Rowena Van Tuyl Schubert is married to William Schubert, a senior vice president of Trading and Trust Company of the West in Los Angeles. They have two beautiful daughters, 2½ and 9 months. They had a great vacation in Las Hadas, Mexico and plan to travel East this summer.

Peggy Weimer is still with the Federal Reserve Board — now in the electronic payments area as a result of a promotion last September. She has also started night law school at George Mason University. She had a great dinner with Mary Beth Hamlin in Chicago while visiting there in January and sees Elliott Graham occasionally. Finally, Peggy noted that Margot Mahoney is engaged, but I don't know to whom just yet. Alix Collie Willson is still living at their home on Windswept Farm. She is taking care of their two children, her husband and a variety of animals. Steve is working hard at the Charles A. Wilson Company. Sallie Hill Bernard Armstrong and Bob had another busy but wonderful year. The year started with her being involved in a major casino bankruptcy at Lake Tahoe and ended with her being the attorney for the creditors' committee in one of the largest bankruptcies ever to be filed in Reno (involving $60,000,000 in assets and far more in liabilities). She did all of this while trying to fulfill her duties as the treasurer of the Junior League of Reno. In November they took a delightful month-long trip to New Zealand and Australia. The countryside is gorgeous, but she doesn't recommend taking a direct flight. It was 29 hours from Reno to Auckland. In addition to New Zealand and Australia, they also enjoyed a brief visit to Columbus, Ohio in early April, where Sallie Hill was a bridesmaid in Muffy

Hamilton Parson's ('78) wedding.

Lisa Nelson Robertson and family have moved into a new house in Virginia Beach. They have two ever-growing daughters, Laura (4) and Elizabeth (2), and are expecting child #3 on July 4. Lisa plays with Sally Old Kitchen frequently and got a peek at Meg's new baby, Margo Duke, at Christmastime. Felice Ludington is engaged to Jim Taylor, and a June 14 wedding is planned. Jim is Operations Manager for the St. Francis Yacht Club in San Francisco, where they plan to live. They plan to spend some time this winter in Australia for the Cup Races, before heading back to the west coast, where Felice now works for an advertising agency.

Connie Radford Butt reports a new baby boy, Robert Speed Butt born August 10, 1985. She and daughter Austin enjoyed a week in Richmond visiting Terry Starke Tosh (75) last June in their last pre-baby fling.

Karen Adelson Strauss was expecting baby #2 at this writing, due May 29, 1986. Luke, now 15 months, is keeping Karen plenty busy in the meantime, along with her environmental engineering consulting business. They are planning a month-long trip to Yugoslavia in September in conjunction with husband Lewis' work.

Catherine Caillett reports that she opened her own law practice and has also moved into a new home — both in Ft. Lauderdale, Florida. Liz Jenks Coggins is still in Baltimore keeping busy with her two boys (ages 4 and 1½). Margaret Milnor Mallory announces her first born Barton Milnor Mallory on April 17, 1985. Her husband Bert began a new job in February as vice chairman and general counsel of Guardsmark Inc. Margaret is also becoming active with the Memphis Jr. League. Cynde Seiler Eister and husband Ron announce a new baby girl, born April 7, 1985. Ron and Cynde spent a wonderful week in California last fall. They have also been on two Christian television programs and continue with other public speaking activities. Sally Old Kitchen's little girl is 3½, and little boy is 1, so they have their hands full. Sharon Coe Glen has been living in England for the past five years following her marriage to Jonathon. She is an accounts manager with a technical PR firm near Windsor. Their baby Grace Gillespie was born in New York in June 1985 — a little "dual-national princess."

Beth Bates Locke is the broadcast business manager for Berry-Brown Advertising. She is also expecting a baby in June. She sees Kay Ellisor Hopkins, who lives just down the street, often. Cissy Humphrey babysits their dog Graham when they are away. Beth also saw Tennessee Neilson Indorf at a SBC "catch-up" lunch with Kay and Cissy in January. Virginia Spangler was married this spring to David E. Palley, president of Lees Carpets. They were married in their father's home in Montgomery, Alabama. They plan to move north and make Manhattan their home. Gina Jackson Speare is expecting her second child in June. She is looking forward to the baby and to being home with their 3½-year-old, Megan. Galvin Gentry is continuing to raise horses and give riding lessons to children. The most exciting project, however, is adding a log addition to her house on the farm. The addition was built about 1815 in Gettysburg, Pennsylvania, and was scheduled to be burned down by the fire department. It arrived last June on four huge dump trucks in a million pieces. The outside is complete; now she's working on the inside. This will also be Galvin's tenth year for her summer riding camp. It was two weeks her first year and now she's up to eight weeks!

Chardon Harrigan Jenks and husband John are still living in Albany, New York with their two children, Story and Elizabeth, and are loving being a growing family. Terese DeGrandi reports that life in Atlanta is "mahvelous". She left radiology after two years. She is with the Children's Hospital Emergency Room, working eight days a month and making lots of money. She reports she missed patient contact in radiology and hated being in the dark all the time. She just bought a house and is reportedly also in love. "Details to follow."

Mary Weston Strietz and Rick are still living in Joliet, Illinois with their two children Christopher and Chapin. Debra Rea Karnes is working in consumer affairs for the government. She took her first Caribbean cruise in December from Norfolk to Nassau and was planning a longer cruise for March at this writing. Carrington Brown Wise and husband Alex are now living in Lexington, Virginia where Alex has just finished his first semester at Washington and Lee law school. Son Henry is 3½. And daughter Ann is a "student" at the pre-school Carrington has started for 1½-2-year-olds that she is running out of her home. Carrington is still singing — soloing for the Rockbridge County Chorus and Orchestra. She also performed at Hollins, Mary Baldwin, and Lee Chapel (Lexington) this past winter. Finally, she traverses Rt. 60 every week for a voice lesson at SBC.

Karina Schless went back to London last summer for a holiday. Otherwise, she is still at Wyeth labs in Radnor, Pennsylvania in Personnel. She continues to ride Drambuie regularly. Marty McClelland has moved back to North Carolina, noting that Houston was too big a city for her. She is now an assistant professor of Information Systems and Operations Management with UNC — Greensboro. Marty recently heard from Robin Imschweiler who is setting up a rolfling (ahem) practice in Albany, NY. Margaret Burns Bavasi reports that since Sweet Briar days she has graduated from Stephens College and then from University of San Diego Law School.

She then married Robert Bavasi, gave up law and moved to Everett, Washington. They bought a minor league baseball team, affiliated with the San Francisco Giants, and are now expecting their first child, due June '86.

Marian Dolan is studying choral conducting at Juilliard in NYC and is still conducting the Sussex Symphony in northern New Jersey. Margot Mahoney is now a principal in her firm. She has traveled a lot this year — to Greece, London, Colorado and Toledo.

Megan Morgan Fischer reports enjoying her 8½ month bouncing, beamish boy Lincoln, 25 pounds at this writing and threatening to walk at any moment. Megan, Craig, and Lincoln are still living in NYC where Megan's acting career continues. She has just been cast in the world premier of The Oxbow Incident adapted from the novel by Walter Van Tilburg Clark. She's the sole female in the cast of 17 — playing a barmaid in a cowboy bar in Nevada in the 1880's. She also recently did a video for MCI in which she played a wacky corporate executive. Motherhood, though, says Megan is her best production yet.

Ann Works Balderston reports they have bought a home in Rochester, N.Y. in June, then went to Bis's family ranch in Jackson Hole, Wyoming in August for two weeks, then best of all, gave birth to Sarah Quinn Balderston on November 19. As mentioned earlier, Andie Yellott is Sarah's godmother. Deb Gahagan Hill had a beautiful baby boy in May 85, Doug, but soon after became a single mom and is making some difficult adjustments. She is now working at a bank in Lakeland, Florida. Cissy Humphrey saw Candi Casey in Phoenix last August where she is finishing her last semester at Thunderbird.

Marsha Taylor Dehain, now living in the Philippines, was the guest speaker in January 85 for the Dr. M.L. King activities in Guam. She had speaking and singing engagements at the Anderson Air Force Base and at the Naval Air Station. Her summer 85 months were packed with travel to Japan, Hong Kong, and Korea. They were all great but she lost her heart to Hong Kong. More trips are planned before she and Larry return to the States in July. She had an article based on her thesis research published in the American Educational Research Journal, (July 22, #3). She is also working as a Family Support Specialist where she is responsible for program development, counseling, and public speaking.

Treacy Markey Shaw is enjoying daughter Morgan's every growing moment. Treacy is doing junior league work — this year as publicity chairman for the theatrical production of Follies in February 87. She is also doing freelance work for AdLib, an anti-ques shop opened by an Atlanta interior design friend. Atlanta Lawn Tennis Association is also in full swing — they play rain, sleet or shine. Morgan is in infant-ed two days a week, which is when Treacy gets "it all" done. Last but not least Treacy is the godmother of my son, Christopher Mott Lawrence, born August 12, 1985. She came for his christening and festivities following at our home in Chevy Chase — an event that would not have been the same without her. Maureen O'Hearn Slowinski and husband Hill also attended. Maureen is having a wonderful time with her baby Christopher and is also doing a great job on advertising for the 1986 Junior League of Washington Christmas Shop. As for your outgoing class secretary, you have heard my biggest news, the birth of our son. I am back at work now, juggling mom, the FCC press corps and various volunteer efforts. I am chairman of the 1986 Christmas Shop luncheon — a big event since it is the Washington League's 75th anniversary and Nancy Reagan is our honorary chairman. I am also chairing the favors committee for Washington "Art Barn in the Park annual dance" to benefit Alzheimers' research. Christopher and I have had an active spring full of waterbabies and all kinds of delightful growing games. He looks like his daddy but I think he's got my sense of adventure! I've enjoyed being class secretary these past five years — maybe I'll do it again between the years 2030 and 2035 when things slow down a bit. Happy big 10 years!

Charlotte Gay Gerhardt (Mrs. Paul), 5435 Argall Crescent, Norfolk, VA 23508

Our 5th reunion has now come and gone. And now it is time to travel around the country with the Class of 1980.

Beth Fletcher Lubin and Marvin are busy with their new home in Mobile, AL, where Beth is also working part-time with a local interior decorating firm.

Silky Hart has just started work on a graduate degree in international management at the American Graduate School of International Business (Thunderbird) in Glendale, AZ, after leaving her paralegal job and taking classes in New York.

Susan Boline has been in LA for 2 years as an assistant director of a contemporary art gallery. Susan ran into Beth Hogan Dorosk in San Francisco, where Beth and her husband have moved. Betsy Thomas is also in LA pursuing an acting career and enjoying her newly decorated condominium. She keeps in touch with Marion Maxwell Beaumont in Atlanta.

Carol Beard Riedlin and Eric are busy with their new baby boy in Denver, CO. Lizabeth Lefferts and Richard Austin, an attorney, were married Dec. 26 and are living in Boulder, CO where she is continuing to raise money for the 1986 Senate Republican Races.

Sandra Rappaccioli and Max Padilla were married Nov. 29 in Key Biscayne; lots of SBC'ers attended the festivities. Sandra is finishing business school and opening a small business on Key Biscayne, "Flowers in Motion."

From Atlanta, Kathy Love Taylor Erickson writes she is working with Herman Miller Co. She and Jon are busy with their house but find time to play tennis. Kathy Love and Hollis Hutchens Volk are the SBC bulb chairmen for Atlanta. Hollis is a media planner/buyer with Pringle Dixon Pringle. Hollis and Chris are also busy with their house and yard so they'll have a place for all those bulbs.

Lisa Sturkie is with First National Bank of Atlanta in the international department.

Becky Garrett Jamison and Larry are busy homeowners as well as aspiring directors of the neighborhood association.

Georgia Schley is an attorney, living a busy life which includes everything from piano lessons to skiing.

Gerlind Younts writes from Atlanta between trips. She is still with CNN News and traveling the world. The year 1985 included trips to Vietnam, Japan, Columbia and Mexico City; this year, it will be Central and South America, the Middle East and South Africa.

Brooks Cunningham is with the Hughston Orthopedic Clinic in Columbus. She is engaged to Gene Dykes (her sister is Elizabeth Dykes Pope '82) and they are planning a spring wedding. Brooks also writes that Garrow Hudson Crowley and Chris have a new baby girl, Elsa. Frances Holland Campbell and Clay are in Valdosta, GA with their son.

From Chicago, Catherine Flaherty continues to sell TV ratings with A.C. Nielsen. Business trips have allowed for visits with Sandra Rappaccioli Padilla and Fannie Zollicoffer.

Catherine is also looking forward to Ginny Faris's wedding this fall.

Carolyn Halahan is working for IBM as a communications systems programmer and living in Germantown, MD.

Ann Connolly was married to Daniel Reagan, an old Harvard roommate of her brother's and a VP for Citibank in Boston, in Sept. '85. They are living in Belmont, MA and Ann is still working as a travel agent in Boston.

Lisa Carangelo is in Swampscott,

MA, working for Massachusetts Financial Services as a marketing coordinator for their mutual funds. She also enjoys monthly trips to NYC and visits with Cary Dollard, Ann Rockwell and Kris Summerill Craig.

Amy Campbell is working for Merrill Lynch in Minneapolis and also writing dance theater features and restaurant reviews for a local paper.

Lind Robinson Bussey's daughter, Jenny Lind, was a year old in January. After a skiing trip to CO in February, Lind will be busy brokering insurance and working with her sister Lou's gourmet food business in Jackson, MS.

True Dow is tending a tree farm in North Hampton, NH and teaching preschoolers gymnastics at the NH Academy of Artistic Gymnastics. She reports that after 3 years with the gymnastics school, she still can't do a flip. She saw Jennifer Crispin at the National Field Hockey tourney.

Shannon Thompson Eadon and Gordy are renovating their 200-year-old home in Rumson, NY.

Heidi Van Patten Bell and Jimbo were married in May in Va. Beach. After a honeymoon in Africa, they returned to NYC where Heidi is in options trading and Jimbo with Ogilvie Mather.

Toni Santangelo Archibald and Chip are still in NYC and Toni is still a producer with CBS sports.

Lisa Ward is also in New York and recently engaged, with a fall wedding planned. Lisa Schneider is working in the graphics dept. of NBC News and enjoying winter visits from Charlotte and Paul Gerhardt and Pam and Doug Elmets. Ann Rockwell is working for James Robinson Antiques and living in the city with Cary Dollard.

Mitch Baruch Schipani and Franco have a 7-month-old son, Charles. Mitch is working as an account executive with Campbell Ewald. Franco is a producer for Italian TV.

Claire Dennison Griffith and Luther are expecting their first child in the middle of March. Afterwards, they will be moving to Summit, NJ. Claire is with the Capital Markets group at Merrill Lynch. Ed's note: Luther Theodore Griffith, Jr. (Teddy) was born on March 21. Claire will be on maternity leave until July.

Fannie Zollicoffer is finishing up her masters in journalism at UNC/Chapel Hill after working in St. Petersburg, FL for the newspaper this past summer and fall. Kelly Jernigan Hunter and Sid are also in Chapel Hill, where Sid is finishing his Ph.D. Kelly is busy with 4-year-old Mackie and 2-year-old twins Annie and Elizabeth, and is planning on going back to graduate school this fall.

Beth Blair McKinney was married to James, an attorney, last summer. Both are working for law firms in Winston Salem. Carolyn Birbick was married to Paul Milam last fall, with Tish Longest Sheldon as matron of honor. Paul is with CoVest Inc. and Carolyn is a manager at the St. Regis Resort near Topsail Island, NC, where they live. Fran McClung Ferguson and Norman were married in May '85. Fran is finishing up her MBA at Chapel Hill this May. Brook Hardin Randall and Bruce are in Winston-Salem working on re-decorating their new home. Brook has learned to be quite handy as Bruce's job takes him to Puerto Rico often.

First Lieutenant Pam Willett Hauck and Greg had a military wedding last June. They were anticipating a move to Quantico, VA from Camp Lejeune, NC. Pam finished her military service in December; Greg is still with the military.

Julie Smith Rentschler and Tuck had a baby boy, Tommy, last May. Julie is at home with Tommy and Tuck is with an advertising agency in Cincinnati. Laurie Finn was married last May to William Bonekemper and they honeymooned in Paris. They are working on their 100-year-old home. Laurie is with a marketing firm dealing with software products. She also writes that Lindsay Meadows Huntley and Pam Kobrock were at the wedding. Lindsay is a paralegal and Pam is in real estate.

Vicki Clarendon Richter and Tom had a great honeymoon sailing in the Caribbean and have since bought a condo in Philadelphia. Vicki saw lots of SBC'ers at Sally Gray's wedding. Also in the Philly area is Laurie Newman who was recently married.

Jeannine Davis is working for Business Interiors, a design and architectural furniture company. Lillian "Muffitt" Sinks is a nurse on the oncology floor of Graduate Hospital in Philly; a hectic schedule, she says, but she's looking forward to a March ski trip to Aspen with Jeannine.

Carolyn Foote Siana and Steve are in Bryn Mawr, PA, where Carolyn completed her MBA at Villanova last fall.

Lisette Gardenier Dimitrew, Fred, and 1½-year-old Gregory are in Charleston, SC, where Fred is stationed with the U.S. Navy. Lisette is starting her own piano studio.

Martha Fruehauf Ryan has bought a small business called "The Postmark" in Hilton Head, SC. The shop sells stationery, invitations and related gift items. This, as well as 4-year-old Michael and 2½-year-old Jeffrey keep Martha and Dick quite busy. Laurie Limbocker Williams, Charlie and daughters Crispin, 3 and Cameron, 1, are also in Hilton Head. LaQuela Scaife has finished her MBA at Stetson University and is now working for Music, Inc. and Yachts, Inc. in Nashville, TN. ## Where There's a Will There's a Way:

- To distribute your estate, whatever its size, according to your wishes.
- To preserve your estate by taking advantage of the many opportunities for tax reduction offered by law.
- To name a "guardian of the person" if you are the parent of minor children.
- To name the executor of your estate and
- To support charitable organizations and causes to which you are committed.

Why, when there are so many important reasons to have a will and to keep your will up-to-date, do 70 percent of all Americans forego this basic right?

"Only the wealthy need wills."
"I am too young to think about that yet." and "I know I should make a will/review my will and I plan to — soon."

These familiar answers can be costly in time, money, and emotion if your estate is settled by an out-of-state will or worse yet, if you have no will.

We on the Planned Giving Committee of Sweet Briar College believe your will is one of the most important documents you can own. For this reason, upcoming issues of this column will be devoted to the subject of wills: why you need one, when to review your will, and key questions which you should be able to answer about your will. We hope this series will be informative and that you will contact the College if you would like additional information. But most of all we hope that, if you do not have a will, you will make one and keep it up-to-date.

Sweet Briar College is tangible evidence of the power of a bequest, since the College was founded through the generous bequest of Indiana Fletcher Williams. We continue to benefit from the generosity of many alumnae, parents, and friends who include the College in their wills or long-term estate plans with a life income gift.

Because the future of Sweet Briar College is a matter of great importance to all of us who serve on the Planned Giving Committee, we hope as part of your estate planning that you will consider including Sweet Briar in your will as a primary or contingent beneficiary. All undesignated bequests become part of the College's permanent endowment, providing valuable financial strength for the future. If you would like to receive one of the several publications which the College has on the subject of wills, please contact F. Mark Whittaker, Vice President for College Relations, at Box G, Sweet Briar College, Sweet Briar, VA 24595 (804) 381-6161.

Please mark these dates on your calendar and plan to be at Sweet Briar for this important meeting. It's a beautiful time of year to be on campus. You will be a guest of the College and your only expenses will be for travel.

Alumnae Council is for all alumnae who wish to attend and is of special importance for Club Presidents, Key Alumnae, Admissions Representatives, Bulb Chairmen, Solo sellers, the National Bulb Committee, the Planned Giving Committee, Class Fund Agents, Class Secretaries, Reunion Chairmen, Reunion Gifts Committees, Networking Chairmen, members of the Board of the Alumnae Association, members of the Board of Overseers, Alumnae Career Advisory Board and the President of the Senior Class. A program and reservation form will be mailed in late August.

If you do not receive a form and wish to come, please write to the Alumnae Office, Sweet Briar, VA 24595.
